Finally, and it is last because of its nebulosity, not because of its importance, there is the matter of a will to win. Everyone wants to win. Nobody, outside of a few rather masochistic types, enjoys losing. But wanting to win is not enough, to state a cliche for God knows what millionth time. As a TEAM, Queen's has not been hurt enough by losing to work together to avoid the fate. Many of the individuals on that squad are deeply pained by a loss, but most of them don't carry it any further. Not that I'm suggesting a win-at-any-cost philosophy; that would be miles outside the overall philosophy of sport here, and probably does not belong in any university program. But, neither does a defeatist strain - call it a lose-at-any-cost concept. If that happens, the whole program (or schedule, or whatever is applicable) might as well be dropped. As it is, things couldn't get much worse.

bews news

by Peter Watts

Those competitors involved in the squash, badminton, table tennis, paddleball and handball tournaments should check the notice boards in the locker room for the schedules of future matches. The first round of the free throw competition was completed on Monday night and the next round will be held Monday, February 12th. Check the notice boards for more information.

The ski program is still on but may be cancelled due to the weather. A decision on whether or not to hold it will likely be made in a couple of weeks.

Bews director Bob Carnegie said that the interfaculty hockey league will get underway following completion of the Bews playoffs. The regular schedule will not be over until just after reading week. The playoffs will follow after that.Interfaculty hockey this year will consist of a short round-robin series to determine this year's winner of the Commerce Cup.

This year, the Bews awards banquet will be held on March 18th on the second floor of the Union. A maximum of 110 tickets are available from unit athletic sticks. The cost is $1.50 per person.

In the Tuesday section of the 10-pin bowling league, Commerce '74A leads with 29 points, followed closely by Commerce '73A with 28½ points. The Mining B team is third with 24½ points. In the Thursday section, Mining has moved out ahead with 44 points followed by Business Grads B with 38 points and Civil and Math B with 35½ points. The Civil and Math A team is not far behind with 30½ points so it looks like the Engineers could pick up a lot of points in the Bews race in this one sport.

Speaking of the race itself, the Engineers and the Commercemen continue to dominate the top ten as the ace moves toward the wire. Civil and Math and Commerce '73 occupy the top two spots and it is unlikely that anyone will catch them now. As of this writing, the Engineers have about a 3,000 point lead over the Commercemen. As of last Friday, here are the top ten. . .

1.	Civil & Math	30,493
2.	Commerce '73	27,788
3.	PHE	21,326
4.	Mechanical	19,796
5.	Mining	19,050
6.	Commerce '74	17,817
7.	Commerce '75	16,263
8.	Chemical	14,951
9.	Law '74	14,843
10.	Commerce '76	12,340

Waterpolo Gals host Ontario championships

(STAFF) — Queen's University will play host to the Ontario Women's Waterpolo Championships here this weekend. Action gets underway tomorrow at noon and runs until 11:30 p.m. The finals will be played on Sunday morning. A minimum of nine teams will take part although nearly fifteen have been invited. It is hoped that three teams from Ottawa and London, two teams from Hamilton and one each from Toronto, Sudbury, Windsor, and Port Colborne plus the Queen's Golden Gals will take part in the two day competition.

Simon Beitler, coach of the men's waterpolo team, told the Journal that the event will improve the calibre of women's waterpolo by exposing Queen's to some of the top teams in the province. The Ottawa and Hamilton areas are very strong in women's waterpolo and it is expected that the strongest team will come from these regions.

The Queen's team is in its second year of operation. It is coached by Gord Hurd, a former star member of the Queen's Golden Gaels. Several of the Queen's players have had playing experience with teams from the Ottawa area. Headlining the list of returnees are Di Eastham, Mary Henock, Cathy Leadman, Heather Morley and Pat Parr. Newcomers Donna Hutchings and Robin Leighton have had experience in Ottawa as well so the team stands an excellent chance of doing well this weekend. Remember . . . noon on Saturday in the Queen's Pool. Support the team.

Canada: Downtown mall to return

KINGSTON Two blocks of Princess Street may once again be closed off this summer to allow shoppers the opportunity to shop in a downtown mall.

The Kingston Business Assoc. will ask the city for $12,000 to establish a one month mall from July 6 to August 6, similar to the one which was run on an experimental basis last summer.

In a survey run last summer, it was found that 54 per cent of the city merchants wanted to maintain the mall as a yearly summer attraction. In addition 41 per cent of the city shoppers indicated that they would like the mall on a permanent basis but only 9 per cent of the merchants agreed with them.

OTTAWA — If you look at the actual unemployment data for January, the number of unemployed persons increased, but adjusted for seasonal variations, the underlying trend actually decreased.

In January 688,000 persons, or 7.7 per cent of the labour force were left unemployed, up from 6.5 per cent in December. Seasonally adjusted, however, to even out seasonal fluctuations and reveal trends, the rate declined to 6.2 per cent in January from 6.7 per cent in the previous month.

There were 8,881,000 people in the labour force last month, accounting for about 55.7 per cent of the population.

Seasonally adjusted employment rose in Ontario, the Prairies, and British Columbia and fell in Quebec and the Atlantic Provinces.

EDMONTON — The Alberta Social Credit Party is going back to the grass roots after their stunning defeat at the hands of the Conservatives in the 1971 election, their only defeat in 36 years.

Werner Schmidt, a professor, defeated two former Cabinet ministers to be elected overwhelmingly to the party's leadership, succeeding Harry Strom, who led them into defeat.

At present there are only 24 Socred seats in the 75 member Alberta legislature.

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau announced to the Commons that the Queen has approved the extending of Governor General Roland Michener's term of office for an extra year, one month after being recommended by Trudeau.

Michener will now hold the position until November 30, 1973 instead of April 17, 1973, the second such extension for him. Appointed in 1967, Michener's term of office was originally scheduled to be five years.

TORONTO — Canadian National Railways has joined the banks in the race for the tallest building on the Toronto skyline and in doing so will build the tallest structure in the world.

CN is scheduled to build an 1805 foot tall building, costing $21 million which is to be 821 feet taller than the Eiffel Tower and 57 feet taller than Moscow's Ostankino Tower, previously the world's tallest buildings.

Scheduled for completion by 1974, the structure will be shaped like a needle with a large revolving circular six-storey pod at the top.

There will be a large restaurant in the pod, in addition to outdoor and indoor observation decks and radio studios. The tower will be carrying broadcasting antenna for CBC, ETV, various cable televisions and perhaps CTV as well.

The structure will be located over the newly proposed transportation corridor which will be formed by a realignment of existing railroad tracks from Union Station which is to be sold to the city.

QUEBEC — The provincial Creditiste party convention have elected a leader which they hope will make inroads on Montreal from their predominantly rural base and who reflects what seems to be a resurgence of Conservativism in the province.

Yvon Dupuis, a former Liberal cabinet minister under Lester Pearson and more recently a hotline host on a Montreal radio station, will be the new party leader. His radio show has gained him a large degree of support in that city.

"Members will recall we agreed yesterday to receive representations from across Canada. . . "

World: Laos becomes the new target centre

VIENTIANE — The war may be over in Vietnam but not so for all of South East Asia as Laos experienced heavy Communist offensives this week, probably one of the heaviest in years.

Serious reverses for government troops were reported all over the country and a key supply base for Lao irregulars was reported to have fallen to the Communists.

The United States airforce has stepped up their raids on North Vietnamese troops in Laos in an attempt to reduce pressure on parts of the country. A second Vietnam?

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia — The science of Creative Intelligence, started by Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, and since spread to about sixty countries around the world has been introduced into Ethiopia by personal decree of the Emperor.

Emperor Haile Selassie personally ordered SCI courses to be introduced to all the secondary schools in Ethiopia and the country's one teachers' college.

Selassie also announced that he will use his influence as the leader of an organization of independent African states to bring students from all over the continent to be trained as teachers of SCI.

SANTO DOMINGO — The Dominican Republic is showing signs of alarm as ten heavily armed guerrilla fighters slipped onto the island and disappeared into the mountains.

The government of President Joaquin Balaguer announced fears that they may be supporters of former dictator Juan Bosch, who, after being overthrown in 1963, returned in 1965 to foment a revolt. However, the intervention of United States marines at the time prevented civil war from starting.

PHILADELPHIA — Over one-third of the city's parking and traffic violations went unpaid last year for a total of close to four million dollars. Of the two million violations issued, 700,000 were never heard of again.

"Does it say how . . ?"

backpage

Vietnam

SAIGON — Fighting in South Vietnam has fallen sharply as the international peacekeeping teams on the International Commission of Control and Supervision move out to set up their regional headquarters in seven provincial capitals.

Latest developments have been the arrival of the North Vietnamese representatives to observe at the regional level. The Viet Cong delegations are expected soon to join the already present United States and South Vietnamese contingents.

The ICCS has registered the first four official complaints of ceasefire violations and they are now being looked at at the regional headquarters.

Head of the Canadian delegation to the ICCS Michael Gauvin has been elected chairman of the ICCS for a one month period, after which it will rotate in alphabetical order to the other members.

Gauvin announced last week that he has been informed that the first American prisoners of war may be released by Saturday.

HAI LANG, Vietnam — A team of ICCS observers were prevented from reaching Quang Tri City on their way northward from the regional headquarters.

The eleven men, 3 Canadian, 3 Hungarian, 3 Indonesian, and 2 Poles, were held up by an artillery duel outside the city and were forced to return to Hue, the regional headquarters.

WASHINGTON — President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam announced that he might ask for the return of United States air power in the event that the Communists break the ceasefire agreement but US presidential advisor Henry Kissinger soon afterwards stated that Saigon would be strong enough to meet most military threats without outside help.

Despite Thieu's claims that South Vietnam would fall in the event of a massive Communist offensive, Kissinger was confident that the ceasefire would not be broken and that even if it was, the North would not be capable of launching an overwhelming attack against the South.

SYDNEY Australia — The Americans' silent partner in the war in Vietnam, Australia has announced that it is looking at the possibility of diplomatic recognition of North Vietnam.

Labour Prime Minister Gough Whitlam ordered the withdrawal of the last remaining Australian troops from Vietnam just after he won the early December election. Most had been withdrawn in late 1971.

Whitlam has also ordered an inquiry into the feasibility of an economic aid program for North Vietnam to help repair the war damage. They have already allotted about $13 million to South Vietnam for civil improvement programs.

At the height of their commitment, the Australians had 8,000 men in Vietnam.

- solman

Queen's
Journal
Volume One Hundred, No. 38
Tuesday, February 13, 1973

Fee withholding being phased-out

GUELPH—The province-wide fee withholding protest against government changes in the Ontario student aid programme will be 'phased-out' over the next four weeks, culminating in a series of cross-campus discussions of education in general and the Wright Report in particular.

This decision came out of a weekend general meeting of the Ontario Federation of Students at the University of Guelph.

15,000 to 20,000 students are now withholding their second term tuition fees across the province; probably 2,000 of them at Queen's. The phase-out will begin this week with the University of Toronto and Carleton, and will continue at two campuses a week until mid-March.

Queen's will call off its withholding on the 28th of February. (This was endorsed last night at the Alma Mater Society Inner Council with no objections).

The withholding is being terminated in what could be called an orderly retreat as a protection for the weaker campuses participating in the action and as a means of allowing other actions to be taken.

Queen's External Affairs Commissioner, Lyn Whitham, in speaking to the motion, pointed out that "it will alleviate the problems of withholding at various campuses. We have made our point that students are concerned about the financing and quality of education, but we must keep the issue before students."

She indicated that a number of students across the province are faced with the problems of deregistration (at Carleton), the withholding of OSAP cheques, and late income tax receipts and emphasized there should be some "consideration for individual students."

University of Toronto SAC vice-president John Helliwell indicated the ending of the withholding was based on the point that it was a "temporary symbolic action" and would be "much better if it were ended while a number of people were withholding rather than being allowed to dwindle away."

Helliwell reported that SAC had decided Wednesday to remove its backing for the withholding in order to move onto other forms of protest.

Robert Stikeman of the University of Western Ontario argued that the Provincial government would have to organize student concern and "see we are organized, as this year's changes produced such a level of support." He said the government would probably think about changes in education financing consult with students before taking action.

The ending of the withholding produced shouts of anger and "sellout" from a number of Young Socialist observers at the conference. They claimed it was an act of "sabatoge" and "Buckling under to the government."

Charles Lee of Brock University, which had not participated in the withholding but has experienced a number of occupations over faculty cutbacks, charged that the federation was being too cautious and was wasting. "Valuable energy". He indicated that "action gets results" and called for demonstrations and the closing down of universities for a day. He, however, received no support from delegates from the member institutions.

The meeting was not punctuated with the factionalization and animosity that permieated the November meeting of OFS which called the withholding. •

Whitham indicated later that the meeting showed "the federation was pulling together" as it had recognized some of its failings from hasty action in the summer and "realized that each campus is unique and cannot be expected to conform to a norm."

She said there was a definate need for long range study and education in the field of student aid and in particularly, "we must look critically at the COPSEO (Wright) Report and be prepared to give a student response." "We cannot," Whitham continued, "just claim we are against 'cutbacks in education'. That's just playing political football, the OFS must develop a long range policy on education."

- wilson

ASC told interdisciplinary is back and before the faculty board now

by Bob Mutrie

The March meeting of the Arts and Science Faculty Board will be asked to allow students in the faculty wishing to take the Chemical Engineering Department's interdisciplinary Nature, Science and Man course to take it for credit, Dr. A. J. Coleman told the Arts and Science Council (ASC) which met on February 8.

The ASC, formerly the Association of Departmental Student Councils, is an information distributing body which brings together the chairmen and faculty board representatives of various student councils, AMS representatives, student Senators, and other student representatives.

The ADSC came together to listen to speakers and discuss various issues which have been of current interest on campus, including fee withholding and the institution of an interdisciplinary program.

Coleman pointed out the success of the Nature, Science and Man program which has been offered for two years now and suggested that gradually faculty members should take the initiative to create more such courses.

Coleman felt that the Faculty of Arts and Science should start by opening up the Nature, Science and Man course, which is already available, to students of other faculties.

He suggested that the current interest which has been taken in the establishing of an interdisciplinary program here has not been the function of a desire to "pander to immediate fad issues" such as that which has been running rampant in American universities.

Coleman stressed that the university's purpose is really being subverted if courses do not exist to help its members to get a deeper grasp on the intellectual disciplines for the good of the country, society and mankind." This he felt, could be enhanced through the introduction of an interdisciplinary program.

The Senate recently rejected a proposal calling for the establishment of interdisciplinary courses on world problems here when it was suggested as an amendment to the Senate Committee on Academic Development's recommendations with regard to interdisciplinarity.

He took note of the fact that Orientation week could benefit from an injection of the interdisciplinary idea which could help students generate some sort of knowledge of what they want.

AMS External Affairs Commissioner Lynne Whitham was also present at the meeting to discuss the progress of the fee strike and to take note of the fact that the number withholding could be as high as 2,000 and not 500 as was originally suggested.

Committee apps due

The Queen's community is invited to submit to the Secretary of the Senate the names of full-time faculty and students whose interests, knowledge, and experience seem to qualify them for positions on Senate committees. People being sponsored do not need to be previous members of the Senate, but must show an interest in the problems related to the responsibilities to the various committees. Applications can be submitted to Room 225 Richardson Hall by Thursday, March 1st, 1973.

People presently serving on Senate Committees are eligible for reappointment, and should notify the Secretary of the Senate if they wish to serve a second term. The terms of office are for 2 years, except where noted, commencing September 1st, 1973.

WARNING: The Department of National Health and Welfare advises that danger to health increases with amount smoked.

ATTENTION

Artsci '75 Elections

Positions:

Pres. Vice-Pres.

Secretary

Treasurer

Male & Female Athletic Sticks

Publicity Agent

Social Convenor

Feb. 14th, 8:00 p.m. upstairs in the Union
Nominations must be placed in box provided in AMS Office no later than 5:00 p.m., Feb. 14th

ITS YOUR YEAR
Get Off Your Butt
And Vote

CALL FOR 'LABATT'S BLUE'

McNie at Queen's

Government still non-committal

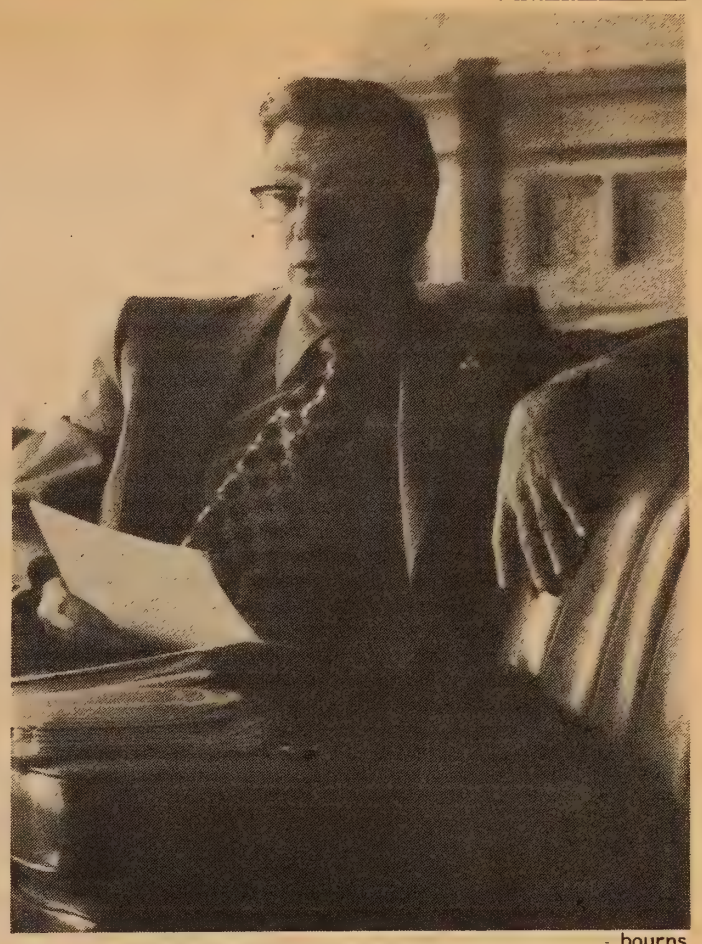
by Bob Wood

Jack McNie, Ontario Minister of Colleges and Universities was non-committal at a meeting with Queen's students Saturday morning in the Polson Room. He stated that "the government is still as committed as ever to post secondary education" but didn't outline any definite action that the government would take. The only topics on which McNie would take a stand were that there would be no fee rollback nor an increase in fees next year. Although the rollback was included in the demands mady by OFS it was not an issue at Queen's.

McNie did not refer to the fee-withhold action during the meeting but mentioned to Kiloran German, chairman of the meeting that "unfortunately you are putting the university in a difficult financial position".

Present AMS vice-president, Wally Palmer asked why the additional amount on an appealed award was in loan for instead of grant. McNie seemed unaware of this situation and said he would check into the matter.

Ross Sutherland questioned "Will the loan ceiling be increased again?" McNie replied "I hope not" making no further committments. He doubts also that the age of independence will be lowered.



McNie was sympathetic towards demands to lower the age of independence. The problems of aid to part time students especially loan repayments was an area in which he was open to suggestions.

The Ontario Minister expanded on the problems of decreased enrolment for half an hour. He cited student realization that higher learning doesn't necessarily lead to higher earnings and the declining postwar boom as contributing factors. McNie claimed that 75 per cent of decreased enrolment was attributed to dropouts after first year. McNie felt that accessibility barriers are most significantly against the middle income students. He added that this was especially true for families having several students attending university.

He explained that lower income group problems are based in primary and secondary education and that the restrictions preventing them from coming to university are there rather than because of additional financial restrictions.

McNie advised that all questions on post-secondary education would be answered when the budget comes down in mid-April.

McNie made no reply to Sutherland's question as to why government set up additional barriers to these people when it was hard enough for them anyway.

- bourns

Jack McNie, Minister of Universities and Colleges, met with students at Queen's on Saturday.

Brereton's election reflections

by Bob Wood

"A lot of ideas emerged which we hope we can implement" commented Steve Brereton reflecting on the AMS election. "We're looking for a new attitude next year."

Strengthening the Education Commission and widening its scope was a top priority in the Brereton-Trotter campaign. To create student awareness in problems facing the campus, Brereton favours having forums and symposiums organized to assume an important role in campus activities. He proposed investigating the feasibility of a campus survey in the early fall to find out what students want. Brereton pointed out that "they must be aware of what the AMS does before they can make any constructive criticism or useful suggestions". He mentioned that inducing students to read Who's Where would be a good start.

"We should start right with orientation and build on this" commented Brereton. He indicated that there should be more emphasis on this kind of thing and less on social aspects.

In order to have a worthwhile turnout at the presentations. "We are limited in getting top notch speakers by financial and geographical restrictions," he noted. "We must think in terms of the Montreal-Toronto-Ottawa triangle as the resource area from which to bring in speakers". Brereton advocated working very closely with ASUS, Senate, Faculty Board, Orientation, and the ASC (formerly the Association of Departmental Student Councils) to further improve campus awareness.

Brereton is very hopeful that the proposed Information Bank will help close the information gap. The Bank would distribute information, funnel interested persons to the organizations that need their help, and serve as a means for the campus to voice their opinions and pick up information on issues before the AMS.

The Brereton-Trotter team hope to motivate Outer Council by initiating more committee work under the commissions. By involving members in preparing policy papers, having information made available before the meetings so reps will be more knowledgeable on the issues and presenting regular reports on what other organizations are doing, they hope to spur Outer Council to greater action.

The Residence Board set up in the Senate last year which has jurisdiction over co-ed residence have adopted a "wait and see" attitude. Brereton plans to take a motion to the Board to set up a committee to study increased co-ed living.

ZPG meets Pollution Probe

by James Stones

"The earth's population is already too great to maintain a decent standard of living" announced Bill Roff, the representative of Zero Population Probe. He defined a decent standard of living as one with a balanced population, an adequate income and a stable social structure "Unlimited exponential population growth cannot be maintained", he added. Speaking to an interested group in the basement of St. James Church he said that North America is headed for major difficulties unless it affects a reduction in population, a better use of resources and a more widespread recycling program.

Last year the emphasis of ZPG IN KINGSTON was to spread the message at the grass-roots level. The members did a certain amount of public speaking, organizing discussion groups and operating a stall in the market during the summer.

Members of Pollution Probe discussed their negotiations with Dominion stores over returnable soft drink containers. Before nonreturnable containers were introduced to the market, the returnable one was used an average of 20 times before being discarded. This is the major reason for the plethora of nonreturnables around today. What is the answer? Recycling is not it. This entails remelting and reshaping and 4 times the energy that is needed to refill a useable container. Obviously reusable containers should be used.

ARTSCI '74 Presents

Auf Wiedersehen

401

March 10th
7:30 - 1:00

$6.00 couple
tux not req'd.

Queen's University Department of Drama

as you like it

February 12–17 Convocation Hall 8:30pm Tickets: Drama Dept. 547 6291

A Short Treatment For Public Speaking Anxiety

Are you nervous or uncomfortable when required to give a seminar or present a paper to a class? If you have any problems you might call anxiety or nervousness (or distress of any form) when you have to speak before a group, please get in touch with us.

This experimental treatment program requires about 2 hours per week for 4 weeks. The program will begin the week of February 26th.

Please leave your name and phone number with one of the following as soon as possible.

Secretary, Student Counselling Service 547-2893 (days
Dr. Wm. Marshall, K.P.H. 546-1101 (days)
542-2059 (evenings)
Cindy Presse, Dept. of Psychology 547-5819 (days)
544-5180 (evenings)
(Student Counselling Service and Department of Psychology)

That's what the Paulists are all about.

For more information write: Father Donald C. Campbell, Room 103CA.

Paulist Fathers.
647 Markham Street
Toronto 174, Ontario

THE JOY OF LIVING IS IN THE JOY OF Giving Praying
Working Sharing the joys the laughter the problems the success and failures knowing that where there is human need in the cities,
the suburbs,
in parishes, on campus
the Paulist is there helping counseling rejoicing in the presence of the good and in the signs of hope around us

THE UNIVERSITY OF WESTERN ONTARIO
FACULTY OF ENGINEERING SCIENCE

Environmental Engineering

Applications are now being accepted for entry next September into the 1973-74 Environmental Engineering Program leading to the degree of Master of Engineering (M.Eng).

The program is multidisciplinary in emphasis and is designed to extend the education of graduate engineers and scientists to subjects necessary for an understanding of environmental problems. Graduates having the normal admission requirements of the University are able to complete the program and obtain the degree in one academic year.

Subjects covered include air and water pollution control, solid wastes management, eco-systems and resource management, environmental law, biology, administration of control programs, and meteorology.

Further information, details of financial support available, and application forms can be obtained from:

The Director,
Environmental Engineering Program
University of Western Ontario
Faculty of Engineering Science
London, Ontario. N6A 3K7
Telephone (519) 679-2437

newsbriefs

Foreign students benefit Canada

by Sue Wishart

The presence of foreign students in Canadian universities benefits all concerned, and should not be discouraged. This was the consensus reached by the panel at the Grad Day Symposium on "The Role of Foreign Students in Canadian Universities" Saturday afternoon.

The panel was made up of Dr. A.J. Coleman, head of Queen's Math department and director of the International Centre, Ceta Ramkalawansingh, a U. of T. student on the Ontario Commission on Student Awards, Dave Catmur of CUSO, Pierre-Yves Paradis, the associate director of the International Development Research Centre (IDRC), and Bryce MacKasey, the former federal minister of Manpower and Immigration.

Catmur argued that a university must be a community. "If it is not international, it isn't doing its job."

MacKasey agreed. He told the audience that the presence of foreign students "can only benefit Canadians who are exposed to the students and vice versa". On a more material level, the student's own country will benefit if he decides to take his new skills home, and Canada will be better off if he chooses to remain here.

The problem of a "brain drain" of talent from developing countries to Canada was also discussed. Paradis explained that this is one major reason for the existence of the IDRC. It gives financial assistance to students who intend to return to their own countries, where they are needed most. MacKasey pointed out that most foreign governments have the power to decide who they will let out of the country, thus giving them some control over the "brain drain".

Coleman suggested that it is unfair to criticize the number of foreign students in Canadian universities. He claimed that there are as many Canadians studying abroad as there are foreign students in Canada.

Both MacKasey and Ramkalawansingh complained that the term "foreign student" has never been adequately defined. Ramkalawansingh claimed that provincial governments think of foreign students as anyone who lives outside their province. She outlined the Ontario government's complicated system of aid priorities which gives citizens preference over landed immigrants. MacKasey argued that a landed immigrant is not a foreign student and should not be discriminated against. He claimed that the singling out of foreign students is "nothing more than a disguise for a way to cut down on the high cost of education."

Catmur supported aid for students from developing countries because those countries have the greatest need for their skills, yet are least able to pay for their education.

Faculty Board admits Journal

For the first time in its hundred year history, the Journal will be in attendance at meetings of the Arts and Science Faculty Board, one of the most important decision making bodies on campus involving both student and faculty representatives.

The decision to admit the Journal to regular meetings of the Faculty Board was made at the Feburary 9 meeting of the Board after about a month of consideration in committee.

Jennifer Grass, Editor of the Journal, was pleased with the decision but acknowledged that "it is a solemn responsibility that will demand conscientious reporting."

The move means a change in the Faculty Board rules of procedure and so must be brought up before the Senate before it is official but the Chairman of the Board, Dr. C. Crowder, was mandated by the meeting to invite a representative of the Journal to attend and report on the March meeting.

There will be a rule brought forward by the Board for the closing of certain parts of the meeting. This is similar to the rules enforced by the Senate and its committees.

The Journal will be covering the March 9 meeting of the Faculty Board to which Syl Apps, Conservative MLA for Kingston and the Islands has been invited for the presentation of the Committee of Department's report on the implications of constant enrolment.

Crowder had corresponded with Apps deploring the rise in tuition fees and the increase in the OSAP loan ceiling. Both felt that the communications between university and government could be improved and Crowder invited him to come to the meeting and many members have suggested that he be allowed an active role in the discussion.

ARTSCI '74 ELECTIONS

Thurs., Feb. 15

3rd floor Common room, Union

President
Vice-Pres.
Sec.-Treasurer
Social Convenor
Publicity
Athletic Stick
Permanent Exec.

to be submitted in writing to Anne Macdonald, 469 Victoria St., 544-5997 by 11 p.m. Feb. 14

SVB - improving communication

We're a month into the new year and we thought we had better bring you up to date.

Two weeks ago, SVB hosted an interprovincial conference on student volunteer bureaus. We had people here from seven universities in Ontario and Loyola from Montreal. We came away with lots of ideas for change and improvement. One of the changes we will be making will be in the structure of the Bureau. We will be needing more people on the Executive next year in order to have things run more efficiently. So, we are holding a meeting for all of you who might be interested in being on the Executive next year.

McLaughlin Room (Union Building) February 13th at 7 p.m.

If you are at all interested, or have any questions, please come.

One big problem that the SVB has, is trying to maintain contact with you the volunteer. These newsletters and our telephone contact with you are our only means of communication. We need your comments, criticisms and suggestions about everything; the SVB, your agency, your volunteer job, and to make it easier for you to tell us, we are holding a seminar called "STUDENTS IN THE COMMUNITY", March 6th at 7:00 p.m. in Lower Vic. Dr. McLay will talk about Band-Aid Relief. There will be a discussion period following his address. Do you think volunteering is doing any good? Is it just an ego trip? We want to hear your thoughts.

We are going into the third summer with Opportunities for Youth.

It should be as interesting and frustrating as last year! Have you any ideas for a project? Would you like to get together with other people planning projects?If so, drop into our office and talk to Roy.

SVB has just received an LIP grant to hire two people for four months. These people will be helping us with our day to day operations, co-ordinating OFY for Queen's and doing research on how we can improve our organization.

Dates to Remember:
February 13th at 7 p.m. McLaughlin Room in the Union. For those interested in the 73-74 Executive.
March 6th at 7 p.m. Lower Vic. "Students in the Community"

editorial

Now that the elections are over, and the dust has settled (so to speak) we'd like to reflect upon the events of the past week and a half, specifically upon our editorial endorsing the Presidential candidates Whitham and Sugar.

When we ran the editorial, we expected a reaction from people who opposed our conclusion (that Whitham - Sugar seemed to be the stronger team). However, we were rather puzzled by those who seemed to think that a newspaper has no right to opinions or that if it has opinions, they will influence the nature of the whole paper. Many seemed unable or unwilling to understand that an editorial is an opinion piece, not a news story. We attempted to be impartial and honest in our news reporting on the candidates and election and in fact no one complained about our news coverage. Rather people chose to comment that it was impossible for the Journal to report fairly on the campaign because we had expressed an editorial opinion. This conclusion is rather simplistic and an insult to our intelligence and that of our readers.

We have also been accused of using our special position on the campus to spread our views. This of course is true, but it is one of the rights and privileges of an editor to do so. We have run other editorials this year, stating our opinion without being accused of impropriety. Presumably most supported our view.

This leads us to one of the most disturbing aspects of the whole controversy.Almost without exception, those who argued against editorial endorsement were opposed to our conclusion, and those who supported us tended to agree. It was disconcerting to see "principles of journalism" bent to support a political position. It appears that the students at Queen's will question our right to express an editorial opinion only when they disagree with it. This is hypocrisy.

At the risk of reopening an old feud which (thankfully) died a couple of years ago, we would like to comment briefly upon our colleagues at Golden Words. Over the years they have built up a widespread following on campus and have gathered a rather impressive group of opinionated columnists. But a newspaper? Probably not, and we suspect they would agree with this view. Consequently, this makes last Wednesday's "news" story on the fee withholding rather peculiar. Why was it run at all, when obviously very little thought or effort went into its preparation? This was an erroneous story which concerned two sensitive issues - the fee withholding and the election (and it appeared on the day of the election.) Surely the charge of "journalistic irresponsibility" which has been floating about lately should be saved for this sort of thing, and not for an editorial with which one disagrees.

Queen's Journal

Vol. 100, No. 38
Tues., Feb. 13, 1973
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ont.

Editor: Jennifer Grass
Business: Charles Schwier
Management: John Solman
Arts: Sandy Naiman
Features; Pat Devitt, Steven Winnett
Passepartout: Bob Wood
News: Susan de Stein
Events: Alison Dandie
Sports: Chris Boon, Nada Bogdanovic
National Desk: Bob Mutrie, Sue Wishart
Photography: Peter Boag

Special thanks on this originally organized night to Liz and Pat - Woodie's new blood, James, Trotts, Ann - who performed as ad manager for a night, Mung for pics, and especially to those tenacious sports people and the others who hung over . . . But Chas - where are you? And What ever happened to 'normal' press nights? (I was here, at 4:30 am, finishing, thats where I was; as for earlier . . . a most enjoyable pressnite.)

Published twice weekly on Tuesdays and Fridays by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc., Member, Canadian University Press. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society of the University. Offices are located in the Student's Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

letters

Jazz fans demand more concerts

Dear Editor,

"Variety must be offered to concert card holders" says one classics guerilla in your newsbriefs (Feb. 6, 1973). Sure enough, I couldn't agree more. But what about some jazz? The recent enthusiastically received concert by Chuck Mangione proved that there is an audience for jazz at Queen's and in Kingston. Mangione's group played in a full house despite inadequate advertising, competition by other events and bad weather.

Some people believe that Kingston is a cultural dessert and this is certainly true with regard to jazz; one concert every two or three years is a damn meagre diet. The situation isn't as bad for lovers of classical music which may opt out of the concert fee and join the Grant Hall or Dunning Hall crowds. What can the frustrated jazz fan do? He watches announcements of numerous concerts with a large variety of music such as hard rock, soft rock, folk rock, progressive rock and what-else rock sprinkled with an occassional folk singer. Which is probably what the majority wants but that is no reason not to stage some more jazz. A slim slice out of the large Concert Committee budget would surely cover such events but somehow the bucks always disappear in connection with the appearance of some rock heavy and we have to hope that "the Richie Havens concert proves to be successful" (Steve Sugar) in order to hear something different. A rather sad state of affairs; maybe it does require "guerillas" (see above) to change things a bit with the AMS Concert Committee. . .

Hopefully yours,
Alfred Kormann, Grad student

Women reply to 'pissed off' male

Dear Pissed-Off,

Your naive and ignorant attitude towards Queen's women and your gutter-like vocabulary make you deserving of being "ripped-off" for your money; you seem to have little else to offer. It is unfortunate that one of such tender years ("I am a twenty year old, first year Arts student") should hold such a jaded view of the entire female population of this university. Most "young ladies" (who you prefer to call bitches) would rather have an imaginative inexpensive date than being lavished by someone more concerned with making an impression than having a good time. Remember, it's who you're with, not where you go.

Believe it or not, there are many of us whose interests and finances are not governed by our father's bank books. Perhaps if you'd signed your name you'd never have to worry again; none of the "dumb broads" at Queen's would be dumb enough to go out with you.

Three Queen's women.

P.S. Please check the "cheap-but-fun" date list.
Cheap But Fun Date List

1) Music of Beethoven, Haydn, Mozart - Grant Hall Tues. February 13 - free.
2) skating - free
3) squash, badminton etc. - 25c for raquet
4) cross country skiing equipment for the day - $1
5) coffee in Union - 15c each
6) night swimming - free
7) pub 45c a beer
8) Dunning flicks $1 each
9) guest lecturers - free - see 7 more days in Journal
10) coffee at her place - free?
11) watch TV - free
12) hockey games - free
13) walks - free
14) Civilization series - 2 films, 20c each, sponsored by Art History department.
15) And if you're lucky, a free lay.

The nest, carbon copy

Dear Editor,

While reading Geoff Henning's "Wax Works" article in the Feb. 2 Journal and in particular his description of Jimmie Spheeris' "The Nest", I was struck with a sense of familiarity with the contents of the song as recounted by Mr. Henning. Then it hit me. The credit for the imagination (which Mr. Henning attributes to Spheeris) really belongs to a science-fiction writer by the name of Robert A. Heinlein. Indeed the whole thing, right down to the name Valentine Michael Smith, is lifted from Heinlein's book, "Stranger in a Strange Land", which was written prior to 1961. It would seem that "Jimmie's masterpiece" as Mr. Henning refers to it, is only a carbon copy after all.

Sincerely,
Brian Jacques
Law '73.

AMS OUTER COUNCIL MEETING

Wednesday, February 14

7:00 p.m.

3rd Floor Common Room

in Union

ALL WELCOME

CFRC am-fm

CFRC AM Highlights

Thursday Feb. 15
7:30 The Goon Show. Comedy from the BBC with Spike Milligan, Harry Secombe and Peter Sellers: "Emperor of the Universe".

Friday Feb. 16
8:00 Hockey Game. CFRC broadcasts the Queen's-York Hockey game live.

Sat. Feb. 17
7:00 The Music Department. Dr. F.R.C. Clarke of the Queen's Music Department takes a look at lesser-known classics.

Sun. Feb. 18
7:45 Montage. An interesting melange of music, comedy and features.

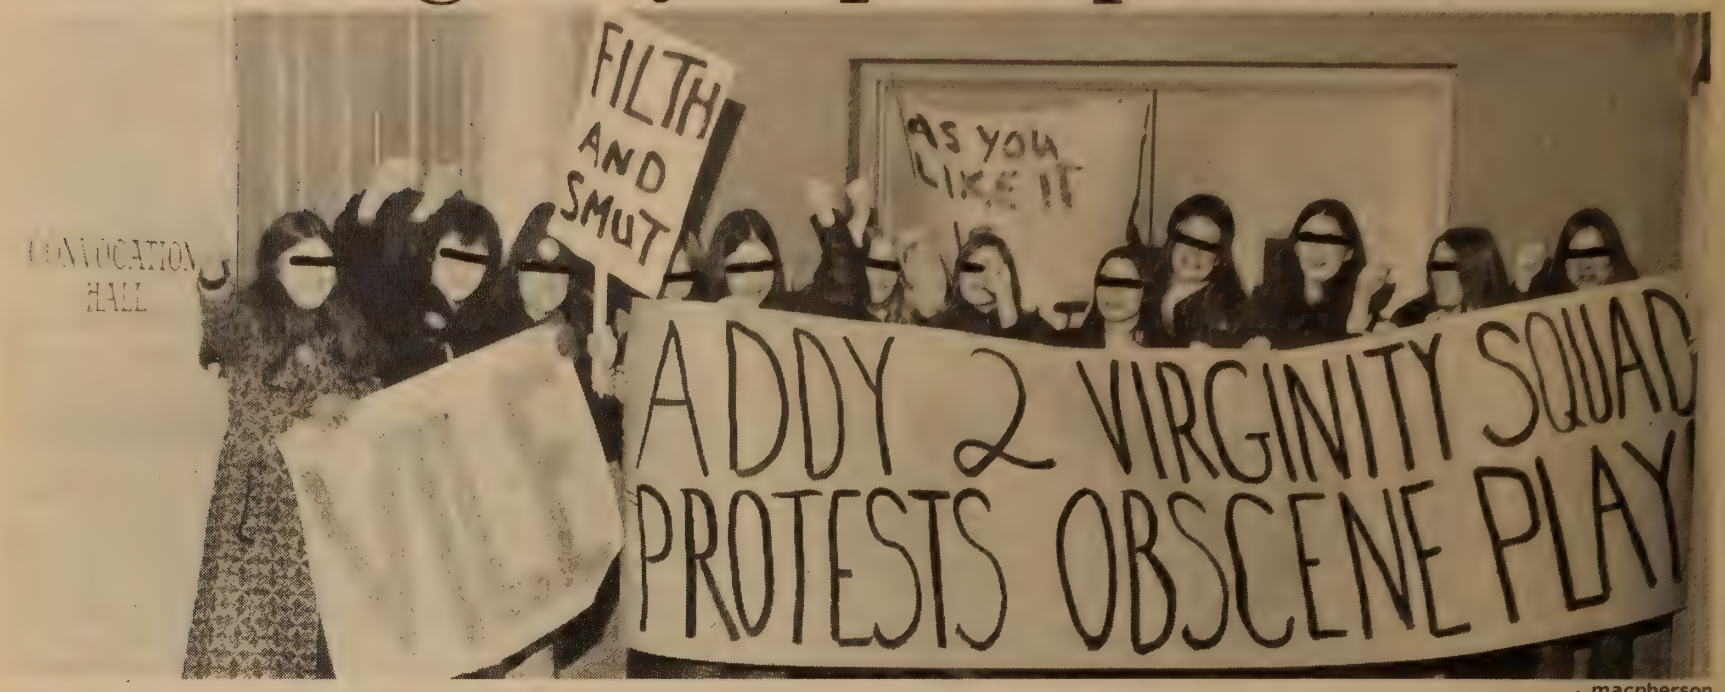
classified

TWO GOOD SIZED rooms available in ideally located 5-person student house (193 Colbourne Ave.) Cooking facilities, fridge, stove, shower bath, parking. $50.00 per month per person. Available IMMEDIATELY, call 544-4386.

AVAILABLE: a spacious three bedroom apartment for 1973-74. Phone 544-0318.

QUEEN'S CURLING CLUB announces their St. Patrick's Day Bonspiel March 17. Open to all Queen's students, faculty, and staff. $20.00 per team. Contact Gail at 544-9457 for details.

DI and DONNA - Hi!



FOUND SUNDAY AFTERNOON: a black and white puppy on Union near Alfred. Call 544-0347.

ATTENTION DRACULA: The girls are dying to meet you. Come to dinner Thursday 6 p.m. The Big K.

(other classifieds on page 11)

Smut in "As You Like It!"

Virginity Squad protests

macpherson

On Tuesday, February 6th, the Addy 2 Virginity Squad picketted a rehearsal night. Members insisted that their identities be concealed. of the Drama Department production of "As You Like It" which opened last

Lovedays

Tuesday, February 13

3:30 pm - A talk on Abortion and the Law in Canada. David Dehler, Jack Johnson, Toni Prickard. McDonald Hall. (Law School). Theatres D and E.

5:45 pm - Ban Righ Fireside. Woodwind Trio Quintet. Queen's Music Dept. Coffee and dessert. Ban Righ Common Room.

7:00 pm - Spanish Club Meeting and "stuffed peppers" dinner. 165 University Ave. Everyone Welcome.

8:00 pm - Music Dept. presents a Concert: Queen's Chamber Singers and Queen's Chamber Orchestra. Directors: D. Keane and Rudolph Schnitzler. Mozart, Symphony No. 30; Beethoven, Elegisher Gesang, Op. 118; Haydn, Missa Brevis No. 5; Mozart, Reginal Coeli. Admission free. Grant Hall.

8:00 pm - Dept. of Film Studies presents Fellini's "La Dolce Vita." Ellis Hall.

8:00 pm - Informal Discussion on the topic "Pentecost: What's that?" in Small Common Room. Students Union. All welcome.

8:30 pm - McArthur College Aud. Rachel Brown's Contemporary Dancers. Tickets - $2.50 are on sale at Pickwick's Book Store, Verne Napier's Cameras and Londry's Sundries (Reddendale).

8:30 pm - P. Ward on Anti Orientalism in B.C. 517 Watson.

8:30 pm - The Drama Dept. presents "As You Like It" directed by Rod Robertson with music by David Keane. Tickets $2.00 non-students; $1.00 students. Available from Drama Dept. Convocation Hall.

9:00 pm - East Common Rm. Chown Hall. M. R. Wardle - Director of Dept. of Extension will be present to discuss Intersession and summer school programs. all welcome.

Wednesday, February 14

2:20 pm - Dept of Biochemistry presents a seminar on "Some Pathology of the Mammalian Ribosome." Earl Hall Rm. 114.

7:00 pm - "On Death and Dying" - a film. Elizabeth Kubler Ross at Etherington Hall Aud.

8:00 pm - Student Recital. B. Music Students in solo and chamber ensemble performances. Dunning Aud.

8:00 pm - Applied Math Smoker, Clark Hall. $1.00 for all you can drink. All Applied Math students and faculty welcome. Special Invitation to first year students considering Applied Math.

8:30 pm - The Dept of Drama presents "As You Like It." Directed by Rod Robertson with music by David Keane. Convocation Hall. Tickets at $2.00 non-students; $1.00 students. Available from Drama Dept.

8:30 pm - A Canadian Farmers Impressions of his trip to China last summer. With slides. Reg. Winbatt, local National Farmers Union member, from Picton area. International Centre basement.

Thursday, February 15

11:30 pm - Conjoint Rounds. Dept. of Medicine and Obstetrics and Gynaecology. Topic. Abnormal Lactation. Etherington Hall Amphitheatre.

3:30 pm - Dept. of Obstetrics and Gynaecology presents a lecture on Concepts of Human Breast Physiology: Dr. Friesen. Etherington Lecture Theatre, First Floor.

7:30 - 9:00 pm - Medical Sciences Lecture Series presents Dr. Henry Friesen (Prof of Experimental Medicine, McGill University), speaking on "Human Prolactin - Its Physiological Control and Therapeutic Potential." Aud. Etherington Hall.

6:00 pm - Horrorrama. Dunning Hall flicks. Ends about 1:00 am come any time.

7:30 pm - Bridge Club meets in the McLaughlin Rm., Students Union.

7:30 pm - Lecture on "Sociology of Art" by Prof Ned Polsky of Dept of Sociology, State Univ. of New York at Stoneybrook. McDonald Hall Room 104.

8:30 pm - Drama Dept. presents "As You Like It" directed by Rod Robertson with music by David Keane. Tickets at $2.00 non-students; $1.00 students. (Available from Drama Dept.) Convocation Hall.

9:00 pm - Dept. of Film Studies presents "On The Waterfront." (Elia Kazan, 1954). Ellis Hall.

Friday, February 16

9:30 am - Dept. of Physiology - Seminar: Control of Prolactin Secretion; Dr. Friesen. Dept. of Physiology Library, Physiology Building.

4:00 pm - Queen's Committee of World University Service of Canada (WUSC) holds a winter weekend in the woods at Mazinaw Lake on "University: Why Bother?" Group exploration of questions such as access to education, also Canadian Universities and their role at home and abroad. All inclusive fee $5.00. Information and registration - Ilyas Absar (547-2986) or Kaspar Pold (547-2807).

8:30 pm - Drama Dept. presents "As You Like It" directed by Rod Robertson with music by David Keane. Tickets $2.00 non-students; $1.00 students. Available from Drama Dept. Playing in Convocation Hall. Saturday night also.

There will be no University Service in Morgan Memorial Chapel February 18th and February 25th.

Off Campus
Theatres
Capitol - Deliverance
Hyland - Tues. - 2001. Starting Wednesday - Bluebeard.
Odeon - The Carey Treatment and Skyjacked. Starting Friday - Ulzana's Raid

Pubs
Commodore - The Dusty King Show
Manor - Malton and Hamilton
Seaway Pub - The Mercy Brothers

Chamber singers and Orchestra here tonight

What should prove to be a most interesting and enjoyable musical evening is to be presented by Queen's University Music Department, in Grant Hall, on Tuesday, 13th February, at 8:00 o'clock. Queen's Chamber Singers, under the direction of Dr. Rudolf Schnitzler, together with the Queen's Chamber Orchestra, director Professor David Keane, will perform a program of vocal and orchestral works by Beethoven, Haydn and Mozart.

The twenty-eight member group, the Chamber Singers, who made their very successful debut in Grant Hall last year, will sing three rarely performed works. Haydn's "Missa Brevis Sti. Joannis De Deo", will be performed soprano soloist Jean Callum, with Thomas Cromwell at the Music Department's recently acquired portative organ, as well as the vocal ensemble and the full Chamber Orchestra. The two ensembles will again combine in the "Regina Coeli in C Major" by W. A. Mozart. The third work, Beethoven's "Elegischer Geasang", with piano accompaniment, was written in 1814 as a memorial to the wife of his close friend, Baron John von Pasqualati. Membership of Queen's Chamber Singers consists of students from the University community as a whole, who are selected, after audition, for their vocal ability.

Queen's Chamber Orchestra will open the program with a performance of Mozart's Symphony in D Major. The orchestra which, when it made its first appearance in the fall of 1972, consisted entirely of string players, has supplemented its strings with woodwind, brass, and percussion for this concert. Admission is free.

Critic's Forum: The Art of Cathy Berberian

by Merle Bolick

In his lecture last Wednesday night, "The Art of Berio and Berberian," Professor Istvan Anhalt said some suggestive things about ways to respond to a Berberian recital. One of the concepts introduced was that of the performance as a work of art. For those who attended Cathy Berberian's concert last Friday at Grant Hall this must certainly ring true as an account of what happened there.

Miss Berberian doesn't just pull works out of their original setting (whether operatic or literary) and plunk them into a concert program for a few savants to savour. She reaches the whole of her audience with the full emotional and connotative powers of the works.

To do this she has had to restructure the recital format, allowing for costuming, lights and theatrics (but only where inherent in the works performed), and introducing each piece, stating its background, its content, and giving translations where necessary. There is no longer a gap between the audience, holding programs and referring to them to know the right place to applaud, and the performer, who doesn't care what the audience does as long as it doesn't get noisy.

The Grant Hall program began with La Lettera Amorosa of Monteverdi, "in genera representativa" including renaissance chair, draped table and candelabra, and Berberian's long gown. It was the only work on the program not performed in one of Canada's official languages. However, an atmosphere was created which carried to the audience in spite of some distant sounds from radioland issuing from the stage speakers.

The same could not be said for the John Cage songs which followed. Miss Berberian, with permission from Cage, performed "A Flower" and "The Wonderful Widow of Eighteen Springs" with Japanese fandrum instead of closed piano. The delicacy of the songs and accompaniment could not compete with the sounds of trumpets from the speakers. In one of the crucial silent periods of the second song, our suspicions were confirmed as the noise became intelligible as "live on CFRC". Atmosphere flew to the winds. In spite of the valiant efforts of a young man in the second row, this trouble cluttered up the first half of the concert.

The next work was a more typical concert piece, Debussy's Trois Chansons de Bilitis, which depicts the love affair of a Greek courtesan. The first song, portraying the early infatuation was sung in the suggestive manner it demands. The second song, concentrated on the luxuriance and languor of the fulfilment, was rendered breathlessly and delicately.And the final song, telling of the cruelty of rejection, Miss Berberian sang with an amazing variety of tonal colours, one especially husky effect accompanying the low register in which Debussy set the words of the lover's chilling "Que cherches-tu?" The piano became almost a prop for Miss Berberian against which she could brace herself or nestle in the curve as the mood determined.

The Omaggio a Joyce by Luciano Berio was introduced by a reading from the Sirens episode of Ulysses, a source of sounds used in the tape. Miss Berberian's insistence on authenticity was apparent here as she made it clear that Berio's work is just the logical extension of what Joyce does to language in this chapter. It is the translation of words into mood and music purely.

Bario's Dequenza III is the point where it becomes almost impossible for the reviewer to say anything intelligible to those who did not see it performed. Dynamics are dictated by emotions indicated in the score, emotions which it is difficult to pick up from a record. We not only heard but saw Berio's interpretation of the source, "Give me a few words for a woman to sing, a truth allowing us to build a house without worrying before night comes." This however under went Miss Berberian's own interpretation of it as concerned with woman today, "with all our hang-ups, neuroses and joys." The audience was never out of touch with the double process of creation and interpretation.

Miss Berberian next sang two fallen women's songs by Kurt Weill, "Le Grand Lustucru" from Maria Gallante, and "Surabaya Johnny" in her own English translation (approved by Helene Weigle, Bartolt Brecht's widow).

Translation is not an easy way out for a performer. In this case, Miss Berberian had to put up with a few unexpected reactions to the melodrama of a song which, if sung in German, would have elicited an only too serious response from her audience.

The McCartney-Lennon songs which came next were performed in styles to parody singers who are totally out of touch with the actual meaning and context of their works. During "Yesterday" nothing below the neck moved at all, and above it only an eyebrow. "A Ticket to Ride" was sung in parody of those operatic sopranos who have a stock set of expressions and gestures which are trotted out no matter how meaningless they are to the content of a song.

These songs and the final stripsody were performed with the intention and full result of sending the audience away happy. This work is a glossary of comic-strip onomatopoeia with a few characteristic scenes preserved intact, and is the creation of Cathy Berberian herself.

There were two encores, a Yugoslavian and a Bulgarian folksong. But the impression of the individual works, the impression of the shape of the concert as a whole, no matter how improvisatory, it sometimes seemed, was that of a woman of first-rate artistry, totally in control.

---

by Michael Hodgson

I want to begin by saying inequivocally that mezzo-soprano Cathy Berberian has a splendidly skilled and varied voice, an unusual and extensive repertoire, a charming and entertaining stage-presence, and boundless imagination, both as an actress and as a musician. From her operatic reading of the Lettera Amorosa of Monteverdi (1567-1643) dramatically staged with a candlelit table, through her superbly enunciated and sensuous rendition of Debussy's Chansons de Bilitis (1897), to Surabaya Johnny and Le Grand Lustucru of Kurt Weill (1900-1950) which she sang in a suitably earthy style, Miss Bererian was a most powerful interpreter. Not even competition from CFRC feedback in the amplifiers and her occasionally flaccid accompanist could remove this fact. We were more intimately involved in her recital than we ever would have been had the format been more traditional. In riotous arrangements of "Yesterday" and "Ticket to Ride", she gave us a crafty parody of traditional singing, in which a preposterous pompous posing buries all the sense of the words. With Miss Berberian every performance is well-shaped and expressive.

But what of the avant-garde repertoire that has made her famous? "Stripsody", a collage of sounds from the comics, is a harmless gimmick. And even the two songs of John Cage (A Flower and The Wonderful Widow of 18 Springs) accompanied by Japanese fan drum, were soothing, mood-music. However, even her no doubt faithful performances of two works by her ex-husband, the major contemporary composer Luciano Berio, could not convince me of the value of such "music". The first Berio work, Omaggio a Joyce (1959) was an electronic reworking of Miss Berberian's reading from Joyce's Ulysses. We listened to a tape as Miss Berberian sat nearby. Yes, the "music" was atmospheric and seemed to open up a huge spatial expanse. Yes, there were many unusual sound effects -- it all sounded rather like the Swingle Singers chasing the bats in a mammoth cave! Yes, it is hard to believe all the incredible sounds we heard were reworkings of her voice, but it wasn't any the more interesting for that. After all, her voice is as superfluous here as Bach to the Moog. Why should electronic music imitate or make use of conventional instrumental sounds at all, rather than pursuing its own electronic idiom?

As for the second Berio work, Sequenza III, again there were many unusual giggles, gobbles, wails and bleeps, (I refer to the "music", not to the audience reaction), but this time they were all made before our very eyes. Perhaps we should have felt honoured; worried too, because Miss Berberian claimed this piece was "an X-ray of the inside of a woman today." That nameless woman must be beyond all hope of cure. After hearing this piece, refreshingly expressive though it was, I can understand why women want to be liberated!

And in fact, I think we'd all like to be liberated from much of what passes for modern "music", including these two works of Berio! I am fed up to my wisdom teeth with playing the protector of the arts, giving a tolerant ear to music that bores and offends me. Personally, I feel there is no intrinsic merit in new styles of "music" that bores and offends me. I feel there is no intrinsic merit in new styles of "music" if they do not move me emotionally or involve me intellectually, though it is not fashionable of me to be so intolerant of contemporary cacophony. I can understand the need to forage beyond the tonal system in search of new organizational principles for music. I can understand the drive beyond traditional melody and harmony, and I applaud the search for new sonorities. But, as for these two works, they are not even amusing ones, let alone more often, because they are intended to be respected, taken seriously as classical music. What an urge there was to let out a great guffaw, until you realized with horror that this woman and that man are honestly devoted to such "music". For me, this was music of effects, not of substance. Miss Berberian defeats her avowed purpose of widening the audience for classical music when she programs such almost deliberately inaccessible music. Cathy Berberian is far too talented to waste her time and ours on such things.

Contemporary Dancers appearing tonight, 8:30 p.m., at the Duncan McArthur Hall. Tickets $2.50 at the door.

Queen's wins men's swim meet Queen's started a duel swim meet with the McGill Redmen in what seems to be a routine fashion, swimming from behind to win the 400 yard individual medley in the War Memorial Pool in Montreal on Saturday. The Gaels went on to win the meet by 79-34. In the relay, the team of Roger Rowan, Darryl Penner, John Pearson, and Rob Herman gradually wore away Olympian John Hawes lead with anchorman Herman touching the finish line first.

Howes, however, picked up a victory in the 1,000 yard freestyle taking first place from John Ireland of Queen's. Ireland swam an excellent race, staying close to Howes until the end and establishing a new Queen's team record of 11:17.8, a full three seconds under the mark he set a few weeks ago. Jim Easto added a third place finish with a fine effort and dropped his own time by two seconds.

Herman and Steve Patterson were outtouched by McGill and had to settle for second and third place finishes in the 200 yard freestyle while Darryl Penner tied for a first place finish in the 50 yard freestyle.

Queen's butterfly specialist, John Pearson, duelled McGill's John Hawes in the 200 yard individual medley and out-touched him at the finish line to take first place for Queen's. George Craig finished third in the same event.

Phil Millard, Tom Caswell and Bill Kirkpatrick swept the diving on the one metre board while Caswell won the 3 metre event and Kirkpatrick took a close second. Coach Nelson Freedman feels that all three divers will be tough competitors in the OUAA finals, and should add substantially to the team's point total.

John Pearson gave his usual butterfly spot to teammate John Ireland who easily swam away from McGill to win the 200 yard butterfly by a wide margin in his best time of the year.

Team captain Steve Patterson won the 100 yard freestyle while Bryan Warren and Den Davies took second and third in the 200 yard backstroke.

Ireland won his third event of the day as he and teammate Jim Easto outswam the field in the 500 yard freestyle for first and second place points.

Jamie Noakes, Darrell Penner and Tom Gillis took a clean sweep for first, second and third in the 200 yard breaststroke and Queen's also looks to this event for depth and points in the finals.

Rowan, Patterson, Herman, and Pearson added a little more spicing to the cake by winning the final 400 yard freestyle relay and narrowly missing a new team record in this event.

The meet concludes the swim season for the team which now begins preparation for the OUAA finals to be held at the University of Waterloo February 23rd and 24th. Strong competition can be expected from the Warriors and the University of Toronto, but on the basis of their performance to date, Queen's swimmers can be expected to give a good account of themselves. Good luck guys.

Wrestling Results

Queen's wrestlers picked up three thirds and two seconds out of their seven man team which took part in an invitational meet in Ottawa on Sunday. Teams from Ottawa high schools, plus Ottawa U., Kitchener, McGill, Queen's and the Quebec Wrestling Club took part in the meet. Steve Brown picked up a third in the 114 pound class while Al Stewart added a third in the 126 pound class and Rob Beamish finished third in the 136 class. Randy White picked up a second in the 180 pound category and Pete Verhoeven was the second in the 198 pound class. Verhoeven did particularly well as his opponent in the finals is a member of the Quebec Wrestling Club and is a two-time winner of the CIAU championships in this weight class. Although the Queen's wrestler lost, it was on points, not by a pin.

The wrestlers will wind up their season next weekend as they travel to Windsor for the OUAA championships. At this time, Beamish will get his last chance to meet Egan Beiller of Waterloo in the 142 pounds category. Beamish has yet to beat Beiller this year and since he will be graduating this spring, it would be a good way to end his college wrestling career. We wish the team the best next week.

Queen's University Bands

1973-74 Executive

The following candidates were elected to positions on the 1973-74 Queen's Bands Executive at the February 8 Bands General Meeting.

Bands Manager - Paul Roberts
Assistant Bands Manager - Ian Fraser
Quartermaster - Bev Muir
Concessions Managers - Peter Herbert & Pat Ferguson
Publicity Director - Sue Toy
Brass Band Directors - Don Josephs and Rick Rog Ozinski
Head Cheerleader - Frank Cahill
Head Highland Dancer - Marg Allison
Head Majorette - Karen Teasdale
Pipe Major - Jack Gillespie

Students wishing to join the Bands in the 1973-74 session are urged to contact the appropriate section leader.

Badminton girls win OWIAA crown

Bev Lebrecque's badminton girls clinched the OWIAA badminton championship in London on Saturday in the final OW meet of the year. The team had been in front by 9 points going into the final tournament, the fourth in a series of meets which have been going on since last fall. The girls played McMaster, Guelph, Waterloo and Laurentian in the final tournament, losing only 2 singles matches and 1 doubles match. In addition to winning the team championship, the girls picked up top individual awards in 5 different categories and finished second in 2 more.

Unofficially, the final results showed Queen's in first place in the team standing with 131 points, followed by Western and Toronto in a second place tie with 118 points each. Individually, Jane McMichael won top honours in second singles while Mary Lee Robbins finished first in the third singles and Diana Edwards took top honours in sixth singles. Patsy MacKimmie and Mary Lee Robbins teamed up to win the second doubles and Diana Edwards and Irene Baron won the third doubles. Diana Lougheed and Jane McMichael finished second in first doubles and Patsy MacKimmie was second in fourth singles.

Not surprisingly, coach Labrecque was very happy with the Queen's showing. The only problem is that there are no national finals in girls badminton so that the team is now through for the year. Nonetheless, they have done extremely well this year and are to be congratulated on a job well done. Congratulations as well to Bev Lebrecque for the time and effort she put in to mould a championship team. It has certainly paid off.

Gals waterpolo fourth

Queen's University played host to the Ontario Women's Waterpolo Championships held Saturday and Sunday at the Queen's Pool. The Queen's Golden Gals put on a convincing display in only their second year of competition and finished in fourth spot in the seven team tournament. Hamilton Piranhas won the championship while London Hammerheads finished second and Ottawa Pinecrest finished third. The Gals were fourth, winning one game, tying one and losing two. Donna Hutchings was the top Queen's scorer with 11 goals over the four games.

It was expected that the Hamilton clubs would be quite strong and that Ottawa would also be well represented. Thus it came as a distinct surprise that Queen's finished ahead of two of the Ottawa teams.

The Gals now belong to the Canadian Women's Waterpolo Association. This qualifies them to compete in the National Women's Waterpolo Championships to be held this year in Halifax on March 17th. Budgetary commitments may keep them from taking part. Nonetheless, their impressive showing is ample evidence of the great job that the team has done and we congratulate them on their fine performance. The Gals placed three players - centre-forward Donna Hutchings and guards Debbie Turnbull and Pat Parr on the tournament allstar team.

NUS treas. blocks campus vote

VICTORIA (CUP) — The treasurer of the National Union of Students (NUS) has refused to sponsor a referendum on his own campus to decide whether students want to join the struggling organization.

Russell Freethy, president of the University of Victoria student council, said "until such time as U Vic has a credible student government again, it just wouldn't be of benefit to anyone to join." He said that only 29 of 46 positions on the student council are filled.

Three campuses have voted to join NUS in referendum required by the NUS comstitution. This represents the total number of campuses which have actually held their referendums. Students at the University of Manitoba recently voted to join NUS if the membership fee is less than 15 cents per student, but opposed membership if the fee is higher.

The University of British Columbia student council has voted to join.

Intermediate B-ball Gals champs

by Maryanne Purdy

The Intermediate women's basketball team racked up four straight victories this weekend dumping Ryerson 35-16 and Brock 34-18 in league action on Friday, then playing two close games Saturday, winning against Trent 33-25 and edging Toronto 24-18. The four wins of the tournament, hosted by Toronto, made Queen's the champs of their division and gave them a perfect record of no losses for the season.

The Gals started to play Friday morning against Ryerson without one of their most consistently high scorers, Jenny Bagnall, who was out of action due to sickness. The score at half-time was a low 12-6, which could be attributed to the tight 2-1-2 defense that Ryerson set up, making Queen's shoot inaccurately from outside the key. The rebounding was poor, with Queen's repeatedly losing the ball because of this.

Another reason for the Gals giving the ball to the opposition was the many travelling calls that the lady referees liberally gave out. Some of these calls were deserved, but the referees seemed to fanatically stress travelling calls, and ignore other points of the game.

Queen's set up a strong defense of 1-2-2 throughout the game to effectively keep the Ryerson team from scoring. During the second half, our Gals began to widen their lead with Susan Hall taking advantage of fast breaks and effectively scoring to become one of the game's top scorers of the game with 10 points. Jameila Smola also hooped 10.

A great turnover of players took part in the second half of the game, with everyone on the team getting on the floor and playing well. After the third quarter the play became too fast and uncontrollable, with passes being either intercepted or missed. But the team soon tightened up and pulled together for a good solid win.

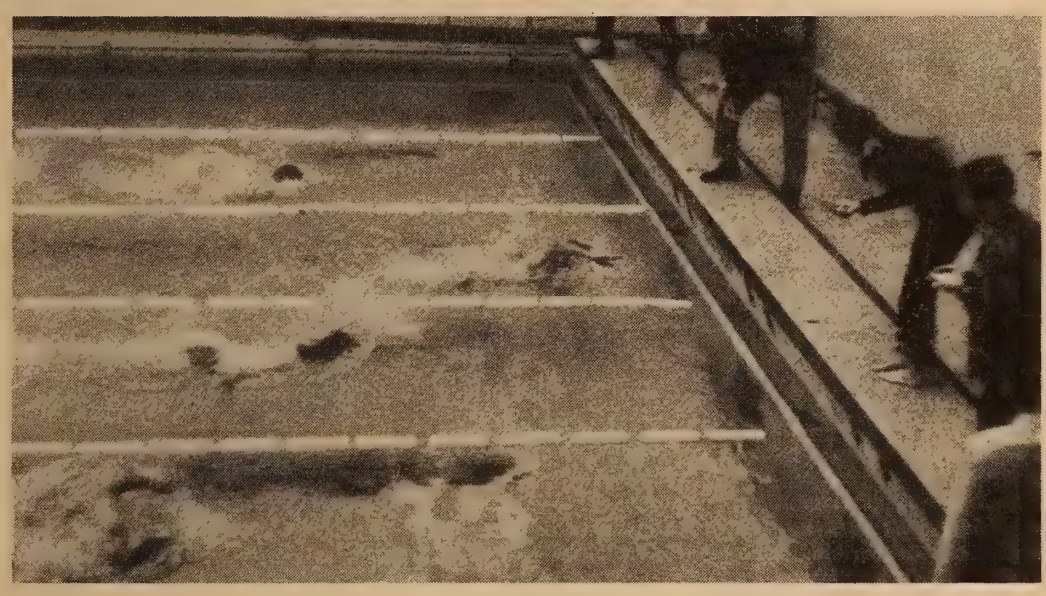
The second game that afternoon against Brock started in a mad scramble for the ball in which most of the players ended up on the floor. The chief cause of this was the man-to-man defense that Brock plays, resulting in the players bunching together. Brock lost the ball many times because of the numerous fouls they committed.

The excellent rebounding of Kathy Willock, combined with the quick layups of Smola, and interceptions by Susan Hall brought the score at half-time to 23-8 in Queen's favour. Brock was very unorganized defensively and offensively, causing them to lose the ball constantly to Queen's strong defensive zone.

The third quarter opened with Brock switching their tactics to a zonal defense also, but with little success. Queen's continued their good playing to win with a score of 34-18. Scoring high for Queen's were Kathy Willock, netting 10 points, and again, Jarmila, also with 10.

The third game Saturday morning started off slowly again at Trent, with Queen's finding it hard to wake up and play basketball. Passing was slow and rebounding was almost non-exsistent, with Trent taking advantage of this to steal the ball time and time again. Both teams played well defensively, with a one defense in each case.

One of Queen's most consistent players, Sara Londerville, injured her knee in the first quarter and her loss was noticed in the play that followed. Trent began passing well, while Queen's, although their passing was accurate, could not hold onto the ball. Queen's lost control of the ball when a number of fouls were called against them in the first quarter.



The Gals rebounding was not at its best, with our team bunching around the basket in a wild struggle for the ball. Score at the halfway mark stood at 16-15 with Queen's just getting the upper edge on Trent.

The second half started a bit smoother than before, with Queen's organized efficiently offensively and defensively to pull away gradually from Trent and end on top. The Gals seemed to let the poor playing of the Trent team to bring their own calibre of play down. High scorer Jarmeila with 17 pts.

However, Saturday afternoon was a different story. Queen's played Toronto and the two were almost evenly matched. This game was veryexciting,with both teams battling back and forth to the end, always within three points of each other. Queen's was hampered with the absence of Sara, and also by the sickness of the teams two top scorers, Jenny and Jarmila, who only played bits and pieces of the game.

The tough defense of the Toronto team made it hard for Queen's to score in the first half. Queen's also kept the opposition out, to keep the score at half at a low 6-4. These six points were scored by Susan Hall.

The second half started out poorly for Queen's with Toronto getting some quick baskets to pull into the lead. Both teams were frustrated by the many travelling calls, and the inconsistency of the referees in their callings. Queen's was trailing by three points until the last six minutes of the game. Then a full court press was applied to the Toronto team, and this worked effectively, with Devany Smith repeatedly stealing the ball from her opponents. Queen's really capitalized on their press system, and pulled ahead in the remaining minutes to win 24-18. The season for the Intermediate women's team was very successful, with the team playing together and each playing her position well. Also, the coaching of Scott Cook was a big factor in their winning abilities. Let us hope that the intermediate team will be continued next year.

OWIAA V-ball Gals second

Queen's intermediate volleyballers made a valiant effort but could not quite find their way to a championship in the intermediate championship held Saturday at the University of Toronto. The girls defeated teams from Brock, Trent and Ryerson before succumbing in three straight to Toronto.

In the first series, Queen's was pitted against Trent and despite some inconsistency, the Gals beat Trent in three straight matches: 15-8, 15-13, 15-7.

The second series against Ryerson went to the five game limit before the girls finally pulled it out of the fire. Again it was some inconsistent defence and a spotty offence which cost them the game. Ryerson won the second and third games by 15-11 and 15-11 after the Gals had won the opener 16-14. Queen's then took the last two games by scores of 15-7 and 15-8.

The third match against Brock was decided very quickly with Queen's winning three straight: 15-8, 15-8, 15-5.

It was the fourth series, however, which proved to be the crucial one. Queen's had split with the Blues this year in previous matchups but this time, Toronto wasted little time in sweeping the series in three straight games. Scores were 15-3, 15-5, and 15-12.

OUAA fencing to T. O.

Queen's will be repressented by the epee team plus Phil Buxton in the individual sabre finals in the OUAA fencing championships next weekend in Toronto. These facts were determined following Saturday's eastern sectional fencing meet held at York. In the foil division, Queen's finished fourth behind Toronto, York, and Carleton. John Chow was the top individual in this category for Queen's, getting as far as the semi-finals before being eliminated. The sabre competitions also found Queen's in fourth spot behind Toronto, Carleton, and York. Buxton finished third individually to earn a berth in the OUAA individual finals next weekend.

As expected, the Queen's epee team finished in first place, followed by Toronto and Trent. Mr. Joyce from Trent won the top individual honours with Alan Christian of Queen's finishing second, Wilf Backhaus and Murray MacKay, both of Queen's, finished fourth and fifth respectively.

The sectional results mean that the epee team will compete in the team championships next weekend at the University of Toronto. In addition, Alan Christian will compete in the individual epee finals and Phil Buxton will take part in the sabre finals. The top three competitors in each of the three categories will meet their counterparts from the western section to determine an OUAA individual champion.

Hockey Gals in first place

Queen's women's hockey team finished their regular season in first place as a result of two weekend victories. Friday night the girls were led by a three goal performance from Leslie Ferrari as they skated to a 4-1 victory over McGill in Montreal. Gwen Harrison got the other Queen's goal while Marilyn Staines replied for the McGill team.

On Saturday afternoon, the girls completed their regular schedule with a close 5-4 victory over the University of Toronto at the Harty Arena. The team outshot Toronto 34-19 but Toronto was in the game right up to the final buzzer. Leslie Ferrari, Ginny Backus, Liz Wood, Debbie McCaw, and Wendy Carmen did the scoring for Queen's while J. Reeves, A. Redecki and Diane Gilmour with 2 replied for Toronto.

The victories on the weekend gave Queen's first place in the OWIAA ice hockey league with a 10-1-1 mark. Western finished second with 19 points followed by Guelph, last year's championship team, in third spot with 16 points. York finished fourth with 12 points and Toronto, McGill, and McMaster round out the seven team league.

The ice hockey season will come to a close this coming weekend with the ice hockey championships here at Queen's. The action gets underway on Friday morning at 9:30 and runs until late in the afternoon. The series resumes on Saturday morning at 9:30 and the championship and consolation games will be played that afternoon. We'll have more information about the tournament in Friday's Journal.

Carleton Invitational Ski meet

At Mont Ste. Marie last weekend, Carleton University took first place in both the slalom and giant slalom events to capture the OUAA Men's Alpine Combined title in convincing fashion.

Queen's was a strong second in the giant slalom, placing four skiers in the top ten. Ian Nielson led the team with a fourth place finish; Graham Bird stood fifth; Bob Archer took seventh; Jamie Nielson finished tenth.

The Slalom was a nightmare for Queen's. After excellent first runs (particularly by Ian Nielson, Bruce Cummings and Graham Bird), it appeared that the team could challenge Carleton for the lead. Hopes faded quickly however, with a frustrating epidemic of falls in the second run.

On Thursday, Queen's travels to Georgian Peaks in Collingwood for the fifth race in the Molson's Cup Series, which will be hosted by the University of Western Ontario.

Gym Gaels 2nd in eastern sectionals

by Chris Woods

The Eastern semi-finals in OUAA Gymnastics, held at the Universite D'Ottawa over the weekend, can be succinctly summed up by saying that York won but Queen's should have done better.

The Queen's team had what is generally called a "bad day" on Saturday, and it showed in the scores. According to Woods, the Gaels should have been making it a very tight race for York, but instead the York team came out smelling like roses with a score of 219.3 to the Gaels' 205.8 points. The Queen's team seemed to suffer from a complete "choke".

The tale was begun on Floor Exercise, where the Queen's team lost by almost two points in an event which has traditionally been one of its strongest. Fortunately for its reputation in this event, Queen's Drew Strickland clinched first place with a score of 8.4, while Jamie Archibald, team captain, captured third spot with a score of 8.05 points.

The story was similar all the way down the line: York won every event, including Parallel Bars, where the Queen's team definitely should have dominated. There were, however, several bright spots. Second-year man Alex McLaren pulled off a second on Side Horse, even though the usual "stars" failed to place. In Vaulting, where the Queen's team can generally be expected to come out on the short end, Dave Ross salvaged a respectable fourth-place score of 8.2, which was very close to the winning total of 8.4. And, although the Gaels conceded the Rings event by about four points to York, Drew Strickland walked away with a fourth. In Horizontal Bar, moreover, Strickland took third place with a score of 7.55. Here, however, there was a substantial difference at the top, for York's Kinsman and Petrachenko managed 9.0 and 8.85 points respectively. However, this was the one event in which Queen's matched York's bench strength.

As you may have guessed by now, this meet does not quite make my list of all-time favourite gymnastics competitions--suffice it to say that this reporter was slightly upset by the results. I can only hope that the Eastern semi-finals were only a warm-up for the OUAA Finals at York University on February 24th, and that the generally below-par performances have been purged from the team's repertoire of routines.

Finally, I don't think that this competition is any reason to lose hope concerning the eventual results of this year's OUAA contest. Coach Brooker indicates the Queen's gym team is capable of at least a twenty percent improvement on the routines they posted on Saturday. There's a lot of sparkle and drive on the Queen's team which has not yet been reflected in meet scores; one can look forward to some spectacular new moves in the Parallel Bars event two weeks from now (double back dismount by Ross, diamidov by Strickland). To win, however, the team's third, fourth, and fifth placers are going to have to improve their scores; although Strickland won second all-around on Saturday with over 45 points, it is not his performance alone which will make the difference two weeks from now. Whatever, happens, however, the team's placing in the league is bound to improve at least one more notch; Queen's will be at least second at the finals and Strickland and Archibald will be on the Ontario team to the National Championships. Anything extra will simply be "gravy".

- decker

Gaels beaten by Old Boys 8-4

Queen's Golden Gaels defeated the Queen's Old Boys 8-4 in the fifth annual grudge match held Saturday afternoon at the Harty Arena. By far and away the outstanding player on the ice was former Queen's goalie Clyde Harris who turned in his goalie pads in exchange for Colin Loudon's number nine sweater and a spot on right wing. The Camel picked up an assist on Bob Kindon's goal early in the first period. Camel also made 2 dazzling saves, one of which resulted in a penalty shot being awarded to the old boys. In addition, he also had four shots on goal-the enemy goal even - all of them coming from inside his own blueline. His presence on the right wing added considerably to the power of the Gaels attack and enemy defenseman Dave Field was one of his favourable targets. All in all the Camel was the team leader out there - there's no question of that, Chuck - and was a source of inspiration and consternation throughout the afternoon.

A couple of hundred people were in attendance at the game which featured some fine hockey and a lot of good-natured fooling around. Former Queen's players Murray Douglas, Mark Edwards, Bob Carnegie, Dave Field, Graham Closs, and Norm Douglas were among the returning veterans.

UNIVERSITY STUDENTS

Prepare for a career in Advertising or Journalism

in just one academic year.

Students who have completed at least one year of a BA course may obtain Direct Entry into the second year of the Journalism or the Advertising program of Sheridan College (Oakville campus).

Term begins in September.

For further information and application forms write to:

The Registrar
Sheridan College of Applied Arts and Technology
Trafalgar Road North
Oakville, Ontario

Phone: Oakville 845-9430/Toronto 362-5861
Burlington 632-7081/Clarkson 823-2110

Glow ahead. (Try it.)

Molson Golden
A good smooth ale
Do you know what you're missing?

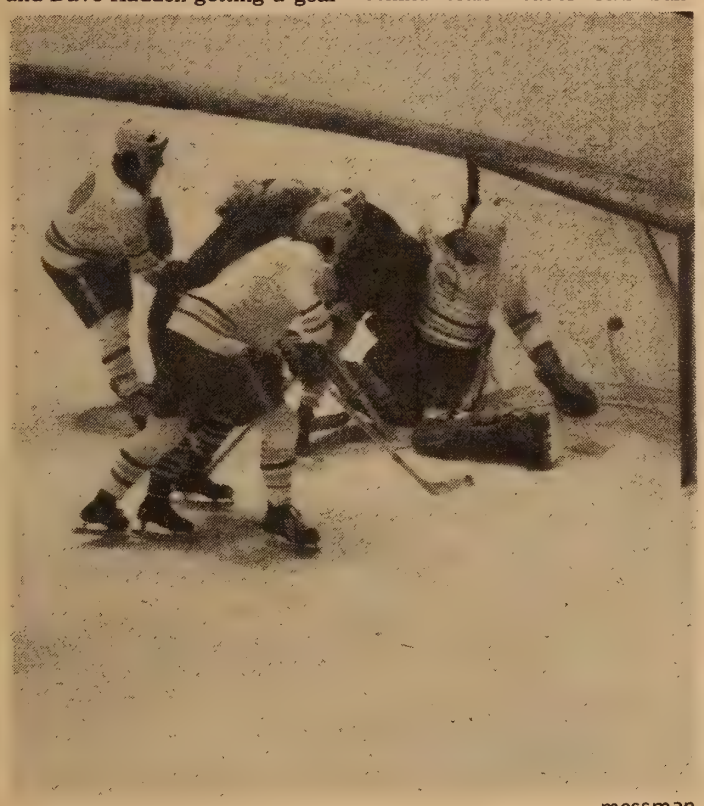
Gaels solidify hold on playoff spot

by Peter Watts

Before more than 2,000 boisterous partisan fans, the Queen's Golden Gaels downed Laurentian Voyageurs 6-2 last Friday night in an OUAA hockey game at the Harty Arena. The overflow crowd saw without question, the best home-ice effort of the Gaels this year in a game which Queen's had to win in order to remain in the thick of the battle for the final three play-off spots.

There were no goals scored in the first period, a period marred by a great number of whistles which slowed the play down to a walk. In the second period, Laurentian got two fast goals, one by Bill Best and the other by Frank Hamill and it began to look like another long evening for Queen's. But Jim Adair put the Gaels back in contention with the first of his three goals at the 9:35 mark of the second period and Adair's effort set the tempo for the rest of the game. Five minutes later, John Cerre got the equalizer as he scored from a goal-mouth scramble. The two teams were tied 2-2 at the end of the second period.

The ever-dangerous Jim Sunstrum got what proved to be the winning goal at the 7:35 mark of the third period and this goal seemed to take the starch out of the Laurentian attack. Just over a minute later, Adair got his second goal as he and Dave Hadden broke in over the Laurentian blueline unmolested. Hadden had taken a pass from Cerre and gave the puck to Adair who walked in and made no mistake, firing a low quick wrist shot passed Laurentian goalie Dave Tataryn. The last two goals were scored late in the final period, Adair getting his third and Dave Hadden getting a goal with just 9 seconds left to play in the game. Hadden's goal was a beautiful individual effort as he took a pass from Adair and Cerre and broke in off the right wing, deking Tataryn and tucking the puck behind him.



Despite the four goal margin of victory the game was not decided until the final few minutes when the Gaels got their final two goals. The Voyageurs outshot Queen's 40-29 and goalie Clyde Harris played a strong game stopping 38 drives.

As evidenced by the scoring, the line of Adair, Cerre, and Hadden did most of the damage against Laurentian, getting 11 points. Adair, in addition to his hattrick, also collected 2 assists and now has 29 points in only 10 games. He's in second place behind team leader Jim Sunstrum, who unofficially is still in the OUAA scoring lead with 35 points.

It was particularly fortunate that the Gaels defeated Laurentian. The Voyageurs beat York 5-3 in Toronto on Saturday afternoon to re-take second spot in the east division of the OUAA. The Voyageurs have 21 points and Queen's is third with 19. York remains in fourth spot with 17 points.

Hopefully a few Queen's supporters will still be in town this weekend, the beginning of Reading Week. The Gaels will need all of your support as they meet the Yeomen at the Harty Arena on Friday night and then host the University of Toronto Saturday evening. Both games start at 8 p.m.

One last point: The crowd in attendance on Friday night was one of the biggest in the history of the New Arena. I am quite sure that the support of the fans contributed significantly to the Queen's victory on Friday night. Several of the players commented after the game that it was one of the best crowds ever to watch a Queen's hockey game, at least in recent years. Hopefully on Friday night, the rink will be packed again. It's a MUST game for Queen's.

- mossman

OUAA badminton first

Queen's men's badminton team came out first easily in the OUAA Eastern finals held last Saturday at York University. Queen's won 15 matches out of 18; Ryerson and Laurentian each won 9; and Carleton won 3. Queen's was represented by Dave Howard, Henry Fei, Mike Hetherington, N.F. Lee, and Stephen Krook.

Queen's will meet the OUAA Western finalists next Saturday at McMaster University for the OUAA championship. Furthermore, Dave Howard also qualified for the individual OUAA singles final; and Henry Fei and Mike Hetherington qualified for the doubles finals.

Oops! There goes another one

On Saturday, February 10, what was to be one more OUAA championship chalked up in favour of Queen's, ended up in a dismal failure. After just barely qualifying as an Eastern contender last week, along with the team from Laurentian University, the Queen's curling team played in a round robin tournament here at Cataraqui Curling Club to decide the OUAA curling championship. Teams representing the west were from Brock University and the University of Western Ontario.

In an extra end, Queen's annihilated Brock 11 to 10 in their first game of the round robin while Western subjected Laurentian to defeat. From this point on, it was all downhill for Queen's. Western nipped by Queen's 10 to 9 in the second game while Brock was losing to Laurentian.

In the last game, a game Queen's had to win even to have a chance to take the championship, Queen's lost by 11 to 4 to Laurentian. With the talent that this team possesses, it was certainly a horrendous display. Maybe next year Queen's will field a team with as much talent that will have the will to win. I think that this was the only missing ingredient on this year's team.

For the books, Brock defeated Western 6-4, to force tie and playoff with Laurentian Sunday morning. Western was victorious and took home the OUAA curling championship.

The members of the Queen's curling team were Jerry Hagerman (lead), Russell Thorn (second), Malcolm Florence (vice), and Doug Hagerman (skip).

An aside: Laurentian spectators outnumbered Queen's spectators three to one!

ALTHOUSE COLLEGE OF EDUCATION
The University of Western Ontario
LONDON, Ontario

Diploma In Education

University graduates are invited to apply for admission to the 1973-1974 academic program leading to the Diploma in Education and Ontario teacher certification for elementary or secondary schools. Applicants must have an undergraduate degree or be eligible for graduation by September 1973.
The College facilities provide special instructional areas in keeping with all new developments in secondary and elementary education.

Althouse Students' Council in co-operation with the Althouse Faculty have successfully assisted in placing over 85 per cent of Althouse graduates through the operation of a Placement Service.

Communications regarding admission to Althouse College of Education should be addressed to:

The Acting Associate Registrar,
Althouse College of Education,
1137 Western Road,
LONDON, Ontario N6G 1G9.

Telephone (519) 679-2367

unclassified

YOU COULD be $40.00 richer. Help us find a 4-man house that has a 12 month lease starting either Sept 73 or May 73. If we like it the money is yours. Please call Mart- 544-7951, Rob- 544-8912, Rod- 540-0854, Gary- 544-6358.

WHAT DOES "Auf Wiedersehen mean? It's "farewell" formal for Queen's graduates and all their friends on March 10. From 7:30 PM until 1:00 AM you can wine, dine and dance at the 401 Inn for only $6.00 a couple. We'd love to see you there! Tickets will be on sale February 26, in the John Orr room in the Union. They can be purchased in advance from Pat Sinclair at 544-0264.

HAPPY VALENTINE'S DAY to the men of our dreams XOX (love) Vicky, Jennie, Joanne and Debbie. P.S. Where are you?

APARTMENT AVAILABLE for next year. 2 bedrooms (1 single, 1 double). Large. 7 minutes from campus. Queen St. at Barrie St. Take over in May. $160.00. Heat. Call 544-5221.

LOST. 1 man's silver watch, metal watch band. Feb. calendar on crystal. Lost in Jeffrey Hall (1st floor rm. 116, I think). If you find it please call Chris, 544-9790. Thanks. Lost on Feb. 9, last Friday.

TO SUBLET - Modern three-bedroom apartment (room for four) from May to September. Close to campus, downtown. Rent negotiable, includes all utilities. Phone 544-8572.

PHILOSOPHY SMOKER tonight (Tuesday) 8:00 p.m. Come to the Union to see who really lives on 3rd floor Watson.

TO SUBLET: May 1 - Sept. 1, 2 room flat, kitchen, private bath; Clergy behind P.H.E. Centre. Rent negotiable, call Peter, 544-9571.

WANTED: Flying Instructors class II or III for part-time employment. Phone 542-3080 after 6.

UNIVERSITY: WHY BOTHER?: the topic of a winter weekend in the woods sponsored by World University Services of Canada (WUSC) at Camp Mazinaw Feb. 16-18. Accommodation, transportation, meals, and fun for $5. Call Ilyas Absar (547-2986) or Kaspar Pold (547-2807) for info.

EXTRA room in house or apartment? Guy looking for place to live immediately. Phone Paul 549-1998.

277 + 618 etc! MANY Happy Returns, good luck- avoid one engineer at all costs. A.E. Good luck - you need it. H.B. - Belated to Bran the Fitch. Jan- Many thanks- Mr. Lee is due Wednesday. Cattheigh- as always. See you all March 1- as always. J.J.

"PICKIN' YOUR nose in POUGHKEEPSIE?" Chick and Dude need ride to same or even Syracuse. Late Friday, Saturday etc. Phone Don 544-1801. Help someone help themselves.

WANT STATEMENT of account. Send to Howie Goldford, room 210, Brockington House.

QUEEN'S SKI CLUB. BALANCE is $65 for Mont Ste. Anne Reading Week Trip due Wed. Feb. 14 at 7:30 p.m., John Orr Room. Limited number of Tremblant Tickets still available. Call 544-7620.

QUEEN'S EXCURSION CLUB buses home for reading week are departing to Toronto Thursday night and Friday afternoon, and to Ottawa Friday morning and afternoon. Please sign up early as space is limited.

QUEEN'S EXCURSION CLUB: DEPOSITS and balance payments for the Quebec Winter Carnival are being accepted this week until Friday at 3:00 p.m. For details phone 544-7233.

UNFURNISHED TWO-BEDROOM apartment for rent. $100.00 per month plus utilities. Available March 1, 1973. 548-4845 Webster Real Estate.

(other classifieds on page 5)

Budget coming

Canada: Trudeau goes on trial now

OTTAWA — Led once again by higher food prices, the consumer price index jumped to 144.5 in January from 143.3 in December, according to Statistics Canada. It was the sharpest December-January increase in more than a decade.

Increases in the price of beef, pork, eggs, fresh vegetables and milk were mainly responsible for the hefty 2 percent rise in food prices last month. During January, beef prices rose 5.8 per cent, pork was up 2.7 per cent, vegetables increased 5.4 per cent and eggs jumped a whopping 7.8 per cent.

The rise in the price index means that consumers in January had to pay $14.45 for goods which cost $14.33 in December and only $10.00 in 1961.

A Statistics Canada spokesman told the Commons food price committee that increasing food costs accounted for 45 per cent of the rise in the consumer price index between January and December 1972. During that time, the index as a whole rose 5.7 per cent, but food prices increased 10 per cent.

The January rise in the index is also blamed on higher housing costs and smaller increases in areas such as tobacco and alcohol.

OTTAWA — Federal Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan claims that food prices must be allowed to increase beyond their current high level if Canadian farmers are to get a fairer economic deal.

Speaking to farm leaders at the annual meeting of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, Whelan said that farmers have to catch up economically with the rest of Canada. "The last thing farmers in Canada need is a freeze on food prices which would reduce profits even further." "It's high time that farmers start to get a better deal in our society and economy. We have nothing to apologize for."

MONTREAL — The second contingent of Canadians to serve on the Vietnam ceasefire supervisory commission left Montreal for Saigon on Saturday.

The contingent of 115 members of the armed forces and eight staff of the department of external affairs joins the 145 Canadians already in Vietnam who are serving on the International Commission for Control and Safety.

OTTAWA — Canada has granted formal diplomatic recognition to North Vietnam, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp announced last week.

Ottawa hopes that the recognition of Hanoi will encourage North Vietnam to respect Canada as a supervisor of the currant shaky Vietnam ceasefire.

According to Sharp, the move is of more legal than practical diplomatic significance, for there will be no exchange of ambassadors with either North of South Vietnam. Canada's interests in Hanoi will continue to be directed through the Canadian respresentatives on the 19-year-old International Control Commission.

Canada is the only country on the four-member ceasefire supervisory force which recognizes both Vietnams. Poland, Indonesia and Hungary do not recognize South Vietnam.

OTTAWA — The budget which Finance Minister John Turner will bring down on February 19 could well cause the fall of the Liberal minority government.

After Turner announced last week that the government will go ahead with planned tax cuts and other concessions to corporations. Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield indicated that his party will join the NDP in opposing the budget. If the PC's carry out their threat and support the NDP, the combined strength of the two parties will cause the defeat of the minority government.

Turner claims that the corporate tax cuts are necessary to stimulate capital investment in industry and increase employment. David Lewis fo the NDP calls them a "corporate ripoff".

The tax cuts to corporations were first proposed in last May's budget, but they never went into effect because they did not receive Parliamentary approval.

Perhaps in an attempt to woo back NDP support, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau hinted Friday that the budget will contain assistance for low-income families and pensioners, the groups hit hardest by last year's 5.7 per cent increase in the cost of living.

Even if the NDP and the Conservatives manage to defect the budget and topple the government, Stanfield may not get a chance to govern. Ottawa sources suggest that, if defeated, the Liberals will call for a new general election.

'No, thanks, I'm just browsing.'

Money Crisis

WASHINGTON — A flood of speculation on the world foreign exchange markets has deepened the threat of a profound world monetary shake-up as the United States announced a possible imposition of an import surcharge to help bring their balance of payments out of their red and force their trading partners to convene a world conference on monetary and trade policies

The surcharge would stem the growing American demand for imports and the resultant outflow of American dollars. In addition, it was hoped that it would force the major world monetary powers to return to the bargaining table and realign world currency values.

The United States imposed a surcharge on imports for a three month period in 1971 which led to a meeting of nations to realign world currency values, but has since failed due to a number of nations floating their currencies rather than demanding the fixed exchange rates agreed upon.

However, it is expected that if the surcharge is imposed it could result in an acceleration in protectionist tendencies around the world and that the surcharge would have to be somewhat higher than 10 per cent to be effective.

LONDON — The state banks of Japan, West Germany and the Netherlands have been bearing the initial brunt of the speculation over the US dollar as investors sold off dollars for marks and yen in expectation of a devaluation in the dollar and a revaluation of the other currencies.

During the past week the central banks of Europe and Japan have been forced to purchase $2 billion in unwanted excess US dollars in order to maintain the value of their currencies unchanged.

The speculation has also been strengthened now as investors are beginning to question Germany's ability to support the price of the mark against the dollar and the possibility that the Japanese yen might be taken off a fixed exchange rate and allowed to float upward against the dollar.

FRANKFURT — The German central bank has tightened credit restrictions to help off-set the inflationary pressure caused by the massive influx of American dollars which have totalled $2.5 billion during a period of only a few days.

There has been a tidal wave of American dollars coming into West Germany caused by speculators hoping to profit from an upward valuation of the mark. Despite this influx the West German central bank has managed to hold the value of the mark steady but this resulted in ever increasing speculative pressure on the Japanese yen in the Tokyo market.

TOYKO — The Japanese ministry of finance has closed the Tokyo foreign exchange market in a attempt to stem the flow of American dollars amid speculation that they will allow their currency to float upward. It is expected that the move will have further ramifications for the West German mark and may even weaken the ability of the government to support its present value.

TORONTO — The Canadian dollar has not come out unscathed as investors pushed its price up to 99.81 cents against the American dollar, a sharp increase over the levels which it had been holding since Christmas.

World: Ulster blacked out in strike

BELFAST — Northern Ireland virtually came to a standstill during a twenty-four hour general strike by 500,000 of their 600,000 workers called to protest the detention of two Protestants after grenade attacks on a busload of Catholics and to demand the return of the provincial parliament which was suspended last March.

Ireland was rocked by riots during the strike and the province was left with frequent blackouts, closed factories, newspapers and shops and a sharply decreased food supply as a result of the decision.

The Ulster parliament was suspended last March when the British government imposed direct rule on the province as a result of the unsettled state of Ulster growing to alarming proportions.

British soldiers patrolling the Belfast streets during the strike came under heavy fire from both Catholics and Protestants.

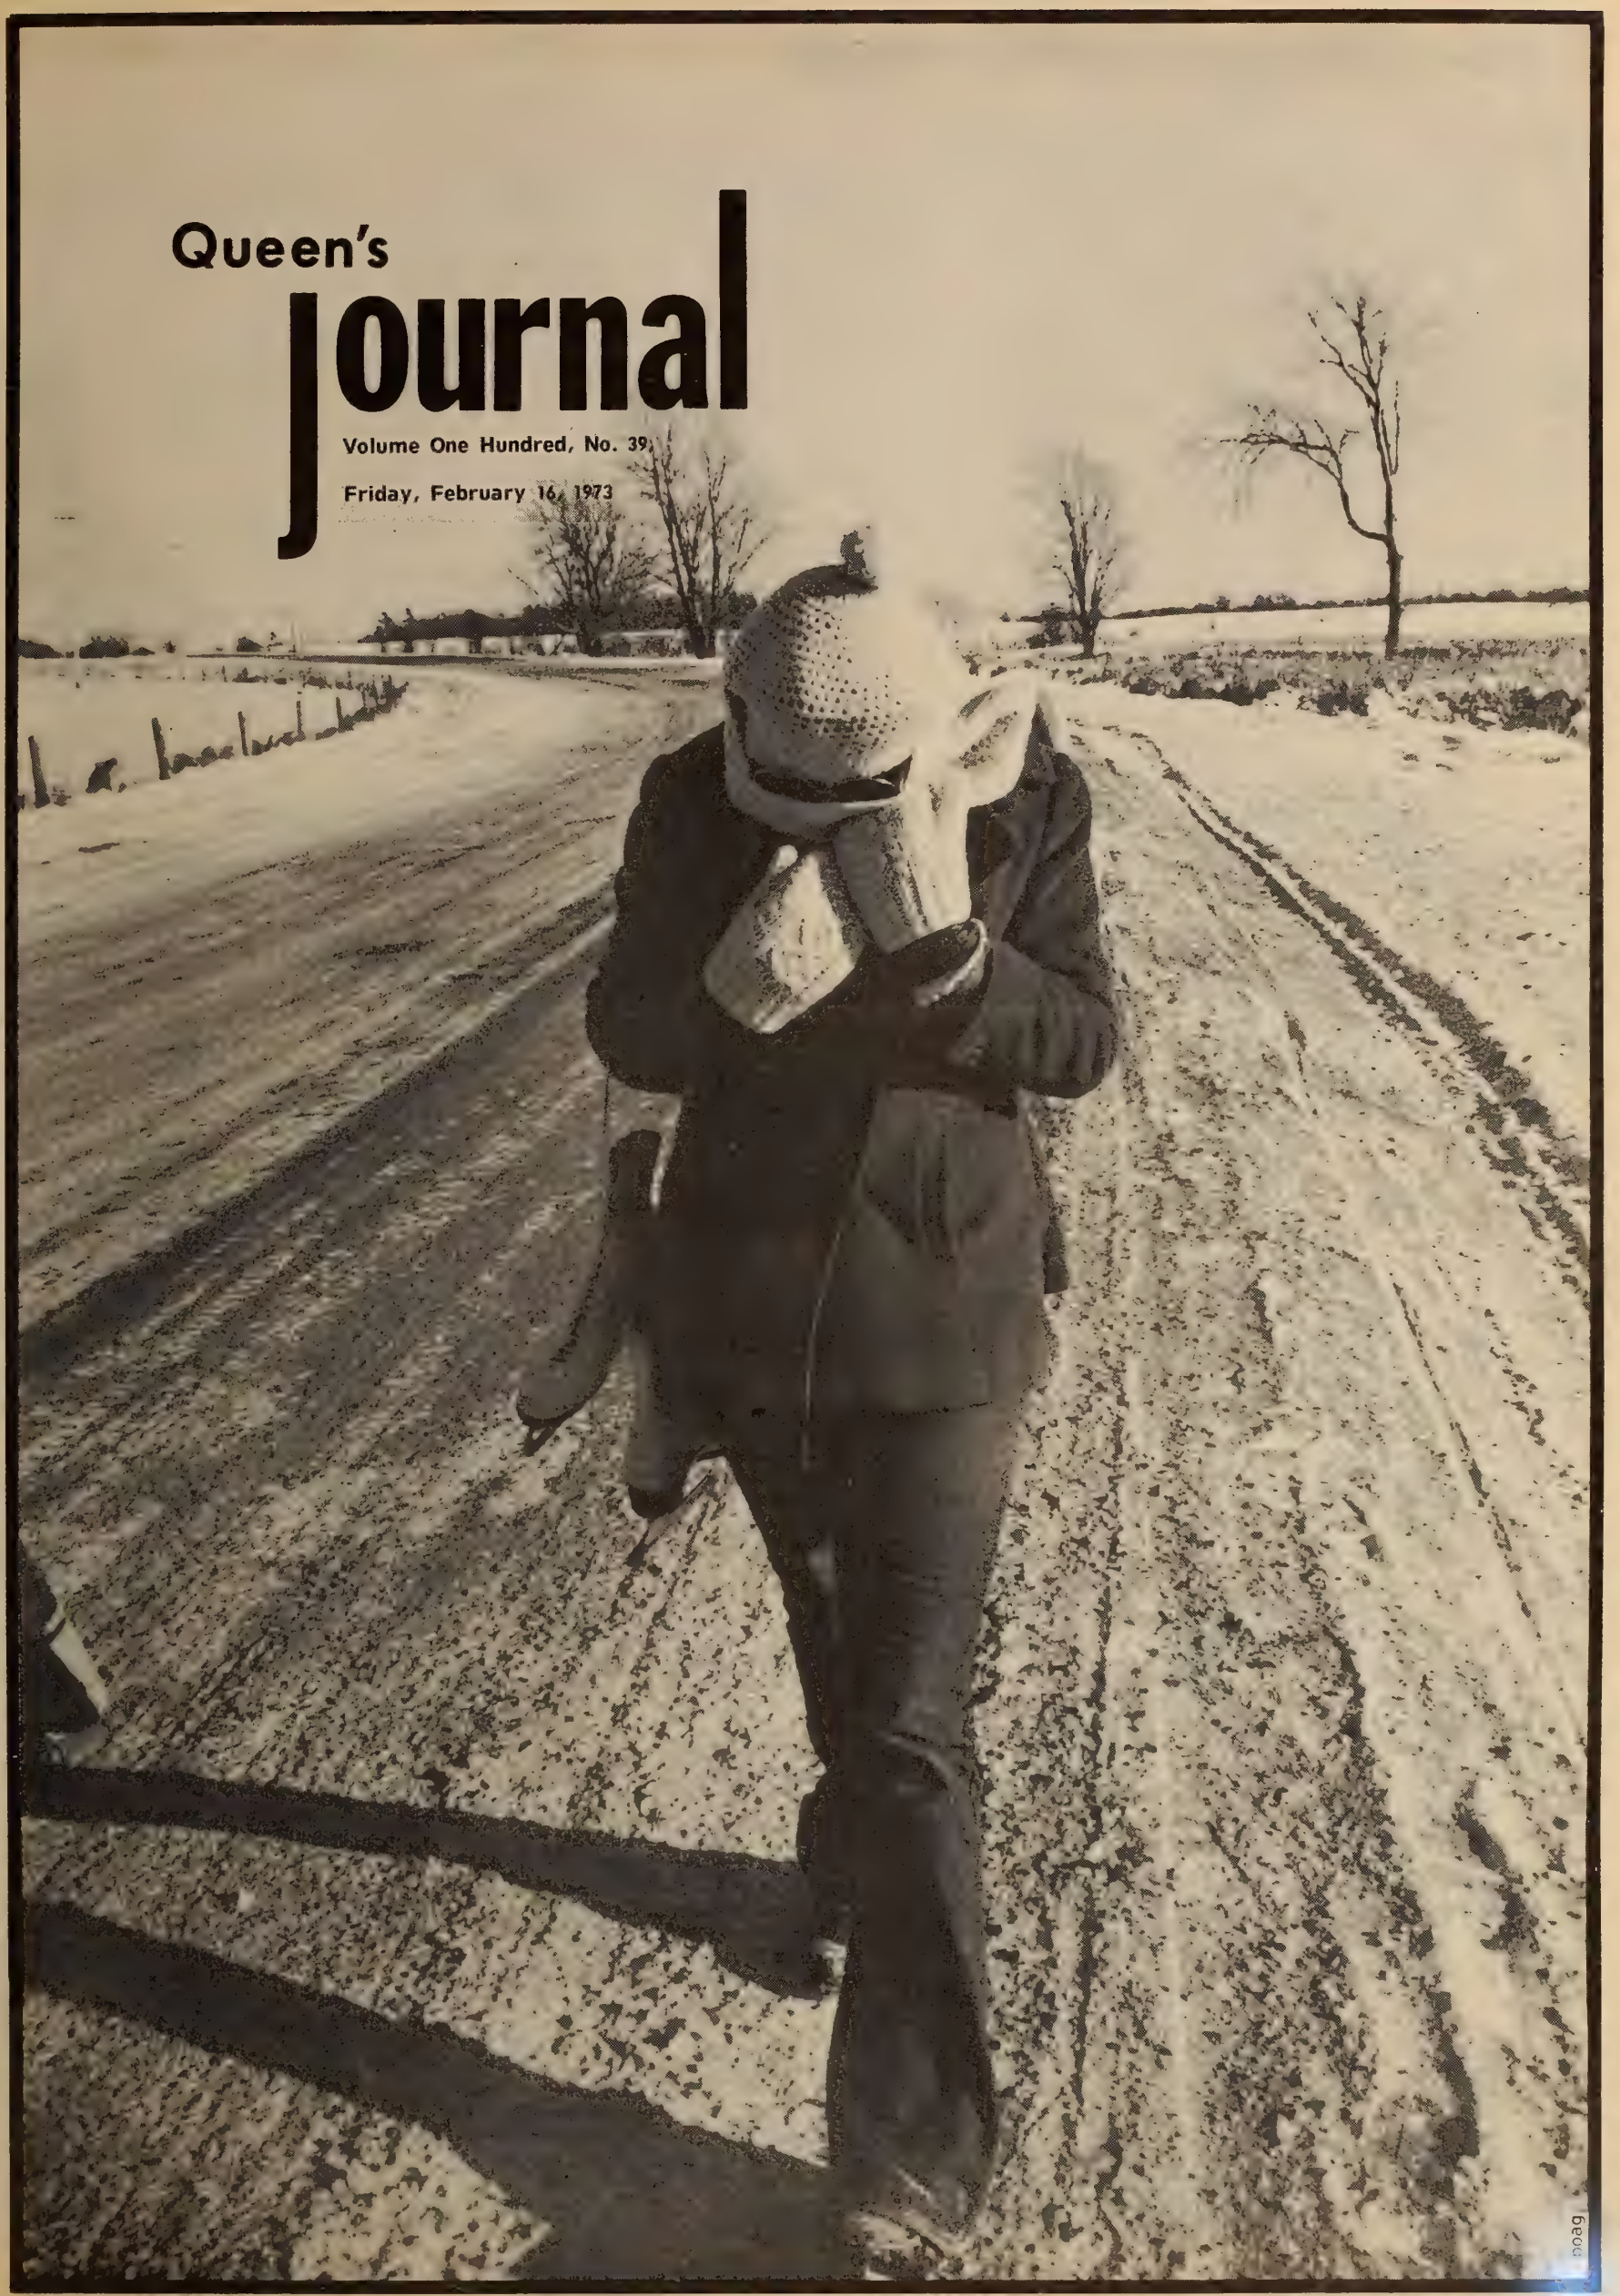
SAIGON — The South Vietnamese government of Nguyen Van Thieu and the Communist forces have been unable to reach agreement as to the establishment of borders between North and South Vietnam according to International Control Commission Chairman Michael Gauvin who is also head of the Canadian peace contingent.

The responsibility for drawing the line of demarcation between the countries was left to the Joint Military Commission composed of representatives of the United States, South Vietnam, North Vietnam and the Viet Cong by the terms of the peace agreement signed in Paris.

Gauvin stated that until agreement is reached on this issue, the ICCS can do little to police the ceasefire, and that this was a major reason for not yet achieving an effective peace in Vietnam.

VIENTIANE — Presidential Advisor Henry Kissinger claimed that peace is on its way for Laos and Cambodia. The former was seriously threatened last week by Communist offensives against government troops all over the country.

Kissinger announced that the Pathet Lao rebels and the government of Premier Souvanna Phouma are nearing agreement after eighteeen weeks of negotiations and that they may be ready to sign a ceasefire sometime during the coming week.



KAMPALA — The Canadian government has declared that they will be removing all Canadian aid personnel from Uganda and that they will not replace those who have already left.

Uganda President Idi Amin, responsible for the expelling of 55,000 Asians from his country last fall and confiscation of many British interests, claimed that the Canadian move was probably the result of British propoganda.

However, at the same time as he was told of the withdrawal, Amin was also extended an invitation from Prime Minister Trudeau to attend the Commonwealth Prime Ministers' Conference to be held in Ottawa this August.

backpage

Queen's
Journal
Volume One Hundred, No. 39
Friday, February 16, 1973

Law drops AMS reps

The changes in the constitution "represents the new outlook of the Law Society," commented Law Student's Society Vice-President John Hill. "We are more interested in making decisions on the executive that require a united voice in Faculty Board or in the Senate than we are with the sand box politics of the AMS".

Hill was referring to the radical constitutional amendments which were passed at the recent semi-annual general meeting of the LSS. The Law Society unanimously approved the constitutional amendments proposed by Petryshyn, LSS President, which result in the exclusion of certain positions from the executive and in the addition of new ones. Among those positions which will no longer constitute seats on the executive body are those of the Senior AMS rep., Junior AMS rep and the vice-presidents of second and third years. Gaining a position on the executive are those persons elected to sit on Faculty Board.

Ross Dunsmore, Senior AMS representative also noted that in previous years, the AMS representatives have not had enough time to fulfill both positions adequately.

Petryshyn commented, "I am extremely surprised about the results of the meeting. Usually it takes several attempts to pass even uncontroversial amendments. That a wholesale revision should take place at one short meeting is almost unbelieveable."

The LSS also gave its unanimous approval to an amendment proposed by Mr. Hill that adds a "Convocation Committee, the purspose of which will be to send representatives to the Senate's Convocation Committee, and to solicit and propose names as recipients of an honorary LL.D. "The graduating students in law want someone of merit to receive an honorary LL.D at the May 26th Convocation," Mr. Hill explained, "but Faculty Board could not agree upon a name. The faculty was most helpful in allowing us to submit names of two outstanding nominees but the Senate blocked us at every turn in the road." The Faculty of Law will not have an honorary graduate this year.

New publication soon

by Steven Winnett

With lofty aims of providing "an outlet for discussion" and a forum for the reconciliation of the arts and sciences on this campus. Escorial magazine, a quarterly, entirely student-run and - financed publication, will make its debut on Tuesday, February 20. The magazine, priced at 50 cents a copy, has already been heavily subscribed (by the standards of student publications), and additional copies will be on sale at Boswell's, Nonsuch and Domus book shops (and possibly, say the editors, at Tech Supples and the Canadian Shop as well).

The three co-editors, are Ian Burgham, a fourth year English student, Chris West, and third-year philosophy student Tamas McDonald. They are enthusiastic about the excellent support they have been receiving from various members of the university community to assist this maiden issue of Escorial.

According to McDonald, the three began to discuss the idea during the Christmas holidays, when they decided that there was a need for such a publication, 'from seeing the course Sweven, which didn't appear.' "Even if Sweven had appeared," said McDonald, "they still probably would have pursued the idea of Escorial.".

Once the three had decided to put out the magazine, to fill the needs of 'amateur' writers who want to publish in a magazine of some quality, they then looked for patrons and tried to sell subscriptions. Here they met with, according to Burgham, 'tremendous support', especially from the English department, many of whose members freely advanced ideas, suggestions and copy for the magazine. Dr. George Whalley offered to do a preface (parts of which are excerpted elsewhere on this page). Burgham felt that they had been able to get such instantaneious support for the project because many agreed with the editors that there was a genuine need for such a magazine. Quarry magazine, which had started as a campus publication, had grown into a national one, which remooved a certain amount of opportunity to publish from other writers on campus.

But Burgham was quick to emphasize that although in format the magazine will resemble a "junior Quarry there was no intention of producinga magazine which would be purely "literary" in content. In particular, the editors are seeking support and material from scientists on campus, in order to provide "an outlet for discussion, as part of the new look at science, of the need to bring the arts and sciences closer together". This the first issue will feature an essay by David Kiell, a fourth year Biology student, on "Order and Disorder; A Comment on the Scientific Method."

As an example of the editors' hopes for continually varying content, Chris West noted that although there were no graphics in this first issue, Escorial is ambitious enough to contemplate focusing its second issue almost entirely on graphics, with the assistance of Doug Snyder at St. Lawrence College.

Burgham stressed the availibility of the magazine to contributors. "People are welcome to submit material in the form of poetry, short stories, graphics, essays - on science, poetry (and not necessarily Canadian poetry), whatever." The scientific essays sought by the editors of Escorial are not "purely" scientific writings, but rather studies in the philosophy of science. Future issues may contain book reviews of recent Canadian books. Burgham issued a special plea for letters from the reading public, whose criticisms will be much valued by the editors. For the moment, contributors are welcome to submit material to Escorial Press, 342 Frontenac St., Apt. 6.

The name of the magazine was proposed by Jim Smith, a first year student, who came across the name of the great Spanish palace in a novel by Kazantzakis. At this point, the editors of Escorial say that they want to avoid being identified with "a Fascist-Catholic treasure-trove of art"; rather, it is mainly "the sound of the word itself" which interests them. "We can aspire to the standards set by our namesake without worrying about imitation. The name is merely an inspiration."

The first printing of the magazine will be a small issue of about 200 copies. The editors are optimistic about sales, having had an excellent response so far from subscribers. They emphasise that theirs will be a quarterly, and not a one-shot, publication. They are definite in their intentions to put out three more issues this year, with the second issue tentavively slated for May. It is expected that each issue will be about 50 pages long.

The first issue of Escorial will include a poem by Bill Barnes of the English Department; an essay on Earle Birney by Catherine Burgham; Kiell's essay on the scientific method; and poetry by Ian Brugham and Liz McKee. Chris West will have an essay on "Colin Wilson and Abraham Maslow", a discussion of Wilson's "new existentialism". There will also be a nonsense poem by J. Mundooley, "a car-builder from Oshawa who likes fine whisky and good cigars".

New Artsci '75 leaders

The Artsci 75 elections were held on the night of Wednesday, February 14. At this time we would like to thank last year's executive for a job well done, and welcome and wish luck to the new executive for 1973 74:

President - Sue Harper
Vice President - Doug Christensen
Secretary - Brenda Nethery
Treasurer - Paul Findlay
Scial Convenor- Jan Armstrong
Publicity Agents - Diane Bellemere - Bev Horn
Male athletic stick - Mark Edwards
Female athletic stick - Mary Lou Murray

CFRC AM Highlights

Friday Feb. 16
8:00 Hockey Game. CFRC broadcasts the Queen's-York Hockey game live.

Sat. Feb. 17
7:00 The Music Department. Dr. F.R.C. Clarke of the Queen's Music Department takes a look at lesser-known classics.

Sun. Feb. 18
7:45 Montage. An interesting melange of music, comedy and features.

Pizza Chalet
286 MONTREAL ST. KINGSTON
544-1227
OPEN MON. TUES WED. 4:00 p.m. to 1:00 a.m.
OPEN ALL DAY SUNDAY 12 – 12
OPEN THURS. FRI. SAT. 4:00 p.m. to 2:00 a.m.

Chalet Deluxe EXTRA LARGE
Pepperoni- Mushrooms- Bacon Sausage- Green Peppers- Olive Cheese- Tomato Sauce $5.50
BIGGEST PIZZA YOU'VE EVER SEEN!

SELECTION WITH CHEESE & TOMATO SAUCE	11" REG	13" MED	15" LGE	SUPER 17" X-LGE
1. Pepperoni-Mushrooms-Bacon-Green Peppers Sausages-Olive	2.50	3.65	4.55	5.50
2. Pepperoni-Mushrooms	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
3. Pepperoni-Bacon	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
4. Mushrooms-Bacon	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
5. Combination Pizza Pepperoni-Mushrooms Green Peppers-Olives	2.40	2.95	3.95	4.95
6. Bacon	1.85	2.60	3.65	4.65
7. Pepperoni	1.85	2.60	3.65	4.65
8. Cheese	1.75	2.40	2.95	3.90
9. Mushrooms	1.85	2.60	3.65	4.65

Combination Special
Pepperoni- Olive Mushrooms- Green Peppers $3.95
A LARGE PIZZA SURE TO PLEASE

YOU'LL FIND JUST A LITTLE BIT OF HEAVEN at CORNER PRINCESS AT ONTARIO
S & R DISCOUNT DEPARTMENT STORE
FREE PARKING
Heavenly Quality Brand Names
Heavenly Latest Styles
Hellish Low Prices
Everything for Everyone to Wear
And For Your Pad Too!
Clothing, Health and Beauty Aids, Toys, Sporting Goods, Housewares, Kitchen Gadgets, Etc, Etc, Etc, Famous Maker Jeans, Slacks, Jackets, Tops and Shirts for He and She at Special Low Prices.

AMS Outer Council

End of fee withholding debated

The Alma Mater Society Outer Council finally discussed the purpose and theory of the second term fee withholding just minutes after voting to ratify the decision to end the withholding at the end of the month.

A number of members, most notably ASUS president Ted Cape, objected to the ending of the withholding and demanded to know why the action was being taken.

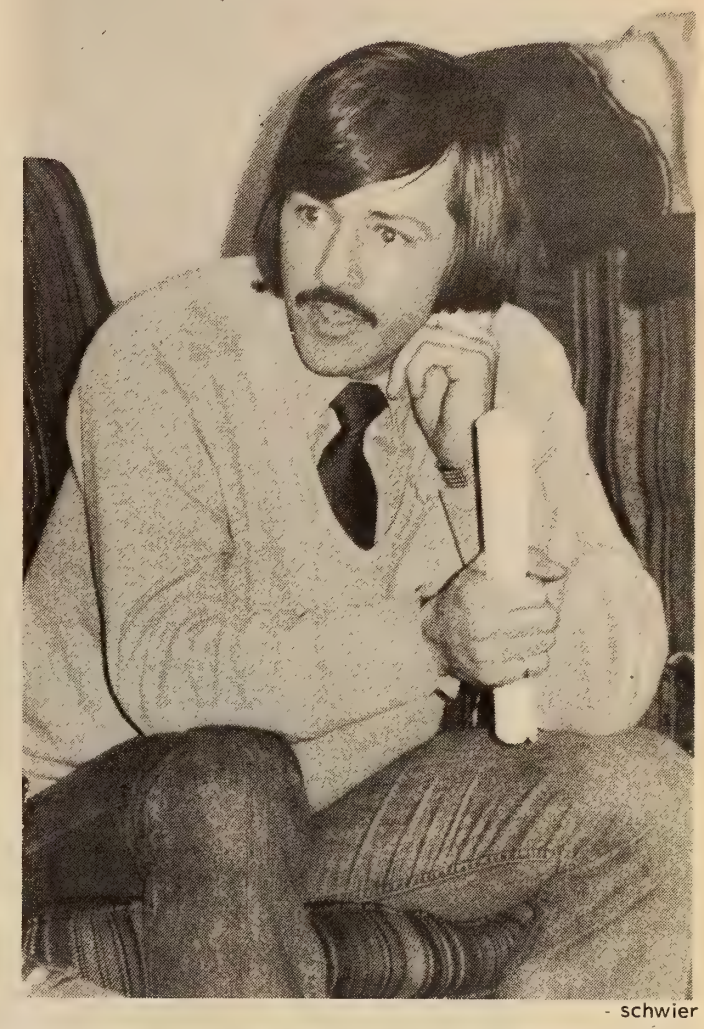
In additionl WRC president Kiloran German, blasted members of Council for voting for the withholding unanimously in the late fall and then failing to put effort into the action.

The withholding has been discussed very briefly at four meetings of the Outer Council. At the November thirtieth meeting when the action was called, it was discussed for five minutes before the vote was taken. Since that time, a number of Outer Council members, including former External Affairs Commissioner Ken Wong, have expressed discontent with the withholding per se and the methods being taken to achieve it. Wednesday night's discussion lasted half an hour.

Cape exclaimed that the AMS had to "learn two lessons: to think more seriously about withholding both here at Queen's on a local level, and at OFS, and to prevent an undermining of AMS credibility". Cape contended that the withholding was originally organized as a political lever. He also accused the AMS of acting in contradiction to its earlier position to go ahead in spite of decreasing numbers of withholders.

External Affairs commissioner Lyn Whitham argued that "under no condition was the withholding to be used for political clout but rather we took it as a symbol and as an expression of discontent. We and OFS have not sold the campus out!" She went on to point out that the withholding action was the first step in a long fight with the government and that "we won that fight".

AMS vice-president Wally Palmer held a view consistent with that of Whitham's. "When Jack McNie came down on Saturday it was the first time that a high ranking government official really understood where our concerns lay.



In these terms a potential measure of success has been achieved" Palmer explained.

President-elect, Steve Brereton agreed that withholding was a "symbol of protest" and that it "should be curtailed because it will probably have no further effect on government".

The motion calling for the termination of the fee withholding action followed an OFS decision to phase out the provincial campaign while it still had some support. Most campuses are losing student support rapidly. The AMS hopes that ending the action February 28 will encourage greater campus support and create sympathy on the Board of Trustees towards waiving the late fee payment.

Engineering rep Mike Stewart questioned the accuracy of estimates on the number of students withholding fees. According to the most recent data from the bursar's office Whitham stated that "contrary to other rumours, over 2000 students are withholding their fees,." Acting speaker Andy Pipe asked "Did you say that Golden Words is a rumour"?

It was felt that the effects of the withholding action will be known when the Ontario government brings down the budget April 12.

- schwier

Wally Palmer, vice president of the AMS, deliberates on fee withholding issue.

Other AMS business: world problems course, Bus-It, concerts . . .

The AMS authorized a "letter of disappointment" Wednesday night to be sent to Senate to refute their arguments for rejecting an amendment to establish a world problems course. The amendment, "that the Senate encourage the development of a limited number of courses dealing specifically with persistent social problems and that these be offered for credit", was moved by Senator Stewart Searle at the last Senate meeting on January 25. In justification of the rejection, Senate argued that the course would not be up to acceptable academic standards, that it would involve an attempt to indoctrinate students, and that a Senate decision would encroach on the jurisdiction of the Faculty Boards. The AMS letter states,"..we are unconvinced by the arguments offered by Senate..It is our view that Senate's decision is at best unfortunate."

Services Commissioner Andy Pipe reported that the PUC has affirmed the motion for the institution of Bus-it. A "vote yes" campaign is being organized for the March 21 referendum.

Steve Sugar, Concert Committee Chairman delivered an accounting of the concert committee for the past three concerts. He revealed a deficit for the Chuck Mangione concert amounting to approximately $1000 while the Richie Havens concert was subsidized with roughly $4700. These figures are approximate because of outstanding cheques for slow billings.

Plans for the remaining $5000 in the Concert Fund include bookings for classical and jazz presentations. Sugar mentioned a possibility that the rock group, Raspberries, may also appear in concert.

In other AMS action, John Blakney, Patrick Chance and Robin MacNight were appointed to the Elrond Board of Directors.

ASUS president, Ted Cape suggested that the outlay for AMS honouraria was rather large and should be investigated more closely. "That's an awful lot of money" he pointed out. Bruce Trotter mentioned that honouraria should be commensurate with responsibility. The case in point was proposed honouraria allotments to the directors of QSA, QEA and the Typing Agency.

Kevin Van Koughnet, editor of Golden Words, was appointed AMS Orientation Convenor.

McArthur students will be able to pick up concert and tricolour refunds at a special refund booth to be set up in McArthur Hall for at least two days. Refunds for students on main campus are still available at the AMS office.

- schwier

ASUS President Ted Cape and the newly-elected president of the AMS, Steve Brereton, listen attentively to Lyn Whitham, External Affairs Commissioner.

Phys. Ed. students to co-ordinate course evaluation

On Monday, February 5th, 120 students attended a meeting which concerned the Course Evaluation Guides for those in the Physical Education program. In previous years, this has been totally conducted by the professors and the executive felt there would be greater participation and the interest if the students co-ordinated the evaluation.

A vote was taken and a large proportion of the studnets proved to be in favor of the change, which, according to Mary McLaughlin, president of the association, would increase co-operation, create an awareness among professors of the problems in the courses and be used to serve as a record for students to choose their courses.

Nancy Foster, the secretary, mentioned that the guide itself would be altered, as well as the method compiling it. It would be easier and more efficient to fill out, more comprehensive, and constructive rather than destructive. It will focus on particular aspects of the program, among them the relevance of the courses, the content, and specifically the workload. These points were brought up at a faculty meeting the following Wednesday and received full support from the professors. Advice was given to the student representatives as to the content of the guide, the results of which will now be exposed to the students after the professors have seen them.

Throw a Kegger.

A "Kegger" is a draft beer get-together that you can enjoy anywhere, anytime. All you need for a "Kegger" is an Oktoberfest Tap'n Keg with Mini-Keg refills, and you're on your way to good times. Draw as much as you want whenever you want it. When you run out, just drop in a Mini-Keg refill and draw another 16 eight-ounce glasses of fresh, cool Real Draft Beer.

Oktoberfest Real Draft Beer

Cancellation of stipend rumoured

Ontario medical students may face financial crisis

by Ann Dowsett

Medical students entering their fourth year in June may face a severe and unexpected financial crisis. It is rumoured that the $1,200,000 stipend granted in the past to medical students at this level is due for cancellation in the upcoming Ontario government budget. Government response to student views on the issue has been minimal and the government has failed to clarify its plans concerning the stipend.

It is felt by many Meds students that the financial strain of fourth year certainly justifies the maintenance, if not the increase of the stipend. Students, finishing third year late in May and beginning fourth year work in mid-June, are unable to replenish their funds through summer employment. Many students also carry the extra burden of large debts incurred during six and seven years educational periods.

The fourth schedule includes a ten week elective period in which the student is free to study under experts in his specific field. The deadline for these arrangements is March 1st. Without the aid of the stipend, many cannot afford travelling expenses and out-of-town accommodation.

In addition to this, the fourth year student has the extra burden of hospital duty three nights a week, and he is 'on-call' every third weekend. Bob Reid, President of the Meds Society at Queen's argues that a good deal of hospital duty is mere "slug work", involving little or no learning and thus deserving of a wage. Also, roughly 30 of the 70 students entering fourth year are married.

Compensation for two successive, uninterrupted years of study and payment for extensive hospital night duty could resolve the problems. However, one falls under the jurisdiction of the Department of Education and the other under the Department of Health.

Reid pointed out that an effective student argument in favour of the retention of the stipend could not be formulated as long as the government remained non-committal as to its purpose.

Reid's letter of January 26th to Syl Apps in which he seeks clarification on this issue remains unanswered. Representatives from medical schools across the province met in January at the University of Ottawa with the intention of confronting Dr. Richard Potter, Minister of Health, with the stipend question. However, Potter failed to attend due to illness. Jack McNie, Minister of Universities and Colleges when speaking to Queen's students recently, said nothing to clarify the government's position, in saying only that he could not deny the possibility of the cancellation of the stipend.

The Department of Health, in attempting to cope with budgetary restrictions appears to be trying to divorce itself from the issue. Should the department of Health wash its hands of the issue, however, many feel it unlikely that Jack McNie would be willing to pick up the tabs.

With future tuition and loan ceilings uncertain, and the extensive "buck passing" between government departments, Reid stressed the need for immediate action on the stipend issue. Student influence at the government level will be greatly reduced once the final decision has been made. Reid commented that the next move will be to approach Potter.

However, it appears that, should the government continue to 'hedge', the students may have to wait for the Ontario government's budget to come down, thus leaving many students in a very awkward position.

Appraisal '72 A reiteration

by Susan de Stein

In light of a motion put forward at a recent Faculty Board meeting, "Appraisal '72 and its recommendations might now be given more serious consideration," commented Ted Cape, President of ASUS.

The motion Cape was referring to, was presented by Dr. A. J. Coleman, it called for the preparation of reports from individual departments within the Faculty of Arts and Science, on actual or contemplated action by the departments in implementing certain recommendations contained in the report of Appraisal '72. The digest would be in such a form as to provide "an overall view of the achievements and problems of the departments in implementing those recommendations that had been approved by the Faculty Board."

According to the nature of the individual recommendations in Appraisal '72, certain aspects of the report were handed to appropriate sub-committees to discuss and report on these recommendations. Cape noted that the curriculum committee had been reluctant to make recommendations and had felt that it had not been their duty or privilege to formulate extensive policy changes. At this time Cape expressed disappointment and criticized the subcommittee for abdicating its responsibility.

The new motion represents an attempt to bring the recommendations back tinto focus. Cape stressed the need for an over-seeing body, whose job it would be to consider the report in total, in consultation with the individual departments.

The intention of Appraisal '72 known also as the First Biennial Conference on Teaching and Learning, was to spark continuing discussion with respect to the shape of undergraduate education at Queen's. It was hoped that the conference would achieve a certain amount of freedom for the exchange of individual opinions and experiences together with results which should be both practically significant and supported by a wide consensus. A second hope was that some concrete suggestions for the future would emerge and that the conference be seen as a generator of ideas and projects for the Faculty as a whole.

A main object of the exercise was that of the self-education of the faculty and the stimulation of individual professors to examine their own role. However, it was pointed out in the report that "a conference on teaching without input from students would be an anachronism," and subsequently a proportion of three students to nine faculty was agreed upon.

A theme recurrent throughout the conference and emphasized in the report was the stress placed on "the centrality of developing the student as an autonomous individual, acting and thinking for hiimself with a proper appreciation of intellectual, moral and aesthetic values." It was also mentioned in the report that the importance of facts, concepts and methods, is found their utilization by the recipient in his own development. This second group of objectives could perhaps have been said to be the theororetical fulcrum of the conference.

The arousing and sustaining of intellectual curiosity of moral and aesthetic sensibility were suggested as tasks of the university.

A great deal of discussion on methods of teaching reflected the conviction that more emphasis needs to be placed on autonomous development, and on the stimulation of interest on he subject, and less on he conveying of information.

It was also widely agreed that the lecture, as a mode of teaching, still had a part to play, serving the function of conveying information. However, it was felt that in no course should the classes consist of lectures and nothing else. A suggestion, that large lectures be increased in size and given by the most gifted lecturers, while the class should meet also in seminars or tutorials, with faculty members whose talents are better used in small group teaching sessions rather than lecturing, was made.

The use of closed circuit television is linked with large lecture courses and it was strongly felt that television should be limited to a sup-

Continued on Page 7

2 males discuss abortion

- by Sandra Bernstein

A panel discussion on the topic of abortion law was held Tuesday in MacDonald Hall. The guest speaker was David Dehler, an Ottawa lawyer who was counsel in the abortion injunction case of January, 1972. Also on the panel was Prof. Jack Johnson. The meeting drew a fairly large crowd and sparked discussions that lasted well over two hours.

Mr. Dehler began by outlining the controversial case in which he had been involved. On behalf of the husband in a happily married family he had filed for an injunction to prevent the wife having an abortion. However, the injunction was worded as being on behalf of the infant plaintiff and its father, so that if the injunction were granted, it would signify legal recognition of the foetus as a person. The judge granted a twenty-four hour injunction on the doctors and hospital, which would be returnable after that time. The hospital, however, did not pursue the case and did not appear at the return. The husband, after the mother changed her mind on the abortion, withdrew the injunction with the right to reinstate it at one days notice should she once again decide to seek an abortion. The case was never litigated on its merits and therefore no legal precedents were established.

Mr. Dehler, following his introduction, presented some of his views on abortion law. He outlined some of the issues as he saw them, specifically, the rights of the unborn as legal people, the respective rights of parents, the

Continued on Page 6

INTERCESSION NOTICE

In response to student interest,

MATHEMATICS 121- Differential and Integral Calculus- will be offered during the 1973 Intercession (May 14th to June 26th) if a sufficient number of registrations are received.

Interested applicants should register as soon as possible at the:

Department of Extension
25 Union Street

HONOURS APPLICATIONS

Faculty of Arts and Science

• Application forms for admission to fourth-year honours are available in the Arts and Science Faculty Office second floor, 131 Union Street.

•ALL students intending to enter the fourth year of an honours program must file an application with the Faculty Office obligations of the state to protect the unborn, and the question of what constitutes life. Dehler stated that "philosophy shouldn't enter into (the question) . . . doctors legally certify death under medical criteria such as heartbeat and brainwaves. . . . Up to now, doctors can not inflict death, but only observe and pronounce. Life should be similarly defined. We cannot destroy life in the womb." He cited an article which said that the foetus at eight to ten weeks has all its organs completely formed, with many functioning. Dehler called for laws based on factual criteria such as these. He called the argument that the foetus is only a potential person, "unacceptable", saying that "the actual passage of birth is unimportant; it is only part of a process. We are all unfinished." He said that abortion on demand was also unacceptable, for women do not have total rights over their bodies. He quoted a pro-abortion MP in Britain as saying that one can't demand that a doctor remove an arm.

More discussion of abortion

Continued from Page 5

Prof. Johnson then briefly addressed the group. He began by pointing out the irony of two males sitting and discussing the topic. He said that he found the abortion injunction case very interesting, and that it struck him at first as the hole in the dike as regards Canadian abortion law. He went on to quote Justice Blackman of the U.S. Supreme Court, who found that the unborn have never been recognized in law as persons in the whole sense.

Johnson went on to say that pro-abortionists often attack only half the target. He pointed out that if the laws in the Criminal Code were repealed (a federal responsibility), the "new millenium won't arrive". This is because the federal government has no jurisdiction over questions of civil wrongs. He said that Mr. Dehler, in pursuing the question as one of property and civil rights, was probably on the right track.

Placing the blame in the political arena, Johnson said that such a political, gut issue should not be left to a few old men, but should be argued provincially.

His own position is that women should be sold guardians of the unborn, and should be able in the early stages of pregnancy to obtain an abortion after, say, a forty-eight hour waiting period. He again quoted Blackman, who said that in the first trimester of pregnancy, abortion was safer than childbirth, and was a matter of the civil rights of the woman. In the second trimester, the state should have the power to intervene for health reasons. In the third trimester, however, Blackman said that the foetus was viable, with definite human potential. In this period, therefore, the state should be able to prohibit abortion except to save the mother.

Dehler pointed out in his rebuttal that four years ago, the Supreme Court of the USA ruled that the foetus had full protection of the law, when it compelled a Jehovah Witness mother to take a transfusion to save the unborn child in her womb. The court said that the mother could not presume the religious beliefs of the child.

The meeting was then opened to questions from the floor.

One student, referring to Dehler's point about cutting off an arm, said that this was a case of inflicting harm on herself, but often abortion was actually psychologically helpful. Dehler responded in terms of the need for contraception. He urged that in cases of rape we "clean the woman out" right away. He questioned whether a woman twenty-four weeks pregnant should have an abortion "just because she wants one." He added that we should not skim over the mother's rights, but should look at the child's. He then discussed the relative values which, he feels, prevail today, and concluded that we all start from our own positions.

The next question asked if, in law, we can only balance one life against another in cases of self defence or necessity, was not Dehler's position inconsistent? The questioner pointed out that if we cannot kill the foetus unless it "endangers the woman", we deny that the foetus is a "complete human."

Dehler replied that he had only outlined various ideas on the subject. He posed several other hypathetical cases, the gist of which was that it is better to have one living than two dead. Questioned as to whether his position was the same in cases of rape, he said that conception often does not occur for 42-78 hours after intercourse, and that if we "clean her out" before this time it is a contraceptive measure. He added that rape would have to be legally proven, a process that takes from five to six months. After this length of time, he felt, a woman "would not be entitled to an abortion." However, the consoling thought was that abortion on top of rape was probably psychologically harmful. He hoped that the question would be academic soon, with the development of the "Morning After Pills."

A student then asked whether, if a husband could get an injunction to prevent his wife from aborting, a wife could get one against her husband for impregnating her against her will. She pointed out that if Dehler were to argue on the basis of genetic capacity, and a woman did not wish to carry a child, that such a suit would be possible. By the same token she could also force vasectomy on him.

Dehler found the question interesting and said that vasectomy may not be safe. He said that in cases where one partner wants children and the other doesn't, the courts usually recommend divorce. The student asked whether the wife could sue for assault if she had consented to sexual intercourse but not bo the impregnation that ensued. Dehler countered with other questions, dealing with the rights of the mother, should the embryo be grown in an artificial womb by the state. He asked whether society had an interest in the children, if the population dropped dangerously. He said that nobody has a duty to bear a child but that there are ways to avoid it.

Professor Johnson argued that if contraception fails and abortion is unavailable, then society does force people to bear unwanted children. Dehler said that he meant that no one is forced to conceive, but Prof. Pickard, the moderator, added that the woman must bear the burden, in such cases.

Dehler said that an embryo can inherit, take property, and, in Britain, seek an injunction; he said that the right to inherit leaves the field open for foul play via abortion.

Dehler was then queried on an aspect of the injunction case, wherein a husband or a third party could stop an abortion by acting as "legal guardian" of the unborn child. A student asked whether such a person would be responsible for the consequences of his action in later years, for instance by being obliged to care for the child. Dehler said that this was merely a legal procedure necessary for litigation, and that the guardian would certainly not have to care for the child. This, he implied, would be the responsibility of the mother.

Dehler said that there were many hidden social and economic factors in the question of abortion; for instance, some New York people were hoping to decrease the welfare rolls by making abortion more accessible to minority groups which are poverty-stricken. Dehler feels that this sort of consideration leads to only short-term solutions to social problems.

When asked whether he did not feel that the civil rights of the unborn include the right to be born wanted, Dehler replied that many unwanted pregnancies produce babies that are loved and wanted once the mother sees them. He told the group about one couple he knows who did not want their as yet unborn child for economic reasons, but who decided not to abort, after counselling. However, he then added the exception did not prove the rule.

The Ottawa lawyer then explained that there is a demand for children, and society may want these aborted children to be born. When asked whether this argument does not demand, not strong abortion laws, but merely another clause saying that an unborn child spoken for by a third party, should not be aborted but should be delivered for that third party, Dehler disagreed.

The discussion then centred on genetic engineering and the ramifications of some experiments that are currently in process. Dehler felt that the legislators "Don't know what's going on" and that soon it would be too late to pass controls.

The discussion which followed examined our attitudes to the foetus as opposed to a baby that has been born, on the mental disorders of abortionists with whom Dehler is associated, on the moral and religious aspects of the question, on civil liberties, and on the effects of sensationalism on the legislative process.

LADIES ELECTROLYSIS
Avoid shaving, tweezing, or the use of dipilatories. Have your eyebrows styled and unwanted hair removed permanently by electrolysis. Physicians recommend our work. For a free consultation and information call:
HARRISON SALON 542-5595

CHEAP ROOMS FOR THE SUMMER

Furnished rooms at $50-mo. for single and only $60-mo. for double (1 or 2). Sundeck on the 14th floor, parking, sauna, great view, cool breeze on hot evenings. Best deal in town for intercession. Full kitchens and living rooms in each unit. Also, apartments available on sublet starting soon. Get on the list early.

Phone Doug Fletcher, 544-1842
between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m.
or come to Elrond.
No deposit 'til Spring

Commission on Canadian Studies

The Commission

The Commission on Canadian Studies has been established by the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada, with the support of the Canada Council, to study and report on the state of teaching and research in studies relating to Canada at Canadian Universities.

Terms of Reference

To study, report, and make recommendations upon the state of teaching and research in the various fields of study relating to Canada at Canadian Universites.

Without restricting the generality of the foregoing, the Commission should inquire into the following matters:

1. the number and content of courses offered at the undergraduate and graduate levels in the various fields of study relating to Canada;
2. the location, nature, and function of programs and institutes concerned with Canadian studies;
3. the location, and extent of library holdings and other resource materials relevant to Canadian studies, and access to these materials.
4. the sources, nature, and adequacy of financial support for the teaching of Canadian studies;
5. the opportunities and support for research in Canadian Studies;
6. the scope of present and future requirements for qualified personnel for teaching and research in Canadian studies;
7. the possibilities and needs for new programs and future directions in studies relating to Canada at the university level;
8. any other related matters.

Submission of Briefs

The Commission welcomes briefs from individuals and groups interested in the field of Canadian studies. Briefs may be submitted on any topic, or range of topics, related to Canadian studies. The author of each brief should be clearly identified.

It would be helpful however, if recommendations were as specific as possible. A summary of recommendations and conclusions would be particularly appreciated if the brief is over ten pages in length.

It would be appreciated if briefs could be sent to the Commission's offices by 28 February, 1973. However, the Commission will be glad to consider briefs and submissions from interested individuals and groups up to the time of the writing of its report.

Any inquiries concerning the work of the Commission would be very welcome. These should be sent to the address below.

Commission On Canadian Studies
314 Rubidge St.,
Peterborough, Ont. K9J-3P4 Tel. 705-743-0361

Elrond elections chaotic, confused

The time for isolated decision making by the Elrond Board of Directors is over, director Ann Ophel a third year Arts student told the chaotic first election meeting of the residents of the College.

Ophel, elected at the meeting to her second term on the Board, called for drastic changes in the Board's responsibilities now that the actual construction of Elrond has ended and the residents have moved in, suggesting many fewer directors' meetings and much more direction coming from the residents themselves.

There were six candidates for the three positions that the residents elect on the Board. Three are elected by the Alma Mater Society and two by the University Board of Trustees.

During the screening of the candidates for the residents' seats, the residents showed a real concern for the direction that the Board would take during the coming year, especially their responsiveness to them, but, with the exception of Ophel, the candidates managed to become embude in generalities, evading questions and giving superficial answers.

Elected candidate Kevin Coleman, a second year Applied Science student, offered himself as an "objective, common sense candidate" and said he would "get the college to do all it can do" but he did not elaborate as to what that was nor how he would bring it about.

The third candidate elected to the Board, Marg Eckenfelder, of third year Arts, stressed her position that the Board must continually maintain its responsibility to the members but failed to outline what they were.

Only after considerable direct questioning and repetition did Eckenfelder come out with a clear line on the issue of decentralization of the Board responsibility. Stating simply that she would strengthen the various residents' committees.

Ophel, however, called for a general movement of power toward the residents and their committees with an almost total de-emphasis of the Board now that the College has a "constituency".

She called for every director to become interested in one of the residents' committees in order to maintain their responsiveness to the residents' needs and thoughts.

Ophel showed little reluctance about "getting Political". She stated that it was important that co-ops maintain close relations with each other and for Elrond to "affect their direction".

After the election of the resident directors, it was announced to the meeting that Dr. J. J. Deutsch, Principal of Queen's would recommend Assistant University Burser Darryl McDermaid and Peter Stokes, Secretary of the Faculty of Arts and Science, at the upcoming Board of Trustees meeting as their members on the Elrond Board of Directors.

The Wednesday night meeting of the AMS ratified third year Arts student Rob McKnight, graduate student John Blakney and second year Applied Science student Patrick Chance to the Elrond Board of Directors.

Also decided at the meeting was the endorsement of nine people to be honourary members of the College. All were former members of the Board of Directors, some of them founding directors. They are David Peters, John Blanchard, Michael Vaughan, Ron Follwell, CES (Ned) Franks, Ray Stemp, Jack Smith and Jane Lindsay.

The rest of the meeting became entangled in seemingly overwhelming procedural hassles, points of information, and of confusion, made and retired motions and countless ammendments as the residents fought to set up previously unestablished precedents and procedures for the smoother passage of future meetings while still carrying on the business of this one.

complicated method of electing a relatively complex Judiciary Committee finally became fruitful and residents Jayne Pitts, of first year Arts, Jim Keefe of Public Administration and George Adomavicius of second year Applied Science were elected.

Charles Forbrum, of third year Applied Science, was elected chairman of the membership committee. Elected to the Education Committee chairman's position, amid ever increasing confusion, was Michael Rose, a second year Arts student.

The meeting also decided that they should elect the Kitchen Committee chairman and Work Schedule manager, previously appointed posts. They went to Peter Boag,third year student in the faculty of Arts and Debbie McLaughlan, second year Arts student, respectively.

A proposal outlining the property rights of the residents and imposing restrictions on others rights to enter the apartments and houses in Elrond was then presented but caused so much controversy and divergence of opinion that it was decided to return it to the membership committee for review and presentation at a future meeting.

- decker

Appraisal '72: a reiteration

Continued from Page 5

plementary role.

It was also suggested that greater freedom should be provided for individual research projects, reading courses and other later-year devices not involving formal classes.

The report concluded the section on objectives of methods by saying that "methods must be kept in their place: they are not all. For effective teaching, the attitudes, enthusiasm, standards, and empathy of the instructor are primary."

On the questions of evaluation, views among conference participants were sharply divided, emotions strong suggestions extravagant. Grading procedures were criticized for not being pedagogically fruitful.

The ultimate act of grading was seen as that of certification, which is seen as a legitimate motive, and a major incentive for some students, but it was generally felt that it should be a subsidiary one.

The report stated that while many professors would wish to retain examinations for their pedagogical value, the attainment of educational objectives by these means is threatened by the bad psychological effect they appear to have on students.

Several ways of reducing the apparently mechanical and competitive nature of grading procedures, were suggested, among which was that of the abolition of numerical grades in favour of letter grades. To most people at the conference, however, the pass-fail grading seems an invitation to something less than mediocrity.

On the subject of examinations, the desirability of final examinations as one form of evaluation was fairly widely conceded.

It was a widespread view that a course should utilize frequent, flexible and informal devices, for encouraging independent work by the student and helping him to gauge his understanding, and the teacher to measure the success of his methods. The purpose of grading is not to penalize every mistake during the year but to assess the student's total achievement at year end.

Group after group at the conference expressed its concern that some way should be found of adjusting methods on instruction, the timetable and the curriculum in order to foster the objectives of autonomous development, to encourage the student to read, to think, to write, and to learn for himself.

All suggestions dealing with this concept expressed the central aim of avoiding fragmentation of a student's time into a multitude of classes on different subjects and of allowing him time to work more connectedly on his own.

To this end, it was suggested that the number of courses per year, but not the total work load, be reduced, that the number of hours spent in the classroom be reduced in favour of placing a greater emphasis on individual study, and that fewer subjects by studied more intensively for a shorter time. The adoption of some such measures in the first year at the university could be seen as opening the way to a more flexible and individuated program of study in later years.

One recommendation proposed, that in the third year of a B.A. program, exceptionally well-qualified students should be permitted to spend all or part of the year working on a program of interdisciplinary study of their own devising under the supervision of a group of faculty members. It was also stated that the workload of third and fourth year students should be carefully studied and reorganized in such a way as to give students more time to achieve the desired educational goals.

A recommendation concernnng curriculum expressed the opinion that the Faculty should consider the institution of interdisciplinary courses of a very broad nature with no predetermined content, offered primarily for senior students with high standing.

N. J. Brown, Chairman of Appraisal '72 concluded in his report that, "measures must no doubt be sober and realistic;a gradual process of re-education is required. But measures must be taken."

"Appraisal '72 has put the writing on the wall."

by Sue Wishart

"Suddenly the harsh winter weather was biting more deeply all across America, and predictably fuel shortages began to plague the nation. In Des Moines, hundreds of homeowners were down to their last chill days of heating oil, with no guarantee when they would get their next deliveries. In Denver, high schools were on a three-day week to conserve dwindling fuel. In West Virginia, Illinois, Mississippi and elsewhere factories had to shut down at least briefly when fuel tanks ran dry."

This passage sounds like science fiction. It isn't. It is part of a Newsweek report on what happened when many areas of the United States ran out of heating oil last month. The temporary but severe delivery shortages underlined the US's newest domestic problem - an acute energy crisi.

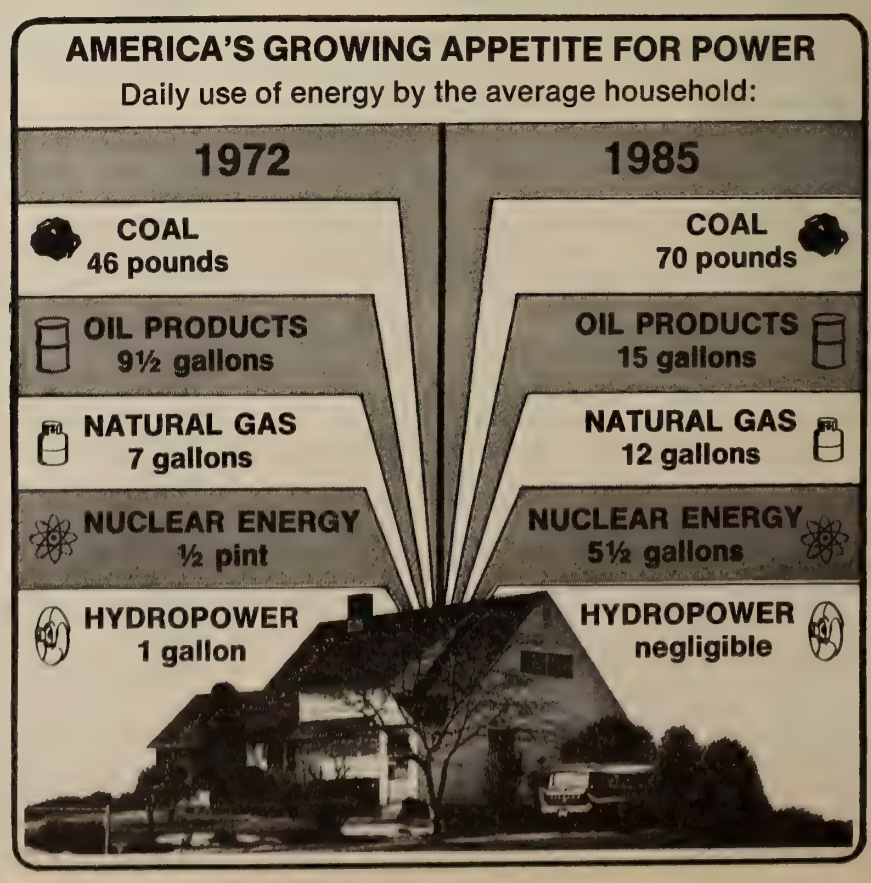
Technically, the energy crisis is not a new phenomenon; some scientists predicted it unheeded for years. For most Americans, however, the possibility that the US might run out of fuel was something they had never imagined. They assumed that there would always be enough energy to look after all their needs. The January fuel shortages forced them to realize that this is no longer the case. The United States is using up its energy reserves, particularly oil and natural gas, at an alarming rate, and once these reserves have been consumed, they cannot be replaced. The US could run out of oil in ten years; of natural gas by 1984.

Could the same thing happen in Canada? The Ontario government asked this question in 1971 and appointed an Advisory Committee on Energy (ACE). Headed by Queen's principal Dr. J. J. Deutsch, the committee was asked to determine Ontario's "future energy requiremnts and supplies, and to recommend policies and means to ensure that these requirements are met."

The ACE report, release a month ago, is not very encouraging for Ontarians. Ontario, the report says, is one of North America's most intensive users of energy, and yet one of the continent's most energy dificient regions. Because most of Ontario's needs are filled outside the province, Ontario is at the mercy of producers who are clamouring for higher prices. The era of cheap abundant energy for Ontario is over.

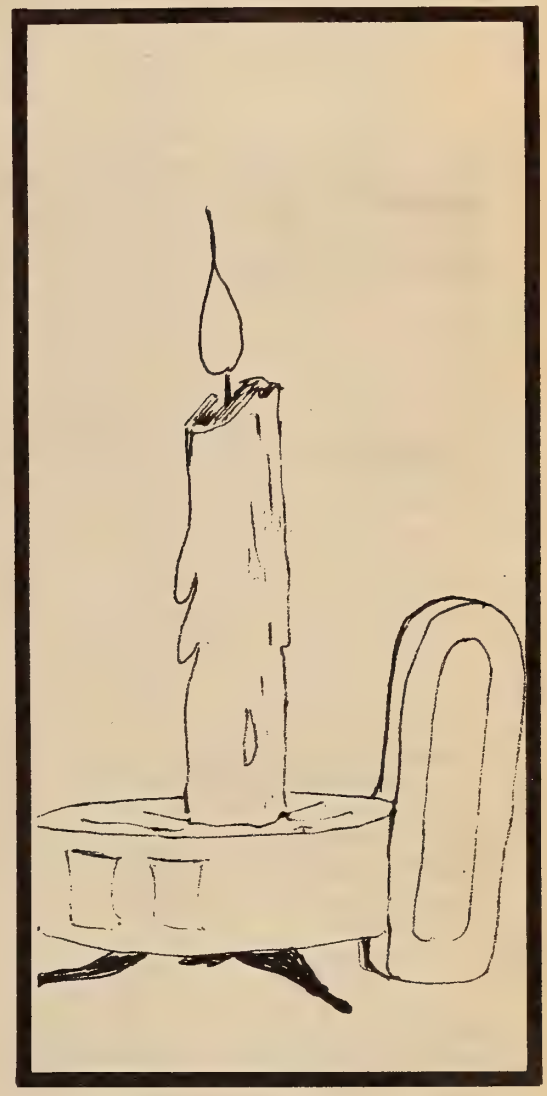
In 1960, more than 99 per cent of Ontario's electricity came from hydro electric power. With a limited number of hydro sites, however, the amount of power available is restricted, and as Ontario demands grew during the sixties, alternate sources of electricity had to be developed. Ontario began to develop nuclear power on a very limited scale but most of the additional electricity was produced h steam generating plants which run on coal, oil, o most recently, natural gas.

Ontario's energy needs are not restricted electricity. Great amounts of oil and natural g (and some coal) are used to heat and cool home offices, factories, schools and other buildings. Fu is needed to run motorized vehicles of all kinds from cars to jets to lawnmowers. Most of the ener needed for these purposes is produced from oil natural gas, and almost all of it comes from outsi the province, largely from Alberta. In 1970, Ontar had to import 80 per cent of its energy supplies.



The Ontario energy situation on the surface s does not seem very serious. After all, both Ontar and Alberta are part of Canada, and Canada is o of the few advanced industrial countries in t world which is selfsufficient in oil and natural ga But the Alberta natural gas and oil fields and n infinite. Unless massive new finds are made in t near future, it is expected that yields will peak the next two or three years. If current productio rates are maintained, oil reserves are expected decline from the present 21 years to a plateau of years by 1976. In 1971, there was a 27-year supply natural gas.

Before the Alberta reserves run out, however, o major source of oil and natural gas will ha changed. Canada has vast untapped fronti resources: on the Arctic rim, the Athabasca t sands, and off the coast of Nova Scotia. These are can supply Canadian needs well into the futur even when Alberta oil and natural gas run out.



If Canada has such massive energy reserves, w should Ontrians be concerned? A closer look at t American problem may suggest the answer.

With only six per cent of the world's populatio the United States devours 33 per cent of the world energy, and its demands are constantly increasin The consequence of this amazing consumption energy is that US energy reserves are fast disa peaaring, and it is possible that present oil a natural gas sources will be exhausted in less tha fifteen years.

This is not intended to imply that all America energy reserves will run out. There are larg deposits of oil in shale in the West, but world prices will have to more than double for produced from this source to be competitive. T US also has enormous coal deposits - enough to la for 500 years. Coal is unpopular right now, howeve because of the pollution it causes and the ecologic harm done when it is extracted using strip-minin methods. Nuclear power will play an increasingl important role in energy production, but it is n expected to contribute significantly until 1985. In the meantime, the US will have to import oil and natural gas to meet its energy needs.

Energy Crisis

The need for imports puts the US in a delicate diplomatic situation. Most of the world's oil reserves are in the Middle East, controlled by the Arabs. To get this oil, the US may have to alter its relationship with Israel and be willing to pay the higher oil prices the Arab skeiks are now demanding.

Or the United States can import more oil and gas from Canada. This proposal seems much more sensible to many Americana, including the President and the Secretary of the Interior. They call for the negotiation of a continental energy policy which would place all North American natural resources at the disposal of both the United States and Canada. Many Canadians disagree, arguing that such a policy would only benefit the US and strip Canada of her resources. Whatever the situation on a continental energy policy, the fact remains that the US has insatiable energy demands, and will pay any price necessary to supply them.

This is the reason why the American energy crisis affects Ontario. The Alberta government knows that the province only has its oil and natural gas reserves once, and would like to get the maximum possible price for them. If the Americans were allowed to compete freely for these supplies, most sales would be made to the US because of their willingness to pay the inevitably soaring prices.

Much of the chagrin of the Alberta government and the oil companies, the federal government has restricted natural gas exports to the surplus over 25-year domestic needs. Oil exports are allowed only when domestic requirements have been met.

Even with these restrictions, the prices of natural gas and oil are going to rise. This trend has already started: natural gas costs recently rose from 16c per thousand cubic feet (a price Alberta claimed was artificially low) to 26c per thousand cubic feet, and producers are calling for a further rise to 36c.

The real price increases will come as the frontier reserves are opened up. As Alberta's oil and natural gas fields are exhausted, more and more of Canda's needs will have to be supplied from these areas. The staggering costs of exploration, or recovery and of transportation of frontier energy will force substantial increases in the price of natural gas and oil to consumers.

For example, the Athabasca tar sands are known to contain 300 billion barrels of recoverable oil. At the moment, one plant is in operation, but to make up for the projected decline in Alberta' production at least one new completed plant will be required each year. Each plant takes from four to five years to construct, and costs $750 million. Pipelines to transport the oil to markets must also be built and they, too, are very expensive. Obviously, the main obstacle to proper exploitation of frontier resources is the finding of sufficient capital to pay for it. ACE chairman Deutsch doubts that enough money can be raised in Canada.

Producers must also find ways of recovering and transporting the oil and natural gas without upsetting the delicate edological balance of the North.

The problems involved in getting frontier fuels emphasize that alternate energy sources must be developed. The most promising area is nuclear power. Nuclear energy is clean (it doesn't pollute like fossil fuels) and strict government controls ensure that its production is save. This process is of particular interest to Ontario because Ontario has 15 to 20 per cent of the world's supply of uranium.

Ontario presently has two nuclear plants in operation: One at Douglas Point and another larger reactor at Pickering, near Toronto. Between them, they supplied about one per cent of Ontario's total energy needs last year. A third plant, of the same generation as Pickering is under construction ner the Georgian Bay; as more and more reactors go on stream, they will produce an increasing proportion of Ontario's energy supply - almost 24 per cent by 1990.

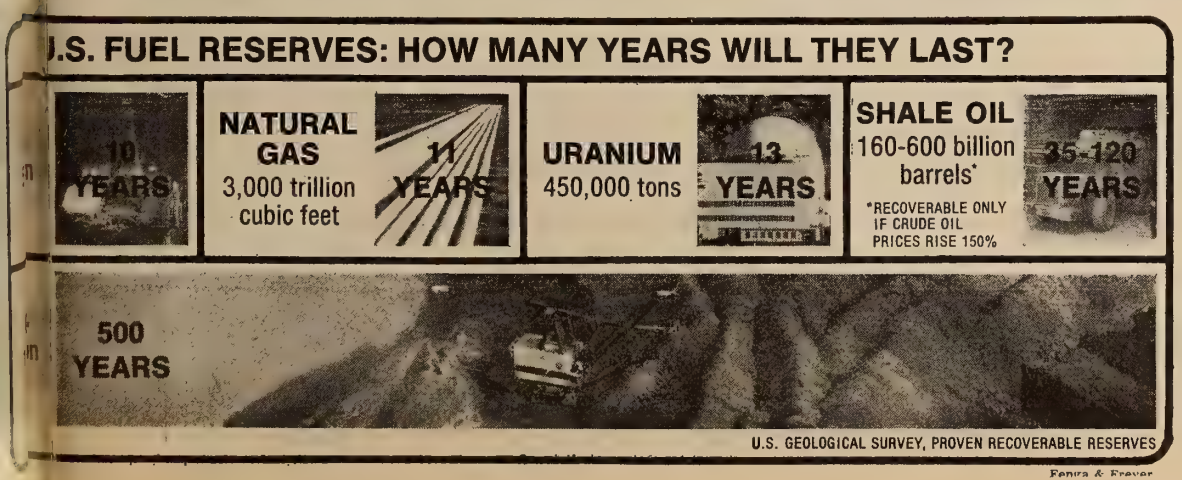
Three considerations must be made when discussing the future value of nuclear power: (1) the construction costs of nuclear plants is ver high, (2) the reactors need supplies of heavy water, which is expected to be in short supply (a d therefore expensive) for the rest of the decade, and (3) nuclear power is still largely experimental. Nobody knows whether there are nay long-term side effects which should be considered. None have turned up yet.

Other potential energy sources are also being studied. Scientists are working on an experimental "fast-breeder" nuclear reactor which produces more fuel - plutonium - than it uses. On a more long-term basis, they hope eventually to also obtain power from nuclear fusion and to harness the sun's energy by using giant mirrors.

The most practical solution of all, though, is to waste less of the energy which is now produced. Fifty per cent of all energy is given off as waste heat. We must increase the efficiency of energy production to eliminate the heat loss, find some use for the waste heat or arrive at some combination of the two.

As the ACE report points out: "Improving the efficiency of energy use has two desirable consequences. Firstly, since less fuel is consumed in order to perform useful work, there is a net consrvation of fuel. Secondly, environmental degradation is reduced, since environmental impact is roughly proportional to the amount of fuel extracted, transported and consumed."

In other words, the development of efficient mass transit systems to replace private cars, for example, would not only save valuable fuel, but cause less pollution.



There will be inevitable difficulties in short-run fuel conservation. The use of low-lead gasoline and pollution control equipment protects the environment but lowers engine efficiency. Restriction of the sulfur content of fuels raises refining costs and causes higher prices. Price increases, however, will encourage people to cut down on their energy comsumption, and so will be beneficial.

Canada as a whole does not have an energy crisis, and with proper resource management she never will. Ontario's position is somewhat more serious. According to Dr. Deutsch, the purpose of the ACE report was to bring home the urgency of the situation and to outline some of the problems which must be solved of Ontrio and Canada are to make intelligent use of their energy reserves.

ACE recommended that Ontario develop a "comprehensive and co-ordinated" energy policy and establish a ministry to look after the problems. The government responded to these suggestions by appointing former treasurer Darcy McKeough to help the cabinet determine 'ontario's future energy priorities.

Beyond the scope of the provincial government, many questions still remain. How much oil and natural gas should Canada export? How much should be reserved for domestic use? Should the frontier resources be developed in spite of the staggering capital costs involved? Can Canada afford to build pipelines? Should Canada sign a continental energy pact? All of these questions come under federal jurisdiction. The national energy policy which Energy Minister Donald Macdonald is expected to present before the end of the year may answer some of them.

It is likely that the decisions on Ontario and national energy policy will be followed with much more interest than most government announcements. At least that is the way the situation should be. One way or another, directly or indirectly, these policies will affect the lives of everyone.

Chamber Orchestra and Singers Give Moving Performance

by Merle Bolick

When I think that I nearly didn't attend the Queen's Chamber Orchestra and Singers Concert Tuesday night, I am very pleased with myself for taking time out to attend a moving and professional performance. The works by Mozart and Haydn were especially lovely and the program was nicely rounded beginning with Mozart's Symphony in D major, K.V. 202 (1866) and ending with his setting of Regina Coeli in C major, K.V. 176 (3216).

The symphony, directed by David Keane, was marked by good tutti passages and general agreement as to interpretation. The most difficult parts were played with ease. There was a timidity of attack at times, however, an unsureness which unhappily marred the ending, making it sound more apologetic than challenging. On the whole, however, it was a striking introduction to the concert.

I don't know how to talk about the next work,The Missa Brevis Sti. Joannie de Deo of Joseph Haydn, without lapsing into superlatives. It was great; with sweetness in the tenors and basses when we expected strain; with good work from the string ensemble especially in the Credo. Jean Callum's solo in the Benedictus sounded easy, letting the audience enjoy the high notes without reminding us of their difficulty. Tom Cromwell's work at the portative organ was sensitive and commendable. . .

Mr. Schnitzler's Chamber Singers were then accompanied by pianist Jan Salmon in the Eligischer Gesang, op. 118, of Beethoven. This is a perplexing piece and the choir showed well again, though they seemed less secure. I will, however, admit to a bias in favour of their interpretations of Mozart and Haydn.

The Regina Coeli that followed brought back the winds and strings for some striking ensemble work. The violins worked towards reaching a consensus on their grace-notes. Throughout the concert they went astray at what I thought were unlikely places, having rehearsed the difficult passages to perfection, but showing intonation problems in the small chromatic passages in the Presto of the symphony, in the opening minutes of the Masses, and again here. Otherwise, the concert was a tour de force for both instrumentalists and singers, as well as for their directors. I hope these soirees will become a high point on the musical calendar at Queen's. Grant Hall should in future be packed with people who do themselves the favour to attend.

As you like it

Continued from Page 12

only for the theatre gourmet. Many will no doubt be repulsed by the choice of dramatic medium, and through lack of involvement may find that which is tedious and flaccid in the production unbearable so. But there is in this production, for those who seek it, much food for thought and much satisfaction.

Random Notes...

by Sandy Naiman

You should keep two dates in March open. Sandy Aitken's Queen's Modern Dance Company will be presenting its second show, in Convocation Hall on March 1st, 2nd and 3rd. And on March 16th, Tony Montanaro will be giving a performance of the MIME'S EYE VIEW, at McArthur Auditorium.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

For those of you following the Tercentenary celebrations, Frontenac Superstar, will open at the Grand Theatre, March 16th. This Rotary-Meistersinger Production is directed by Peter Lichtenfels and features former mayor Val Swain and several other noted Kingston personalities in cameo roles and guest appearances.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

And finally, you will no doubt notice the photographic collage which accompanies Paul Gompertz's article on the current Drama Department production of "As You Like It." Brock Macpherson, who does all the theatrical photography for the Journal, conceived the idea of using the silouette of the show's logo, designed by Chris Miller, in which to put random shots of the show. This picture is remarkable and I want to use this opportunity to thank him for it and all the work he has done for the Journal this year

Ray Materick Concert

Also Tom Roberts

Thursday, March 1st

Grant Hall

$1.00 with Student card

$1.50 without

2 shows 7 p.m. and 9:30 p.m.

Tickets on sale John Orr Room

Monday, Feb. 26th

INTERSESSIONAL PROGRAMME

May 14 to June 26, 1973

This Intersession program has been designed to make available a selection of both introductory and advanced degree courses to both currently registered intramural and extramural students at Queen', and applicants who meet the admission requirements of the University. Candidates for this program are urged to take note of the fact that registration by FEBRUARY 16TH, 1973, is highly advisable since certain courses have only a limited number of places available, and others will be withdrawn if minimum enrolment requirements are not met by this date.

Biology
12-030 - Living Systems
12-307+ and 12-407+ - Field Camps
12-537 - Problems in Biological Research

Chemistry
17-283 - Organic Chemistry

Commerce
20-112+ - Accounting II
20-121+ - Introduction to Finance
20-151+ - Human Behaviour in Business I
20-315+ - Current Issues in Financial Accounting
20-381+ - Business Law I

Computing and Information Science
22-101+ - Introduction to Computing (May 14 to June 8)
22-102+ - Computer Organization and Programming I (May 28 to June 22)

Economics
29-110 - Principles of Economics
29-210 - Modern Economic Theory

Film
34-310 - Fundamentals of Film Production
34-423 - The Director's Cinema

French
35-011 - (1st part)- En France comme si vous y etiez (This is a full course taught over both Intersession and Summer School sessions)

Geography
38-323+ - Historical Geography
38 336+ - Spatial Interaction: Movement and Networks

History
46 274 Race Relations in North America
46 277 Europe Since 1870
46 284 The Seizure of Power in Historical Perspective

Mathematics
55 005+ - An Introduction to Algebra (the first half of 55 004)
55 162 - Probability and Statistics

Music
64 314 - Studies in Mediaeval and Renaissance Music

Philosophy
77-110 - Introduction to Philosophy

Physical & Health Education
78-241+ - History of Sport and Physical Education (Also Level II activity courses in Rugger. Soccer, Field Hockey, Track and Field)

Physics
79-102 - General Physics

Politics
81-280 - Empiral Analysis of Political Behaviour
81-332 - American Government

Portuguese
85-100 - Introductory Portuguese

Psychology
84-100 - Principles of Psychology
84-205+ - Experimental Psychology: Learning (the first half of 84-210)
84-230 - The Study of Personality

Religion
89-345 - Christian Interpretations of History: Augustine to Toynbec

Sociology
92-122 - Introduction to Sociology
92-274 - The Sociology of Deviant Behaviour
92-341 - Canadian Society
92-370 - Social Change

Intersession Courses to be Offered in Venice (May 13 to June 23)

Art History
05-245 - Venetian Art and Architecture

Italian
49-202 - Intensive Italian in Venice

Music
64-211 Music in Venice

Deadline for Application for Intersession Courses in Venice - March 15, 1973

+ Denotes half course

NOTE: Mathematics 121 will also be offered if there is sufficient registration.

REGISTRATION BY FEBRUARY 16, 1973 IS MOST IMPORTANT. A LATE FEE WILL APPLY FOR REGISTRATIONS AFTER THIS DATE.

Admission Applications and Registration Forms are available from:
The Department of Extension,
25 Union Street, Kingston, Ontario. or Telephone (613) 547-3283.

Review

Contemporary Dancers Unspectacular

by Irving Schlepperman

The performance Tuesday night by Rachel Browne's "Contemporary Dancers" was, to judge by public response, entertaining and culturally refreshing. A varied program of modern dance, ranging from purely abstract interpretation to down-home country and western drew laughter and applause from a well-packed house at McArthur Auditorium. In the final analysis, however, the performance was unspectacular.

The Winnipeg-based company has toured extensively in North America, and claims to have toured Canada more widely than any other company. This may be partly responsible for the somewhat brassy, sensational style which was evident Tuesday night, although Miss Browne's technique itself, which she ably demonstrated in a solo to Laura Nyro's "Woman's Blues" struck this reviewer as rather graceless and frenetic, and is ultimately to praise or blame for the company's success or failure. The "Contemporary Dancers" hovered somewhere between the two with their flashy but essentially bloodless style.

The high points in the show came in the middle set of three, first with a highly abstract piece performed to electronic music, and secondly, with Miss Browne's solo. In the first instance, "Prisms", the intellectual geometric style, coupled with the basic white costuming forced the company to focus their attention on technique, and ease up a little on "schtick", with the result that some good, serious dancing emerged.

The slide projections on the cyclorama (mirroring formations on the stage floor) worked well when they did, and generally they did. But as with some of the other pieces, one found oneself muttering "Enough is enough" somewhere toward the middle of the number.

Miss Browne's solo, in spite of its spasmodic, jerky quality, was quite clearly the technical pinnacle of the show. Unfortunately, Miss Browne suffered a minor injury as a result, which left this reviewer wondering whether there might not be something amiss with the basic physiology of her style. Nevertheless, her performance was striking and offered a glimpse of what the others were striving to attain.

Elsewhere, the show suffered from a preoccupation with panache, which may well be an occupational hazard for a professional touring company, but which finally created something of a schizophrenic response. There was little integration of dance to music, forcing one to constantly be choosing where his attention was going to be focused. Presumably because of its "experimental" nature, the company occasionally slipped into a fault characteristic of modern art at its worst - meaninglessness. Much of the choreography was utterly incomprehensible, a condition which is often praised in support of modern interpretation of anything. Unfortunately this does not compensate for the human mind's innate need to understand what it experiences, and consequently one was left with a nagging sense of good old-fashioned bewilderment. At other times, the choreography was almost childishly simple, and coupled with the standard recipe - "If they liked it once, they'll love it twice" - sometimes led to an avalanche of meaning which bordered on tedium.

This was most flagrant in the last piece "Turn-In, Turn-Out, Turn-On" done to electronic Bach. The basically humorous approach - a company of dancers horrified by the prospect of being onstage before an audience, degenerated into an exercise in prolonged repetition. One can hardly blame the company for this slight breach of taste, however the audience reinforced them with laughter and applause.

The most original piece was "Country Music", the curtain raiser. Regardless of the questionable quality of the music the technique of tap-dance styles in bare feet made a noble stab at rendering the quality of the hoe-down. This number however, was marred by costuming, as were many of the others. The basic primary pastels and simple cuts lent little to the overall design of the performance beyond a safe, "modern" foundation against which to work. The nadir of the design had to be Aaron Braun's trousers in the pas-de-deux "Danses Sacres et Profances", which were an off-olive-green-khaki-peuce-beige, not an attractive compliment to his partner's peach. One again feels the impulse to chalk this up to one or the other of those dangerous words "experimental" or "modern", which are so often synonymous with "artless" or "vulgar". Or, as a friend of mine once said: "Melmac will never replace china."

To counteract what may appear to be a fundamentally negative treatment, let me hasten to say (in my last paragraph) that the Contemporary Dancers must be considered to have accomplished the goal they seem to have set themselves: to please an audience by turning out a high degree of professionalism. Those of us who are not particularly enamoured of professionalism may perhaps have to look elsewhere for satisfaction, but in the meantime, "Contemporary Dancers" may be justified in claiming to be "widely recognized as Canada's leading modern dance company". If so, one feels inclined to ask, somewhat timourously - just where they are leading us . . .

Reading Days

Friday, February 16

9:30 am - Dept. of Physiology presents a Seminar: Control of Prolactin Secretion by Dr. Friesen. Dept. of Physiology Library, Physiology Building.

4:00 pm - Queen's Committee of World University Service of Canada (WUSC) holds a winter weekend in the woods at Mazinaw Lake on "University: Why Bother?" Group exploration of questions such as access to education, also Canadian Universities and their role at home and abroad. All inclusive fee $5.00. Information and registration: Ilyas Absar (547-2986) or Kaspar Pold (547-2807).

8:30 pm - Drama Dept. presents "As You Like It" directed by Rod Robertson with music by David Keane. Tickets $2.00 - non-students; $1.00 - students. Available from the Drama Department. Convocation Hall.

Sunday, February 17

8:30 pm - Drama Dept. presents "As You Like It" directed by Rod Robertson with music by David Keane. Tickets $2.00 - non-students; $1.00 - students. Available from Drama Dept. Convocation Hall.

Sunday, February 18

There will be no University Service in Morgan Memorial Chapel.

10:30 am - Dunning Aud. A Folk Mass followed by coffee and donuts in Newman House.

4:00 pm - Eucharistic Celebration at Queen's Theological Hall, Faculty Lounge (2nd floor).

7:30 pm - Folk Mass in Senior Common Room at McArthur Hall.

Tuesday, February 27

8:00 pm - Sociology Smoker at the Pub, Students Union. Beer 45c. Free coffee and donuts.

Off Campus

On Tuesday Feb. 20 at 8:00 pm the Irish Rovers, one of the brightest and most rhythmic groups of singers and instrumentalists in entertainment today, will perform in live concert at Grant Theatre.

Theatres

Capitol - Deliverance
Hyland - Bluebeard
Odeon - Ulzana's Raid

Pub

Commodore - The Dusty King Show
401 Inn - The New Concept
Manor - Malton and Hamilton
Seaway Pub - The Mercy Brothers

"Wax Works"

Tidbits

by Geoff Henning

Alice Cooper's latest album cover has apparently been cleared by counsel for the U.S. Secret Service and "Billion Dollar Babies" should soon hit retailers. Objections had been raised over showing the rock group posing with $1,000,000 in U.S. currency. The question concerned showing a colour photo of actual money (?). The opinion of Secret Service counsel was that "reproductions of currency are not in sufficient similitude to constitute a violation . . ." (??)

Derek and the Dominos are revived via a live two-record set etched at the defunct Fillmore East, New York when Eric Clapton, Bobby Whitlock, Jim Gordon and Eric Radle were performing together.

Germany seems to be a popular country for rock groups this month. Among the groups touring there are Ten Years After, Isaac Hayes, Jethro Tull, Emerson Lake and Palmer and Chuck Berry.

ABC is the latest target of suits by manager-producer Terry Knight aimed at appearances of Grand Funk Railroad. Knight has charged trademark infringement and unfair competition. A total of $4,500,000 is being sought in connection with the appearance of the group on the January 19th show on ABC called "In Concert" featuring the group.

"You're So Vain" is still the only single to come from the Carly Simon album "No Secrets" but another is expected to be released anytime now.

Elton John's new album is having great success in both the U.S. and Canada. The name of it is "Don't Shoot Me I'm Only the Piano Player".

Some American Station top songs lately, as of February 1.

WPIX - FM - New York
1. You're So Vain
2. Crocodile Rock
3. Superstition
4. Why Can't We Live Together
5. Your Mama Don't Dance

WPEN - Philadelphia
1. Crocodile Rock
2. Oh Babe, What Would You Say
3. Don't Expect Me To Be Your Friend
4. Could It Be
5. Daddy's Home

WLS - Chicago
1. You're So Vain
2. Superstition
3. Crocodile Rock
4. Me and Mrs. Jones
5. Your Mama Don't Dance

WOWO - Fort Wayne
1. You're So Vain
2. Crocodile Rock
3. Me and Mrs. Jones
4. Living in the Past
5. Why Can't We Live Together

Some good albums to keep an eye out for are:

1. Dancing in the Moonlight - King Harvest
   This contains the single of the same name and features simple music and singing.
2. Holland - Beach Boys
   This group is still trying for a comeback and they may just do it with this album.
3. The Divine Miss M. - Bette Midler
   This features the unique interpretation of the much recorded song Do You Wanna Dance.
4. Can't Buy a Thrill - Steely Dan
   This group is in the Santana-Malo tradition. The album contains hits such as their present single, Do It Again.

Songs:
1. Living in the Past - Jethro Tull
2. Eldeberry Wine - Elton John
3. Dancing in the Moonlight - King Harvest
4. Why Can't We Live Together - Timmy Thomas
5. Killing Me Softly - Roberta Flack

Albums:
1. Don't Shoot Me - Elton John
2. Talking Book - Stevie Wonder
3. Seventh Sojourn - Moody Blues
4. For the Roses - Joni Mitchell
5. Life and Times - Jim Croce

Starting after reading week I'd like to try something new in "Wax Works". If anyone has any questions about music, trivia, curiosity, or whatever, I'd like you to write to me c-o The Journal Office and I will try to find the answer as soon as possible. Maybe you'll want to know who sang a song years ago but you forgot their name or maybe you want to know where to get a certain album. Feel free to ask any reasonable questions.

"As You Like It"

Abreast Of The Times

by Paul Gompertz

The Drama Department's production of "As You Like It", which opened Monday night in Convocation Hall, is the sort of production which requires of the audience a willing suspension of disbelief, if they are to begin to appreciate both its medium and its message. Those who go expecting to see yet another "guilded stage-pageant of plays we all know and love" will be disappointed, since it is in modern dress, and the machinery of the play is translated into the modern idiom.

Those who cannot or will not accept the incongruity of Shakespeare's text thus framed will certainly not embrace the play in the manner which is intended, and if they do not, then the loss is theirs, for the production is both thoughtful and thought provoking.

Perhaps the production is asking too much of its audience, for anyone who is not prepared to penetrate the director's ramifications in an attempt to assimilate his intentions is not going to be very satisfied, for there is far more of implication than of simple entertainment in this production.

The strange dramatic foliation in the traditionally idyllic Forest of Arden are not gratuitous, but are rather a very careful and intelligent attempt to give an underlying coherence to a play that is notoroius for its plangent disparities. No production that treats the text of "As You Like It" at face value can hope to unify these disparities, which are primarily tonal in nature, and Rod Robertson has offered, in a modern and therefore more readily accessible idiom, a convincing integration of the confusingly distectic elements of the play.

Were it not for the dictates of chronology, "As You Like It", might easily be termed a problem play, for it is a comedy the surface of which belies the more sinister implications of its tonality. It cannot be treated, for instance, in the same way as "A Winter's Tale", in which the antithesis between the stylised and bad courtly life is essentially maintained and balanced throughout.

There is a tonality to the life in the forest of Arden which is in conflict with the overt statements and attitudes of most who dwell there. It is a basic question of appearance and reality, and underlying the apparent gaiety there is an insidious suggestion that life in the Garden may well be post-lapsarian. As a result, it is usually difficult to come into possession of the characters' reasons for behaving as they do.

Mr. Robertson's direction attempts to resolve the enigma by inbuing the scene with a pervading amorality. The latitude that this move allows him is skillfully exploited and old lines are made to take on new meaning when delivered in the midst of a crowd of stoned ex-courtiers. One notable example is the Duke's "Sweet are the uses of adversity", which is prefaced by a drawn-out pull at a communal joint, and from which emerges more of the toad than the jewel.

Jacques famous speech, too, is revitalized, and its descent from the merely rhetorical to the pervasively chilling settles an uneasy quiet over the assembled company which is broken only by the entrance of Orlando.

The overall standard of the acting is high, and it is impossible to do justice to all those performances which deserve it. Charles Hayter as Duke Senior was eloquent and relaxed, and brought to the role an air of indulgent decadence which mirrored beautifully the intentions of the production. His langorous dominion over the proceedings in the forest gave to the crowd scenes at least, a continuity of tone which was oppressively effective.

Ian Fenwick, as Touchstone, managed to make intelligible one of Shakespeare's habitually intransigent (and often, to modern audiences, boring) clowns which was in itself an achievement, and that he did so with panache and variety is further credit to his performance.

Carolyn Hetherington's wry performance as Jacques fulfilled the dramatic function of the character by underlying the amoral frivolity of the assembled company at the same time as suggesting the equally untenable nature of Jacques own philosophy.

There were, too, some delightful comic caricatures, most notably by Marjorie Woodbridge who as Audrey, kept perfect control of her portrayal of the importunate rustic, and by John Reeves, whose Adam was both funny and sympathetic without being ridiculously exaggerated. Indeed, the scenes with all the above mentioned characters, and with the assembled company, who generated a great deal of energy and vitality, were consistently engaging.

The play unfortunately, takes something of a nose dive in the period between the two intervals, for it relies more heavily upon the activities of select individuals than of the group. Rob Ruttan, as Orlando, made his character as ethereal, flamboyant and stylised in his approach to love as he must needs be, and he seemed both relaxed and well in command of his role. Unfortunately Valerie Stephenson as Rosalind-Ganymede was not equally convincing. Her role was a difficult one - Shaespeare's sex-change roles were, after all, meant to be played by males. It is difficult to define the failing in her portrayal, which was technically quite sound. Perhaps the problem lay in the fact it was no more than that, for it lacked the strength and the forcefulness demanded of a character who has more of the gift of common sense than anyone in the play. In essence her portrayal was unconvincing because it was shallow. As a result, this section of the play was (to use an uncritical term) soggy and even tedious, and ended on a rather flat note.

It is a pity that the flat note could not have been reserved for the end of the play, which built to a frenetic climax which it never really managed to dispel. In terms of the overall interpretation (which is at some pains to equal the court with the forest) the gaiety at leaving the forest was incongruous. Had the assembled company on the stage drifted into a slow and uncomfortable dissolution, the play would have been nicely rounded out. As it was, the chill note instilled by Jacques great speech was never recaptured, and the rowdy 'curtain-call' dispelled what little attempt had been made to end the play on a subdued note.

The set made great demands on the actors who had some sharp slopes and angles to work with, but on the whole, if accepted on its own terms, it could be considered to have worked efficetively, especially when combined with the skillful use of lighting and sound, which at times blended to produce an ominously eerie effect.

The director must be commended for his thoughful and honest attempt to present a coherent view of a traditionally puzzling play, and both in the general and the specific details of his direction there can be seen a sensitive organizing principle at work. Rod Robertson has brought together the actors, the stage effects and the replications of the play in a pastiche which is strikingly effective.

It may be my predilection for this production derives from the fact that it is the first I have seen in which the director has not baulked at the problems inherent in the play, and has sought to solve and integrate them. As such it may well be fare

Continued on Page 10

letters

A reply

Dear Editor:

In response to Brian Jacques' letter "the nest carbon copy", I received many complaints about the originality of Spheeris' song. I realize now that the story was told originally by Robert Heinlein. The information, on which I based the article, was from a type sheet sent by the booking agency and I didn't realize the lyrics were not his. However, this does not stop the song from being a "masterpiece". The music is definitely that of Mr. Spheeris and the combination of music and lyrics is definitely a tremendous accomplishment.

Thanking you,
Geoff Henning

Upset

Dear Editor,

I would like to make a few comments regarding your editorial of Tuesday, Feb. 13, and also your previous editorial in which you endorsed the Whitham-Sugar presidential team. I agree in essence with the second editorial in which you defended your right to express opinions about campus issues. I do not accuse you of impropriety in expressing your opinion that the Whitham-Sugar team was the stronger of the two. However, it is unfortunate that you expressed your opinion so poorly. I do not question that the opinion was reached after much discussion and thought.As editor of the Journal you are in a position which provides you with adequate information upon which to base a reasonable decision. But by failing to present to your readers in detail the major reasons why you chose to back Whitham-Sugar instead of Brereton-Trotter, you committed an unfortunate error. Instead of your token analysis of each of the candidates you should have presented a much broader analysis of the two teams and given your readers some sound basis on which to agree or disagree with you. When the Toronto Star backed David Rotenberg for Mayor of Toronto, it spent about 800 words susbstantiating its view that Rotenberg was the best man for the job. You did not adequately substantiate your view that Whitham and Sugar were the best pair to run the affairs of the AMS. This point was raised in a few of the letters written in reply to your editorial. Your editorial of this past Tuesday failed to answer this criticism. In this respect that editorial stands incomplete. The presentation of your opinion was poor and you should have admitted it.

Yours sincerely,
Craig Miller

Ed. Note: We were merely presenting our opinion, not presuming to sway the electorate by exhaustive analysis.

Miller writes a column for Golden Words.

AMS housing

Dear Editor:

The executive committee of the AMS Housing Service recently approved a 5 per cent increase in all rents to be charged during the 1973-74 school year.

In light of my recent references to the entrepreneurial activities of the AMS and, more specifically, to its "lucrative housing investments", this letter is intended to help straighten out certain misconceptions of the Housing Service and to provide an explanation for the rental increase.

The AMS is not a property owner and is therefore unable to benefit from and appreciation in property values. Houses managed by the AMS are owned by the University; Queen's leased them to the AMS for the sole purpose of subletting them to students.

The Housing Service is designed as a non profit-making organization. If a cash surplus exists at the year end which, in the opinion of the auditors, is sufficient to warrant a refund, a rent rebate may be issued to each student who was a tenant during the leasing period.

However, increasing costs over the past two years have prevented the accumulation of any surplus. In other words, the Housing Service has merely broken even.

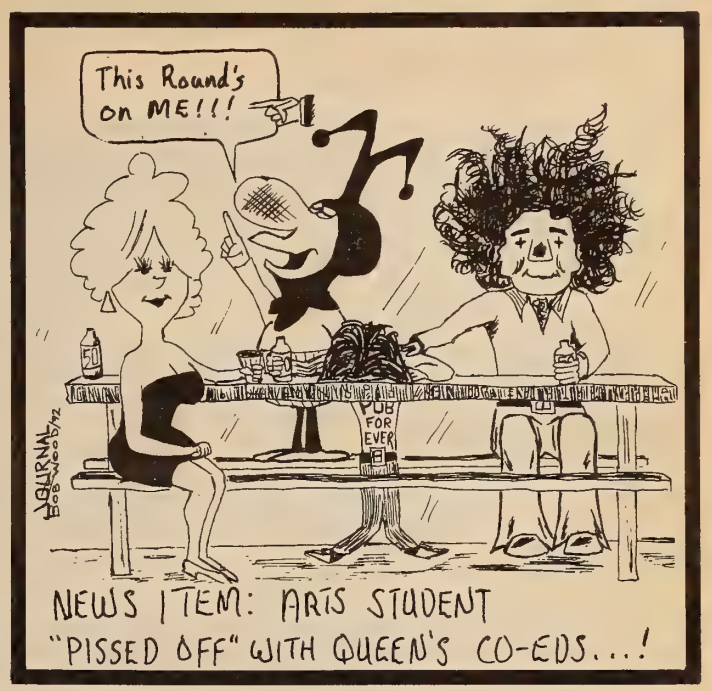
Although some tenants may suspect that their rent is going towards subsidizing certain unprofitable AMS activities, the Housing Service has been financially incapable of offering such assistance. Furthermore, this assistance is not permitted by the terms of reference laid down for the Housing Service. Since the Housing Service represents a co-operative effort between Queen's and the AMS to provide low-cost accommodation to Queen's students, its first duty is to its tenants. Its relation to the AMS is therefore different from the Pub or Typing Service which are regarded as being wholly controlled by the AMS.

In short, Housing Service funds do not fill AMS "coffers" and cannot be used to underwrite other AMS business ventures.

The need for an additional 5 per cent in expected revenues for the coming year is based on increasing maintenance costs. Since a large proportion of AMS houses is experiencing annual turnover and since, in many cases,the overall condition of these houses had declined from that existing at the time the AMS acquired them from the University, more money must be spent to maintan their standard of repair. The costs of repairing and replacing appliances have increased for the same reason. In addition, the Housing Service has absorbed the cost of performing certain obligations which were formerly the responsibility of the tenant.

This year, certain efforts to modernize existing facilities had to be postponed because of a lack of funds. Proposals for additional services and more generous redecorating vouchers were rejected completely.

Therefore, in order to not only meet the Housing Service's present objectives, but also to expand its scope and effectiveness as a service designed to provide comfotable, as well as low-cost accommodation for Queen's students, the increased rents are seen as being unavoidably necessary.



Paul Mahaffy,
AMS Housing Service

Queen's Journal
Vol. 100, No. 39
Fri., Feb. 16, 1973
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ont.

Editor: Jennifer Grass
Business: Charles Schwier
Management: John Solman
Arts: Sandy Naiman
Features; Pat Devitt, Steven Winnett
Passepartout: Bob Wood
News: Susan de Stein
Events: Alison Dandie
Sports: Chris Boon, Nada Bogdanovic
National Desk: Bob Mutrie, Sue Wishart
Photography: Peter Boag

Where have all the people gone, tra-la-laa . . . thanks and a tip o' da hat to Jen who doesn't like my picture choices . . . Di and Donna who aren't here . . . Woodie who wrote a very interesting story . . . Bob the other who didn't want to go . . . Sue for her magnum opus . . . Sandy for one even bigger . . . Brock for quite a pic (don't let PL. get it, though)..... .....Bogus who did the cover ..... Helen who can put up with about anything ..... Boon who got found without power ..... Ann and the others who were with her (what are your names) ..... John Victor who made a meeting ..... Patti who did some drawings ..... and the rest of the cast of a million maniacs who were loose to bring you this weeks effort.

Published twice weekly on Tuesdays and Fridays by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc., Member, Canadian University Press. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society of the University. Offices are located in the Student's Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

Pissed off

Dear Editor:

I write in reference to the letter in last Friday's Journal entitled "Pissed Off" written by a first year Arts and Science student. He attacked female Queen's students for seldom paying their own way on dates, dinners and so on.

I would hypothesize that the ArtSci in question spent a large portion of his bank account on the Snowball activities in search of sexual fulfilment, but was disappointed. Might I offer my deepest sympathies and remind him that an expenditure of money is not necessary to initiate an encounter with a member of the opposite sex. Some people entertain by personality rather than cash.

Sincerely,
Glenn Greig
Plumber

Addy Two

Dear Editor;

As a note of clarification: the Addy Two Virginity Squad is an organization which consists of all those members past and present of Addy Two (plus a few select friends) who are, or at one time have been, in the state of virginity.

Sincerely,
K+++++G+++++
Honourary President

P.S. Contrary to popular belief, the Addy 2 V.S. is not the personal gestapo of the W.R.C.

Elrond

Dear Editors,

As a member of Elrond College, I was interested to read the Journal's interview with John Blanchard (9 February 1973).

There are a few things which were not brought out in the interview which should be mentioned. Not all of the houses will be on an 8-month lease as Mr. Blanchard stated. Next year, all of the 2-man houses will be put on a 12-month lease. For those wanting to rent a 2-man house next year they will either need to have $420 extra to spare or be able to sublet. Since there is no official policy yet with regard to subletting apartments, etc. It would be an uncertain step to rely on subletting to cover the cost of the four summer months.

This policy of putting the two-man houses on a 12-month lease is ridiculous. In fact, it is nothing but discrimination against those wishing to rent such houses. What is the difference between a 2-man house and the 4-, 6-, and 12-man houses which remain on an 8-month lease? An explanation is still required on this point.

Another point not mentioned is that the 4-man house will be on the meal plan next year. The cost, including meals, will be:

Single	$1155
Double	995
Double as Single	1295

This past year the cost per month for a single room was $95 and $85 each for a double room. Food should cost no more than $7 a week per person. Therefore, for the 30 week period this would amount to $210 per person. Total basic cost per person would be approximately:

Single	$970
Double	810

Comparing these two sets of figures, one will see that it will cost approximately $200 more to live in a 4-man house next year. The reason for requiring the people to go on the meal plan is unclear. Certainly there is no problem cooking for three or four people. The only reasonable excuse is that the College wants to make additional money from those in the 4-man houses.

Perhaps Mr. Blanchard will go into more depth on this matter for the interest of those who wish to live in Elrond next year. We all want to see Elrond succeed, but we don't like to think that we are being screwed in the process.

Yours truly,
ANONYMOUS.

unclassifieds

THANKS to all those who worked for and supported me. LYN.

BETH BABY -- tell Uncle John we're collecting - send that 40 in with the next edition of the Journal. Bevie Brat.

BARB, BETH, and Paul (alias Page, Ewaa, and Bucky) are pleased to announce that they are sponsoring Reading Week (Feb 19-23) this year to let everyone get it together. Concrete!

HABITATION WANTED for 3 or 4 people next year. Large number of rewards offered or equivalent. Phone 544-7435 or 544-7432.

LOST: BLACK briefcase near Goodwin. Contains economics and statistics books -- Call 546-0582.

ICEBOATERS: IF you want to sail contact Don at 544-6429 or come to 10 Aberdeen to get the sails. Queen's Sailing Club.

FOUND: 1 PAIR ST. Patrick's gauchies. If they're yours, apply room 113 Applicant must prove they fit.

FOUND: SILVER PEN, between Grant and Ontario, at 1:30 on Wednesday. Phone 544-8109.

OLDE BITTER GROUNDS Night will be held this weekend Feb. 16 and 17 and will feature Queen's own talent. A great success everytime it has been held it offers a wide range of entertainment and allows Queen's students to display their budding talent. So if your going to be in Kingston this weekend drop by Friday or Saturday night and see what this campus has to offer. To cheer your friends who are playing, come to the 2nd floor of the Union from 8 pm to midnight!

TO THE GIRLS ON 6E - thanks, from the Boys on 3rd Brockington. Hope we can get together again!

URGENTLY WANTED: 1970 (green) Tricolor. Phone 542-7028. Ask for Bill.

WE NEED 3 people to fill a 5 man house next year. Close to campus. $54 a month each. 544-1708.

WANTED: 2 persons to assist in TRICOLOR-JOURNAL office (preferably as a team). Involves about 1 hour every other day. Call Leona at 546-7908 or 547-3178.

BEE - Nobody tells me nothing. I'm ever so sorry this is late. Bee-Day. Jamie.

THANKS to those who voted for me, those who helped me with the campaign. Esp. Ann C., Stu E, and my roommates Col, Horne, and Mag, Wil.

THE TIME IS 3:02 a.m. for anyone who is interested.

TO ADDY III thanks for the ten valentine's cards and the supper ... tremendous ... Woodie.

TO JIM WITH LOVE from all the recipients on 1A.

TREMENDOUS!!!!

CATHY - Thanks for the choco bar. Passepartout.

GOOD NIGHT FROM THE NATIONAL.

GOOD MORNING from the News Desk.

WHERE DID ALL you chickens go?

HAPPY BELATED VALENTINE'S day to the Vic 504E lovelies. Sorry I didn't send a card, but you know my financial condition. 445 Leo.

ADDIO, HASTA LUEGO, Sayonara, Auf Wiedesehen; farewell - no matter how you say it, they all add up to one thing, the Arts Formal on March 10.

CHRIS -- CONGRATS. I won't go so far as to say the best man is a woman, because well, uh, . . ., let's say I don't know you well enough. Good luck. Pops.

ROOMS AVAILABLE in Science '44 co-op. If interested, call Ruth Fraser at 544-2791.

THERE IS A LIMITED number of tickets for AUF WEIDERSEHEN, so be one of the lucky couples to attend this formal dance at the 401 Inn on March 10. Tickets will go on sale February 25 in the John Orr Room, 11:30 - 2:30 every day, or just call Pat Sinclair at 544-0264 and reserve one now.

HEY, PL, WHAT the hell is wrong with someone fluffing about in public. She's just oppressed by the nasty reserve labour theory.

LETS MAKE A DEAL - how much would you say a hot buffet dinner and dance is worth? If you have guessed right, then you'll know that $6 a couple is a real bargain! The 401 Inn will be the setting for Auf Wiedersehen on March 10, 7:30 - 1:00 am. The profit will be yours!

FOUND -- HAT, Saturday night at corner of Earl and Aberdeen. Describe it and its yours. Gord 544 1394.

WANTED FOR MARCH -- 1 bed-sitting room or 1-bedroom apartment. $75-95 a month range. Single girl. Vicinity of campus. Sublet til Sept. Call 389-2342.

WANTED: HOUSE for five guys for next year. Must be reasonably near campus. Phone Chris, 549-0507; Greg 549-0849 or Mark 549-1419.

STOP -- FOUND one lovely gold earring in corner of one well-used paddleball court. Must be of great sentimental value. Possibly the handy work of Joe Swartz or the Prince of Darkness. Reward for taking off our hand. Call 544-6090. Da Boyse. PS - You call us, we won't call you!

ANGIE T. SHARED her cherry with Huggy Bear while sitting on Weed's lap at my place on Sunday night. It's not something you can do twice. But keep trying anyway. Love Spock.

CHRIS: Have a Happy Birthday and night.

BUT NOT TOO much at the beginning.

QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY Student Liberal Club is Alive and well. Executive: Pres; Paul Layton; V-P, S M Pitchers; Sec-Tres, Elaine McCallum; Committees: Public Relations, John Pepper; Organizational, Tony Layton; Policy, Rich Hudson. Come join us, whether as an observer, a participant, a criticer, a committee member, an activist, or whatever your reason(s). Become a participating, paid-up member. Queen's Student Liberals need your support. Spend an hour or two a week talking politics with us. Come to OTTAWA with us March 9. Call us, we're in the book.

TO SUBLET: May 1 to August 31. 4 bedroom house fully furnished. 5 minutes from campus. Rent negotiable. Not a slum. Call 544-0104.

8 BEDROOM HOUSE available for next year. May to May lease. Call 544-9207.

TO THE SENSUOUS Beauties in Ban Righ (and certain individuals in Addy). Thanks for the Valentine. we're always in the mood, too. Catch you after Reading Week. Happy Holiday. Love Graham (on behalf of the Pink Room Squad).

WANTED: MALE exhibitionist to jump out of cake at Eng Soc. Broad's Smoker. Call 544-2404. Ask for Deb.

IS THE above from the CAUCUS?

LOST MY ORANGE mittens in the gym, Douglas or inbetween. If you've found them, please call Nancy at 544-2703.

DI and DONNA -- thought we'ed forget, didn't you.

FOUND: GOLD MATH 233 notebook on Tuesday. Call Carol at 544-8768.

LOST: ONE BLACK leather, fur-lined glove near Kingston Hall on Thursday, February 8. Please call Susan at 544-8807.

APARTMENT TO sublet with option for next year. One or two bedrooms. Comfortable. Close to campus and downtown. Call 546-4608.

SEXUAL DEVIANTS or anyone else with a two or three bedroom apartment that will be available for '73-'74, please call 544-7132 or 544-7077. Crunch and the kid are getting desperate.

QUEEN'S BANDS MEMBERS: anyone staying at Queen's this weekend is needed to support the hockey gaels on Friday and Saturday night. Come out and blow your horn.

"MICHAEL (THE DUDE) Tzekas, alive and well and residing at West Campus, celebrated his 23rd birthday last Friday, February 9th. He thought he'd really start the new year off right by getting in some early golf at Cataraqui. It proved to be an unsuccessful venture, however. He reported grimly that the best two balls he hit all day came when he stepped on a rake in a snow-covered sandtrap! Speedy recoveries and a Happy late Birthday greeting, Greek. - The Boys."

2 BEDROOM FURNISHED apartment to sublet May 1 to September 1. Ten minute walk to campus, and close to downtown. A very liveable place - clean and bright. For further details Phone 544-8109 or 544-8047.

TECHNOLOGIST for cytogenetics lab required immediately. Permanent full-time position; B. Sc. or similar degree plus some laboratory experience (not necessarily in cytogenetics) needed; interest in this type of work and some knowledge of typing appreciated; $7222 per annum. Contact Dr. Soudek at 546-1101 ext. 418.

TYPIST for research laboratory required immediately. Part-time, approx. half day weekly. Phone 546-1101 ext. 418.

Now that you can fly to Europe for peanuts, here's how little you shell out to get around:

$130 for Two Months of unlimited rail travel in Austria, Belgium, Denmark, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Luxembourg, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland.

You shell out $130, and get a Student-Railpass. All you need is the bread and something to show you're a bona fide student between 14 and 25.

Our Student-Railpass gives you all that unlimited rail travel on the 100,000 mile railroad networks of those 13 countries. For two foot-loose months. So with low air fares and Student-Railpass you've got Europe made.

Our Student-Railpass gets you Second Class travel on our trains. You'll find that there's very little second class about Second Class. Besides being comfortable, clean, fast, and absurdly punctual, the European trains have some other advantages for you. They take you from city center to city center, so you don't have to hassle airports. And the stations are helpful homes away from home, with Pictograms that give you information in the universal language of signs, and dining rooms, bookstores and other helpful facilities.

Now, here's the catch. You can't get your Student-Railpass or the regular First Class Eurailpass in Europe—you have to get them before you leave the country. So see your Travel Agent soon. Meanwhile, send in the coupon for a free folder, complete with railroad map.

Prices quoted in U.S. dollars.

STUDENT-RAILPASS The way to see Europe without feeling like a tourist.

Eurailpass is valid in Austria, Belgium, Denmark, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Luxembourg, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland.

Eurailpass, Box 2168, Toronto, 1, Ontario

Please send me your free Eurailpass folder with railroad map. ☐ Or your Student-Railpass folder order form. ☐

Name_____ Street_____

City_____ Apt._____ Zone_____ Prov._____

QUE 2

Playoff berth at stake

Gaels face crucial weekend

by Peter Watts

It seems that every year the season comes right down to the final game before it is known whether or not the Queen's Golden Gaels will make the playoffs. This year is no exception; however, this year the odds are much better than they were last year. At present the Gaels are in a third place tie with the York Yeomen in the East Division of the OUAA, each with 19 points. The Laurentian Voyageurs occupy second spot with 21 points. Three points behind Queen's and York are the Ottawa GeeGees who have 16 points.

A number of interesting possibilities can be found when one looks at the schedule for the last week of the season. The GeeGees still have three games to play, one of which is against Laurentian. By contrast, Queen's has only two games to play: Friday night against York, and Saturday night against Toronto. A win Friday night would virtually assure Queen's of a playoff spot. The Gaels got a big break on Tuesday night when Carleton and Ottawa tied 3-3. So a Queen's victory over York, combined with a Laurentian victory over Ottawa would assure Queen's of a spot in the playoffs. The only question now is which spot they will get. If they were to finish in second, something which is still quite possible, they would host the third place team on February 27th. If they finish third, they play the second place team (probably Laurentian) at the home of the second place team on February 27th. If on the other hand the Gaels finish fourth, they meet the first place Blues in Toronto on February 27th.

In any event, this weekend's hockey program looms as the most important weekend of the year. The unfortunate thing is that many Queen's students will have departed for some holidays and won't see the game. Still, it is expected that a good crowd will be in attendance. Queen's has been playing extremely well in recent games and a strong performance is being counted on especially Friday night. If they can win that one, anything they get Saturday night against Toronto is pure gravy.

Because the official scoring standings did not reach Queen's before presstime, it is not known who is the official scoring leader at the moment. Last week's leader was Jim Sunstrum of Queen's. In the team scoring however, Sunstrum continues to hold the lead but he is faced with a strong challenge from Jim Adair who has been red-hot in recent games. Sunstrum has 16 goals and 16 assists for 32 points in 15 games while Adair, who has played only 9 games, has 12 goals and 17 assists for 29 points. Adair's linemates John Cerre and Dave Hadden also rank in the top five in team scoring.

QUEEN'S SCORING

	G	A	TP
Jim Sunstrum	16	16	32
Jim Adair	12	17	29
Colin Loudon	11	14	25
Dave Hadden	9	10	19
John Cerre	8	7	15
Bob Kindon	8	5	13
Chris Clark	0	12	12
Steve Gross	4	6	10
John Smith	5	5	10
Stu Lang	2	7	9
Craig Shannon	2	6	8
Mike Lynch	1	7	8
Ron White	0	7	7
Norm Goulet	3	4	7
Jim Tittemore	2	5	7
Dave Melloy	2	2	4
Bill White	2	1	3
Dick Dorion	0	1	1
John Jeffrey	0	0	0

One of the major reasons for the team's success this year has been the play of the defense. In recent games it has been much better than we have been accustomed to in the past and it shows in the team's goals against average which now is down to 3.66 goals per game. In the past - even three weeks ago - it was up near 4.5. Goalie Clyde Harris, who has played all but 50 minutes of his team's 15 games to date has a personal average of 3.60, one of his best since coming to Queen's. He ranks about third in the east division.

Team Win: Gaels over Birds 54-49

by Chris Boon

The spectre of the Bartlett Gym claimed its second Ottawa victim Tuesday night when an aroused Gael basketball squad downed the second-place Carleton Ravens 54-49 in an OUAA-East league contest. The Gaels played their finest defensive game of the year, swarming around the Ottawa players, and out-muscling (and hustling) the Ravens on the boards. Paul Howard, playing in his hundredth career game for the Gaels, owned the boards, pulling down 21 rebounds for his highest total this season. Norm Hagarty, in the meantime,was systematically destroying Raven forward John Love. Love had 28 points and 15 rebounds in Ottawa a week ago. He had two points and three rebounds on Tuesday, while Norm led Queen's with 12 points, and hauled in 7 boards to go with Howard's accumulation. 'Nuff said!

Rob Smart was in fine talkative form, directing traffic all over the court, and adding 11 points, while his starting backcourt partner John Keck played the kind of hustling defense he is capable of. John also had 11 points, but more importantly, he took charge of the team on offense when Rob was off the court, waiting for his cohorts to run the plays, and yelling at them when they didn't. Queen's needs this kind of talking. When the Gaels don't get it, they don't win against good teams, and can make bad ones look better than they really are.

While on the subject of talking, a pat on the back of the sparse but vocal crowd in attendance. Some refined heckling seemed to bother both Love and guard John Lefebure, who proceeded to stumble around most of the second half.

The Gaels led by five after the first period and enjoyed a real edge on the Ravens in every department except shots taken. Carleton hit on just 16 of 83 attempts, and many of those were long-range tosses that were fair game for the Gaels' aggressive rebounders. Offensively, Queen's played a very steady, methodical game, taking just 69 shots, but taking good shots. Even when the ball didn't go in, we got some offensive rebounds (for the first time in recent history) and kept the Ravens from working the run-and gun game style they prefer. Except for a brief lapse in the early moments of the second half, Queen's ran the game their way. Everybody, did what they were supposed to do. When Smart or Keck were off, Stu Beck played some fine ball adding 6 points to tough defense.Bruce Hemming collected 8 rebes and four points spelling Howard, while Derek Swinnard tossed in 6 points when Hemming was off and Paul went to centre. I.E., it was a real, live TEAM win. Unfortunately, the playoffs are out of reach for Queen's this year. At least, the team is young.

It will be better next year, if another big man can be found to take over from Howard (out of eligibility) and Hemming (heading for sunny climates.) Meanwhile, the Gaels will finish 5-7 after beating Ryerson Saturday night. It should be fun.

Curling Gals second

Queen's University took second place in the consolation round of the OWIAA curling championships held last Saturday at the University of Guelph. The championship was won by McGill University with Western second and Lutheran third. Waterloo captured top honours in the consolation round.

Queen's upended Carleton 8-2 in their opening game of the tournament but then dropped two close games, 9-6 to Waterloo and 11-8 to McMaster. In both games, the Queen's girls gave up 5 rocks in a single end and were unable to recover. They rallied in their final game, however and squeezed by Guelph 8-7 to finish in second spot.

bews news

by Peter Watts

The return to classes after reading week coincides with the start of the Bews hockey playoffs and a very important matchup will headline the quarter-finals. Commerce '73 and Civil and Math, who have been battling for the lead in the Bews race all year will meet in one of the four quarter-finals. The other three matchups will see Arts '73 meeting Business Grads, Commerce '75 going against Education and Arts '75 meeting Mining. All four series are two-game total-goal affairs.

Rolf Lund has posted the sign-up sheets for the Bews skiing competitions which will be run during the last week in February. The cross country events will be run at the West Campus on Wednesday, February 28th starting at 8 p.m. while the jumping events will take place at Knowlton Lake on Saturday, March 2nd at 2 p.m. The sign-up sheets are on the notice board in the locker room and entries are due by 7 p.m. on Tuesday, February 27th.

Also posted are the lists for the swimming and diving competition. However, athletic sticks for each Bews unit are invited to submit team entries in all events. Individual entries will only be considered if team entries do not fill all the events.

The draws for singles and doubles paddleball, handball, badminton and squash continue. Check the notice boards for more information.

The Graduate Society is running a squash tournament which will employ the British ball instead of the American. The event is open to all Graduate students and post doctorates and will get underway on Monday, February 26th. Entry sheets are posted on the notice board and all entries must be in by Wednesday, February 21st. Doug McLean (local 5579) is the man to contact for more information.

In last Friday's Journal I mistakenly said that only 110 tickets would be available for the Bews Banquet on Sunday, March 18th. The number should have been 140. Tickets are $1.50 each and can be obtained from individual athletic sticks.

Civil and Math continue to cling to their 2300 point lead in the Bews race as the season swings towards the climax. The top ten as of last Friday are:

1.	Civil and Math	32,818
2.	Commerce '73	30,564
3.	PHE	24,426
4.	Mechanical	22,721
5.	Mining	22,075
6.	Commerce'74	20,167
7.	Commerce'75	18,513
8.	Law '74	16,843
9.	Chemical	16,601
10.	Commerce '76	14,840

Gals out in OWIAA B-Ball
OU win 47-46 in last 8 seconds

Hopes for a championship contender in senior girls basketball were dashed last weekend when the girls' suffered a heart-breaking 47-46 loss to Ottawa in Bartlett Gym. The Gals were ahead 46-45 with only 8 seconds to play but a foul brought Colleen Dufresne to the line for Ottawa and the Ottawa girl made both of her foul shots to pull the game out for the Gee Gees. Colleen added 17 more points to giver her 19 for the game. Pat Quigley played standout basketball for Queen's, scoring 14 points while Laney Marshall added 9 and Karen Carson chipped in with 8 points.

Tuesday night, the Gals hosted St. Lawrence University of Canton New York in an exhibition game and scored a rather impressive victory: 77-10 over the visitors. It was 31-10 at the half for Queen's.

Despite the loss to Ottawa, the Gals still travel to Ottawa for the senior "B" tournament to be held next week-end in conjunction with the OWIAA senior basketball championships. The Eastern zone will be represented by Toronto and Laurentian in the championship finals.

backpage backpage backpage

Canadian exports to Europe cheaper

Canada: Devaluation benefits

OTTAWA — The Canadian dollar has floated downward in line with the devaluation of the American currency but at the same time maintained a level slightly higher in terms of the US dollar.

The Canadian dollar is now worth $00.75 cents (US) and it is projected that it could go as high as $1.03 before settling back.

Finance Minister John Turner stated that if anything, the devaluation of the Canadian dollar in line with the American against other world currencies could only benefit Canada. The maintenance at close to parity with the American currency will maintain our relative terms of trade unchanged while the devaluation in terms of other world currencies will make our exports relatively cheaper to other importing nations while Canadians will be faced with higher prices for imports.

Turner stated that Canada will not leave the present floating system for a pegged rate until the unsteady international monetary situation is cleared up with some sort of far-reaching reforms.

OTTAWA — High food prices are expected to get higher according to Federal Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan in his address to the Commons food trends committee.

The committee was recently established to research briefs and hear reports on the current food price hikes. Whelan told the committee that the large increases, which totalled 10 per cent last year were caused mainly by increasing income demands for the top two-thirds of the population cuppled with continued overseas demand.

Herb Gray, Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs told the committee that the government could not reveal a set of contingency wage and price controls which have been drawn up as it would be "against the national interest".

OTTAWA — Liberal House Leader Allan MacEachen told the Commons that if defeated, the government would quit rather than turn the reigns of power over to the Conservatives in view of their even smaller minority in the House.

MacEachen noted that if an amendment comes to the February 19 budget and if that amendment implies non-confidence when the government would accept defeat if the amendment passes.

MONTREAL — Canada's second team of ceasefire observers has been flown out to Vietnam to bring Canadian strength on the International Commission for Control and Supervision to 250. The second team included 113 military observers and eight department of external affairs personnel OTTAWA — Less than a year after their last rate increase Bell Telephone is once again before the Canadian Transport Commission with another application for more money. Then once this one is approved, the CTC will be looking at another proposal from Bell for price increases - this one for next year.

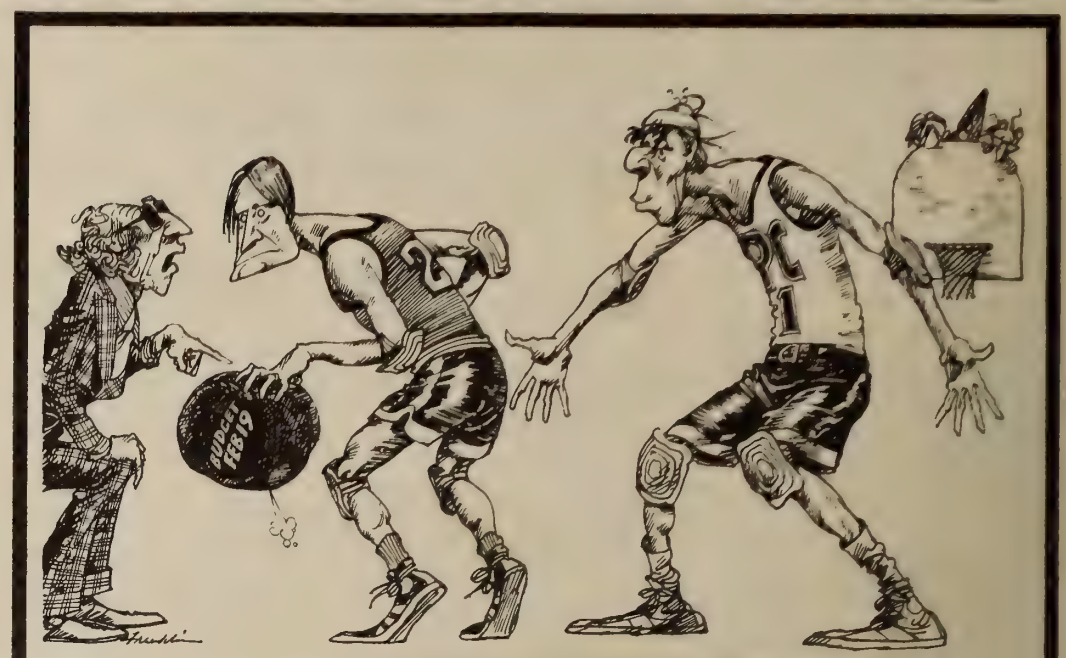
The decision on the current price increase proposals is to be made by next month. Bell claims that telephone service will go rapidly downhill if their demands are not met.

The company went from 1958 to 1969 without any price increases and each year since has been presenting ever larger money demands to the CTC. The increase proposed by this brief and the one for next year would mean an increase in revenue for the company of $121 million, close to three times any other granted increase.

OTTAWA — There has been a high-level shuffle in the federal civil service. Michael Pitfield, a Cabinet aide and advisor of Prime Minister Trudeau has been appointed Deputy Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. Jean Boucher will be switched from his position as Deputy Minister of Supply and Services to become Undersecretary of State, the highest civil service post in that department.

The Prime Minister's office also announced the reappointment of Pierre Juneau to another five-year term as chairman of the CRTC.



TORONTO — Canadian registrations of new passenger cars were up 9.09 per cent in 1972 over 1971. The North American company posting the largest increase was America Motors (Canada) Ltd., whose registrations rose by 21.62 per cent.

Import registrations were down slightly over 1971, from 24.38 per cent to 23.34 per cent. The figures indicate that imports are still very popular, but that North American cars are starting to win back some of the small-car market.

TORONTO — Accidents on icy and snow-covered highways in Ontario declined slightly last year, despite the fact that the use of studded snow tires was forbidden.

According to a provincial study, the number of winter accidents increased sharply, but "the number of collisions which occured on icy or snowpacked roads remained almost the same". Across Ontario, roads were generally more icy in 1971-72 than the previous winter.

The report was made by Peter Smith, an expert on the staff of the Ministry of Transportation and Communication, and author of several reports which led to the provincial government ban on studded snow tires.

'If it won't dribble through, take a long shot and hope!'

KINGSTON — The Queen is coming to Kingston in late June, and arrangements are being made to let as many people as possible see her during her short visit.

According to Mayor George Speal, she will make two appearances during the day, at the Memorial Centre, which has a seating capacity of 4,000 and at Fort Henry, where there is room for 8,000. In the evening, she will be invited to a dinner with 350 guests.

World: US tries to save the dollar

LONDON — The decision by the United States last week to devalue the dollar by 10 per cent against the price of gold has been acclaimed by European monetary authorities as a measure almost certain to resolve the present tidal wave of speculation for the time being.

However, it is felt that the devaluation may turn speculation against other currencies in the long-run, as relative export prices begin to adjust.

The move is expected to pull down world currencies which have been allowed to float outside pegged rates.

These include the Italian lira, the British pound sterling, the Swiss franc, the Japanese yen and the Canadian dollar, already devalued by close to the full 10 per cent.

The devaluation decision was made in an effort to improve the American export position abroad and to halt the flow of American dollars to foreign countries through higher import prices. The current monetary crisis was caused by a surplus of American dollars abroad.

The International Monetary Fund has issued a statement that the United States move will almost certainly bring the world payments into better balance, avoiding the glut of US dollars abroad.

MANILLA — The North Vietnamese and Viet Cong released 143 prisoners of war being held in North Vietnam. The prisoners were immediately flown to the Philippines and afterwards back to the United States.

There are still 341 prisoners in North Vietnamese hands and these will be freed at two week intervals now.

WASHINGTON — The Ford Motor Company has been charged with illegally tampering with 1973 Ford cars while they were undergoing anti-pollution tests under the Environmental Protection Agency.

They were charged with 346 instances of maintenance unauthorized by the agency. In addition it was found that false reports had been filed in applications for certification of four engine types.

Ford had instituted procedures which would have an adverse affect on the test results. Tuneups had not been given to test vehicles until they had close to 50,000 miles of running.

WASHINGTON — As a solution to the present energy crisis which left factories closed and thousands of American homes without heat and light this winter, the American government is researching the feasibility of solar power as a long-term possibility.

Present methods under study include a solar furnace and the use of satellites. The furnace would involve the reflection of solar rays by mirrors onto a boiler which would generate enough heat to turn steam turbines.

The second idea would mean having banks of solar cells in orbiting satellites to absorb and convert solar radiation to microwave energy and then beam it to the earth where it would be converted to electricity.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration has estimated that given sufficient research funds they could produce economical solar power by the year 2020 for 5 per cent of the American heat requirement and 20 per cent of the electrical needs.

It was projected that if the present experiments are successful, solar energy could heat buildings in five years, cool buildings in ten years and produce electricity in ten to fifteen years.

Board postpones fee penalty

The Board of Trustees this weekend approved "without a hitch" the waiving of penalty fees for the late payment of the second installment of tuition.

Previously, there was a charge of $15 if students paid the second installment of fees after the thirty-first of January. Now, no charges will be made until after the 28th of February.

(The second-term fee withholding action to protest government actions in the financing of post-secondary education will end on the same day.)

According to Alma Mater Society External Affairs Commissioner Lyn Whitham, the "termination of the fee-withholding was a big factor in the board's decision to waive the penalty", but she hoped students would not pay until the end of the month in order to "show support for other students across the province who are still withholding their fees."

She indicated that the withholding was being terminated "from a position of strength" and thought "a month-long, well-supported withholding is a more valid protest than a long-term, poorly-supported action," which might result if it were allowed to continue indefinitely.

"We also had to consider the effect on the students," Whitham continued. "We do not, with such a symbolic action, want to jeopardize either students' personal positions or the financial positions of the universities."

Whitham said the withholding, with 2000 students more than last year owing second installment fees, was a "success, in that it informed students across Ontario of the problems, and they were able to make their point. The government now understands our position, and realizes that there are inequities in the student aid programme."

She thought that there will be changes coming in the age of independence and in aid to part time students and also thought the loan ceiling will not be raised, but "we will not know all this until mid-April when the (provincial) budget comes down."

The Board also dealt with non-academic fees for summer school and intersession; the standardization of graduate student fees; the new Queen's logo; and "a lot of other boring financial matters", reported AMS president Greg LeBlanc, one of the student observors on the board.

(Two of the other student representatives on the board, Rector Gary Gannage and former AMS president Patrick Riley, were not available for comment. The other observer, past AMS president Rod Follwell, did not attend any of the weekend meetings.)

LeBlanc, while not sure of all the details, said the trustees approved, "at least in principle", the imposition of a $6 non-academic fee for summer school and intersession students. This sum is roughly proportional to what students pay during the winter session without including Journal, Tricolor, concerts, or university centre.

They also approved in principle the standardization of graduate student tuition fees in what LeBlanc believed was a charge of "so much for a degree and so much for each term of attendance."

University officials would not comment yet on the financial changes made at the Board meeting.

boag

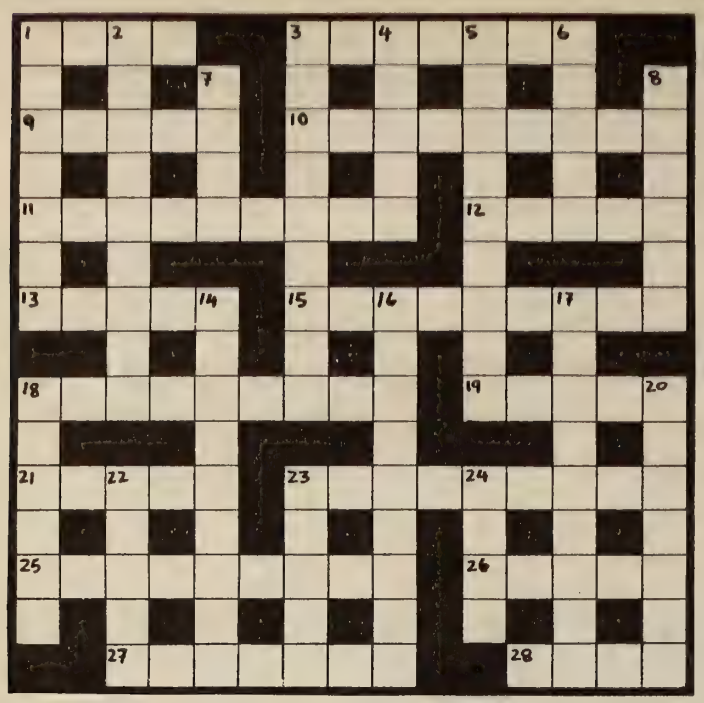
We're on strike ...

Management and staff of the Queen's Journal plan a one day general strike on Friday to protest the lack of things happening on campus; the lack of warm weather; the lack of people on campus; the lack of staff and management at the Journal; and the lack of a printer.

As a result of the strike, the Journal will not appear on Friday. It is expected, however, to appear again on Tuesday, February 27.

When asked about the strike, Editor Jennifer Grass said, "Oh, let them. I'm on strike, too."

Coffee shop



New hours

Because of the depleted numbers on campus during Reading Week and the strong drawing power of the Pub, the coffee bar and the tuck shop in the basement of the Students' Union will be closing at 9:00 pm nightly.

Wallace Hall however, will be open the usual hours.

More New Hours

The main library will be open for its usual hours but the Reserve Room will be closing at 10:00 pm.

ACROSS

1. Sophisticated record player.
3. Since 1945
9. Chromosomes carry them.
10. How to get upstairs if the elevator is broken.
11. Peak of the mountain chain.
12. Melts together such electrical devices.
13. Not old (but not new).
15. The Good one is the only such Semite most people know of.
18. Sub-tropical disease.
19. Wash away bit by bit.
21. Helen Gurley Brown's mag.
23. Popularly, women's lib advocates.
25. Conduct a revolution.
26. Cut away the unneeded dried plum.
27. Big black wild cat.
28. What is the answer to this one?

DOWN

1. Inter-city transit route.
2. Support used particularly in roofs -- not for tying up SOB's (4, 5).
3. With all deliberate speed.
4. Endure.
5. The employed plus the unemployed.
6. One down (plural).
7. He who employs.
8. Is such an instruction so called because it becomes shorter?
14. Cellulose nitrate, etc.
16. Pilgrim ship.
18. Holder of a Ph.D.
20. Least difficult.
22. Rest at night.
23. Laughter.
24. Magnetic material in cartridges.

Solutions in next Tuesday's paper

Striking continues

MONTREAL (CUPI) — About 1500 of the 13,000 students at the Universite Du Quebec at Montreal (UQAM) Wednesday Feb. 14 approved a resolution to continue the strike which has closed the university since Jan. 26.

The students are striking to protest the possible expulsion of about 600 students who owe the university more than $500. About 3,000 UQAM students owe some money to the university and are also eligible for expulsion.

The university set a deadline of Jan. 26 for either payment or expulsion but the Provincial Government intervened and extended the deadline to Feb. 15. But, Feb. 6, the government deadline was suspended and universities were given permission to collect student fees as they saw fit.

The students want to pay their fees after they leave the university and join the labor force. They claim the university's demand for prompt payment discriminates against students from low-income families.

A solidarity meeting of over 700 people Feb. 15 brought together students from UQAM, the Universite De Montreal, Universite De Sherbrooke, and several CEGEP's (community colleges) in an enthusiastic demonstration of support for the fee strike.

On Jan. 31, students at the Universite De Montreal voted to withhold their fees in protest of the Feb. 15 deadline. The U of M administration later backed down and extended the deadline to September, but the students were not satisfied and are now continuing their protests by boycotting classes.

'Z': breakaway school

TORONTO (CUP) — More than 100 Ontario College of Art (OCA) students and teachers moved into new quarters in an old knitting mill Feb. 15.

They have established a new school, called "Z", as the result of protesting the firing of 11 instructors, cuts in the workloads of 11 more, the reintroduction of traditional art school activities (such as first year drawing classes), and basic disagreement as to the role of the art "School".

The students and teachers at Z want to carry on ideas which stress concepts, not skills. Tom Hodgson, one of the chief-organizers of Z, feels Z must orient the student to the situation outside the college through interaction with the community.

Students will work in business apprenticeships to give them practical training and to avoid buying expensive equipment. The students will receive instruction from about 25 teachers from York, University of Toronto, OCA, and some local community colleges.

classifieds

WANTED: A house for five guys for next year. Phone Chris 549-0848.

WANTED DEAD OR ALIVE: All those Journal staffers enjoying their ski week already.

ROOMS AVAILABLE in Science '44 Co-op. If interested phone Ruth Fraser at 544-2793.

ADDIO; HASTALUEGO; ADJO; SAYONARA; AUF WIEDERSEHEN; FAREWELL- no matter how you say it they all add up to the same thing-the Arts formal on March 10.

NEEDED DESPERATELY - A good international dictionary.

SUE: Should be a gas. Doug.

WAKE UP ARTSCI '75, the NEW REGIME is here to get you truckin' harder . . .stay tuned!

THERE IS A LIMITED number of tickets for AUD WIEDERSEHEN so be one of the lucky couples to attend this formal dance at the 401 Inn on March 10. Tickets will go on sale February 25 in the John Orr Room 11:30 to 2:30 every day or just call Pat Sinclair at 544-0264 and reserve one now.

BITTER GROUNDS will be holding their elections for next year's committee on Wednesday March 14 in the Jackson Lounge, Clarke Hall. Anyone interested in working with BITTER GROUNDS or finding out about us, please come to our meetings every Wednesday at 7:00 or drop into bitter grounds some weekend.

FOR SALE: 600x13 tires (snow and summer) - Any offers? Small desk and chair - $10; Brentwood washer spin dryer - $80; Fridge $75; table, $3-5 chairs and buffet $95. Phone Ian Boag at 547-5579.

LET'S MAKE A DEAL - How much would you say a HOT BUFFET DINNER and dance is worth? If you have guessed right then you'll know that $6.00 a couple is a real bargain! The 401 Inn will be the setting for AUF WIEDERSEHEN on March 10, 7:30 to 1:00 am. The profit will be YOURS.

THE LATE PAYMENT fees have been waived until the end of the month. Join other students in protesting the current government financing of higher education. Show your concern with the future of education in Ontario -- WITHHOLD until the 28th.

BEVIE BRATT: Your dirty old uncles John and Peter say the 40 is available any weekend at Vallee Bleue. Usual charges. Beth Babie.

BOON: Morris is picking up box of round corners in TO this weekend. Don't give up.

ATTENTION MR. H. A. WOOD, Newburgh Ontario, Glad to hear that you're letting your hair grow out. Knew you'd come around to our side in the end. Your son. . .

A PRESS NIGHT WITHOUT THE GIRLS isn't a press night. The boys.

MUTRIE HAS GOT A RAUNCHY RIBBON.

PASSPORT OR identification pictures from Photo Image cost only $5.00 for six prints. We guarantee quick service. Call 546-7770 or visit our gallery at 33 Brock St.

ADDY III: when CATHY gets up three times and finds PAT still on the phone to the 154 jiver things are PRETTY BAD!!

EUROPE SUMMER 73 TORONTO to LONDON from $79 one ay or $155 return - Take a dependable charter. Contact AOSC, 44 St. George St., Toronto 5, 416-962-8404 - or your Student Council.

BOOK EARLY AND SAVE - Travelling in Europe INTERNATIONAL STUDENT I.D. card, student railpass, car rentals, cheapest and most dependable charter flights, camping tours etc. all available now from: AOSC, 44 St. George St. Toronto 5, 416,-962-8404. (The Student Travel co-op owned by your Student Council).

EDITOR

Applications for next year's

JOURNAL EDITOR

TRICOLOR EDITOR

JOURNAL BUSINESS MANAGER

will be accepted in the AMS Office until 5 pm Fri. March 2, 1973

YOU'LL FIND JUST A LITTLE BIT OF HEAVEN at

CORNER PRINCESS AT ONTARIO

S & R DISCOUNT DEPARTMENT STORE

FREE PARKING

Heavenly Quality Brand Names
Heavenly Latest Styles

Hellish Low Prices

Everything for Everyone to Wear
And For Your Pad Too!

Clothing, Health and Beauty Aids, Toys, Sporting Goods, Housewares, Kitchen Gadgets, Etc, Etc, Etc, Famous Maker Jeans, Slacks, Jackets, Tops and Shirts for He and She at Special Low Prices.

Canada showed its prejudices

Dr. P. Ward gave a most interesting lecture concerning the causes of anti-orientalism in B.C. during the period 1858 to about 1914 in Watson Hall, Tuesday February 13. He received his Ph-D. at Queen's last year, with the information in this lecture as part of his thesis.

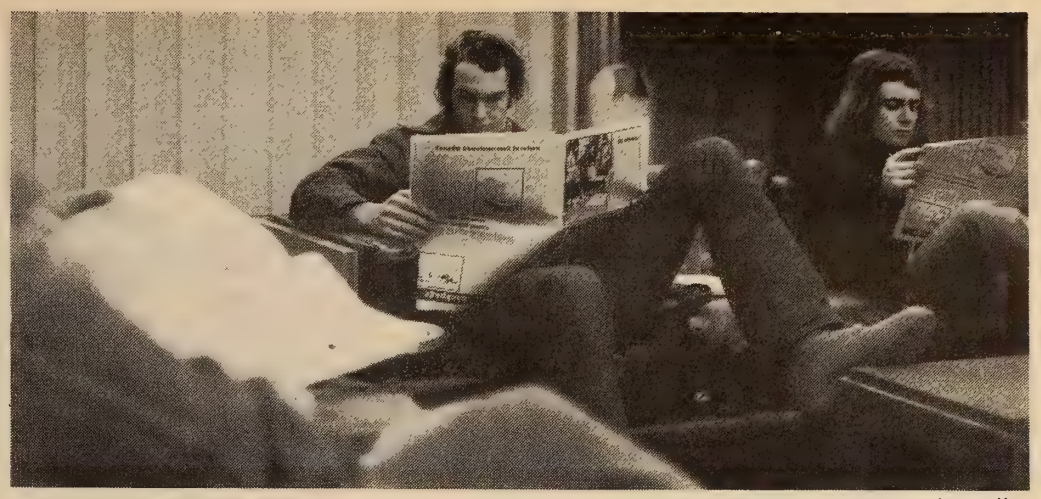
"He (the Chinese) has no common interest with us . . . he gives his labour and gets his money . . . and takes it back to China". So summed up Sir John A. MacDonald, the then Prime Minister of Canada in 1885, the general feelings of the population towards the Chinese in Western Canada. And so, Canada, in one of its periods of discrimination revoked the Chinese immigrants right to vote in Federal elections, followed by various provinces.

How did this little known and carefully shrouded piece of history come to pass? Like many of Canada's problems, this one had its original roots in the United States, and then came to Canada.

The California gold rush in 1848 provided a labour market in California that required cheap unskilled labour for the operation of the mines and the processers. Chinese were used to fill those positions. During the rush, however, certain animosities between the whites and the Chinese emerged; due to language difficulties, social positions and customs. This was the beginning of the base of anti-orientalism for the U.S. and Canada. But this was California, not Canada. When in 1865 the Fraser gold rush became known, many of the prospectors in California rushed to what was to be B.C. with their "coolies", and with the animosities between them. Many of these miners stayed with their after effects once the gold ran out. This was the base for anti-orientalism in B.C. From this time until 1878 Chinese immigration to B.C. increased, and with it the dislike for the Chinese. In fact it grew to such extents that the Chinese Tax Act was imposed by the legislature of that province (B.C. joined confederation in 1871). The Act placed a poll tax on all incoming Chinese. Though it was later repealed, it showed that feelings were rising among the whites. Between 1881 and 1885, the CPR was being built. Again the cry came for cheap labour and again the Chinese were called upon to fulfill the part; as a result Chinese immigration rose and so did the fears and dislike by the whites.

During this time, local by-laws were imposed. A popular conception was that Chinese were extraordinarily unsanitary and a menace to the public health. Undoubtably, this view was enhanced by the newspaper reports of massive plagues in China at that time. The fact that China did not have much medical immunization was conveniently forgotten. Therefore certain laws were passed in various towns in B.C. to impose health regulations. Perhaps the most comic one was a law forbidding Chinese in laundries to squirt water from between their teeth to spray clothing before ironing. They were now required to use atomizers. Other laws included regulations on overcrowding, the then-unorthodox use of human waste as manure for gardens, and their burial custom of digging up a relative's body after it had been interred for a few years and sending the bones to China to rest with those of their ancestors.

The next decade (1895-1905) brought more Chinese and beginnings of Japanese immigration. Hostile feelings rose once again and B.C. laws were passed to forbid Chinese and Japanese immigration; restrictions were placed on their employment especially in the coal mines, where the growing unions did not like their ability to work long for little pay. The Laurier government disallowed these laws, not on humanitarian grounds, but rather on a new political light. Japan was emerging as a power, and Great Britain was involved in negotiations with them. Therefore any offense had to be avoided. In any case the poll tax was raised to $100 per Chinese immigrant and later to $500.



This and a gentleman's agreement with Japan to restrict immigration produced a lull in white sentiments.

These were soon revived in 1907 when Japan overlooked the immigration agreement and permitted 8000 emigrants to travel to Canada. During the early part of September that year an anti-oriental riot occured when a large mob invaded the Chinese and Japanese quarters in Vancouver. Immediate action from the Laurier government brought two Royal Commissions to half-heartedly investigate Chinese and Japanese claims for damages. This was the extent of "official" anti-orientalism up to about 1910.

Why fear orientals?

Mainly B.C.'ers saw these non-white immigrants as a threat to their wilderness. The Chinese and Japanese threatened by creating a non-homogenous element with very different customs and values. The immigrants also did much in becoming an irritant to the labour movement through their cheap labour, which was in direct conflict with the demand for more pay and shorter hours.

Dr. Ward concluded that his research of the above topic indicated conclusively that anti-orientalism in B.C. did not originate as a result of the rising Japanese militarism in 1931, but had its roots going back to 70 years before that.

- hogarth

A campus bi-weekly ritual with 100 years of tradition.

Admissions project

Fifty persons who would not noramlly be admitted as full-time students in the Arts and Science faculty under normal admission criteria, will be attending Queen's this fall. This special program is meant to enable students with academic potential who cannot meet present admission requirements to attend university.

The "Special Admission Project" is in response to continuing pressure on universities to reassess their criteria for admissions in order to enable a wider cross-section of society to attend university.

Any person who will be eighteen as of September 1, 1973, with a minimum of Ontario grade ten, or equivalent, and who is not presently registered as a full-time high-school student was eligible for admission. Candidates will be chosen on the basis of ability, achievement, and motivation as judged from a variety of test, interviews, and other selection procedures scheduled for March and April.

More convocations

Convocation for those completing post-graduate courses may be a separate experimental one this October if a proposal of the Grad School Council is implemented.

The Council hopes to organize three separate convocations in January, May, and October to improve attendance, according to Grad Society president, Doug Pritchard. He explained that grads complete their courses at all times of the year so three separate convocations would "provide them a better chance to attend". Pritchard commented, "ten or eleven months after he completes his thesis the graduate is apt to be anywhere in the world".

Pritchard pointed out that many details still must be worked out: What sort of reception would you have? Would you present honourary degrees here? Would you give someone on the October list an option for another? The motion for implementing these experimental convocations is still to be drafted and presented to Senate.

Stephen LEWIS

speaking on the financing of higher education

Monday, February 26,
4 pm, Polson Room, Union

dunning flicks

7:00 "Buck Privates"
First Abbot & Costello

8:25 "If I Had a Million"
With W C Fields

9:55 "The Old-fashioned Way"
W C Fields as the Great McGonigle

All for $1.00
Thursday, February 22
Dunning Auditorium
--CINEGUILD--

St. LAWRENCE COLLEGE
OF APPLIED ARTS AND TECHNOLOGY

KINGSTON CAMPUS
(613) 544-5400

PORTSMOUTH AVE., KING W.
KINGSTON, ONTARIO

SPECIAL SECRETARIAL CERTIFICATE PROGRAMME

This is a total emersion program in typing, shorthand, and secretarial procedures aimed at providing basic skills for those seeking employment in the business community. It is designed for university level students, students with some post-secondary education, or equivalent work experience, and would not be suitable for the casual student. Over the nine-week period, classes will be 7 hours-day, 5 days per week. It is not expected that there will be room for students wishing to take only a part program.

Prerequisities: All applications approved by S. Graves on special application form (available from Cont. Ed. Dept.). Course is very intensive and demands evidence of ability to cope with material quickly - hence requirement for appropriate academic or work experience.

Fee: $75.
Date: April 30 - June 29
Registration can take place daily Mon. - Thur. 9:00 - 9:00, Fri. 9:00 - 4:30 at the Continuing Education Department or by mail at P.O. Box 6000.

Pizza Chalet

236 MONTREAL ST. KINGSTON

544-1227

OPEN MON. TUES WED. 4:00 p.m. to 1:00 a.m.
OPEN ALL DAY SUNDAY 12 – 12
OPEN THURS. FRI. SAT. 4:00 p.m. to 2:00 a.m.

Chalet Deluxe EXTRA LARGE
Pepperoni- Mushrooms- Bacon Sausage- Green Peppers- Olive Cheese- Tomato Sauce $5.50
BIGGEST PIZZA YOU'VE EVER SEEN!

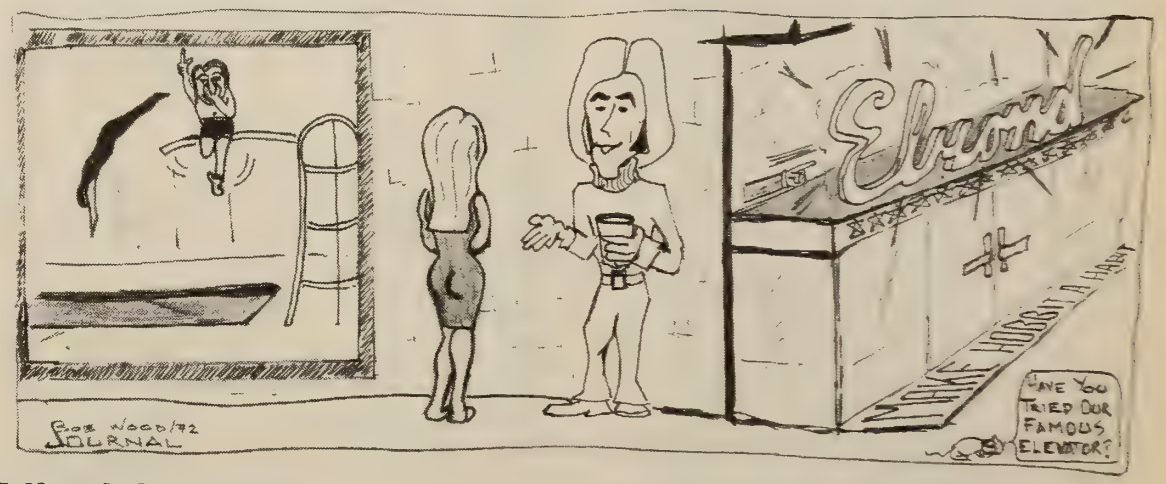
SELECTION WITH CHEESE & TOMATO SAUCE	11" REG	13" MED	15" LGE	SUPER 17" X-LGE
1. Pepperoni-Mushrooms-Bacon-Green Peppers Sausages-Olive	2.50	3.65	4.55	5.50
2. Pepperoni-Mushrooms	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
3. Pepperoni-Bacon	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
4. Mushrooms-Bacon	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85

letters

Money, money, money

Congratulations, Mr. Winnett. In a world where people are so often reduced to cold numbers, you have taken us one step farther. You have packaged us into even colder dollars and cents. Elrond is not a college; Elrond is one giant bank account. $3,373,000. $85,000. $25,000.

Numbers fascinate you, do they, Mr. Winnett? I have some for you. Your article presented fifteen questions, seven directly about our financial state. Five more were handled from a monetary point of view. Only three did not involve our finances, but made up for that by not having anything to do with the residents either.



What the hell happened to the people? 320 people live at Elrond. Where were they in your article? You spent all afternoon in our building, and yet you learned nothing about us, nothing about the PEOPLE. You would have done better to ride our "famous Elrond elevator" all day, or watch a kitchen full of kids feed 150 people, or just sit in the lobby.

Elrond is more than a "Hotel Hobbit". We work together, live together, have parties, go to meetings, and try to think like an elevator with brain damage. We are not co-operativism fanatics, but ordinary people trying to be a community. We are more than a budget.

Susan Lorimer
Gail Behrend
Debbie McLaughlin

P.S. You should see John Blanchard's "spacious" office when a dozen people cram into that unventilated corner for a board meeting.

Ed. Note: Our intent in the aforementioned article was to deal with one isolated aspect at the college, the financial situation. Several articles and features have already been devoted to "living in Elrond."

Secretary syndrome

Dear Editor,

I would like to express my disgust in an attitude which seems to be prevalent among a few of the secretaries and receptionists in the various Applied Science Offices around campus.

It seems to me that I have felt very badly about going to set up an appointment with a Faculty Officer or Professor, for fear that I will be forced to trouble his secretary, who gives me the impression that setting up an appointment or imprinting an "Academic Change Form" is the equivalent amount of work as typing three thousand envelopes.

What really angered me was the way in which a friend of mine was treated when he went to get an "Application to Continue in an interupted Program". When he went to one office the secretary made the comment "What's wrong are you going to fail?" in a very condescending way. He was then instructed to go to another office, when he went there he was greeted by another secretary who came out with the comment "You're going to quit, eh!" Fortunately he is a very good student and needs the form in order to take a special course elsewhere next year.

What would happen if this had happened to a student who was failing. The last thing he would need is some nice little grinning piece of spice to throw a bit more salt in an already deep wound.

On the other hand I have had the good fortune of being helped by just as many other secretaries who could not be of more assistance if they tried, I am only disappointed that

Editorial enrages

Dear Editor,

It is about time you took a look at your actions. You have now run your second editorial relating to politics on campus (Whitham-Sugar etc.) The first was equipped with an obvious attempt to make excuses for the editorial so that most people would then condone what you did. Many didn't. It was followed by a relatively large barrage of material about your action, some 'for', some 'against'. The 'for' made comments that needed acknowledgement. (I suspect that some of the 'for' was solicited, since mention of impeachment, among other things, was made in two letters, one in rebuttal to the other, and both printed in the same issue.) The 'against' pointed out factors which in everybody's interest should have been acknowledged. Enter: the second editorial. Result: no such acknowledgement.

I will briefly discuss two points which are important. I must state in all honesty that I knew neither member of either team personally or otherwise, and still don't. So do not accuse me of objecting to your action due to my political preferences.

Firstly - there is a great deal of difference between the Journal and a newspaper such as the Whig-Standard, the Toronto Star etc. The latter are essentially businesses owned by one or more persons, through which their opinions are expressed in the editorials. (It is no secret which paper supports which party in say, a federal election.) But if one does not like it, one does not have to buy the paper at the newstand or whatever. However, the Journal receives automatically, $3.00 from each student for its financial support. And you are not the owner - two reasons why one cannot equate 'Journal Newspaper' to 'Star Newspaper', and why you don't have the right to pull such an editorial caper. Ever figure out how fast the Journal would go broke if sold in corner newspaper boxes alone?

Secondly - I must bring up a topic I very much dislike - Power Plays. Whether it was intentional or not, the first editorial stunk of a power play move. You as editor of the major campus newspaper have a great control over what the general student body gets to read - especially those who are easily persuaded or those who vote for the most 'covered' team. Don't kid yourself, there are many of them - that's why you wrote the editorial. Many complain about the number of acclamations this year. How about the day when no one will run against someone because they lack the editor's support? How about the day when the editor of the Journal actually laugh. It's not far away at this rate.

The idea smells Ms. Grass! The fact that you failed to counter any allegation against your first editorial (eg. unsubstantiated statements - they were a bit rich you know!) along with painting emotive pictures of 'hypocrisy' and 'bent principles' and stating that those against the editorial just disagreed politically (I failed to find statements to support that) only shows the real Power Play involved.

The Journal has an important role in supplying students with information about campus and world events. But it has to work for the supporter's benefit in general, not the selfish interests of a few.

Let's hope that his episode does not repeat itself!

Sincerely,
Thomas Muir

Biscuit blues banished

Dear Editor,

Well, it seems the fee-withholding strike has completely had the biscuit. What a shame, just when we really had a chance to get somewhere with it.

Still, although we may not have slain the Philistine, we have at last made our voices heard. Now, just to show what good-natured sports we are, let's all go down to Richardson Hall and pay our tuition fees in Frontenac Dollars.

Yours truly,
Edward Smith

Clinic commended

Dear Miss Grass,

The Canadian Red Cross would like to thank the eight hundred and sixty members of Queen's who generously donated their blood at the clinic held on the 6th to 8th of February-73. These donations exceeded those of February-72 by forty units.

The Engineering Society and its Secretary, Mr. Steve Tovee are to be commended for organizing the publicity and the staffing of the clinic with voluntary workers. It is only by this combination of blood donors and voluntary assistance in the clinics that blood can be made available free to the sick and injured throughout Canada.

The Red Cross is also grateful to those students who offered their blood but were unable to contribute for various reasons.

The next blood donors' clinic will be held on 2nd, 3rd and 4th of October. We look forward to the usual generous

7. Pepperoni	1.85	2.60	3.65	4.65
8. Cheese	1.75	2.40	2.95	3.90
9. Mushrooms	1.85	2.60	3.65	4.65

Combination Special Pepperoni- Olive Mushrooms- Green Peppers $3.95
A LARGE PIZZA SURE TO PLEASE

Commission on Canadian Studies

The Commission

The Commission on Canadian Studies has been established by the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada, with the support of the Canada Council, to study and report on the state of teaching and research in studies relating to Canada at Canadian Universities.

Terms of Reference

To study, report, and make recommendations upon the state of teaching and research in the various fields of study relating to Canada at Canadian Universites.

Without restricting the generality of the foregoing, the Commission should inquire into the following matters:

1. the number and content of courses offered at the undergraduate and graduate levels in the various fields of study relating to Canada;
2. the location, nature, and function of programs and institutes concerned with Canadian studies;
3. the location, and extent of library holdings and other resource materials relevant to Canadian studies, and access to these materials.
4. the sources, nature, and adequacy of financial support for the teaching of Canadian studies;
5. the opportunities and support for research in Canadian Studies;
6. the scope of present and future requirements for qualified personnel for teaching and research in Canadian studies;
7. the possibilities and needs for new programs and future directions in studies relating to Canada at the university level;
8. any other related matters.

Submission of Briefs

The Commission welcomes briefs from individuals and groups interested in the field of Canadian studies. Briefs may be submitted on any topic, or range of topics, related to Canadian studies. The author of each brief should be clearly identified.

It would be helpful however, if recommendations were as specific as possible. A summary of recommendations and conclusions would be particularly appreciated if the brief is over ten pages in length.

It would be appreciated if briefs could be sent to the Commission's offices by 28 February, 1973. However, the Commission will be glad to consider briefs and submissions from interested individuals and groups up to the time of the writing of its report.

Any inquiries concerning the work of the Commission would be very welcome. These should be sent to the address below.

Commission On Canadian Studies
314 Rubidge St.,
Peterborough, Ont. K9J-3P4 Tel. 705-743-0361

Tree Termination

Dear Editor,

Is 1973 to be a repeat performance of Tricolor '72's "Year of the Stump"? Several gigantic trees have been felled this week in Residence areas, much to the chagrin of tree lovers. I realize, of course, that these diseased trees have died, but are we losing any for the sake of progress? Will the campus remain a denuded hodge-podge of new and old gray buildings dominated by ugly, noisy construction sites, horrendous cranes and unsightly blotchy bill-boards?

I want to know what steps are planned for replanting or transferring young trees (when warmer weather permits) to presently devastated sites. Let's not forget aesthetics, Mr. Thrift (Queen's Campus Planner). Queen's is or was famous for its beautifully shaded, landscaped campus, but merit for that fame seems to be rapidly disintegrating. We have to live here, remember.

Doug Christenson

Ed. Note: Shane wonders too.

Queen's Journal
Vol. 100, No. 40
Tues., Feb. 20, 1973
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ont.

Editor: Jennifer Grass
Business: Charles Schwier
Management: John Solman
Arts: Sandy Naiman
Features: Pat Devitt, Steven Winett
Passepartout: Bob Wood
News: Susan de Stein
Events: Alison Dandie
Sports: Chris Boon, Nada Bogdanovic
National Desk: Bob Mutrie, Sue Wishart
Photography: Peter Boag

Well, they're breaking up that old gang of ours tonite .....
Meanwhile Helen held the fort until the MCPs arrived to do the paper on a slack of slack pressdays.....Bob and Bob did the news and etc.....someone did the days.....Peter (ailing) and Chris were in for jock duty ..... Brown wandered through with some dubious photos ..... Gian did the real ones.....Lee and the cat came to visit.....and we let the phone ring all nite after the Cornwall correspondent got burned with the law ..... we need keepers on a day like this ..... oh well, tomorrow Prescott, then the world.

Published twice weekly on Tuesdays and Fridays by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc., Member, Canadian University Press. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society of the University. Offices are located in the Student's Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

Late payment penalties have been waived until February 28th

Support other students, don't pay until the end of the month

THE AMS URGES YOU TO WITHHOLD FEES

slackdays

Wednesday, February 21

Escott M. Reid, Skelton-Clark Fellow for 1972-1973 at Queen's will deliver his first public address since arriving on campus in November. His topic will be "The Experiment at Glendon College". Glendon was established as an experiment in combining Canada's French and Engish cultures in a small liberal arts college (about 1400 students). Mr. Reid will discuss Glendon's goal, successes and failures and his argument that such colleges should be federal rather than provincial responsibilities. The Newman Annual Dinner will be held at Holiday Inn. Cocktails (cash bar) are at 6:30 pm; dinner is at 7:30 pm. On Campus thay are available from Helen Coffey, Douglas Library (6637) or Cathy Perkins, Alumni Office (5706).

Thursday, February 22

7:30 - 9:00 pm - Medical Sciences Lecture Series presents Dr. Kenneth J. Mackinnon (prof. of Surgery) (Urology), McGill Univ., M.R.C. Visiting Prof. Lecture is on Renal Transplantation: Results with over 200 cases. Etherington Hall Auditorium.

7:30 pm - The Bridge Club will be meeting as usual in the McLaughlin Room, Students' Union.

Friday, February 23

8:00 pm - G.S.S. Film Club presents Milky Way. (Luis Bunuel). Ellis Hall Aud.

Sunday, February 25

There will be no University Service in Morgan Memorial Chapel.

Monday, February 26

4:00 - Stephen Lewis, Leader of the Ontario New Democratic Party, will be discussing issues in the financing of post secondary education in the Polson Room, Students Union.

Tuesday, February 27

8:00 pm - Sociology Smoker. Pub at Students Union. Beer 45c. Free coffee and donuts.

8:30 - "The cult of the leader in Art - Napolean, Stalin, Mao", lecture by Prof. J A Lieth in Room 517 Watson Hall.

CFRC AM Highlights

Thursday Feb. 22
7:30 The Goon Show. Comedy from the BBC with Spike Milligan, Harry Secombe and Peter Sellers. 'The Great Bank Robbery".

Friday Feb. 23
8:30 Friday Music Hall. An uptempo program of comedy and light music.

Saturday Feb. 24
8:00 Music Canada. Canadian artists and orchestras perform a wide-ranging repertoire of classical music. This evening some sonatas by Handal and Bach.

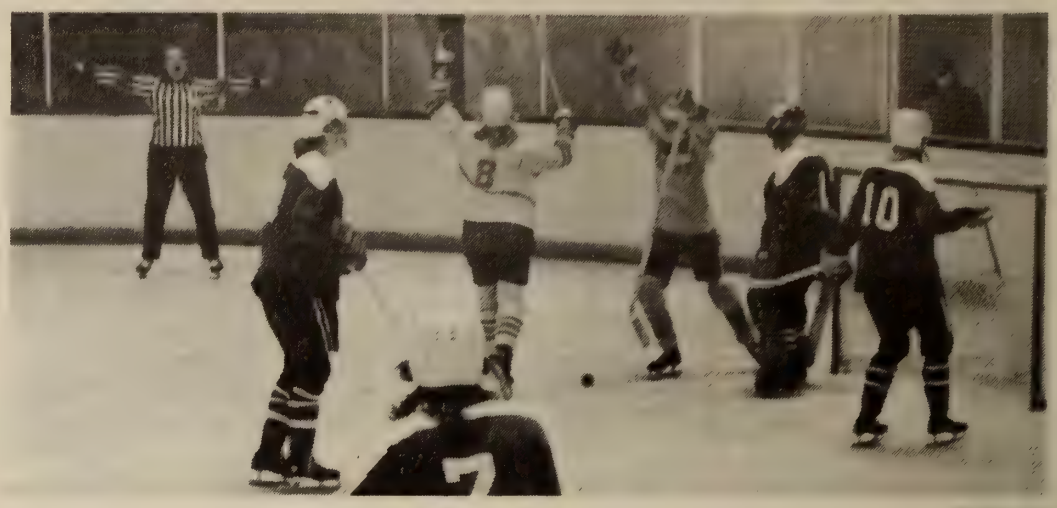
Saturday Feb. 25
12:00 noon Classics by request. A selection of our listeners' favourite classical music. To have your request played please call 547-6677 after 11:45 a.m.

First title in 42 years!

Hockey Gals win it all

by Peter Watts

Queen's Golden Gals captured their first ice hockey championship in more than four decades on Saturday as they defeated the University of Western Ontario 5-1 before several hundred delighted fans at the Harty Arena. The victory capped an almost perfect season for the girls who finished the regular schedule in first place with 10 wins and a tie in twelve games. On Friday morning, the Gals defeated fourth place York 4-1 to gain a berth in the championship final. Western qualified for the final game by defeating Guelph 3-2.



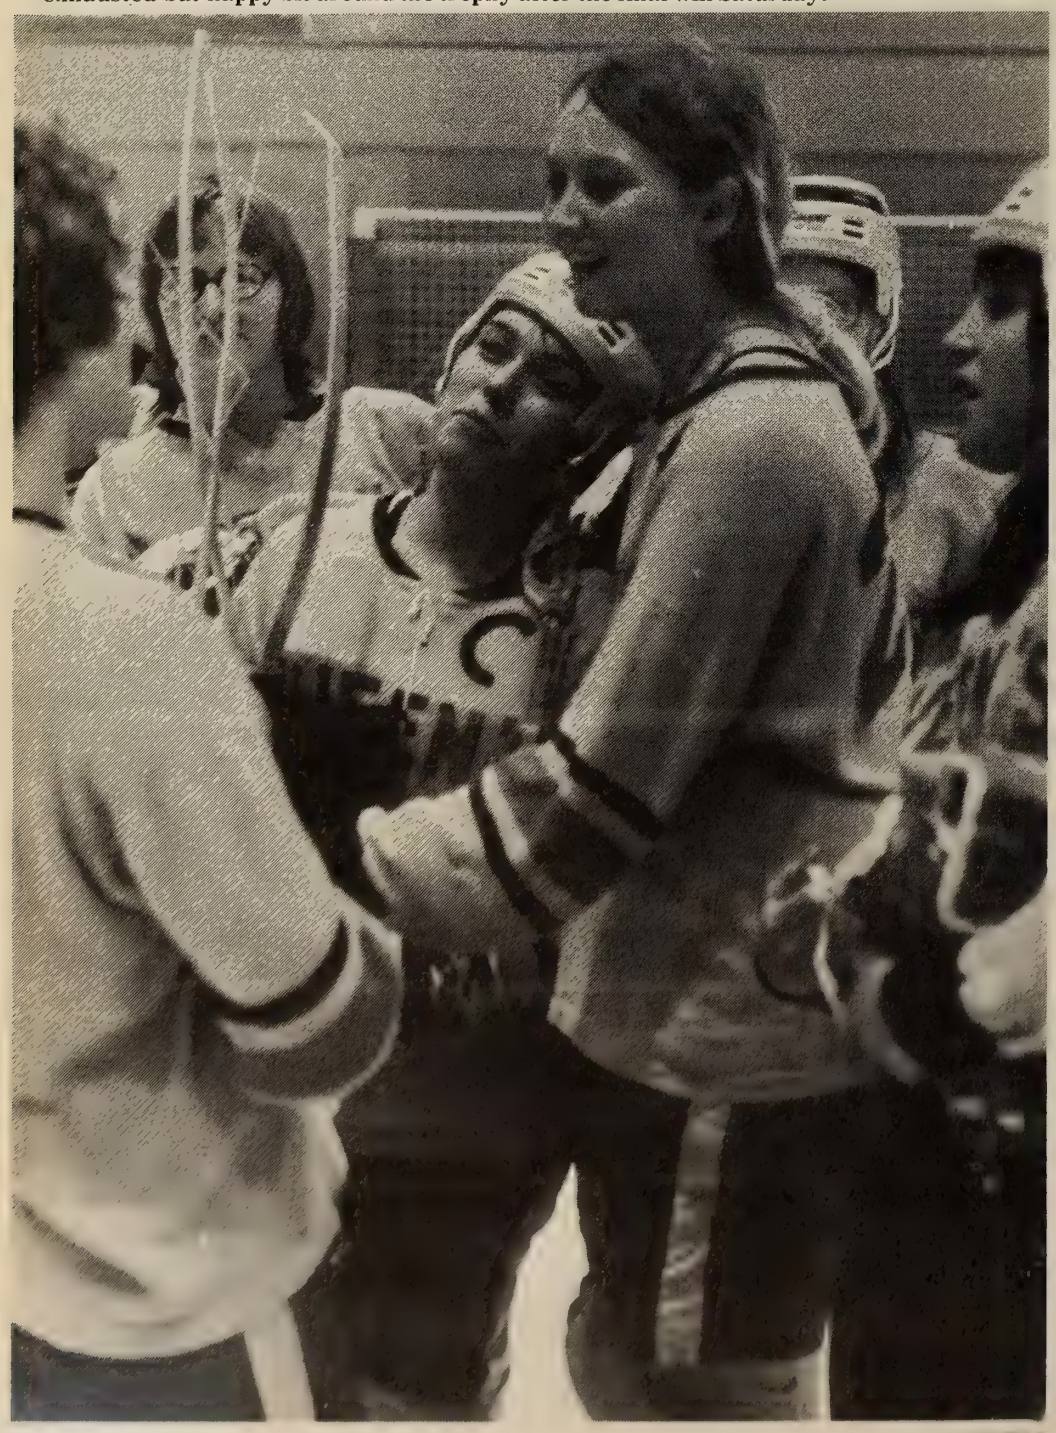
A total of seven teams took part in the two-day competition. Four teams: Queen's, Western, Guelph and York had qualified for the championship by virtue of finishing in the top four spots in the regular schedule. The other three teams, Toronto, McGill and McMaster, played a round-robin tournament, meeting each other once.

A taste of things to come became clear in the first game on Friday morning which saw McGill squeeze by McMaster 3-2 in the second overtime period. Sue Paquette, Helen Caldwell and Pat Johansson scored for McGill while Marg Nimmo got both of the McMaster goals.

The second game saw Queen's beat York 4-1. Lesley Ferrari, Deb McCaw, Wendy Carmen and Gail McLeod scored for Queen's while Judy Goodhead replied for York.

The third game was, as everyone exected a very close one, pitting second place Western against third place Guelph. Guelph won the ice hockey championship last year. This time though, Western won by a score of 3-2. Mary Lou Gjos, Colleen Brinkman, and Kris Gjos scored for Western and Holly Law got both of the Guelph goals.

The fourth game was between Toronto and McMaster and featured a great individual performance by Marg Goldsmith. The Toronto girl scored three times to lead the Blues to a 6-0 victory over McMaster. Ann Milburn added 2 more for Toronto and Diane Gilmour got the other goal. Louise Attalah recorded the shutout, stopping 19 shots.



mossman

Queen's star Leslie Ferrari (8) tosses hands in the air after potting her second goal against Western.

On Saturday, Toronto shutout McGill 4-0 and Guelph topped York 4-0 in the consolation game. That set the stage for the Championship game between Queen's and Western. Despite the fact that everyone expected a close game, Queen's had little trouble, defeating Western 5-1 to win the championship. Lesley Ferrari led the Gals attack with 2 goals, while Ginny Backus, Gail Wood and Gwen Harrison added single markers and Liz Wood contributed four assists. Queen's were kept in the game by the fine performance of goalie Wanda Gyde who was beaten only by Jan Walters.

It was a fitting end to a fine season for the Gals and we congratulate them on their fine performance. Several members of the team, among them Ginny Backus, Jane Kirby, Deb Gilmour, Karen Howatson, and Liz Wood, will be graduating this spring so coach Cookie Cartwright will have a big rebuilding job next fall.

Ah, the ecstasy of victory! Gals captain Debbie Gilmour and her teammates do the exhausted-but-happy bit around the trophy after the final win Saturday.

mossman

Figure-Skaters win second OWIAA crown in three years

A superb team effort led the Queen's figure skating team to a strong victory over second-place U. of T. Saturday. The Gals accumulated 7 firsts and 5 seconds out of 13 events to edge Varsity 108-96, while third-place McMaster was far back with 56 points.

The Gals won both the Junior and Senior Dance and Jr. and Sr. Similar Pairs competitions, the Junior Mixed Dance, the Intermediate Singles, and the Synchronized Skating. Their only placing below a second came in the Junior Singles, where the competition was extremely close.

Queen's dominance in OWIAA Figure Skating is not a recent thing. The Gals have been either first or second in the competition since its inception as a league sport three years ago, and show no signs of slipping. Our congratulations for a job well done.

OWIAA FIGURE SKATING CHAMPIONSHIPS

Queen's Results:

Jr. Dance - Janet Cox, Carol Farquharson - 1st
Sr. Dance - Mary Bythell, Deb Milligan - 1st
Open Dance - Nancy McLaughlin, Kathy Martin - 2nd
Jr. Mixed Dance - Carol Farquhason, John Rayner - 1st
Sr. Mixed Dance - Kathy Martin, Steve Sugar - 2nd
Jr. Similar Pairs - Janet Cox, Deb Milligan - 1st
Sr. Similar Pairs - Sue Drowley, Kathy Martin - 1st
Novince Ladies Singles - Carol Farquharson - 2nd
Junior Ladies Singles - Mary Bythell - 4th
Inter. Ladies Singles - Sue Drowley - 1st
Senior Ladies Singles - Kathy Martin - 2nd
Formation: Nancy McLaughlin, Janet Cox, Kathy Martin, Deb Milligan - 2nd Synchro: Queen's team - 1st.

Hockey Gaels make playoffs "?"

by Peter Watts

With just a week left in the regular schedule, Queen's hockey Gaels still do not know if they have made the play-offs or who they will be playing if they finish in the top four. The Gaels, however, took steps to acquire a playoff spot on Friday night with a 6-3 victory over York Yeomen before more than 1800 fans at the Harty Arena. The Gaels struck for three goals in less than two minutes in building up a 4-0 lead over the Yeomen after the first twenty minutes. Dave Hadden, Craig Shannon, Norm Goulet and Colin Loudon scored in the first period for the Gaels. But then the team went into a shell and York nearly pulled out a victory, getting two goals in the second and adding another one early in the third. John Hurst, Gerri Greenham and Al Avery counted for the Yeomen with Avery's goal putting the Yeomen within one goal of tying the score. However, Queen's was not to be denied as John Cerre and Loudon with his second goal of the night put the game out of reach late in the third period.

Saturday night, however, was a different story. I suspect that the Gaels were mentally exhausted from the York game, a game which they knew they had to win to stay ahead of Ottawa. Suffice it to say that Toronto won the Saturday night encounter by a score of 9-3. The Blues had no trouble at all rolling up their fifteenth consecutive league victory of the season. They led 4-1 after one period and were ahead 6-2 after the second. Kent Ruhnke and Gord Davies led the Blues attack with 2 goals each. Singles went to Bob Munro, Bill Buba, Bill Fifield, Don Pagnutti and Nick Holmes. Colin Loudon scored twice for the Gaels and Jim Adair added the other goal. The Blues pumped 40 shots at goalie Clyde Harris who was left alone in front of the net on innumerable occassions and who had little or no chance on any of the Toronto goals.

We must not be too hard on the Gaels, however. The University of Toronto Blues are undoubtedly the best intercollegiate hockey team in the country. They all skate hard and well all the time. When they take a pass, it is in full stride. Their tendency is to move the puck up the wings and they are blessed with a half dozen strong wingers who can skate like the wind and who can make things very difficult for anyone who can't keep up. Unfortunately, Queen's was not able to stop this type of offense. They should not feel too badly about this however because no one except the Cornell team from New York State has been able to stop them either.

On a different note, reporters are often criticized for being overly critical of teams, officials, executives or whatever. However, it is very hard to understand why the sudden-death semi-final games were scheduled in the middle of the week instead of on a weekend. As matters stand, if Queen's finishes third and Laurentian finishes second, Queen's will be going to Sudbury to meet the Voyageurs on Tuesday February 27th. That means that the team will have to leave early Monday evening and won't return home until early Wednesday morning. At this time of year, the prospects of losing two days classes are not particularly attractive. Furthermore, next year's preliminary hockey schedule calls for Queen's to play Brock University in St. Catherines on a Thursday night. It's bad enough when we have to go to Ottawa in the middle of the week. But a jaunt up to St. Catherines which is about 250 miles is ridiculous.

At any rate, the only way Queen's will miss the playoffs is if Ottawa wins all three of their remaining games and York beats Toronto on Wednesday. Since the Yeomen have lost right winger Barry Jenkins and centre Paul Cerre, their chances of beating Toronto are remote. By the time you read this, Ottawa will have played Guelph and Laurentian and it is unlikely that they will win both of those games. Therefore, it seems that Queen's is likely in the playoffs. The questions to be decided are who and where we are playing. Regardless, the Gaels finished the regular season with a 10-6-1 mark, considerably better than last years 8-10-1 record. That in itself has to be considered a significant accomplishment.

Gaels' captain Colin Loudin gets ready to score in first period against York. mossman

sports shorts

B-Ball Gaels lose to Ryerson in season finale

"They played well enough to deserve the win." That was the way one Queen's veterans described their 74-56 loss to the Ryerson Rams in Toronto Saturday afternoon. How the Gaels played barely deserves comment. Suffice it to say that Queen's went for the incredible stretch of eleven and a half minutes in the second half, without scoring a single point. Not a foul shot, not a field goal, nothing. Eleven and a half minutes. Think about it, sports fans.

The Gaels had led by one at the half, with Paul Howard hitting 11 of his 13 points and Rob Smart all 10 of his in the opening period. Then the roof fell in, utterly and completely. Only ten points by Ken Sagadore (who can shoot, if he gets the shot off at all) in the dying minutes kept the score as close as it was.

That finishes things off for Queen's basketball this season, and it may be a very merciful thing. This team has played well as a team twice, against Ottawa U. and Carleton here. They won both games. That is what they were capable of. That is not what they were. It's really too bad.

Jarvis, Becke pace track Gaels

Dave Jarvis and Axel Becke turned in top performances at the University of Toronto Invitational Track and Field Meet held Saturday at the CNE. Jarvis won the 50 metre hurdles in a time of 6.9 seconds.Don Price was second in a time of 7.2 and rookie Mark McCauley finished fourth just a tenth of a second behind. Becke picked up another first in the long jump with a leap of 22 feet 3¾ inches. Jarvis also picked up a second in the 300 metre run finishing a tenth of a second behind the winner, Tony Powell of York. Bill Bryden was Queen's top placer in the 3,000 metres, finishing seventh.

Coach Rolf Lund mixed his team in various events trying to see whether individuals could help the team standings in various other events. He told the Journal that the top two competitors in each event would be selected to the Ontario team that competes in the national open championships in Quebec City on March 17th. The top two will be determined next weekend when the Ontario Open Championships will be held in Toronto.

Brace best for Gals

The women's swim team took part in the OWIAA swimming and diving championships held Saturday at McMaster. Team captain Cathy Brace was Queen's top performer picking up a third in the 50 yard sprint, and getting her best time in 5 years. She also got a fifth in the 200 yard breaststroke and it is expected that her times in both of these events will be good enough to qualify her for the national finals next month in Calgary. Other strong performances were also turned in by Ianna Swam and Beth Randle, as Queen's placed 8th in the Team Competition.

classified

WOODIE CLAIMS that the Journal office needs a bigger BOX.

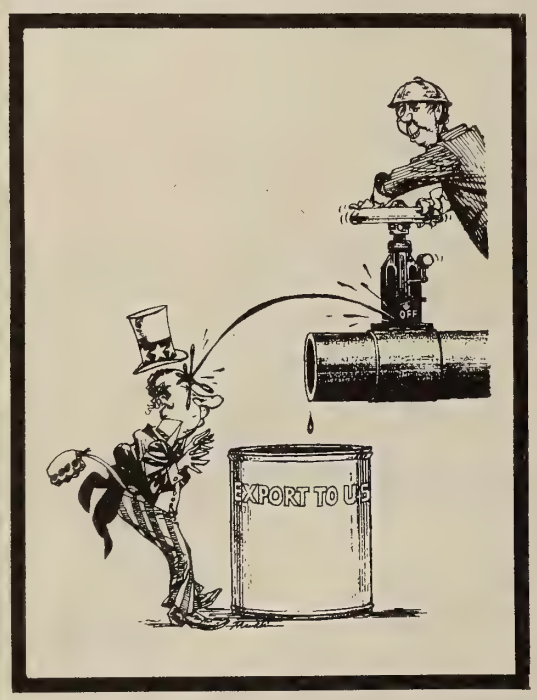
SCOOP JACKSON IN NO WAY qualifies for the VIRGINITY SQUAD.

LYN --- special delivery Journals are worth something.

KILORAN and STEVE: You have a number of posters to put up.

WANTED URGENTLY: One rector to report on Board meeting.

Oil exports



Canada: US Funnel plugged

OTTAWA — Alarmed by increasing American demands for Canadian oil, the Cabinet has placed controls on exports of crude oil.

Energy Minister Donald Macdonald told a Commons standing committee that the controls, which will come into effect at the beginning of March, are intended to prevent a shortage of Canadian oil for domestic refiners. Due to soaring American energy needs, oil exports from Alberta have been so high recently that a Canadian shortage was forecast. American demand has forced crude oil exports above one million barrels a day.

Three weeks ago, Macdonald warned that export limits would be established unless oil companies moved voluntarily to curtail exports, but the move was still generally regarded as a surprise. Imposition of the controls, the first since 1959, was recommended by the National Energy Board.

The decision to control western oil exports prompted several MP's to ask the government to guarantee oil supplies in Eastern Canada. One member suggested that all exports should be halted until offshore oil supplies in the East are assured.

OTTAWA — The federal government has agreed to negotiate the land claims and demands of Yukon Indians, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau announced last week. A delegation from the Yukon Native Brotherhood was both surprised and delighted by the decision.

The Yukon Indians, who are not covered by treaties, submitted a brief to the government calling for lump cash settlements, land grants, and royalties on gas, oil and mineral developments on their lands. They seem to be hoping for a settlement similar to one reached between Alaskan natives and the U.S. government in which the Alaskans received $1-billion in cash and royalties and 40 million acres of land.

The Indians' claims will be studied by a fifteen-member committee composed of seven representatives chosen by the Indians, seven from Ottawa and a jointly chosen chairman.

The government's willingness to negotiate is an apparent reversal of policy outlined in a 1969 white paper which denied that non-treaty Indians have aboriginal land rights.

OTTAWA — After two years of negotiations, Canada and Cuba have signed a treaty which is designed to discourage airplane hijackings.

According to External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, the terms of the treaty give each country two alternatives if a hijacker lands on its territory - he can be returned or he can be detained to face prosecution.

The treaty covers the hijacking of ships as well as planes, but this part of the agreement is expected to apply more to the United States than to Canada. The Cubans and Americans signed a virtually identical pact the same day.

A small loophole in the accord could let political hijackers escape punishment. One article states that each country may consider any extenuating circumstances where the hijacking is a purely political act committed by someone facing imminent death with no other means of leaving the country. Sharp claims that both Canda and Cuba believe that this would apply to only "one hijacking in a thousand".

KINGSTON — Kingston had the fourth-highest number of abortions in Ontario in 1971, according to a survey in the Sault Ste. Marie Star. There were 488 abortions performed at Kingston General Hospital in 1971, or 10.67 per 100 live births. This was lower than the provincial average of 12 abortins for every 100 babies born. KGH is the only local hospital where abortions are performed.

Only the cities of Toronto, London and Hamilton had higher abortion rates than Kingston. London was the "abortion capital" of the province with 1,380 abortions, or 27.3 per 100 live births.

MONTREAL — French should become the working language of Quebec. This is the main recommendation of the Gendron Commission, a group appointed four years ago to study Quebec's language problems and suggest solutions. A copy of the reports was leaked to the Montreal daily Le Devoir last week.

The Gendron Commission report says that French should be Quebec's only official language, while English and French should both be "national" languages. This gives slight priority to French in Quebec.

Jean-Denis Gendron, chairman of the commission, indicated that the phasing-in of French as the main language in work and commerce is the only human solution to Quebec's language problems. He claimed that action must be taken now or social unrest will persist.

Some members of the commission advocated the abolition of English-language schools in the province, but Gendron persuaded them to refrain from such drastic action. The commission "decided to see if people are reasonable" said Gendron.

Most Quebec observers see the report's recommendations as anything but radical, tending on the whole to confirm the government's moderate stand.

OTTAWA — A move to have February 15 designated as Flag Day and a legal holiday was thwarted at least temporarily last week by the patriotism of several MP's. NDP member Edward Nelson made the proposal to commemorate the first raising of the maple leaf flag on February 15, 1965. According to plan, the motion should then have been voted on, but several MP's made speeches to explain what the flag meant to them. When they had finished, there was no time to vote on the bill.

The legislation for Flag Day and a motion to have a legal holiday in honour of Sir John A. Macdonald's January 11 birthday will be considered later.

February 15, the eighth anniversary of the new flag, was the first time it has been displayed in the House of Commons.

KINGSTON — Taxi drivers and owners are "scrambling to make a living" according to one city driver. With 140 taxis in Kingston, a higher ratio per person than either Toronto or Ottawa, the Kingston Taxi Owners Association feels that it is time for a freeze on the issue of future licenses. If the formula of one taxi to every 540 people which exists in Toronto and Ottawa is used, this city's taxis should be serving a population of 75,000 people.

OTTAWA — The staff of Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau cost Canadian taxpayers more than $1 million last year. The staff consisted of ninety people and there were two additional assistants on contract.

backpage

The US and NV in Laos

World: And the war moves on

WASHINGTON— The Pentagon has announced that American air strikes in Laos have increased sharply from a previously 280 a day to 380 daily.

According to Defence Secretary Elliot Richardson, the strikes were prompted by increasing North Vietnamese and Pathet Lao activity in the country as well as pleas by the Royal Lao government.

With the peace talks at an impasse, the Communist forces seeking to overthrow the royalist government, have been moving in massive amounts of military material from North Vietnam in preparation for a land grab before any settlemnt is negotiated.

MOSCOW— The Soviet Union is keeping the Republic of China aware of its presence as it fired at least nine intercontinental ballistic missiles over its Asian territory just north of China over a two week period.

The two countries have been feuding for some time over Chinese claims to certain Soviet territory and it is hypothesized that the threat of a serious break with the Soviet Union over the issue has led to the recent friendship overtures to the West made by Communist China.

NEW YORK — The banks were the losers in the recent 10 percent devaluation of the American dollar. The central banks of West Germany, Holland, Switzerland, Great Britain and Japan among others were caught with massive holdings of US dollars which they had purchased to avoid appreciation of their own currency.

The recent undermining of the American dollar as a result of their massive 1972 deficit and the lifting of the security of the import controls led to a landslide of speculation on foreign markets. and resulted in serious doubt as to the ability of the United States to support the value of the dollar at the current price.

The result was a rush by American firms owing sums in marks or yen to unload dollars before they became cheaper in terms of other currencies. European and Japanese exporters also fed the surfeited markets with a flood of dollars as they rushed to unload receipts of the unstable currency.

TEL AVIV— The price of gold increased significantly as a result of the repegging of the American dollar but it wasn't the only precious metal to be affected by the move.

An expert in Tel Aviv,oneof the world's major diamond centres, stated that a recent 11 per cent jump in the price of diamonds has been caused by the appreciation of the price of gold, an often observed phenomenon.

SAIGON— With reports of nearly 15,000 casualties in Vietnam during the past three weeks, the Joint Military Commission composed of representatives of the United States, North Vietnam, South Vietnam and the Viet Cong, has called for an absolute end to all hostilities by the high command of all sides.

The Commission acknowledged that the ceasefire is not working and called for the Viet Cong and South Vietnamese to respect the terms of the ceasefire and prohibit all armed patrols from going into areas patrolled by opposing forces.

One factor which is still hampering the effectiveness of the ceasefire is the absence of Viet Cong observers at the International Commission of Supervision and Control regional headquarters.

Queen's
Journal
Volume One Hundred, No. 41
Tuesday, February 27, 1973

Late penalty waived if fees paid by tomorrow

Second installment of tuition fees can be paid until tomorrow without financial penalty. At the same time, the fee withholding action ends tomorrow.

The Board of Trustees agreed last weekend to waive the January 31 late payment fee until February 28. The Alma Mater Society decided at its last meeting to go along with the Ontario Federation of Students proposal to "phase-out" the fee withholding.

AMS External Affairs Commissioner, Lyn Whitham, indicated the withholding was being terminated "from a position of strength" and thought "a month-long, well-supported withholding is a more valid protest than a long-term, poorly-supported action," which might result if it were allowed to continue indefinitely.

"We also had to consider the effect on the students," Whitham continued. "We do not, with such a symbolic action, want to jeopardize either students' personal positions or the financial positions of the universities."

Whitham said the withholding, with 2000 students more than last year owing second installment fees, was a "success, in that it informed students across Ontario of the problems, and they were able to make their point. The government now understands our position, and realizes that there are inequities in the student aid programme."

She thought that there will be changes coming in the age of independence and in aid to part time students and also thought the loan ceiling will not be raised, but "we will not know all this until mid-April when the (provincial) budget comes down."

University centre study

Pub should help pay

The AMS should continue to operate the pub in the proposed new University Centre but its profits should be split equally with the University, according to a report from the University Centre Management Study Group.

This committee was set up in March 1972 to consider management of the proposed Centre.

At present, students contribute $10 per head to the Students Union.

However, the committee decided that as the new centre is for the use of the entire university community the support fee should be levied on all or none. They agreed that no one should have to pay.

Alternate methods of financing the centre were proposed. As all facilities and furnishings will be paid for out of the centre's capital fund, Wally Palmer, AMS vice president and a member of the committee, told the Journal "it is only fair that students contribute in some way," specifically by splitting the profits of the Pub equally between the AMS and the University.

The University could charge the AMS rent for the space the Pub occupies. It has not done so in the past, but the report suggests that the Pub could, "become an important source of revenue to help defray the cost of running the University Centre."

The typing service which also occupies free space should be "budgeted to make a small profit," Palmer said.

The report indicated that 5 per cent of gross receipts should be contributed toward the overhead of the Centre. This sum would not be payable until the service reached breakeven point.

Revenues will also be brought in from commercial enterprises, recreational services such as supervised billiards and table tennis, and the bookstore if included.

Although it may be difficult for the bookstore to provide the range of services desired and break even financially, the report recommends that it still be charged for all facilities used, including space.

All facets of the University community will be represented in the Centre's management, Palmer commented.

A council of 20 members would be responsible for studying overall policy of the Centre and a 5 member management committee would work with and advise a full time manager.

Comments on the report of the Management Study Group should be submitted to secretary of the group, E. W. Thrift.

Take a break

There will be a general meeting of the Alma Mater Society at 7:30 pm on Thursday in Stirling Hall. Students are invited to make motions, cause trouble and snipe wherever appropriate. They will also be treated to the annual ritual involved in the changeover of executives.

Rector rumblings

by Susan de Stein

"It was a very interesting and enjoyable meeting," commented Gary Gannage, Queen's University rector, when questioned about the recent Board of Trustees meeting.

"It's tremendous that these very successful people should still have a fantastic feeling for this place," added Gannage. He noted that all the members on the Board of Trustees were all Queen's students at one time. "I have a great deal of respect for them," said the rector.

The first session of the Board was of the business type and not much of what was discussed was of direct concern to the students," Gannage commented. He felt that most students would find these financial matters boring.

"The big item of interest centered on the fee withholding issue," he said, adding that "the Board was very receptive and interested, and asked many questions on the nature of withholding and the 'phasing-out' policy." "It is probable," he said, "that the 'phasing-out' was influential in the Board's decision to waive the late penalty fee." He felt that the Board also seemed very impressed with the way in which the fee withholding was carried out.

The effect on Queen's of recent government cutbacks was an item for discussion at the meeting. As a result of these cutbacks, the future of the Health Sciences complex is still in question, Gannage noted. It was also reported at the meeting that there will be no further large scale building projects, except the University Center, in the next decade.

The Board members spent some time touring Elrond and having lunch on an invitation from the Board of Directors of Elrond. "They were suitably

Continued on Page 4

Dahiff

newsbriefs

Enrolment numbers game

TORONTO (CUP) — The University of Toronto and the University of Ottawa are the only two Ontario universities to emerge unscathed by a province-wide drop in the number of 1973-74 university applicants, according to raw data released by the Ontario Universities Applications Centre. Not surprisingly, the province's smallest institutions were hit hardest.

Seven hundred more students than last year have indicated University of Toronto as their first choice, with approximately the same numbers as last year picking Toronto as their second and third preferences.

The small University of Ottawa was the only other university to buck the trend, by receiving an impressive increase of 100 applications.

York University, plagued by a serious enrolment drop this year which left the university in poor financial shape and precipitated the resignation of its president, ended up with 1,100 less total applicants than last year. Six hundred of this loss came on the very important, first choice option.

Brock and Trent application fell significantly, as did Carleton's. McMaster University got 600 less applicants, and the University of Waterloo 700 less.

Although Queen's has approximately the same number of applicants as last year, it has 300 less picking it as their first choice.

Western, Guelph, Lakehead, Laurentian all dropped slightly in the total number of applicants.

Commerce banks on less apathy

After a lapse of some four years, guest speakers from Canadian business will once again be jointly sponsored by the Undergraduate Commerce Society and Dean Hand of the School of Business.

In the past, co-operation of the Dean's office which was essential to secure prominent speakers faded because of a lack of student interest. Potentially fascinating speakers appeared only to be met by a very dismal student turnout.

This year, organizers hope that students attitudes and interests have changed. Three people have been invited to speak - William Dodge, Edgar Benson, and Donna Henchey.

The hope is based on many demands by students that more relevancy should be brought into the Commerce programme. This year's guest speaker series will try to diverge from the usual format of a "lecture" found in the classrooms to that of dialogue, said Bob Patterson, one of the organizers. "We are hoping that the Commerce students will be able to really grill these guys on the controversial issues they are bound to touch upon."

In this light they've tried to find people who combine those attributes of high stature in the business community, good speaking ability and, above all, have controversial stands on issues of the day.

The first speaker, coming on Thursday night at 8:00 pm in Dunning 14, will be William Dodge, Secretary Treasurer of the Canadian Labour Congress and one of the most articulate spokesmen for labour's cause in Canada.

The Canadian Labour Congress is tantamount to a "superunion" composed of a majority of the industrial unions in Canada.

The main force of the CLC is felt in Ottawa as a labour loby and internationally as a strong member of the International Labour Organization which has thrived since the days of the League of Nations which used to be its mother organization.

Bill Dodge was born in Verdun, Quebec, and joined the labour movement through his employment in the railways. After service in WW II, he got a BA in Economics and via the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers worked his way up through the ranks of the CLC. This culminated in his election to the post of Secretary-Treasurer in 1968.

Dodge's experience and interest in the labour movement has brought him into many diverse fields of Politics, having once been a candidate for the CCF, and later on the Board of Governors at McGill University as well as having been a member of the Committee on University Affairs of Ontario.

Dodge will be speaking on collective bargaining and possible alternatives to the strike.

Dodge will be followed by Donna Henchey, an executive with the Canadian Publishing Company, MacLean-Hunter, who will be speaking on March 6.

Town 'n Gown seminar

Despite its rather stuffy sounding name, Town 'n Gown a Tercentenary Seminar promises to be of great interest to the student body.

Principal John J. Deutsch will moderate the event to be held in Dunning Auditorium on March 12 at 8 p.m. It's purpose is to assess relations between Queen's and the city of Kingston and to produce suggestions for programs which would facilitate better communication in this area.

Topics will include the university's present exemption from land taxes, the effectiveness of the modes of communication between the city council and Queen's and the viability of existing student programs designed to aid certain segments of the city's population.

The panel will consist of newly elected Mayor Speal, James Courtwright, Vice Principal of Development and Information and chairman of the University's Tercentenary Committee, Greg Leblanc, AMS President along with other members of the Kingston community.

The seminar is being organized by the AMS External Affairs Commission.

Coming: Auf Wiedershen

This article is hopefully going to straighten a few people out as to the nature of Auf Wiedersehen, the Arts Formal which is being advertised widely. First of all this dance is an arts event simply because it is being sponsored by Artsci '74 and helpfully subsidized by ASUS to the tune of $200.00. The Artsci '74 executive is organizing Auf Wiedersehen and is using about $800.00 from their own account as they hope it will attract the graduating students from their year. The Arts Formal in past years has lost money to the point where it will be non-existent this spring. By granting the Artsci '74 committee $200.00, ASUS is keeping within their constitution and opening the formal up to all Arts students. The question of whether it should be a semi-formal or a formal can be answered by leaving an option on a tux, corsage, etc.

When this dance was first being organized the Round Table was reserved, but due to a problem beyond our control (it turned down) the committee had to find a room large enough for 150 couples and equipped with dinner-dance-bar facilities. As a result the 401 Reception room will be the scene for Auf Wiedersehen on March 10.

Peruvian discusses

Justice in South America

Samuel Escobar, a well-known journalist and native of Peru will be speaking Tuesday, February 27th, in Stirling Hall "D" at 8:00 p.m., on the topic "I Disagree With God". This intriguing title will be discussed in the context of justice in South America. Mr. Escobar's involvement in student activities on various campuses in South America will be reflected in his discussion. He is presently serving as Director of Varsity Christian Fellowship and views his socio-political involvement as a necessary part of his expression of Christianity. His ideas on justice and freedom in the context of Latin America should provoke stimulating dialogue with the audience.

INTROUCTORY LECTURE
and
PHYSIOLOGICAL SLIDE PRESENTATION ON THE TECHNIQUE OF

TRANSCENDENTAL MEDITATION
As Taught by Maharishi Mahesh Yogi
Dunning Auditorium Thurs., March 1st, 8:00 p.m.

AMS needs people to help see: QUEEN'S JOURNAL this issue, p.3

UWO

Course evaluation is an issue

The students and faculty of the University of Western Ontario are polarized over course (and professor) evaluation by students, an issue which has forced the student-oriented University Students' Council (USC) and the faculty-oriented Senate into a headlong confrontation.

The USC is calling for the amalgamation of the three year old student administered course evaluation with the one being run concurrently by the Senate. However they met with faculty protest demanding the total demise of the student program in favour of the unpublished and strictly confidential faculty questionnaire.

The student evaluation of professors was originally introduced because of a belief that students are the best judges of teaching ability but it is now being branded as libellous and irresponsible.

UWO English Department Chairman P. D. Fleck was responsible for making the charges of irresponsibility and he told the February 8 meeting of Senate that he was prepared to provide documented evidence.

However, Dean of Physical Health and Education E. F. Zeigler insisted that the evaluation contained only facts. Educational fieldworker Ben McDonald, hired by the USC to administer their questionnaire, noted that it was the English Department which was placing so many restrictions on the questionnaire.

He noted that the Department had demanded that the evaluation was to be conducted only by English students but pointed out that "they had no experience in evaluation and survey construction".

The English Department has since ruled that they would not take a stand on the issue but leave evaluation up to the individual professor. The French Department has banned the questionnaire outright.

Three basic lines of contention were brought out in the January 26 meeting of the university Senate. While the USC wants to annually hold the evaluation in early February to allow publishing before early admissions in March, the Senate supports a late March evaluation. The Senate also supports making the report totally confidential with distribution exclusively to departmental chairmen and the promotion committees. The USC wants equal share in the administration and preparation of a joint questionnaire but the Senate intends to use its own resourses.

Faculty member W. C. Watson told the meeting that last year's evaluation contained comments which were actually libellous and ironically added that "they may affect the livelihood of the professor."

A report on student co-operation with faculty in the construction and administration of the questionnaire presented by UWO President D. C. Williams was relegated to committee where it is still being held.

Williams gave qualified support to the student evaluation of professors, noting that last year's USC evaluation presented "reasonably satisfactory results" but adding that he believed that the matter should be left to individual faculties as was the case in previous years.

A student motion introduced during the "new business" part of the meeting asking, the Senate to accommodate both evaluations was ruled out of order and called "contrary to the spirit of what went on before."

The USC is now considering retaliatory actions, possibly a student boycott of the Senate evaluation.

Williams said that such a boycott would be a useless approach resulting in "no accommodation" since the faculty would not support student evaluations in their classrooms.

Incidences of this have already occured. One professor in the Faculty of English even called in Dean Fleck to evict from his classroom those students who were administering questionnaires.

Students have attempted to get around this problem by handing out questionnaires to students as they walk into class and collecting them afterwards.

The USC has enlisted strong support from the Faculty of Social Sciences. The Dean and various faculty members sent a letter to the Senate supporting student evaluations and calling for the proposed joint evaluation.

The UWO Gazette, the university student newspaper has reported the existence of certain "shady occurrences" in classrooms where the USC questionnaire is being administered. One English professor hid the special electrographic pencils under his coat while the evaluation was being handed out. The students managed to find them.

Open Hours

It's finally come to that

by Susan de Stein

The Ban Righ Board, on Saturday, Feb. 24, passed a motion to extend the present open hours, to 24 hour open hours, on a trial basis until the end of April.

Kiloran German, President of the Women's Residence Council, commented that "the Board contended that residences are no longer a suitable place in which to study, and that open hours have been a contributing factor to this situation.

The Board therefore, wanted time to assess the situation, and to see if women in residence are capable of handling the responsibility. It was agreed to effect the change for this limited period of time."

German added that a questionnaire will be circulated in early April, among women residents, to see if they feel open hours should be maintained or if there should perhaps exist a residence without open hours.

It was also noted at the meeting that the number of reapplications to residence are up from last year. "This is encouraging in light of the increase in residence fees," German added.

Also at the meeting Dean of Women, Evelyn Reid, announced that the ground floor of Adelaide Hall would be available next year to women in Graduate schools who previously did not have residence made available to them.

The constitutional changes made last November at a WRC meeting were also reported and accepted by the Ban Righ Board.

The Board instructed a committee to look into the use of the Ban Righ building fund which constitutes $250,000, to be used for capital expenditure. The recommendations of this committee will be presented at the next Ban Righ Board meeting on April 28, at which time the question of open hours will also be discussed.

AMS needs people to work on the following commissions, committees, subsidiaries, publications, services, etc. etc.

WANTED: Queen's Students

Internal Affairs

AMS COURT
Chief Justice (2nd year law)
4 junior Justices
Prosecuting Attorney
Intergovenmental Relations Committee Chairman

Services

AMS Clubs Manager
Speaker for Outer Council
Constitution Committee Members

AMS PUB (Summer and Winter)
Managers
Serving Persons
University Centre Committee Members
AMS Chief Constable
Union Programme Committee Members
Bulletin Board Committee
University Health Council Representatives
Communications Committee Members

Queen's Student Agencies

Director
Secretary
Printing Service Manager
Typing Service Manager
AMS Housing Service Manager
AMS Housing Service Committee Members
Handbook Editor

Campus Activities

AMS Homecoming Convenor
Open House Chairman
AMS Clubs Night Chairman
AMS Snowball Committee Chairman

Cultural Committee Chairman
Queen's Extertainment Agency Director
University Council on Athletics Representatives
AMS Concert Committee Chairman
Convocation Committee Chairman

External Affairs

OFS Chief Delegate
Alumni Committee Chairman
Community Liaison Committee Chairman
High School Liaison Committee Chairman
AOSC Campus Representative

Education

Public Relations Committee Members
2 Members for Richardson Trust Fund Committee
Long Term Planning Committee Members
Short Term Planning Committee Members
AMS Festival '74 Committee Chairman
Senate Library Committee Members
Interdisciplinary Studies Committee Members
Awareness '74 Co-ordinator
Counter Courses Committee Members

for further information on these positions see your Who's Where or call Steve Brereton 544-7215 or Bruce Trotter 542-5291
Leave your name in the AMS Office anytime before 5 p.m. Wednesday, March 7

Senate reviews 'leave' policies

by Susan de Stein

The Senate Committee on Appointment, Promotion, Tenure and Leave prepared and presented its report on leave policy to the Senate meeting on February 22.

The Committee decided to review current subbatical leave practices because it was felt that the next ten years will be very different from the decade of expansion universities recently experienced. Members of the academic community have expressed concern about certain aspects of the present policy. Discussions have reinforced the need to formulate new policy and to review in particular the scale of salary paid and whether leave might be spent in Kingston.

Sabbatical leave is defined as "an opportunity to take an extended break from normal academic duties in order to leave the University and Kingston for a period of study, research, and refreshment at another university, research centre or library". The Senate Committee was urged to recommend to the Senate "the conditions for sabbatical and other leave and a special task force was appointed to study the matter.

The Committee is aware that constant student enrolment had many implications. In the past 10 years, student enrolment and the number of faculty at Queen's have more than doubled. In the next ten years, however, student enrolment is expected to stabilize and the number of faculty will not increase substantially. It is expected that the increase which will take place will be nearly complete by 1975, making a total faculty of about 820.

The committee was concerned lest a stabilized enrolment lead to an impoverished intellectual climate and reduced flexibility to meet changing student needs for new courses and programmes. It believed an effective leave policy should exist to counter possible declines in quality and flexibility. The Committee reviewed existing practice to see if the present policy would be an effective one for the period of constant student enrolment.

The Committee also reported that many of those elibile do not apply for leave because the salary arrangements impose a heavy financial loss. The committee therefore, recommended a more realistic salary policy.It recommended that faculty members receive 75 per cent of their salary while on sabbatical, and that each faculty establish a separate fund within its academic budget to award additional support to certain applicants.

Since the Committee believes sabbatical leave is granted for academic duties which are part of a faculty member's responsibility to the University, decisions should be made on academic grounds - whether the proposed sabbatical will be to the enrichment of the individual, the department, and the University.

While the proposed leave policy, sets as a goal, sabbatical every seven years, practice in the next few years doubtless will fall short of this. Notwithstanding personal eligibility any individual's chance of actually being able to go on leave will depend primarily on departmental commitments.

The proposed sabbatical leave policy is in keeping with the University's financial policies. Queen's has not had, does not have and is unlikely to have separate university funds to finance leave. Leave therefore, will have to continue to be financed from the funds available to the faculties and departments for academic purposes.

A motion asking for the approval of the policy contained within will be put forth at the March meeting of Senate, in order that Senators and the university community be given time to consider the report.

John Redding, Engineering Society Senator commented. "the report did not contain too many strong statements". The report seemed to be more a "cushion", he added. He noted, however, that the committee did not appear to promote sabbatical leave taken in Kingston.

"Acceptance of the report seems probable," Redding said.

Rector rumblings Continued From Page 1

impressed by Elrond and the visit allayed many of their fears," Gannage commented. Gannage noted that the Board of Trustees will be loaning Elrond a sizeable amount of money.

At the Board meeting a presentation of the new Queen's logo was given by its designers. Discussion on the subject of the logo revealed the concern of some members about losing the tradition of the old crest. "However, they seemed to like the logo," reported Gannage.

Also at the meeting it was reported that Queen's had acquired some new property, including that on which the 'Queen's Tea Room' now stands at the corner of Union and Division. "The space will probably become a green area in the near future," said Gannage.

In other business at the meeting, it was reported that a $6.00 student non-academic fee will be levied this year for intersession and summer session students. It was noted that the cost per course during these sessions will be lowered to $120, the approximate cost per course given during the normal academic year.

"All in all, the meeting was fairly informative, but not terribly exciting," Gannage said.

"I was once told that a rector should take it easy, watch, and learn - and that's what I did," concluded Gannage.

HELP YOUR RED CROSS

ARTSCI '74 Presents

AUF WIEDERSEHEN

401

March 10th
7:30 - 1:00

$6.00 couple
tux not req'd.

wanted

JOB BANK DIRECTOR

for further information

phone Steve Brereton 544-7215

or Bruce Trotter . 542-5291

Leave your name in AMS Office anytime before 5 p.m., Wed., March 7

Commerce Guest Speaker Series

No. 1 William Dodge

Secretary-Treasurer of the Canadan Labour Congress speaking on "Collegiate Bargaining" and its alternatives for labor disputes

Dunning Auditorium
Room 14

Thursday,
March 1st

COURSE GUIDE

IT'S COURSE EVALUATION TIME!

BE SURE TO GO TO YOUR ARTS CLASSES NEXT WEEK
AND EVALUATE YOUR COURSES AND PROFESSORS!

Here yesterday

Lewis claims state should pay cost of post-secondary education

By Susan de Stein

"Out of the revenues of the state should come the money to finance post-secondary education," said a vehement Stephen Lewis, leader of the Ontario NDPs in speaking to Queen's students yesterday.

He indicated that it was "a matter of social policy that those who want higher education should be able to get it and it should be free."

Lewis maintained that people are entitled to post-secondary education as a right. "What these people may contribute to society justifies that money being spent," he said.

It remains the conviction of the NDP, he said, that "accessibility should not be a matter of money at any time. Money for financing can be found."

Lewis sharply criticized the general education policies of the Ontario government. "Universities, to begin with, are class institutions," he protested. Through the present loan and grant financing system, Lewis contended, "we are maintaining a sense of class that is already built into this system."

Lewis commented on documents such as the Learning Society and The Wright Report as reports "that reinforce this class system of education in Ontario." His main objection to these "elitist and aristocratic documents," which contain mainly "irrevelent material and the usual liberal cliches" is their lack of an "analysis of the rationale behind post-secondary education." He commented that "the reports don't say very much on crucial matters."

Lewis claimed that the government takes an "entrepreneurial view of education," and complained that a "seriously stated philosophy on the matter is lacking."

He also commented "I have been persuaded, that the absence of effective control by the students and faculty of most of the decisions concerning plant and expansion, is the main reason behind the enormous financial and internal crisis facing many of the Ontario's universities." He spoke of Queen's as an exception, adding that the reports have paid only lip service to questions concerning the structure of university government.

Government policies in education were, Lewis felt, "qualitatively wrong" and "we will fight like hell against further increases and other Davis policies on principal." He felt that the fee withholding had the effect of perhaps reducing the government's inclination towards increasing the fees again, although he added that enough pressure had not been applied.

He claimed that the action reinforced the public stereotype of the student and that the government could thus afford to be tough. He granted that it is difficult to mount a sustained political attack.

In addition, Lewis briefly spoke of his policies towards foreign ownership in Canada, healthcare, housing and unemployment.

A student, during question period, predicted that it would not be possibly for another decade that the NDP would be in power. To that Lewis replied," I thank you for catipulting us into power within ten years. It solves my fantasy life."

SVB needs volunteers

The SVB needs people (below). If you are interested, come into the SVB office in the Union (use the outside stairs off University Ave.) Hours are 9 to 5 or call 547-5766.

Going to be in Kingston this summer and have experience in scouting? If you are interested in being a scout leader call for more details.

A drop-in centre is being organized in Pittsburg Township for Friday evenings. One male and one female are required to assist.

Tutors are required for Grade 13 Physics and Calculus.

Kingston Free School needs tutors for Grades 9 and 10 mathematics.

Outlook still needs people to help acquire supplies for this summer's camp.

The Mental Retardation Unit at KPH needs a tutor and others.

St. Paul's School is starting a new elective program for children. Students with expertise in guitar, photography, gymnastics etc. are needed Wednesday afternoons.

Kingston Community School needs help in the afternoons.

On the evening of March 6th at 7 pm in Lower Vic, a seminar on "Students in the Community", is being held. Dr. D. B. McLay will speak on "Band-Aid Relief". Roger Latreille, a classification officer at Collin's Bay, will discuss volunteers in prisons. A discussion period will follow.

All applications for executive positions on SVB must be returned to the office by the evening of March 6th.

The deadline for the submission of OFY applications is March 1st. If there are any questions or problems, contact Roy Beechey at the SVB office.

Tribute to former dean

On Friday, February 23, a portrait of former Dean of Women, Beatrice Bryce was presented by John J. Deutsch, Principal of Queen's University, to Kiloran German, President of Women's Residence Council, in commemoration of Bryce's service and contribution to the university community.

The reception was held in the upper common room of Victoria Hall, where the portrait will take a prominent and permanent position. Deutsch in presenting the portrait mentioned Bryce's great contribution to the university in her eleven years as Dean of Women. During her years at Queen's, Victoria Hall was planned and constructed, the idea of co-ed residences became a reality, and open hours was gradually implemented. Her contributions were many. Deutsch also remarked that the number of women enrolled at Queen's during this time increased tremendously.

German, in accepting the portrait thanked Deutsch and the Ban Righ Board "for the beautiful painting of the woman to whom we owe so much."

Inter-Residence Council
BANQUET '73
"The ARCTIC: Transportation Problems & Environmental Issues"
Executive Director Canadian
Institute of Guided Ground Transport
Leonard Cafeteria
Tues., March 6th 8:00 p.m.
Tickets are available in meal-lines and at Leonard Hall business office.
Residents .50c Non-residents $1.25
Faculty welcome tickets $2.25

Dons for Women's Residence for 1973-74

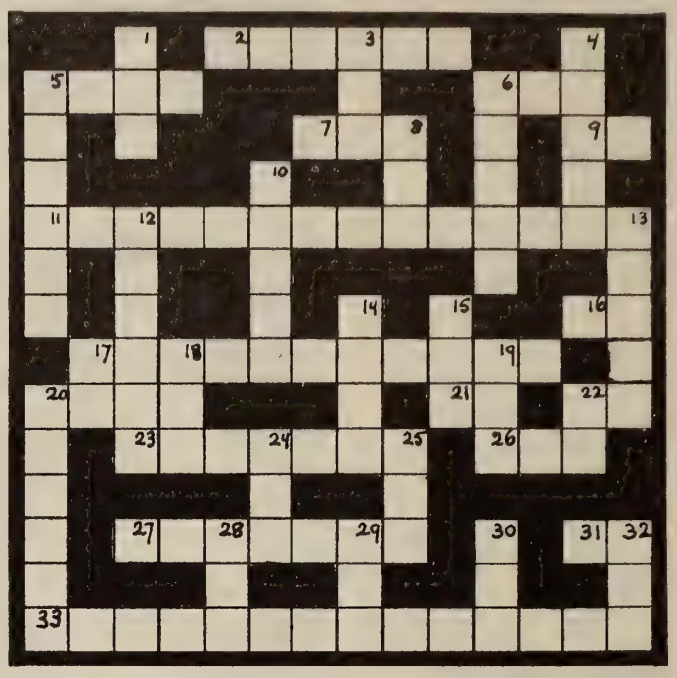
Life within the residence community is an important aspect of university experience.

We welcome into residence women students and couples who want to share with younger students the benefit of their learning and maturing, who are interested in being a liaison with campus groups and services, and who are concerned that residences provide the best possible environment for intellectual, personal and social growth.

Persons appointed as dons will receive room and board for the academic year.

Applications are to be made at the Office of the Dean of Women, Victoria Hall.

A MAN CALLED HORSE
starring Richard Harris
Thursday, March 1, 1973
Dunning Auditorium 7 and 9:30 pm
- CINEGUILD, of course -



Campus Crossword Puzzle

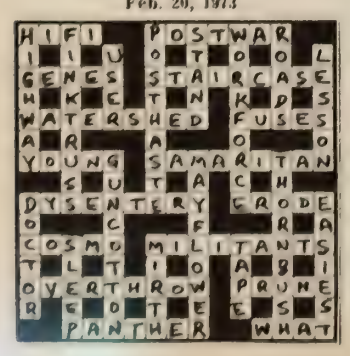
ACROSS

2. Campus caterer
5. Morris Hall's claim to fame
6. Degree for learning to draw well
7. Teacher's alternative to McArthur
9. Health Services treats many for this
11. "Expression of discontent with Ont. Gov't" (two words)
16. Artsci's piece of paper
17. Campus rag (two words)
20. Ice cream ————————
21. ———————— Eliot, star of English No. 110
22. ———————— Whitham, Grass, Cousins, etc.
23. J.J.
26. University news service
27. Virginity squad floor (two words)
31. Better that 16 across
33. Favorite watering hole (three words)

DOWN

1. Surplus in engineering, deficit in nursing science
3. Lower ———————— passion pit
4. ————————Van Kokonut, responsible for 17 across
5. 15c at the Union
6. Religion 131 and Sociology 122
8. What all ex-commerce students major in
10. The new president
12. Hotel Hobbit
13. "Influence-peddling, journalistically-irresponsible, muckraking, demon editor"
14. Name of comic strip of 17 across, if the women had their say
15. What the "murals" in the Pub are not
17. Don't stop!
18. Mister ————————guardian of Victorial Hall
19. Most uncontested of all elected positions at Queen's
20. Ralfe ————————, human (?) computer
22. Flora, our ————————
24. "A bunsen burner is not a ———— ————"
25. In Chemistry 001, they call water ————
28. Tomorrow, tuition fees are ———— ————
29. S.B. is to I.R.C. as K.G. is to ———— ————
30. The jocks all hang out at Bartlett ————
32. Queen's benificient government

Trouble at Memorial Un.



ST. JOHN'S (CUP) — The Students' Union at Memorial University remains alive after a Feb. 23 referendum approved continued compulsory membership by a narrow 1436-1272 vote.

Only 36 percent of the student body voted in the two-day referendum, which was agreed to by student and administration negotiators during last term's occupation of the University's Arts and Administration Building.

Another referendum, this one designed to restructure the faltering union to make it stronger and more representative of student needs, will take place sometime in March. The referendum results indicated students' disgust with the inactivity of the present council. The council failed to provide much leadership during last term's occupation, and refused to involve itself in the referendum campaign. In fact, it even refused to set aside funds for some other group to use to launch an extensive campaign.

Crossword Solution

Solutions for Feb. 20, 1973

AMS OUTER COUNCIL MEETING

AMS MEETING
featuring
30th old & new Outer Councils
Wednesday February 28th
Stirling A 7:30 p.m.

ALL WELCOME

EDITOR

Applications for next year's

JOURNAL EDITOR
TRICOLOR EDITOR
JOURNAL BUSINESS MANAGER

will be accepted in the AMS Office until 5 pm Fri. March 2, 1973

•the proposed ASUS CONSTITUTION will be presented to the general meeting of the ASUS on Thursday, March 8, Red Room

•copies are available from the AMS secretary

•amendments to the proposals must be prepared before the meeting and must be presented to the chairman in writing in advance

I.R.C. PUB DANCE

the
LAST BLAST
Sat., March 3
8 p.m. - 1 a.m.
Solo Flights .50¢
Couples .75¢
Beer 3/$1.00
Alternate beverages

BEER 3/$1.

Pizza Chalet

286 MONTREAL ST. KINGSTON
544-1227

OPEN MON. TUES. WED. 4:00 p.m. to 1:00 a.m.
OPEN ALL DAY SUNDAY 12 – 12
OPEN THURS. FRI. SAT. 4:00 p.m. to 2:00 a.m.

Chalet Deluxe EXTRA LARGE — Pepperoni- Mushrooms- Bacon Sausage- Green Peppers- Olive Cheese- Tomato Sauce $5.50
BIGGEST PIZZA YOU'VE EVER SEEN!

SELECTION WITH CHEESE & TOMATO SAUCE	11" REG	13" MED	15" LGE	SUPER 17" X-LGE
1. Pepperoni-Mushrooms-Bacon-Green Peppers Sausages-Olive	2.50	3.65	4.55	5.50
2. Pepperoni-Mushrooms	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
3. Pepperoni-Bacon	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
4. Mushrooms-Bacon	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
5. Combination Pizza Pepperoni-Mushrooms Green Peppers-Olives	2.40	2.95	3.95	4.95
6. Bacon	1.85	2.60	3.65	4.65
7. Pepperoni	1.85	2.60	3.65	4.65
8. Cheese	1.75	2.40	2.95	3.90
9. Mushrooms	1.85	2.60	3.65	4.65

Combination Special — Pepperoni- Olive Mushrooms- Green Peppers $3.95
A LARGE PIZZA SURE TO PLEASE

Tercentenary Commonwealth Seminars

Barbados

Speaker: Mr. E. B. Maycock, Counsellor, Barbados High Commission, Ottawa Tuesday February 27th Room 517 Watson

Movies: Discussion: Coffee; Free Admission

Chaired by Dr. Keppel-Jones

Sponsored by the Institute of Commonwealth and Comparative Studies and the Department of History

NEXT WEEK: GUYANA, Tuesday March 6th

CLAIRE CULHANE says:
Canadian agencies in Vietnam are propaganda tools for the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency

WHY IS CANADA IN VIETNAM?

March 2nd 4:00 p.m.

3rd floor Union

ROTARY FOUNDATION EDUCATIONAL AWARDS FOR INTERNATIONAL UNDERSTANDING

Rotary International invites applications from outstanding students for the following educational awards for study abroad for one year in the academic year 1974-75. An award may be used for almost any field of study.

Graduate Fellowship

An applicant, married or unmarried, must have or is about to receive a Bachelor's degree (or equivalent), and must be 20-28 years of age on March 15th, 1973.

Undergraduate Scholarship

An applicant must be unmarried, must not have a university degree, must have studied for at least two years at a university and must be 18-24 years of age on March 15th, 1973.

As the main objective of the awards is to increase international understanding, awardees are expected to serve as ambassadors of goodwill and to address Rotary Clubs and other organizations.

Relatives and dependants of Rotarians are ineligible for awards. Applications must be made to a Rotary Club by not later than March 15th, 1973.

Further information may be obtained from Mr. Trevor Dossett, 131 Johnson Street, Kingston (Telephone 542-2811).

S & R THINKS STUDENTS SPEND TOO MUCH FOR CLOTHES And we're doing something about it

At S and R you can buy great looking clothing for a lot less than you'd expect. You see we're giving you what's so hard to get these days. What you pay for .....and more.

MEN'S "WRANGLER"
14 oz Blue Benim Flared Jeans Slight irregulars of $9, 11, 12 value

$5.99 $6.99 $7.99

Men's famous american Brand Name Slacks Original retail value 9.95 to 19.95 a pair

2 pair $5

S&R DISCOUNT DEPARTMENT STORE

Corner Princess at Ontario

letters

Frustrated

Dear Editor,

Anyone who thinks living in residence is a glorious life is entirely wrong. Some things that have happened in Victoria Hall this year should be made public so that they can perhaps be avoided in the future.

1). Silverfish - Certain floors were over-run with silverfish and obviously had to be fumigated - some floors several times. What seems to be the problem with the cleaning staff that insects can infiltrate and multiply? I suppose it would help if they vacuumed under the beds. Don't be fooled by Burton's Sanitation trucks; they're really fumigators.

2). No Toilet Paper - Is it too much to ask, when paying approximately a thousand dollars a year for residence, to have such a menial thing as toilet paper, so one may wipe one's ass?!!! Two rolls of toilet paper per floor per weekend seems a little ridiculous!

3). No Heat - I suppose Victoria Hall copes with the above problems by turning off the heat; it's guaranteed to freeze the silverfish and the bowels.

These three complaints probably indicate some reasons for the exodus from women's residences.

Signed:
Two frustrated, de-bugged, but not de————residents

A reply

Dear Appalled Artsci,

Who the hell do you think you are, some kind of God? From your letter you sound like a narrow-minded little boy who is upset because he can't get enough toys. Your accusation that females are "bitches" clearly reveals that you are just griping because you can't manage to find a girl, so you blame it on us. Try looking for the answer to your problem in yourself; don't blame others.

As to the charge that females are mercenary -- it is probably because you can't think of anything entertaining but not expensive to do. For example -- a date to go skating or badminton -- that is fun and not expensive. Also, having an intelligent conversation with a girl is cheap, or don't you think we have brains? From your letter though, I rather doubt that you could carry on a good conversation.

Sincerely,
a disgusted
"bitch"
(Artsci 76 female)

Oversight?

Dear Editor,

Your sports reporter has consistently ignored one-half of Queen's skiers this year, namely, the Nordic team. While it is traditional for those who don't know any better to ignore the cross country racer who charges up one side of a mountain without "benefit" of ski tows and who then goes down the other side dodging trees (hardwood!) without benefit of metal edges or fixed heels, I was amazed to find out that ski jumping didn't seem to have enough sex appeal to draw at least one drop of ink from your reporter's pen.

In the Feb. 13 Queen's Journal I noticed a detailed account of the OUAA slalom and giant slalom events - right down to tenth place! No mention, however, did I find of Peter Kopp who in this same OUAA meet won the first place medal for Nordic combined - i.e. for the highest total points in the cross country race and ski jumping events. Also ignored was the combined performance of Mike Dyer, Jim Carswell, and Peter Kopp in the cross country race, finishing with a score of 95.3 - only two tenths of one point from 1st place Toronto who had 95.5.

As a mathematician I suggest that when it comes to skiing your sports department learn to count at least to 4- 1 slalom, 2 giant-slalom, 3 cross country, 4 ski jumping.

As a would-be skiier my hat's off to the Queen's Nordic ski team for a job well done.

Sincerely yours,
Dr. Martin E. Walter
(Dept. of Math)
Manager-Nordic Ski Team

Ed. Note: As Dr. Walter may not realize, Journal Sports depends largely upon the co-operation of team managers and members in obtaining the results from away meets, especially when the teams involved are not "major" ones - in the sense of crowd appeal rather than absolute importance. The Alpine team has been very conscientious in handing the results from their competitions: in fact, they have a regular reporter (hence the by-line) of their own finding. If the Nordic people would care to make the same effort, we would be only too happy to include their offerings.

It's a shame

Dear Editor,

Well it seems the fee-withholding strike has completely had the biscuit. What a shame, just when we really had a chance to get somewhere with it.

Still, although we may not have slain the Philistine, we have at least made our voices heard. Now, just to show what good-natured sports we are, lets all go down to Richardson Hall and pay our tuition fees in Frontenac dollars.

Yours truly,
Edward Smith.

Queen's Journal
Vol. 100, No. 41
Tues., Feb. 27, 1973
Queen's University at Kingston, Ont.

Editor: Jennifer Grass
Business: Charles Schwier
Management: John Solman
Arts: Sandy Naiman
Features: Pat Devitt, Steven Winnett
Passepartout: Bob Wood
News: Susan de Stein
Events: Alison Dandie
Sports: Chris Boon, Nada Bogdanovic
National Desk: Bob Mutrie, Sue Wishart
Photography: Peter Boag

Not much inspiration tonite . . .the whole mob (except Sandy and John) was back . . Grass went off (and came back) . . Morris came and almost went away empty handed . . Watts and Woods (yet another) were writing sports . . no one showed up for duty nite, so we pressed Mung into service . . Heather and Ann and Pat came in . . as did Sue with the Montreal edition . . Steve almost got carried away, but Bob did it instead . . Helen had to call Brucie Baby for her ads . .and Susan conplained we were nasty to her . . other than that a most uneventful evening.

Published twice weekly on Tuesdays and Fridays by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc., Member, Canadian University Press. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society of the University. Offices are located in the Student's Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

Rate-a-prof.

a mou

by Steven Winnett

In an atmosphere of near-religious awe, the DSC rep unwrapped, perhaps for the last time in recorded history, the sacred seals from the sacred questionnaires. He faced the class and intoned a prayer for a successful and honest evaluation. When he brought his eyes back to earth he noticed that the classroom had emptied in the meantime . . .

Whether course evaluation is a hot issue for some, or merely partakes of the general air of campus apathy, major changes are being planned for its methodology. Such is the tenor of the likely recommendations of the Faculty Board ad hoc committee on course evaluation, chaired by Dr. Peter Platenius, Associate Dean of Arts and Science. According to Dr. Platenius, three major changes will probably be recommended by this staff-student committee to the March meeting of the Faculty Board. These are:

1. Course evaluations should not be published; rather, they should be considered confidential.
2. They should be done in an informal manner.
3. There should be a means of assessing the relative degrees of merit, difficulty, etc. between courses.

The following is the text of Dr. Platenius' interview with the Journal on this contentious topic.

JOURNAL. What complaints about course evaluation and perhaps about Profiles 72, prompted the creation of this committee?

PLATENIUS. Suffice it to say that one of the reasons for the committee is argument or disputation on the value of the course evaluation guide. This isn't necessarily to say that some individual (faculty member) got panned who thought he oughtn't to have been. Rather, people got worried about a tendency to believe all the pejorative things in the guide. Part of the objection was that there were two possible ways you could go: either go completely underground, say, 'This is lousy', or 'This is excellent'; or, you can do it rather officially, hopefully informally.

What I'm aiming for and want to try out on the committee is this: if the Faculty Board develops some method of course evaluation, then to what extent will the faculty sanction an entirely student-run enterprise? It's no answer to prohibit students from doing a course guide, I don't see how you can prohibit anyone from doing whatever he wants. But we could make some recommendations on co-operation: if the faculty wish to co-operate, they should be encouraged to do so.

I think it's very likely that the mechanism for course appraisal - which really means, appraisal of our academic resources - will be somewhat different from the thing which we now know as the 'course guide'. This is due to the fact that the committee feels quite strongly that there is an inevitable conflict between using a course guide for counselling purposes and at the same time using it to try to make teaching better. In other words: if you suspect that there are problems in a course and you want to correct these problems, OK, you develop some evidence which shows what the problems are and how you're going to correct them. If you use this evidence from last year as a means of counselling students in the following year, then your counselling's going to be invalid or, you don't correct the problem.

One of the consequences of this will be that we will be very likely to recommend that the results of course appraisal be confidential. I'm not even convinced that a write-up should go as far as the dean.

JOURNAL. You're saying, if I interpret you correctly, that course appraisal will be used to improve teaching - but what happens to the counselling function, if you stop publication of this material?

PLATENIUS. If we could get somehow in situation where everybody who's your academi adviser, every instructor, could get together, the we could devise a reasonable procedure - and would include here DSC reps and the Orientatio Committee. I think that now, out of ignoranc largely, we're stuck with the problem that the onl way students can get information about what cours to take is by asking other students. The problem i you can't please all of the people all of the time. Yo have to know whom to please: your instructo wanting to give the course, and your studen wondering whether to take a course or not. If yo ask one student, he may say, 'This course is grea the instructor's great'. If you ask another studen you may get a completely different answer.

JOURNAL. Don't publications like Profiles help t avoid this situation? And yet you're likely t recommend they be terminated.

PLATENIUS. I'm not sure that the faculty is in position to force students not to put out cours guides. What it can do is not co-operate. Now, think it's very important to get into counsellin what the planned nature of the course is to be. But see no way of counselling students on the basis past performance of an instructor.

JOURNAL. Do you consider the present attitud among staff and students to course evaluation to b negative?

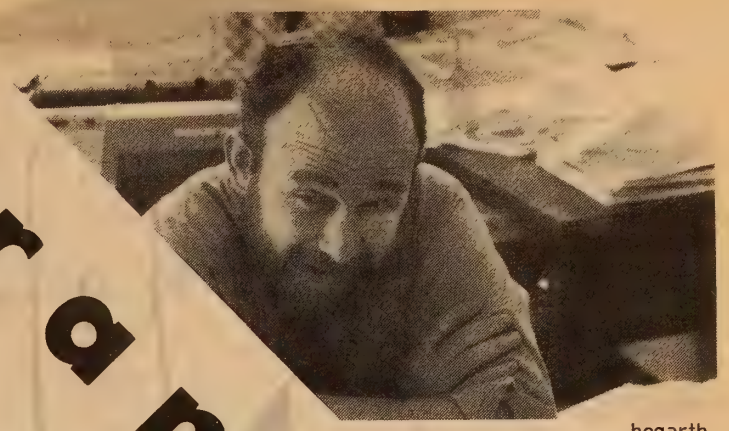
PLATENIUS. I have not met a single student, no one, who claimed to have actively considered th course evaluation guide in the selection of hi courses. The general impression I get is 'Gee, it's useful situation in principle', but, quite frankly, think that a lot of the motivation behind putting ou a course evaluation guide is to look at everybod else's dirty linen-, voyeurism, to some degree.

JOURNAL. How do the faculty feel about cours evaluation?

hogarth

"We need students and staff members to start talking to each other."

Ross Suther



Ross Sutherland, deputed by the ASUS to take charge of Profiles 73, is not happy about the prospective recommendations of the Faculty Board Committee. He is particularly opposed to the idea that course evaluations should not be published: "The most disastrous thing they could do to course evaluation." Sutherland argues that students coming into university have a right to know the kind of professors, and courses they will be getting.

The possible recommendations do not affect this determination to publish Profiles 73. The staff of Profiles have the money to publish, he says, and they also have an unmistakeable mandate from the ASUS and from student fees to print the volume. But Sutherland emphasised to the Journal that he is not convinced that the present structure is the best one. "To have an accurate course evaluation guide you need faculty participation and involvement, along with students. As well, you need experts on questionnaires, money, and a lot of time."

He feels that the principle of informal evaluations espoused by Dean Platenius is a good idea "but, if you're going to publish, you ntain...

or a molehill?

- hogarth

"Quite frankly, I think that a lot of the motivation behind putting out a course evaluation guide is to look at everybody else's dirty linen."

PLATENIUS. I should make it clear that there's no uniform attitude among the faculty. A lot depends on the way the course guide is done. Now, if you get a situation with 20 per cent of the students saying they like the course, 20 per cent hating it, and the rest in between, then the course guide's pretty useless.

Our view - I emphasize again, the committee has not finished its deliberations - is to consider leaving it entirely up to the DSC rep, the Department, the faculty members, as to just how the report of the class rep is to be made. In other words, one of the proposals which we're considering, as one of the main methods of course appraisal, is as follows: The class representative would be required to give a report, in writing, to the instructor and to the department head, on the conduct of the course. Now, in some courses it might just be that the class rep scribbles a little note: 'Psychology 475, OK'. That might be entirely satisfactory. For another kind of course it might be better to use a little questionnaire.

One thing that I would like to see in this report is a statement of the methods used in collecting the information. As well, the class rep has somehow got to make clear to whom the course appeals (honours students might to unhappy, general students might be happy, etc.)

Now that's a very informal kind of appraisal.

JOURNAL. Do you think appraisal might be weakened by that very informality?

PLATENIUS. Possibly - but I think it's that informality that we need. We need students and staff members to start talking to each other. To leave this to a big course evaluation at the end of a course leads to attitudes like, 'Well, I'll have my chance to have my say then.'

But that isn't all. Another of the things which we are considering is that we might have a single, very brief questionnaire, which could be distributed to students at the option of the class or department, or which could be required. It might be something like an adjective checklist. I'll explain the reasons for this after explaining what it is. It's simply a list of 10 adjectives - challenging, difficult, interesting, and so on. The student is asked to assume that he's taking five courses, and to rank the courses from (1) the most to (5) the least time-consuming or whatever. A quickie simple questionnaire, which is not diagnostic - what's being evaluated here is, basically, how good the course is in relation to other courses.

The purpose of this is twofold. The main purpose is to get an evaluation relative to a certain set of courses. We feel there's a certain element of bias in the present course evaluation. A student may feel that all of his university courses are lousy, they're all mass education or whatever. This means that he may judge a course, not in relation to his other courses, but to the same degree of badness. One thing which we need is a relative judgment which is clearly a relative judgment. There may be people who like all their courses, lap up all of them - they're not really interested in that, you're interested in how a course stacks up against other courses. The other reason for having this little questionnaire is simply to provide a check on the methods of appraisal.

Somebody would have to analyze this thing, and I imagine that would wind up being this office. Again, I don't see any reason why the whole world has to know. It's the business of the department head and the instructor to know - I'm not even sure it's the Dean's business to know.

We're also concerned with the division between consumer satisfaction and professional judgment. We're a little bit worried that undue emphasis on student input would tend to make instructors pander to students who enjoy their courses. What I personally would like to see, and I think most committee members would like to see, is increased participation by staff.

JOURNAL. By sitting in on each other's courses?

PLATENIUS. I think that the committee is unlikely to require such a specific system of staff evaluation. It's unnecessary in some departments. But what we may decide to do is simply to point out the need for this.

JOURNAL. Have you considered the use of external evaluators?

PLATENIUS. We've thought of it. This may be useful in some correspondence courses, but otherwise it wouldn't be all that appropriate. One reason is that external evaluators are often a bit chary of criticising. This is often the case with an external examiner in a graduate student's oral. Rather, we must have communication between people who know each other.

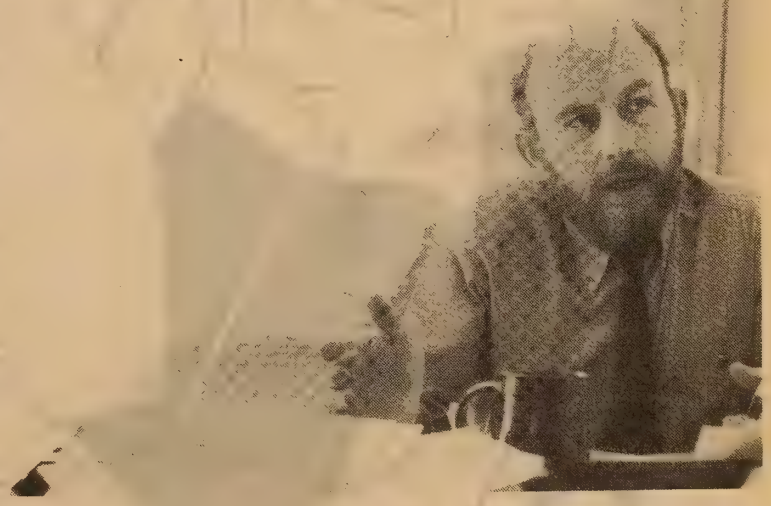
It helps to have someone sit in on your course and say, 'I'm not sure your students understood that point.' That kind of communication helps. You wouldn't be able to get a staff member to sit in on all the sessions of another instructor's course, so he wouldn't get the full flavour. But if you try this, usually it helps.

JOURNAL. What kind of reaction do you think your report is going to get?

PLATENIUS. Well, I think there may be some controversy about the publication issue. It is fairly clear that, once in a long, long while, the improvement in a course is the result of publicity on its failings.

What we have to remember is that instructors can get turned off to teaching just as students can get turned off to learning. Students shouldn't take courses which are enjoyable; rather, they should take courses which will benefit them.

nd speaks



need statistical information."

Asked what effect the report might have on Profiles, Sutherland replied that the recommendations might have an adverse effect on write-ups by professors, "but I hope this doesn't happen, because their contributions are very important."

Nevertheless, he is definite that Profiles 73 will be ready on time, by September 1. As well, separately published evaluations of first-year courses will be ready by August 1 and will be mailed to all prospective freshmen.

Sutherland maintains that students are making use of the guides in the selection of their courses, especially those in second year. The problem this year was that Profiles 72 was poorly distributed and was only available the day before classes, at which point its value became somewhat minimized. He was unable to state how many copies of Profiles had actually been picked up by students.

The difference between course appraisal, the new term of the committee, and course evaluation, is clear to Sutherland: "Appraisals won't be published, evaluations will."

- hogarth

"Instructors can get turned off to teaching, remember."

A Wedding In White

An easy film to hate

The following is a conversation with Bill Fruett, writer-director of Wedding in White. Also present was actor Doug McGrath, who played Billy in the film. The interviewer was Ian McLeod.

Wedding in White, with Donald Pleasance, Carol Kane, Boris Petrie. Written-Directed by Bill Fruett. Canadian Film Awards Best Picture, 1972. Now showing at Odeon Hyland Theatre.

Wedding in White is an easy film to hate. It is depressing. It is sordid. It leers greedily into the empty lives of people who bumble about in noisy futility, stubbornly avoiding understanding or communication. As a view of a Canada which is sexist, militaristic, implicitly and explicitly violent, it is a kick in the ass. It may be a bad movie. I've got nothing to compare it with.

Here's the deal. We are somewhere in war-time Canada. (The sense of period is carried off extremely well through all elements of the film). Jeannie, a naive and rather dull sixteen-year-old is raped by a "friend" of her brother's, and becomes pregnant. She does not react to the situation - she has no previous knowledge to react from, and nowhere to turn. Subsequently, she is attacked by her best friend, vilified by her father (a guard in a POW camp) as a disgraceful slut, and deserted by her mother. In the end her virtue is salvaged by her father's friend Sandy, a pathetic relic of World War I. Thus the "wedding in white", a title which refers to Jeannie's second hand wedding gown.

Jeannie is the victim of an environment which is culturally bankrupt. She lives in the shadow of an extreme double-standard where Puritanism and phornography complement one another. The only men around are soldiers and Legionnaires, men of honour whose sole characteristic is a hollow dignity - every occasion (family reunion, ceremonial banquet, wedding reception) is an excuse to get desperately drunk. The family is dead, and the outside world holds no promise. Jeannie's only attempt at self-realization comes in imitating the cheap glamour of the movie magazines.

There's not really that much to look at. The clothing, the furniture, the interiors, even the food is wretchedly drab. But the interactions between the characters, although usually devoid of real content, reach unexpected peaks of emotional intensity. This intensity, combined with the prevalence of extreme close-ups, (which can make two people seem to crowd a room), makes the film both immediately arresting and memorable, a nightmare of irony, frustration, and doublethink.

Q. How did you become involved in the film industry?

Fruett: (laughter) Have you got three hours? It started in acting, and I fell back on writing and photography to support myself. I went to California, worked as an editor for small film companies, but I've always aimed towards directing.

Q. Who conceived the idea of Wedding in White?

Fruett: I wrote the script as a stage play in 1965. Several years later I gave Doug a copy, and he liked it. By this time I was thinking of a film, and the play was the last thing I wanted. But we got together, and did a lot of the casting with the film in mind.

Doug directed the stage play. I sat back and tried to take a more objective look at it.

Q. Did you run into difficulties turning the play into a film?

Fruett: It's still very theatrical, I think. But I never wanted the actors just standing delivering lines. If they weren't moving we had to think of how we could move with the cameras. The stage performances were larger we wanted it to be more realistic. People adapted fairly well. I only had to concentrate on Pleasance and the girl moving in.

Q. Pleasance often reminded me of Alf Garner, the patriotic, lower-class, war-time Englishman in Till Death Do Us Part, a character who was a precursor of TV's Archie Bunker. Did you ever think of the play as a comedy?

McGrath: I don't know who would feel that way.

Fruett: In the play, there was more humour. Some of the moments were used differently. But I was worried when the Bunker series came out. I was afraid it might destroy the think I wanted to do if people got used to it.

Q. Did you write the play with any moral ideas or "messages" consciously in mind?

Fruett: I was most concerned with the Hyprocrisy of this class of man. This type of bigot is detestable because he's based on real people. I was very young when I saw all of it.

Also, I've always been very sympathetic to the female role, but I wasn't trying to make a great Women's Lib message.

Q. I was thinking of that. The only lasting or effective bonds in the film are between men. The women are unable to get together, both because of social position and inner weakness.

McGrath: That's also a sign of the times, and it's still basically true to a great degree. Especially with a war going on, it's a man's world.

Fruett: That whole link of comradeship, these old army guys had a devotion to each other and a belief in something. These were the men that got up out of the trenches and walked into walls of gas and died like animals. Christ, you've got to really brainwash people to get them into that.

Q. Can you point to directors or films that have influenced you?

Fruett: I know little things have influenced me, but I couldn't say off-hand. That opening shot, I could say was Bergmonish. In the basement with the dog - I think I saw a Kazan movie where he missed a possibility that I tried to explore. I don't know how much is invention, how much extension. You need to direct a few pictures to start seeing something that's really your own.

Q. Is it important to you that there be a distinctively Canadian film industry?

Fruett: Oh, yeah, definitely.

Q. What's the cause of the industry's slow growth?

Fruett: Investment, and lack of interest on the part of the Canadian public. We've got a problem - we have to compete with the largest film industry in the world.

I think the measures the government took in the music industry seem to be successful. We've got to start getting tough, we have to make Canadians become involved, we have to put on quotas, close some doors.

We don't even own the chains in this country - our distributors are just office-boys for the whole set-up. You're talking about 70 or 80 cents on the buck that's going right out of this country - millions and millions of dollars.

Why can't we sell our pictures down there? 'Cause they don't want them. That's it. Fine. We don't want theirs either.

I know we're dealing with everybody's entertainment but Canadians are just not concerned - most of them don't give a shit about their country in any way. We've had it very good for a long time - but we're losing the country in the process.

Q: Why, then, did you choose non-Canadians to act your lead roles.

Fruett: Doug and I talked about two or three Canadian actors for the lead role. One was busy, one was very snotty, and one didn't bother to show - he said I wasn't a director, just a script-writer. Donald Pleasance came over right away on the merits of the script.

I don't think two out of ten is bad. This is one of the first Canadian films to get American distribution - and it's purely on the basis of Donald Pleasance. That'll get exposure for Doug and Paul - and it's the only way any Canadian is going to become a star and stay here.

You can't expect investors to take all the risks. Somewhere there's got to be a chance for them to get their money back.

Q: What kind of people were investing?

Fruett: Typical Bay Street people. They created a company for that one film. There's a tax shelter now, which isn't a very good reason, but it brings them out.

The CFDC's really gotten tough - that was the hardest money to get. I had the backers, Pleasance, my record as a writer, the American distribution, and I still couldn't convince them. The play's success was that extra push.

Continued on Page 12

TUITION FEES REMINDER

The Board of Trustees has approved the Principal's recommendation that students who pay the balance of their fees in February will not be assessed the $15 late payment charge normally due after January 31. Instead, the January and February late payment penalties will be charged against those students who have not paid the balance of their fees on or before February 28, 1973. (That is tomorrow.)

meeting:

QUEEN'S STUDENT LIBERALS

8:00 p.m. Stirling B
Wed., Feb. 28th

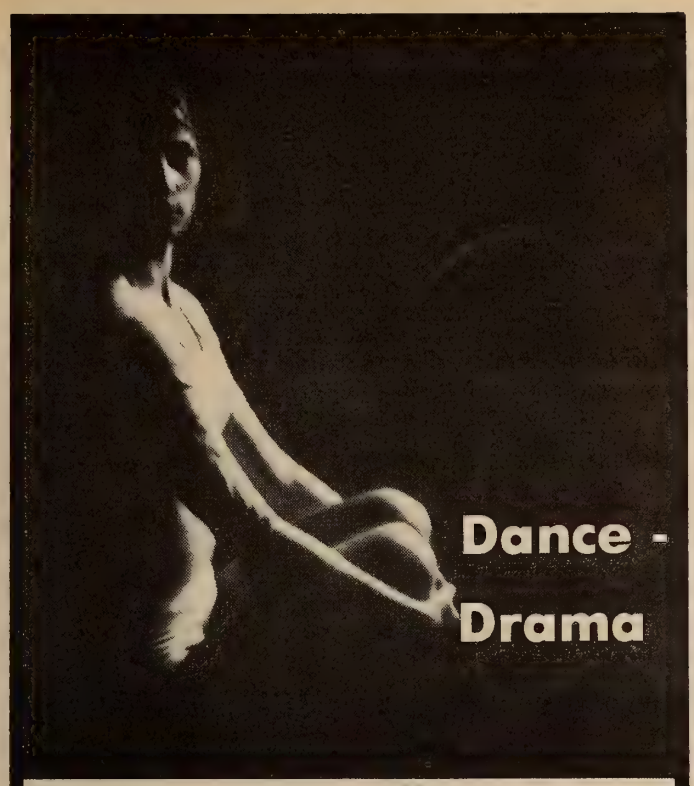
WANT MONEY?

The Alma Mater Society Education Commission invites submissions from any interested parties for financial support for events next year.

Apply to the AMS Inner Office

by Friday, March 31, 1973

WANTED ALIVE



For Fall of '73

CHAIRMAN

For a Second Coming '73

apply in writing to:

EDUCATION COMMISSION

by Marjorie Driscoll

"We present a kind of dance-drama", explained Sandy Aitken, choreographer and founder of the Queen's Modern Dance Company.

The scene was Convocation Hall, last Sunday afternoon, as this versatile dance group rehearsed for its second show of the season. The stage was set with piles of huge coloured blocks, a rocking chair, and a child's tea set. Two dancers in gingham smocks rehearsed a sequence entitled "The Doll", while Ms. Aitken and Morrison Bock, the show's director, discussed the finishing touches for this number.

"We try to adhere to a strict scenario, presenting a specific course of events that the audience can easily understand," she continued. "There may be universal ramifications to each situation, but we let the audience find the broader meanings."

Mr. Bock and Ms. Aitken collaborate in the creation of each dance sequence, coordinating the choreography, the story line and the music to present a basic human situation with humour, precision and depth.

The Queen's Modern Dance Company's first presentation of the season drew critical acclaim and attracted sell-out audiences. Entitled "The Twice-Born: The Legend of Dionysus", it was a work composed in the modern dance idiom. The group is now diversifying and branching out in its second presentation to perform in such diverse styles as ballet, jazz, and primitive dance.

The dancers plan to begin their programme with a colorful jazz number to music by Bacharach, entitled "Inkipimus" (The title can be translated as "We are beginning"). After that,they will present "The Doll" set to piano pieces by Satie, and "The Three Faces of Death" with music by Aaron Copeland. They'll round out the first half of the evening with a comic look at Adam and Eve. The second half will begin with "Masquerade", a satirical look at the Renaissance Court, complete with King, Queen, and Jester. The next selection "Dementia" promises to be an intriguing experiment, and may be the highlight of the evening. This solo is an intimate study of schizophrenia, danced to a spoken-word score electronically arranged by David Keane of the Music Department. The words are those of the dancer herself! This will be followed by a balletic "Pas de Deux" to music by Janacek. The concluding work on the program will be in direct contrast to the previous classical selection. A primative rite, "Octogenesis", will be performed to the rhythms of a single drummer.

The company includes Ms. Aitken, , and Janice Hladki, Lynn Lorrimer, Antony Morgan, Julia Morgan, Ann O'Brien, Renee O'Farrell, Joseph Riha and Vlasta Riha. The performance is in Convocation Hall this Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, March 1, 2, and 3. Curtain time is 8:30 and tickets are available from the Division of Concerts Box Office in the Agnes Etherington Art Centre at $2.00 (students $1.00).

The New Executive of the Graduate Student Society invites GSS members to meet with them, Friday, March 2nd at Grad House for T.G.I.F.

backagaindays

Tuesday, February 27

2:30 pm - Institute of Commonwealth and Comparative Studies: Tercentenary Commonwealth Seminar.Speaker Mr. E. B. Maycock, Information Officer Barbados High Commission. Admission is free. Watson Hall. Room 517.

8:00 pm - Sociology Smoker. Pub at Students Union. Coffee and donuts free. Beer 45c.

8:00 pm - Graduate student's Christian Fellowship presents Samuel Escobar on the topic "I Disagree with God." Stirling Theatre D.

8:30 pm - Lecture by Prof. J. A. Leith on "The Cult of the Leader in Art - Napoleon, Stalin, Mao." Room 517, John Watson Hall.

9:00 pm - Dept. of Film Studies presents 8½ by Fellini (1962). Ellis Hall.

9:00 pm - Poetry Reading - Bill Bissett and Robert Hogg as part of the tour of the League of Canadian Poets. Agnes Etherington.

Wednesday, February 28

4:00 pm - Dept. of Psychiatry Grand Rounds: "The Problem-Oriented Record in Psychiatry" with Dr. Richard Grant, Assistant Prof., Dept. of Medicine, Univ. of Vermont. Etherington Hall Aud.

8:00 pm - World Federalists of Canada presents lecture by Prof. A. M. Taylor, Dept. of Political Studies, Queen's University, on "Canadian Nationalism - Is It Compatible with Internationalism?" Room 517, John Watson. There will be a question and discussion period following the talk.

8:00 pm - Dept. of Russian public lecture on "The Caprice of Beauty by Pasternak" with speaker Prof. J. W. Dyck, Head, Dept. of Slavic Languages and Literatures, Univ. of Waterloo. Kingston Hall Staff Lounge.

8:00 pm - Dept. of Music recital: Organ majors in B. Music program and students in solo and chamber ensemble performances. Chalmers Church, 212 Barrie St.

8:00 pm - Dept. of German Film Program: "Der Findling". Free admission. Kingston Hall. Rm. 101.

Thursday, March 1

11:30 am - Dept. of German public lecture: "Variants of Nihilism in German Literature during the 19th and 20th Centuries." Speaker is Prof. J. W. Dyck, Head, Dept. of German and Slavic Languages and Literatures, Univ. of Waterloo. Kingston Hall. Room 200.

3:00 pm - Dept. of Georgraphy Lecture on "Sweden: Location in Information Space." Speaker is Prof. Peter Gould, Geog. Dept., Penn State University, Ontario Hall, Rm. 310.

3:30 pm - Dept. of Psychology colloquium "Adapting to a Changing Social Environment" with speaker Prof. W. P. Tenner, Dept. of Psych., University of Michigan, Humphrey Hall, Room 131.

8:00 pm - Dept of Spanish and Italian Lecture: "The Italians: Myth and Reality" with speaker Captain Sergio Amadio, General Staff Officer of Italian Army. Theological Building, Room 209.

8:30 pm - Dept. of Drama: Queen's Modern Dance Co. Admission students - $1.00, non-students-$2.00. Convocation Hall. Tickets available from Division of concerts Agnes Etherington. Running through March 3.

7:30 pm - Bridge Club. McLaughlin Room. Students Union.

8:00 pm - Eighth Annual Wallace Graham Lecture. Alan S. Cohen M.D. Amyloidosis - current Investigative and clinical concepts. Etherington Hall.

9:00 pm - Dept. of Film Studies presents "Pretty Poison". (Noel Black, 1968). Ellis Hall.

Friday, March 2

10.30 am - Dept. of Biochemistry Seminar by Dr. Vincent G. Alfrey. It will concern "Changes in the Phosophorylation and Synthesis of Nuclear Phosphoproteins at times of Gene Activation." Humphrey Hall, Room 131.

4:00 pm - Speaker Claire Culhane, Authoress and Member of Canadian Hospital Staff in Quang Ngai, Vietnam, speaks on "Why is Canada in Vietnam?" 3rd Floor Students Union.

8:30 pm . Dept. of Drama: Queen's Modern Dance Co. Convocation Hall. Admission - Students $1.00, non-students $2.00, Tickets available from Division of Concerts Agnes Etherington. March 3 as well.

Tuesday, March 6

8:00 - 10:00 pm - Public Lecture sponsored by Sociology Dept. "Communism, Capitalism and Multinationalism." I. L. Horowitz, Rutgers University, Dupuis Auditorium.

Off Campus.

Capitol - Tues. Deliverance
Starting Wednesday - Lady Sings The Blues.
Hyland - Wedding in White
Starting Wednesday - Jeremiah Johnson
Odeon - Vanishing Wilderness
Grand Theatre - Feb. 27 - Winnipeg Ballet.

Materick coming in concert

On Thursday March 1st Bitter Grounds will present Ray Materick and Thom Roberts in concert. Two shows will be offered at 7:00 and 9:30 in Grant Hall. Tickets are $1.00 for Queen's students and $1.50 for non-students, and are available in the John Orr Room from Monday to Thursday, 10:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. Non-student tickets are also being sold at House of Sounds and Tremblays.

Considered by "Beetle" to be one of the major talents in the world to date, Ray Materick is a sensitive performer and musician. An articulate songwriter, Ray's lyrics are perceptive with a clarity that gives his material universal appeal.

Ray was born in Brantford, Ont. in 1946. He has tried his hand at songwriting and performing and today at the age of 23 has a hit single "Hard Times-Season of Plenty" from his debut album "Sidestreets". Both reflect the richness and fullness of his guitar work as well as the sensitivity and imagination of his lyrics. His album has earned him much attention and he has yet to receive an unfavourable review.

Thom Roberts is an accomplished blues artist from Ottawa, and has performed frequently at Le Hibou as well as Carleton University and Sir George Williams where he received rave reviews. He has a vast repertoire of sad-happy songs, which with ever-changing rhythm, carry his audience through his own shifting moods. Thom's guitar work is especially appealing, moving from hard-driving and earthy to slow and easy tunes. His style reflects the feeling and clarity of the "old blues masters" while maintaining an honest, non-commercial, personal communication with the audience.

unclassifieds

DO YOU NEED A house for next year? 4-6 bedrooms. Available in April. Present student occupants will sublet for summer. 544-9488.

TWO THIRD YEAR or intending graduate students are needed to share a three bedroom apartment at 102 Earl Street. Please contact Dave Roberts at 542-5182.

TO K.G., alias KORNY, aka EX P. of the WRC, alias Honourary P of the ADDY 2 VS, alias GODMOTHER of the ADDY TWO Mafia, alias cigar-smoking, BWOC. HAPPY BIRTHDAY yesterday. Now that you're no longer a teenager, you'll have to turn in your hat.

TO K.G., alias all that, we decided to keep the dollar, but hope you had a happy birthday.

HOUSE TO SUBLET from May to September '73. Beautifully furnished and centrally located. Call 548-8644.

HABITATION wanted for 3 or 4 people next year. Large number of rewards offered or equivalent. Phone 544-7435,32.

BITTER GROUNDS will be holding its elections for next year's committee on Wednesday, March 14 at 7 pm in the Jackson Lounge of Clark Hall. Anyone interested in working with Bitter Grounds or finding out about us, please come to our meetings every Wednesday at 7 pm or drop into Bitter Grounds some weekend.

LYN -- you have to unrap the whole damn thing.

LOST -- a black cat with white spot on its tummy. Goulet, 544-7605.

ROOMS AVAILABLE in Science '44 Co-op. If interested, phone Ruth Fraser at 544-2793.

MARIAN -- in your handwriting inside the case for PALMER'S SAW a note says "Borrowed saw! RJM". Will trade for the saw.

HE MUST HAVE been good for more than 44, Steve.

GRASS encounters stacks - no comment.

MES CHERS EXECS Howie, Clyde and Ray: Merci coupbeau (sic) for a great week in the snow. We had a great time. Love, the ski bunnies.

BUSES FOR QUEEN'S Ski Club Trip to Tremblant leave Friday, March 2 at 4 pm in front of Victorial Hall.

BEST WISHES TO John Readshaw from everyone on the Ste Anne Trip. Make sure that Rehab Gal of yours takes good care of that leg.

THREE BEDROOM APARTMENT available May 1 to August 31. Brock and University, 544-1462.

ADDIO; HASTALUEGO; ADJO; SAYONARA; AUF WIEDERSEHEN; FAREWELL - no matter how you say it they all add up the same thing -the Arts formal on March 10.

Are you getting married this spring? Let Photo Image record the things YOU want to remember. Our rates are competitive and we guarantee quality results. Call us at 546-7770 or drop by the Gallery at 33 Brock Street.

TO ADDY TWO, Partner Dave, Richie, Brothers Rick and John, and all other friends, enemies, relations, cohorts etc, a special showing of the GREAT EPIC MAGNUM OPUS FILTHY CARTOON will be held tonight at 6 pm in the Adelaide Common Room under the auspices of the Dean of Women. Come only if prepared to give a standing ovation. G. K. G.

PA PEPPER: Ma and the kids want to thank you for a gangbuster week. We couldn't fathome it. See you all Thursday nite at the Pup. PS -- Remember the bucket.

ARE YOU: a Crab-Ridden Addy-2 Virgin; a Mutilated Morris Man; a Refugee from the Co-op Ratrace; or an Erond Exspurt ("ex": "has been spurt": "drip under pressure")? Peter, Joannie, Tad and Two Others of the Elect are re-opening their "House of Wong Fu" next year and need three more bipeds (M or F) to fill this orifice of eight. So go on - dare to be great. Make the obsene call or sleaze on over to 327 William. 549-0696. PS - Viely good house, cockloach flee even.

LET'S MAKE A DEAL - How much wold you say a HOT BUFFET DINNER and dance is worth? If you have guessed right then you'll know that $6.00 a couple is a real bargain! The 401 Inn will be the setting for AUF WIEDERSEHEN on March 10, 7:30 to 1:00 am. The profit will be YOURS.

EUROPE SUMMER 73 TORONTO to LONDON from $79 one way or $155 return - Take a dependable charter. Contact AOSC, 44 St. George St., Toronto 5, 416-962-8404 - or your Student Council.

BOOK EARLY AND SAVE - Travelling in Europe INTERNATIONAL STUDENT I.D.,-card, student railpass, car rentals, cheapest and most dependable charter flights, camping tours etc. all available now from: AOSC, 44 St. George St. Toronto 5, 416-962-8404. (The Student Travel co-op owned by your Student Council).

TRICOLOR JOURNAL PHOTOGRAPHERS: Meeting Thursday night, 7:30 pm in Tricolor Office. Be there. Note: call 546-7908 if you can't be there. Perry.

POST GRADS: who the hell is running the GSS? Find out Friday, March 2 at TGIF, Grad House.

THE WOMEN'S CAUCUS objects to the below ad!

DID YOU KNOW THAT . . ."The only position aptly handled by women is prone!!!!!!".

WHOEVER SUBMITTED the above must be leading a deprived life.

HEY, HEY, HEY What do you say, say, say about letting crunch and the kid have your 2 or three bedroom apartment for 73-74? Call 544-7077 or 544-7132 please.

K.K. One Hour is equal to sixty minutes.

WHERE WAS the Bacardi???

WOODY -- Wanna a drag? (Hang in there) K and P.

TRAVELLING THIS SUMMER? Get quick, quality service on passport photos from Photo Image,, 3 Brock Street. If you bring one or more friends, you'll all get 20 per cent off our regular low prices. Same rates apply on job application or identification pictures, too. Call us at 546-7770 for an appointment today.

THERE IS A LIMITED number of tickets for AUD WIEDERSEHEN so be one of the lucky couples to attend this formal dance at the 401 Inn on March 10. Tickets will go on sale February 25 in the John Orr Room 11:30 to 2:30 every day or just call Pat Sinclair at 544-0264 and reserve one now.

K.K. One hour Equals 420 minutes.

TO K. and P. We drag between the hours of six and a quarter to the hour . . . W. at 154 CARE is a meaningful four-letter word. If you 'care' for the sick and hungry of the world, send your dollars to . . .

CARE Canada, Dept. 4, 63 Sparks St.
Ottawa K1P 5A6

Wedding in White

Continued from Page 10

Q: CFDC: What's that?

McGrath: The Canadian Film Development Corporation. Let's talk about the CFDC.

Fruett: I thought everyone who's in film automatically took it into account.

Q: I don't think Super-8 small-timers can . . .

Fruett: Sure you can! There's that one thing that you must have - a half-decent script. They have a new category, the very low, which is under $100,000.

Q: $100,000?

Fruett: I know, but you can do it. All you have to do is raise $40,000 - or what represents $40,000 - your technicians work free, but they're worth something on paper - and if you show some promise, they'll put up towards $60,000. Find it anywhere else.

Q: So we have all the film-making talent we need up here, and it's just a question of money?

Fruett: I think the picture shows you that Donald Pleasance is a great actor, but everybody in that bloody movie's acting right alongside him and nobody's taking a back seat at all.

As soon as we shut the door . . .well, 800 movies come into this country every year, and we maybe make 20. And they're not even being shown.

I think we're going to have a definite kind of Canadian film. Wedding, Mon Oncle Antoine,even The Rowdyman show that we make a quieter, perhaps a slower film.

MBA

Business Administration — Arts Administration
Public Administration — MBA/LLB Combined . . .

The key to success . . . one or more graduate degree?

The Class of 72 left the Faculty of Administrative Studies at York with an average salary of $11,343 for those with less than two years of work experience.

That was one of the highest hiring averages in Canada for MBA graduates.

By graduation day, 87% were employed, and by mid-summer we had jobs open with no one to fill them . . . two bits of tangible evidence of the regard for our graduates that is held by the community.

Do you suppose those employers have discovered something?

YORK UNIVERSITY

For information, contact:
ASSISTANT DEAN D. HATHAWAY
Faculty of Administrative Studies 4700 Keele Street, Toronto presented in concert by

BITTER GROUNDS

ray materick

with thom roberts

TUES., MARCH 1st

GRANT HALL

students $1.00
non-students $1.50
tickets on sale in John Orr Room

VB Gals close, but lose in finals

by Sue Moffatt

The result of the Women's Intercollegiate Volleyball Championships which were held at Waterloo on Feb. 16th and 17th, was a larger version of our Gal's all too familiar game pattern. They won the first five, (count 'em, five) matches with relative alacrity and style; only to drop the finals to Guelph with discouraging ease.

So we ended up second place of 6 in the consolations, is that so bad? Not really, if one can ignore the potential for championship which these girls displayed at various matches throughout the season and at the tournament. Indeed, anyone watching the elimination rounds play, would have predicted it, with little reservation, an easy Queen's championship. In the interests of honest journalism, it must be admitted that neither the swift-footed captain, Nancy Mills, nor the above-signed pencil-pusher, arrived on the scene until Friday night. Thus the reports of Friday's Queen's-Lutheran, games, must be limited to saying that we dispatched each of them in 3-up, 3-down matches. That night, Guelph proved to be more tenacious, forcing it to a 4 game match, and an impressive Queen's victory. Congratulation is surely in order for our Gals, who accomplished a game shutout: blanking Guelph 15-0. While credit is due to one Jane Peterson, who managed to serve every point, reports have it that the entire team played excellently to attain the magic score.

Saturday morning's match versus Laurentian, continued the clan sweep; as our gals hung in and on, to win with some expertise, in 3 games. Slow starters at best, we yet overcame our tendency either to pack it in during long volleys, or to become torpid and disjointed. Calling the lines and the ball paid off with scores of 15-9, 15-8 and 15-10.

An hour later we met Carleton, an unpredictable and explosive team. But even their enthusiasm over their Guelph victory, couldn't carry them over Queen's consistently strong net play and coverage. It must be admitted that the first 2 games left much to be desired from a Queen's perspective. We took a disconcerting pleasure in posing on the court rather than moving over it, and in playing a "do your own thing" strategy which made team work a bit strained. Couple this persistent refusal to move; either into a new covering position or to return into an old one; with a lack of intense determination, and you have Queen's winning the first game 15-12 and losing the second 15-8. But not to worry. Some stern coaching and sideline support, and our Gals took off in the remaining games with aggressiveness and skill. Numerous excellent plays abounded at the net: offensively in spikes and tips, and particularly in defensive blocking coverage. Although Carleton made sure we had to work for our points, they couldn't keep us down, and we put the 5th match in the bag with the next 2 game's victories: 15-10 and a reassuring 15-4.

All of which brings us to the finals at 5:00 Saturday night against the last night's vanquished, Guelph. Compared to the din of the elimination round's concurrent games, the hush in the court and strict formality of proceedings lent the final match a funeral mood which proved all too appropriate. Both teams began aggressively and optimistically. Somehow, however, Queen's never really got cooking. Was it "stage fright', or some paralysis that came of knowing that "this time it really counts", which slowly froze our team into a state of near zombieism? Ours was a gradual dying down: interrupted by violently sudden action. Spiking and coverage would be brilliant for a few plays, then subside into the bland muddle of "too late, too slow, too soft." The 15-9 Guelph score of the first game, by itself, was not disaster. Already that day, our Gals had proven themselves capable of a more than satisfactory comeback. This time, we just didn't get off the ground. As Queen's became slower, more panicked and discouraged, Guelph became more confident and aggressive in inverse proportion It was all over in just 30 minutes, with Guelph taking the second game of the best of three match, 15-6. It was a bitter pill for those who played and those who watched; the more so for it's being too unexpected, and unjustified.

No one, however despondent, could miss the opportunity to witness the great showdown as the defending champions, Western, met U. of T. in the finals at 6:00. With Western's finest net player out with an ankle injury, it was a point by point battle between their fore-shortened team and "Little Igore's" company of giantesses. No amount of description could relate the innumerable magnificent plays made by each side. Enough to say that it was Western that came out on top. Despite their loss of the first game 15-8, they rallied to down the Big Blues 15-11, 15-11, in a 90 minute match. Watching such excellent volleyball was enough to inspire any team member to visions of '73-'74 success. Perhaps already our Golden Gals are contemplating a bigger and better "next time."

Synchro Gals take OWIAA crown

The synchronized swimming team captured Queen's fifth OWIAA team title of the season over the weekend, narrowly edging the University of Waterloo squad for top spot in the ten-team competition. Queen's relied on superior team depth and the fine efforts of Anne Malone and Anne Morawetz in picking up the victory.

The Gals got off to a solid start Friday, when Misses Malone and Morawetz tied for second in the Solo competition. Queen's then added another second-place finish, behind Toronto, in the Team Synchro competition; Ann Oldfield, Trish Hodgins, Pat Wilkins, Heather Demeza, Lindsay Coates, Sandy Imrie and Vicki Hand did the work here.

Saturday, Queen's depth came to the fore in the compulsory figures, where Anne Malone, Anne Morawetz and Heather Demeza placed 3-4-5 behind Waterloo's ace Denise Bonnell. The fifth-place points didn't count, since only the top two from each school could score, but that kept anyone else from gaining ground. The final Duet competition, on Saturday afternoon, decided the outcome of the championships. For Queen's, Malone and Morawetz placed first, while Hand and Hodgins came in 6th, to clinch their narrow victory.

The overall level of competition was much higher this year, at least in part due to the efforts of coaches like Mrs. Norma Douglas of Queen's. Many fine club swimmers are continuing their competitive careers in university rather than through outside amateur organizations, and the availability of superior coaching and top-grade facilities is the big reason. Mrs. Douglas, whose daughter is the current Canadian junior champion, has done much for Synchro here, and, together with the team manager Mary Jean Duncan, deserves hearty congratulations for Queen's success.

bews news

by Peter Watts

The race for the Bews trophy, emblematic of the men's intra-mural championship, is getting tighter and tighter as the season comes to a close. Civil and Math, who have led the race since the second week of the season, are still clinging to their lead but are having to withstand a tremendous challenge from the members of Commerce '73. The Commercemen, who were as much as 5,000 points behind earlier this month, now trail the Engineers by only 1500 points. And it appears that Commerce boys have a good shot at overtaking Civil as I look at the events still to be completed.

The 2 teams will definitely face each other in the first round of the hockey playoffs. The first game of the two-game total goal series will be played on Tuesday night at 9:30 in the Harty Arena. The Commercemen also appear to be very strong in broomball while Civil and Math are not out of the picture, but don't appear to have the same strength. In contrast, Civil and Math have a strong curling entry while Commerce '73 has been having its troubles so far.

The final weeks of the season will also see the two championship contenders clashing in basketball and 10 pin bowling. The first of the three-game series will be bowled tonight at the Cloverleaf Lanes.

In waterpolo, Commerce '73 got a break in the scheduling for the playoffs. Civil and Math, Commerce '75 and Commerce '74 will play a round-robin tournament with the winner to meet Commerce '73 for the championship. The final winners get a special prize: they will meet the girls intercollegiate waterpolo team on Monday March 5th.

As of last Friday, here are the top ten on the Bews totem pole.

1.	Civil & Math	34,743
2.	Commerce '73	33,288
3.	PHE	26,126
4.	Mechanical	23,621
5.	Mining	23,350
6.	Commerce '74	21,467
7.	Commerce '75	20,813
8.	Law '74	18,418
9.	Chemical	17,251
10.	Business Grads	16,091

Track Gaels put two in Nationals

An abbreviated version of Queen's track team placed two of their number in the Canadian Senior Championships on the strength of results in Saturday's Ontario competition. Dave Jarvis and Don Price finished 1-2 in the 50-m hurdles, with both recording personal-best times (6.6 and 7 flat), and will be running in the Finals at Quebec City on March 17th.

Newcomer Jim Crowe reached the semifinals of the hotly contested 50-m sprint, recording a personal-best time of 6.1 seconds, and added another personal mark of 53.1 in the 400-m run. Middle-distance man Brian Aiken, who has been slowly returning to form after a training injury, took 4th in the 400-m run in 1:57.5, while Queen's grad Tony Verhoeven came 10th in 1:59.1. Rookie Dieter Stein recorded another personal-best in the 1500-m, clocking the metric mile in 4:04.6. Doug Robinson finished well back in 4:27.0. Finally, Bill Bryden and Walter Eadie placed 22nd and 18th respectively in the 3000-m run; Bryden's time of 9:02.7 was a best-ever time for the Queen's veteran.

In the field events, Axel Becke was the only Gael of note, finishing 5th in the long jump with a leap of 6.57 metres.

For the women, Aileen Kirby and Kathy Wynne both recorded personal-best times in the 400-m; Kathy came in with a 64 flat clocking, while Aileen ran a 64.3.

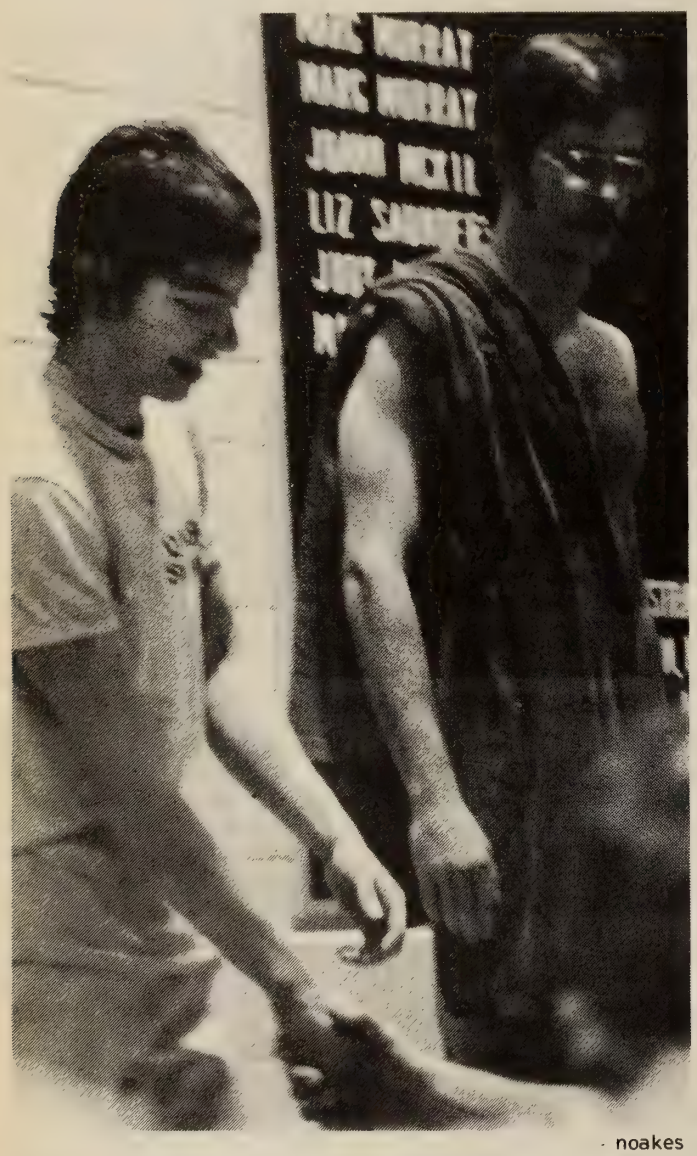
Next Saturday, the Gaels, reinforced by the return of such outstanding performers as Hugh Fraser, Keith Berriman, Archer Bay, Peter Fedyczko, and Ralph Yarnell, will set out after their second straight OUAA indoor championship. The Gaels ran away with the victory last year, as did the women, but the competition could be a little stiffer this time around.

Ski Gaels third

by Gail Munro

Queen's Men's Alpine Ski Team continued to show well in the Molson Cup University Series with a third-place finish in the Western Invitational Meet at Georgian Peaks in Collingwood. Carleton University won the two-run giant slalom race (for their third victory in as many meets), while the University of Toronto team came second in the field of eleven teams.

Excellent individual efforts by Queen's skiers included a third for Jamie Nielson, a sixth by Ian Nielson, and a seventh for Graham Bird out of the sixty-six racers who competed. Jamie and Ian currently hold down second and third places respectively behind Doug Carter of U. of T. in the tight individual points race for the Series' Championship.



The team returns to Collingwood this Friday for the McMaster Invitational at Craigleith Ski Club.

Five Gaels make Nationals

Swimmers 4th; best ever in OUAA

(STAFF) Queen's swim Gaels won what might be called a moral victory over the weekend, moving up from 6th to 4th place in the OUAA championships, despite an order-of-magnitude improvement in the calibre of competition. The improvement was especially gratifying to coach Larry Brawley, who had set fourth as the team's objective at the start of the season; the two-place jump wasn't an easy one for the Gaels to make.

The Gaels showed exceptional depth throughout the meet, but there were some individual stars as well. Rookies John Pearson, John Ireland and Darryl Penner, together with a resurgent Rob Herman, led the pool competitors, while Phil Millerd and Bill Kirkpatrick gave Queen's some diving points for the first time in some years. Pearson led things off for the Gaels, qualifying 5th in the 200 butterfly, then going on to take 3rd in the final, setting the first of 11 team records in 2:01.5, and edging out Bill Kennedy, last year's C.I.A.U. champion and an Olympic veteran. Ireland also got into the act early, picking up a third in the consolation finals of th same event . . Team Captain Steve Patterson then added points in the 50-yd. freestyle consolation final, tying the team record for the event in the process. Backstrokers Roger Rowan, Bryan Warren and Don Davies all placed in the 200 consolation final, recording personal-best times in the event.

noakes

Rookie star John Pearson (left) accepts silver medal congratulations after 100 butterfly, as Olympian Byron MacDonald looks on.

The tremendous depth possessed by the Gaels came out in the 200 I.M. finals, as the Gaels collected 39 points from the event. Rob Herman led the way with a bronze in the (team record) time of 2:10.2, while John Pearson was right behind in 4th spot, and Darryl Penner added a 6th. Veteran George Craig, who has been slowly returning to form over the course of the season, came up with a fine performance to win the consolation finals and record his personal best time for the event.

John Ker and Jim Easto added points in the 200 freestyle with personal-best times, and Jamie Noakes won the consolation final in the 200 breaststroke, adding 7th-place points to Queen's growing total. The 400 freestyle relay was one of the last events Friday night, and the Queen's team of Herman, Rowan, Penner, and Patterson nailed down a solid fourth spot finish, breaking the longstanding team record with a 3:32.6 clocking, nearly a full second under the old mark.

The 1650 freestyle turned out to be a real bloodbath this year, with all 12 of this year's finalists recording better times than last year's consolation winner. John Ireland led Queen's with a 19:10.2 time, a full 18 seconds under his old team record; it was good for 4th in the consolation finals. Jim Easto, John Ker, and Bryan Warren just missed the top twelve, with each recording personal-best times.

Moving over to the diving events, Phil Millerd placed a big 4th and Bill Kirkpatrick 9th on the one-metre board adding important points to the total, and acquitting themselves well in the toughest competition the OUAA (or OQAA, for that matter) has ever seen. The much improved Queen's diving team were a big reason for the jump from 6th to 4th this season, according to coach Larry Brawley (Ed. Note: His presence probably has something to do with it,too.)

Needless to say, the Gaels were well motivated going into the Saturday schedule, and in fact were already in 4th spot. Pearson again got the ball rolling, this time with a silver medal performance in the 100 butterfly sprint. He finished behind Byron MacDonald of Varsity, who was 6th in the event at Munich last summer. Count another team record here as well, in a fine 54.6 clocking. Herman and Patterson added some points in the 100 freestyle consolation finals, setting the stage for another rookie show. This time, Darryl Penner was the star. Penner blasted off the blocks in the 100 breaststroke to ace Toronto's Nick Rettman and collected the bronze with a time of 1:05.7 (bettering the team record by two full seconds). George Craig, Jim Gillis and Jamie Noakes all set their best times in this event.

In the 100 backstroke, Roger Rowan swam the fastest Queen's time of the year to pick up consolation points.

The 500 freestyle turned out to be even tougher than the 1650, with all the finalists bettering the 5th-place time from last year. Both Ker and Ireland qualified for the finals, and Ireland set a new team record of 5:23.7 with Ker close behind. Both added points that helped to maintain Queen's edge over 5th-place McMaster.

The 400 I.M. was another team record event. Herman rubbed out Pearson's mark by a second in 4:45.6 while racking up a first in the consolations. George Craig swam his best time ever in the heats, then dropped it again by 4 seconds in the finals of this event to keep the point total rising.

Back at the springboard, divers Millerd and Kirkpatrick were back in action, this time in the 3-metre competition. Millerd added another 4th, while Kirkpatrick came in 6th. Tom Caswell just missed the cut for the 12th spot in the preliminaries. During the evening finals, both Gaels were diving well, but a costly mistake on one dive pushed Millerd down to 8th spot, while Kirkpatrick pulled up to 5th. A great effort for both divers against the high calibre of competition, and 15 more points for Queen's.

The last events on the program were the relays; relay points count double, so big swings in the standings can come quickly if a team gets careless late in a meet.

The Gaels alertly did not let up, with the squad of Davies, Penner, Craig and Rowan taking a sixth in the 400 medley relay finals. The final event of the night, the 800 freestyle relay, was another Queen's spectacular. Led by a record-setting 200-yd opening leg from John Pearson, (1:54.5), the Gaels went on to cut twelve seconds off the old team mark and become the first Queen's 800 team to ever break 8:00 minutes, with a 7:58 clocking. Jim Easto (2:02), John Ker (1:58) and Steve Patterson (2:01) were the other members of the relay team.

The Gaels finished 4th, behind perennial champion U. of T., Waterloo, and Western, for the best performance ever by a Queen's swimming and diving team. However, the best news of the night was yet to come. The coaches of the competing schools met to decide on the team members for the CIAU Championships, and for the first time, Queen's men were selected. No less than five Gaels will be in Calgary on March 1st, 2nd, and 3rd; Rob Herman, Phil Millerd, and the 'terrible trio': John Pearson, John Ireland and Darryl Penner. Not a bad effort for a bunch of rookies and a few old men. The great thing is, they'll get better. It should be an interesting four years around the Queen's Pool.

George Craig heads for 1st in 200 I.M. consolations

-noakes

B-ball Gals lose in dying seconds in consolation finals

Queen's senior basketball Gals suffered another last-second defeat Saturday. This time, it came in overtime in the Consolation final of the OWIAA championships in Ottawa. The Gals were tied 59-all with Windsor at the end of regulation time, and the match was forced into a five-minute overtime period. Tough defense on the part of both teams characterized play in the overtime, but the Gals managed a bare 62-61 lead with only five seconds to go. Karen Carson had a bonus situation at the foul line, but the free-throw jinx that has long plagued the Gals struck, Windsor cleared the boards, and managed to work the ball downcourt. With two seconds on the clock, the Lancerettes hit a 20-foot jumper to make it 63-62, for Windsor. Pat Quigley led Queen's with 16 points, while Karen Flemming had 12 and Karen Carson 11. The Gals downed Waterloo and York on their way to the final.

In the championship division, the University of Western Ontario edged out McMaster in the final; Western beat Ottawa and McMaster downed Toronto to make an all-west final.

The Gals came close all year, but just missed making the playoffs in the top division. Only Karen Flemming will be gone next year, so that whoever inherits Brenda Mackie's job will have some good personnel to work with. All they need is a little luck with injuries.

Maybe next year...???

Gymnastics Gaels 3rd in OUAA

by Chris Woods

Let it never be said that the Queen's Gym Gaels are not generous in defeat. On Saturday they proved otherwise, by allowing what is probably a poorer team to overcome them in the race for second spot in the OUAA.

Queen's conceded 26.75 points to McMaster in the match, which saw York once again win the league championship, with a total score of 236.50. The problem appears to have been a classical case of super-psyche-out aggravated by what I can only describe as astounding judging on some events.

From its first appearance on the floor, the Queen's team exhibited considerable nervousness and distraction, and it showed from the beginning of the meet right through to the end. If anything, the severity of the problem increased as the meet progressed, for the poorer performances seemed to have a snowball effect within the team.

There could be a number of reasons for the Gael's difficulties in the competition. The evening time of the meet may have thrown them off, for they had been practising in the morning for the last week. The fact that Captain Jamie Archibald did not travel with the team to the meet because he was already at home in Toronto and his own depressed psychological state may have had something to do with it, also. But then, you can take rationales to infinity-perhaps the fact that the team was wearing a different style of uniform than it had previously explains the problem. When you face the problem square on, the answer seems to be that the Queen's gymnastics team requires more top-rate competitions and better psychological preparation for the league championship. This team has not yet demonstrated the resiliency to recover from one team member's wipe-out on an apparatus--everybody wipes out together.

This is definitely not intended to be a harsh and unsympathetic indictment of the Queen's team--far from it. I think the Gym Gaels are undoubtedly one of the top four university teams in Canada; I'm sure they're better as a team than McMaster. It's simply very regrettable and undoubtedly disappointing for the team members that in the only real clinch meets this year, they failed to rise to the occasion. Two weeks ago I said that the Queen's gymnasts could perform twenty per cent better than they did in the OUAA East. It is no exaggeration to say that the scores should have been twenty-five to thirty per cent better at this competition.

However, the scores were not completely a team problem. This meet saw some of the most ridiculous judging I have ever personally witnessed--in fact, the meet at times resembled a theatre of the absurd. Scores of McMaster were grossly inflated for certain individuals on almost every event. On Floor Exercise in particular, the scores were so incomprehensible and inconsistent that some other coaches and judges were muttering to themselves in the stands. At one point, Queen's gymnast Delio Tortosa's score was handed to a runner before he had even completed his routine. The results of the OUAA competition appear to have been predetermined by the judges' consensus of opinion. It's the image that counted.

On the bright side of things, two of the Queen's gymnasts did turn in their best performances on Saturday night. Departing veteran Dave Ross, in his last performance for a university team, showed remarkably good form in all events, leading the Queen's scoring with a total of 42.05 points. And, at the other end of the spectrum, rookie Bob Dales posted a personal best with a score of 38.05 points. Dales obviously shows considerable promise for the years ahead. Moreover, Jamie Archibald, second-rated gymnast on the team, pulled down a fourth place on Parallel Bars with 8.50 points, which is quite respectable indeed. And the Queen's team obviously has the potential to win the OUAA championship; with its best scores it could have been challenging York. What really beat the Queen's team was an unfortunate series of wipe-outs on all of the apparatus. Just one routine by Drew Strickland, the team's top performer, lost Queen's five points and a gymnast on the Ontario team to the national university championship. What is unfortunate here is that Ontario's best Parallel Bars man did not win the event.

However, there's always a next time, and the Queen's team has shown solid improvement for the past three years, under the guidance of coach Barry Brooker. Plans are already in the works to enter the best Queen's competitors in the nationals levels of the provincial gymnastics finals in May. Chances are good that one or two of the Gaels will be competing in the national championships to be held in Toronto in June, while Strickland certainly deserves a place on the Canadian team to the World Student Games in Moscow this summer. Practices continue (gymnastics never end at Queen's) and during the summer the Queen's gymnasts should be able to consolidate their present performances into winning routines. With the addition of some bright new rookies from Eastern Ontario and elsewhere, the Queen's team should be fighting for top spot in the league next year, if they can surmount that psychological barrier and change the minds of some judges. The game's not over yet.

Badminton Gaels lose to Western Queen's men's badminton team was defeated by University of Western Ontario 4 games to 2 in the OUAA finals held at McMaster University Saturday, 17th February. The scores were (Queen's men mentined first):

Singles; Dave Howard defeated Dave Forbes 15-11, 7-5 default: Henry Fei defeated Durban 15-6, 15-4; Mike Hetherington lost to Greenslade 9-15, 11-15; N. F. Lee lost to Smith 12-15, 5-15.

Doubles: Henry Fei and Mike Hetherington lost to Forbes and Durdan, 3-15, 10-15, Dave Howard and N. F. Lee lost to Greenslade and Smith, 14-8, 14-18.

In the individual finals, Dave Howard was third in the singles defeating Juwana Linaksita of Ryerson but losing to Dave Forbes of Western and Lane Bishop of Toronto. In the doubles, Henry Fei and Mike Hetherington won the silver medals, losing to Forbes and Durdan of Western and defeating Pelon and Hrejeck of Laurentian

Summer
Language Bursary
Programme

This summer, the University of Toronto will offer a French Language Summer School at Saint-Pierre et Miquelon and an English Language Summer School at Toronto

Government sponsored bursaries will be offered in connection with these programmes.

Enquiries: University of Toronto
Division of University Extension
Continuing Education Programme
119 St. George Street
Toronto, Ontario M5S 1A9
(416) 928-2400

AMS ANNUAL MEETING
all Queen's students welcome
Thursday
March 1st
Stirling A
7:30 p.m.

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO
SUMMER PROGRAMMES
IN EUROPE

In addition to the regular Summer Session, the Division of University Extension is offering degree courses in Europe, July 4 - August 14 as follows.

Nice, France/English, French
Siena, Italy/Fine Art, Italian
Trier, Germany/German, History

Cost? Approximately $750 – $800 (includes round trip, tuition for one course, room and board)

Further information:

Summer Programmes in Europe
University of Toronto
Division of University Extension
119 St. George Street
Toronto, Ontario
M5S 1A9

Canada: Wanted- one lake basin

TORONTO — Water levels this year are expected to be so high that a reservoir the size of another Great Lake would be needed to hold enough water to prevent widespread flooding along the shores of Lake Ontario, according to a spokesman for the International Joint Commission.

Experts predict that the water level will be the highest in twenty years and may even surpass the record level of 1952. Many people fear flooding, erosion and loss of shorefront property such as docks because of the high water.

Murray Thompson, an engineering adviser, says there is comparitively little the IJC can do. The 290,000 cubic feet of water pouring into the upper St. Lawrence every second is all the river can carry. If the flow is increased, the river's ice cover will be broken, and a second, thicker, cover will form, further restricting the capacity of the St. Lawrence and defeating the purpose of the exercise.

OTTAWA — Finance Minister John Turner brought down the budget last week, but the benefits announced for taxpayers are neither as large or as comprehensive as the opposition would like. Personal income taxes are reduced by 2 per cent and the basic personal execption rises from $1500 to $1600. The Old Age Pension for single person rises from $88.50 per month to $100. - an increase of about 10 per cent. Food prices rose 9.1 per cent last year.

The government apparently moved to control soaring food costs by lowering the duties on food imports, dropping the inheritance tax on farms and removing completely the tax on candy and soft drinks. What effect this will actually have is uncertain, because the dropping of the inheritance tax and the tax on candy will have a very limited impact, and food imports vary substantially on a seasonal basis, lessening the effect of the duty reductions.

Special corporate tax cuts will be phased out by December 1974. This seems to be a partial concession to the NDP which has urged such action, but immediately rather than in two years.

"Well, you've tried . . . God knows you've tried.'

The groups which stand to save the most through the tax cuts are those with very high and very low incomes. The poor benefit because of the increase in the personal exemption, and the 2 per cent decrease in taxes saves the most dollars for the rich. Middle income families benefit both ways, but not as much.

MONTREAL — Jacques Rose was acquitted last week of the October 1970 murder of Quebec labour minister Pierre Laporte and was released without bail from the jail where he had been held since December 1970.

Last December, Rose was acquitted on a charge of kidnapping Laporte. He still faces trial on charges of complicity after the fact in the kidnapping and of the forcible detention of Laporte.

Rose's brother Paul is serving two life sentences for the kidnapping and murder. Francis Simard was convicted of the murder of Laporte and faces a kidnapping charge. Bernard Lortie has a 20-year sentence for kidnapping and has yet to be tried for the Laporte murder.

OTTAWA — In a meeting with the Commons special food committee, a spokesman for the Packaging Association of Canada stated that a proliferation of food package sizes had been used in the past to confuse consumers over prices at which the product might sell.

He stated that his committee is in favour of more standardized packaging. The Commons committee questioned whether food packaging at present is not more for the convenience of the retailers shelves than consumers' wallets.

Marjorie Hartling of the National Anti-Poverty organization told the committee that a family on welfare at the most can afford only two packages of Kraft dinner for a meal. She called for better labelling to show the nutritional value of food that can be bought cheaply.

TORONTO — Magazines and periodicals will be subject to sales tax if the Ontario government follows the recommendations of the provincial royal commission on book publishing. The tax revenues would be used to raise the over $1-million needed annually to support the book pbulishing industry in Ontario. No tax would be collected on books or newspapers.

In its report, the commission, which was appointed in 1970, proposed the creation of an Ontario Book Publishing Board. The board's main function would be to regulate the involvement of foreign publishers in Ontario. Its approval would be necessary for any new book publishing efforts by firms controlled outside Canada or for the sale of Ontario based publishing companies to non-residents.

The board would also supervise the distribution of grants for the publication of Canada-written books of a general type, for educational book publishing, for research costs of educational books and for sabbatical leave payments to teachers writing educational books. Additional funds would be used to establish a Canadian-book centre for Ontario.

OTTAWA — Health Minister Marc Lalonde has asked cigarette manufacturers to indicate the tar and nicotine contents of their cigarettes on packages, cartons and vending machines as a warning to smokers. This way, smokers will know the ptoential danger as soon as they purchase their cigarettes, and they will be less likely to choose a brand because of its popularity or the advertising it receives.

Lalonde made the request as he released a report which lists the tar and nicotine contents of the 78 most popular brands of cigarettes.

The least harmful brand is Viscount, which contains 4 milligrams of tar and 0.3 milligrams of nicotine per cigarette.

The most harmful cigarettes are Black Cat regulars, Embassy menthol filter kings, Marlboro filter kings, Players regulars and Sportsman regulars. They all contain 23 mg. of tar and 1.2 mg. of nicotine per cigarette.

OTTAWA — After 19 years in Vietnam, the International Control Commission has dissolved itself. Its existence recently became redundant when the International Commission of Control and Supervision arrived in Vietnam to act as a peacekeeping force.

The decision, which ends years of argument between the three members of the ICC, must still be ratified by the Canadian, Polish and Indian governments.

TORONTO — According to a Canadian Grocer survey, chain store control of the grocery business in Canada showed a 1.1 per cent increase. The increase from 53.3 per cent to 54.5 per cent came as the result of substantial market gains by chains in the Atlantic provinces, Quebec and Saskatchewan, the only three areas in which they don't presently hold a dominant market share.

Ontario chains got a 1.1 per cent boost bringing the sales of their 1522 stores up to $1.98 billion while the 4670 independent stores slipped back to $1.04 billion.

World: US seeks a return to laissez-faire

WASHINGTON — The United States will be seeking freer world trade for many industrial and agricultural products in another round of world trade talks according to US trade official William R. Pearce.

The multiplicity of government controls contradicting the rules of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) by the major world trading partners have led to a rapidly changing pattern of world trade which has seriously injured the American economy because of its inability to adjust as rapidly, he said.

As a result the US will be asking for a general deemphasis of government intervention in world trade. This would mean a call for lower tariffs, a major barrier to world trade, and a minimum of government influence on agricultural products.

Pearce also stated that the US will seek a discussion of duty-free trade in industrial products, "no matter how hypothetical."

WASHINGTON — The world monetary crisis which has been brewing since late January has entered a second phase with heavy trading of almost every world currency for gold.

The American dollar has sagged to new lows in the West German and Swiss money markets as the price of gold has been pushed up to new records highs. Gold was selling from $20 to $25 above the price realized before the United States devalued their dollar by 10 per cent on February 13.

The dollar slipped to a value of 2.9215 marks on the Bonn money market bringing it close to its upper limit of 2.9656 marks set at the time of the devaluation.

The buying has spread to copper, tin, lead, zinc and silver in addition to gold and they are all [illegible] substantial price increases.

This flight out of paper currency into metal reflects the growing lack of confidence in the currency situation in general which has been prevailing during the past month.

VIENTIANE, Laos — The United States has resumed limited air activity in Laos after signing the ceasefire agreement last week. A small force of American B-52's struck at Communist positions after allegations by the Laotian government that North Vietnam and Pathet Lao troops were violating the ceasefire. The Communist troops have since captured two Lao towns.

The Joint Military Commission was stalled in their efforts to make two major investigations while the United States and North Vietnam exchanged charges of violations of the Laotian ceasefire. The American team on the JMC finally decided to turn it over to the International Commission of Control and Supervision for further investigation.

WASHINGTON— Asbestos exposure will kill one million Americans who have been or are working with it according to Dr. Irving Selikoff of the Mt. Sinai school of medicine in New York.

Once the dust is in the body it stays there and interacts with other cancer-causing agents, multiplying the hazards, he noted.

He estimated that by the year 2000, of the one million people presently exposed to asbestos, 200,000 will die of lung cancer, 70,000 of asbestosis (lung scarring), 150,000 of other cancers and the rest will die of other ailments.

More than 3,000 consumer products are made of asbestos and even beer, liquor, wine, injectible drugs and water may be placed on the harmful list when filtered through asbestos.

pgckbgge

Queen's Tea Room faces demolition

- sparks

by Susan de Stein

The 'Queen's Tea Room', which for so many years has been a landmark on this campus, will face demolition at the end of this term.

It was reported at the recent Board of Trustees that the property on which the 'Tea Room' now stands, at the corner of Union and Division Streets, had recently been acquired by the university. The settlement was reached following several years of negotiations. The financial arrangements remain undisclosed. Vice-Principal (Administration) R. J. Kennedy, commented that "the transactions are private; we never quote prices."

Gary Gannage, Queen's University rector, told the Journal that "it hasn't been torn down yet because there are still students living in the building. The university did not wish to create unnecessary problems for the occupants."

It was revealed at the Board of Trustees meeting that the space would become a 'green area'.

The building itself "does not look too prepossessing," commented Kennedy, adding that "it's really not worth redecorating." In addition he said, "it's a bit of a fire trap."

It is felt in many circles that the 'Tea Room' represents a tradition on this campus. Kennedy felt that it was a question of deciding between "the scenery and the tradition." He stressed that "a good job of landscaping the corner will be done."

Jim Zekios, who, along with his brother, has managed the 'Tea Room' for thirteen years, indicated that he was willing to go. "I've stayed here long enough, as long as I wanted to," he said.

Zekios added, "I've been very happy these years. The students have been good to me."

Psychiatrist says

Our society denies the reality of death

by Debbie Coyne

How does a person feel when he knows he is going to die? This was the subject of the movie, On Death and Dying, shown at Etherington Hall Auditorium.

Dr. Elizabeth Kubler-Ross, professor of psychiatry at the University of Chicago, has spent four years studying and analysing the emotions of dying patients "in a society which denies the reality of death". For most people today, Dr. Kubler-Ross says, the dying are regarded as "bad" people, reminding others of their mortality.

This is partly due to the fact that very few people are exposed to birth and death anymore. Before medicine made its great leaps and bounds ahead and before comfortable hospitals existed on a large scale, most people from an early age witnessed the birth of children and the death of loved ones in their own home.

A dying patient was permitted to remain in a familiar environment and the children played an important role in the ultimate separation. This "preparatory grief", as Dr. Kubler-Ross terms it, is necessary in the dying process and makes the consequences easier for all concerned.

In today's society, though, the dying person is rushed immediately to a hospital and is never asked whether he might prefer to die a natural death in familiar surroundings. The attendants are all busy "in a very unpersonalysed manner" and have no time to talk. It is all too often forgotten that dying is the biggest crisis in human life. People, attempt to "play games," pretending when in the patient's presence, that he will soon make a complete recovery. Dr. Kubler-Ross considers this "very sad" since, as a result, the most meaningful time of someone's life is lost by this severing of communication. Even doctors, themselves, deny the reality that some of their patients are dying. One time, Dr. Kubler-Ross relates, she could not find one person in a six-hundred person hospital that was dying! When nurses and doctors were questioned, the answer was invariably that there were none such people.

Dr. Kubler-Ross went on to explain that a person generally passed through five stages before death. The first of these is the denial stage where the person says, "No, not me . . .". He is constantly struggling with himself until he moves on to the anger stage, where he asks himself the question, "Why me?". The bargaining stage follows, in which the patient more or less makes a truce and says, "I'll be a very good patient, but . . ." This "but" gives him a faint slimmer of hope in the Unemployed this summer?

Continued on Page 2

As an alternative to a job, Queen's offers two summer school sessions. Applications for the May-June session will be accepted up to May 14.

Traffic Act

Fines may be imposed

WESTERN (CUP) — Sixty thousand Ontario post-secondary students could be charged and fined under the Ontario Highway Traffic Act if they have not changed their address on their driver's license after moving to universities.

Two Western students were recently fined $23 each for not having their address changed. The case is under appeal, and a spokesman for the department of transport and communications is sympathetic to the students' problem.

Under a section in the act, any holder of a driver's license is legally required to inform the department of a change in address within six days of the move.

A student attending university who resides somewhere else during the summer is required to change his license twice a year, once in September and again in May when he returns home for the summer.

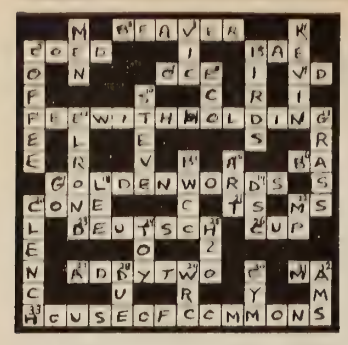
To change the information on a driver's license you detach the back section of the license, fill in the correct information, and send it to the department of transport. There is no charge and it usually takes about two weeks.

Meanwhile, out-of-town students driving automobiles are fair game to be charged unless they send in the forms twice a year.

Queen's Journal

Volume One Hundred, No. 42

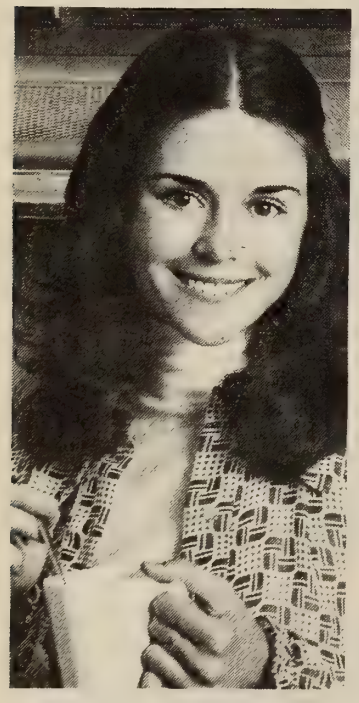
Friday, March 2, 1973



Our society denies the reality of death

Continued from Page 1

future. He then progresses to the realization that he is the one who is going to die, thus reaching the depression stage. Finally, there is the stage at which the person calmly accepts the fact that his life is going to end though still retaining the glimmer of hope. Dr. Kubler-Ross says that throughout these stages it is necessary for the patient to have someone to talk to when he feels so inclined, yet this aspect of dying is so often absent in society today.



An interview was next shown, in which Dr. Kubler-Ross spoke with a thirty year old father of three young children, who had just discovered that he had Hodgkin's Disease. He, as she pointed out later, was one of the rare people that can accept death as inevitable despite the fact that he was still young. This man felt that he had had a meaningful life and that, for what he had received from it, he had lived enough.

Dr. Kubler-Ross concluded that people must learn that dying people are not to be treated as if they were suffering from a contagious disease. They need all the support they can get before the ultimate separation. The taboo on death and dying will never be lifted until people realize that death is a part of life.

HOW DO OTHERS SEE YOU?

Do people see the warmth and friendliness in your smile? Do they feel at ease with you? We all wonder about it every now and then. But if your "problem" days make you more than usually anxious or dispirited, let Tampax tampons help.

Tampax tampons are worn internally, so they won't cause discomfort, can't slip or show. Insertion is easy, even for beginners. No chafing, no irritation, no odor. And you can be yourself every day, without the restrictions of old-fashioned pads.

A cheerful, gracious, personable you is what they'll see—no matter what day of the month it is—thanks to the security of Tampax tampons.

The internal protection more women trust

MADE ONLY BY CANADIAN TAMPAX CORPORATION LTD., BARRIE, ONTARIO

QUEEN'S CURLING CLUB
presents
st. patrick's day bonspeil
•PARTY •BUFFET
•PRIZES
March 7th
2 draws: $20 /team
phone Gail, 544-9457

WARNING The Department of National Health and Welfare advises that danger to health increases with amount smoked

The Music Department and the Division of Concerts present
THE VAGHY STRING QUARTET
and
RALPH MASELLA, CLARINETIST
Thursday 8 March
BAN RIGH FIRESIDE
Admission Free
Coffee and Desert
5:45 p.m.

Heidelberg
Brewed from pure spring water.

And that's the truth!

AMS accused of gross mismanagement

by Bob Wood

Education Commissioner Ross Dunsmore accused the AMS of "gross mismanagement of financial affairs" at a lively AMS meeting Wednesday night. As an indication of this mismanagement, Dunsmore quoted the unpaid two per cent vacation pay requested by some of those hired by the Alma Mater Society.

According to Wally Palmer, past AMS Vice-President, the vacation pay issue began when students who had worked for the Pub in the summer asked for their extra pay. In contrast with policy of previous years, it was agreed that the extra two per cent of wages should be paid. Palmer pointed out, however, that interest in it died; the extra wages were never paid.

At Monday's Inner Council meeting, members raised the question of going back over the records to discover those who had not been paid. They concluded that the expense and time needed to do this was neither warranted nor worthwhile. Outer Council, however, did not agree and rescinded the paragraph in the minutes of the meeting containing this decision, but agreed not to pay the 2 percent unless requested.

Dunsmore also charged that the AMS may have sidestepped tax regulations in the areas of concerts and the Pub. When asked to substantiate his accusations the Education Commissioner flatly refused. He pointed out that it was not his purpose to chastize the AMS and Inner Council. "I hope next year's council realizes that it is absolutely imperative that the AMS runs a businesslike organization!" he exclaimed.

"It IS as bad as it looks, but it's five times better than last year" stated Palmer in response. "A year ago we just ignored the facts such as tax regulations". He attributed the problems to an overworked staff but indicated that recent restructuring should help.

Victoria Kemsley fielded questions about Telephone Aid Kingston (TAK) following a brief presentation to the Council. She mentioned that the operation is just getting into full swing after one month of full operation receiving six to ten calls per night. Presently 115 trained volunteers, assisted by over a dozen professionsls, answer the TAK phone. Most of the $650 AMS grant has been used for installing and maintaining the telephones, advertising and for training materials. Kemsley revealed that sixty per cent of the calls are from lonely and - or depressed people, some are from people who are on drugs and are afraid, but few are crank calls.

The Council passed in principle a motion to establish a Faculty Financial Review Committee, consisting of Vice-president, Internal Affairs Commissioner, and all the treasurers of the individual Faculty Societies.

The motion proposed that each individual faculty society submit their financial statement to this committee for review by October 15. A copy of the accepted financial statements and the notification of their acceptance will then be sent to the University Bursar by November 1. The faculties, which will save substantially on individual audit fees, have shown wide spread support for the motion.

Com Soc probes evaluation

Course evaluations are valuable mainly because of the constructive teaching suggestions they offer staff members, but they can also be influential in student course selection and the assignment of instructors to courses. These are the main conclusions of a paper on course evaluation prepared by the Queen's Commerce Society.

The paper was presented to a workshop at the Canada Conference held in Winnipeg last month. Delegates from the commerce societies of 32 universities, professors and businessmen attended the conference.

While admitting that the design of course evaluations depends on their intended purpose, the paper suggests that they could be improved by letting instructors add their own questionnaires to give them any additional information they might need. Course evaluations would be most effective if they were prepared in the middle of term, after students have had a chance to appraise the course, but before their expected marks influence their decision.

Continued improvement in course evaluations could be maintained by annual reappraisals of their purpose and by the exchange of course evaluations between universities to allow a comparison of different approaches.

Bruce Hopkins, one of the Queen's students who helped prepare the paper, told the Journal that most of the universities at the conference agreed that course evaluations are valuable, but there was less consensus as to what thier purpose should be. At Queen's, he explained, course evaluations are used mainly as a medium for improving courses. Others believe that course evaluations should be influential in the hiring and firing of staff.

According to Hopkins, this disagreement was to be expected because the main purpose of the paper was to stimulate discussion. Most of the objections were to the mechanics of running an effective course evaluation.

Canada Conference officials are now preparing papers in Engish and French summarizing the arguments presented on all topics discussed at the conference. Copies of these reports will be sent to all of the universities which participated in the conference.

Hopkins said he hopes some of the paper's recommendations will be used in next year's course evaluations. Preparations for next year's effort are already under way.

Carleton U joins NUS

OTTAWA (CUP) — Students at Carleton University have voted to join the struggling National Union of Students (NUS).

In a referendum Feb. 20, students voted 601 to 581 to join NUS immediately. On another proposal, students voted 799 to 259 to join NUS when insitutions from every province are represented.

The referendum may be a shot-in-the-arm for NUS which now has only three members.

AMS needs people to work on the following commissions, committees, subsidiaries, publications, services, etc. etc.

WANTED: Queen's Students

Internal Affairs

AMS COURT
Chief Justice (2nd year law)
4 junior Justices
Prosecuting Attorney
Intergovenmental Relations Committee Chairman
AMS Clubs Manager
Speaker for Outer Council
Constitution Committee Members

Services

AMS PUB (Summer and Winter) Managers
Serving Persons
University Centre Committee Members
AMS Chief Constable
Union Programme Committee Members
Bulletin Board Committee
University Health Council Representatives
Communications Committee Members

QUEEN'S STUDENT AGENCIES
Director
Secretary
JOB BANK DIRECTOR
Printing Service Manager
Typing Service Manager
AMS Housing Service Manager
AMS Housing Service Committee Members
Handbook Editor

Campus Activities

AMS Homecoming Convenor
Open House Chairman
AMS Clubs Night Chairman
AMS Snowball Committee Chairman

Cultural Committee Chairman
Queen's Extertainment Agency Director
University Council on Athletics Representatives
AMS Concert Committee Chairman
Convocation Committee Chairman

External Affairs

OFS Chief Delegate
Alumni Committee Chairman
Community Liaison Committee Chairman
High School Liaison Committee Chairman
AOSC Campus Representative

Education

Public Relations Committee Members
2 Members for Richardson Trust Fund Committee
Long Term Planning Committee Members
Short Term Planning Committee Members
AMS Festival '74 Committee Chairman
Senate Library Committee Members
Interdisciplinary Studies Committee Members
Awareness '74 Co-ordinator
Counter Courses Committee Members

for further information on these positions see your Who's Where or call Steve Brereton 544-7215 or Bruce Trotter 542-5291
Leave your name in the AMS Office anytime before 5 p.m.
Wednesday, March 7

St. James' Church
UNION AND BARRIE STREETS
KINGSTON, ONTARIO

9:00 a.m. — HOLY COMMUNION
11:00 a.m. — HOLY COMMUNION
Preacher: The Rev. Gordon Houser,
Canadian Secretary, Latin American Mission
7:30 p.m. - EVENING PRAYER - The Rector
SHROVE TUESDAY, FAMILY NIGHT
Pancake supper at 6:30 p.m.
ASH WEDNESDAY
7:45 a.m. - - HOLY COMMUNION (Liturgy of Qu'Appelle) followed by breakfast in Parish Hall
10:30 a.m. — HOLY COMMUNION
8:00 p.m. — Penitential Service with Meditation.

Resource Recovery Seminar

9:00 a.m., Saturday 3 March, Dupuis Hall Auditorium

Program

Definition of Reclamation, Recycling and Resource Recovery
K. Bethune, Manager, Environmental Affairs, American Can of Canada Ltd., Toronto Motives for Recycling
H. E. Dalton, Executive Director, Glass Container Council of Canada Ltd., Toronto
An Overview of the Recycling Activities of Concerned Industries
1. Paper: E. Krever, President, E. Krever and Associates, Paper Brokers, Toronto
2. Glass: H. E. Dalton, Executive Director, Glass Container Council of Canada Ltd., Toronto
3. Ferrous Metals: W. A. Lemmon, Chief, Mining, Minerals and Metallurgy Division, Environmental Protection Service, Environment Canada, Ottawa.
4. Non-Ferrous metals K. Bethune, Manager, Environmental Affairs, American Can of Canada Ltd., Toronto
5. Plastics and textiles R. Hayter, Director, Plastics Industry Council, Toronto
What Can Be Done: Each speaker will speak for about five minutes

THIS SEMINAR IS SCHEDULED AS PART OF A QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY CREDIT COURSE, BUT OTHER INTERESTED PERSONS ARE INVITED TO ATTEND IF SEATS ARE AVAILABLE.

Come to the Banquet
BANQUET '73
IRC presents: "THE ARCTIC"
- Transportation, Problems & Environment Issues
Guest speaker: C.E. Law,
Executive Director Canadian
Institute of Guided Ground Transport
Leonard Cafeteria
Tues., March 6th 8:00 p.m.
Tickets are available in meal-lines and at Leonard Hall business office.
Residents .50c Non-residents $1.25
Faculty welcome tickets $2.25

'spring boogie'
the dance of the year
with
BLACK STONE (L.A.)
Fri., March 9th
Grant Hall 8:30 p.m.
$1.50
"PUB DANCE" by the "FUN CLUB"

newsbriefs

Engineers elect executives

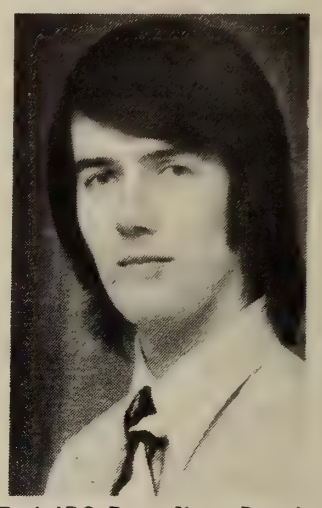
The reigning leaders of the Engineering Year Societies turned over their responsibilities to a new executive Wednesday night at Clark Hall.

"Getting the year together" was the major concern of the competitors, as was the desire to intensify spirit among year faculties. Science '74 and '75 concentrated on making the formal the big event of their years.

Science '76 results were as follows: President: Jack Russell; Vice-President: Rob Stephens; Treasurer: Brian Livingston; Secretary: Bruce Blair; Social Convenor: David Turnbull; Year Scribe: Richard Taylor; Assistant Secretary of the Engineering Society: Mike Evans; AMS Representative: Brian Guthrie; Science Formal Representative: Terry Graham.

Approximately forty people attended the election meeting and their enthusiasm prevented any acclamations.

The same number attended the Science '75 election meeting. A surprised civil engineer, Bud Lum, was elected for President, and expressed the desire to "keep the year together."



Also elected were: Vice-President: Tim Horton; Treasurer: Bob Savage; Secretary: Lorne Carson (by acclamation); Social Convenor: Don Harvey (by acclamation). Year Scribe: John Murphy; Science Formals Reps: Mike Norris and Joan Eaton: AMS reps: Jim Fenton and Pat Chance.

A less enthusiastic following attended the Science '74 elections. Twenty people made the following decisions. Engineering physics student Dan Meraw was elected for President: Vice-President: Cal Towns: Treasurer: Mike Bruni: Secretary: Bill Niemi (by acclamation); Social Convenor: Ron Haie: Year Scribe: Mike Birch (by acclamation); AMS Rep: Mike Robson.

IRC wins representation

This year, for the first time, there will be a student member on the committee choosing residence wardens and dons, the Mens' Residence Board decided Wednesday. IRC president Steve Brereton told the Journal the student representative will likely be either the president of the IRC or his appointed delegate.

The board discussed admissions, dealing especially with the question of allowing people who are not Queen's students to live in the West Campus residences. According to Brereton, it was decided to give priority in West Campus to Queen's students and to admit non-students only after serious attempts to fill the available places with Queen's people have failed.

Past IRC Pres. Steve Brereton

The future of the Mens' Residence Board was also debated. It was suggested that the usefulness of the board is questionable because of the existence of the Inter Residence Council.

Tuesday night, the IRC approved the granting of honouraria to student members of the IRC. This motion was passed on to the Wednesday meeting of the Men's Residence Board, and it will be voted on at the next meeting of the board in two weeks.

The IRC also decided to hold the IRC presidential elections on March 15.

"I disagree with God"

On Tuesday, February 27th, the Graduate Student's Christian Fellowship sponsored a lecture by Samuel Escobar, entitled "I disagree with God".

This controversial title soon proved to be a red herring, as Escobar did not express his opinion of the validity of God, but simply began the lecture by assuming that no explanation was necessary, and that all those present shared his beliefs.

The title refers simply to the idea that the problem of the existence of God is somehow linked with the question of justice. According to Escobar, many people feel that God is not fully aware of the tragedy of man, for he has never known what it is to be one, and thus cannot act justly towards him.

Escobar continued to say that it is in this particular context that the problem of God arises - Is the world meaningful? Where is man heading, and towards what end? Are there not a number of things out of control in our society, which should have been corrected by God? If God is really just, why do children suffer unnecessarily?

Escobar pointed out that the question of God's justice is relative. We, as individuals cannot judge what factors are valid criteria for a just God - we must simply accept that, in his wisdom, God is just.

Here, flashes of St. Augustine can be detected in Escobar's theory, for St. Augustine believed that no man had the right, in his humility, to question God's validity.

"If we were truly honest", said Escobar, "we should eliminate ourselves, for on what do we base our idea of justice, and how do we guarantee that the world will be a better place, after our changes have been effected? (According to St. Augustine, if God were truly just, we would all go to hell, for we have all sinned).

After stating that no group of individuals should be allowed to attempt to order the universe according to their views and standards, Escobar was asked how he could justify Christian Missionaries, who are guilty of precisely such attempts.

"We as Christians, have a heavy burden of responsibility to bear", he replied, "for we must share our knowledge of the absolute truth of Christ with everyone". He explained that he felt compelled to show non-believers the light.

When asked if he believed that non-Christians were not necessarily unhappy in their ignorance of the "truth", but simply blind, he replied "yes".

New WRC exec

The new Executive of the Women's Residence Council took over at an open meeting on February 26. The new members are Patty Muldoon, President; Shelley Lacroix, Vice-President; Celine Bourbornais, Secretary-Treasurer; Lori Houzer, Adelaide-Ban-Righ Block Chairman; Jane Rounthwaite, Chown Block Chairman; Jane Aitkens, Vic. A Block Chairman; Ferelyth Bruce-Lockhart, Vic. B Block Chairman; Janet MacMillan, Vic. D Block Chairman; and Judy Stephens, Vic. E Block Chairman.

TERCENTENARY COMMONWEALTH SEMINARS

GUYANA

Speaker: His Excellency S. N. Helman, Acting High Commissioner, Guyana High Commission, Ottawa.

Discussion: Coffee: Free Admission

Chaired by Prof. M. L. Urquhart
Sponsored by the Institute of Commonwealth and Comparative Studies and the Department of Economics
Next Week: Tanzania-Zambia, Tuesday, March 13th

QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY BRIDGE CLUB

MARCH 1973 SCHEDULE

All games 7:30 p.m. Thursday in Student's Union

March 8 UNIT WIDE GAME (predealt hands)
March 15 Rating Point Game
March 22 OPEN PAIRS tournament (prizes)
March 29 Rating Point game (last until July)

Further information from Harry Dodsworth:

Tel. (home) 542-5693 — (work) 547-3270

Department of Film Studies
Presents
A Special Screening of
DAYS AND NIGHTS IN THE FOREST
(ARANYER DIN-RATRI)
by Satyajit Ray, 1970
(In Bengali with English Sub-titles)
Wednesday, March 7 8:00 p.m.
Ellis Hall $1.00 Admission at the Door

ARTSCI '74 Presents

AUF WIEDERSEHEN

March 10th
7:30 - 1:00

$6.00 couple
tux not req'd.

Queen's University Music Department

IGOR STRAVINSKY'S
L'HISTOIRE DU SOLDAT
(The Soldier's Tale)

Chamber Ensemble
Narrators
Dancers

Sunday, 8:30 pm
4 March
Convocation Hall

FREE

Convocation changes

A report has been submitted to the Convocation Committee which studies and makes recommendations leading to the improvement of the visual presentation and character of convocations at Queen's. The new location of the event in the Jock Harty Arena has posed certain problems and particular reference has been given to these.

The report submitted by Prof. Ralph Allen of the Art History department and Prof. Fred Euringer of the department of Drama, pays particular notice to visual effects while also examining the concept of the ceremony itself.

The ceremony was viewed as a traditional celebration of an academic event of considerable importance; a ritual that has its origin in Medieval history. Thus the report saw the ceremony as a link with an early past which invites some of the colour and dramatization of that period, much as the costumes themselves have survived.

The recommendations were based on the idea that convocation has to be carefully 'staged' with a correct relationship of participants with audience and expressed by a combination of sound, movement, colour, lighting and the ritual of the ceremony itself.

In marked contrast the space of Grant Hall, the area presents a different perspective, one requiring its own answer to the problems of staging and seating. The greater size, the awkwardness of the space, and the distribution and increase in seating capacity creates a remote rather than intimate atmosphere.

With these thoughts in mind in an attempt to reduce distances, create an atmosphere of greater intimacy and to strengthen the drama of the tradition, several recommendations were made.

The size, location, height, and shape of the stage is to be altered. The audience is to become a 'wrap-around' audience as the ceremony is equally significant when viewed from either side. The academic staff is to be seated behind the stage, and graduating students seated behind the staff and the stage. This latter group will be elevated on risers to act as both involved participants and as a backdrop.

The lighting, banners, new stage and reduction of participants on the stage, it was felt should effectively focus attention upon this centre area and at the same time provide all necessary decoration in the form of colour, light and movement. The new seating plan makes every seat into an excellent viewing area whilst only reducing floor seating by 86 seats. No seat is further than 70 from centre stage, compared with the 132 feet of the old plan. The elevated seats will totally eliminate the frustration of many of those sitting in rear seats who see little or nothing of the convocation.

The recommendations have been accepted by the Principal.

Senate visitors' gallery

AMS constables to remain

The Senate Operations Review Committee has recommended that AMS constables continue to be present at Senate meetings. In so doing, the committee rejected AMS President Greg LeBlanc's request that the use of constables be discontinued.

The suggestion to remove AMS constables from Senate meetings was originally made at a meeting of the AMS Inner Council as a fund-saving measure.

Two AMS constables must be present at each Senate meeting to supervise students in the visitors' gallery of the Senate.

LeBlanc told the Journal that he believes the Senate decision was reasonable, but that the need for AMS constables at Senate had been a subject which deserved looking into. He pointed out that the AMS agreed to accept the responsibility of placing two constables at the door of Senate meetings in 1968, when the visitors' gallery was opened at that time. The AMS now has a responsibility to carry out, he added.

He explained that the presence of the constables is largely a preventative measure. However, he doubted that there would be student disruptions of Senate meetings if there were no AMS constables present.

If they were not used, commissionaires would be hired, and LeBlanc felt that the use of constables is obviously preferable

Kraft boycott hits community

The campus Kraft Boycott committee is moving into the community to express their discontent with the lack of suitable alternatives to the boycotted Kraft product.

The group is holding "information pickets" at Bennett Food Store, and Dominion Stores to inform consumers as to the goals and rationale behind boycotting Kraft products.

The boycott, now about a year and a half old, was originally a move to gain the right of collective bargaining for farmers who had to sell to Kraft for lack of any suitable alternatives and who have been earning less and less from the sales of their products while Kraft has been experiencing rapidly increasing profits. The reason for the lack of suitable alternatives is primarilly due to a recent trend toward monopolization of the industry led by Kraft Foods.

The boycott has since become a means for consumers to register protest against the high cost of food while food processors continue to earn large profits.

The picketers will be setting up information booths and will be distributing pamphlets as well as answering questions about the boycott. They will be at the Dominion Store on Barrie Street on Friday night from 7:00 to 9:00 and will be at Bennett Foods on Charles Street on Saturday from 10:00 am to 2:00 pm.

When asked why these particular stores were chosen, the picketers indicated that they felt that these stores should be selling more alternatives to the Kraft brand and that they felt they could reach the most people at them.

Social seminar series

Exploitation of resources, socialism in Chile and political developments in South Africa will be the centre of conversation as the Liberation Study Group hosts a series of speakers beginning on Sunday.

The latter lecture will be touching specifically on the struggle of the liberation movement of Mozambique (FRELIMO) against the fascist rule of Portugal.

Situated in Southeast Africa, the colony has been the scene of the longest, bloodiest and largest colonial war that Africa has ever experienced, lasting since 1964.

Having liberated one-third of the country, FRELIMO has been seeking the total defeat or surrender of the Portugese, allowing freedom of determination for the people of Mozambique.

The liberation movement has not just been a military struggle but has also concerned itself with setting up badly needed health, social and educational facilities, not formerly provided by the Portugese colonialists.

Recent Political Developments in Southeast Africa will be discussed at 7:00 pm, in the International Centre Lower Lounge.

On Monday at 8 pm, there will be a lectures on Exploitation of Exploitation of Resources and a discussion of Prospects for Socialism in Chile will be held on Wednesday at 8 pm, also in the Lower International Lounge.

U of T

Prof policy protested

TORONTO (CUP) — A hundred students are continuing to occupy the University of Toronto's Mathematics Department office and the surrounding corridors while administrators quibble over establishment of a parity student-faculty committee to discuss student complaints about their lack of input into departmental staffing decisions.

Students have been mobilizing over the effective firing of three popular math profs and the department chairman's refusal to include students on committee making staffing decisions since fall. One of the profs was denied tenure last spring, meaning he would be unlikely to hold onto his job once his current contract expired. Two other professors have been notified their contracts will not be renewed when they expire this spring.

Math Department Chairman George Duff has long opposed student input into department decision-making. He told a noon rally February 27 he wouldn't comment on whether he would rehire the three professors, and claimed university rules forbade students sitting on staffing committees.

Math students collected more than 1,000 names on a petition demanding that the two profs they then knew were being dismissed be rehired and asking that students sit on the department's staffing committee. Separate petitions calling for the re-instatement of all three profs have been signed by nearly all their students.

Duff also dismissed students' praise for the faculty, saying "Students rate highest those teachers from who they learn the least."

dekker

Sun and skating sure beats studying.

UQAM strike still brewing

MONTREAL (CUP)— Despite a court injunction against their strike, students at the Universite du Quebec at Montreal plan to continue their boycott of classes.

About 3000 of the university's 13,000 students voted overwhelming Feb. 26 to continue the strike which has paralysed the university since January 26.

The students are striking to protest the university administration's attempts to impose a deadline for payment of academic fees. The students want to be able to pay their fees in installments during the three years after they leave the university, and only if they find work in their field of study. The university's demand for prompt payment discriminates against students from low-income families, the students say.

At the Feb. 26 meeting, students also demanded the lifting of the injunction which bars picketing of university buildings before they would resume negotiations with the administration. Students are also demanding that the administration take no reprisals against students who have participated in the strike. The strike is to continue until a negotiated agreement is reached.

An inside look

"It's My World Too", a look at how modern society has unwittingly set up design and architectural barriers insurmountable to the physically handicapped, will be sponsored by the second year Occupational Therapy students.

The seminar will give an inside view of the many things which we have taken for granted but the handicapped would find terrible obstacles. These might include the street curb, chairs, stairs, revolving doors and the shortness of a green traffic light.

The seminar will be held on March 14, place and time to be announced.

NOTICE

SNOW REMOVAL

QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY

PARKING REGULATIONS

QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY PARKING REGULATIONS STATE IN PART:

"FROM DECEMBER 1, 1972 TO MARCH 31, 1973 INCLUSIVE, VEHICLES PARKED ON THE CAMPUS BETWEEN MIDNIGHT AND 7.00 A.M. WILL BE TOWED AWAY IF THEY IMPEDE SNOW REMOVAL OPERATIONS"

Housman

"Shoulder the sky my lad, and drink your ale".

(Last Poems)

Shakespeare

"For a quart of ale is a dish for a king".

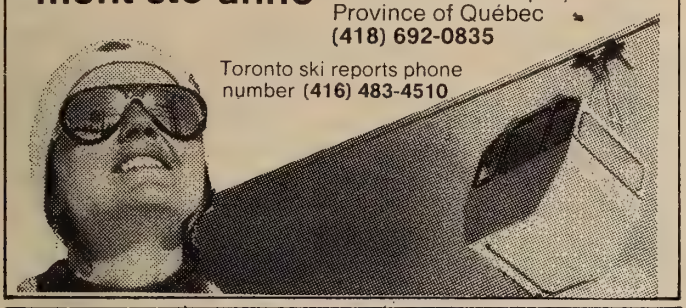
(The Winter's Tale)

Borrow

"Good ale, the true and proper drink..."

(Lavengro)

Browning



"There they are, my fifty men and women".

(One Word More)

poetic justice

Skiing at its peak
Prices at their bottom:
30 superbly groomed trails.
10 lifts accommodating 7,500 skiers per hour, including the only gondola lift in Eastern Canada
• 2050' vertical drop (It's a real kick)
• Beginner's slopes (Look at me!)
• 5 day ski week: use of lifts $25., lifts & lessons $35.
• Season from November to May
mont ste-anne P.O. Box 40, Beaupré, Province of Québec (418) 692-0835
Toronto ski reports phone number (416) 483-4510

An invitation to join...
The Paulist Fathers...A contemporary religious community serving the people of Canada and the United States communicating the Christian message: in the city, in information centers, in the parish, on radio and T.V. Dispelling uncertainty and imparting peace, celebrating the hope of the people of God and speaking on issues that concern the Church.
As an individual, you can develop and share your talents with others. As a member of the Community, you will experience the encouragement and support of fellow Paulists.
We're interested, if you are.

For more information write: Father Donald C. Campbell, Room 104CA.
Paulist Fathers.
647 Markham Street
Toronto 174, Ontario

IRC PUB DANCE
the LAST BLAST
Sat., March 3
8 p.m. - 1 a.m.
Leonard Cafeteria
Solo Flights .50¢
Couples .75¢
Beer 3/$1.00
Alternate beverages
BEER
3/ $1.

letters

Trees

Dear Editor,

Doug Christensen's letter in the Journal of February 20 prompts me to bring a tree planting project to your attention.

The Sydenham Ward Tenant and Ratepayers' Association are organizing the planting of mature trees, (2½" - 3" caliper), as a Tercentenary project. To begin with three locations are envisaged:

1. Along the Cricket Field opposite the Courthouse
2. In front of Sydenham Public School
3. Close to the Richardson Bath House in MacDonald Park.

It is hoped that both organizations and individuals will contribute to the cost of a tree. Each tree will be properly staked, labelled permanently with the name of the donors, species and year of planting, and those in vulnerable locations will be protected by a wrought iron guard.

A single tree is expected to cost approximately $150 but smaller contributions will be gratefully received. These donors will be acknowledged collectively on some of the tree labels.

A plan of the tree locations will be available at 90 Bagot Street, the house of Dr. H. W. Curran, the project Treasurer. Individuals may pick out the position of a particular tree for their contribution, if they so wish. Cheques may be made out to: Tercentenary Trees, c-o Dr. H. W. Curran, 90 Bagot Street, Kingston Ontario. It is hoped that all tree lovers will wish to participate so that the beauty we have now lost may be restored for future generations.

Lily Inglis, Chairman
Sydenham Ward Tercentenary Project

Elrond

Dear Editor,

We would like to respond to the anonymous letter concerning Elrond College, published in the Feb. 16 Journal.

Let's clear up a few things.

The 2-man houses are not and will not be on a twelve month lease. They are and will remain on the regular eight month lease, as are all the other houses.

Elrond College will not make "additional money" from those in the 4-man houses by virtue of their going on the meal plan during the next academic year. Quite the contrary: the College will be showing deficits in its Operating Budget for a number of years to come.

To explain, if the 4-man houses had been on the meal plan this year, the charge for a single room would have matched the $1075 cost of a single in a 6 or 12-man house. Let it also be pointed out that the meal plan includes more than raw food costs! Nevertheless, it remains a break-even operation.

The charge for a single room on the meal plan for the 1973-74 academic year was raised by about 7 per cent to $1155. A 10-12 per cent increase is expected in the wholesale price of raw foods . . .an average inflationary increase of 3 per cent on other college expenses . . .a slight increase designed to pull Elrond out of a yearly cash deficit position within the next three years . . . These are but some of the figures that went into computing next year's rent schedule. Certainly not profit!

Finally, would the Journal be good enough to contact the relevant Elrond Committee before publishing letters concerning the College, so that an editor's note, attached to the letter, might correct mistaken and damaging misapprehensions some letter writers might make available to the University Community.

Charles Fombrun Chairman, Membership Committee

Peter Boag
Chairman, Food Committee

A reply

R. Ross Dunsmore
The Alma Mater Society
Queen's University

Dear Mr. Dunsmore

I would like to acknowledge receipt on February 21 of your letter dated February 12 regarding the Carleton-Queen's hockey incident.

The University had undertaken an investigation into the circumstances and at the conclusion of the investigation steps were taken to arrange for a formal inquiry into the incident. However, this action has now been discontinued for the time being since the matter has been referred to the Ontario Universities Athletic Association and the investigation will now be conducted by the Board of Reference for that Association.

May I express our extreme regret concerning the injury to Smith. While we at Carleton enjoy good clean robust hitting in the physical contact sports, I must assure you that our philosophy toward sport has never allowed us to condone any form of play that was intended to injure our opponents.

Yours very truly

Keith N. Harris
Director of Athletics
Carleton University

Rip-off?

Dear Madam,

What happened to the so-called "Fun Club"? In November, I paid $.25, was issued a membership card and a number, and that was the last I ever heard about it. Was the "fun" in ripping off suckers for quarters?

Yours truly,
It's Not Funny
Arts '76

Ed Note: The Fun club is sponsoring a dance on March 9. Details will follow.

Queen's Journal
Vol. 100, No. 42
Fri., Mar. 2, 1973
Queen's University at Kingston, Ontario

Editor: Jennifer Grass
Business: Charles Schwier
Management: John Solman
Arts: Sandy Naiman
Features: Pat Devitt, Steven Winnett
Passepartout: Bob Wood
News: Susan de Stein
Events: Alison Dandie
Sports: Chris Boon, Nada Bogdanovic
National Desk: Bob Mutrie, Sue Wishart
Photography: Peter Boag

Tonight was the night the kids went crazy. . .Jen and Sue babysat. . .the cement and elastics flew . . among the saner ones were Janie, Ann, Liz and Sue W. . .Sandy couldn't believe it and vowed never to return on a press night . .Wattsy appeared . .and thanks to Ernie, who isn't Flahiff, for the pics. . .And now for the MCP version of the masthead. . .Susie got all upset and went and hid in the back room. . .Poor Sandy couldn't take it. . .Earnie got sucked into doing photos. . .Anne and the other Sue and Liz came in and worked but left before the excitement started. . .and and and

Published twice weekly on Tuesdays and Fridays by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc., Member, Canadian University Press. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society of the University. Offices are located in the Student's Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

$ $ $ The Great C n

by Don Humphreys

Someone made a lot of money during that ten year period and it clearly wasn't Canada's farmers.

Who is responsible for the high cost of food in Canada? This question enters the mind of many people as their grocery bill continues to climb every month. The politicians are not helping the situation as they skillfully avoid the issue, especially with the possibility of another federal election in the spring.

Can we believe Prime Minister Trudeau when he says inflation is good because the high prices benefit the farmers?

Or is it as some economic authorities maintain that a shortage of food has resulted in higher prices?

- hogarth

Or is the marketing of food suddenly very profitable for corporate interest?

Finding answers to these questions is a bit difficult for little research is being done today on food costs. What little that is being done is scattered throughout various sources.

But let us take a look at some disjointed statistics to see what's happening.

Total food prices rose 42.5 per cent from 1961 to July 1972. The prices farmers received for their produce rose by 25.4 per cent during the same period. That 25.4 per cent increase was wiped out by a rise in the farm production costs of 40.2 per cent.

This means in reality farmers lost 14.8 per cent in income from 1961 to July of 1972 due to increased costs.

Someone made a lot of money during that ten year period and it clearly wasn't Canada's farmers.

Canada's rural population has been cut in half since 1961.

The 1971 farm census shows that since 1966 the farm population has dropped a full 24 per cent.

This consistent decline of 5 per cent per year leaves only 7 per cent of Canadians actively engaged in farming. Clearly the crisis in agriculture started ten years ago and has now reached epidemic proportions.

The last four years have been disastrous for farmers for as their costs went skyrocketing, their income dipped drastically. This occurred while the Trudeau government just happened to be fighting inflation.

According to information published by Statistics Canada, farm net income dropped to a low of $1,209 million in 1970. The 1964-68 average income was $1,564.8 million.

While farmers were making less money to meet those rising costs, the economy was booming.

Canada's Gross National Product increased steadily from 72.5 billion in 1968 to 93.0 billion in 1971; the chartered banks had their interest rates increased as part of the inflation and got a bigger share, their profits rising from $381 million in 1968 to $557 million in 1971.

By now you may well ask what this has to do with the plight of the farmer. Like everyone else in the country, farmers are directly affected by the economic conditions that prevail and the economic policies that permit these conditions to prevail.

Just who makes these economic policies?

The federal government commissioned a study of Canadian agriculture in the seventies. This is the infamous Task Force Report on agriculture released in December of 1969. The report has been described by one of its authors, Dr. Dave MacFarlane, as a prediction of the future of Canadian agriculture if the present trends continue.

Nothing has really changed since the report was released so the predictions still reek of doom. By 1990 there will be a reduction of the rural population to three or four per cent of Canada's total population, the basic farm unit will be the huge corporate farm that hires employees to produce food with the same type of management procedures that are currently applied to industrial manufacturing, and access to land by individuals seeking to start farming will be impossible.

More attention to continentalism was endorsed in the following terms, "The Task Force emphasizes the desirability of Canada taking the initiative in attempting to create a continental market with the United States for grains, oil seeds, potatoes and livestock. Such a development would emphasize the importance of efficiency at three levels: by farmers; by agribusiness (both in supplying inputs and in processing, packaging and promoting); by governments in providing the desirable climate for informed decision-making by farmers and agribusiness. Another implication of a common continental market is that all inputs by agribusiness and farmers should be tariff-free."

If the last ten years of Canada's history are any indication, the Task Force's predictions will be met by 1980 - if not sooner. The federal government has repudiated the report as a model for Canadian agriculture. But it has yet to take any steps to protect the rural population from further destruction. All indications are that federal policy is actually directed toward the acceleration of rural depopulation.

Canadian farmers are not guaranteed a price that will cover their cost of production. This is the reason behind the decline of the rural population.

The National Farmers Union did some research into the cost of producing one bushel of wheat four years ago.

If farmers in 1968 were going to earn the poverty level as established by the Economic Council of Canada, they must receive between $2.35 and $2.65 per bushel of wheat produced in Saskatchewan. This would represent an approximate 8 per cent return on their investment or just enough money to cover the interest payments on the money they borrowed to keep farming.

The highest price Canadian wheat ever fetched on the world market was $2.24 per bushel in 1918!

The Canadian Wheat Board (CWB) regulates the sale of wheat. It was established by federal statute in 1949, as an attempt to end profiteering by the grain brokers who still operate out of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange.

The Wheat Board sells wheat at a wholesale price mainly to overseas buyers. However, the price wheat is sold for is not the price the farmer receives. In 1968 Number 1 wheat sold for $1.94 per bushel. After deducting shipping, cleaning and other costs, farmers received $1.70 per bushel.

Suddenly last year wheat prices climbed dramatically after hitting a low of $1.68 in 1971. At the end of July 1972 the price reached $1.70 per bushel. One month later the price jumped to $1.84. By the end of September the price leaped up to $2.31 per bushel. Throughout October and November consistently high prices prevailed.

Just by some strange coincidence, Canada suffered through a federal election during that period of high prices.

A farmer who can't cover his cost of production is called unviable and in the spirit of the Task Force must be "rationalized" off his land. The farmer really has only two options for survival: buy more expensive machinery or buy more land thereby owing the banks more money.

The natural question of why doesn't the farmer get a fair price for his produce arises. After all, isn't what is good for General Motors good for Canada? GM would like us to think so.

hogarth

Here lies the crux of the dilemma.

The food industry is probably one of the most profitable in this country. While thousands of farmers are forced off their land because of low income, fantastic profits have been made and continue to be made by the corporations involved in the processing, distribution and sale of agricultural produce.

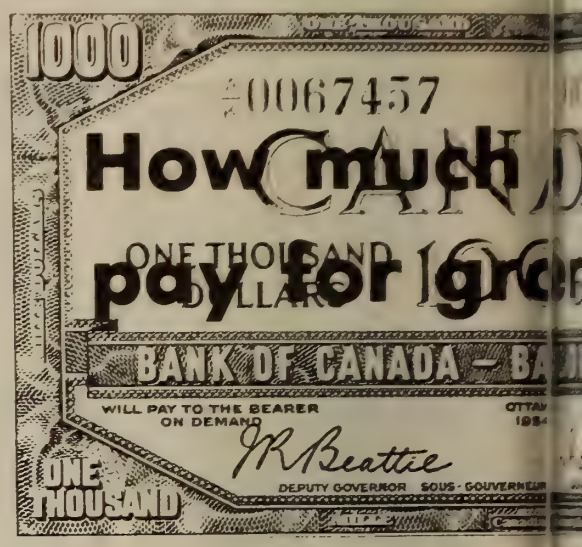
This is the phenonema known as "Agribusiness".

Just how profitable is the food industry?

Let's take a quick run down to our friendly local supermarket chain store and check out the prices.

The price of farm-produced foods increased by $2.8 million between 1961 and 1970. The corporations received 64 per cent of that increase.

For a typical 25 cent loaf of bread filled with non-nutri chemical additives, 23 cents goes to the corporations.



Ever notice a decline in the number of dairy farmers quart of milk costing 33 cents has 16 cents going to those called middle men.

For every dollar spent on a chunk of tough fatty beef prepared to throw away 43 cents.

Using the corporations' own standard of performan while not agreeing with them, the more profits that are m - the better the company. The rational for this is suppos to provide incentive for people to invest in the company. usually forgotten that the wealthy privileged minority, just happen to control these companies, do most of the vesting.

The most accurate measure of profitability is to comp "capital employed" with profits created. (capital emplo is equivalent to a company's total assets minus its curr liabilities).

The profitability of Canada's food and beverages indu as reported by Statistics Canada for the fourth quarter of was 7.87 per cent.

Profitability for the total manufacturing sector was 6.69 per cent.

Seven out of the other 13 manufacturing sectors were k than food and beverages.

If you would believe, the food industry is more profit than the petroleum and coal industry. Food is profitable than chemical, electrical, paper or even mines.

A farmer who can't cover his cost of produ tion is called unviable and in the spirit of the tas force must be "rationalized off his land".

This could probably explain how the fortunes of Gar Weston or James Richardson were made. (Mr. Richards currently Minister of National Defence. Richards Pioneer Grain Company just happens to rent huge in grain terminals at Moose Jaw and Saskatoon, Saskatche from Otto Lang, Minister-in-charge of the Canadian W Board. The top seven floors of the Richardson Buildir Winnipeg are rented to the federal government's own Canada.

The previously mentioned statistics incorporate unde title of beverages such companies as Seagrams, w contributes to the world various forms of intoxic Seagram's owners, the Bronfman brothers, also have hands dipped into movies, the Montreal Expos baseball and the Montreal Canadiens hockey club.

Let's make the picture a little clearer by taking a look few well-known companies operating in Canada.

In 1971 Canada Packers received a 7.63 per cent retur capital employed, Canada Safeway received 8.73 per General Foods received 10.30 per cent return, Oshawa G (IGA) received 5.03 per cent and Steinbergs 4.78 per cen a weighted average of 6.99 per cent.

Between 1968 and 1971, the five companies reaped a profit of $173.2 million. This represents a 23.3 per cen crease in profits for the period.

Canada Packers experienced a 24.7 per cent profi crease, Canada Safeway a 25.3 per cent increase, Ger Foods a 36.2 per cent increase, Oshawa Group a 29.6 per increase and Steinbergs a 47.8 per cent increase in pr

lian Food Rip-off $ $ $

Food prices - the good old consumer price index - rose in e period.
Between 1968 and 1971 by 7.7 per cent.
Inflation is beaten cried the prime minister. Oh but verily, n you detect the muffled sound of self-satisfied chuckling ming from the plush board room?
It is interesting to note that Canada Safeway Ltd and eneral Foods (Canada) Ltd are both wholly owned sub-diaries of American Corporations. It is also interesting to e that of the $12.2 billion used by foreign corporations to pand in Canada between 1960 and 1967, 44 per cent was ovided by government through capital consumption owances and a further 4.3 per cent through depletion owances.
Don't you wish that the government was as generous to you th your tax money? But then we aren't able to buy the litical parties who run the government through campaign ntributions.
Just as the automobile industry is controlled by four big rporations in North America, so the food industry is conolled by large corporations.

The largest food conglomerate in Canada and perhaps the orld, is the multinational Canadian-based Weston chain.
Veston is owned by the Garfield Weston Charitable Founation. It is a vertically integrated corporation, which means supplies itself with everything it needs.
Weston's holdings in retail stores, which includes such otables as Loblaws Groceterias, O.K. Economy, High-Low oods, Shop-Easy and Power, is complimented by a wideanging list of wholly-owned suppliers, wholesale and ansportation industries and even its own farms.
The advantages of vertical integration that allow for inreased orifits are: warehouse operations can be run more fficiently and at lower costs, private label products may be roduced at less cost than national brands, and the ability to roduce "private" or subsidiary labelled products increases he bargaining power of vertically integrated chains with ational brand suppliers.
The growing power of vertically integrated chains has nduced a pattern of excessive advertising by food anufacturers and created an additional inflationary cost actor in the industry as a whole.
The dual reality of concentration and vertical integration as brought the following description of the food industry in a tudy of Retail Oligopoly:
"...grocery retailing today is seriously deficient on at least our counts: 1) profits are excessive; 2) excess capacity has dded to costs; 3) advertising has favored a concentrated tructure, created monopoly power and increased costs; 4) he promotion of the luxury store has inflated gross argins."
Studies have estimated efficient use of store space alone ould reduce consumer costs four cents on every dollar pent.

Advertising practices of the retail food oligopoly are the rinciple means of expanding control over sales. They also rovide a barrier to the entry of new competitors, encourage rban location and represent a substantial inflationary actor in final food prices.
"The fact that large supermarket chains are able to adertise more for the same or lower costs per dollar of sales han are small companies was estimated statistically by orrelating advertising costs with the sales of eight multi-tore (chain store) supermarkets in the five major cities on he prairies. These estimates indicated that a firm with $10 illion in sales spent 2.84 cents per dollar of sales, while a firm with $100 million in sales spent 1.61 cents per dollar of sales, even though the larger firms generally did more advertising, "concludes the Batten Commission. The commission investigated the cost of food for the three prairie governments.

Advertising, in short, is a basic tool with which corporations can gain and sustain power while expanding surplus through a greater share of market sales in a given commodity.

hogarth

Hence every breakfast cereal or canned soup is new, unique and has "something added", all of which may rationalize consumer price increases and the introduction of cheap chemical additives which are non-nutritional but seem filling.

We previously mentioned that while farm income has risen, so has the cost of production. This increase was caused by factors very similar to those involved in the rise of food prices.

The farmer must buy supplies from companies to maintain his operation. But probably the most important cost factor is machinery. The highly mechanized nature of Canadian agriculture has resulted in a dependency on machinery that has been the down-fall of many a farmer.

To survive, a farmer must buy the necessary machinery that will produce a crop as efficiently as possible. Unfortunately for the farmer, the companies controlling the farm machinery business fix prices and do not compete in the free market that only exists in Otto Lang's vivid imagination.

Tractor and combine prices increased by about 40 per cent from 1961 to 1968. The greatest increases were for tractors in the highest horsepower ranges where the least competition exists and where plant inefficiency is the greatest.

For a typical twenty-five cent loaf of bread filled with non-nutritious chemical additives, twenty-three cents goes to the corporations.

This whole area was throughly investigated by the Barber Royal Commission on farm machinery prices.

Retail prices for automobiles increased by only 10 per cent from 1956 to 1968 while appliance prices actually declined by 14 per cent. Farm machinery, on the other hand, increased by 34 per cent between 1956 and 1968 even though, according to Barber, retail dealer margins were substantially reduced.

The cost situation faced by machinery manufacturers in this same period included a 78 per cent hourly wage increase to production workers, 15 per cent increase in steel rolling mill products and a 3 per cent increase in pig iron. The wage increase was largely off-set by a 32 per cent productivity increase as measured by the value produced per man hour paid.

It is noteworthy that wage levels of industrial workers engaged in production of farm input commodities is substantially higher than that of industrial workers in food processing plants.

The leading firms in the manufacturing industry (International Harvester, John Deere, Massey-Ferguson and Ford) account for 67 per cent of tractor sales, 69 per cent combine sales, and 69 per cent of haying equipment sales.

According to Barber, a tractor earning a company a profit return of 11.8 per cent at an output level of 20,000 units would yield an estimated 32.7 per cent at 60,000 units and 44.8 per cent at 90,000 units. The actual units produced by the 11 companies selling on the world market varies from 7,000 to 153,800 units. Yet, virtually no price competition exists.

John Deere is the acknowledged price setter for the farm machinery industry according to evidence presented by the Barber Commission. Between 1963 and 1968 John Deere was the first to announce price changes every year except one for tractors, combines and haying equipment.

It is interesting that the larger volume producer with the lower per unit costs and higher profits continues to determine price levels, while high-cost small producers such as Versatile or Canadian Co-operative Implements Limited are the only companies to attempt price competition.

Farmers are caught in a vicious circle of the cost-price squeeze which has driven thousands of people off the land. Barber explains that low prices for farm products act as an incentive to buy more land and machinery, thus creating the vicious circle but providing improved profits for machinery companies.

Canadian per farm machinery investment has increased 10 fold from 1941 to 1967 from $800 to almost $9,000. In terms of debt the investment has meant an increase in outstanding credit to 150 per cent between 1961 and 1966 for farm machinery purchases alone.

While the farmers' debt has increased, so has his productivity. Between 1947 and 1955 productivity rose 75 per cent. But the return on his investment is very low. In 1958 it stood at an equivalent weekly wage of $38.00 minus interest charges. A study today would show inflation having wiped out any gain by increased prices.

The farmer not only has to deal with greedy machinery companies but with all other agribusiness outfits that are out to "make a killing".

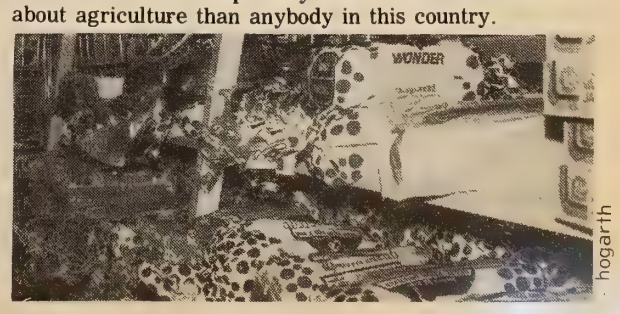
The farmer not only has to deal with greedy machinery companies but with all other agribusiness outfits that are out to "make a killing". 'to combat such companies farmers in the past founded commodity pools and other co-operatives. That form of action has obviously failed to protect farmers from exploitation.

The Co-operative Commonwealth Federation (CCF) was formed out of unrest and the demand for change. Great strides were made by the first CCF government elected in Saskatchewan in 1944. Despite the vocal objections of the business community, the people of Saskatchewan benefited from what is now considered model legislation in labour, health care and the nationalization of electricity, telephones and insurance.

The CCF did not continue with progressive legislation for it grew more conservative with age and the elected leaders refuted the most important principle of that party -- the elected leaders must abide by the policy decided by the members of the party at the annual convention.

The formation of the National Farmers Union (NFU) in 1969 can be credited to the determination of many farmers to stand and fight for their land. The NFU's policy of confrontation politics has been the major reason the federal government backed down from public endorsation of the Task Force on Agriculture Report.

The NFU is demanding collective bargaining rights for Canadian farmers so they can obtain enough revenue to continue operations. Although this may not appear a particularly radical approach to the problems that face farmers, it requires farmers to realize they will not obtain a just return for their labour under the present system unless they use their collective strength to reverse present trends. While this is happening farmers will have to resolve the question of private ownership of land and who benefits from private ownership.



The choice is clear: land owned by a few individuals and corporations or land owned and tilled by the people through their democratically controlled government.

As we have already pointed out, Canadian agriculture is rapidly approaching the point of no return.

Our other natural resources are already controlled by foreign corporations. The final step towards complete corporate control of food is upon us. So far only the farmers are raising their voices in opposition.

The present process will only be beaten back if the people in cities ally themselves with Canada's rural population and collectively head Canada in a different direction. We must head towards a society that places its emphasis on fulfilling the needs of people rather than the maintenance and expansion of private property.

Thanks to Statistics Canada, federal Department of Agriculture, National Farmers Union, NDP research, Harold Bronson and especially Don Mitchell who knows more about agriculture than anybody in this country.

hogarth

Throw a Kegger.

A "Kegger" is a draft beer get-together that you can enjoy anywhere, anytime. All you need for a "Kegger" is an Oktoberfest Tap'n Keg with Mini-Keg refills, and you're on your way to good times. Draw as much as you want whenever you want it. When you run out, just drop in a Mini-Keg refill and draw another 16 eight-ounce glasses of fresh, cool Real Draft Beer.

Oktoberfest Real Draft Beer

unclassifieds

W. J. Thanks, some of us know the truth.

ARTISTOCRATIC, ELITIST, according to Stephen Lewis -- come to a debate on THE LEARNING SOCIETY (Wright Report), March 13 and decide for yourself.

BOB, JOHN, and ANDY qui a dit qu'il n'y a pas d'autus sur la route a six heures de matin. Have pouce will travel a toute vitesse.

YOU REEK OF BEER, schwier

SUE --- I do not. Chas

MORRIS -- If you expect a cheque, don't print that one about me.

SCHWIER: What's a cheque? Morris.

TRAVELLING THIS SUMMER: Get quick, quality service on passport photos from Photo Image, 3 Brock Street. If you bring one or more friends, you'll all get 20 per cent off our regular low prices. Same rates apply on job application or identification pictures, too. Call us at 546-7770 for an appointment today.

THE JANITOR kindly washed out our 72 dirty, mouldy, gross coffee cups tonight. We all objected to the window as being claustophobic. To Doug we give our thanks.

BITTER GROUNDS will be holding its elections for next year's committee on Wednesday, March 14 at 7 pm in the Jackson Lounge, Clark Hall. Anyone interested in working with Bitter Grounds or finding out about us, please come to our meetings every Wednesday at 7 pm or drop into Bitter Grounds some weekend.

WE LOVE YOU batman.

TWO THIRD YEAR or intending graduate students are needed to share a three bedroom apartment at 102 Earl Street. Please contact Dave Roberts at 542-5182.

TO SUBLET: May 1 with option to rent next year. Two bedroom apartment; fridge and stove; clean and bright; $135. Call 544-9845.

FOR SALE: Two wigs. Both short. One blond, one blond streaked. Phone 546-4627.

THE LEARNING SOCIETY DEBATE: Guest panelists include David Black and John Deutsch, members of the commission on post-secondary education.

FOUND -- Monday, February 26. A small jewel. Phone someone at 542-6041.

WANTED: One bedroom apartment for next year. Am willing to arrange for subletting. Call 544-6392 after 6 pm.

AMS HOUSING SERVICE is looking for responsible Queen's students to become resident caretakers. These are paid positions. Please apply in writing stating qualifications to the AMS receptionist.

WOULD the kiddies please stop playing with rubber bands on press nights. Signed the editor.

TO SUBLET, May to September. 2 bedroom apartment. Close to campus. Phone 544-3368, und ask for Len or Al.

A DAY of decision, eh PL.

WANTED: 1 girl to share 4 bedroom apartment with 3 swinging singles (girls); good location between campus and downtown. Rent $65 a month. Phone Sally 546-4306. Kelly 544-0411.

TREMBLANT WEEKEND -- one ticket for sale. 546-6762.

ANDY -- will it replace the Manchester cup.

SCAMP -- Don't be so polite, you WESTERNER!!

LIBERATION STUDY GROUP seminar March 4 and 8, Seminars are in the International Centre, Lower Lounge and start at 8 pm.

PLEASE, would anyone finding a red wallet contact Cindy, 542-6160.

4TH WEST LEONARD residents of 71-72, Jeff, Bill and Denis are hosting a reunion stag. at 85 Wellington St. Friday, March 9, 9 pm. BYOB.

DON'T FORGET the phone bill.

FOR SALE: 2 tickets to Quebec Carnival. March 2, 3, 4. Call 544-8796.

MOOCH -- a Happy Birthday to You. You are now an old lady. Love, Betty and Bertha.

THANK YOU, Papa Jamie, for your devoted services in the sick beds of the Bagot Street Witches. PS - You can tuck us in anytime.

MODERN BACHELOR apartment to rent. May to September with option to lease in September. Suitable for two. Five minutes from campus. $95 a month. Call Brenda or Roseanna at 544-0313.

CUT THIS AD out or copy it down. Open debate on the subject of volunteering will be held in the lower Vic Hall common room at 7 pm on Tuesday, March 6.

FOR SALE: 1969 BSA 441 Vicotr Special good shape, 8500 miles. $450. Firm. Call 544-2821.

I AM BEING threatened with physical violence.

APARTMENT TO SUBLET: May to September, 3 or 2 bedrooms, completely, furnished. For more info. Call 544-7750 or 544-7736.

SUE, who don't you want to live with Bob?

FORGET TO COPY it down???? Open debate on volenteering in Vic Lower common room on Tuesday, March 6 at 7 pm.

CHILE: What's going on there? Come find out on Wednesday, March 7 in the international Centre at 8 pm.

THE LEARNING SOCIETY: The most influencial document determining the future of post-secondary education in Ontario. Come comment upon changes which will effect you as a student.

GUITAR FOR SALE: Yamaha FG300 with hard shell case. Brand new. Phone Doug at 542-1638.

APARTMENT FOR subletting. From May 1 with option for 73-74 lease. Excellent location, large, comfortable rooms. Perfect for 1 to 3 people. Call 546-4608 at anytime.

BAGPIPES? The Rob Roy Pipe Band needs some second-hand pipes. If you need a buyer, phone Dave Allison at 546-6504.

AKLEY Acid is a bummer.

THREE GIRLS in dire need of three bedroom apartment, for next year. Call Su at 544-8254.

WE WILL make a special pepsi stand for you John.

DEAR KATHY: HAPPY birthday to the girl who never learned how to count past nineteen. LUV --- the CARRY-ON gang.

RALPH T SWABODA would like a date with any fast Canadian women in suede who appreciates low-flying forine (sp (???)) sports job. Apply at the HUB.

P.D.C.S. and P.D. (C) S: Take not of the above.

???? CALL 549-2903 Now Both lines are open. Call anytime day or night ?????

GOING OUT OF BUSINESS!! All furniture must go! Any price! No offer refused! Call Craig Brown anytime at 544-5976.

IMPORTANT NOTICE for all the Queen's students who have reserved tickets for Auf Wiedersehen. Please pick them up today. If you are still considering going, there is a limited number left. Tickets are on sale everyday in the John Orr Room from 11:30 to 2:30. For only $6.00 this evening offers a bar opening at 6:30; a buffet dinner at 8:00 and a dance to the music of "Windmill" 9:00 till 1:00. Everyone is welcome.

HOUSE TO SUBLET for the summer. Four partially furnished bedrooms, large kitchen, living room. Close to campus on University. Phone 542-6680.

THE NEWS DESK salutes her friends at 264.

LOST -- Wallet in Donard Goldon contact Michael at 544-7512.

RENT or SUBLET -- 8 bedroom house; good location; clean; comfortable; mostly furnished; will negotiate summer rent; call 544-3671 after 5 pm.

VICKI, ANNE, ART, Peter, Susanne, Gregg, Kathy, and Jim; Mary J; Tom R; Pat; Beth; Tom L; Maureen; Margo; Mary G; and Sandy are expected to attend the second reunion of Gael Group 68 (is really great), this afternoon in the pub (we'll be there having barley sandwiches all afternoon) Love, DiDi and Paul.

ARE YOU GETTING married this spring? Let Photo Image record the things YOU want to remember. Our rates are competitive and we guarantee quality results. Call us at 546-7770 or drop by the Gallery at 33 Brock Street.

BOOK EARLY AND SAVE — Travelling in Europe INTERNATIONAL STUDENT I.D. card, student railpass, car rentals, cheapest and most dependable charter flights, camping tours etc. all available now from: AOSC, 44 St. George St. Toronto 5, 416-962-8404. (The Student Travel co-op owned by your Student Council.)

EUROPE SUMMER 73 TORONTO to LONDON from $79 one way or $155 return - Take a dependable charter. Contact AOSC, 44 St. George St., Toronto 5, 416-962-8404 - or your Student Council.

Two Films
at Dunning Hall,
Mon., March 5
BETHUNE, 8:30 pm
Acupuncture, 9:30 pm
Free Admission
(courtesy A.S.U.S.)

large stock
second hand books
19¢ to 99¢
pocket books
30¢ (4/99¢)
at Nonesuch Booksellers
225 Princess
(next to Capital Theatre)

Dons for Women's Residence for 1973-74

Life within the residence community is an important aspect of university experience.

We welcome into residence women students and couples who want to share with younger students the benefit of their learning and maturing, who are interested in being a liaison with campus groups and services, and who are concerned that residences provide the best possible environment for intellectual, personal and social growth.

Persons appointed as dons will receive room and board for the academic year.

Applications are to be made at the Office of the Dean of Women, Victoria Hall.

ASUS NEEDS PEOPLE FOR THE FOLLOWING POSITIONS FOR 73-4

Judicial Committee (three people)
Clubroom Chairman
Editor of the ASUS TAIL
Other Events Committee Chairman
Faculty Athletic Stick
Suzie-Q Week Chairman
Concert Committee Representative

All applications should be placed in the ASUS mailbox in the AMS Outer Office by 5 pm, March 15. For further information, call Eleanor Crowder at 547-6347.

ARTSCI '76

The following people have been elected to serve on the Artsci '76 executive for the 1973-1974 term.

President: Chris Wallace
Vice-pres: Dave Bowker
Secretary: Fay Harper
Treasurer: Allan Austin
Social Convenor: Suzie Harrington
Publicity Agent: Jacky Walsh
Athletic sticks: Marg Bartlett, John Ronson

Many thanks to those who came out to the elections and best of luck to the new executive.

TRICOLOR

If you did not opt out in October, you paid for a copy of Tricolor '73 with your fees last fall.

The book will be available in September.

If you will be here, you may pick up your copy then IF you have your green student card.

IF you won't be here, you may have it mailed for $1, payable at the AMS Office starting Monday.

EDITOR

Applications for next year's

JOURNAL EDITOR

TRICOLOR EDITOR

JOURNAL BUSINESS MANAGER

will be accepted in the AMS Office until 5 pm Fri. March 2, 1973

Applicants must submit a brief outlining their intended policies on or before Monday March 12.

"Wax Works"

A question of Trivia

by Geoff Henning

The Blue Ridge Rangers have a single out called Jambalya. What was the group's original name and who wrote the song?

The group used to be called Creedence Clearwater but the personnel has changed somewhat. The Forgarty's are the only ones left. The song was written many years ago by Hank Williams.

One of the earliest "Beatle" albums was called the "Best of the Beatles", but because of alleged fraud, the group was going to be sued. Why.

The word "Best" referred to the drummer Peter Best who was with the group before Ringo Starr. The album contained songs done by the Beatles earlier but on this particular album Best and another group performed them. The public misinterpreted the title as being the best songs performed by the Beatles.

A song released in 1962 reached number one and nine years later the same song done by the same person reached number one again, at least in the Kingston area. What was the song and who sang it?

The song was Last Kiss sung by J. Frank Wilson. When it was released in 1962 it was in conjunction with such songs as Frankie and Johnny, Ebony Eyes etc. For no apparent reason it was rereleased in 1971 and achieved as much success as it did the first time.

Skip Prokop played drums for two major groups before he played for Lighthouse. Who were they?

Prokop was popular around the Southern Ontario region when he played with the Paupers the other members were Adam Mitchell, Dennis Gerrard and Chuck Beale. The other group was known only by the name of their albums super session. Skip played drums for Al Kooper, Mike Bloomfield and Stephen Stills.

What groups did Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young come from?

Stephen Stills and Neil Young were together in the Canadian group Buffalo Springfield. David Crosby used to be with the Byrds and Graham Nash was lead singer for the Hollies.

What three groups has Eric Clapton been a main part of?

Clapton's first success was achieved with Cream. The other members were Jack Bruce andGinger Baker.Then he was with Blind Faith along with such people as Stevie Windwood, Rick Gresch and Baker. His latest group is Derek and the Dominoes.

Remember the Monkies. What were their names?

There were Michael Nesmith, Mickey Doleny Peter Tork and Davey Jones. But who cares?

The popular Frank Sinatra song was written by a Canadian person. Who was it?

This song was written by Paul Anka. He also wrote the Tom Jones hit She's A Lady. (The song was "My Way".)

Stravinsky's Soldier's Tale - Sunday

The Music Department of Queen's University will present, on Sunday, March 4th, at 8:30 p.m. in Convocation Hall, a performance of Igor Stravinsky's "L'HISTOIRE DU SOLDAT" (The Soldier's Tale).

"The Soldier's Tale", the first performance of which was given at Lausanne in 1918, was the product of collaboration between Stravinsky, Ansermet, Auberjonois, Pitoev and Ramuz (Who wrote the libretto). Russian folklore provided Stravinsky and Ramuz with the subject matter, both being particularly drawn to the adventures of the soldier who deserted and the Devil who inexorably comes to carry off his soul. Of the play Stravinsky said "Our soldier in 1918 was very definitely understood to be the victim of the then world conflict, despite the neutrality of the play in other respects . . .My choice of instruments was influenced by a very important event in my life at that time, the discovery of American jazz."

Involved in the performance are: Narrators Russ Waller, as the Voice of the Devil, and Richard Trousdale as the Voice of the Soldier; Dancers Andrea Howard, Brian Forbes and Tony Ramesar; and Instrumentalists David C. M. Smith, clarinet, Barbara Keane, bassoon, Wayne Tindale, trumpet, Robert Campbell, trombone, Denise Williams, violin, David Keane, double-bass, and Charlie Simms, percussion. Choreography is by Jill Hodkinson and lighting by Ian Collier. The conductor is Dr. Duane A. Bates of the Music Department.

Grant Hall series presents

I Solisti di Zagreb - Wednesday

The world-famous chamber orchestra from Yugoslavia, I Solisti di Zagreb, will perform in the last Grant Hall Series concert of this season on Wednesday, 7 March, at 8:30 p.m.

Featured on the programme will be two works by J. S. Bach, the Suite in B minor for flute, harpsichord and strings, and the Concerto for harpsichord and strings in F minor. The Sextet for Strings by B. Martinu will also be performed. Martinu is considered the chief representative of the neo-Classicist Ecole de Paris in the years between the wars, and is known as a symphonist and pioneer in opera and television. The last work on the programme will be the Roumanian Dances by B. Bartok, the Hungarian composer profoundly influenced by Slavik folk music, whose music has attained such popularity that virtually all of his chamber and orchestral pieces have been recorded.

The member of I Solisti di Zagreb (the Zagreb Soloists) have been hand-picked to represent some of the finest in Yugoslavian string playing.

The orchestra has toured extensively throughout Europe and North America and has received highest critical acclaim. They have been hailed as "A once-in-a-lifetime experience! We are quite unable to recall finer string playing!" (Toronto Globe and Mail). "String sound was glowing silk . . .and playing was full of grace and joy," (Washington Evening Star). "Everything such a group should be. Impeccable intonation, beautiful tone!" (New York Times).

The concert at Queen's will be part of the seventh North American Tour of I Solisti di Zagreb.

Single tickets at $2, 3 students, $3, 4 non-students, are available from the Division of Concerts Box Office, Agnes Etherington Art Centre - 547-6194.

Queen's
Division of Concerts
presents

I SOLISTI DI ZAGREB

Chamber Orchestra

Programme: J. S. Bach, B. Martinu, B. Bartok

Wednesday, 7 March 8:30 p.m.

GRANT HALL SERIES No. 5

Tickets: $2, 3 students
$3, 4 non-students

Division of Concerts Box Office
Agnes Etherington Art Centre
547-6194

LIBERATION STUDY GROUP SEMINAR

Sunday, March 4th: Recent Developments in Southern Africa.
Jacob Marule of South Africa and Ken Mafooka of Zimbadwe will lead the discussions.

Monday, March 5th: Exploitation of Resources

Wednesday, March 6th: Chile: The Prospects for Socialism

7:00 p.m.

PERMANENT EMPLOYMENT REGISTRATION

Students seeking permanent employment are encouraged to register at:

CAREER PLANNING & PLACEMENT
121 Union Street
(corner of Union & University)
STARTING MARCH 5th

MAKES A COLD
EASIER TO LIVE WITH

Each capsule gives 12 hours of relief from the symptoms of a cold.

Fill your mug with Golden.

Molson Golden
A good smooth ale
Do you know what you're missing?

liondays

Friday, March 2

10:30 am - Department of Biochemistry Seminar presented by Dr. Vincent Alfrey. It will concern "Changes in the Phosophorylation and Synthesis of Nuclear Phosphoproteins at Times of Gene Activation." Humphrey Hall. Room 131.

4:00 pm - Speaker Claire Culhane, Authoress and Member of Canadian Hospital Staff in Quang Ngai, Vietnam, will speak on "Why is Canada in Vietnam?" 3rd Floor Student's Union.

8:30 pm - Queen's Music Dance Company. Convocation Hall. Tickets from Division of Concerts, Agnes Etherington. Students - $1.00, non-students - $2.00.

Saturday, March 3

1:30 pm - The Assassination of the late U.S. President John F. Kennedy is the subject of a lecture to be given in Stirling Hall, Theatre B. Professor Richard Bernabei, a student of the presidential assassination since early 1967, charges that the report of the Warren Commission is a hoax, perpetrated deliberately with the intent of deceiving the U.S. public regarding the events surrounding the president's murder. Lecture accompanied with movies and slides.

8:00 pm - 1:00 a.m. - Last Bash - IRC Pub Dance. Solo 50c, Couples 75c. Beer 3-$1.00. (alternate beverages available). Leonard Hall.

8:30 pm - Queen's Modern Dance Company. Convocation Hall. Tickets available from Division of Concerts, Agnes Etherington. Students - $1.00, non-students $2.00.

Sunday, March 4

10:30 am - Dunning Hall. A Folk Mass followed by coffee and donuts at Newman House.

4:00 pm - Eucharistic Celebration at Queen's Theological Hall. Faculty Lounge. All welcome.

5:30 pm - Liberation Study Group presents a Sunday Supper. Lower Lounge, International Centre followed by a talk on "Recent developments in Southern Africa" by Jacob Marule, who has recently returned from modern Africa. Dinner $1.00 per person.

7:30 pm - Folk Mass in Senior Common Room at McArthur Hall.

8:30 pm - Concert: Stravinsky's L'Histoire du Soldat. Narrators: Russ Waller and Richard Trousdell; Dancers: Andra Howard, Brian Forbes and Tony Ramesar; Septet Instrumentation: clarinet, oboe, bassoon, trumpet, double bass and percussion. Directed Dr. Duane A. Bates. Choreographer: Jill Hodkinson. Convocation Hall.

Monday, March 5

8:30 pm - Two Films at Dunning Hall. Bethune at 8:30 pm. Acupuncture at 9:30 pm. Free Admission. (courtesy of ASUS)

8:00 pm - Resources-Exploitation and Use of Resources. Panelists include Prof. Shlomo Maital of the Economics Dept. and Constantin Lafkas. International Centre Lower Lounge.

Tuesday, March 6

8:00 pm - IRC Banquet. Guest Speaker C.E. Law. Discussing "The Arctic: Transportation Problems and Environmental Issues." Tickets available Leonard Hall Business Office.

8:00 - 10:00 pm - Public Lecture sponsored by Sociology Dept. "Communism, Capitalism and Multinationalism." I. L. Horowitz - Rutgers University. Dupuis Auditorium.

9:00 pm - Department of Film Studies presents "Clowns" by Fellini, 1970. Ellis Hall.

Wednesday, March 7

8:30 pm - Division of Concerts presents the world famous chamber orchestra I Solisti di Zagreb in a programme of works by J. S. Bach, B. Martinu and B. Bartok. Tickets at $2.00, $3.00 for students, $3.00, $4.00 for non-students. Available at Agnes Etherington Division of Concerts Box Office. 547-6194.

9:30 - 11:00 pm - Take your coffee break in the Chown Hall Common Room. Listen to cult music of the West Indies. Denise Narcisse-Mair. Open to everyone.

Off Campus

Theatres -
Capitol - Lady Sings the Blues
Hyland - Jeremiah Johnson
Odeon - Cabaret

Pubs -
Commodore - Shef Adams
401 Inn - Dublin Corporation
Manor - Robbie Lane
Seaway Pub - Par 3 + one.

Bradstreet returns to Bitter Grounds

David Bradstreet is well known to Queen's students and will be playing at the Bitter Grounds this weekend. He was a great hit last term and performed to enthusiastic audiences both nights.

In his accompaniment David blends both folk and light rock to produce a cozy and relaxing atmosphere. He is a performer who is both fun to listen to and to watch and his skillful guitar playing communicates well with the audience and provides entertaining and satisfying rapport.

If you missed him last term or want to see him again come and join David Bradstreet Friday and Saturday nights March 2nd and 3rd, from 8 pm to midnight at the Bitter Grounds on the second floor of the Union.

Critic's Forum: Queen's Modern Dance Company

Maturing and Growing Confident

by Sue Denim

The Queen's Modern Dance Company, which is less than a year old, is maturing rapidly and showing increased confidence. In only its second show, a highly sophisticated, beautifully conceived and framed production uses a broad spectrum of techniques, scenarios and effects. Miss Sandy Aitken, the company's founder and choreographer and Mr. Morison Bock, its artistic director, have created a program which is visually sensitive and emotionally stunning, brilliant in conception and for the most part performed with precision and control.

Moving from the tiny Guildhall Theatre to a more spacious locale, Convocation Hall, this versatile Company, which opened its untitled production Thursday night, has broken free of the restraint, which was apparent in The Twice Born, its first production. This is a spontaneous and vibrant yet disciplined company.

One of the marks of a true artist is a subtle signature on the work in question and such is the case with Miss Aitken's choreography. Decidely hers, the smooth sleekness of the opening number, Inkipimus, a precision number performed by the nine member company suggested the delicasy of the human form with some jazzy counter-pointing and excellent costuming. It looked as if the leggings of the Maple Leaf Hockey team were borrowed and by doing so the legs of the dancers were emphasized and their ultimate profession parodied.

In the second number, The Doll, the first of a series of neatly framed playlets was performed, combining the disciplines of classical ballet, pure drama and tempered by Miss Aitken's ever present touch of delicate and meticulous precision. Lynn Lorrimer's supple body as the Rag Doll who comes to life was particularly intriguing in this selection while mimicking Vlasta Riha's master movements.

The highlight of the first act is decidely a comic rendition of the story of Adam and Eve. Here Miss Aitken and Anthony Morgan use both their bodies and their facial expressions to dramatize their mutual experiences of discovery, fear, delight and lust, at the taste of the forbidden fruit and the feelings and activities that it inspires. A burlesque chase sequence with split second exits and entrances uses maximum stage space and the story ends with a poignant representation of the climax of that immortal first sexual act. Miss Aitken dances the ultimate feminist role with pointed humour and fervent understanding. Her partner is whimsically reticent in dealing with her forwardness but becomes gradually stronger and more dominant. Simple leotards with only the male and female signs were worn on a stage appointed with a flower, a hanging branch and a noisy styrofoam apple.

The carefree humour, the lightheartedness of yet another tightly conceived scene was an excellent finish to the first act. The number that preceded Adam and Eve, The Three Faces of Death, proved a drastic contrast in its dramatic obscurity and its darker theme and atmosphere.

The second act opener, Masquerade, used a Renaissance Baroque theme and highlighted some cleverly integrated acrobatics performed by Joseph Riha as an ambitious court jester. As an ailing and aging king, Mr. Morgan provides a well balanced foil with his stumbling and collapsing. A court dance, which precedes the crumbling of the King is one of the weaker moments in this number, but the ornate Renaissance costumes and Renee O'Farrell's portrayal of the potentially unfaithful Queen give the sequence a period feeling and the innate humour which seems to be indigenous to this show.

The most chilling number of the entire program is "Dementia." Here, in solo, Miss Aitken verbalizes the labyrinthine logic, similar in nature to R. D. Laing's "Knots", of a young girl struggling to come to terms with her feelings, her desires to be understood, to be true, and to be ultimately good.

Miss Aitken is able to physicalize the turmoil of this struggle with supreme control. Her taped voice, clear and young and innocent becomes distorted as electrical impulses attack each other; the product of an integral conflict of needs and the pressures of external expectations.

Dementia is streamed into a central circle of light, a universe, in which Miss Aitken is suspended, balancing on the tightrope of indecision. As the light filters away as she recedes into a womb-like position, an intimate preview audience is silenced, almost stunned with the ultimate truth of both the movements and their motivation.

The Pas de Deux which follows is mildly anticlimatic after this. Almost everything is. Joseph and Vlasta Riha dance rhythmically and the illusion of a spider and her web is suggested by a simplistic rope-hanging on the side of the stage, which almost seems to capture and stifle Mr. Riha's vibrant and joyous freedom.

The closing number, Octogenesis, is accompanied by Mr. Bock on the drums. The company clad in primitive skins performs a sacrificial rite wich culminates in a fight and the killing of one of the tribesmen. The program ends abruptly here, but leaves one with an impression of its strength and ultimate rightness.

Miss Aitken and Mr. Bock are undoubtedly an unbeatable team. Their company's improvement with this second show is almost mind boggling. Their material is innovative, the technique, particularly that of Miss Aitken and Messrs. Riha and Morgan is quite professional and the scope of idioms integrated into a two hour span is truly exciting. There seems to be no limit to the company's theoretical progression and its technical acumen.

- macpherson

Sandy Aitken in Dementia

What Dance and the Dancer are all about by Dick Trousdell

Judging from what I saw at a first dress rehearsal, the Queen's Modern Dance Company has a little something for everyone in their new program now playing at Convocation Hall. From cooly objective abstraction to nitty-gritty primitive, this heads-up young group, led by Choreographer Sandy Aitken and Artistic Director Morison Bock, seems to have a go at every conceivable modern dance idiom - and they try them all with equal gusto. The results are as varied as the material, and while you may not find all eight works of equal interest, you'll rarely be bored and you'll frequently be astonished at the energy, theatricality, wit, and intelligence of this group at its best.

With so many goodies to choose from, it is impossible to give every work and soloist the attention they deserve, but before I come to a few of my favorites, just a word about how the company as a whole has grown since their last appearance. The ensemble is still kept pretty much in the background, but in at least one piece -- the rousing "Octogenesis" which closes the program -- they are turned loose in a rhythmic tour de force of such controlled power that it literally shook the set down on the night I saw it. The ensemble look mischievously pleased with itself; they've had enough of backgrounds and I expect we'll be seeing more of this group down front in the future.

Among the solo pieces, three works deserve special mention. "Three Faces of Death," danced by Sandy Aitken and Josef Riha to music by Aaron Copeland, is a haunting and psychologically rich study of three dream-like encounters with death. Using dramatic costume changes and simple properties, the work achieves a striking interpenetration of images that are developed contra puntally in the best dance theatre tradition of Martha Graham's seraphic dialogue.

The contrasts between each of the three movements is clearly articulated by the dancers who nevertheless always keep firm control of the overall progression. It is a deeply satisfying work, with several moments of technical virtuosity that will make you catch your breath and not quite believe your eyes as the dancers twine and float towards a last seductive and chilling embrace.

By contrast, Adam and Eve, danced by Sandy Aitken and Anthony Morgan is a sophisticated comic look at how Paradise was lost and what replaced it. In the past ten years, every major international choreographer has taken a crack at the Adam and Eve theme, and Sandy Aitken's droll send up of the vogue is hilariously refreshing. Anthony Morgan, who has finally found a space equal to his heroic proportions, lets loose the sweetest Biblical Adam this side of Heaven, whose innocence is a wry blend of nature worship and the work ethic. I don't want to give away the surprises, but suffice it to say that Sandy Aitken's hip Eve has no need of a serpent to lead her astray or anyone to tell her what the apple symbolizes. The ending is predictable, but not without its tenderness and even a touch of the tragic. It's a thoughtful and funny piece and not to be missed.

Perhaps the most ambitious work on the bill is Sandy Aitkens solo piece "Dementia" scored to a sound collage by David Keane based on Miss Aitken's own recorded analysis of the hang-ups or knots that limit creative growth. If that sounds pretentious or self-indulgent, let me assure you it's not. In spite of the emotional title and content, this is a cool, angular, oh so careful exploration of the theme, in which the dancer's body itself becomes an impersonal object of analysis for the centers of balance and release. This wholly unsentimental search, largely improvised as you watch it, is so logical and uncompromising in its discipline and risks as to be at times like watching a tightrope walker feel his way across and into an unknown space. Here too, Miss Aitkens inventiveness and sense of humour never fail her, and to watch her sheer persistence in this piece is to come fairly close to understanding what dance and the dancer are all about.

All in all, a very impressive show.

To Laurentian..... .....in Overtime

5 - 4 loss finishes Gaels

by Peter Watts

Queen's hockey Gaels closed down their 1972-73 season on a disappointing note Tuesday night with a 5-4 overtime loss to Laurentian Voyageurs in a sudden-death playoff game in Sudbury.

The Gaels appeared to be very nervous but made a commendable effort to win the hockey game. Queen's led 2-0 courtesy of 2 goals by right winger Dave Hadden. Bob Sidey and Mike Fox tied the score for Laurentian near the end of the first period when the Gaels went into a shell and had trouble getting the puck out of their own end. Jim Tittemore got the final goal of the first period as he slapped in a rebound in the last minute of play and the Gaels led 3-2 after the first twenty minutes.

Frank Hamill scored the only goal of the second period to tie the score at 3-3. The Voyageurs kept the pressure on the Gaels throughout the period, outshooting Queen's 12-6.

In the third period, Colin Loudon scored for Queen's near the five minute mark to give the Gaels a 4-3 lead. It held up until the 13 minutes mark when Tim Hanson beat Clyde Harris to tie the score again for Laurentian. It was the final goal of the third period and set the stage for the excitement and tension of sudden-death overtime. The end came at 6:52 of the overtime period when Ed Taylor got the winner.

The win for Laurentian earned them the right to compete in the OUAA finals which get underway at Varsity Arena in Toronto on Friday night and wind up on Saturday. The Blues will also be in the finals by virtue of their 8-2 victory over York on Tuesday night in Toronto. The western representatives will be Western jnd Waterloo. Western beat Windsor 9-1 and Waterloo shutout Guelph 7-0 in the western quarter-finals.

By any standards, this year's Gaels have to be considered an improved team over last year's team. The Gaels compiled a 10-6-1 won-loss-tie mark this year compared with an 8-10-1 mark in league play last season. Furthermore, it is a relatively young team with a considerable number of players who will be returning next year. Only Bob Kindon, Jim Sunstrum, and possibly one or two others will be leaving this year. It gives new hockey coach Dave Field a good nucleus on which to build a strong Queen's entry in next year's OUAA.

As a matter of fact, the first phase of next year's hockey Gaels will begin next Tuesday night in the Harty Arena. A special tryout camp will be held next week for anyone who is at Queen's this year, will be here next year, and who thinks they would be interested in playing intercollegiate hockey next season. The three 2-hour workouts are scheduled for Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, March 6-8 from 5:30 to 7:30 in the Harty Arena. Dave Field will be conducting the camp. All those who are interested are invited to come out next Tuesday night. All players must supply all their own equipment.

Hockey Gaels
Spring Tryout Camp
Tues., Wed., Thurs.,
March 6, 7, 8
5:30 to 7:30 PM
Jock Harty Arena
Bring Own Equipment
All interested are invited

Scene four, take five... or, 'One of these days we'll get a schedule that works!!

by Chris Boon

For the fifth time in about four years, the schedule freaks of intercollegiate football, Ontario style, have had another shot at rearranging the order of September mayhem. Gone, for 1973, is the six-game home and home arrangement the Gaels suffered through last fall. This time around, Queen's play no less than eight games, starting with a pair of real dandies. Ottawa U., unless it drops the sport, will be in Sept. 15, followed immediately by the Gaels' current nemesis, Toronto, on the 22nd. Not a bad pair for the home crowds to watch.

The schedule is set up as follows:

Queen's will play home-and-home games with Toronto and Ottawa, and will host Carleton in a single match. The Other 'Eastern Division' team, York (back after a year in the wild wild west), will get the Gaels in Toronto, Nov. 3rd. As well, two games with Western Division squads are on the agenda. The Gaels play Guelph away on Sept. 29, and host McMaster on October 27th. We get a little variety this year, at the least.

Now for the real surprise! After several years of yowls, screams and various unprintable expelatives from Ontario schools, the College Bowl people have decided to recognize the fact that the OUAA generally possesses more good teams than certain other nameless conferences. Starting next fall, the top team from both the Eatern and Western divisions of the OUAA will have a shot at the Vanier Cup. The playoff schedule works this way. On Nov. tenth, these aforementioned top two will meet for the Yates cup. On the same day, the QUAA winner will play the Bluenose conference winner in the Atlantic Bowl. The following Saturday, Nov. 17th, the Atlantic Bowl winner will get to play the winner of the OUAA's western division, at the Ontario school's home field, while the OUAA-East winner will go west to meet the WIAC champ. Finally, the survivors, will get a whack at each other in the big finale Nov. 24th, in Varsity Stadium.

So, if the calibre of OUAA football is as good as everybody has been claiming in recent years, there could be two OU finalists next year.

A little Trouble in the morning...

After Shave and Cologne with a distinctive, disturbing fragrance that can give a whole campus Trouble up to 8, 10, or even 12 hours!

and you've got Trouble all day.

SHAWN PHILLIPS

Your Choice... Pick One!

Discover SHAWN PHILLIPS on A & M Records & Tapes

A&M RECORDS

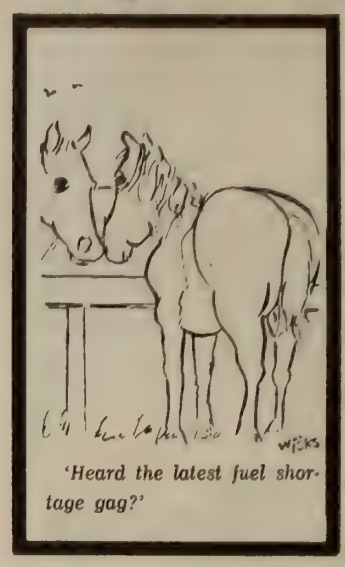
Whichever one you choose — you too will be a SHAWN PHILLIPS fan

Canada: PQ talks separatism

MONTREAL — Members of the Parti Quebecois healed a party split over English language rights at a party convention last weekend. The party decided that when it takes power and separates Quebec from the rest of Canada, the English school system will receive a proportion of education funds equal to the percentage of English-speaking people in Quebec. If the English-speaking population declines, so will the education allotment, but if the number of Anglophones increases, the grant will remain constant.

The party decided that it will institute a republican presidential system of government similar to that of the United States. Party members also agreed that if the Parti Quebecois is elected in Quebec, it will separate the province from Canada immediately, without a referendum on separation for the citizens of Quebec.

OTTAWA — The Canadian government has announced that it will not be meeting 3.7 percent of the US demand for Canadian crude oil in March. This first cutback under the new legislation to regulate oil flows to the United States will mean that certain American mid-western refineries will not be receiving all that they might want so that Ontario will not be caught short.



It was determined that the Interprovincial-Lakehead pipeline system would not be able to carry enough oil to satisfy both domestic and foreign demand. All other pipelines, however, were found capable of satisfying both markets.

OTTAWA — What could have been a crucial motion of non-confidence in the Trudeau government ended in anti-climax on Monday night. The Conservatives proposed a motion of non-confidence in the government stating that the House was unsatisfied with the budget introduced last week because it contained no measures to reduce unemployment and inflation and included nothing to encourage Canadian participation in Canadian industry and development.

With 31 seats to the Liberals' 109 and the Conservatives' 107, the NDP holds the balance of power in the Commons and can decide the fate of the government on a vote. Wooed by promises of tax cuts and increases in old age pensions in the Liberal budget, however, the NDP supported the government and the motion was easily defeated.

OTTAWA — The federal government will set up a national advisory committee to look into matters relevant to the status of women within the next six weeks. John Munro, minister of labour and minister in charge of implementing the recommendations of the Royal Commission on the Status of Women, made the announcement to a meeting of cabinet ministers and members of the National Council of Women of Canada. The committee will be set up for one or two years, and the government will reconsider its purpose if it is not satisfactory.

'Heard the latest fuel shortage gag?'

KINGSTON — Lars Thompson was acclaimed Monday night as the NDP candidate for Kingston and the Islands in the next federal election. Thompson, a Queen's professor of English in the faculty of education, ran for the NDP in this riding in last fall's general election. He came third behind Flora MacDonald and Dr. John Hazlett.

An NDP spokesman explained that the nominating meeting was held early because the NDP got a late start in the election last year.

OTTAWA — Officials of the federal government have expressed concern that significant contamination of foods could occur when recycled paper is used in food packaging materials. Much recycled paper contains a potentially harmful family of chemicals known as the polychlorinated biphenyls.

The officials fear that PCB's, which are fat-soluble, could migrate to the food from packaging made from recycled paper.

PCB's are used industrially in paper products, printing inks and electrical materials. They are not destroyed when the paper is recycled.

High levels of PCB's are known to have caused liver damage and birth defects in animals.

ELGINBURG — The Ontario Milk Marketing Board will ask for another rise in prices April 1, George McLaughlin, chairman of the OMMB told the annual meeting of the Frontenac County milk committee in this town near Kingston.

McLaughlin claimed that the board's pricing formula shows that to match rising production costs, the increase granted to producers January 1 should have been 70 cents a hundredweight rather than 35 cents. He reiterated the OMMB stand that an increase would have a less disturbing effect on the market if instituted all at once rather than in stages.

TORONTO — There was a steady increase in the amounts of money paid out to doctors by the Ontario Health Insurance Plan between April and June of last year. A substantial increase in the number of doctors billing OHIP for more than $10,000 a month was also recorded.

The figures, the latest available, were released earlier this week by Dr. Morton Shulman, NDP member of the Ontario legislature for High Park. They were later substantiated by an OHIP spokesman Shulman claimed that the increases in OHIP costs were too steep and that there was "virtually no possible explanation" for such rises. OHIP payments to doctors rose from $38 million in April 1972 to $48 million in June.

TORONTO — After 14 years on the air, Chez Helene will be dropped by the CBC next season. The program, which teaches basic French to preschoolers, is being removed because the Canadian version of Sesame Street now includes a five-minute French lesson in each show. According to a CBC spokesman, Sesame Street has "double the audience" of Chez Helene.

backpage

French Elections

World: Gaullists lose ground

PARIS — With only a few days remaining in the French electoral race the polls show that there is still a wide degree of uncertainty as to whether the Gaullist Party or the opposing Socialist-Communist Front will claim a majority of seats in the 490-member National Assembly.

It is predicted that no matter who wins, France is likely to experience considerable policy change because of indicated disillusionment in the currently ruling Gaullists now that Charles de Gaulle is dead.

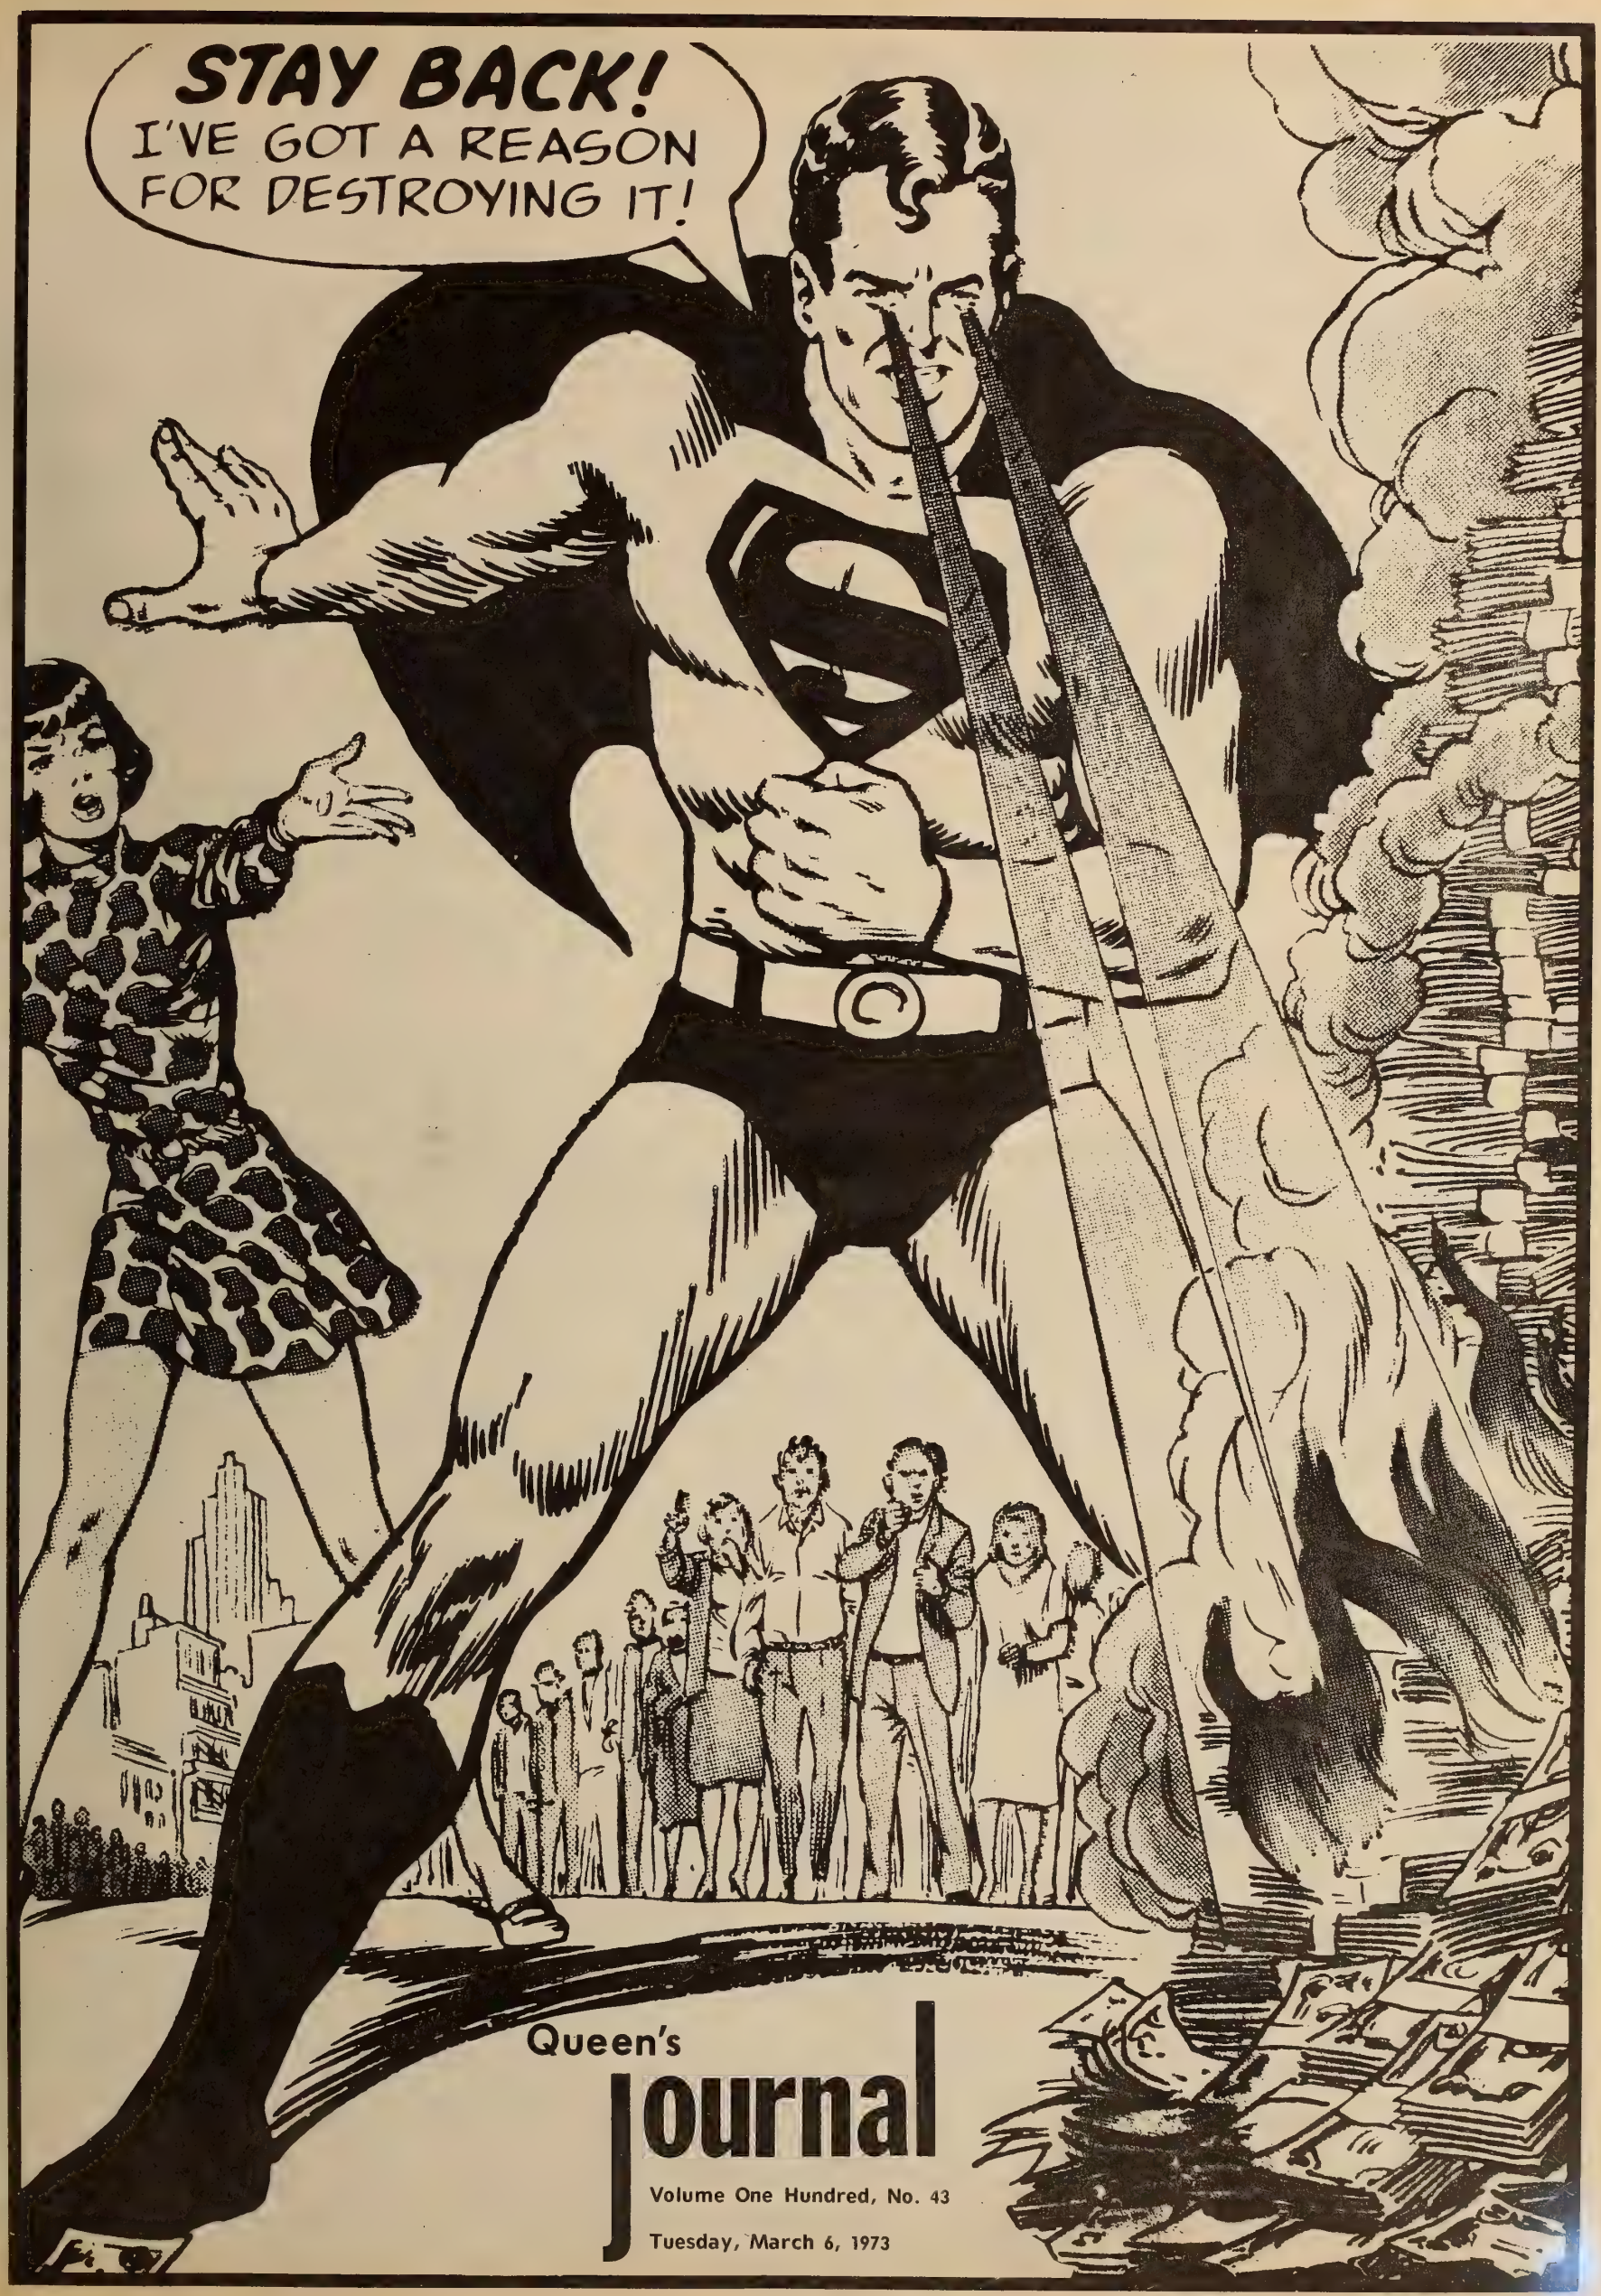
The Gaullist Party has concentrated their campaign efforts on issuing warnings as to the constitutional consequences of a left-wing victory, and predicting the demise of the European Common Market should the Socialists come into power.

SAIGON — North Vietnam has announced that it is suspending the release of any further American Prisoners of war unless the United States and Vietnam honor all parts of the Vietnam ceasefire agreement.

The US responded by calling on North Vietnam and the Viet Cong to go ahead immediately with the release and demanding an end to hostilities by all parties.

The North Vietnamese appeal particularly indicated that they wanted the release of civilian prisoners being held by South Vietnam and an end to the recent harrassments of the Communist delegates to the Joint Military Commission.

PARIS — Canada has demanded that an international authority be set up to deal with reports of violations of the Vietnam ceasefire recorded by the International Commission of Supervision and Control. Unless this is met, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp indicated that the Canadian delegation to the ICCS would be withdrawn on April 30.



Sharp put forward the proposal that the 13-member international Vietnam peace conference newly opened in Paris should be the continuing political authority to which the ICCS would report.

In addition he suggested that United Nations Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim should have a limited role in relaying commission communications to the conference and reconvening it at the request of the ICCS.

BAL HARBOUR, FLA. — The powerful AFL-CIO executive council has labelled the February 13 devaluation of the American dollar an ineffective measure which would not improve the country's import-export balance because of the ability of other nations to offset any advantages which could result.

They pointed out that other nations could negate the entire purpose of the exercise through management of their economies, subsidizing their exports, and setting up barriers to imports.

The labour organization executive called, instead, for removal of US tax and other incentives to American companies which operate in foreign countries, and regulation and restraint of the export of US technology and capital.

Queen's
Journal
Volume One Hundred, No. 43
Tuesday, March 6, 1973

Canada: Nationalist and Internationalist

Is Canadian nationalism incompatible with internationalism? This was the subject of a lecture given by Dr. A. M. Taylor of Queen's University. The lecture was second in a series sponsored by the World Federalists of Canada, Kingston branch. The members of this organization are committed to the belief that the main objective of Canada's national policy should be that of "world rule of law". They are concerned with the fact that Canadian citizens should not feel that their loyalties must be solely devoted to Canada. They should consider themselves as planetary citizens, pledging their membership in the human community.

Taylor, who worked in two international secretariats in the United Nations before coming to Queen's, has studied the dilemma, in the Canadian context, of nationalism versus internationalism. "Nationalism", said Taylor, "has been the supreme political emotion of countries in the twentieth century" and is, at the moment, "alive and well and currently residing almost all over the face of the earth." In the Western countries particularly, territory has always been mathematically and astromonically divided, each compartment having its own internal homogenity and a separate sense of integrity. As a result most Western people consider boundaries as the juxtaposition of social groups and not as natural boundaries.

Due to such widespread nationalism, international organizations still remain under the jurisdiction of the nation state. But in the world today such organizations are becoming increasingly important. This, of course, is exemplified in the growing concern over natural resources and the pollution of these resources. Canada has a special interest in this, since she is next door to a "resource defficient society", which is currently facing the possibility of an energy crisis.

The paradox of nationalism versus internationalism takes on weight in this situation. Canada will be soon receiving pleas from the United States to formulate a continental policy with respect to the natural resources of North America. Although such a policy would raise Canada's living standards in the short run, it must not be forgotten that there would be an accelerating depletion on non-renewable resources.

Taylor went on to point out that Canada needs its own resources. Demands for energy are doubling every ten years, and Canada's richest areas - Alberta and the Arctic - constitute only two percent of the world's resources. The crunch for Canadians is now whether or not they should share their resources.

Environmental management is obviously a necessity not only on the national but also the international scene. Otherwise the possibility of conflict between nation states will continue to increase due to the deterioration of the environment. The United Nations, Taylor said, lacks the "analytical capability to deal with environmental problems and suggests solutions or paths of action." Thus individual countries must take the initiative internationally. Canadians, particularly, should realize that since the invariant on this earth, this "small piece of cosmic dust" is the environmental structure, and it must require their primary loyalty. It is, therefore, possible and absolutely necessary for Canadians to coexist both as nationalists and internationalists.

Sweven: maybe next year

It was at first hoped that Sweven 1972-73 could be published monthly with a high standard of literary and artistic quality. However, it became increasingly apparent that Queen's students were not very enthusiastic about an arts magazine. Despite ads in the Journal, personal canvassing, and requests to departments to aid in puliciizing, very little material, and even less of any worthwhile quality was contributed. Sweven then decided (Dec. 1972) to expand the magazine to incorparate Kingston and area; but here also the efforts of the advertising editor received little or no response. Consequently, the editors, rather than waste good money on a second-rate magazine serving only to boost the fragile ego(s) of prolific pedants - puerility - pundits - emotionalizers, have chosen to let Sweven keep on dreaming until (let us hope only until) next year. This has been facilitated by the appearance of a magazine that, although differing widely in editorial approach and span, may serve as an outlet for the two or three pieces of material worth an audience. Escorial has been given what little bit of the material was acquired by Sweven since September 1972. If anyone objects to his or her material being published in this magazine, they are asked to contact one of the three editors: Ian Burgham, Chris West, or Tamas McDonald.

Correction

Admissions project

It has been brought to the attention of the Journal that certain inaccuracies and omissions occured in an article appearing in Tuesday, Feb. 20 issue, entitled Admissions Project.

G. J. S. Wilde, Chairman of the Special Admission Project pointed out that "not necessarily fifty but a maximum of fifty persons will be admitted" as full-time students in the Arts and Science faculty under normal admission criteria, and will be attending Queen's this fall. As was previously stated, this special program is meant to enable students with academic potential who cannot meet present admission requirements to attend university.

Any person who will be eighteen as of September 1, 1973, with a minimum of Ontario grade ten, or equivalent, and who is not presently registered as a full-time high school student is "eligible for consideration", Wilde pointed out. Preference will be given to persons under 21 years of age at the end of 1973, he added. Persons 21 years of age or older who have not attended a university are reminded that they may apply under the Mature Student Regulation already in effect at Queen's University.

Candidates will be chosen on the basis of ability, achievement, and motivation as judged from a variety of tests and other selection procedures scheduled for March and April.

AMS needs people to work on the following commissions, committees, subsidiaries, publications, services, etc. etc.

WANTED: Queen's Students

Internal Affairs
AMS COURT
Chief Justice (2nd year law)
4 junior Justices
Prosecuting Attorney
Intergovenmental Relations Committee Chairman
AMS Clubs Manager
Speaker for Outer Council
Constitution Committee Members

Services
AMS PUB (Summer and Winter) Managers
Serving Persons
University Centre Committee Members
AMS Chief Constable
Union Programme Committee Members
Bulletin Board Committee
University Health Council Representatives
Communications Committee Members

QUEEN'S STUDENT AGENCIES
Director
Secretary
JOB BANK DIRECTOR
Printing Service Manager
Typing Service Manager
AMS Housing Service Manager
AMS Housing Service Committee Members
Handbook Editor

Campus Activities
AMS Homecoming Convenor
Open House Chairman
AMS Clubs Night Chairman
AMS Snowball Committee Chairman

Cultural Committee Chairman
Queen's Extertainment Agency Director
University Council on Athletics Representatives
AMS Concert Committee Chairman
Convocation Committee Chairman

External Affairs
OFS Chief Delegate
Alumni Committee Chairman
Community Liaison Committee Chairman
High School Liaison Committee Chairman
AOSC Campus Representative

Education
Public Relations Committee Members
2 Members for Richardson Trust Fund Committee
Long Term Planning Committee Members
Short Term Planning Committee Members
AMS Festival '74 Committee Chairman
Senate Library Committee Members
Interdisciplinary Studies Committee Members
Awareness '74 Co-ordinator
Counter Courses Committee Members

for further information on these positions see your Who's Where or call Steve Brereton 544-7215 or Bruce Trotter 542-5291
Leave your name in the AMS Office anytime before 5 p.m. Wednesday, March 7

Labour attempts to change its image

by Sandy Wilson

William Dodge's face reminded me of so many things at once. The folds of flesh, the bulbous nose which looked as if it had been beaten with a monkey wrench, the thick slab of an upper lip; all these created a medium on which I could transpose the images of countless half-forgotten personalities. From the front he bore an almost charming resemblance to the cowardly lion from "The Wizard of Oz", Bert Lahr, but when he turned his profile he took on the character of one of the pugnacious silver bulldugs which truckers take such great pride in affixing to the prows of their big highway diesels. For some people, I'm sure, he was a reminder of another advocate of populist power; David Lewis. Overall it was a tough face yet it had an air of beguiling honesty about it which must be a powerful tool in his work as a union negotiator. I wondered whether such a universal image was a prerequisite for the job of the champion of Canadian working men's rights.

Fortunately the Canadian Labour Congress's chairman possessed talents which were more than superficial as he eloquently proved in his talk on collective bargaining and alternative methods of reaching business agreements last Thursday night in Dunning Hall.

A card carrying member of Canada's railroad union as well as graduate in economics from Sir George Williams University in Montreal he defended the union system in a room filled with the people who would someday be bargaining from the management side of the negotiating table. From the premise that the tasks of management and unions were to maximize the returns from their respective responsibilities of capital and labour he argued that the present adversary system was desirable as well as dynamic in raising the national standard of living. Every conflict, he felt, increases management resourcefulness as well as the overall skill and productivity of labour. For an audience reared on the notion that unions often stage long and violent strikes out of self indulgence this idea at first took a bit of imagination.

Strikes, he continued, though they were the result of the poor attitudes of both management and labour, were the inherent right of all workers who felt that they were being treated unfairly. If strikes were forbidden by law then they would take place anyway in an illegal and potentially dangerous atmosphere. As it is, strikes are used only as a last resort in Canada where year after year 88 percent of the labour force settles its negotiations peacefully.

As William Dodge talked about the leaps which labour has made in this country you could detect the tone of voice which a father would use in proudly describing his son's achievements. The CLC, traditionally a nationalistic and "archibunkerish" organization, is presently spending large sums of money in attempts to organize unions abroad as well as to expand its representation of labour at home. Once the sole domain of the blue collar worker it is mounting major recuriting thrusts into brokerage firms, insurance companies and banks. Guided by the tenet of "equal pay for equal work" it is also turning more of its attention to the unionization of the working woman.

Certainly labour is trying hard to change its present public image of a muscular instigator of inflation and unemployment to that of a conscientious and concerned citizen. As a matter of fact one person William Dodge did not remind me of was his infamous American counterpart; Jimmy Hoffa.

- perry

William Dodge, chairman of the Canadian Labour Congress spoke in Dunning Hall last Thursday.

Kingston

Provides barrier to the handicapped

Man's affinity for community living has existed since the beginning of time. One of the benefits of being a member of a modern-day community is the availability of a wide variety of recreational, educational, and commercial facilities for the convenient use of all the members. The city of Kingston offers a wide range of facilities - but unfortunately not to all the citizens.

Architectural barriers - those few steps, that narrow doorway or heavy door - can prevent many of the community's handicapped from making the most use of the facilities. "The Handicapped" is an far-reaching group. It is not just the wheelchair-bound person or the one on crutches that we are concerned about. There are many less obvious and hidden handicaps - heart conditions, respiratory probelems, any sort of muscular weakness (polio) - even those merely grown infirm with the advancing years can be considered in the group of those whose lives are needlessly restricted by architectural barriers.

Kingston suffers under two major disadvantages with respect to the existance of these barriers. The first is that the city is built on hills, so that while the trip down the street may be fairly easy, the return one is next to impossible for some of the handicapped. Also, store owners have had to compensate for the height difference by building steps into their stores. This leaves the handicapped shopper with one solution-to to the shopping centre where entrances are level and it is easy to get around. Fourteen per cent of Canada's populatiion have a physical disability of some sort - That's a sizeable number of customers to be ignoring.

Kingston's second disadvantage is that it is old, and much of it was built before architectural barriers were a consideration. Consequently, the library, City Hall, public washrooms and the Post Office are all rendered inaccessible to some degree because of stairs, heavy doors, narrow doorways or washrooms which are located on floors not served by elevators.

We won't try to tell you that the cost of removing these barriers isn't high - it is. But if the fact that the handicapped also pay taxes and have a right to public buildings doesn't justify to you the spending of public funds to correct this problem, then let's accept the barriers that do exist, but let's not build any more! Constructing a large ($1 million) building which is free from ar-

Continued on Page 4

AMS retreat

Commissioners selected

The annual AMS retreat held this past weekend at the Gananoque Inn, was "successful and worthwhile", AMS President, Steve Brereton told the Journal.

The idea of the retreat was "to air and listen to opinions, and for Outer Council members to meet others they had not previously known," Brereton added.

Discussion centered on the role of the AMS, and on policies to be undertaken in the future. Some members expressed the opinion that a greater emphasis should be placed on the educational role of the AMS. The relationship between the faculty societies and the AMS, and Senate and AMS was touched upon during the discussion. It was also generally felt that a general attempt should be made at improving communications.

Others were of the opinion that the AMS should be playing a larger role in increasing the students' awareness of the outside world.

Discussion also centered upon the possibility of restructuring. A question that rose from these discussions was whether or not the size of the Outer Council was responsible for hindering effective discussion. Referring to the proposal that was made at the retreat, that was to establish a commission on University Affairs, Brereton said, "something will come of this."

Brereton later revealed the proposed inner council:
External Affairs Commissioner: Kiloran German Internal Affairs Commissioner: Paul Greenwood
Education Commissioner: Marv Bloos
Campus Activities Commissioner: Don Krestel
Services Commissioner: Will Kranenburg
Outer Council Appointee: Ken Wong.

Kennedy assassination What happened that day?

by Liz Bennett and Pat Wanless

On Saturday, March 2nd, almost nine years after the assassination of John Fitzgerald Kennedy on November 22, 1963, Richard Bernabei, professor of Classics here at Queen's and a keen student of the assassination since 1967, was still asking: was Lee Harvey Oswald framed for the murder, did the U.S. Federal government conspire to frame him after the fact, and was there a conspiracy to murder Kennedy?

concern was with establishing the facts of WHAT happened that day on Dealey Plaza, rather than speculation as to WHY these events occurred.

Equipped with slides and films, in particular those taken by Abraham Zapruder during the shooting, Bernabei attempted to make everyone in the packed lecture hall eye witnesses to the events of the assassination.

He questioned the validity of the Warren Commission Report by exposing instances of doctored films, misplaced evidence and numerous unquestioned contradictions.

Careful study by outside specialists of two photographs of Oswald holding rifle, found after the shooting, one of which appeared on the cover of Life magazine, February 21, 1964, revealed Oswald's head spliced at the chin onto another body. In both cases the heads were the same but the bodies were different, and in fact were out of proportion.

Bernabei followed this with more examples of contradictory evidence that the Commission appeared to voluntarily accept.

The single bullet theory presented by the Commission appears improbable to Bernabei in view of Zapruder's film. The commission contended that three shots were fired from above and behind the president by Oswald. The first bullet passed through Kennedy's neck, then continued through Connolly's rib, and wrist, hitting bone in both cases and fragmenting, and finally arrived in Connolly's thigh. This bullet was later claimed to have been found on Connolly's stretcher, clean of blood and in near perfect condition. The only missing lead had been removed by an F.B.I. agent for analysis and there were no striations on the bullet to suggest abrasion with flesh or bone. The second bullet was that which went wild then hit a bystander, James Tait, and the third hit Kennedy in the head.

The Commission determined that no more than three shots could have been fired by the gun allegedly used by Oswald in the time elapsed for the shooting. This time was calculated using films taken of the event. If a fourth shot was fired, then it would imply a second sniper shooting at Kennedy.

Bernabei asserts, using Zapruder's film, that in fact, at least six shots were fired; three from the rear, and three or more from the front. These, he postulated were as follows; the first was fired from the front and hit Kennedy in the neck; the second, from the rear, hit him in the back; the third, also from the rear hit J.B. Connolly; the fourth hit Kennedy in the back of the head; the next, fired from the front, hit Kennedy a last time in the right temple; and one or more went wild, and hit Tait.

Two particular wounds were of interest to Bernabei. The first was an entrance wound in Kennedy's throat which the

Continued on Page 4

U of Q strike over

MONTREAL (CUPI) — While bouncers armed with baseball bats patrol the corridors, students at the Universite du Quebec a Montreal are returning to classes today in the wake of a concerted offensive by the administration to break their five week strike.

The students, faced with he threatened cancellation of their school year, voted at a general assembly yesterday to return to classes and to continue their battle against the administration and its new fee policies along different lines. The new fee policies would force the expulsion of many students who are unable to pay.

Despite an injunction against the strike obtained two weeks ago by the administration, few courses were held last week. Students and teachers boycotted classes in protest against the INM injunction.

But, threatened with fines and salary cutoffs, the teachers voted last Thursday to return to classes.

The administration, at the same time, announced that the school year was extended until May 25, and that any courses not resumed immediately would be cancelled.

This tactic, it was pointed out in yesterday's meeting, would divide students course by course, activity by activity.

To ensure that the university remains 'open' and that classes are held, the administration went so far as to hire professional bouncers (reportedly at 150 dollars a day) to patrol the halls and deal with 'disruptions'. Students claimed that some bouncers carried baseball bats.

Despite all these intimidations and threats, however, few classes were given on Friday and over 1500 students, from UQAM, U de M, and several CEGEPS, demonstrated that morning in a march to the Palais de Justice. In rows of seven or eight, the protesters at one point covered all of St. Lawrence Blvd. from Sherbrooke to Ontario.

The students rallied near the Palais de Justice to hear short speeches by Robert Lemieux and Charles Gagnon condemning the collusion between the university and the state's judicial and police arm.

It went on to say that the threatened cancellation of the school year forced students 'to play to Administration's game', but urged a continuation of struggle inside the university along the following lines:

—Refuse to pay school fees or at least exhaust all possible avenues before paying. Publicize the police nature of the university. Actively boycott all forms of student participation in university government and make the general assembly the only body mandated to select student spokesmen.

—Develop COPE as a militant structure able to combat any one the administration's policies.

—Reafirm the 'structures of combat from a much more powerful mass mobilization in September'. Strengthen the ties between student, teachers and workers and 'develop the movement', in other universities and CEGEPS.

—Bring a strike proposal before the general assembly in case of reprisals against students and workers.

This last strategy is especially important since it is rumored that the administration has a list of some 284 students involved in the strike who face possible expulsion.

AE at the art centre

KURT KRANTZ:

Exhibition continues until March 11

FOUR KINGSTON PHOTOGRAPHERS:

Aspects of the City

Opens Sunday, March 11
You are invited to meet the photographers from 2 pm to 5 pm

Queen's
Division of Concerts
presents

I SOLISTI DI ZAGREB

Chamber Orchestra

Programme: J. S. Bach, B. Martinu, B. Bartok

Wednesday, 7 March 8:30 p.m.

GRANT HALL SERIES No. 5

Tickets: $2, 3 students
$3, 4 non-students

Division of Concerts Box Office
Agnes Etherington Art Centre
547-6194

New money ends evil

A new money called constant has been issued by Independent Arbitrage Internatinal (IAI) of Exeter, New Hampshire as a non-inflationary alternative to the dollar system.

The new currency, whose constant sign is c instead of $, is based on the price levels of the 30 most traded basic staple commodities in the world market. The commodities include rice, wheat, corn, cotton, wool, hides, cement, iron, petroleum as well as gold and silver.

The dollar and other world currencies are based on the gold and silver standard but are not redeemable in gold or silver. This is because governments print unbacked paper money to offset spending or foreign balance-of-payments deficits.

This manipulation of money, which does not reflect real purchasing power, is the direct cause of inflation. Since the constant is based on an aggregate of the world's basic commodities, it always reflects real purchasing power and thus is non-inflationary.

The IAI constants are issued independent of government, sponsored instead by a non-profit, public interest,institution. The constants are redeemable at any time in dollars or basic staple commodities.

At this early stage, the constants are backed up by dollars on deposit with several commercial banks. The banks are members of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC), so that all money converted into constants is insured up to $20,000.

Carleton calls cash

OTTAWA (CUP) — Students at Carleton University who didn't pay their academic fees Feb. 28 have been de-registered.

Carleton Registrar, J. I. Jackson, sent a letter to that effect during the last week of February to 863 students who owed the university a total of $128,700 in tuition fees.

Unlike other universities, Carleton does not assess charges for late fee payment or withhold students' marks until they pay. Carleton students who have not paid are simply de-registered – it's as if they never registered in the first place. A student suffers no academic or financial loss for failing to pay. Students can re-register the following year.

Student council president Bruce Cameron thinks the policy is " a good deal for students". If students are doing poorly in the spring, they can simply not pay the final fee installment without academic consequences, Cameron says. "As well, you don't have to pay the $15 - 25 late payment fee charged by other universities."

The administrations at Queen's University and the University of Toronto responded to cancellation of the fee strike by agreeing to waive penalties for late payment. The Queen's Board of Governors cancelled the $15 penalty normally charged if students pay after Jan. 31. They avoided the penalty this year if they paid up by Feb. 28.

Assassination

Continued from Page 3

doctors at the hospital recognized. but which was overlooked in the Naval hospital's autopsy report. When brought to their attention, they projected without further examination that it was an exit wound.

The second important wound occurred in the head. a small entrance wound, caused by a low velocity bullet was found in the back of his skull. Despite the fact that no bullet fragments were found on x-rays taken in the vicinity of this hole, the report concluded that this bullet had caused the large wound in Kennedy's right forehead. Bernabei contends however, that the shattering effect must have been caused by a small high velocity projectile, fired from the front, and that the region of the brain where fragments occurred supports this hypothesis.This fact was clearly supported by sequences of Zapruder's film.

Bernabei concluded from this evidence that there were at least two snipers involved, implying a conspiracy; and that the federal government framed Oswald, convicting him despite their knowledge to the contrary.

Handicapped

Continued from Page 3

chitectural barriers adds less than 1 per cent of the total cost to the bill - an insignificant amount in a project that size. In all cases, the cost is cut drastically if initial planning considers this problem. Only when we must correct problems is cost a major factor.

As a community Kingston should feel obligated to offer its facilities to all its members - not just the physically sound.

Clare Culhane

Canada playing politics

by Sue Wishart

Canadian troops are in Vietnam for political rather than humanitarian reasons, according to author and anti-war activist Clare Culhane. Speaking to a small group of interested students Friday, she said that because of this state of affairs, the Canadian observers are not reporting both sides of the ceasefire violations.

Culhane is the community organizer of the University Settlement in Montreal. She was in Vietnam as a hospital administrator from October 1967 until April 1968. Her visit to Queen's was the last stop on a southern Ontario lecture tour to promote her book Why is Canda in Vietnam? and to stimulate discussion about Canada's role in that country.

If humanitarian goals were to be pursued in Vietnam, Culhane said, Canada's observer team should have been made up of civilians. She cited the sending of troops instead and the premature return of the Canadian Red Cross contingent as proofs that the purpose of Canada's presence in Vietnam is political, not humanitarian.

Culhane expressed concern that Canada's current Vietnam position could become hypocritical if Canadian representatives on the International Commission of Control and Supervision follow the example of their predecessors on the International Control Commission. Canadians on the ICC were no more than a group of "information-gathering stooges for the CIA", she said.

Although she admitted that the federal government had denied the political motives she ascribed to the Canadian observers, Culhane demanded that Canada prove its independence by cancelling its $500 million defense sharing agreement with the United States and by ending American military testing privileges at Suffield, Alberta.

Convinced that the Canadian observers have not told the whole story of conditions in Vietnam, Culhane said that she hopes to return to Vietnam to expose the truth, particularly the plight of political prisoners in South Vietnamese concentration camps, before the Vietnamese government has a chance to cover them up. She plans to outline her findings in book form upon her return.

Culhane asked people to support her appeal that the true Vietnam story be told by protesting Canada's inaction to all three levels of government. As examples, she described two protests she made in 1969 to publicize her protest against Canadian involvement in Vietnam; she chained herself to the visitors' gallery of the House of Commons and conducted a 10-day fast on Parliament Hill.

Old AMS council passes buck

Recently elected AMS president and vice-president Steve Brereton and Bruce Trotter assumed office at the AMS annual meeting last Thursday night.

Past president, Greg LeBlanc offered several suggestions to his successor such as talking to yourself on the phone in order to look busy and jumping from a cornered rational position to one of dominance by making arguments stunningly emotional. He also gave Brereton several toys that he has often used in the past year to releive his frustrations. He recalled that "one year ago my hope had been that the AMS would not be a playground for political heavies, but here we all are in the corner".

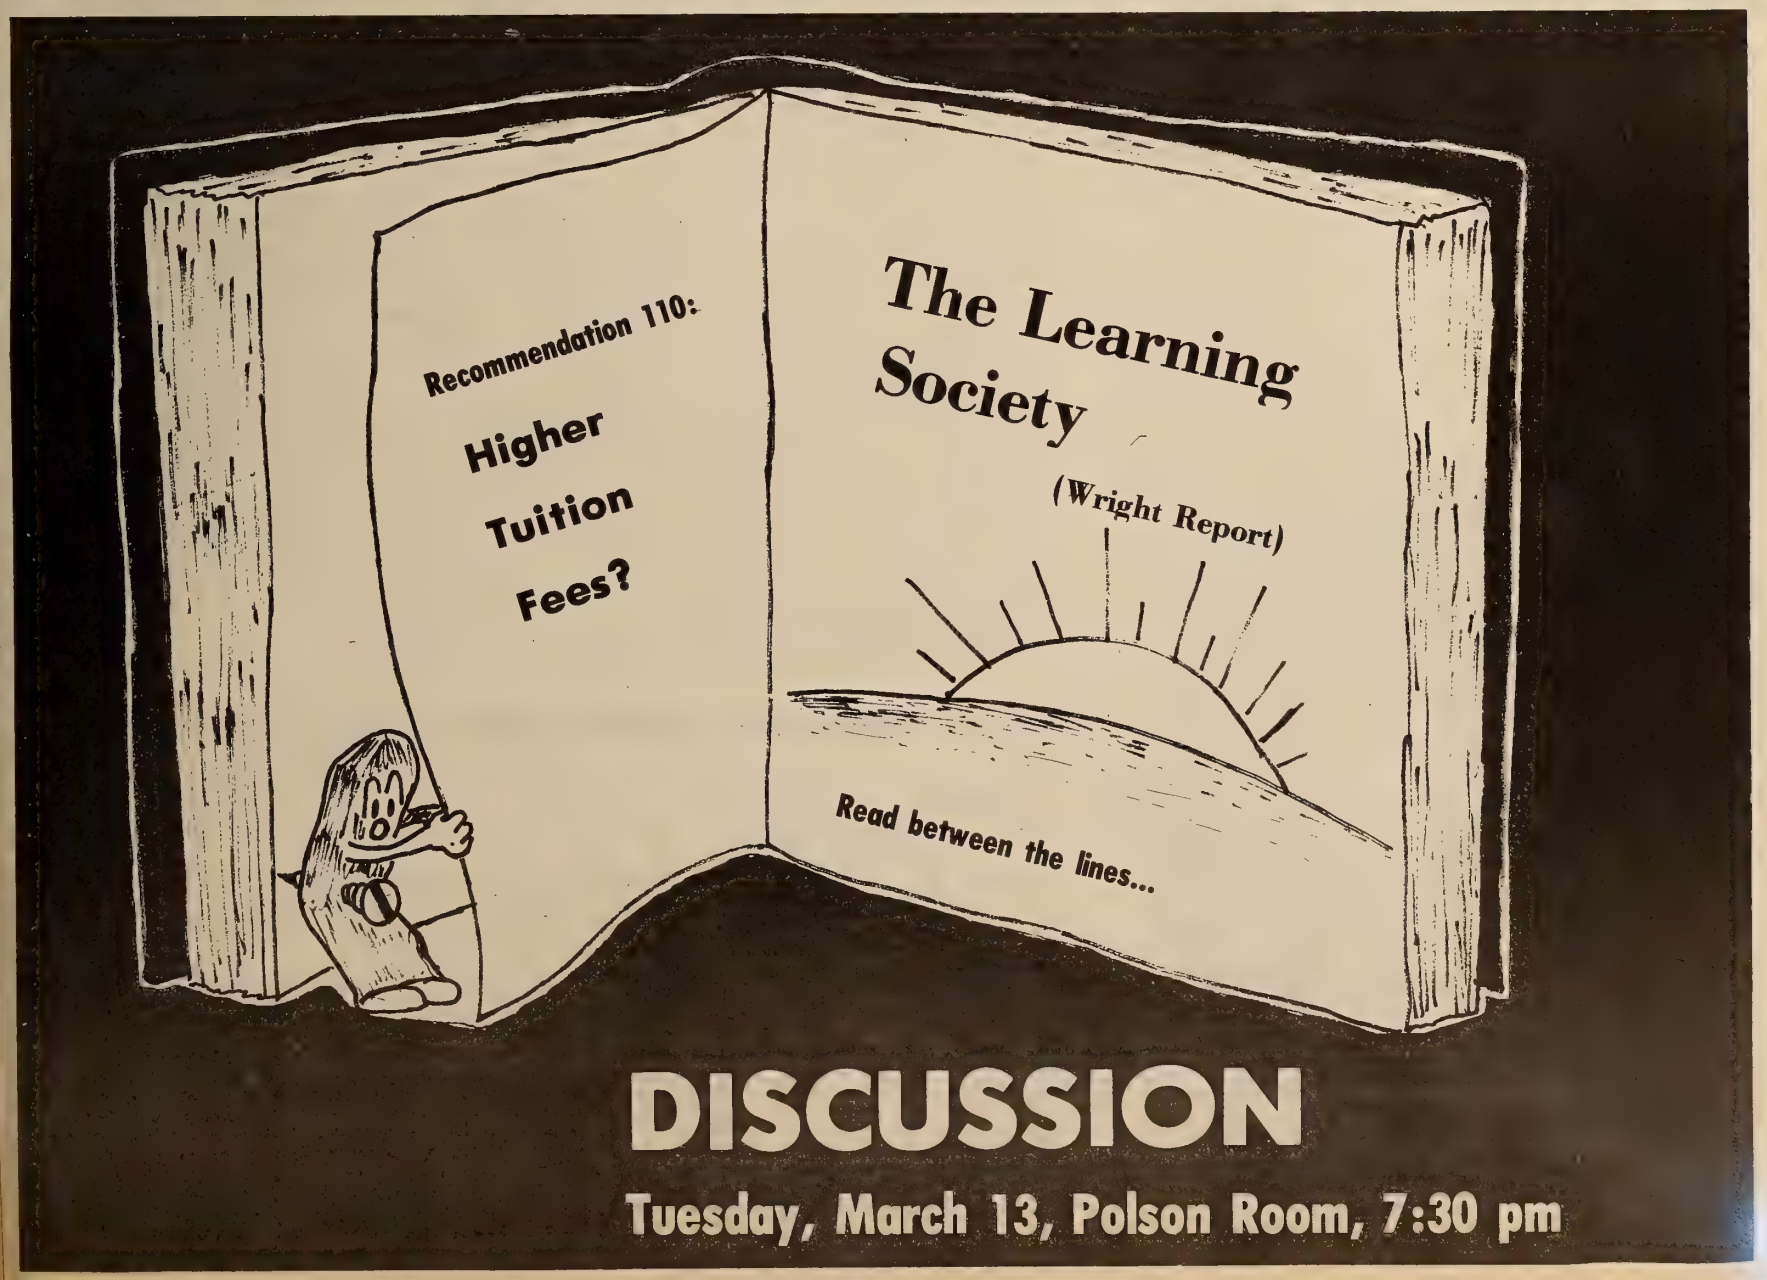
The five commissioners reported on their activities and accomplishments of the past year with accompanying recommendations. Almost without exception they made special note of the assistance and guidance that they had received from Wally Palmer, past vice-president.

In his report, Services Commissioner Andy Pipe called for "expanded and more elaborate daycare facilities" and hoped that it would be a principal project for next year. He commented that lack of space for the Student Health Services and "luxury accommodation prices" for residence are major problems to be dealt with by the commission. Pipe also recommended that the AMS reconvene the AMS Library Committee.

Ross Dunsmore, past Education Commissioner pointed out that the AMS can "only do as much as the reps do", and suggested that the representatives take over parts of the commissions. In urging Outer Council to greater action, he roasted, "the lazy slobs who just come to meetings and nod their heads at motions."

Steve Brereton, Bruce Trotter, and Marv Bloos were elected directors of the Alma Mater Society Incorporated. Past auditors, Thorne and Gunne Inc., were replaced by a Martin Secker, a local accountant.

Users' Committee discusses food



One thousand copies of the report on the proposed University Centre which will be presented to Senate in March will be available to administration and especially interested persons within ten days according to Dr. R. D. Norman, chairman of the User's Committee.

At the Friday meeting, C. E. S. Franks asked the committee for suggestions regarding kitchenette and vending machine facilities for the Arts and Social Science Complex and what things to put in the large unassigned area in the west end of the complex.

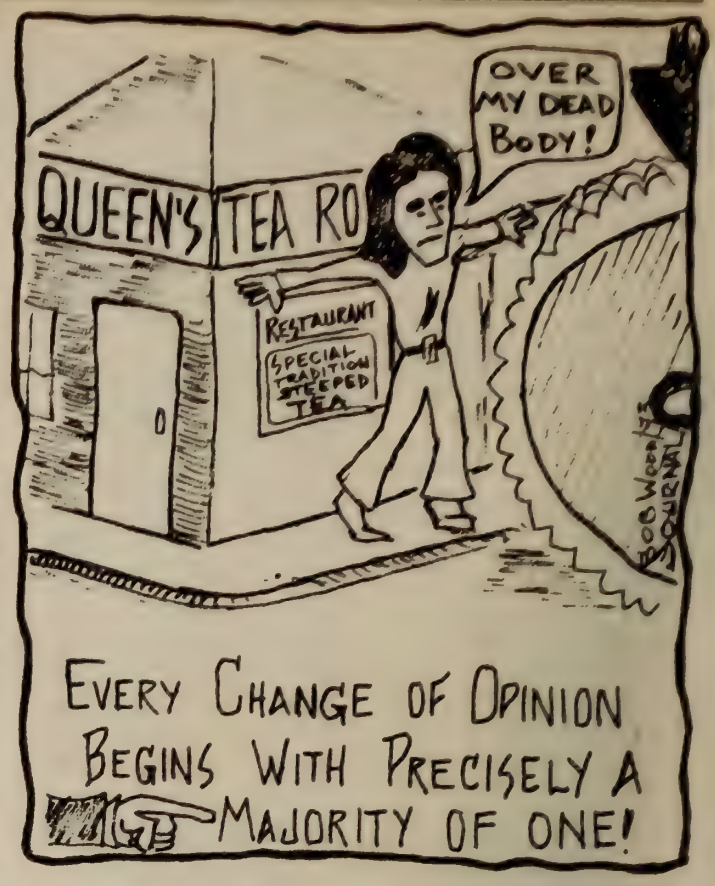
Franks suggested that the area be tentatively assigned as a quiet study area as a compliment to the lounge and coffee shop. While the committee agreed to this proposal, Chairman Norman pointed out that "the uses of the area can change over the years."

The committee generally felt that some sort of cafeteria service would be much more desirable than vending machines but realized the cost limitations and the necessity of service throughout open hours. Committee member Marnie Cousins emphasized that "for students reading till 1:00 a.m. it's important to have some kind of available service".

Rector Gary Gannage suggested that a litter problem might develop from the habit of "walking away from vending machines", however, Franks explained that a vending machine operator would be on duty most of the day and quoted the situation at St. Lawrence College which has no such problem with their machines. A sub-committee was appointed to check further into the problem

letters

Tea Room



Dear Editor,

I was both shocked and dismayed at the headline of your March 2 issue: "Queen's Tea Room Faces Demolition." I feel it my duty to register opposition to the wilful destruction of so important a landmark. With total disregard to the many who feel this building to be of some significance and value, the University Machine rolls on in its mission of elimination of the last vestiges of non-sterility on campus.

Vice Principal Kennedy feels that it is a question of deciding between "the scenery and the tradition." If the Administration is so concerned about scenery, why have they allowed the erection of such aesthetically displeasing structures as Dunning, Goodwin, and Victoria Halls, and ignored the reality of Dutch Elm Disease, waiting until most of our trees are gone before planting new ones? Considering that the Administration has not therefore been overly concerned with scenery, it seems inconsistent that the Tea Room should be destroyed on these grounds.

I hope the Administration will examine more closely its priorities and reconsider its decision, in light of my plea and that of G. K. Chesterton: "Tradition means giving votes to the most obscure of all classes- our ancestors. It is the democracy of the dead. Tradition refuses to submit to the small and arrogant oligarchy of those who happen to be waiting around."

Sincerely,
John V. Bryant

A tirade

Dear Editor,

As a former member of the Law Society executive and as the incumbent Senior A.M.S. representative for the law school, I wish to comment on your news article, "Law drops A.M.S. reps" included on page 2 of Friday's Journal, February 16. I have left this letter so long because I wanted to avoid the study weeks of both the general university and the law school. Having thus explained my tardiness, I now present my comments. The title of the article is misleading. Indeed, Law has dropped A.M.S. reps but not completely - only from the Law Society executive (which may be a blessing for future A.M.S. reps). As a result of the constitutional changes mentioned in your article, the A.M.S. reps will still be elected by law students and will still participate in the A.M.S. However, only the President's representative will be able to sit on both the A.M.S. and the Law Society executive. Therefore, in theory, the Law Society still does have A.M.S. representation. (In practice, however, this may not be so if we accept the example of the two vice-presidents of this past year's executive who attended, I believe, a grand total of three A.M.S. meetings between them. All of which is evidence of the seriousness with which those vice-presidents approached the exercise of the duties for which they had been elected.)

Necessarily, this observation on law vice-presidents leads me to discuss Mr. Hill's comments contained in the article (I am assuming he was correctly quoted). Mr. Hill is one of those vice-presidents to whom I alluded above. As I see the constitutional changes, they do not represent a new outlook of the Law Society as Mr. Hill suggests. The changes represent the first outlook the Society has had all year. Moreover, the rest of Hill's statement about being "more interested in making decisions on the executive that require a united voice in Faculty Board or in the Senate than" joining in "the sandbox politics of the A.M.S.", is typical of the pompous inexactitude which has characterized the Petryshyn-Hill executive all year. The real problem of this executive has been to make any decision at all, let alone a united one.

The Law Society has had ample opportunity to make decisions this year. There was great clamour by students over the alleged bigotry of one of our professors. The executive did nothing. The MacKinnon Commission report recommending radical changes in articling was published. The executive did not even respond. There is the possibility of the law school hiring a new Dean next year. But the executive did not offer any comment. And finally, some of our better professors are leaving or being forced to leave and the executive did not even attempt to find out why. But, Ms. Editor, I admit the conclusion is not so sad. Petryshyn-Hill, seeing clearly (in retrospect) the folly of their indecision, agreed it would have been fine to have tackled the issues at Faculty Board. So, in an effort to exeunt in gloria, they passed some "radical" constitutional amendments. But, do not permit this smoke to screen reality. Petryshyn and Hill have only passed on all their problems to next year's executive. They, themselves, solved nothing.

With respect to the inexactitude of Mr. Hill's statement, he should remember that the Law Senator does not sit on the Law Society executive. The Senator has a role just like the new role of the A.M.S. reps except that he is farther removed from his electorate because, as Senator, he is only elected every two years. In point of fact, it will still be more difficult for the Law Society to make decisions affecting the Senate than it will for them to decide upon A.M.S. issues.

One more clarification for Mr. Hill - The reason the A.M.S. reps on the Law Society voted to remove themselves from the executive was because, as the article states, we felt that we did not have sufficient time to fill both jobs in an adequate manner. We chose, therefore, to participate in the A.M.S. full time. Contrary to Mr. Hill's comment, if there are any sandbox politics in this university, they are not in the A.M.S. president of two years past, Rod Follwell - a law student; last year's campus activities commissioner and this year's vice-president, Wally Palmer, - a law student and next year's A.M.S. rep from the law school; a former president of ASUS, Marv Bloos, would all agree with me.

Furthermore, Mr. Hill, the law vice-president who attended only two A.M.S. meetings, did not give himself enough time to find out if there was anything more in the A.M.S. box of politics besides sand. In any case, it may be that Mr. Hill did not want to chance attendance at any other A.M.S. meetings for fear of having sand thrown in his face by those whom he may consider to be below himself.

Now, may I shortly tell why the motions passed through the Law Society so easily. The previous week most of the executive had met and agreed to pass them. At the general meeting, although it began with a quorum, there were very few other voters in the room, other than the executive, at the time the question was put. In explication of why Mr. Petryshyn was so surprised, - it was not because the amendments were so radical but because this motion was his first motion of import that had passed through the executive all year! Furthermore, wholesale revision of the constitution is not so impossible as Mr. Petryshyn suggests. He may remember two years ago when the first year packed a general meeting and voted its year executive $200 in the face of opposition from all the rest of the Law Society executive. The simple truth is that in the sandpile of Law School politics, if an interested person brings 24 other people with him to a general meeting, he can do whatever he wants with the sand.

In conclusion, Ms. Editor, I must say that I am pleased with the Law Society amendments but I wanted your readers to be clear on their significance. Also, I am not prepared to let Mr. Hill's prejorative remarks about the A.M.S. fall on unknowing ears. Hopefully, this letter has placed his remarks and Mr. Petryshyn's, as quoted in your article, in a better perspective.

Yours very truly,
R. Ross Dunsmore
Senior A.M.S. Rep. Law
Education Commissioner

Fun Club

Dear Editor,

In response to the letter "Ripped Off" in the Journal last Friday, I hope this letter will clarify what the Fun Club is and what we're doing. First of all, in organizing anything this year, we've found that perhaps about one half of the students at Queen's seem to feel that the Fun Club is a rip off.

In December we had a chili dinner on a Sunday night and fed about a hundred and twenty people. Most people we talked to thought it was a great idea until they heard the Fun Club was putting it on. They seemed to immediately assume it was a rip off. I'd like to stress that all we're trying to do is to get people together to have fun. Everyone at our chili dinner had a great time (were you there?) and it certainly wasn't a rip off.

Anyway, as noted by the editor, we're having a boobie this Friday at Grant Hall with a band from L.A. called Blackstone. The price is $1.00 with your membership and $1.25 without (note the change). Tickets are on sale all week, 11:30-1:30 in the John Orr room and at the door. In addition, Fun Club tee-shirts go on sale Thursday and Friday (also in the John Orr room) at $2.50 for members and $2.75 for non-members. We'll be expecting to see you at the Spring Boogie.

John Saksun
President,
Fun Club.

Queen's Journal
Vol. 100, No. 43
Tues., Mar. 6, 1973
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ontario

Editor: Jennifer Grass
Business: Charles Schwier
Management: John Solman
Arts: Sandy Naiman
Features: Pat Devitt, Steven Winnett
Passepartout: Bob Wood
News: Susan de Stein
Events: Alison Dandie
Sports: Chris Boon, Nada Bogdanovic
National Desk: Bob Mutrie, Sue Wishart
Photography: Peter Boag

Once upon a time (Sunday night plus or minus a week) the Journal staff was lounging in the basement of the Union waiting for a paper to happen. Sue, Pat, and Ann happened by; soon Lee, Wattsy, and Merrithew joined them and a strange brew began to ferment. When K.G. and Lyn added the magnum opus, lo and behold lightning crashed and the brew splashed all the way to Morrisland. As the smoke cleared, and the bodies picked themselves up, they found, much to their suprise, that a paper had happened.

Published twice weekly on Tuesdays and Fridays by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc., Member, Canadian University Press. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society of the University. Offices are located in the Student's Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

When strike action fails What do you do next?

The students' division of the Ontario Branch of the Canadian Bar Association is sponsoring a symposium on "The Failure of the Strike? And Alternatives" to be held on Friday evening, March 9 and Saturday morning and afternoon, March 10, in Dupuis Hall at Queen's University, Kingston, Ontario.

Everyone is invited and encouraged to attend. If enough students from the other law schools desire to attend, bus transportation arrangements will be made by the various school Bar Association representatives and accommodation on a two-to-a-room basis will be booked in Kingston at Elrond College, the new co-op residence.All C.B.A. student members travelling to the symposium will be partially reimbursed. It is possible that we will pay for the rooms at Elrond for the first 40.

Hopefully, the labour law professors in the several law schools will take a strong interest in the subjects to be discussed and will encourage their students to attend by orienting part of their courses around the discussion topics or by emphasizing the value of the sessions and the positions and power which the panelists hold throughout Canada.

The symposium will be divided into three parts. Friday night, beginning at 7:30, the subject of discussion will centre around the question "Have unions forgotten their members?" and we hope to discuss where the individual stands within the union. As an introduction to this area, we plan to show the controversial CBC television play, Strike, which tells the story of a small town labour dispute in which there is union violence provoked by the "toughs" sent from head office, a death, problems in the unionists' homes, pleas from the owner that the employees return to work, union refusals and the ultimate closing down of the plant. The Friday evening session will involve an impromptu discussion of the impressions which the CBC film projects to the panel and the audience. The discussion panel will consist of five people: a chairman, two union representatives and two management representatives. Hopefully, lively discussion will occur among the panelists which will encourage a great deal of questions from the audience.Mr. Ian Scott of Cameron, Brewin & Scott, a union labour firm, and Mr. Tom Storie of Hicks, Morley, Hamilton, Stewart, Storie, a management firm, have consented to confront each other on the issues. Professor Morley Gorsky, a distinguished arbitrator from Queen's will act as chairman. Mr. Bill Dodge, Secretary-Treasurer of the Canadian Labour Congress and Mr. Bob Abbott, Industrial Relations Manager, Ontario Hydro, will complete the panel.

Saturday will cover two other areas, 1) the lessons about strikes which we may learn from labour disputes in the public sector, and 2) a final session on the future of dispute resolution in labour law.

The morning panel session will begin at 9:30 and will involve an opening statement by a leading public figure, to be announced, castigating both management and labour for their constant neglect of the public interest. To this statement, a panel of two management representatives and two union leaders will respond, each in turn presenting a short prepared reply dealing with their experiences in the field of public sector labour disputes. Then, all the panelists will be led in an open discussion on the issues which have arisen. Professor Don Wood, head of the Industrial Relations Centre at Queen's, will chair this session. Mr. Peter Riggin, Noranda Mines Vice-President in charge of Corporate Relations and Mr. Russell Stewart, Director of Staff Relations, Federal Treasury Board will speak on behalf of management. Dr. Mario Hikl, the Legislative Director of The Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE) and Mr. Claude Edwards, the leader of the Public Service Alliance of Canada (PSAC) which represents many of the employees who bargain with the Federal Treasury Board will present the union point of view.

In the Saturday afternoon session the topic for discussion, "The Future of Dispute Resolution" will consider the obvious new trends in collective bargaining law in Canada. These begin from the basic private bargaining system set out in the Ontario Labour Relations Act and extend to the federal Public Service Staff Relations Act which proposes two avenues for dispute resolution, the compulsory arbitration route or the strike route and introduces the concept of the "designated employee". Further discussion should range to the recent New Brunswick public service act which is tantamount to an update on the P.S.S.R.A. and reduces the importance of compulsory arbitration, introduces the concept of "deadlock" and prohibits picketing or worker replacement during a strike. The panel will also consider the new Crown Employees Bargaining Act in Ontario which prohibits strikes and requires compulsory arbitration.

The Saturday afternoon panel session will begin at 2:00 p.m. and will involve a prepared statement by each speaker of approximately twelve minutes' duration on some part of the general topic. Professor Gordon Simmons of Queen's Law School and editor of Labour Arbitration Cases will chair this last session. Mr. J. R. Scott, a senior negotiator with the Ontario Treasury Board will discuss the merits of the compulsory bargaining system. Professor Saul Frankel, a political scientist who is an employee representative on the Public Service Staff Relations Board in Ottawa will comment on the federal approach to dispute resolution and suggest possible changes for the future. Mr. R. V. Hicks, senior partner in the law firm of Hicks, Morley, Hamilton, Stewart, Storie will compare and contract the Federal and Ontario systems. Mr. Martin Levinson, of the law firm of Levinson, Sack and Dunn will discuss the success and future of strike action as a positive element in the resolution of labour disputes. Finally, Mr. Gordon Donnelly, Vice-President, Personnel, of Alcan will criticize the various proposals of the other speakers from his position as representative of senior management. After a break for coffee, the chairman will lead an open discussion and there will be a question period.

R. Ross Dunsmore
Queen's Law School

March 1, 1973

Symposium on labour

Friday, March 9 - 7:30 p.m.

Have the Unions Forgotten their Members?

Mr. Ian Scott of Cameron, Brewin and Scott: The practical rights of dissentient union members to represent his views fairly to the other union members and to have a fair opportunity to contest the union leadership with which he disagrees.

Mr. Bill Dodge, Secretary-Treasurer of the Canadian Labour Congress: criticism and comment on the statement, "the bargaining process involves deceit, bluffing and lack of regard for the truth as part of the ritual understood by both parties."

Mr. Bob Abbott, Industrial Relations Manager of Ontario Hydro: What roles does or should management play in learning and protecting individual union member's rights?

Mr. Tom Storie of Hicks, Morley, Hamilton, Stewart, Storie: The difficulties of fully satisfying, within the parameters of the collective bargaining framework, the diverse interest groups in the bargaining unit.

Saturday, March 10 - 9:30 a.m.

Lessons we can learn from public sector labour disputes:

Mr. Peter Riggin, Vice-President Corporate Relations of Noranda Mines Ltd., who will comment on the statement that both management and labour in the public sector have been neglecting the public interest by permitting their disputes to continue on so long without resolution.

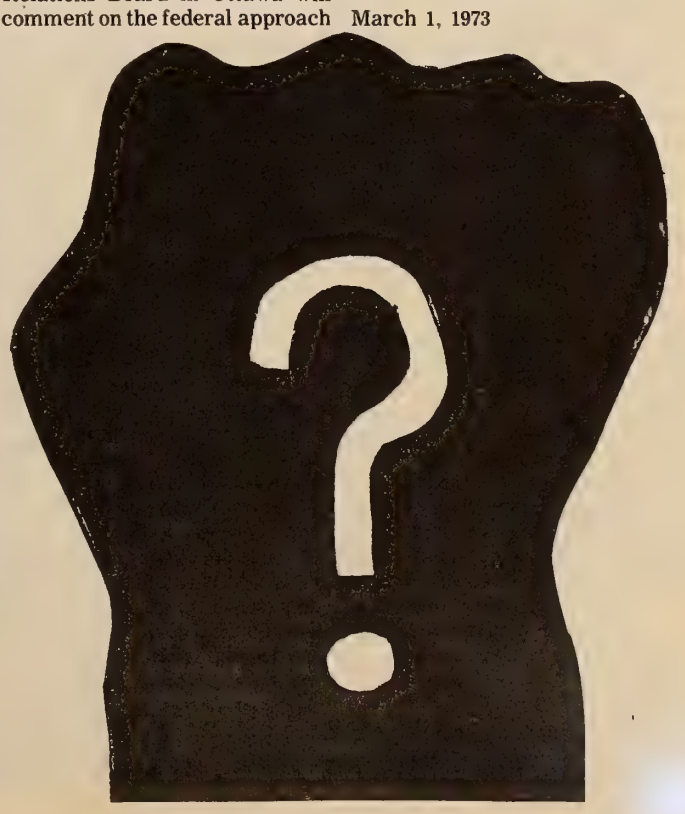
Mr. Russell Stewart, Director of Staff Relations, Federal Treasury Board, who will discuss the quandry of a federal official who is at once both an employer and a political representative.

Dr. Mario Hikl, Director of Legislation of C.U.P.E. who will approach the topic as a representative of a union which organizes local service workers like the garbagemen or hydro workers.

Mr. Claude Edwards, President of the Public Service Alliance, who will discuss the topic from the point of view of the federal public servants.

Saturday, March 10 - 2:00 p.m.

The Future of Dispute Resolution



Mr. R. V. Hicks, of Hicks, Morley, Hamilton, Stewart, Storie, who will compare the approaches between the Federal and Ontario Governments in dispute resolution.

Dr. Saul Frankel, a member of the Public Service Staff, Relations Board, who will talk on trends in interest disputes in the Public Service.

Mr. Gordon Donnelly, Vice-President Personnel, Alcan Fabricating, who will comment on the difficulties with various present systems of dispute settlement in private industry.

Mr. Martin Levinson, of Levinson, Sack and Dunn who will uphold the utility of the strike as an effective negotiating tool in the future of dispute resolution.

Mr. Rollie Scott, Ontario Treasury Board, Senior Staff Relations, who will talk on future trends in compulsory arbitration.

(Reprinted from The Chevron, January 19, 1973)

by Paul Studwe

Some reflections on cinematic violence, mass culture, deranged communi

Offing the audience

In the hierarchy of my private concerns, film violence has only recently become a "problem". Although traumatized at an early age by the witch in The Wizard of Oz, thus beginning a lifelong aversion to anything resembling a horror film, I have always been a Western freak, whether the classic Stagecoach or one of the innumerable Randolph Scott or Audie Murphy oaters; and with no qualms about the villain's violent end, either, since the hero's fury was always both provoked and appropriate. His guns were either hung up or headed farther west at the fadeout, and he would never have though of taking the opportunity to dispose of his enemy's wife, kids, and relatives (a staple of both Greek and Chinese tragedy). Although the morality was a simple one of white horses and black hats, it did serve as sufficient justification for the events of the plot.

Thus I don't think that I have any basic objections to the depiction of violence, provided that it has some organic relationship to context. Clearly, there are numerous examples or works of art where violence is integral to the realization of the author's intentions, and could not be omitted without irreparable weakening of force: the execution of the three soldiers in Paths of Glory, the murder of the old lady in Crime and Punishment, and Goya's drawings of the Napoleonic Wars in Spain suggest themselves at random. To forbid an artist the use of violence would make as much sense as outlawing one of the colors of the spectrum—we would see less, and be the poorer for it.

In viewing several recent films, however, I have been particularly struck by the gratuitous and excessive character of the violence portrayed. Although it happened to the The Godfather which aroused the desire to write something about film violence, A Clockwork Orange, Straw Dogs, or Dirty Harry could just as easily have touched off this particular string of mental firecrackers, and of emotions all the more personally significant precisely because they do not seem to be shared by my friends. With regard to The Godfather, especially, I found myself at odds with those whose opinions I ususally share, or at least comprehend; thus, the felt necessity to tackle the "Violence in Films" problem, despite the slightly boggling amount of attention it has already received in the Middle—and Highbrow media.

As an example of what I don't want to do, Michael Goodwin's "Tooling Up For Armageddon" (Take One, March-April '72) is typical of the sorts of simplistic analyses churned out by cultural arbiters attempting to double as sociologists. Chanting the familiar litany of Contemporary Evils (Vietnam, the population explosion, ecological damage), Goodwin contends that ours is a culture "living on the brink of disaster," conditioning us for a nightmarish future with a "bloodbath" of violence. After an admission that he hasn't a clue as to what to do about it (although he thinks that less violent films might retard the regression), Goodwin concludes with the warning that the resultant despair is "the stuff that fascism feeds on." A despairing thought, indeed; and the first thing which comes to mind is that this article appears to be part and parcel of that despair, characterized by precisely those cultural tendencies the author deplores, and a piece of the problem rather than a step towards a solution.

The question is that of the role of the critic. Is he simply a nay-sayer, a gnat biting at the scabs of a wounded society, or does he have some responsibility to address himself to answers as well as interrogations? That there is no simple answer was well illustrated by an exchange in the New York Review of Books between Mary McCarthy and opponents of her contention that the U.S. should immediately and unilaterally withdraw from Vietnam. Very well, replied the latter, but you must provide some alternative authority to stop the (hypothetical) resulting execution of anti-communist South Vietnamese. McCarthy answered, I think quite correctly, that this was so much hogwash, because it implied that before one could point out a wrong one would have to already know its redress: all right, I am murdering you, but before I stop you have to provide me with an alternative.

On the other hand, I find if difficult to believe that the current proliferation of muckracking social criticism is a completely positive phenomenon. Ask youself the question: after reading the umpteenth article on the plight of the Canadian Indian, are you motivated to do anything other than rage at the futility of it all? A minority, certainly, are moved to some responsive action, but I suspect that most of us are simply numbed by the serials of human misery showing daily in the mass media, whether presented as "informative TV documentary" or "comments of a caustic columnist." Although this sort of social criticism has been justified in terms of turning on the concerned minority, it is beginning to be evident that too little attention has been paid to its effects upon the majority of passive ingesters.

I think there are at least two major consequences for the social surround in which we live. The first is difficult to characterize precisely, but essentially involves a kind of numbing effect in terms of our sensitivity to the suffering of others. Whether one chooses to use the phrase "Freedom of the Press" or "Repressive Tolerance," it seems clear that the mass media expose us to substantial doses of human misery, to which we as isolated indivuduals can react in only limited ways—of which turning off appears to be the most popular. Whether one chooses to describe this as desensitization, alienation or information overload, the basic situation is one of learning to ignore unpleasantries over which one appears to have no control.

The second consequence may seem much less significant, but it is personally important in terms of the manner in which I want to discuss film violence. It concerns the method of argument characteristic of the muchracking style, which is essentially the a posteriori marshalling of causes to explain a given contemporary effect. The advantage of this method is that one can "explain" just about anything through a judicious selection of causes: thus although The Greening of America and Future Shock describe antithetical social situations, and project antithetical futures, each is to a degree convincing within the context of that set of information which the author had decided to stress. The point is not that Reich or Toffler are phonies, or are necessarily wrong. It is, rather, that their conclusions are determined by the particular intellectual filters through which they view the world, and have a corresponding degree of validity.

Thus it would be quite simple to "explain" film violence by choosing X number of causes. The only problem would be that you wouldn't know anything more about it than when you started to read this. And neither would I.Q.E.D.: we'll have to try another strategy.

When in doubt, describe the situation.

If we start by examining the nature of film, we are immediately confronted by the fact operates on the same principles as General Motors or Standard Oil. The name of the game is profit, and maximum profit requires the maximum possible audience. That the cinema was rapidly exploited by some very adroit businessmen, and not preserved for the exclusive pleasure of a privileged class (as the ballet has been, for example), is perhaps to be deplored, but should not delude us as to the possibility of an "artist's cinema" free of commercial considerations. The production companies exist, the theaters and distribution apparatus exist, and these are social facts requiring the production and consumption of film.

Production and consumption. The "success" of a film equals the number of people who are willing to spend money to see it; and in a competitive situation in which movies are but one of several potential choices available to the seeker after entertainment, they must present an alternative to that which is available for "free"—i.e. television. Since television programming is fairly rigidly controlled as to violent or sexual content, primarily because of its greater accessibility to children, it is not surprising that the film industry has chosen to emphasize that which is forbidden to TV; explicit sex and exaggerated violence. Marshall Dillon makes it with Miss Kitty; Doc performs open heart surgery on Festus' umpteenth wound.

Unlike the continuing furor over overt sexual content, which has already brought about a four category rating system, those few individuals who have concerned themselves with the increase in film violence have not provoked any sort of mass protest against this phenomenon. In view of the Social Darwinist ideology of contemporary conservatism, and the identification of a "liberal" position with a distaste for any kind of censorship, we should probably not expect either analysis or concern from the usual sources of controversial social issues; but remembering the deficiencies of the "social critisism-muck-raking" discussed above, this would not seem to constitute an objection to a continuing consideration of film violence.

Perhaps the most overtly violent type of film is the Western, where the drama of Good vs. Evil reduces to a naked contest of force in the absence of strong social controls (the impotent Sheriff). In the "classic" Western (rought, pre-1965), the last twitch of the villains signals a moment of choice for the hero: settling down with the banker's daughter, or riding off into the sunset to seek further adventure. If we take these as metaphors for the acceptance or triumph of an advancing civilization, either decision symbolizes the victory of the community over the individual. Gemeinschaft marches on, either absorbing or pushing westward the man whose capacity for violence is not longer relevant.

Contrast this with such more recent examples of the genre as Little Big Man and A Fistful of Dollars. In the former, the tables have been completely turned: it is the cavalry and the settlers who destroy the more humane Indian culture, with General Custer presented as the bloody-minded leader of a Mongolian horde, rather than as the brave but injudicious gallant of They Died With Their Boots On (1941) or Bugles in the Afternoon (1952). A Fistful of Dollars celebrates the destruction of a community through Clint Eastwood's clever manipulation of competing sub-groups, and its sequels, particularly The Good, The Bad, and The Ugly, continue the theme of the protagonist's abstraction from events in the surrounding society. In the latter film, only the jerks enlist in either the Union or Confederate armies, while the smart guys hang loose and pursue personal profit at the expense of both sides.

Although Little Big Man and Sergio Leone's "spaghetti Westerns" present different pictures of the advancing society—in the one case, pathologically aggressive, in the other, beset by idiotic factionalism—both convey similar attitudes toward the moral turpitude of Am civilization. They indict a society rather than an indivi a discernable group, as the background of social corr justifies the foreground of personal violence: in a w rates, he who grabs the most cheese in King.

"Indict a society" is perhaps too str phrase...or is it? If we deal with the con "justification", it would appear th traditional Western legitimated violence as an appro response to a specific and temporary historical sit whereas more recent examples of the genre present vi as a structurally organic feature of contemporary soci

In terms of our increasing awareness of the ways s does do violence to people (women, ethnic minorities conformist youth), we could be tempted to conclude th represents an intellectual "coming of age" of the cine fuller comprehension of the "Violence is power" eq understood by such diverse men as Napoleon, Max V and Mao Tse-Tung, In view of the contemporary film sence of any mitigating sensibility or thought regardi consequence of social violence however, I doubt that v accept it as some sort of "reality therapy" for th deficiencies of movies—particularly when there ex strong correlation between the inclusion of graphic vi and the economic success of the resulting films.

If the first thing we dan derive from such films as Dogs, A Clockwork Orange, Dirty Harry, and The F Connection is a communication about the inherently nature of our world, the second is surely a message abo appropriate behaviour in this situation. The aggr brutality of the police in Dirty Hairy and The Frenc nection is perhaps the most obvious example: don't ta chance of misjudging Joe Citizen, man, if he looks eyed, zap him! The contrast with the old Western Sheriff, who had to be ridiculed and shat on retaliating, is evident; it's almost as if the old "Preem Strike" theory of the think-tank nuclear madmen has down into the collective unconscious. Nice guys finish shoot first, talk later, the only good — is a dead — cliches achieving a frightening reality.

The consequences for the social fabric, that precious area of intersubjective agreement which makes social life possible, can hardly be exaggerated. They are most evident in the sort of Fortress Persona mentality operative in New York City, where doors are triple—and quadruple—bolted and strangers are enemies until proven otherwise, but may also be observed in the 52 per cent increase in personal assaults in Canada over the last five years. We appear to be moving towards a realization of Hobbes' conception of society as a "war of all against all": habits based upon a general trust of most people in most situations are replaced by a generalized suspicion of everyone characterized by evasion, dishonesty, and the mobilization of hostile feelings.

To attribute these disturbing phenomena solely to an increase in cinematic violence would of course be ridiculous. Up to this point I have been attempting to provide a background, a context, within which we can sensibly discuss and try to understand an artifically isolated case of what is commonly perceived as the alienation, depersonalization, commercialization, whatever, or contemporary life.

To use these giant-sized and mind-boggling words, however, is to end discussion, to invoke the incomprehensible, to admit defeat. The fault is not in the words themselves, or in the very real situations which they describe, but in their promiscuous use as the coins of a conventional wisdom in our time. If we wish to make some intelligent application of them, I think derstand together: hard, shared, collective experience, of which watching films and experiencing violence, is perhaps as good an example as can be found.

So what happens when we see a particularly graphic depiction of violence on the theater screen? For a significant portion of the audience, we would probably have to define "see" as "see as unreal": as the advertisements for the film Last House on the Left reiterate, "Keep repeating, it's only a movie....only a movie...only a movie." While this may be a "healthy" response, in the sense that it at least temporarily preserves the sanity of the viewer, we should perhaps examine a bit more closely the type of conditioning going on here. ("Keep repeating, it's only a gas chamber...only a gas chamber...only a gas chamber.")

It has become quite commonplace to decry the desensitizing effects of the barrage of violence in the news media, of watching the days installment of the Vietnam war and attempting to relate to "93 Dead in Bolivian Air Crash". Although this is usually described in highly moral terms, as a kind of not-nice callousness towards the suffering of others, a more important consequence would seem to me to be the acceptance of violence as normative, as a basic and typical occurrence in the social world: Sure is hard to get excited about Bolivian air crashes (picketline violence in Kitchener, a scream down the block); familiarity breeds....familiarity: ho-hum, la-di-da, and the automatic inclusion in the taken-for-granted world of everyday phenomena.

From accepting violence as normative, it is but a small step to adopt a totally fatalistic attitude towards it. In the case of Bolivian air crash victims, this is both realistic (What could we do about it?) and necessary (How can we internalize the pain of the victims' loved ones?); but what about other situations in which we have some actual or potential influence? Far from representing either greater realism or the dissemination of social consciousness, it would seem likely that the experience of an unremitting flow of media violence operates to destroy our capacity to either comprehend or deal with it.

Although the above remarks refer specifically to the news media, we should not underestimate the role of film violence in encouraging a similar apathy. Most of us go to the movies as a kind of special event, to which we devote some thought, discussion with friends, and expenditure of money; we expect some return for this investment, and are proportionally more attentive to (and thus more open to the influence of) whatever film we have chosen. The question of the relative weight of the cinema and the news media in promoting affective anesthesia can be left to the social scientists; what is important here is the substantial contribution which film violence makes to this phenomenon.

Turning to those who do have some kind of immediate reaction to blood and gore on the screen, we can make a simple distinction between people who are turned on by it and people who find it upsetting. Since I am not a member of the gormer group, my knowledge of them is as secondhand as it is speculative, but a few striking experiences with the "I dig violence" folks will perhaps be of help in understanding their position.

The first occurred when I was picked up by a young deliveryman (hardware supplies) while hitch-hiking to Toronto last summer. We found two topics that we could converse on: the second was films, particularly those featuring large doses of sex and violence. His enthusiasm for both boobs and blood was quite unqualified, expressed in the terms of "The more the merrier"; and although I did note the force and vehemence of his opinions, I was more struck by the apparent relationship between his taste in movies and his self-described sexual deprivation. "Aha, compensation," went the old mental ticker, and I quite forgot about it until another conversation involving film violence cast some new light on what he had been saying.

This second experience occurred during a discussion of A Clockwork Orange, with myself and another Chevronard putting it down while a mutual friend defended it. Most of our attack centered on the quasi-fascist nature of the film, and eventually our arguments as to its idealogical banality were accepted. This did not, however, change our friend's enjoyment of A Clockwork Orange, and in trying to explain this he came out with the line "It made me feel."

My immediate reaction: sure, and so would a kick in the balls. But after reflecting upon his statement, I was more impressed by what it said about the quality of life in our society. If some people have become so desensitized, so dead with regard to emotional feelings, that they require a massive dose of "ultra-violence" to confirm their existence, then we can hardly condemn them when they seek sensation wherever they can find it; but this by no means dictates our acceptance of such a situation.

In contrast to those who see film violence as an unreal and fantastic thing, and deny any validity or impact to what they see on the screen, those who enjoy graphic violence grant it a validity which over-shadows the events of their own lives: the former conceive of violence as an unreal adjunct to life, while the latter conceive of life as an unreal adjunct to violence. Assuming that there are reasons for accepting the reality of both daily life and violence (which I hope that the reader will grant), either reaction can be fairly classified as a withdrawal from, or denial of, the basic conditions of being human.

Before moving on to a consideration of what can be done for this "deranged community," I should add that I do not want to imply some sort of exalted status for those who react negatively to violence in films. Obviously this could be an equally reality-negating response, although it at least contains the potential for a constructive reaction to what seems to me to be a rather unhealthy situation. We are familiar with the cultural stereotypes of the blue nose, shrinking violet, or little old lady in tennis shoes, however, and will not expect help from that quarter.

So. What to do? Having tried to define the situation, having attempted to point out some of its contextual dimensions, we are still faced with the problem of dealing with that which has been discovered. In exploring this context, it has become quite clear that the phenomenon of film violence cannot be isolated, except artificially, from the condition of contemporary society as a whole. Thus it would be easy enough to conclude with an appeal for fundamental reforms—revolutions—regenerations, and leave the "mere details" to your imagination. Where they would remain, no doubt, and justly so.

The first likely response, I suppose, is that film violence is simply a manifestation of a general social breakdown which should demand all of our attention and energies. Perhaps so; but if we wish something more fundamental than the sort of tinkering with established institutions already dabbled in by governments, I think we come up against some hard realities, namely: (1) the kind of analysis and information from which we could plan change is either nonexistent or scattered among a plethora of sources, and (2) where this does exist, it has not been disseminated to those social groups which have an interest in changing the status quo. Thus those who would delay a confrontation with film violence until "after the revolution" are probably ensuring that such a confrontation will never take place.

The other side of the coin is that we do not appear to be in a static situation, but rather in a rapidly changing, if not necessarily "deteriorating," one which makes a detached, objective approach extremely difficult as well as probably incorrect. If we opt for "action now," this does not preclude reflection and appropriate inquiry; it does commit us to acting on what is more commonly and comfortably held exclusively in the mind.

How then should we attempt to deal with a phenomenon such as violence in film? My first suggestion will likely seem simple-minded, but it is made in the conviction that it is both an often overlooked potentially powerful method of getting some feedback into contemporary communication processes. Simply put, it is that we have to become more conscious of ourselves as consumers of culture, and act accordingly.

In terms of personal relationships, for example, I suspect that most of us act so as to minimize contact with people whom we find either offensive or simply boring; and if they were the only people inhabiting our social world, we would probably do our damndest to find another one. We are aware of the pressures towards conformity characteristic of social groups, and conscious of the fact that if we hang out with folks we don't like, it is probable that (1) we will lead rather depressed lives, and (2) are more likely to be affected by their collective influence than they are by our individual one. Therefore we quite sensibly seek a satisfying level of social reality.

With regard to "culture" or "entertainment," however, we seem to be much less aware of the effects of taking in what is simply because it is readily available. If we accept the idea that society shapes us, we need not accept the proposition that it shapes us all in the same way; quite obviously, it doesn't which seems to leave some room for the exercise of individual choice and self-determination. We hold others to account for their actions, we attempt to control some of the content of some of the areas of our lives, and I can see no reason why we should not attempt the same thing concerning other kinds of inputs. Like Kultchah.

Perhaps some exaggeration will make this clearer. Imagine, if you will, someone who confines his entertainment to whatever happens to be on the Top 40 or the best-seller list or, for that matter, whatever happens to appear in the Chevron. What will he be doing to himself? "Experiencing reality," or placing himself at the mercy of social processes which grind out mass culture on purely economic criteria? And even if you enjoy the products of the latter, it is difficult to applaud a life lived with such a high degree of unconsciousness.

With the above in mind, I think we can have some immediate influence on what is presented to us as entertainment or culture by using our available assets of mind and awareness in a more sophisticated way, based on thinking about how "You are what you eat." For example, I have recently turned down invitations to see Deliverance and The Getaway on the grounds that, having read their reviews, I would find their violence upsetting, and found that none was mystified by it or thought that it cast aspersions on my intelligence, personality, or sex.

If we can succeed in taking control over our personal range of entertainment choices, we thus may begin a process which will rescue audiences from a status equivalent to that of the Victorian wife: prone and unresponsive. If this presumes too great an influence by isolated, turned-on individuals, perhaps we should next consider a social correlative for increasing awareness.

I think a clue is provided by a previous reference to entertainment as that which "is presented to us"—is in some sense beyond our control. My suggestion, which may again seem simplistic, is that we devote more thought and energy to constructing (rather than merely choosing appropriately) a culture which is rewarding in terms of creation as well as appreciation.

The major obstacle here, aside from again becoming conscious of the value of creating one's own culture, is probably the cult of technical excellence which has had a strongly inhibirory effect on broad participation in cultural activities. It is perhaps most obvious in the sports culture, which consists of the progressive elimination of practically everyone from competitive sports, but can also be observed in such areas as "musical education," where the talented child passes through a series of filters leading to the social role of "Musician". Although these filters are often justified as timeless and eternal aesthetic criteria, anyone familiar with either the changes in these standards over time, or with the large number of talented (and usually innovative) musicians who receive no formal musical education, will be aware of their culture-bound and highly relative nature.

I am not arguing against excellence, but against a system which operates so as to define it as that which is the exclusive province of the few rather than a potentiality for the many. The net effect of this attitude, when multiplied over most areas of cultural endeavor, is to create the ideal consumer: passive, unthinking, and certain of his own lack of ability, alive only when applauding the efforts of someone else.

The antidote? Again, I think, we must begin to be conscious of how things happen and how they affect us. If we arrive at the conclusion that available cultural options are unsatisfying, we have to move towards creating new ones; if our music, literature, cinema, or whatever is inadequate, better an attempt of our own, no matter how apparently inept, than either useless bitching or fatalistic acceptance. This will almost certainly require the ability to work outside established institutions, not least because our products will rarely meet accepted standards, but also because these institutions are incapable of relating to culture based on individual needs for satisfaction rather than an elitist conception of "excellence."

If we can overcome our conditioned attitudes about cultural forms and realize, for example, that there is no need for us to make "movies" with professional actors and expensive production processes, but that there probably is a need for us to use the medium of photography in recording and understanding our lives, we may be able to begin. If we can realize that "literature" is not merely the printed page, but also those thoughts and feelings which we scribble down and want to share with others, we may be able to begin. And if we can realize that "music" exists wherever there are voices, hands, and feet with something to express, we may fucking well succeed.

Before any of this can happen, however, a tremendous amount of demystification and consciousness-raising needs to be done, of which this piece of writing has been a personal jumping-off point. It started out as an attempt to understand what freaked me out about violent movies, grew and accreted and escalated into whatever it has been for you, got kicked around, initiated, and encouraged by lots of good people, and it came out here. Somewhere along the way it ceased to be work and became an experience—sort of like making love when you're tired. Well, I'm tired, I'm spent, but if any of us got off together...it was worth it.

The Learning Society

Wright Report Revisited (part I: Prologue to Change)

A month ago, the final draft of the report of the Commission on Post Secondary Education (Wright Report) was released. The Journal reported in its headline Few changes made - rhetoric added.

Later we reported some of the recommendations - new financing systems, greater accessibility, new types of educational experiences.

Now, we present you the rhetoric - in the Commission's own words, but condensed - and its recommendations.

The report is divided into three sections: - the first dealing with proposed guidelines for it in the future; second, a number of, perhaps utopian, proposals for broadening the spectrum of education; and thirdly, the gut issues of financing of students and the administration of universities.

Today - Directions for Change.

Chapter One

Inheritance and Challenge

During the past two decades, post-secondary education in Ontario has experienced a sweeping transformation, Prior to World War II, education beyond high school was concentrated in a handful of provincially supported universities directly affecting only a small segment of the population and costing relatively little public money.

Government has been centrally involved in the growth of post-secondary education during the past two decades. It has lavishly funded the expansion of existing and new institutions, and has extended massive financial support to individual students. Far from merely serving public whim, it has become one of the principle agents of educational change.

The massive expansion of post-secondary education has been largely underwritten by federal resourses. Until the mid-'60's, this came in the form of per capita payments. In 1965 the federal government made a momentous policy change and began to make transfer payments directly to the provinces, which constituted a full 50 per cent of operating costs of post-secondary education without defining any limits.

The new formula also signified the withdrawal of the Federal government from direct relations with the institutions and the transfer to the provinces of full control of the funds.

the federal government has always been wary in its support of research

In its support of scholarship in the humanities and social sciences, the federal government has always been wary. Part of the reason is the sensitive political and cultural nature of studies dealing with social and cultural values. As these matters are often regarded as falling within provincial sphere, substancial federal support might be considered an unwarranted intrusion. The question of responsibility has never been resolved; and, as a result, federal funds have been late in coming and have remained relatively modest.

During the last 50 years, the late entry of the provincial government into support of research has raised another acute problem. There is much research activity in Ontario's universities initiated by the institutions themselves, as well as by individual scholars, foundations, and government; but it is largely unplanned and uncoordinated, consequently, no mechanism exists to ensure that the research needs of our society - pure as well as applied, normative as well as empirical - are being met.

one of the main goals of post-secondary education must be the preservation of intellectual standards

Preservation of high intellectual standards is one of the main goals of post-secondary education. But equally important is the related attempt to reconcile two apparently contradictory objectives. One is that a social institution should serve the needs of society so that it does not constitute the preserve of a privileged few and so that it makes effective use of the public funds. It can mean the rigid and mechanist workings of bureaucracy, watering down of educational goals, and restraint of basic intellectual inquiry.

The other objective is that institutions should be as free of outside direction as possible. This idea has emphasized decentralization, diversity, and self-regulation.

there is an interplay between university government and social responsibility

The dynamic interplay between self-governance as perceived by institutions and social responsibility as perceived by government runs through the whole development of the post-secondary educational system. The strains between them are probably more intense today than ever before. The system is almost wholly public and publicly funded. It is already shaped to serve a variety of social needs in specialized kinds of education; it is already under government supervision through the ultimate control of the purse; and it is already widely open to public criticism for failing to meet this or that public end.

Whether a compromise can be worked out will depend in large measure on our success in confronting two issues. First is the need to devise accommodations between government and institutions that recognize the public interest yet avoid political meddling and bureaucratic controls. The second is the need for the system, in its formal institutions and in alternatives beyond the existing patterns, to remain sensitive and responsive to changing social values and wants of a more self-conscious student body. This is not to suggest that institutions of post-secondary education should respond faddishly to each whimper of change in society. Nor is it to ask universities to become all things to all people.

in the '60s too much demands were almost made of the universities

It is useful to recall that in the '60s, there was the danger that too many demands would be made of universities. The system of colleges of applied arts (CAATs) was conceived partly as an alternative. It was acknowledged that universities alone could not meet the learning needs of an increasingly technological society; and that, should they try, their liberal arts, professional, and graduate teaching programmes would suffer. In the coming years, Ontario must resist a similar temptation to overload the CAATs. As we seek to define the new learning and research needs of society, there must be a continuing search for options within the colleges and universities and encouragement of differentiation among them.

universities must be attuned to changes in the composition, interests, and styles of students

We will have to be attuned to vital changes in the composition, interest, and styles of living, working and leisure of students. What some of these subtle changes are, we already know; others we can predict; still others we can only presume. The stimulus for change in the lower areas of education has been Living and Learning which argues for two basic principles as the foundation of education for Ontario's schools. First that each individual should have the right of equal access to the learning experience best suited to his needs; and second, that every school authority should assume the responsibility of providing a "child-centred" continuum that would invite individual discovery and inquiry.

While the full implication of these changes in their effect on post-secondary education are not yet clear, we should guard against response based on ignorance and or over-eager expectations. We should accept them as a welcome stimulus.

universities and society must take up the challenge of continuing education

Another major challenge to be faced by post-secondary education is the concept of continuing education. The idea is not totally new. Opportunities for adult education have existed for some time. But more leisure and concern for quality of life and human values have given adult learning new life. We have also come to realize theat continuing education, by diverse means and in many settings, is necessary for satisfying self-fulfilling existence in a constantly changing world. Increasingly, we accept the fact that traditional schooling can no longer see most of us confidently through the rest of our lives.

Who can gainsay critics of modern mass learning when they argue that education should be continuing rather than continuous; that study should often be more closely linked with life and with work; that there should be more opportunities for individuals to alternate periods of full-time study with other activities, including work.

Much is being done already. We have the physical means in books, the mass media, and expanding school facilities and in innovative museums, science centres, art galleries, and libraries. Important as these facilities are, continuing education is likely to remain largely in the colleges and universities, and it is there that it may have its greatest impact. The foundation for this development is the long history of extension programmes. But if adult education is to realize the new promises of continuing education, it can no longer be treated as a peripheral activity. Some persistent problems will have to be overcome. One is the state of mind in some colleges that they should be set apart from society; that "popular education" must be trivial and can grievously harm the primary functions of the community of scholars. At only a few centres do adult and part-time students enjoy the status accorded full-time learners and have programmes specifically tailored to their needs.

also to be faced is the challenge of the citizenship of university staff

The challenge of the future for post-secondary education also includes the question of how far should Ontario's institutions be staffed by those who are not Canadians? The issue arose in the '60s when undergraduate enrolments grew rapidly and Canada's graduate programmes could not train enough staff. Foreign academics, many from the US, were hired in large numbers. Today, this group comprises an important segment of the faculty. Inevitably, the chances for future development were restricted by the recruitment of a high proportion of teaching personnel from a single, small, and notably foreign-born generation. Prospective Canadian university teachers now emerging are confronted with a system that offers limited job possibilities.

Continued on next page

Inconclusive, Public discussion has also revolved around the question of whether foreign-born staff are undermining Canada's cultural integrity. It may also be argued that the best people should be hired. But it also may be noted that Ontario's universities have played a major role in developing national traditions, cultural, and even national self-awareness.

This consideration should apply not only to fields of obvious Canadian connection, such as history, political science, and sociology, but also to so-called value-free areas like life and physical sciences. If research projects are designed in response to the rewards of a foreign academic status-system and society, particular Canadian concerns will suffer. Unique problems of the North, for example, are now often ignored. Thus, without proposing any stem of quota or controls, institutions, authorities, and society, must pay special attention to the special role of education in the Canadian intellectual tradition.

and finally the educational system must put its mind to the righting of injustices to minorities

As post-secondary education tries to respond to the emerging forces in culture and society, it will also be challenged to put its mind and its will to the righting of old wrongs. Included in these areas of concern are the treatment of native peoples and cultural minorities, equality of opportunity for women and the educational needs of Franco-Ontarians. All these groups of society in Ontario must be encouraged to participate in intellectual pursuits.

Chapter Two

Values and Guidelines

The future of post-secondary education must be guided according to some set of goals and principles. The system, consisting of many complementary institutions and programmes, aspires to perform a multiplicity of functions. It is challenged to respond to the varied and changing learning interests and preferences of individuals, and to provide them with a suitable range of choices. It must meet the learning needs of a number of regions and groups. And it must cater to society's needs for a widening variety of services, for new knowledge, and for critical assessment of its social values.

What criteria did the Commission bring to its review of education? Two principal goals may serve as a guide to our system of post-secondary education: social responsiveness and quality. The use of public funds requires that a system be socially responsive, and our cultural values demand that educational endeavours be of the highest quality.

In pursuing these twin goals, we rejected three solutions most often suggested: the creation of a master plan, the use of manpower projections to determine educational needs, and the cost-benefit approach.

The dream of an educational system neatly designed to serve some unitary social purpose has not been found possible in a free and pluralistic society. The problem with master plans is that they are not sufficiently responsive. Others have attempted to construct them, but the results have been an excessive and unnecessary degree of central control and rigidity.

The lure of manpower planning is more difficult to resist. Why should we not produce the number of lawyers, teachers and typographers we require, and direct surpluses into educational areas of continuing job need? This assumes that we have the ability to forecast the job needs of our society and that we can define the "right" educational prerequesites for occupations. The fact is, "there is no satisfactory way to specify the appropriate educational background for most occupations, much less project them." We believe that it is preferable to respond to the uncertainties of the job market through a flexible system that permits reaction to changing needs.

The cost-benefit approach is also unsatisfactory. This analyzes the educational system in terms of economic returns: for so much expenditure, so many economic benefits are presumed to accrue in increased productivity, skills, and the development of earning capacities.

thinking of education in purely economic terms is distorting

To think of education merely in terms of economic costs is partial and distorting. Apart from inherent difficulties in calculating returns, many benefits other than economic ones are derived by society. It is more meaningful to assess education in terms of social benefit.

We feel that it is both feasible and advantageous to allow education to be organized around the needs of citizens for learning and research, and to have these needs defined and weighed against other social needs in public forum.

Our approach to planning is based on social demand, which cannot be equated to student demand, which is by nature effected by trends of fashion. Student demand is not necessarily the best economic method of planning.

Finally the system is not nor can be, naturally self-regulating: a degree of intervention is necessary and inevitable. Areas of decision, such as graduate studies, research, and community service, should be influenced by considerations other than student demand.

A socially responsive system should be sensitive to a wide range of needs. In the coming years, new demands will arise from the need for new technical and formative knowledge to resolve human and environmental problems and the need for new departures that will provide the public with an adequate range of high-quality professional and other services.

retaining the quality of education is essential

If social responsiveness in post-secondary education is desirable, quality is essential. If broadening the spectrum means simply watering it down, the aim is futile from the start. Freedom is vital if quality is to be more than mere technical competence. Without freedom, there is little hope of innovation to produce the new ideas, values, and techniques. However, new ideas almost inevitably face antagonism from the existing order. Innovation may also impinge on vested interests.

But since words are easily corrupted we must also indicate what quality does not mean. It should not serve as a lever for social elitism of students, faculty, or institutions. Levels of competence should not be confused with degrees of quality. Moreover, higher quality does not necessarily involve higher costs.

post-secondary education that wants to be responsible must be accessible, diverse, and flexible

A post-secondary system that aspires to being socially responsible and to providing environments in which learning and research of high quality can thrive should be developed on the basis of several clear principles. A system that is sensitive to social need and pursues quality without compromise should be accessible, diverse and flexible; it should allow for transfers among institutions and programmes; it should be equitable in its treatment of disadvantaged groups; and it should be publicly accountable.

Inherent in our approach is the belief that post-secondary education must be accessible to any citizen who wishes and is able to make use of it. An ever-changing economy with its ceaseless demands for new knowledge and skills has made formal education part of our lives.

Access to educational opportunities for those able to benefit from them is also dictated by public funding. But, many with abilities, still do not have access. Universal access means more than simply access to our existing institutions. It also involves provision for less structured kinds of post-secondary education, or for education carried on outside the regular system.

To give effect to access as part of social demand and to enable quality to be maintained, we must provide for a highly diversified educational system, in means of study outside, in admission standards for different kinds of stydy, and so on. Our recommendations are meant to safeguard diversity where it exists and to encourage it further. We endorse this policy also as working against the pressures towards homogenization that are an inevitable problem in mass education, and as favouring intellectual freedom and social responsiveness.

diversity is recommended through an open educational sector and other non-institutional pursuits

We encourage diversity of institutions by recommending an open educational sector; a diversity of methods of proposing the Open Academy; a diversity among institutions through our finanacial proposals; a diversity among regions through creation of special programmes; and a cultural and linguistic diversity by proposals for Franco-Ontarians and native peoples.

education must be able to respond and adapt to social change

Closely related to the policy principle of diversity is flexibility. Any education system that functions by social demand must be flexible to respond and adapt to changing social and individual perceptions of needs. Our recommendations on financing seek to invite and support innovation. As policy, flexibility must also be related to the growth of part-time studies and of continuing education throughout life.

To be accessible, flexible, and diverse, our educational system must also provide opportunities to transfer from institution to institution or from programme to programme. Transferability implemented to some degree already, should be a goal. There is a particular aspect of transferability which relates to the professions. One cause of rigidity lies in the links between credits and professional licencing. We recommend the breaking up of these to facilitate transfer between professions and from one level to another within a profession.

disadvantaged individuals should receive special opportunities

Equity in education should be understood within very strict limits. We recognize that problems of lessening socioeconomic inequalities is complex. Within these areas, equity of treatment suggests access, while quality conveys an equitable intellectual judgment of all aspirants by a common standard in each field. It means as well that disadvantaged individuals and groups should receive special opportunities. Equity demands that the burden of cost be distributed in relation to needs, talents, and benefits, as well as to the ability to pay. Finally, equity also requires decentralization, so that scattered regions will not be disadvantaged.

The functions of post-secondary education are so numerous and vital that the system must be held publicly and socially accountable. Society may assent to the allocation of public funds in the belief that learning and research contribute to social mobility, economic growth, the conquest of nature, social criticism, and personal development. These goals must be balanced against one another and against other, non-educational goals. We reject as irrelevant the development of monolithic, unitary system of post-secondary education directed from above. Rather than trying to achieve policy by means of direct administrative control.

nothing must interfere with the human nature of education

Nothing must interfere with the human-centered nature of post-secondary education. Everything must be done to provide optimum conditions for learning. We cannot plan for individual learning, but we can give it incentive. Education is a social process, but learning is a personal experience. For this reason, various tests, examinations, programmes, and teaching methods should be oriented towards serving individual students rather than the institutions, employers, or the professions. Similarly, the whole spectrum of education must be available to each individual, not just a degree programme.

Part II of the Wright Report, Directions for Change, which deals with discrimination, bilingualism and careers will be featured in Friday's Journal.

"Strike"

an entertaining learning experience

- Tom Wakeling

If one desires some exposure to the dynamics of industrial relations, he would be wise to view the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation's film "Strike". That is not to say that what one will see reflects the realities of labour-management conflict but many of the controversial issues that arise in the course of a labour dispute are aired in this film.

It should be understood at the outset, and I am content that no one would deny the accuracy of this observation, that this film reflects unfavourably on the trade unionist movement, but this predisposition is only a minor irritation, if one has as his or her purpose in viewing "Strike", an interest in the identification of the conflicts a strike such as this one portrayed here, engenders. For in the end, it is the suggestion of these lines of conflict that represent the merits of this production. However, the absence of fidelity to the recreation of a more typical dispute does preclude presentation of other more regular lines of industrial conflict. Of course, the preceding comment is motivated only by a restrictive intellectual focus and is not meant to detract from the pure entertainment value which the film admittedly possesses.

These lines of conflict and emergent contrary interests are the products of the following story: a small Ontario town is in the midst of a prolonged and bitter strike when the film opens, with a labour leader from Toronto, Dexter, addressing a meeting of the strikers. He informs them that it is unfortunate scabs continue to supply labour to the struck company and that it would be propitious to explain to them why it would be in their best interests to refrain from such anti-social conduct. Ultimately, this message is crudely conveyed to the culprits in a series of untoward events which include brutal beatings and a death on the picket line. But this tragic death does not settle the dispute and the film closes with a shot of a company sign announcing the permanent shutdown of the plant and with the viewer knowing that the union is still intent on their all-or-nothing twenty per cent increase.

It is through the film's central character that the forces of conflict are given their play. Pinner, a shop steward, supports the strike in its initial stages but in the course of the film, subjected to the death of his close friend and family pressures, as well as his own reconsiderations, his approach to the dispute changes dramatically. He stands up to the Toronto leader and rallies around him the men favouring a settlement, the last company offer for 18 per cent; he is portrayed as the one man who asserts his individuality in defiance of his comrades who are pictured as slavish followers of union dictates.

I will briefly outline the struggles Pinner experiences. This must suffice because neither myself, nor the film-makers, are able to resolve the disputes which exist.

First, Pinner's closest friend, Eldon Smith, is tragically killed trying to cross the picket line. This man had decided that the strike was wrong and chose to defy union solidarity. Pinner tried to persuade Smith to join the strike but in the end only Smith's death in a flaming overturned car stopped him from crossing picket lines. This subplot evidences the stress that exists amongst the workers themselves during a strike and questions the strike tactics of trade unions in general.

Second, the striker's relation with his family is undermined. Bills and financial obligations are not suspended for the duration of a strike and nerves are frayed when families must make do on substantially reduced strike pay incomes. Here the striker's dignity is threatened for his young working daughter replaces him as the family's breadwinner. His wife wants the strike to end and the resultant familial tension characterizes the relationship of the striker and his dependents.

Third, Pinner chauffeurs Dexter's whore about in the Toronto man's luxury automobile. Later, Pinner confronts Dexter at the union hall charging that Dexter doesn't know what it is like to be hard up. He tells the strikers that, while they receive only fifty dollars a week strike pay, Dexter has at least fifty dollars worth of booze in his hotel room. This is more than a suggestion that the interests of the union leaders differ substantially from those of the rank and file.

Four, the company is a small town industry and the good will of the people for their fellow citizens is jeopardized as the town's economic base is threatened. This is a pressure that the community brings to bear to encourage a settlement.

And five, the very fact that Pinner is a union man engaged in a prolonged strike which neither side can "win" calls into question the utility of the strike. He is one of the players in an economic contest where it is the union's intention to shut down operations and where it is the company's intention to operate with a substitute labour force if necessary. The union leader, Dexter, claims it is a "great victory" when the men reject the eighteen per cent company offer, but Pinner's wife calculates that even if the company gives the twenty per cent, the men would have been better off, over the life of the contract, if six weeks before they had accepted sixteen per cent.

In summation, "Strike" is the medium through which one may discern the interests of the rank and file, the union, the union leaders, the owners of the means of production and the community, and compare them so as to better understand the conflicts which strikes can generate. I have attempted only to identify some of the factors involved, for I know the controversial presentation of those issues will form the basis for heated discussion when the followers of the industrial relations scene gather in Kingston on the ninth and tenth of March to view the film in the opening session of the symposium on strikes, "Have the unions forgotten their members?" This will occur Friday, March 9, at 7:30 p.m. in Dupuis Hall, for all those interested in what should surely be a very entertaining learning experience.

unclassifieds

IN CASE YOU LOST THE PAPER you wrote it down on, there's more info below on the volunteering debate in Vic Hall, lower common room tonight.

IF YOU ARE THREE GIRLS looking for a place to live next year, call 544-9457. We have an apartment to sublet for May and then you can take over the lease for 1973-74.

THE CONSCIENTIOUS NEWS DESK WOULD like to file a formal complaint against those whose dinner hour turned into several hours.

ACTUALLY, IT WAS ONLY ONE, HONEST.

"....I once had a dog...."

TO THE NEWEST ALKI on Addy II: "Fire water burns."

COED BOWLING + Sundays 3:00 5:30 Great way to get your exercise for the week. For reservations call Trish 544-9383.

TONIGHT AT 7 p.m. there will be an open debate and discussion on volunteering. Dr. David McLay from the Tutorial Program and Roger Latreille from Collin's Bay institution will be the guests, besides you, the students.

+++++MR MACLEAN: Kingston, albeit provincial as you have indeed been able to discover is at least of sufficient magnitude to afford one the intangibility of discreet solitude in the face of your damxable impertienent persistence. Your Professed slowness to comprehend does not belong to man (?) of your literary talent, although the "Swinbourne Syndrome" exhibitied shows signs of outracing modern treatments. I would be unduly grateful to you if you found it at all within the bounds of your imagination to realize that you are indeed unwanted. So on this note, may I bid you a fair adieu. A. -----.

DO YOU LIKE to stay in a fully furnished and centrally located house in Summer. Here is one at 296 Barrie available May 73 to September call 548 8644.

WE'RE MAKING AN OFFER you can't refuse. Two bedroom apartment completely furnished, close to campus and downtown. Clean, bright, spacious. Now wouldn't you like to live there this summer? It's available May 1 - Sept. 1. Phone 544-8109 or 544-8047 to find out how you too can live in a decent place.

APARTMENT TO SUBLET - or take for next year from April 15. One bedroom, living room, kitchen, Unfurnished. $135. MacDonnell and Mack. 544-4153.

THERE IS A LIMITED NUMBER OF TICKETS for Auf-Weidersehen, so be one of the lucky couples to attend this formal dance at the 401 Inn on March 10. Tickets are on sale in the John Orr Room, 11:30 - 2:30 every day, or just call Pat Sinclair at 544-0264 and reserve one now.

JEN: Thanks. Sue.

MEETING OF ALL academic liaison gaels. Fifteen minutes after the end of the General Meeting (Wednesday, 7:30 p.m., Stirling Hall).

More unclassifieds page 14

NOW
QUEENS
NEW GIRLS JACKETS
NEW GIRLS JACKETS
SEE JACKET and ORDER NOW from Jinty Harper ROOM 103D

• CALL 544-8635 •
SPONSORED BY ARTSCI 76

QUEEN'S CURLING CLUB
ST. PATRICK'S DAY
bonspiel
•PARTY •BUFFET
•PRIZES
march 17th
2 DRAWS $20/TEAM
PHONE GAIL, 544-9457

Pizza Chalet
286 MONTREAL ST. KINGSTON
544-1227
OPEN MON. TUES WED. 4:00 p.m. to 1:00 a.m.
OPEN ALL DAY SUNDAY 12 – 12
OPEN THURS. FRI. SAT. 4:00 p.m. to 2:00 a.m.

Chalet Deluxe EXTRA LARGE
Pepperoni- Mushrooms- Bacon Sausage- Green Peppers- Olive Cheese- Tomato Sauce $5.50
BIGGEST PIZZA YOU'VE EVER SEEN!

SELECTION WITH CHEESE & TOMATO SAUCE	11" REG	13" MED	15" LGE	SUPER 17" X-LGE
1. Pepperoni-Mushrooms-Bacon-Green Peppers Sausages-Olive	2.50	3.65	4.55	5.50
2. Pepperoni-Mushrooms	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
3. Pepperoni-Bacon	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
4. Mushrooms-Bacon	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
5. Combination Pizza Pepperoni-Mushrooms Green Peppers-Olives	2.40	2.95	3.95	4.95
6. Bacon	1.85	2.60	3.65	4.65
7. Pepperoni	1.85	2.60	3.65	4.65
8. Cheese	1.75	2.40	2.95	3.90
9. Mushrooms	1.85	2.60	3.65	4.65

Combination Special
Pepperoni- Olive Mushrooms- Green Peppers $3.95
A LARGE PIZZA SURE TO PLEASE

No. 2 Donna Hinchey

Personnel Manager
Maclean-Hunter
Speaking on
"Women In Business"

Dunning Hall
Second Floor
Conference Room

Tuesday,
March 6,
7:00 p.m.

APARTMENTS TO SUBLET

We have 1 and 2 bedroom apartments available to sublet during the summer. Rents are negotiable.

For more info phone Elrond College at 544-1842.

DON'T FORGET!
It's Course Evaluation Week!

Be sure to go to your Arts classes and evaluate your professors and courses.

meltingdays

Tuesday, March 6

2:30 pm - The Institute of Commonwealth and Comparative Studies: Tercentenary Commonwealth Seminar with Speaker His Excellency S. N. Helman, Acting High Commissioner, Guyana High Commission. Admission is free. Watson Hall. Rm. 517.

7:00 pm - S.V.B. Open debate on volunteering in lower common room at Vic Hall. All welcome. Guests are Dr. McLay and Roger Latreille.

8:00 pm - IRC banquet. Guest speaker is C.E. Law discussing "The Arctic: Transportation Problems and Environmental Issues." Tickets available at Leonard Hall Business Office.

8:00 pm - An important meeting of Queen's Astronomy Club will be held. The purpose is to elect a new executive for the coming year. Also Glen Chapman will speak on "The View from a Starship Bridge." Room 323 Ellis Hall.

8:00 - 10:00 pm - Public Lecture sponsored by Sociology Dept. "Communism, Capitalism and Multinationalism." I.L. Horowitz-Rutgers University. Dupuis Hall Aud.

9:00 pm - Department of Film Studies presents "Clowns" (Fellini, 1970). Ellis Hall.

Wednesday, March 7

3:30 pm - School of Urban and Regional Planning lecture "Citizen Participation in Planning" with speaker Dr. Desmond Connor, Consulting Sociologist, Ottawa. Ellis Hall. Room 224.

8:00 pm - Department of Film Studies special screening: "Days and Nights in the Forest" (Aranyer Din-Ratri) by Satyajit Ray (1970). Bengali dialogue and English subtitles. Admission $1.00. Ellis Hall.

8:00 pm - "Chile: The prospects for socialism." Panelists include several Canadians with an intimate knowledge of Chile. International Centre, Lower Lounge.

8:30 pm - Division of Concerts presents the world famous chamber orchestra I Solisti di Zagreb in a programme of works by J.S. Bach, B. Martinu and B. Bartok. Tickets at $2. and $3. for students; $3. and $4. for non-students. Available at Agnes Etherington - Division of Concerts Box Office. 547-6194.

9:30 - 11:30 pm - Take your coffee break in Chown Hall Common Room. Listen to cult music of the West Indies. Denise Narcisse-Mair. Open to everyone.

Thursday, March 8

6:00 pm - Anti Concert: Vaghy String Quartet and Robert Masella, Clarinet. Ban Righ Common Room. Sponsored by Division of Concerts. Quintet for Clarinet and Strings, Gordon Jacob.

7:30 pm - Queen's University Bridge Club. Unit Wide Game (predealt hands). Students Union. McLaughlin Room.

8:00 pm - Leandre Bergeron, author of "The History of Quebec, A Patriote's Handbook" will speak on "Quebec Today." 3rd floor Union.

9:00 pm - Department of Film Studies presents The Big Sleep. (Howard Hawks, 1946). Ellis.

Friday, March 9

8:00 pm - GSS Film Club presents "The Heart is a Lonely Hunter." Ellis Hall.

Off Campus

Capitol - Lady Sings the Blues
Hyland - Jeremiah Johnson
Odeon - Until Thursday - Cabaret. Starting Friday - Assylum.

I solisti di Zagreb performing tomorrow at Grant Hall.

Sunstrum only all-star

by Peter Watts

Last Wednesday, the OUAA announced its allstar hockey teams for the 1972-73 season, and I confess to being somewhat disappointed that only one Queen's player made the team. Jim Sunstrum was named to the second allstar team on left wing. Sunstrum led the Gaels all year in scoring and richly deserves this honour. However, the fact that Harris did not even get honourable mention, strikes me as an insult to a fine hockey player. Anyone can vote for Bruce Durno, who is a very fine goaltender, but who also has the advantage of playing behind the solid protection offered by the University of Toronto Blues. At any rate, while the Camel didn't get an allstar spot, his performance this past year indicates that he is far better than the OUAA has seen fit to recognize. In 17 games, Harris allowed less than 70 goals, for a fine 3.89 goals against average. In our books, Clyde Harris is as good a goaltender as there is in the entire league.

The first team consisted of goalie Bruce Durno, defenceman Warren Anderson, centre Bob Munro, and left winger Bill Buba of Toronto, along with defenceman Mike Fox of Laurentian and right winger Barry Jenkins of York. For Buba, it was his fourth straight allstar selection. The second team consisted of Dave Tataryn of Laurentian in goal, Steve Aubrey of Ottawa and John Vanderburg of the Voyageurs on defense, Frank Hamill of Laurentian at centre, Jim Sunstrum of Queen's on left wing and Kent Ruhnke of the Blues on right wing.

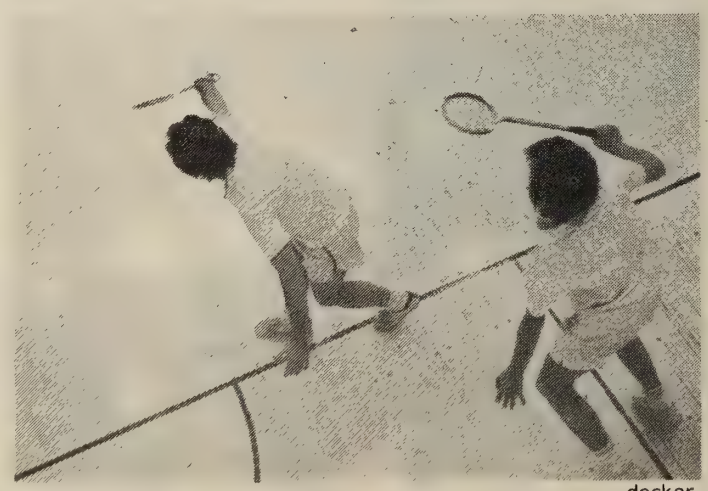
Speaking of hockey, the initial tryouts for next year's hockey Gaels will get underway Tuesday evening at 5:30 in the Harty Arena. The three-day camp is being conducted for anyone who is at Queen's this year, will be here next year, and who would like to play intercollegiate hockey for Queen's. The camp will continue on Wednesday evening and wind up on Thursday. All sessions will be 2 hours long and will start at 5:30. All interested players are invited to turn out. No gear will be supplied so players are asked to bring their own equipment.

Struthers to Judo finals

The fledgling Queen's judo club, coached by black-belt holder Randy Genois, travelled to Toronto to take part in the OUAA judo tournament hosted by York University last Saturday.

Ross Struthers managed to reach the finals of his division (white to greenbelts, 170 pounds and under), before being eliminated. This was an especially fine showing because Struthers is only a novice and this was his first tournament.

Randy Genois, their instructor, was quite pleased with the team's performance but like many clubs, judo suffers from a lack of numbers sufficient to enter many of the classifications.



Queen's fourth in squash

by Ron Fenn

The York Yeomen played host to the OUAA squash championships last week in Toronto. The competing teams were Trent, Western, York, Toronto, McMaster and Queen's. The Gaels finished fourth overall. Fine efforts were turned in by all competing and several of the matches proved almost as strenuous on the spectators as they were on the players. A brilliant performance of long rallies, hard-hitting volleys, and good sportsmanship made the whole weekend very rewarding for all concerned. The Queen's team, consisting of Ron Fenn, Stu Watt, Brian Barker, Alex Dougall and Richie Irvine, put out good individual efforts although these were singularly against different universities with the result of only an average accumulation of wins.

The highlights of the tournament were to be found in the top ranked competition of the number one-seeded players from the six competing schools. Some amazingly arduous matches were witnessed between several of these players and in one match between Paul Frost of York and Peter Gudewill of Western, the points played were so closely matched that Frost, after a superb final game, finally squeezed out a victory by one point. Ron Fenn, the number one player from Queen's, after losing his only match of the tournament to Peter Gudewill, fought back from a 2-0 loss against Peter Hetherington of Toronto to win that match 3-2. He then went on to beat his other major opponent, Paul Frost from York, 3-2.

The final result in points of games won and lost, proved a tie between Gudewill and Fenn for the individual competition. Gudewill was awarded top individual honours over Fenn by virtue of having defeated the Queen's performer in the competition. Fenn had to settle for second.

- decker

unclassifieds

ROOMMATE NEEDED immediately. Two bedroom apartment. Albert near Earl. Not necessary to stay through summer. Call Mike at 547-3225 or 544-6213.

TO CANDIDATE DUNCAN: Your campaign managers apologize for bungling the coup of the century. Everything was ready except the grassroots although ADDY TWO was dedicated. Oh well, next year, the world....

WILL SELL NEW white Afgan coat. Medium size. Best offer. Call 544-5119.

LADY'S GLOVES FOUND after WFC meeting in Rm 517 of Watson Hall. Pick up in Rm 106 of Carruthers Hall.

DESPERATE TO RETRIEVE Black briefcase containing texts, notebooks, (valuable only to owner. Remember exams in five weeks.), purse which contains all ID, keys, chequebook, etc. Enjoy money fully and return contents to academically jeopardized (Marg Fisher, Morris Hall, Rm 308, 544-7231.)

FRENCH LESSONS: graduate student from University of Paris. Will give private tutorial sessions at an intensive level. Phone evenings 546-5459.

ARE YOU GETTING MARRIED THIS SPRING? Let Photo Image record the things You want to remember. Our rates are competitive and we guarantee quality results. Call us at 546-7770 or drop by the Gallery at 33 Brock Street.

MANY, MANY MANY, THANKS TO Anne, Daphne, Jane, Danny, Joe Don, Bob, Jim, Stu Warren, Jim, Doug, Bill, John, Doug, Nick, Monte, Sue, Karen, Jacki, Anne-Marie, Kerry, Bob, Dale, John, Phil, Michelle, Charmagne, Margo, Sue, Brian, Joan, Ian, Dennis and friends, Randy, Peter, Grant, Mike, Ken, Harv, Steve, Ian, Cam, Bruce, Al, and anyone else we might have forgotten. Without you the Last Blast would have been the Big Bomb. -- Kid Lightnin' and the Flying Frenchman.

ADDIO, HASTA LUEGO, Sayonara, Auf Weidersehen, farewell - no matter how you say it, they all add up to one thing, the Arts formal on March 10.

TRAVELLING THIS SUMMER? Get quick, quality service on passport photos from Photo Image, 3 Brock Street. If you bring one or more friends, you'll all get 20 per cent off our regular low prices. Same rates apply on job application or identification pictures, too. Call us at 546-7770 for an appointment today. Sandy is CLASSIC.

WANTED: 2-3 girls and 1 guy to join 5 others in 8-bedroom penthouse for next year. Phone 549-0696, 327 William. P.S. No. Trenchcoat Trojans High-School Halfbacks or Frivolous Felines.

THE NEWS DESK makes this comment on the situation: (censored).

More unclassifieds on Page 12

- the proposed ASUS CONSTITUTION will be presented to the general meeting of the ASUS on Thursday, March 8, Red Room
- copies are available from the AMS secretary
- amendments to the proposals must be prepared before the meeting and must be presented to the chairman in writing by the beginning of the meeting

Come one, Come all!!

ASUS ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING

- final committee reports
- new ASUS constitution
- how is your money spent?
- the new ASUS executive
- discussion

Thursday, March 8
7 pm
Red Room, Kingston Hall

MARCH IS MOVIE MONTH

Mar 8 PLAY MISTY FOR ME
Clint Eastwood
Jessica Walter

Mar 15 LITTLE BIG MAN
Dustin Hoffman

Mar 22 THE MAGIC CHRISTIAN
Ringo Starr
Peter Sellers

Mar 29, 30 REEFER MADNESS

Thursdays, 7:00 and 9:30 pm
Dunning Aud. Admission $1.00
--CINEGUILD--

Department of Film Studies
Presents
A Special Screening of DAYS AND NIGHTS
IN THE FOREST
(ARANYER DIN-RATRI)
by Satyajit Ray, 1970
(In Bengali with English Sub-titles)
Wednesday, March 7 8:00 p.m.
Ellis Hall $1.00 Admission at the Door

"An independent Quebec and an independent Canada can be friendly neighbours respecting each other as equals. Anything else will only perpetuate misery and hatred."

Quebec - Today
Leandre Bergeron
Author of "A Patriotes Handbook"
8:00 p.m.
Union, 3rd floor
Thurs., March 8

The Music Department and the Division of Concerts present
THE VAGHY STRING QUARTET
and
RALPH MASELLA, CLARINETIST
Thursday 8 March
BAN RIGH FIRESIDE
Admission Free
Coffee and Desert
5:45 p.m.

S & R THINKS STUDENTS SPEND TOO MUCH FOR CLOTHES And we're doing something about it

At S and R you can buy great looking clothing for a lot less than you'd expect. You see we're giving you what's so hard to get these days. What you pay for .....and more.

"LADY WRANGLER"
Scrubbed Denim Flares
Two front patch pockets; powder blue, burgundy, plum, Slight irregulars of $8.00 retail value. At S-R.

2 Pair $7.00

MEN'S PIN-WALE
Corduroy Strangers
The two most famous American makes around.
Less than half price.

$5.00 Pair

S&R DISCOUNT DEPARTMENT STORE
Corner Princess
at Ontario

Track Gaels third

Queen's Golden Gaels track and field team placed third in the OUAA indoor championships held on Friday and Saturday in Toronto. Western squeezed by Toronto 119.5 to 114.8 to win the title. The Gaels were third of the eleven schools with 84.3 points.

Queen's got some strong performances out of several members of its team in the field events. John Ongarato picked up a second in the shot-put with a heave of 44 feet, 5½ inches. Gary Tetzlaff picked up a fifth in the pole vault with a jump of 12 feet. But it was the track events in which Queen's showed its real strength. Hugh Fraser assumed his customary position as the fastest sprint man in the province, winning the 50 metre dash in a time of 5.6 seconds. In the 300 metre run, Fraser picked up a third in a time of 35.2 seconds and Dave Jarvis followed a tenth of a second behind to place fourth. Don Price captured a third in the triple jump and a sixth in the high jump. Axel Becke finished fourth in the long jump.

Since Dave Jarvis came to Queen's, the 50 yard hurdles have always been dominated by the tricolour. This year was no exception as Jarvis captured this event with a time of 6.7 seconds, missing his own Canadian record by a tenth of a second. The pleasing thing, however, was the performance of Don Price who finished second and rookie Mark MacAuley who finished fourth behind Jarvis.

The Gaels also finished strongly in two of the relay events with a victory in the 4 x 440 yard relay and a close second place finish in the 4 x 220 yard relay. The 440 relay team which consisted of Fraser, Jim Crowe, Brian Aitken, and Jarvis beat out Toronto with a time of 3:26.0.

cameron

Aiken gives to Jarvis in 4 x 440 relay

Fraser, and Jarvis teamed with rookie John Rudan and Archer Guy to place second in the 4 x 220 relay.

Western's championship performance was primarily the responsibility of Canadian international star, Grant McLaren, who easily won the 1000 metre, the 1500 metre and anchored the winning distance relay team. The thirty points he contributed made the difference for Western. While Queen's received promising performances from younger runners like Deiter Stein, Larry Aitken, Ralph Yarnell, John Edwards, Bill Bryden, and Vic Lachance, the loss of established distance performers like Brian MacDonald, Kip Sumner and Tony Verhoeven has shown this year. However, almost the entire team will return next year so the future looks very good. A tip of the hat to the entire team and to their coaches, Rolf Lund and Walter Eadie for a job well done.

Not to be outdone, the women's track and field team also contributed a commendable performance in their championship meet held on the weekend. Lynne Andrews placed third in the 800 metres with a time of 2:29.6. In the 300 metre event, Aileen Kirby, Kathy Wynne, and Janey O'Rourke finished sixth, seventh, and eighth respectively and posted personal best times in this event. The girls performance was hurt, however, because the team is small in number. Perhaps next year's team will include more members so that Queen's can enter more events. Nonetheless a credible performance by our girls team as well.

HOCKEY GAELS
Spring Tryout Camp
Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday
March 6, 7, 8 - 5:30 to 7:30 pm
JOCK HARTY ARENA
Bring your own equipment - All interested are invited

ARTS STUDENTS
Have you evaluated ALL your courses?
If not,
Ask your DSC Rep why not
If no DSC Rep,
Contact your DSC or us and do it yourself!
Thanks,
CEG Committee
AMS Office.

World: Nixon says blame speculators

WASHINGTON — President Richard Nixon hit out at foreign exchange speculators last week, claiming that the recent crises which have been despoiling foreign exchange markets were not the fault of any unsoundness in the American economy.

"We believe the dollar is a sound currency", he said, stressing that inflation in the United States is less than anywhere else in the world. He added that the instability has been the result of an "attack by international speculators".

As a result he was vehement in his opposition to a further devaluation of the dollar as a solution to the present crisis. However, he conceded that the American treasury department did not agree with him. They believe rather, as do many economists that such forces are not determined by speculation and unrest.

As his proposed action to help the restabilizing of world foreign exchange markets he announced that he would introduce a very tight budget to help curb American inflation which would lead to a lower value for the dollar. Nixon ended with a plea for world co-operation in monetary matters.

LONDON — Despite Nixon's belief that instability in the foreign exchange market was not caused by any instability in the American economy, fears have been growing that confidence in the world payments system has been eroded so much that governments can no longer control it using conventional methods.

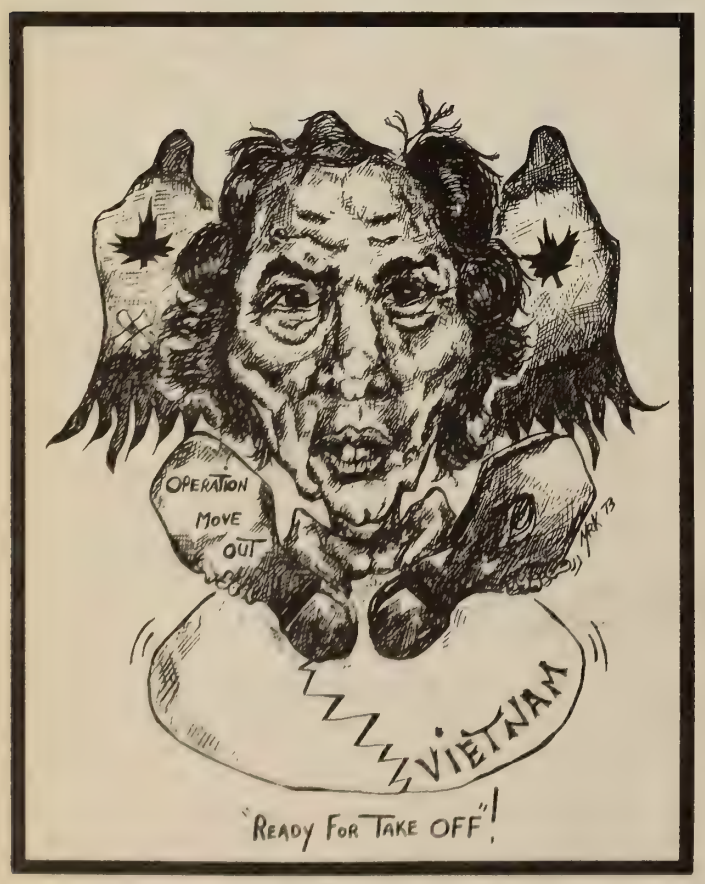
Less than three weeks after the 10 per cent devaluation of the dollar, which was supposed to be the stabilizer, it was again hitting its bottom values and European governments were once again purchasing the currency to keep up the price.

The run on the American dollar became extreme last week and the major world foreign exchange markets were forced to close by Friday after the European central banks were forced to buy a record total of $3.5 billion American dollars on Thursday.

PARIS — The Paris conference on Vietnam has closed with the foreign ministers of twelve countries signing a declaration backing the ceasefire.

Canada was among the signers but was clearly unhappy with the achievements of the week. External Affairs minister Mitchell Sharp sought some sort of body to which the International Commission of Control and Supervision in Vietnam could report on ceasefire violations and get them acted upon.

He expressed fears that if the ICCS continues simply to report to the four combattants, the complaints could simply be shelved. He recalled the nineteen years that Canada "suffered" through on the old commission in Vietnam which proved to be an utter failure.



DUBLIN — The republic of Ireland elected an unlikely coalition of the right-wing Fine Gael party and the Irish Labour Party to power last week by a razor-thin majority.

Prime Minister Jack Lynch's Fianna Fail Party went down to defeat after sixteen years in power but the slimness of the conservative-socialist victory has raised the possibility of another election fairly soon.

Canada: '71 KP riot was predicted

KINGSTON — The four-day riot at Kingston Penitentiary in April 1971 was "graphically forecast" by the prison warden five months before it took place, states the report of an inquiry into the uprising. The report, which was delivered to the government last October but released only last week, says that prison warden Arthur Jarvis wrote two letters to senior penitentiaries officials describing the urgency of the situation and requesting the appointment of a deputy warden, but no government action was taken.

Excessive bureaucratic red tape and understaffing at the prison were blamed for many of the events leading up to the riot.

The report describes the maximum-security penitentiary's rehabilitation program as poor, with the emphasis more on maintaining custody than reform. This led to poor inmate-guard relationships, another direct cause of the riot.

KINGSTON — As a result of a special Unemployment Insurance Commission blitz conducted in the Kingston area recently, seventy per cent of the recipients investigated may be disqualified. A UIC spokesman said the Kingston office has created a "profile" of the type of people who abuse the program and that the crackdown was aimed at exposing this group.

The Kingston UIC office usually investigates 35 to 40 cases daily, but additional inspectors were brought in for the blitz.

A similar investigation in Toronto has revealed that as many as 20,000 ineligible people are receiving UIC benefits in that city.

OTTAWA— The Canadian Cattlemen's Association told the Commons special food price committee that they are satisfied with current beef prices because the public is willing to pay them and the beef business is doing well. The association claimed people "are not that concerned" with beef prices which it said have risen only half as fast as incomes.

The cattlemen asked the government not to establish controls over the industry, a request which counters the call of the militant National Farmers Union for sweeping economic controls on the food industry.

In another action last week, the food prices committee ordered the Meat Packers Council of Canada to reveal the proportion of the industry controlled by the five largest meat-packing companies. The order was made after the council claimed that almost free competition exists in the purchase of hogs and cattle for slaughter and retail sale.

TORONTO — Harold Graham is the new Commissioner of the Ontario Provincial Police. The former Deputy Commissioner succeeds Eric Silk, who has retired. Silk will serve as a special adviser to Graham until the end of April.

TORONTO — About 1500 senior citizens gathered at Queen's Park last week to urge Premier William Davis to work for an increase in old age pensions. The federal government recently increased basic payments from $88 to $100 per month, but the pensioners want supplements to increase maximum benefits to $200 monthly.

Davis was unavailable at the time, but Social Services Minister Rene Brunelle told them that steps are now being taken to integrate federal and provincial social security programs.

OTTAWA — The position of women in the labor force is improving, according to 1971 figures released by the labor department. The number of employed women in 1971 was up 68 per cent from 1961, and the 2,831,000 women involved made up one third of the total labor force. Despite their numerical improvements, however, women were paid consistently lower hourly wages and weekly salaries than men.

MONTREAL — Quebec businesses are eligible for millions of dollars worth of aid from the federal government if they want it, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau told a group of Quebec business executives last week. Speaking at a meeting of the French-language Chamber of Commerce, the Prime Minister claimed Quebec companies, especially those controlled by French-Canadians, are receiving less than their share of help from various federal aid programs and should apply for federal help if they need it. He suggested that many French-Canadian businessmen are unaware of such federal assistance services.

OTTAWA — The Yukon may become Canada's eleventh province if a debate proposed by Northern Affairs Minister Jean Chretien takes place. Chretien told the Commons Northern Development committee he did not know if the residents of the Yukon or of Canada want the territory to become a province, but that he would welcome a parliamentary debate on the subject.

TORONTO — For the first time in half a century, some soft drink companies are increasing the deposits on returnable glass bottles. A spokesman for Canada Dry stated that the deposit on six-ten- and twelve-ounce bottles will rise from two to five cents, and the five-cent deposit on family-size bottles will be increased to ten cents. The move is intended to encourage the recycling of returnable bottles.

As a result of federal tax cuts, the price of soft drinks and candy has fallen slightly recently.

User's Committee suggests renovated and extended Union

In a draft report released this week, the University Centre User's Committee recommended that the proposed new centre consist of a renovated Student's Union with an addition extending north on the site where 163 and 165 University now stand.

Throughout the past year, the proceedings of this committee have been surrounded by controversy. Many feared that this group was paying too much attention to centralizing facilities in one place. However, the committee has tried to give ample consideration to sub-centres in its report.

Another bone of contention was whether or not the User's Committee intended to build a "monument" on the block bound by Alfred, Union, University, and Earl Streets. This was the site the Senate designated in 1971 upon the recommendation of the Planning Committee, (of which the User's Committee is an offshot.) After due consideration and consultation with the firm Arthur Erickson Architects, the Committee has endorsed development of the present Union with a northward extension.

A statement from the architects outlined the three schemes which have been discussed for the past two months. These include renovation of the Union with an addition extending north; renovation of the Union with an addition across the street linked by a tunnel or bridge, and erection of the new centre on the block bounded by Alfred, Union, University and Earl streets. The User's Committee felt that the latter was not feasible because it left the Union as a dead and inactive space. A previous study by the Planning Committee was unable to make a recommendation for alternative use of this area. "It is useless for academic or library purposes and unless renovated for the University Centre, the building would remain as a liability to the University as a whole," the report says.

In their statement, the architects labelled the Union as a "functional disaster." It was originally designed to serve a university enrolment of 2000 people. Four times that number now use its limited facilities. However, the attractive exterior of the building and the nature of it as a historic part of Queen's campus were felt to be sufficient justification for developing it into part of the new centre.

Renovation of the Union will involve rebuilding the lower two floors, the addition of new staircases and exits and enlargement of the entrances, particularly to Union Street.

Schemes I and II both recommend renovation of some 60,000 square feet of Union space and a new addition to house the balance. They differ in only one aspect; that is, the size of the bookstore to be included. Scheme I contains a bookstore of a maximum of 2000 square feet whereas scheme II contains a bookstore of some 20,000 square feet. The large size of the latter bookstore necessitates that the addition be placed to the immediate west of the Union.

The advantages of scheme I were enumerated by both the architects and the User's Committee. They agreed that scheme II encourages a marked separation of the old and new buildings even if they are joined by a tunnel or bridge.

Scheme II also creates the necessity for a lengthy circulation system on an east-west axis which is contrary to normal pedestrian flows. The movement of people through the building in scheme I follows the external student traffic influences.

Another inherent advantage of this particular project is that the service laneway leading to the Physical Education Centre can be enclosed, thereby making this building a part of the University Centre complex. This cannot be achieved in scheme II.

A major disadvantage of the plan most favoured is its limited expansion capacity. However, the architects were confident that this could be remedied. If a large comprehensive bookstore is required, Scheme I could be completed and the bookstore could be erected across the street. Another possible expansion system would be to place certain facilities in the developing sub-centres. This would allow more space in the main Centre for expansion of the remaining facilities.

Cost estimates also point to scheme I as the most favourable. The total project cost of the first plan is significantly less expensive than the other two. Scheme I indicates a saving of some $500,000 over scheme II and III without the comprehensive bookstore. Addition of the latter adds close to $700,000 to both schemes II and III. Both the User's Committee and the architects fully endorsed scheme I as the most desirable solution.

The need for smaller centres throughout the campus was acknowledged by the committee. They have already absorbed the cost of designing and furnishing a sub-centre for the new Arts and Social Sciences complex.

There is also a possibility that an addition will be built onto the Agnes Etherington Art Centre. The User's Committee recommended that provision for a sub-centre be considered in planning the addition. Estimates indicate that construction of a sub-centre here would cost $75,000.

In the area of campus defined by Theological Hall, Humphrey Hall, and Earl Hall, there is no major provision of social space for the many undergraduate users of this area. The major component of a sub-centre here would be a coffee shop for 75 - 100 people. A drama sub-centre and an East Campus coffee shop are recommended for development within the next couple of years, at a maximum total cost of $200,000 for both projects.

Ontario Hall has often been mentioned at meetings of the User's Committee as having sub-centre potential. However, inclusion of a craft area is no longer feasible and the committee indicated that it was not aware of any other convincing uses for Ontario Hall.

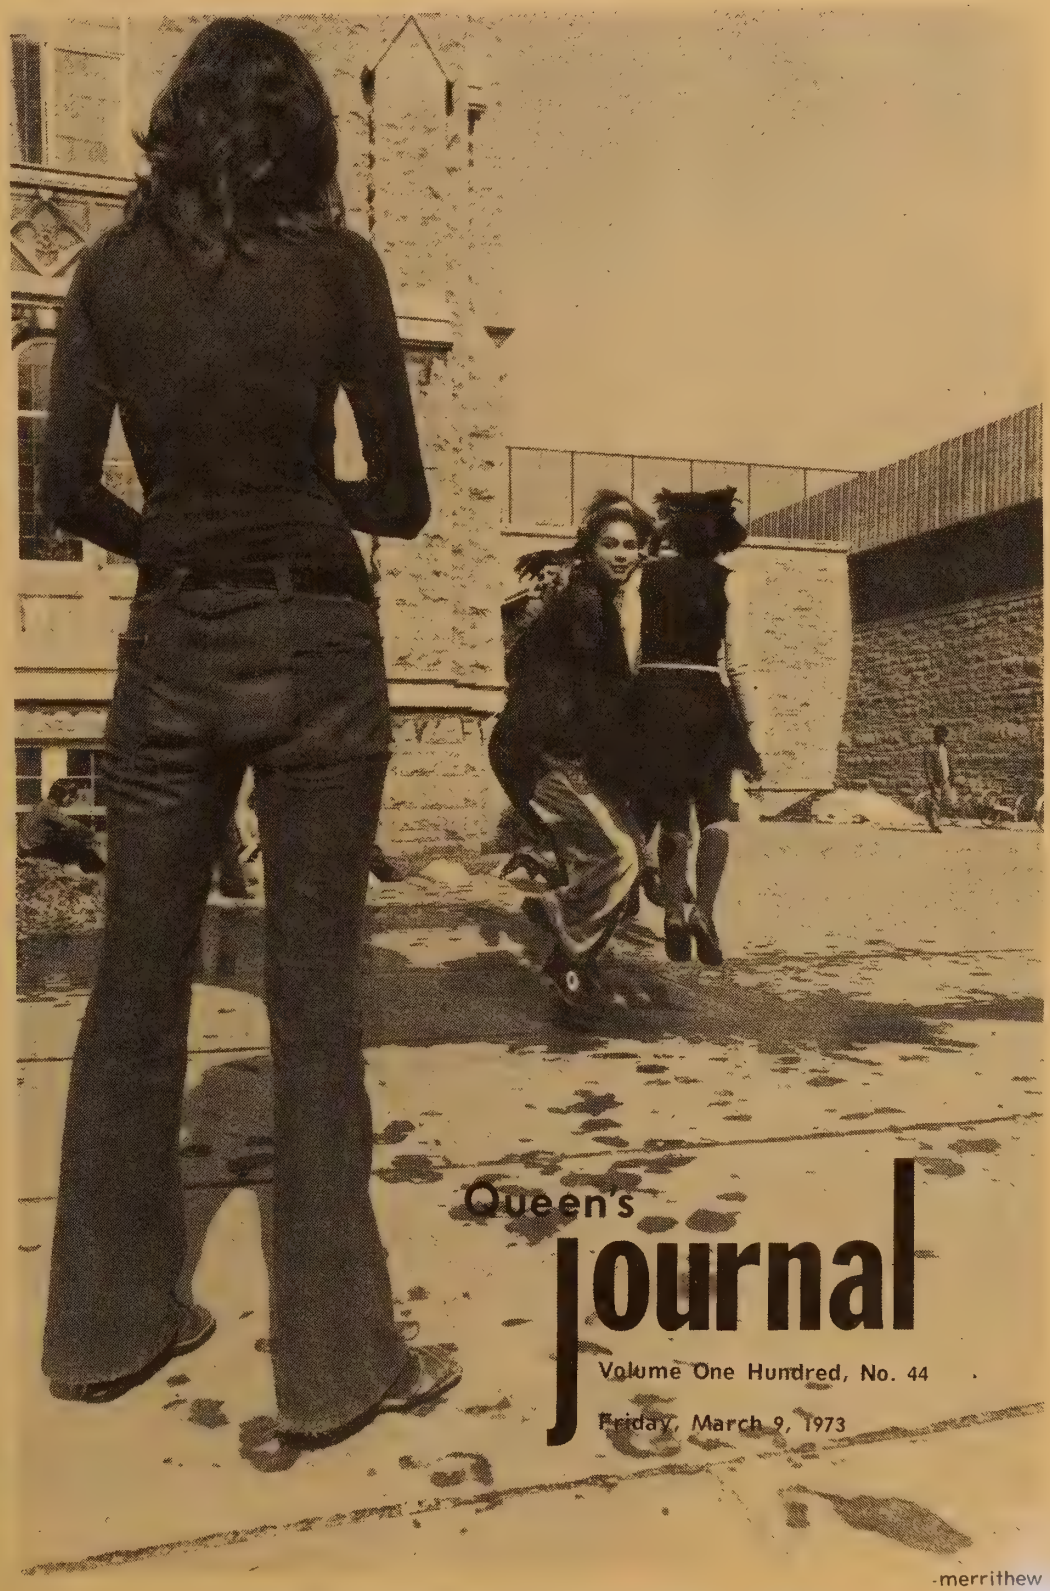
NcNie announces "slip year" financing

Jack McNie, Minister of Colleges and Universities has announced a revised method of paying operating grants to colleges and universities.

The current financing of these institutions ties the operating grant of each institution to proposed student enrolment.

In the new fiscal year, grants will be based on the actual student enrolment of the previous year.

This new scheme, known as "Slip year" financing is intended to offset financial difficulties which many universities have experienced this past year.



Formerly, grants were based on enrolment at December 1, though the universities made up their budgets almost a year earlier. Unexpected shortfalls in enrolment have caused many institutions to experience serious financial difficulties.

The slip year system will assure the universities of a known level of support in advance and certain adjustments will be made in the system to accomodate those institutions which suffered a decrease in student enrolment in 1972-73.

To ensure that institutions experiencing shortfalls are not penalized with a low operating grant, special supplementary grants will be allocated based upon their enrolment in 1971-72.

Those institutions primarily affected include the church affiliated colleges, Algoma College, Lakehead University and the University of Windsor.

McNie announced in a press release this week that other adjustments to overcome inequities have been approved by the Ontario Government and will be announced when the budget is brought down in April.

Queen's
Journal
Volume One Hundred, No. 44
Friday, March 9, 1973

-merrithew

Spring has jumped the gun and do you know what they're doing?

Father Gregory Baum

Noted theologian to speak at Baccalaureate Service

One of the outstanding theologians in Canada, Father Gregory Baum, O.S.A., of St. Michael's College, University of Toronto will be the Baccalaureate Preacher at the traditional annual Service Sunday, March 11th.

The Baccalaureate Service honours the graduating classes in all Faculties. In an earlier day, the service was held the Sunday following Convocation but, with life moving at a less leisurely pace and Convocations in all Faculties no longer taking place at the same time, the service is scheduled prior to examinations.

The Baccalaureate Service dates from the earliest years of the University when the Bachelor degree was the only degree Queen's gave. Held in March it is a Service in which the University honours its graduates and gives thanks for the vision and sacrifice of its founders who established, under Royal Charter in the first decade of Queen Victoria's reign, the first Canadian University to open its doors to any qualified candidate without any restrictions.

Father Baum is considered one of Canada's outstanding theologians and most articulate advocates of Christian unity. In addition to a long-standing concern for ecumenism, Dr. Baum has two other areas of special concern and expertise - "liberation theology" (an effect of recent dialogue between Marxism and Christianity) and the philosophy of the "Catholic Left".

In a recent interview with the Toronto Globe and Mail, Baum commented that Marxism has bestowed on the Catholic Church the insight that sins exist not only in individuals, but in our institutions.

"The general influence of Marxist thought on Catholic theology is very widespread. The existentialist philosophy prevalent in the 40's and 50's reaffirmed the individualism of the theology we inherited - that sin was the evil decision of the individual person. In the confessional, a man confessed himself sorry for personal sin. Marxism showed that evil lay also in human cultural, social and political institutions that exploit people," he said.

Baum stressed that Christianity has come to realize that it has to deal with evil in society, not only evil in the hearts of men.

The two notions of sin as personal and sin as social have always co-existed to some extent in the Catholic Church. Father Baum declared - all the way from the passage in Luke's gospel that the poor shall be lifted up and the rich shall go away empty, to the establishment of religious orders, most of which arose as forms of protest against dominant values in the society.

However, in recent centuries, the emphasis in the Catholic Church has been on personal conversation and transformation.

The dialogue between Catholic thought and Marxism began in the late 1950's and early 1960's in Austria and Czechoslovakia. Father Baum made clear that the adoption of the insight that sin was present in social and cultural institutions by what is called "liberation theology" indicates no sympathy for the communism of Russia or other imperialist nations.

"The Catholic Left became strong in countries where there was a classical revolutionary situation, where there was a clear and visible separation of classes - a small upper class and a large poor class.

"Latin America is the largest example of the Catholic Left. The clergy and hiearchy have identified themselves with social revolution, establishing solidarity with the revolutionaries and rethinking the message of Jesus Christ and his call to transformation, not only of the individual, but of society," Baum added.

Although Canada is not a revolutionary society, the philosophy of the Catholic Left has taken root in French Canada, Father Baum said. "We do not appreciate the aspirations of the French-speaking people. In Toronto we look away from this. But there is a discrepancy, which will burst open. Can Canada survive? The survival of Canada is uncertain if Quebec separates.

"French Canadians are a conquered people, inserted into a society that is very different. Deep down, English Canada wants the French to give up their ideals, their language. This is a translation of injustice into social institutions. Therefore, in Quebec, people are more ready to understand sin as institutional."

Father Baum said that advanced Catholic groups in Quebec - religious orders, periodicals and theologians - are not only facing the question of separatism, but are working for "an entire cultural transformation" of social institutions in that province.

Baum continued to say that ideology in the Marxism sense, "Is the unconscious deformation of truth due to our social interests, to protect vested interests."

"There is the need for criticism of religion. Does theology reveal or disguise true ideas in life. Does it teach us to forget the need of our present situation and perhaps tell us to put our hopes elsewhere, thus moving away from reality?

"The Christian must be critical of society. There must be, in the words of Latin American liberation theologians, a raising of consciousness: political, economic, and cultural."

March 21

Referendum: free buses

On March 21 students at Queen's will be asked to vote on a $3.00 increase in the non-academic fee which will provide unlimited free use of Kingston buses for the 1973-74 school term.

The actual cost of providing this service is $5 but the university has offered to pay $2 per student to the Public Utilities Commission to offset the cost for students.

Andy Pipe, former AMS services commissioner told the Journal that "the university administration is very concerned that it passes."

"If the fee increase does not pass, the university will not make any arrangements for a bus service between the main and west campuses in the coming year," Pipe indicated.

Rides on all premium bus routes will be available for free if the referendum is passed. The dial-a-bus service in the west end of Kingston will be available to students on a presentation of their student identification card and an additional 5 cents.

Pipe was "confident that the referendum would pass." And expressed the hope that "increased use of the public transit system would remove campus car congestion."

unclassifieds

TRAVELLING THIS SUMMER Get quick quality service on passport photos from Photo Image, 3 Brock St. If you bring one or more friends you'll all get 20 percent off our regular low prices. Same rates apply on job application or identification pictures. Call us at 546-7770 for an appointment today.

BACHELOR APARTMENT from May 1st to Sept. 1st with option for next year. $100 all included, call 544-0667 - 3 blocks from campus.

DEAR MISS A, On reference to your recent rebukative and repellent reference to the good name MacLean in the Queen's Journal I would like to point out that your literary and lessive remarks have been eruditely, erroneously and incredibly poorly aimed at your hapless foe.

For you see, there are no fewer than 10 male MacLean's and a further 10 McLean's at Queen's not to mention a few professors by that name. As our good name is invariably misspelt - and your spelling does leave something to be desired, I suggest that you have condemned at least 12 men unfairly.

In view of this unfair and unnecessary degradation of a proud name, in future you might make your feelings known to the man concerned by that true and time-testing way - tell him "no".

Regards, D. G. MacLean

QUEEN'S CAMERA CLUB: meeting 8 pm Wed. March 14th, Polson Room. Elections will be held for next years executive.

More classifieds on page 12

Heidelberg

Brewed from pure spring water.

And that's the truth!

Female personnel manager says

Fact of women is here and now

by Sandra Bernstein

Men today deserve understanding and compassion, says Mrs. Donna Hinchey, personnel manager of Maclean-Hunter Publishing Co. Speaking Tuesday night in Dunning Hall on the subject of women in Canadian business, Hinchey added, in response to a question, that "the women's fact is here and now." and that this is obviously frightening to men. Our upbringing has not prepared us for the pressures and changing life styles of 1973, in that the old sex roles no longer apply, she said.

Hinchey began her address with an outline of female employment patterns in the province of Ontario. She pointed out that 38 per cent of Ontario women work, not all do so out of necessity. She pointed out that the number employed increases with the degree of education. In a brief summary of the history of women in the labour force in this country, Mrs. Hinchey commented that in the 1880's a six-month typing course was considered too strenuous for ladies, and employers were urged to segregate female employees from other workers. Speaking on equal rights legislation, she pointed out that the situation also exists for men seeking jobs traditionally held by women.

Hinchey feels that the job market will improve for female graduates in the late seventies. This is due to the changing nature of the work force and "evolutionary social change."

Speaking of her own experiences, Mrs. Hinchey stated that she has encountered no problems with her own staff, which is composed equally of men and women. In business, she said, people don't really care what you are if you know what you are doing and can help them acieve what they want. You think you care but you don't," she added. God did not create any difference in brains, energy, warmth, or human interest between the sexes, and she declared: "No he didn't! Or should I say she didn't?"

However, there are problems for the woman who wants to advance in the business world, she commented. "It is lonely" being a woman at the top she said, adding that, "you have to be sensitive to possible situations; for instance, a simple lunch with a business associate could be misunderstood by his wife." She conceded that there are the small aggravations, such as those times when one's colleagues go off after work to an all-male club or bar. However, Mrs. Hinchey is not as bothered by these, as by actual job discrimination or Pension plans which are almost universally biased against female employees.

In response to a question about the position of executives who return to work after a five year interval during which they cared for their children, Mrs. Hinchey affirmed that a problem existed here. She said that there is a real need for day care centres to relieve the load on women who must work, and to free women who wish to work for satisfaction of emotional needs. She pointed out that provision of such facilities is common in many countries.

Questioned by one member of the audience for her reaction to the charge that large numbers of working women cause unemployment, Hinchey commented that she felt this to be an erroneous conclusion. "Most working women are in the Toronto area", where she feels there is work for anyone who wants it. She said that her company is typical in having twenty-four openings every day. Although she admitted that in Saskatchewan and the Maritimes, for instance, unemployment is a very real problem, she said that in Toronto many people have simply been abusing the system in order to receive unemployment insurance benefits.

-perry

She disagreed with the suggestion that women could not take the pressure of high positions "when the going gets tough". She said that men will get drunk at such times, and added that women are capable of holding high positions, but too many quit early in their careers. She felt that people can rise as far as they want but not everybody in either sex is prepared to pay the price. Life style is now more

Continued on Page 6

THE funclub PRESENTS
SPRING BOOGIE
tonight
"THE DANCE OF THE YEAR"
FRIDAY · MARCH · 9
8 30 pm → ?
GRANT HALL
BEER 3 for $1.
NOTE: ADMISSION REDUCED!! FROM $1.50 TO $1. WITH CARD 1.25 GENERAL featuring from Los Angeles California Blackstone

nursing science presents:
back rub day
march 16th
polson room, union
12 noon to 8 p.m.
price:
.50¢ per backrub

newsbriefs

UW Senate re-examines evaluation policy

The University of Western Ontario Senate has agreed to re-examine its unfavourable policy on the student-administered course and professor evaluation and has taken steps to establish a joint student-faculty liaison committee to deal with the issue.

The move comes in the wake of an impasse between the University Students' Council (USC) and Senate demands which threatened to break down the entire evaluation process.

The Senate action was prompted by receipt of a letter from the executive committee of the Faculty of Social Science urging co-operation on the matter and satisfaction of the USC demands.

The USC had called for the waiving of individual Senate and USC evaluations which had been running concurrently in favour of a published joint-programme but was flatly refused by the Senate which favoured a strictly confidential report which would be used only by department heads and the various promotion committees.

In addition, the USC requested and failed to receive guarantees of class time for their questionnaire when the Senate ruled that the decision was to be left up to the various faculties and departments.

In the end the Senate insisted that two evaluations are unnecessary and called for a phasing out of that run by the USC.

The establishment of the joint committee, consisting of three senators, one student of the Society of Graduate Students and two students appointed by the USC means a possible policy change for next year's effort but Senate secretary J.K. Watson noted that, "Its too late to do anything about it this year. The Senate will carry on its evaluation as planned."

The Senate evaluation is designed only to measure the professor's teaching ability. Watson told the Senate, "We are not interested in course evaluation, only the student's opinion on teaching ability."

The student evaluation was run in February and managed to receive a 90 per cent response rate despite problems encountered in its administration in the French and English Departments.

The USC evaluation administrator, Ben McDonald, claimed that the French professors had been "personally slandering the evaluators and telling students not to fill out questionnaires."

The French Department opted not to allow the USC evaluation in class time because they felt it could "jeapardize student-faculty relationships."

Potential freshmen exploring

Complete with travel kit containing campus map, faculty calendars, and corresponding timetables, this year's potential freshmen will be exploring the Queen's campus during the coming months.

The 1973 Secondary School Liaison programme is now starting with an approach somewhat different than previous years. It was felt that for students to get the maximum satisfaction from exploring Queen's, it should be done on an individual basis. As a result, there will be no group tours and after a brief orientation lecture they will be allowed to head in the direction of their interests.

The visitors will be encouraged to participate in residence and eating facilities, student, social and recreational activities and interviews with faculty advisors.

The programme recommends a two day stay on campus and guest rooms in Victoria Hall as well as Elrond College and various student co-operatives will be opened up to the visiting students.

Community responds to Kraft Boycott

The response was overwhelming for the Kraft Boycott Committee on their three day information blitz at various Kingston grocery stores last week, a move which brought them into contact with about 2,000 Kingston shoppers.

According to Committee member Frank Okoh, they received about an eighty percent favourable response for the boycott and people were coming back out of the stores telling them that they "didn't buy Kraft."

Three Committee members and one member of the National Farmers' Union stood in front of the A & P store, Dominion Stores, and Bennett Foods on Thursday, Friday and Saturday respectively to tell shoppers of their reasons for not using the boycotted products.

At one point a manager of Dominion Store came out and asked them if they were bothering customers and to find out what they were doing. Okoh stated that they explained their purpose and the manager left only to return and ask them to leave his property and stand on city property.

"Only about 5 per cent of those approached wouldn't take our leaflets", Okoh noted, adding that there were a number of people who showed real enthusiasm for the boycott once informed.

When asked what their next move would be, Okoh said that the Committee would make more attempts to get into the community through contact with the unions and perhaps more information pickets similar to the one last week.

The Kraft Boycott was started by the National Farmers'Union about a year and a half ago in an attempt to gain responsiveness to consumer and producer needs and wants from the giant Kraft Company and others like Kraft. The boycott has shown support wherever it has been introduced with real results starting to show in the Prairies.

The Campus Boycott Committee will be meeting on Tuesday night at 7:00 in the third floor common room of the Students' Union Building to discuss the results of their actions and future protests.

Donald Mathers Memorial fund grows

The Donald Mathers Memorial Lectureship in Religion has been iniated with $8,900 already donated by faculty and friends of Donald Mathers, late principal of Queen's Theological College. Presently, the committee organizing the fund is making an appeal to students at Queen's to contribute towards the lectureship.

Beginning next year distinguished scholars of the great religious traditions will be invited to Queen's lecture.

Committee spokesman C. Haldor Parker stated that the Lectureship will be "of two or three days duration each year in February or March, and will compare in importance with the distinguished Chancellor's Lectureship held in October in conjunction with the Alumni Conference of the Theological College".

Parker also pointed out that students wishing to contribute to the fund should make cheques payable to Queen's Theological College (re: Donald Mathers Memorial Lectureship). Receipts for income tax purposes will be issued.

Pub Notice

Applications will be accepted in the AMS Office until March 16 for serving people, bar men and cashiers for summer and fall terms.

ASUS NEEDS PEOPLE FOR THE FOLLOWING POSITIONS FOR 73-4

Judicial Committee (three people)
Clubroom Chairman
Editor of the ASUS TAIL
Other Events Committee Chairman
Faculty Athletic Stick
Suzie-Q Week Chairman
Concert Committee Representative

All applications should be placed in the ASUS mailbox in the AMS Outer Office by 5 pm, March 15. For further information, call Eleanor Crowder at 547-6347.

Skiing at its peak Prices at their bottom

30 superbly groomed trails. 10 lifts accommodating 7,500 skiers per hour, including the only gondola lift in Eastern Canada

- 2050' vertical drop (It's a real kick)
- Beginner's slopes (Look at me!)
- 5 day ski week: use of lifts $25., lifts & lessons $35.
- Season from November to May

mont ste-anne P.O. Box 40, Beaupré, Province of Québec (418) 692-0835

Toronto ski reports phone number (416) 483-4510

DATE: WEDNESDAY, MARCH 14
PLACE: TECHNICAL SUPPLIES
Full Name Engraved FREE

Are strikes contrary to public interest?

Queen's will host a symposium on "The Failure of the Strike? And Alternatives" on March 9 and 10 in Dupuis Hall.

The symposium will begin on Friday night with the controversial CBC television play called Strike. This film is concerned with a small town labour dispute in which union violence is provoked by the "toughs" sent from head office. The implications of this are a death, problems in the unionists homes, pleas from the owner that the employees return to work, union refusals and eventual closing down of the plant. Discussion following the film will centre on the question "Have unions forgotten their members?"

The Saturday morning session will involve an opening statement by a leading public figure castigating both management and labour for their constant neglect of the public interest and will be followed in the afternoon by a debate on the "Future of Dispute Resolution." The two articles featured on this page relate specifically to Saturday's sessions.

by Donald D. Carter, Professor of Law at Queen's who has done a great deal of work in labour relations.

The pre-amble to the Ontario Labour Relations Act states: "Whereas it is in the public interest of the Province of Ontario to further harmonious relations between employers and employees by encouraging the practice and procedure of collective bargaining between employers and trade unions as the freely designated representatives of employees." The courts have made it clear that this Act implicitly recognizes that employees do have a right to strike in support of their collective bargaining goals. On the other hand, strikes in the private sector are often criticized as being contrary to the public interest. Given the legislative policy in favour of collective bargaining supported by the right to strike, how is it possible to argue that such strikes are contrary to the public interest?

The explanation for this paradox is that the effects of a strike are seldom confined to the immediate parties to a labour dispute. In most strike situations persons outside the dispute are affected to a greater or lesser degree. In some cases, the inconvenience suffered is very slight but, in other cases, there may be a very real danger to personal safety or to property. A shutdown in certain types of industries, such as utilities or transportation, will have a very substantial impact on persons outside the ambit of the dispute. In such cases, it can be argued that the need to protect personal safety and property must prevail over the right to strike set out in collective bargaining legislation. The problem is to distinguish between those strikes that cause mere inconvenience to the general public and those strikes that result in a real danger to personal safety or property. The strike is an economic weapon and, obviously, it is bound to cause a certain amount of economic disruption. Consequently, economic disruption alone cannot be a justification for the curtailment of the right to strike. On the other hand, there are situations where a failure to supply goods or services immediately, will result in a permanent loss to the community, such as in the transportation industry or the utilities industry. This fact may explain the frequency of government intervention in railway labour disputes in this country.

If curtailment of the right to strike in the private sector is justified in certain circumstances, should collective bargaining legislation expressly curtail the right to strike by setting out these circumstances? In support of this proposal, it could be argued that it is better for the parties to know in advance those circumstances in which the right to strike cannot prevail. The problem with this proposal is that it is difficult to define with precision those circumstances that do justify curtailment of the right to strike. Such vague terms as "public safety" or "public welfare" provide little assistance to the parties in determining their legal position. Moreover, often the impact of a strike can only be assessed once the strike has occurred. It can be argued that the best indicator of the impact of a strike is the resulting hue and cry from the general public. Consequently, it may be better to treat the issue of intervention as a political question that can only be dealt with as the problem arises.

Up to this point, the conflict between the right to strike and public interest has been discussed in the context of the private sector to the exclusion of the public sector. But is there any real justification for treating these two sectors differently? Traditionally, the general presumption has been that a right to strike in the public sector is contrary to the public interest although this approach has been substantially modified by recent legislation allowing public servants a right to strike in some Canadian jurisdictions. One argument given for not allowing the right to strike in the public sector is that government services are so essential that any interruption of them cannot be tolerated. This argument certainly applies to some government services, but it is also easy to point to other government services that can hardly be considered as essential. Another reason given for limiting the right to strike in the public sector is that collective bargaining in the public sector is not subject to the same market restraints as prevail in the private sector. According to this argument, the right to strike is likely to force governments to give in to union demands that may be inflationary. Related to this argument, is the notion that the right to strike in the public sector may be more of an assertion of political power than an assertion of economic power, creating a situation where public service employees as an organized interest group will extract concessions at the expense of the less organized members of a community such as the aged and the poor. This problem seems to be more apparent at the municipal level where trade unions do seem to resort to political tactics in asserting pressure on local governments.

It is probably too early to determine whether the arguments justifying separate treatment for the public sector have merit. Students of labour relations in Canada however, will have the opportunity to study contrasting legislative approaches. At the federal level, the Public Service Staff Relations Act does allow public servants the opportunity to bargain collectively and once certain conditions are met, to strike in support of their bargaining demands. In contrast, the new Ontario Crown Employees Collective Bargaining Act, although providing for collective bargaining ~~for public~~ servants, contains a complete prohibition against strike and lock-outs. In Quebec, legislation was recently introduced to provide for government intervention in all labour disputes. Although different procedures are set out for intervention in the public sector and for intervention in the private sector these procedures do appear to be very similar.

The fact that different legislative approaches have been taken in Canada indicates that reconciling the right to strike with other competing community values is not an easy matter. In studying this problem, a student of labour relations must first attempt to identify the competing community values. It is not sufficient to merely use such vague terms as "the public interest". Once the competing values have been identified, it then becomes necessary to weigh these values against the right to strike. Is it possible to set out certain rules in advance of a dispute or can this weighing process only take place once the dispute arises? Finally, there is the question of whether the right to strike has any place in the public sector, a question which at this point has met with different legislative answers.

The strike: a declining tool in collective bargaining

H.J. Clawson is Vice-President of the Steel Company of Canada Ltd. He spoke at the Queen's Industrial Relations Centre,last October on the general issue of the future of collective bargaining and cumpulsory arbitration in labour disputes legislation. From the outset, Clawson establishes the parameters of the discussion by asserting that the strike as an instrument of collective bargaining is in a process of inevitable demise and must be replaced by compulsory arbitration as the final and determining step in collective bargaining. Two reasons are offered for the decline of the strike as a socially acceptable tool in collective bargaining: the public is fed up and there is now a growing employee disenchantment with strikes as well. Hence, "it would be the height of folly to go on debating whether or not it is theoretically desirable or practicable to substitute some form of binding adjudication for strikes when there is substantial evidence that it is inevitable.".

Nonetheless, Clawson does raise several of the most germaine issues in this debate. He deems the 'right' to strike argument as "to some extent only 'red-herring'", but acknowledges some limited validity in the contention that arbitration, as the terminal point in negotiations, would frustrate the collective bargaining process, whereas the parties themeslves are the best judges of what is best for them. However, Clawson goes on to say that in view of the tendency of unions to use the strike tool irresponsibly and the resultant damage that can be inflicted on the parties and the public, "then the risks of arbitration and the inhibiting effect upon collective bargaining become of considerably less magnitude". He suggests various methods that may be used to encourage the parties into maximum voluntary agreement(e.g. mediation and concilliation, exclusion of certain issues from arbitration, the arsenal of weapons' approach), but adamantly insists that, in the end, we must pay the price if reason is to replace force in labour relations legislation. He concludes,

> "..in the public service (and that must include all public servants- federal, provincial and municipal), as well as in sensitive areas in the private sector, collective bargaining with a strike as the ultimate sanction is at the very least a highly overrated institution and its continuance in our complex society is intolerable. The privileges of the few cannot take precedence over the welfare of the many."

Given this assumption, the next question of vital importance concerns working out the procedures for arbitration in interest disputes, so that the eventual transition to such a system can be smooth and effective. Clawson forwards nine major proposals on this subject, which are as follows:

1. Statutorily established criteria, unlike the present state of the Ontario Hospital Labour Disputes Act;
2. An impartial fact-finding body;
3. A permanently established tribunal, where possible, e.g. public service disputes;
4. If separate tribunals or arbitrators are used for various occupational groups, there must be some form of co-ordinating authority or tribunal to maintain a level of consistency in the awards granted;
5. No right of appeal or court review of award;
6. Specific veto power of the award to be given to Governor-in-Council or Parliament or Legislature;
7. Specific exclusion by law of certain issues from arbitrator's jurisdiction;
8. Continuance of the use of tripartite boards with partisan appointments on an ad hoc basis;
9. Retention of a pre-arbitration mediation or conciliation procedure.

Fee strike finished, but battle with government continues

Although the second-term fee withholding ended last week, the battle with the Ontario Government over the financing of post-secondary education is not over.

The withholding was terminated, according to Lyn Whitham, so that among other things, other actions could be taken. She said the withholding had helped to raise the awareness of students to the problems of the changing priorities of the government in the educational field.

The next event in the battle is an Evening of Discussion of the Learning Society (Wright Report),the final report of the Commission on Post-Secondary Education.

This will be held next Tuesday evening at 7:30 pm in the Polson Room of the Union. Speakers will include Dr. John Deutsch, Queen's Principal and one of the Commissioners; David Black, former Canadian Union of Students executive and also a member of the Commission; Craig Herron, General Co-ordinator of the Ontario Federation of Students.

The Wright Report suggests many changes for the whole of the post-secondary education system in Ontario including the financing and setting up of non-institutional learning experiences. In addition, it seuggests that students pay a higher portion of their education, but also suggests new methods of financing students to enable greater accessibility.

(The report has been being presented in the Journal for the last two issues and will be concluded on Tuesday. Precies of the Report, with verbatum recommendations are available in the AMS office.)

Meds Society reports

by David Allison

The Annual Meeting of the Aesculapian Society last Tuesday, included such business as the usual committee reports, awards, and speeches.

The society is even more solvent than last year at this same time. Events such as the Meds' Formal, Variety Night and the Meds-Commerce Beer Bash all came out in the black, due to the "Golden Touch" of the outgoing executive. Advice for even greater success next year was forthcoming.

Awards were duly presented to various and sundry. The Aesculapian Lectureship Award was passed on to Dr. G. Marks of the Department of Pharmacology, for his outstanding organization and presentation of his series of lectures. Dr. Marks has been in close contention for this award for the past two years, and easily swept the ballots in this year. Bob Anthony, in Meds '75, was given the A.A. Travill Award, for the student, who, in Dr. Tavill's words, gets fingered, does all the work, yet misses out on the glory. Doctors Sinclair and Bird were warmly thanked for help in their capacities as permanent Secretary-Treasurer and Honorary President, respectively.

Being the only faculty on campus with a complete athletic program in addition to Bews sports, trophies, for the appropriate teams were also presented. Last Year, Basketball was won by Meds '75, Bowling by '73 and Football by '74. The Hockey Trophy was shared by Meds '73 and '74, as there was insufficient time last year to complete the program. Overall, Meds '74 achieved the best standing, and was presented with the Aesculapian Cup.

Aesculapian Awards, presented to students in their final year who stand out in their activities both in and outside the society were announced. Doug Romans, Pierre Leichner, Ron Kimberley and Kent MacKinnon were the recipients.

To close the meeting, Bob Reid, now former president, deftly handed the proceedings over to All Cruess, who expressed his appreciation of the work of the former executive and his hope that the coming year will be as successful as the last.

8 get Tricolor Awards

These awards are made to students who have rendered valuable and distinguished service to the university. The selection committee represents a cross section of faculties and schools. The recipients are: important to many than is climbing to the top, as a result of which "guys today will live longer and have fewer ulcers." She has noticed that men who do compete for high positions, however, tend to reveal jealousies and hostilities in more overt ways than do women.

Ted Grandmaison, Grad student, chemical engineering; Ron Kimberly, Meds '75; Graham Millington, Grad student, physics; Wally Palmer, Law '73; David Pritchard, Theological College; Doug Pritchard, Grad student, chemical engineering; Doug Romans, Meds '73; Charlie Schwier, special student.

The fact of Women

Continued from Page 3

There are problems, however, for until statistics show that women stay longer at their jobs than they do at present, we cannot expect more hiring of females. She recognizes that this is a vicious circle, since women will quit boring jobs more readily. Mrs. Hinchey added, however, that she gets "uptight" when women do "stick around" but are not promoted.

She admitted that given two equal candidates, she would choose a man over a woman today because he is more likely to stay several years. This "discouraging" situation "will probably change over the next five years" she said. "We aren't a welfare agency: we're in business" she pointed out.

Objectivity in her work is essential, said Mrs. Hinchey. She declared that she isn't a feminist in her job, adding that when a man lights her cigarette she considers it good manners, not an insult. She urged women not to get "hung up on women's liberation", which she said was "nothing to do with personal relationships" but with the "big impersonal world" of business and politics.

Following an inquiry about her home life, Mrs. Hinchey said that her husband enjoys the fact that she has had a very successful career. They do not talk about their work at home, since, she feels, one's business and personal life should be separate. She regrets not having had children, but realized too late that she could have handled both a career and a family. This is possible, she emphasized.

Mrs. Hinchey also suggested that businesses should be training women for managerial positions.

Very few women leave organizations to start businesses of their own, she observed at one point. She has found, however, that the myths that women make better organizers or do better detail work, is false.

Mrs. Hinchey ended her address on an encouraging note, saying that many new fields are opening up for female graduates, which will afford them interesting and profitable careers if they are willing to work.

* * *

The Canadian Red Cross Society is one of 116 Red Cross, Red Crescent and Red Lion and Sun Societies belonging to the international organization known as the League of Red Cross Societies.

What a lug should chug.

Molson Golden
A good smooth ale
Do you know what you're missing?

Tercentenary Commonwealth Seminars

ZAMBIA

Speaker: John Reed, Professor of English, University of Zambia, Lusaka, Queen's Visiting Commonwealth Fellow
Tuesday March 13th 2.30 p.m. Room 517 Watson Hall
Subject: Some of the cultural and nation-building problems and implications of Zambia's situation on the frontier between Independent and Occupied Africa.
Chairman: Dr. J. K. Lele, Head, Department of Sociology
Discussion, coffee, cookies, free admission
NEXT WEEK: GHANA, Tuesday, March 20th

SCIENCE '44 CO-OP SUMMER RENTALS

- singles & doubles
- rates by day, week, or month
- 21 houses close to campus
- free parking
- no pets

reserve a room early

- For information & rentals contact:

Jean Hanink
Summer Adm. Mgr.
395 Brock St.
544-3778

GSS Film Club

The Heart is a lonely hunter

starring: ALAN ARKIN

tonight 8 p.m. ellis

Want to have a hand in choosing the films you want to see? The Club needs a new executive for Fall, 1973. Call Barrie Evans 549-2532 or John Gomery 549-9121, or come to tonight's Film: The Heart is a Lonely Hunter.

letters

Elrond

Dear Editor,

I should like to reply to the letter of Messrs. Fombrun and Boag concerning the rent schedule for Elrond College next year.

It was a surprise for many of us to read that the 2-man house will be on an 8-month lease in 1973-74. This "official" announcement comes nearly one month after the deadline for applications for next year. One can only wonder why no effort was made to change the application forms which indicated that the 2-man house would be on a 12-month lease. Certainly no announcement of such a change was made to the Elrond community before the application deadline.

The reply to my previous letter still hasn't answered why the 4-man house was put on the meal plan next year. The point is, regardless of all that Messrs. Fombrun and Boag may say, that it will cost nearly two hundred dollars more to live in a 4-man house next year.

The 4-man house was NOT on the meal plan this past year, and this is an important point to note. Total cost for a single room this past year in this type of house was $760. Food, purchased at a grocery store, should cost no more than $8 a week. Therefore, for the 30 week period the total cost of room and board would be approximately $1000. Surely , no one can deny that this figure, which includes the rent and food costs, is nearly $200 lower than the 1973-74 overall cost of $1155. Why were the 4-man houses put on the meal plan for next year? That is the question which must be answered.

Perhaps John Blanchard, Elrond's General Manager, might inform the Elrond community why we weren't told of the changes in the lease schedule and why a 4-man house must go on a meal plan. This should not be left to junior members of the Elrond elite.

Yours truly,
ANONYMOUS.

A reply

Dear Editor,

I would like to take issue with the statements made by Mr. Dunsmore with regard to the indecisive and unproductive nature of the Petryshyn-Hill administration at the Law School. Mr. Dunsmore criticized these gentlemen's inaction in such relatively unimportant, even trite, issues such as the selection of a new dean, alleged discrimination amongst the teaching staff, and the future of legal education. He neglected, however, to point out the authorative manner in which Mr. Petryshyn disposed of such burning issues as the installation of a shuffleboard machine in the law school, smoking in the classroom, and the removal of ham and cheese on rye sandwiches in the vending machine. With your permission Madame Editor, I would like to disprove Mr. Dunsmore's allegations of inaction and indecisiveness in the Law Student Society Executive.

First the shuffleboard machine. After arduous and hardnosed bargaining, Mr. Petryshyn secured for the lounge in the law school, a shuffleboard machine, which cost only twice the average price to operate. When certain law students, who shall remain unnamed, callously disregarded the import of such an accomplishment by utilizing surreptitious methods by which to use the board without paying the requitie fee, Mr. Petryshyn, with both authority and decisiveness, picked up his rocks and went home, as it were. In the true mold of a leader, he stated that he would give the boys their rocks back when they had paid for all the free games. Truly the mark of a leader! And Mr. Dunsmore calls the executive on the carpet for completely ignoring the MacKinnon Report on the future of legal education? I wonder where he gets his priorities?

The smoking issue. When it came to Mr. Petryshyn's attention that those of us who smoked in class were butting our cigarettes on the concrete floors of the lecture theatres he immediately swung into action. Very soon thereafter, the professors were asking us to refrain from smoking, on the basis of potential harm to the luxurious decor of the lecture theatres. With due respect to Mr. Dunsmore, I submit that this is not an executive which failed to get any results. Of what import is the selection of a new dean when such burning issues as the decor of the law school have to be faced. It should be noted that Mr. Petryshyn cut through such irrelevant factors as the potential discomfort to fellow students, as well as the chance of cancer to smokers in resolving this problem.

The sandwich machine - saving the best for last. Mr. Dunsmore should recall that one of the major planks of Mr. Petryshyn's platform was the improvement of the sandwich machine in the Law School. Well you can imagine the reaction when the ham and cheese on rye didn't appear in the machine one day. As if he were shot from a bow, Mr. Petryshyn headed for the vending machine company demanding his rights and threatening legal action. Now this later statement is hearsay because he was moving just too quickly for me to hear, but I have it on good authority. Anyway, wouldn't you know it, next day all those sandwiches were back again. And to this day the machine has always had ham and cheese on rye!

With these three examples, I hope I have dispelled any ideas amongst the student body concerning the indecisiveness and ineffective governing body of the law school. Indeed, both Mr. Petryshyn and Mr. Hill can look back on their record with pride, knowing that they have put all these issues in their proper perspective, ignoring those of no importance, and devoting all their time to those which run to the very core of their legal education. Their mothers should be proud.

Yours truly,
Kees W. Kort

Queen's Journal
Vol. 100, No. 44
Fri., Mar. 9, 1973
Queen's University at Kingston, Ontario

Editor: Jennifer Grass
Business: Charles Schwier
Management: John Solman
Arts: Sandy Naiman
Features: Pat Devitt, Steven Winnett
Passepartout: Bob Wood
News: Susan de Stein
Events: Alison Dandie
Sports: Chris Boon, Nada Bogdanovic
National Desk: Bob Mutrie, Sue Wishart
Photography: Peter Boag

Well, we thought it would be a short nite . .but then again. . Sandy came in for yet another nite and helped Bob and Suzie redo the mes that Booner left (sorry) . . Sue the other typed and did news. . .the other Bob came and went . .as did Pat and Steve. . all the photogs were out in force and Dave did his duty . .John was vile but turned down a vile coke . .Korny and Lyn worked (????) on the second installment of the magnum opus . .we are indebeted to the flashing fingers of Heather, Anne, and jane for saving us . . and das it.

Published twice weekly on Tuesdays and Fridays by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc., Member, Canadian University Press. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society of the University. Offices are located in the Student's Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

Close battle in men's intra-mural competition

bews news

by Peter Watts

The Bews events of the last ten days have dealt an almost fatal blow to the hopes of Commerce '73 for top honours in the men's intra-mural program. Despite picking up 1,000 points for their victory over PHE in waterpolo, the Commercemen dropped critical games in bowling and in ice hockey to their arch rivals from Civil and Math. The Commercemen were also beaten out 22-20 by Commerce '74; a defeat which dropped them out of the basketball playoffs. The only sport they still have a chance in is broomball; but even a victory in this sport will not likely be enough to overhaul Civil.

Meanwhile the engineers continued on their way with a 6-pin victory over '73 in bowling and a great performance to win their quarter-final hockey series. Holding a 2-1 lead going into game 2 of the hockey playoffs, the engineers played great hockey for 2 periods in the second game and then withstood a last-ditch effort by Commerce to win the second game 4-2 and take the round by a score of 6-3. The victory assured the engineers a spot in the hockey semi-finals. In the other three quarter-final matchups, Arts '73 won their series with Business Grads by 7-2 and Mining leads Arts '75 2-1. Commerce '75 holds a 3-1 lead over Education in the other series.

As usual, PHE, Commerce '73, and Civil and Math dominated the Bews swimming events held last week in the Pool. Commerce '73 picked up one individual first place finish when Mark Graham came first in the 100 yard freestyle. Dave Kay of PHE won both the 100 yard and 50 yard backstroke events. Paul Szczucinski of Science '76 won the 50 yard freestyle and Grant Britchard of Commerce '76 picked up individual victories in the 100 yard and 50 yard breaststroke events. Dave Howard of Mechanical captured the 200 yard freestyle. In the team events, Civil and Math won the 100 yard individual medley and the 200 yard freestyle medley. PHE captured the 200 medley relay. Civil and Math picked up one individual first-place finish with a victory by Brian Harkness in the 50 yard butterfly.

It looks as though Civil and Math will get the Bews trophy although Commerce '73 still has an outside chance. Final standings should be known by the middle of next week, in time for the Bews banquet slated for Sunday, March 18th in the Union. Tickets for the dinner are $1.50 and are available from unit athletic sticks.

This weeks top five are listed. With the first three places all but officially known, the real fight is between Mechanical and Mining for fourth and fifth spot. The top five this week are -

1.	Civil and Math	36,783
2.	Commerce '73	35,288
3.	PHE	27,676
4.	Mechanical	24,921
5.	Mining	24,700

osmoker

QUEEN'S BIOLOGY SOCIETY
QUEEN'S GRAD HOUSE
157 KING ST. EAST

WED., MARCH 14TH, 8:00 p.m.

beer 3/$1. - hardstuff 2 tickets
members free - others .25¢
everyone welcome

RED CROSS means People Helping People

free beer

Now that I have your attention; anyone interested in being a part of the Education Commission '73-74
please attend meeting in the John Orr Room, SMU,
Sunday, March 11th, 1:30 p.m.

Education Commission AMS

Outer Council Members

Meetings of all commissions will be held this Sunday morning at 10:30 for the purpose of organization. Please make plans to attend these meetings, or phone Steve or Bruce at 547-6165 today;

- EDUCATION - John Orr Room
- EXTERNAL AFFAIRS – Outer AMS Office
- INTERNAL AFFAIRS – Second Floor Common Room
- SERVICES – Inner AMS Office
- CAMPUS ACTIVITIES – Outer AMS Office

First Outer Council Meeting will be held Wednesday, 7 p.m.
McLaughlin Room.

Dons for Women's Residence
for 1973-74

Life within the residence community is an important aspect of university experience.

We welcome into residence women students and couples who want to share with younger students the benefit of their learning and maturing, who are interested in being a liaison with campus groups and services, and who are concerned that residences provide the best possible environment for intellectual, personal and social growth.

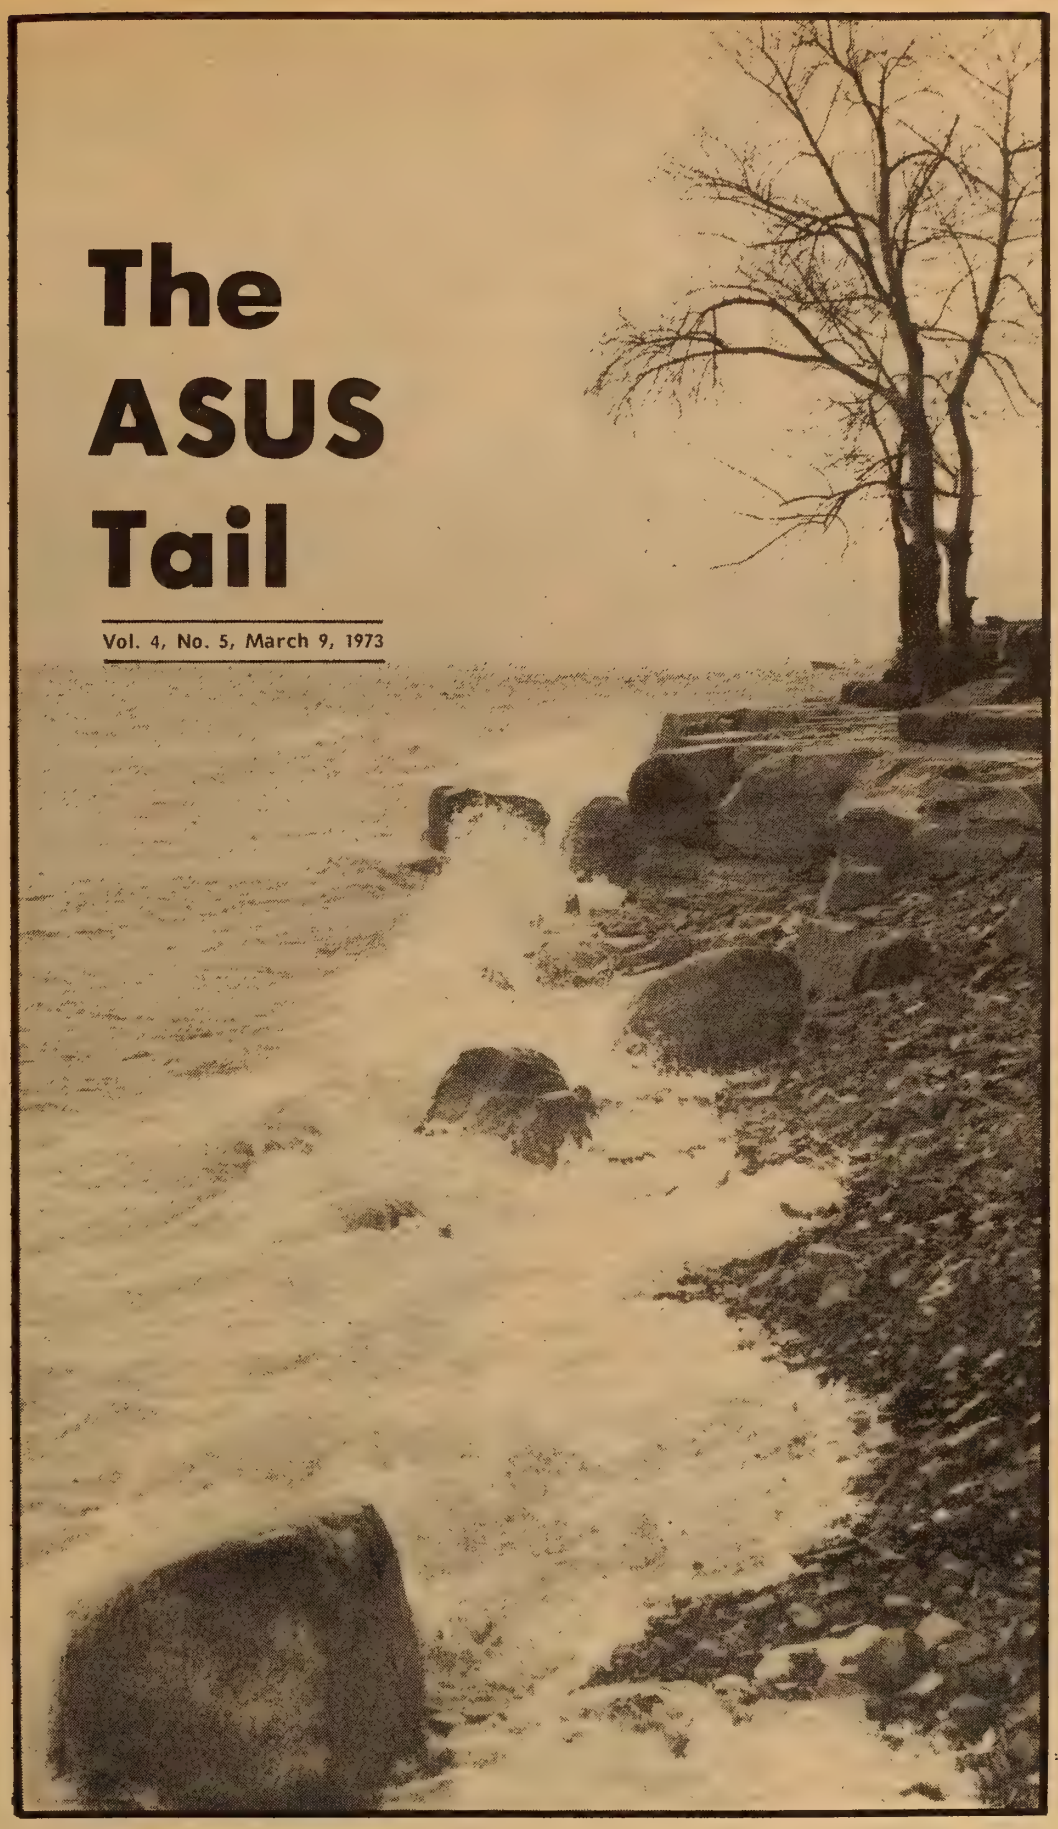
Persons appointed as dons will receive room and board for the academic year.

Applications are to be made at the Office of the Dean of Women, Victoria Hall

Finlay's Sports Shop

Save these coupons

93 Princess St.
548-8255



Finlay's
$2.00 OFF
SQUASH RACQUETS

Finlay's
$3.00 OFF
BADMINTON RACQUETS

Finlay's
$5.00 OFF
Sale Price of
SKI BOOTS

Finlay's
$10.00 OFF
Sale Price of
Fibre Glass Skis

ASUS needs people to fill positions on its executive for the coming year. All the open positions are described on this page by the people who held them this year. None of the positions are too time consuming and many of them are open to all sorts of individual imagination and initiative. Further information is available from Eleanor Crowder (President) at 547-6347 or Craig Brown (Vice-President) at 544-5976. All applications should be placed in the ASUS basket in the AMS Outer Office by 5 pm March 15.

The ASUS Tail

Vol. 4, No. 5, March 9, 1973

Judicial committee

The three members of the Judicial Committee are appointed annually by the ASUS Executive. These individuals are primarily concerned with the judicial affairs of ASUS and act as the final authority on the interpretation of its constitution and by-laws. They are also initimately involved in constitutional revision and ammendments to the by-laws, when the need arises.

Elections and referenda are another area that falls under the jurisdiction of this committee. It is their job to insure that these are run fairly and effectively, both from the point of view of the candidates and the electorate. Complaint concerning the conduct of an election or referendum is directed to this group for consideration and action.

A knowledge of rules of procedure is not a definite requirement for this committee, but it does help. Only a little time, however, is required to pick up the basics, if one is not familiar with them already.

Clubrooms committee

The Red Room is in Kingston Hall and is for Arts Students to use for meetings, symposia, recitals, and odds 'n end events. During the day it is open for use as a rendez-vous study hall and lounge.

Periodically the ASUS sets aside money to redecorate and refurbish the Red Room and it's that time again. We need someone to investigate into how the Red Room is being used and how its decor and structure can best be adopted to that use; someone who will then take steps to see it done.

The job of Clubroom Chairman also involves keeping track of bookings for the Red Room (through Room Reservation Interim Administration Building) and trying to minimize conflict between the ASUS events and those of other groups using the Room.

Immediate priority in this job however, would be to try and increase the suitability of the Red Room for use by Arts Students. A bent towards Interior Design with a minor interest in Administration would be helpful in the character of an application for this job.

Suzie -Q Week

Many people are hesitant to take on the position of chairman for this week. Although the initial organization involved is time consuming, this can be cut in half if the job is taken on by two people. Thus, they can split up the work.

The chairman must organize a sub-committee of 8-10 people who will organize and supervise the various activities of the week including publicity, tickets, semi-formal, dance, etc. She must also book the rooms, liquor, janitors and groups needed for the various events. She should hold a meeting with her committee once a week beginning in the middle of September to keep up-to-date on the progress of the week's events. It is best that she works closely with the treasurer, so that she can constantly watch her budget.

With a good co-chairman and committee the organization can be lightened and this job may be a very interesting and rewarding one.

Concert committee

The AMS Concert Committee is responsible for administering the student concert fund. It attempts to satisfy all the musical interests of the student body by presenting a variety of concerts throughout the school year. As a member of the committee the ASUS representative is responsible for expressing the musical interests of Arts and Science students to the best of his or her knowledge. The member is also responsible for organizing concerts which at times is very time consuming.

At this time the actual structure and organization of the AMS Concert Committee is under study so little more can be said about the function of its members. However an involvement in concerts is a rewarding, yet at times frustrating, experience.

Publications committee

Presently theis position consists of editing the ASUS Tale (also known as the ASUS Tail which is the newspaper of ASUS. In recent years this paper has come out very sporadically, usually being prompted by a specific issue about which ASUS wanted to make a statement. These "Tales" have generally been published within the Journal and so the major task of the editor has been to write articles or have them written and then to amass the material and present it to the Journal.

There are many things which may be done with this position and with the ASUS Tale if one works up some initiative and imagination. Various aspects of Queen's which are directly or even indirectly related to ASUS may be explored particularly if it is felt they are not being adequately dealt with by other campus organizations. In this way the ASUS Tale another perspective on major issues and may deal with areas which are being ignored.

An important aspect of publications which this position does not presently incorporate, but which it might be expanded to include is advertising. A co-ordination of all ASUS activities could lead to greater efficiency and effectiveness.

In short, the nature of this position depends on the imagination of the holder. There are a lot of ideas around. All that remains is for them to be drawn together and co-ordinated.

Athletic Stick

The role of the athletic stick is to represent ASUS at the M.I.A.C. (Men's Intramural Athletic Council). This individual must also co-ordinate the activities of the five art's year stick and the PHE stick with respect to the organization of the inter-faculty teams and the awarding of faculty letters.

Other Events committee

The Other Events Committee provides an outlet for your imagination and social objectives. Anything not sponsored by some other group may be called an "other event" -- from ballet to frisbee tournaments. The range of possibilities is endless, but the actual presentation of the events depends on the work of many individuals, and lately, too few people are willing to do anything to do anything. (Just a word of caution.)

So, if you have lots of ideas (the stranger the better), and lots of friends willing to help out, try this one on for size.

Thus ASUS Tail (Tale)

is a sometime newspaper published by the ASUS.

Opinions are not necessarily.

Fe

Gymn

Athlete's Point of View

The gymnast is a special athlete, a lonely one, a disciplined one, one who rarely enjoys the limelight and glory of his fellow football and hockey players.

Gymnastics is unique in that it is the ultimate test of your own psyche, and physique. One slip in timing or a missed handhold or even a slight brush on the apparatus can, lunge the gymnast into a choked routine.Thus to understand the challenge it would be necessary to practice and polish a routine for months possibly only to blow it in a competition.

I once knew a gymnast who was a specialist on sidehorse. He had performed several times in trial meets, before his coach, and countless times by himself; in fact he had taken top prize in a provincial invitational meet and was inticipating the final challenge in official competition. The woman in his life had even travelled far to watch him in his final moment of triumph. It never came. With a touch of the heel on a double leg circle travel which he had done countless times before, flawlessly, he was thrown off balance. He missed the next move, fell off the horse. It is a crushing thing for an athlete to see months of blisters, bone bruises, skin burns, sore wrists, and acid aching muscles spent on a thirty second routine thrown away with a brush of a heel.

Spectators view a performance much differently than an gymnast. The spectator sees breathtaking flips, regrasps, and balances. The don't know that the gymnast is being marked in tenths of a point or less. For instance every time the gymnast in a handstand moves his hand even a fraction, he loses two tenths of a point. It takes a particular kind of person and athlete to withstand this close scrutiny and emotional pressure.

A Festival
Of mnastics

rom the pectators oint of View you can get off on seeing well-conditioned letes who can move as gracefully as the st dancers, you came to the right place. rday night, Queen's will host a two-hour nastics extravaganza, featuring anese star Maasaki Naosaki, OUAA mpion Tom Kinsman, and the members of Queen's gymnastics teams. Several top-ked high school competitors, such as /I's Steve Monroe, will also be in action, e the High Horse squad from RMC that the show during Snowball Athletic Night gain on the program. These gentlemen e are worth the price of admission.

he evening's program will open at 7:00 pm he Bartlett Gym, with a children's gym gram featuring members of the Kingston nastics Club. Denise Fujiwara, one of ada's best modern gymnasts, will be ing on an exhibition of rhythmic gym-ics, and professional trampoline artist Kinsman will be on hand with a fine ic routine on the bouncing mat.

he exhibition is scheduled to run through pm, with routines by several Olympic petitors as the finale. Admission is $1.00 adults and $.50 for children. Queen's lents can get in free of charge as long as have the green student card. A big tur- would be great, and the show should be llent. Take a study break and watch the in action.

unclassifieds

MONEY - $50 to person who finds us right 6-8 bedroom home for next year. . 544-9381

1953 PLYMOUTH Starflight, Certified, Good Condition, Genuine Greaser Car Baby-Blue in Hue. 30,000 miles-honest $150 Firm 542-7003.

THE QUEEN'S Excursion Club's Bus Service Hours have been changed for the duration of March and April. The new hours are Tuesday to Friday 12 noon to 2 pm. Come get tickets for the buses to Toronto and Ottawa during these hours. ITS YOUR BUS SERVICE — USE IT!

BY THE WAY LYN, today is FRIDAY, and tomorrow is SATURDAY, and etc.

I JUST got my hiccoughs back. And I call that a revolting development. The NEWS DESK ....

WISHBONE ASH IS COMING to Ottawa on March 29. The Queen's Excursion Club is endeavouring to obtain advance tickets and will send a bus to the concert if there is sufficient interest on campus. ORDER NOW!

TAK volunteers - four people interested in writing a news-letter wanted. Leave name at TAK office.

WANTED: 2-3 girls and 1 guy to join 5 others in an 8 bedroom penthouse for next year. P.S. No, trenchcoat Trojans, High school Halfbacks or Frivolous Felines.

FOR SALE: 3 girls' bikes. Phone 544-5981.

OUTER COUNCIL members. Check the ad on page 8.

THERE WILL BE A retreat to counter the counter-retreat held last weekend at the hub (just up the street from the counter-hub). All contrary people are especially disinvited. All this takes place Saturday at 4 pm. Tea will be served.

TEN SPEED BIKE for sale - Le jeune - asking $100. Call 544-9207.

HOUSE FOR RENT for next year. May to May lease. $400 a month. Large enough for 7, or rent lower rooms. Occupants will sublet for summer. 508 College. 544-9488.

TO AYN, HAPPY BIRTHDAY, Love from RMC, Lopez, H.T. and the Tartlettes, Bax, I.B.T.C., Alumnae, Pres., and all other admirers.

URGENT! Can anyone put us in contact with a medium or a sensitive. A seance is required. Call Laurie 544-8252 or Jan 544-8254. (P.S. We are serious.)

TOWNHOUSE FOR RENT: one double and two single bedrooms. Three floors offer plenty of space and privacy. Located fifteen minutes from campus. Available May 1st with option on lease in September. Phone: 544-5614 after 5 p.m.

FRENCH LESSONS: Graduate student from University of Paris - will give private tutorial sessions at an intensive level. Phone evenings 546-5459.

DESPERATE TO RETRIEVE: Black briefcase containing texts, notebooks (valuable only to owner. Remember: EXAMS IN FIVE WEEKS), Purse which contains all ID, keys, chequebook, etc. Enjoy money fully and return contents to ACADEMICALLY JEOPARDIZED. (Marg. Fisher, Morris Hall, Rm. 308 - 544-7231.

LADIES' gloves found after WRC meeting in Rm. 517 John Watson Hall. Pick up in Rm 106 Carruthers Hall.

ABRIDGED VERSION of the Report of the Commission on Post-Secondary Education in Ontario are available at the AMS office (free of charge).

WILL SELL NEW WHITE Afghan coat medium size. Best offer. 544-5119.

LOST: One dark Calico female cat - One white paw - one white throat - lost near Wellington and Earl - Answers to the name of "Boink". Phone 544-1431 or 544-9678.

STAYING IN KINGSTON THIS SUMMER? Come join us in Science '44 Coop. Summer rentals available May - Sept. Single and double occupancy rooms. Daily, weekly, and monthly rates. Furnished rooms, common rooms and kitchens. Free parking. No pets. Twenty one co-ed houses close to campus and downtown. Low rise living at its best for the summer. Good times and good people - YOU. For info and rentals contact Jeanie Hanink, Summer Admin. Manager, 544-3778.

LOST: red wallet containing valuable contents. Please return to Cindy 542-6160.

GOLD SKI SHELL JACKET was left in a second floor Brokington room during AMS candidates. Phone 544-7645.

TO SUBLET, May to Sept. One bedroom in completely furnished two bedroom apartment in Elron. For further details, Call Willie. 544-8938.

BOON: I want a sports essay.

WOODY: Are you actually going to do Compendium?

PAT: Yes, it WILL be done.

WRITERS: next time don't meet in the pub . . .work.

COMMERCE GIRLS STAG hits Tap Room and turns on waiter (John). Many thanks to all who made it (sic). But especially to those two Commerce women and Deb, Barb, Lyn, Mary Lou, Holly, and Les (!), who made it to last call but not the pub. And then on to the all-nighter.

DEAR (?) commerce women: the office hours don't include 12:45 a.m. at that number .

WANTED: one girl to pose for immoral pictures. Contact Cam. 544-7039.

A SYMPOSIUM ON career opportunities for Psychology students will be held Tues. March 13, 8:30 in the third floor lounge of Humphrey Hall. Anyone interested in discussion on a personal or broader basis is welcome.

ROOMS AVAILABLE now in Science '44 co-op. Please contact Ruth Fraser at 544-2793.

GET YOURSELF INVOLVED - Queen's Drama Guild Elections - pick up and deposit nomination forms at the Drama Desk. Old Theology Hall, until Monday, March 13th (5:30). Nominate yourself for a position. We need a president, vice-president, secretary, treasurer and a technical director. Election - Tues. March 13 5:30 p.m. Green Room (that's the lounge in the basement of Old Theology Hall).

LOST: one pair brown leather shoes - size nine, narrow. Unusual laces - leather tipped. Made in England. Maybe in Ban Righ. 544-8302.

LOST: one nine month old male cat. Tabby cat with collar and white tip on tail long haired. Missing since Thursday near University Ave. Call 544-5154.

SECOND COMING: If you are interested in working on the AMS counter orientation programme next fall please leave your name in the AMS office.

JOIN THE GREAT DEBATE! Will the Drama Guild have a theatre next year? Watch Batman and Robin battle a Giant Dollar sign. Elect an executive. Drama Guild General meeting, Tuesday, 5:30 p.m. March 16th.

HEY!!!! There's no classified on Addy III this week.

WANTED TO BUY 10 speed bicycle. Any type. Phone 542-5445. TOM.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY: Hot and Bothered! Hope its a BLAST! Love from HORNY BARB and the Gang.

ARE YOU NOT sleeping well? Join with the BOSCO BOYS and sing out of tune to the Famous BOSCO Jingle. Now here's a Song That's Really Every Boy and Girl's Favourite: I Love Bosco. . .It's real Chocolately...Chocolate Flavoured Bosco...Is Mighty Good for Me. I put BOSCO in my milk for extra energy. Bosco gives me iron and sunshine Vitamin D. Oh...I LOVE BOSCO. BOSCO is for ME!! Copyright 1973. Bosco Boys Enterprises PS--Look for the Bosco Buttons Now appearing on campus.

VIRGIN DESK for sale. It belongs to Nix who graduated as an engineer and therefore never used it much. It's a modern metal office desk with a built in filing cabinet, and a matching swivel chair. Colour charcoal and grey. Size 40 x 30. Price $100. Also an electric guitar for sale. $100. Interested??? Call Chris at 544-9790.

1953 PLYMOUTH starflight. Certified. Good condition. Genuine greaser car. Baby-blue in hue. 30,000 miles - honest. $150 firm. 542-7003.

MONEY -- $50 to the person who finds us a right 6 to 8 bedroom house for next year. 544-9381.

HAPPY 21st DEB -- love from three-quarters of the Fearsome Foursome. XOXO.

PENTAX CAMERA SET for sale. Spotmatic (black body) and 4 lenses from 28 mm to 180 mm and Metz electronic flash, etc. Call 544-7303.

YOU COULD BE $30 RICHER -- help us find a 4 man house or a 2 bedroom apartment with a September lease and the money is yours. Please call Mart at 544-7951. Rob at 544-8912 or Gary at 544-6358.

AVAILABLE in May for 73-74. MODERN 2-bedroom apartment in Elm St. Rent $150. Phone Chris at 544-6699 for more info.

COUPLE WANTS TO RENT stereo for 2 or 3 months. If you have one that you aren't using, and would like some cash, phone 542-8662 Rent negotiable.

ONE LARGE BEDROOM PLUS HOUSE FACILITIES. Good for 2 males, 2 females, or young married students (5-6 year old child welcome). Private accommodation on campus. Possibly available for next year. Call Stan at 542-7625.

WATCHES for sale. Omega De Ville (extra thin) $90. Universal Geneve $40. Phone 544-7303.

FOR SALE. MUST PAY FEES. 1972 Peugeot 10 speed. PA-10. Racing Model. Large frame still in original container direct from factory in France. Never Used. $145. - 544-0747.

BERTIN 10 speed FOR SALE. Dunfort tubings, one-piece hub, alloy handle bar, alloy front sprockets, extra wide ratio gear set, carrier, kick stand and bicycle light, $130. Phone 544-7303.

HOUSE TO SUBLET - May to August - 4-bedrooms - Fully furnished - 5 minutes walk from campus - Call Tony, Bill, Phil - 544-4159.

CLASSICAL MUSICIANS: WOULD anyone (individuals or groups) who will be in Kingston during Orientation week (10th - 15th September) and is interested in playing in the Orientation Coffee House, please contact HAROLD PERSAUD 544-1462 for further information.

TEMPORARY ADIEU TO: Alkie Al, Mono Monica, Bran the Fitch, Freaky Fred, Mr. Dan, Cool Cat, Lucky Ann, Merry Mary, Loki, Super Sue, Devious Dianne, Lovely Lyn, Sweet Chere, Horny Hilda, B.S. Bill, Al's Al, Harvard Inc., Hot Hands and various others. As Always - JOHN the KON

TO SUBLET: May 1 - Sept. 1973 - 2 bedroom Apt. University and Johnston - Semi-furnished - Phone 544-8585, or 542-9825.

NEED an APARTMENT - Roommate needed immediately for 2-bedroom apartment - Albert near Earl. Call Mike 544-6213 - 547-3225.

APARTMENT AVAILABLE for Next Year - 2-bedrooms, 5 minutes from Campus. Rent $140. per month. Call 542-2364 or 549-0797.

SWABODA: Corduroy camel hair titration definitely.

BRILLIANT DESIGN for upcoming Artsci 75 T-shirts needed; valuable gift for person designing chosen shirt. Send through campus mail to 149 MORRIS HALL. Please be brilliant quickly.

WANTED: 2-bedroom apartment for 73-74 school year. Phone Jan at 542-5061 or Cheryl at 549-1169.

ARE YOU GETTING MARRIED THIS SPRING Let Photo Image record the things You want to remember Our rates are competitive and we guarantee quality results Call us at 546 7770 or drop by the Gallery at 33 Brock St

1 BEDROOM APARTMENT available April 15th. Unfurnished 544 4153. Evenings (late)

PASS EPARTOUT REcommends the above The lady who presently has it deserves to have you rent it - phone here anytime.

THE STUDENT VOLUNTEER BUREAU NEEDS VOLUNTEERS: - to assist a handicapped person in oil painting - to supervise a boys' changing room at Queen's University Pool - to assist a drop-in program on Thursday evenings - to work as a volunteer secretary for Queen's Legal Aid Society ... If interested, come to our office in the Students' Union Building or call us at 547-5766.

TO GIVE AWAY: A white cat about six months old. Found recently. Gentle, affectionate disposition. Call 542-8257 at suppertime.

FOR SALE: Back issue of True Romance. Handsome ski accident victim meets gorgeous physiotherapist. Stay tuned for late flashes!!! Happy Birthday John.

More classifieds on page 2

In your own way.
In your own time.
On your own terms.
You'll take to the taste of Player's Filter.

A taste you can call your own.

Warning: The Department of National Health and Welfare advises that danger to health increases with amount smoked.

The Learning Society

Wright Report Revisited (part II: Directions for Change)

Chapter Three

Lifetime Learning: Options and Alternatives;

At present, a substantial number of young people are caught between the uncertainty of entering a restricted labour market and the continuation of a formal education to which they are not committed.

When we examine the reasons for this trend, we find them to be largely social. Employers and professional associations seem either to assume that more education automatically produces a better-qualified employee or professional. For many young people, the result has been an overwhelming pressure to stay in school.

These pressures should be resisted. Society should openly acknowledge that not everyone needs or benefits from formal education at the same point in his or her life and that learning and maturing take place in many settings. Society should also broaden its concept of significant learning and societal contributions, such as community service, travel, creative and performing arts, and forms of in-service training. We strongly recommend that alternatives in these and similar areas be widened and legitimized.

The Government of Ontario should take the initiative in providing such alternatives. Support of such programs as the Canadian University Overseas, Frontier College, and projects similar to those OFY would both benefit society and provide fulfilling and educationally broadening alternatives. In-servie training also should be promoted. Indeed, we propose that, where they do not exist, comparable training programs be developed in a wide range of non-industrial, general, and government careers as well.

In addition, government, private corporations, and professional and trade associations should place considerably less emphasis on formal educational qualifications. Employers and educational institutions should increase opportunities for adults to enter or re-enter the post-secondary system. The learning value of the experiences of those who have chosen an alternative to formal education should be recognized by the granting of credits in appropriate cases.

These alternatives should be adequately funded. We recommend that in suitable cases, as determined by the proposed Council for the Open Education Sector, alternatives be financially supported at unit cost levels which can reasonably be compared with those for formal types of post-secondary education. In most cases the costs per individual should be lower than those incurred in institutional programs.

lifetime learning is a necessary ideal

Continuing and adult education and training should be given a central place. This will require new initiatives on the part of government, employers and employees; departures in organization and the creation of new learning structures; the recognition of libraries, museums, art galleries, as important participants in the learning system; and the re-allocation of resources between sequential and continuing education.

Lifetime learning is needed to help individuals adjust to a changing labour market, and is essential if they are to lead personally fulfilling lives. This is not to question the obvious values of institutionally structured and sequential ways of learning within some fields or to doubt that a high proportion of persons will continue to attend our universities on a full-time basis. It is equally clear that there should be less structured and more varied options available in post-secondary education.

Before considering the innovations needed, we must identify some of the groups who may be involved as learners. Two of these groups are high-school graduates enrolling in part-time studies in colleges and universities, and professionals and para-professionals taking refresher or updating courses. Others are early leavers from secondary schools and high-school graduates who, after job experience, wish to enter the post-secondary stream either on a part-time or full-time basis; are often overlooked in discussions of post-secondary education. They are, however, a large and important group, constituting more than 60 per cent of Ontario's population, and they have an important claim on the services of the post-secondary system that should be fully recognized.

The post-secondary system should assist individuals in this category in facing a change in occupation through choice or circumstance. In this area there is a pressing need to have programs of manpower training, as part of continuing education, clarified and improved. Success in this area will require embracing a somewhat broader and person centred view of what can be accomplished.

Institutions of post-secondary education should make every effort to provide part-time students with a range and quality of learning opportunities equal to those available to full-time students. These efforts should be monitored by the proposed Ontario Committee on Post-Secondary Education.

Cooperative, part-study-part-work programs should be multiplied in our post-secondary institutions; and a wide range of professional and salaried employees should be encouraged to participate through the provision of special subsidies or other incentives, and through increased opportunities for time off for study.

To make lifetime learning opportunities more widely available, post-secondary institutions should give persons who have been out of full-time education for two or more years, and who have reached a minimum age of 18, conditional admission to appropriate programs without asking them to meet formal requirements.

Finally to further help in the integration of education and society, student housing should, wherever possible, be made a part of general-purpose public housing, and public support provided on that basis. Such a policy would also permit a more rational assessment of overall social needs in housing and more flexible, multi-purpose use of public housing facilities.

Our concern with lifetime learning must also be directed towards the removal of educational requirements that have become antiquated for younger adults. We therefore concur in the recommendation of the Hall-Dennis Report that the present grade 13 standard of education should be attainable in the 12th year, allowing entry to all forms of post-secondary education after 12 years of schooling. In our view, a fifth year of secondary education is educationally unnecessary; it is also a socially undesirable barrier to wider access to post-secondary education.

we propose a new institution, the Open Academy of Ontario

In order to promote further innovation in the field of life-time education, we propose that a wholly new institution be established, the Open Academy of Ontario.

The Open Academy should have three principal duties. First, it should provide a broad range of educational services to individuals and groups not presently served by existing institutions. To this end, it should generate its own courses and programs, using the existing learning resources of colleges, universities, libraries, museums, art galleries, AND MAKE them widely available through innovative methods and in new settings.

Responding to need and not constrained by tradition, the Open Academy should provide pertinent learning opportunities in factories, school meeting rooms, store fronts, hospitals, libraries, and senior citizens' homes.

Second, the Open Academy should provide an evaluation service available on request to the people of Ontario; and third, it should award diplomas and degrees formally earned in its own programs or through learning attained in any manner, carefully evaluated by competent authorities appointed on a flexible and ad hoc basis. These evaluation and testing services should provide instruments to recognize the great amount of learning that occurs beyond formal institutions as well as incentives for independent studies.

We do not offer detailed recommendations regarding its structure and goverance, but we do propose that for purposes of funding, planning, and coordination, it should be grouped with libraries, science centres, museums, and art galleries in a separate sector, to be called the open educational sector. The governing body of the Open Academy should include a substantial representation from Ontario's cultural institutions and the general public.

The inclusion of public libraries, museums, science centres, and art galleries within post-secondary education is more than a bureaucratic convenience. It is meant to recognize the important role that these institutions have traditionally played in life-long education and to provide them with the organizational and financial means to improve the quality and accessibility of their current endeavours and to assume new functions.

The subject of libraries requires additional comment. Libraries have a special obligation to facilitate access to learning resources for persons throughout their lifetime. Citizens of Ontario therefore should have access-subject to reasonable rules and regulations- to all libraries, including those in universities, colleges of applied arts and technology, and secondary schools.

As for university and college libraries, while their prime responsibility is to their students and teaching staff, this does not preclude their being open to serve the demonstrated learning needs of Ontario's citizens.

geographical access throughout the province must be achieved

The creation of the open educational sector is directed to the further problem of providing geographical access to learning opportunities for individuals and groups throughout the province. This difficult question is one of relating education to vast regions that differ markedly in their economic development, population density, social structure, and ethnic and religious composition. The post-secondary system should be guided by the clear rule that no individual should be denied access to suitable learning and cultural experiences because he lives in an area that is distant from the large urban centres. This does not mean however that the full range of educational, cultural, and research services required by the people of Ontario should be provided in all learning centres.

Other population centres should be provided with post-secondary programs and centres; and post-secondary institutions in the North should pay close attention to serving regional learning centres.

Other population centres should be provided with post-secondary programs and centres; and post-secondary institutions in the North should pay close attention to serving regional learning and research needs.

Existing institutions will play a considerable role in helping to provide educational services to communities lacking them. At present, a number of population centres in Ontario have a college of applied arts and technology.

Finally, in order to encourage local initiatives in overcoming some of the problems of geographical access, the Government of Ontario should adopt policies permitting the establishment-through local, community, or private initiative, and with substantial local and private financial support- of a number of small, limited charter colleges on a scale varying from approximately 200 to 1,000 students in various localities in the province.

Continued on next page

evaluation of non-institutional learning will be required

We recommend that degrees and diplomas should be awarded both for learning undertaken within institutions and for comparable achievement without. This objective should be accomplished in three ways. First, as already proposed, the Open Academy of Ontario should create an evaluation service that provides examinations on request and awards degrees and diplomas onthe basis of performance. Second, transfer or add-on programs or courses as recommended throughout this report should be provided where needed, permitting individuals to move vertically as well as horizontally both within and between specialties without having to repeat requirements previously satisfied. Third, institutions with established programs should be permitted to award suitable degrees.

Ontarians have richly varied origins and interests, and they need a great diversity of learning environments in which to shape their lifetime goals and to acquire the skills needed to function in today's complex and ever-changing world.

Chapter Four

Broadening the Spectrum

An equitable system of post-secondary education must respond to the needs of a number of groups in our society. Of major concern are the social and cultural positions of Franco-Ontarians, the place of women in post-secondary education, and educational opportunities for native peoples.

there should be no discrimination on the basis of sex

Few subjects of public debate have drawn more attention recently than the role of women in our society. In post-secondary education, the problems exist on two levels: for women as students, and for women as employees. At both levels, there are substantially fewer female than male participants and these ratios have not perceptibly diminished over the last few decades.

In responding to the needs of women in post-secondary education, all sectors and levels of the system should be guided by the principle of equity. There should be no discrimination on the basis of sex among employees in regard to pay, rank, and rate of advancement. Appropriate procedures regarding promotions should be adopted. Moreover, post-secondary institutions should increase the number of their part-time positions with career lines, so that individuals may more readily combine a career with family and other responsibilities.

There should be no discrimination on the basis of sex with regard to acceptance into any course of study, eligibility for financial aid, or right of access to faculty clubs, student centres, housing and athletic facilities. Further, all programs offered under the Occupational Training Act should be open to women who wish to re-enter the labour force. At present, many of them are disqualified from the labour force. Finally, the post-secondary system should recognize the biological and parental role by providing maternity leaves and by creating day-care centres.

the proposed councils should establish policies that will increase the participation of women

Institutions have done pitifully little to improve the rates of attendance and employment of women. In our Draft Report we favoured the setting, enforcing, and monitoring of specific targets for the employment of women in post-secondary education. Statistical quotas were porposed as binding guides upon institutions. We now recommend a different approach.

Each institution, in consultation with the appropriate organizations and councils, should prepare and publish specific plans indicating by what means, at what rates, and with what speed its proportion of female employees will be increased. Simultaneously, the proposed councils for universities, colleges, and the open educational sector should establish policies that will increase the participation of women.

If this approach should prove to be ineffective, the three sectoral councils should consider the possibility of adopting and enforcing specific quotas for the employment of women in the system.

deeply rooted cultural and social issues have limited the participation of native people

None of the major identificable groups in Ontario has been less involved in post-secondary education than native peoples. The problem goes beyond the context of the post-secondary system. Low levels of participation reflect deeply rooted cultural and social issues. From the first year of primary to the last year of secondary school, Indian students suffer a staggering 94 percent attrition rate. If native peoples are to become more involved in education beyond high school, basic changes must be made at earlier levels of education and in non-educational areas of their lives.

The proposed Open Academy, may bring together appropriate teaching and scholarly resources in programs tailored specifically to the needs of the native poeples. The proposed financial measures to aid persons of low socioeconomic status should help to widen access for certain groups among the native peoples. Indians frequently are aliens in the school system, finding little that reflects their values of serves their purposes. Robbed of their culture, many become marginal people with little dignity and much self-hatred.

We recommend the establishment of an Advisory Committee on Post-Secondary Education for the Native Peoples of Ontario. This body should be appointed by the Minister following consultation with associations of the native peoples. It should advise the proposed councils of post-secondary education on matters pertaining to education of the native peoples of Ontario. In addition, native peoples should re represented on committees, commissions, task forces, and similar groups dealing with matters affecting their cultural and educational needs.

Priority should be given to developing special programs to prepare native peoples in the fields of teaching, health care, vocational education, and guidance. Special efforts also should be directed towards the provision of appropriate educational and cultural services to adult learners among the native peoples.

In research , as in the area of learning, self-direction by native peoples should be the guide. We propose that a Native Peoples' Educational Research Centre be established. It should not be attached to a particular institution, but should be governed by a board consisting of a majority of representatives of native peoples. The Centre should conduct and sponsor studies of relevance to the native peoples and as a special task, it should undertake research that will help to shape pertinent educational policies.

The porposed Council for the Open Educational Sector should be responsible for the appropriate funding and co-ordination of the efforts recommended above, while the proposed Ontario Committee on Post-Secondary Education should monitor the provision, use, and effectiveness of programs in this area.

we should separate the support of research from that of instruction

In their quest for what is and what ought to be, research and scholarship constitute a vital endeavour of modern societies. Research, particularly in Canada tends to take place either in universities or in close association with them. The teaching and learning functions of institutions frequently suffer because of existing government foundation and institutional arrangements for planning, funding, and organizing research.

Mechanisms which would enable society to scan its knowledge needs and make rational decisions about its research are deficient.

In Ontario, a major obstacle to the rationalization of research policies by government, institutions, and individual researchers has been the method of determining the total public support of an institution's current operations. At present, all endeavours of a university, including research, are supported largely on the basis of enrolment. To help overcome this difficulty, we propose a system of public funding that separates the support of a certain category of research from that of instruction. Decisions regarding areas of research and levels of support can be uncoupled from current enrolment and determined through the need for new knowledge and social priorities

Much research can and should be undertaken in the absence of graduate students. The scholarly needs of Ontario require that the many talented researchers in institutins that do not now offer fully developed graduate programs, or wish to develop them, be supported. Separate funding of research not essentially related to teaching an instruction should make this possible.

To foster planning and coordination or research activities in Ontario, the proposed councils for universities, colleges, and the open educational sector should, in consultatiion with one another, with institutions of post-secondary education, and with appropriate groups and bodies at the national and provincial levels, define broad research objectives for their sectors and devise suitable criteria for the allocation and distributin of provincial research funds.

professions should not discriminate on the basis of formal educational achievements

In the area of the professions, post-secondary institutions have the opportunity of becoming catalysts of change.

Many self-governing professional associations guard entry to their professions. For post-secondary education,the principal issue in this area is the close and rigid link which professional bodies have tended to forge between formal education and admission to professional practice. Broadened access to post-secondary learning has increased the number of qualified individual seeking admission to professional careers. But many professional associations have responded, by stiffening the educational requirements needed for admission to the profession, similarly, as the range of professional services needed by society has expanded, certain professions have replied, but by diversifying para-professions, but by having all tasks performed within the profession. These restrictive practices may result in ver high costs in individuals, institutions, ans society.

In professional and para-professional education, colleges and universities must free themselves of the hold of professional associations. We propose that legislation be enacted to prevent discrimination in employment because of attendance or nonattendance at eduational institutions. The establishment and maintenance of rigid enployment classifications or categories, or separate lines of progression for advancement in employment and of separate seniority lists on the grounds of educational certification should be prohibited.

In the professions, justice requires equity of treatment for individuals of like competence and performance, regardless of the practiontioner's formal educational background. Certification should be used solely to protect the public from incompetent practice. Admission to professional practice should be solely on the basis of suitable kinds of assessment of knowledge and performance.

Many tasks presently performed by professionals could as well be performed by various para-professionals. In professional areas where they do not yet exist, a range of training programs should be developed so that all specialities, including architecture, dentisty, engineering, law, medicine, social work, and teaching, might have an integrated spectrum of practitioners. These should include general practitioners, specialists, para-professionals, technicians and assistants.

In a world of rapidly changing knowledge, practitioners must remain current in their specialities. The post-secondary system should provide appropriate refresher, updating, and continuing education programs for persons seeking horizontal or vertical movement within or between professional areas. Concerted efforts should be made to level the barriers that prevent individuals at one professional level fromadvancing to another level; and admission to practice at more advanced levels should be on the basis of performance standards similar to those required for the registrations of previously qualified practitioners.

Also crucial to the future of the professions are the selection procedures for admission to professional education. Here, professional and para-professional schools should ensure that professional associations do not have the power to establish admission standards. Admission policies should be liberalized and, where possible, rigid, compulsory post-secondary prerequisites should not be required.

In teaching, aspiring practitioners should learn skills within the school environment in which they must function. This should allow those who evaluate his performance to judge his personal suitability for teaching. In a related area, pertinent work experience should be considered both in certifying and hiring elementary and secondary administrators, and in the appointment policies of post-secondary institutions.

There is also the need to ask what might reasonably be done to improve teaching in post-secondary institutions.

In the past, post-secondary teachers, as a rule, were assumed not to need special preparation. Mastery of the subject-matter taught was considered to be more important that the ability to communicate that mastery to students. We agree that post-secondary educational institutions should be encouraged to undertake some form of orientation for new instructors. We hope that the recent declarations of some institutions to stress and reward exceptional teaching, together with student evaluation of their teachers, will bring about some improvements. Moreover, given the fact that in many disciplines a substantial portion of graduate students become instructors in post-secondary institutions, it would be useful to expose these students, as an integral part of their program, both to supervised teaching experience and to a discipline-oriented discussion of problems posed by such experience.

Chapter Five

Bilingual Balance

We acknowledge the need for Franco-Ontarians to be fluent in English - as the vast majority are - and, equally, for Anglo-Ontarians to learn French. If bilingualism is to become more than a facade, masking a provincial condition in which Franco-Ontarians learn English, additional efforts are needed to develop French-as-a-second-language programs for those whose first tongue is English.

French-language instruction is only available at six institutions

At present, French-language post-secondary education is concentrated in six main institutions. Practical necessity, however, has forced them to provide varying parts of their instruction in parallel French and English programs.

Bilingualism is still far from being realized in Ontario's formally bilingual institutions. A bilingual learning environment should provide a significant range of its courses and programs in each of Canada's official languages. Engish and French-speaking students should pursue programs equally in both languages. To do so, they need sufficient mastery of their second language to be able to study subjects in it with members of the other language group. At present, Franco-Ontarians in bilingual post-secondary institutions are fluently bilingual because they live in an environment that is predominantly English. Most English-speaking students, in contrast, are still ill-prepared to study in French at the post-secondary level and rarely do, even in bilingual institutions.

We anticipate that within 10 or 15 years, as the teaching of French as a second language improves, a large English-speaking student body will have acquired sufficient mastery of French to make genuinely bilingual programs viable. To keep open the future for this development, Ontario should retain and develop its existing centres of bilingual educatin.

Post-secondary education should be guided by the principle of equity. This suggests that within the near future - say, five years - programs across the post-secondary spectrum now available in English should be provided in French also. These should include pre-training and retraining courses, opportunities in continuing education, and programs of the proposed Open Academy. As a special objective, immediate attention should be paid to he development of French-language education in the hitherto neglected areas of the health sciences, library science, and education, as well as programs in itechnical, commercial, and continuing education.

the councils should establish and publish policies on French-language instruction

Initiative in planning the expansion and elaboration of post-secondary French-language education should come from two levels. To facilitate system-wide planning and coordinatin provincially, the proposed councils for university affairs, college affairs, and the open educational sector should establish and publish policies respecting the provision of adequate French-language services in their jurisdictions.

In special fields that require large capital outlays and attract low enrolments the respective councils should recommend to the provincial government the negotiation on interprovincial agreements to provide such programs to Franco-Ontarians in other provinces. On the institutional level, bilingual colleges and universities should give priority to the expansion of their French-language programs.

priority should be given to the development of French programmes

Ontario's two bilingual universities should give priority to the development of their French-language programs if Franco-Ontarians are to enjoy the range and variety of courses available to Enlish-speaking students.

Deficiencies in the French-language curricula of Ontario's bilingual universities should be overcome systematically on the basis of a general timetable.

We are persuaded that if Glendon College, Laurentian University and the University of Ottawa act inventively and with reasonable despatch in expanding the range of their French-language services, additional bilingual universities will not be required in the forseeable future.

In colleges of applied arts and technology also, existing bilingual programs and institutions should extend their French-language offerings. This should be done in consultation with the proposed Council for College Affairs and other related institutions offering courses in French.

not all programmes and courses can be offered in French

Of course, not all programs and courses can be offered in French in each centre and region. This is particularly true in programs that require heavy capital investments and large enrolments for operating economies. Incentives should therefore be provided for French-speaking students to study their specialties in the appropriate bilingual institutins in Ontario.

Equity in a bilingual society demands that Franco-Ontarians have the right to an education in their first language at all levels; but equally, they should have the right to take examinations in French for admission to any trade or profession in Ontario.

bilingualism in education has a price tag

We recognize that bilingualism in education inevitably has a price tag which the people of this province should be willing to pay.

To meet these added costs of bilingual and French language post-secondary education, a suitable funding formula should be devised. It should meet the higher costs arising from the normal operations of French-language and bilingual programs, and it should provide grants, on a short term basis, to institutions establishing or expanding French-language programs.

In examining the higher costs of French-language and bilingual education to institutions, we should not forget the extra costs sometimes also incurred by students. At present, a large number of programs in Ontario available in English are not provided in French. Until they are, and in special fields, French-language students who seek education in a French-language course or program of study not available in the province should be eligible for the same grant-loan scheme available to all other post-secondary students.

As important to the development of French-language learning as funding arrangements are flexible structures enabling Franco-Ontarians to play a central role in shaping programs that are to serve their needs.

Chapter Six

Careers and Education

A continuous flow of reliable and up-to-date information should be generated on the full range of post-secondary educational options and alternatives as they pertain to existing and prospective job and career opportunities. Data of this kind should be communicated to individuals at appropriate times and in suitable places through a flexible information network.

If a challenging and new approach to career playing is to succeed, a centralized information system is needed to gather and generate date on education and jobs and to distribute them to he public.

It is an indispensible instrument of indicative manpower forecasting whch seeks to anticipate trends in manpower needs and in compatible with our social political institutions and values. Jurisdictional problems involving the federal and provincial governments will have to be resolved. The dilemma is simply that, while education is a provincial responsibility, questions of manpower are national in scope and fall within the federal jurisdiction.

a Human Development Commission is needed to provide information systems

In an effort to provide a much-needed information system that recognizes both federal and provincial interests, we propose that the Government negotiate for the establishment of a federal-provincial body, the Canada Human Development Commission. This body should advise both governments on matters pertaining to manpower projections and should sponsor and publish studies relating such forecasting to educational planning.

The work of the national Commission should be supplemented provincially by an Ontario Human Development Commission. This Commission should serve as a central data bank, generating its own information, as well as enlisting the cooperation of Ontario's professional, para-professional, business and trade associations, and similar bodies in securing pertinent data on manpower needs and educational opportunities for review and tabulation. In addition, it should sponsor and publish studies relating to short and long-run manpower and education needs of Ontario. These studies should alert the public, employers, and the educational system to impending shortage and surpluses.

it is essential that up-to-date data on careers and education be available

The Present functions can be realisticaly divided into three categories. First is psycho-personal counselling, which is now provided in educational institutions at all levels and through community centres. The second and third categories of service -- educational and career guidance -- will have an increasingly heavy premium placed on them if the Commission's proposals for a broadened equitable, and more diverse system of education is to work satisfactorily for learners of all ages and at all socioeconomic levels. It is essential that up-to-date data on the full range of career possibilities and programmes provided by institutions be assembled for every community and, where practical, be on a province-wide basis. This information should be made readily available to the public.

this information system must be free of institutional connections

We propose that this be done through a dual information system. Educational institutions should continue to offer educational guidance. A perplexingly complicated world of education and occupation choice also requires information services which are free of institutional connections, based in the community and open to students within institutions, as well as those seeking education in non-institutional settings. We fully endorse the present efforts of the post-secondary system to make its academic guidance services broader and more sophisticated. In addition, the proposed Ontario Human Development Commission should have the important responsibility of establishing and coordinating a system of education and career information services.

The proposed province-wide career and education service should not supplant,but stimulate and supplement the work of existing counselling and guidance systems. It should encourage them to define their responsibilities more precisely and to concentrate on services that they are best equipped to provide. In addition, the proposed Ontario Human Development Commission is not an employment agency.

St James Anglican Church

9.00 a.m. — HOLY COMMUNION
11.00 a.m. — MORNING PRAYER Beginning Sermon Series on "Questions Pilate Asked" 1. The Question of Guilt.

7.30 p.m. — WORSHIP SERVICE IN CHALMERS UNITED CHURCH
Tuesday - 10.00 a.m. — HOLY COMMUNION

Wednesday - 7.45 a.m. — HOLY COMMUNION & BREAKFAST

large stock
second hand books
19¢ to 99¢
pocket books
30¢ (4/99¢)
at Nonesuch Booksellers
225 Princess
(next to Capital Theatre)

WARNING The Department of National Health and Welfare advises that danger to health increases with amount smoked

Town & Gown Teach In

On

University/City Relations

Moderator:

Dr. John Deutsch

And panelists

Monday, March 12 - 8 p.m.
McLaughlin Room, Union

FALL SOCIAL EVENTS

All campus groups wishing to sponsor a social function next fall must fill out an application form in the AMS Office by March 19, 1973. Applications received after this date will be considered on a first-come-first-serve basis for any remaining dates.

Approved applications may be picked up in the AMS Office on March 30, 1973.

PROCEDURE FOR BOOKING ALL ROOMS

FOR MEETING, SMOKERS, DANCES AND CONCERTS.

1. Obtain a STUDENT ACTIVITY APPLICATION FORM FROM THE A.M.S. office in the basement of the Union.
2. Complete the Form and hand it in at the A.M.S. Office.
3. When the Application has been approved, a "Form C" will be issued. You must pick up this form from the A.M.S. and take it to the Specific booking office concerned. This will be indicated to you when you pick up the "Form C".
5. If you require Audio-Visual equipment, it is booked on the same "Form C" as is used for booking the room.
6. If Grant Hall booked, a cloak room must be provided.
7. Arrange people to staff the cloak room (if necessary) and the door.
8. Ensure there is petty cash at door to be used as change if there is an admission charge.
9. Check lighting with Janitors beforehand if necessary.
10. The Group sponsoring the event is responsible to see that all of the above conditions are met.

Rip off Europe.

STUDENT-RAILPASS
The way to see Europe without feeling like a tourist.

Student-Railpass is valid in Austria, Belgium, Denmark, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Luxembourg, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland.

Eurailpass, Box 2168, Toronto 1, Ontario

Please send me your free Student-Railpass folder order form. ☐
Or your free Eurailpass folder with railroad map. ☐

Name _____
Street _____
City _____
Zone _____ Prov. _____
QUE-3

So you plan to spend the Summer in Europe this year. Great. Two things are mandatory. A ticket to Europe. And a Student-Railpass. The first gets you over there, the second gives you unlimited Second Class rail travel for two months for a modest $135 in Austria, Belgium, Denmark, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Luxembourg, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, and Switzerland! All you need to qualify is to be a full-time student up to 25 years of age, registered at a North American school, college or university.

And the trains of Europe are a sensational way to travel. Over 100,000 miles of track links cities, towns and ports all over Europe. The trains are fast (some over 100 mph), frequent, modern, clean, convenient and very comfortable. They have to be. So you'll meet us on our trains. It really is the way to get to know Europeans in Europe.

But there's one catch. You must buy your Student-Railpass in North America before you go. They're not on sale in Europe because they are meant strictly for visitors to Europe—hence the incredibly low price. Of course if you're loaded you can buy a regular Eurailpass meant for visitors of all ages. It gives you First Class travel if that's what you want.

Either way if you're going to zip off to Europe, see a Travel Agent before you go, and in the meantime, rip off the coupon. It can't hurt and it'll get you a better time in Europe than you ever thought possible.

Prices quoted in U. S. dollars.

Ripping-off Europe?

Student Railpass available from AOSC.

Association of Student Councils
44 St. George Street, Toronto 5, Ontario (416) 962-8404

Also available: student flights to Europe and within Europe, car rentals, international ID cards, tours, student hostels and jobs abroad.

All at student prices

The Soldier's Tale

Unique Opportunity Falls Flat

by Merle Bolick

The performance of Stravinsky's "L'Histoire du Soldat" Sunday in Convocation Hall provided a unique (and free) opportunity for music-lovers to see a presentation of this little-known work. Theoretically, the work has three equal aspects - music, dancing and dramatic reading - for which the stage is divided so that all performers can be watched and enjoyed. I would be dishonest if I did not declare, however, that our performance Sunday was weighted, by default, in favour of readers and musicians.

Readers Richard Trousdell (the soldier) and Russ Waller (the devil and just about everyone else) were well co-ordinated and enthusiastic. Mr. Waller's part was especially demanding with its constant changes of voice and accompanying modulations of tone, pitch and accent. But it never became laboriuos or didactic in his interpretation.

The musical ensemble must be given credit for rendering such difficult parts both accurately and with spirit. Duane Bates fulfilled his vital role as conductor admirably as usual.

But what else went on? Not much, I'm afraid. The dancers had many difficulties to contend with due to the peculiar nature of the work. They had to perform pantomime in perfect co-ordination with the voices narrating and reading their speeches and with the musicians accompanying them, with the only stage props being a table and chairs used in one short scene. Not many performers can rise to these challenges and, unfortunately, ours didn't.

The story concerns a soldier named Jospeh who trades his violin (and all that that implies) for riches (and all that that implies) in a bargain with the devil. I will not now talk about the theoretical degrees of difficulty involved in portraying devil or good guy. But in such a performance as this, costuming has a great deal to do with it. If you have a great cape to swirl and flaunt, it automatically makes your performance more convincing to your audience (crass creatures that they are), while drawing out all your exhibitionism and subduing your self-consciousness. The Devil, performed by Tony Ramesar, was both convincing and spirited.

Brian Forbes, in the title role, had more difficulty. If you have only mime and dance as your sources of communication, great difficulties arise. Your lines are being delivered by someone else, thus depriving you of any leverage they might otherwise have given to your performance. Akin to this there is the problem inherent in the plot of playing an imaginary fiddle in time with musicians sitting on stage, whilst you are leaping and dancing at the same time. Mime fiddle-playing is usually unsuccessful - as apparent in the performance of no less an authority than the symbolic representation of one the film, "Fiddler on the Roof." When there is no fiddle actually in your hands, it becomes even less convincing, especially when it results in laying the imaginary instrument down and picking it up a minute later six feet away from where you left it, having danced over and mutilated it completely in the meantime. (Fiddles are delicate things.) No, I am not it-picking. I will propose a partial solution. If you cannot do convincingly without propos, use them.

Though it may be artistic heresy to suggest this, I have good reasons for doing so. Surely it is less of a heresy for soldier Joseph to carry a pack and draw out of it a plywood make-believe fiddle than to have him do without these props, but badly. If a performer lacks confidence, as Mr. Forbes so obviously did, he communicates nothing to his audience but fright. No dejection, not hope, not joy, nothing but nervousness. I don't like feeling nervous. When I am part of an audience, I don't like having to sweat and worry whether the performer will get through, get through right, and not faint in the process. If props or costumes will give him the leverage to overcome fear and communicate other things, I am happier than if the production is staged according to the book. And I think Stravinsty et al. would agree with me.

Another contributory problem was Jill Hodkinson's choreography, which might also have contributed to confidence, but didn't. At times the nature of the music seemed to be denied and the dancers actually ignored it. It could have had so much Russian gusto and vitality instead of the kind of Western timidity and prettiness which seemed to be aimed at.

You can fool one hundred percent of the audience one hundred percent of the time. A bit of judicious faking goes a long way. In this Mr. Forbes could take lessons from Wayne Tindale who played the trumpet part in the ensemble. But even he must learn not to be apologetic about it and get red in the face and go sharp. (You see, my attention was drawn to it. The member of the audience does want to be fooled.)

This was meant to be a rave review, although the weight of it seems to suggest otherwise. The performance was enjoyable and well received. I hope any further experimental inter-departmental productions of this nature will be well attended. To say this is to fulfil only one critical duty, though. Any difficulties seem to me to have been easily remediable if they had been approached with a view to furthering the spirit of the work, rather than the letter of its instructions. Otherwise such productions, in the hands of inexperienced performers, become less enjoyable than painful to audience and performers alike.

About Sir Larry

LAURENCE OLIVIER has occupied a towering position in the acting profession for a long time now. Recently he talked about his career.

Laurence Olivier's father was a clergyman, who positively encouraged his son in a theatrical career. Young Laurence's brother had gone to India as a rubber planter and one day Laurence asked his father when he could join him. Came the reply: "Don't be idiotic, you're going on the stage".

Olivier had attended a choir school, rather well known for its drama presentations: famous stage people of the day came to see them and in 1822 the school was invited to give a matinee in the old theatre at Stratford-on-Avon.

The play was Shakespeare's The Taming of the Shrew and Olivier played Katharine (the Shrew) - his first performance in real theatre.

What sort of an actor did he hope to be? Lord Olivier stated "Oh, emotional. Big emotional stuff I wanted - to sob and sob all over the stage and bring everybody's hearts out. Oh yes, you do, when you're young, want to play emotional parts. It's later you get onto the drier wines and decide that comedy is perhaps more interesting.

"I've neverbeen able to be the sort of actor you're supposed to be, to be a professional. You're supposed to do a wonderful scene and all the time be wondering what won the 3.30 or what you're going to have for supper. But I've never been able to manage that. So I'm an amateur."

His entry to the profession stage was in 1925. He was a general understudy and assistant stage manager. Today still he believes in the importance of every job, however small - on the stage or, as he now often finds himself as Director of our National Theatre, behind a desk.

Was he ever nervous as an actor? "When, as a young actor, I tripped over on entering a door I got the biggest laugh I've ever had. Now I look back with envy on that laugh. Then it all seemed so easy and I wondered why these great actors paced around biting their nails. I didn't know what it would be like later on. You do get more and more nervous as you go on until finally it's really a wonder you can go on at all."

Some people think of Olivier, now 65, as a very phsical actor, as actor for whom action speaks louder than words. Was this fair? "Not quite", replied Olivier. "It was at first,and palpably obvious. My Hamlet in 1936 was very physical, very acrobatic. But , I think most of mygeneration were sold on Douglas Fairbanks and those silent films and everybody had to be an acrobat to be a leading man in those days.

What, among the many exhausting roles,was for Olivier the most punitive? "Othello. That was killing, terribe. That's the worst, the worst of the lot. I've played them all now. King Lear's a trifle by comparison.

Blazerdays

Friday, March 9

11:30 am and 4:30 pm - Health Sciences Medical Film, Films with Lunch Series: "Sexuality and Communication." Etherington Hall Aud.

8:00 pm - GSS Film Club presents The Heart is a Lonely Hunter. Ellis Hall.

8:00 pm - Science 74 Year Party. Red Room. Kingston Hall. Beer - 3-$1.00.

8:00 - 12:00 pm - Bitter Grounds presents Thom Roberts. Admission $1.00 per person, $1.75 a couple. 2nd floor. Students Union.

8:30 pm - Sspring Boogie featuring Blackstone. Beer 3-$1.00. Grant Hall. Tickets in John Orr Room.

Saturday, March 10

7:00 - 9:00 pm - Gymnastics: Gala Gymnastics Display. Queen's Bartlett Gymnasium. Adults $1.00, Children and High School Students - 50c. Queen's students free with card.

7:30 - 1:00 am - Artsci 74 presents Auf Wiedersehen - a farewell formal for graduates. $6.00 per couple. 401 Inn.

8:00 pm - Bitter Grounds presents Thom Roberts. Admission $1.00 per person. $1.75 per couple. 2nd floor students Union.

8:00 pm - International Club Annual Executive elections followed by party at the International Club. Everyone Welcome. Lower Lounge, International Centre.

Sunday, March 11

10:30 am - Dunning Auditorium. A folk mass followed by coffee and donuts at Newman House.

11:00 am - University Service. Memorial Chapel.

2:00 - 5:00 pm - Aspects of the City - Four photographers invited to show photographs based on personal views of an aspect of Kingston. John Brebner, David Coe, Fraser Petrick, Joe Robb. You are invited to meet the photographers at the opening of this exhibition. Exhibition continues until April 1.

4:00 pm - Eucharistic Celebration - Queen's Theological Hall. Faculty Lounge (2nd floor). All welcome.

5:30 7:00 pm - Buffet Supper - Hillel House Followed by Israeli Dance at 7:00 pm. At 8:00 pm - Tony Wolman "A Trip to Belgium." Slide presentation.

7:30 pm - Folk Mass in senior Common Room. McArthur Hall.

Monday, March 12

12:30 pm - "The UN Conference on the Human Environment: An Environmentalist's Viewpoint." A one-hour lecture by H. A Regier, Associate Professor, Department of Zoology. University of Toronto. Dupuis Hall Auditorium.

7:00 pm - General Meeting of Queen's Amateur Radio and Electronics Club. Room 454, Goodwin Hall.

Tuesday, March 13

8:00 pm - Music Dept. presents Graduating Students' Recital. Howard Alexander, bassoon; Gordon Craig; clarinet; Stephen Irwin, clarinet; Eugene Laszkiewicz, accordion. Dunning Aud.

8:30 pm - Hillel Coffee House. Live entertainment and refreshments. Open to All. Hillel House.

Off Campus

Theatres

Capitol - Lady Sings the Blues

Hyland - You'll Love My Mother

Odeon - Assylum

Grand Theatre- March 9 - 8:30 pm - Chilliwack with special guest Rick St. Jean.

March 11 - Kingston Symphony Association presents Zara Nelsova, Cello, 2:30 pm.

Pubs

Commodore - Bev Marie and the Canadian Show Band

401 Inn - Volcanoes

Manor - Robboe Lane

Pub (Seaway) - Par 3 plus + one

Critic's Forum: "Lady Sings The Blues"

by Norm D. Pleum

A simple way to get the best out of this movie would be to go to the nearest record shop, buy the sound-track, and sit at home and listen to it - you wouldn't be missing much. And even then it would help if you were a Diana Ross devotee. But for those who want to expose themselves to a penitential evening of movie experience, here is run down of what to expect.

Good Points

1. The Make-up

This performance by the make-up department deserves an award. Diana Ross' drug ravaged eyelids were made chillingly convincing, and dominated the screen with their charismatic presence. They were ably aided and abetted by the swollen vein in the crook of her arm, whose calm controlled performance must be in line for the best supporting make-up award. These two stole their scenes, and carried Miss Ross' performance.

2. The Music

Arranged by Michel Legrand, the music struggled to shore up the movie, and for the most part succeeded. In an exacting role, Miss Ross' voice managed, despite the lack of conviction of its mentor and native habitat, to come across strongly and at times even emotionally. And full marks to the tears for a touching little cameo performance.

3. The Cutting

Anything that was cut from this movie in an attempt to make it shorter deserves the highest praise. The scenes that were not included were amongst the most interesting, least boring and slickest in the whole movie.

4. The Costumes

Highest praise here, for an attempt to introduce some visual excitement into an otherwise uninspiring presentation.

5. The Dope

For finally putting Billie Holiday and the audience out of their misery, a special mention. Throughout the movie the sudden dramatic injection of dope produced a series of highs which brought the previously mentioned starring eyelids to the fore, and allowed Miss Ross' strangely catatonic performance to be periodically viewed as acting. It lifted the movie and Miss Ross, and ought to have been given a bigger role -- perhaps free hand outs at the door would have helped the audience participation.

And now for the bad points

1. The Plot

The true life story of Billie Holiday it may be, but the treatment of the story is brilliantly contrived to produce an eveness and tedium which even the fascinating ramifications of Billie Holiday's life cannot overcome. One scene does stick in the mind, though I forget which one.

2. The Acting

Fortunately, there is not much to be said of the acting, for it is conspicuous by its absence. Diana Ross finds herself acting only on those occasions when what she is doing miraculously coincides with the demands of the situation.

3. The Direction

For sheer brilliance, inventiveness, originality and technical virtuosity this movie is a must not. However, its standards of conformity, lack of imagination and mundanity are consistently high, especially in the tremendously unmoving use of slow motion frames in the scene in which the "piano man" is beaten up. But it is unfair to single out individual scenes, since they are all uniformly dull.

It only remains for those who are interested in the movie to weigh the pros and cons and come to their own decision. There are, no doubt, those to whom this movie will appeal, for it does have a mawkish sentimentality to it. And I suppose if one took a double sleeping bag and a good book, and didn't expect too much, then there is an element of entertainment to be derived from it.

Anyone who didn't see Cabaret last time around?

---

by Francis C. Mewa

Academy award nominations and Oscar presentations draw good business at box offices. "Lady Sings The Blues", currently at the Capitol cinema, has been playing to near capacity audiences probably because of its five nominations but more so because it is valid entertainment for jazz aficionados, music lovers, blacks and black-watchers. Motown-Berry Gordon Enterprises has packaged a slick two hour show in which the William F. Dufty biography of Eleanor Fagan is used as source material to build a 1930-40's period vehicle to launch their super songstress, Diana Ross, into a new career as a film actress. Diana comes over beautifully as the skinny and awkward ten year old, the proud and haughty adolescent and the budding lady of the world. She handles her singing assignments as well as could be expected of a vocalist of her calibre, staying close enough to her studio sound to be recognisable and at the same time avoiding comparisons with the subject of the film. Her acting is reasonably good especially in her scenes as a victim of heroine and as a loser in the network radio lottery.

The one dimensional film was generally well acted but it skimmed over so much of the dignity and complexity of Billie Holiday that at best it shows only a microscopic sample of what she was all about and what she contributed to the American cultural and entertainment scenes.

Billie was the kind of subject whose multi-dimensional life story can only be told in a film serial. Unfortunately too many negative facets appear in the film and even when some of the positive attributes are presented they are so amplified that they ring hollow to even those who don't know the legend.

Billie Holiday was born in an old section of Baltimore in 1915 and she travelled a long and interesting road before her death of lung congestion brought on by a deteriorating heart and liver condition in mid 1959. She was the daughter of Fletcher Henderson's guitar and bango player, Clarence Holiday and his sweetheart, Sadie Fagan. Her childhood was not too far removed from those of urban black kids even though we are led to believe that her interest in Bessie Smith's records led to her career as a singer of blues tinged songs.

She was portrayed in the film as a vocalist who made it big after a road tour with the Reg Hanley (Artie Shaw) Orchestra. In fact she already had a string of successful records to her credit backed by Benny Goodman (1933) Teddy Wilson (1935-39) and a number of All-Star bands under her name starting in 1936. She also had toured with Count Basie in 1937 before reaching live white audiences with the Shaw band in 1938. In the 40's and 50's she toured theatres and night clubs as a solo attraction and could clean out, at will, personnel from any exciting band, so eager were musicians to play and record with her.

Louis McKay was played by Billie Dee Williams. The script writers would have us believe he was the "Lover Man" who dominated Billie's life. In fact he was her third husband, a man of independent means who presently enjoys excellent returns on his dealings in the afro cosmetics business and, as next of kin, stands to gain handsomely from royalties on her records, autobiography and this film. Since he controls her estate it is understandable that he served as "technical adviser" in the production of the film and fashioned his role as her sole paramour.

I found it incredible that the role of Pianoman could be blown into such prominence and played in such Uncle Tom fashion. Probably the producers felt the need for comic relief in their sad dope-ridden film. Richard Pryor - long one of the more militant black comedians drew laughs for his rubbery miming and probably will make it into T.V. like Red Fox did. His jive talks must have been funny but the diction was indiscernible and I for one, did not hear most of it.

The sepia stills were very tactfully handled but the scenes shot in Harlem were dubious. Surely areas above 125th Street were not as run down, garbage strewn and crowded with raddedly dressed children in the early 1930's.

Finally, Miss Holiday was a superb entertainer who made millions when incomes were a fraction of what they now are and whose talents won her a string of poll awards on both sides of the Atlantic. She had the talent and personality to make vocalists like Ella Fitzgerald, Dinah Washington, Lena Horne, Sarah Vaughn, Peggy Lee and Anita Ross look like school protegees. She was so sensuous a woman that she exuded sex even while standing still in front of a box microphone. Fortunately for us she was as meticulous about the quality of her recordings as she was about her appearance and a number of her original recordings, L.P.'s and 78 r.p.m. records are being made available by Decca and Verve, as well as others. Check these off against the Motown film sound track sometime. Diana Ross is the queen of the soft soul but Lady Day was something else.

Thom Roberts at Bitter Grounds

Thom Roberts, here last week as part of the Bitter Grounds Concert, will be appearing this weekend at the Grounds. An accomplished blues singer, Thom has appeared at LeHibou and Carleton University in Ottawa and Sir George Williams University in Montreal.

An Ottawa musician, Thom performs an honest, non-commercial, and personal type of blues. He has a wide repertoire, which he plays in the style of the old blues masters and presents an ever changing pattern of rhythms. His guitar work varies from hand-driving and earthy to slow and easy, and is marvellous to listen to. Thom's voice is strong and assured and gives a richness and sparkle to the songs he sings.

If you missed him at the concert, come see him Friday and Saturday nights March 9th and 10th from 8 pm to midnight at Bitter Grounds on the second floor of the Union.

- macpherson

Meistersingers Present "Frontenac Superstar"

- macpherson

Jon Frizzel as Fairly Scorne the Critic

The Rotary-Meistersinger 1973 Tercentenary extravaganza, "Frontenac Superstar" is into its final rehearsal stage. In the large and brightly lit hall of St. Margaret's Church, about 25 cast members were donning cardboard canoes for the second act opening number, last Tuesday night. Director Peter Lichtenfels kept motioning for more volume from the soloists and around the sidelines crew members and some observers quietly whispered about or laughed at what they saw before them.

"Frontenac Superstar", billed as a satirical musical comedy was written by Gord Love. From this preliminary preview the satire looked a little weak, the music sounded slightly familiar (strains of Hello Dolly, Fiddler on the Roof, Carmen and the Blue Danube all with new lyrics were heard) but the comedy is undoubtedly present. In fact, the script is so stupid, so ridiculous, so absurd that it can't help but be funny, in the tradition of the great slapstickers and buffoons we have witnessed on the screen and the stage in the past three or four decades. As a period piece playwright Love has achieved a strange mixture of modes, combining 17th Century history with 20th Century vaudeville technique.

- macpherson

Peter Lichtenfels in action

Who's Who in the cast

The cast includes some of Kingston's long standing favourites. Barbara Marrison plays Donna Michelle opposite Jim Rahn's Count Frontenac. Jon Frizzel is Fairly Scorne the Critic and Jim East is his oppressed sidekick Roger Drawbridge. These two are the villains who attempt to thwart the production in the typical sword and dagger fashion.

Tony Keenleyside plays the director Robert LaSalle with Riva Perlmutter as Jane, his faithful co-irdinator. Jennifer Hodges is Bobbi Spark, Kingston's Gloria Steinem, Bella Abzug, and Betty Freidan all rolled up into one and Val Swain plays Val Swain, a piece of brilliant casting.

The sets are designed by Alan Watts who did an excellent job with the sets for Wonderful Town.

"Frontenac Superstar" opens Thursday, March 15 and runs through Saturday, March 17th at the Grand Theatre. Curtain is at 8:30 pm and tickets are reserved at $3.00.

Canada: Turner budget disputed

OTTAWA — Presenting the annual brief of the Canadian Labour Congress to the cabinet earlier this week, CLC president Donald MacDonald claimed that the federal government does not plan to take adequate steps to control unemployment. His opinion was quickly challenged by Finance Minister John Turner.

The CLC brief proposed several programs of short-term aid for the economy including the immediate suspension for two months of payroll tax deductions for people earning less than $10,000 and an increase in the basic old age pension benefits to $135 per month.

Turner estimated the CLC proposals would cost the government $2.3 billion it cannot afford. Such expenditures, he claimed, might worsen inflation and rises in the cost of living.

OTTAWA — Herb Gray, the minister of consumer affairs, has admitted that apart from the Combines Act, his department is powerless to halt rising food prices.

Under the Combines Act, the department can prosecute only those firms which "conspire together to raise prices or to get into monopoly position and use that monopoly power to raise prices".

Gray, who was largely responsible for the creation of the Commons special committee currently investigating food prices, said the government has created contingency plans in the area of price and income controls to use if the overall situation becomes serious.

TORONTO — Calling the 6-month-long strike of elevator constructors a threat to public safety, Alred Moser, Ontario's chief inspector of elevators, has demanded an immediate end to the strike.

Although there is no danger of elevators "falling down", Moser claimed there is a possibility that sophisticated electrical control equipment might break down because of poor maintenance.

There is growing speculation that the Ontario government may legislate the strikers back to work. Attempted mediation in the dispute ended in failure last weekend.

TORONTO — The Ontario government released a white paper on services for mentally retarded citizens earlier this week which lists as its goals the creation of a family type life style within the community and jobs in industry for the mentally retarded.

Social Development Secretary Robert Welch said the report indicates that the problems of Ontario's 70,000 mentally retarded are "primarily of a social rather than a medical nature", so community life would be more valuable for them than sheltered existences in institutions.

KINGSTON — In response to a request by a delegation of concerned Kingston citizens, Solicitor-General Warren Allmand will investigate possible relationships between five local penitentiaries and the rising crime rate in Kingston. If it is found that the presence of the penitentiaries places an unfair burden on the police and the community, a more detailed study of the situation will be made.

A spokesman for the Kingston delegation indicated that the group is pleased with Allmand's promised action and that the meeting was even more productive than had been anticipated.

British workers

World: Unions say strike

LONDON — British trade unions have voted to support a one-day general strike to protest the government's use of price and wage controls to slow inflation. The general strike, which is expected later this month, will be the first in almost 50 years and will involve the 10 million workers represented by the British Trades Union Congress.

Prime Minister Edward Heath's goverment, in a move apparently designed to appease the unionists, announced the removal of graduated sales taxes on many consumer items when its domestic budget was introduced Tuesday night. A flat rate of 10 per cent, the same as other Common Market countries, will apply after April 1.

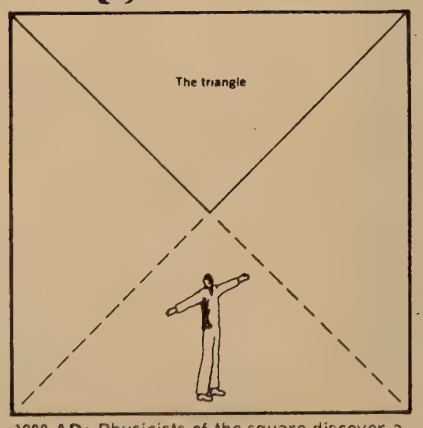
BRUSSELS — Common Market finance ministers held an emergency meeting last weekend to deal with the latest dollar crisis, but they were unable to formulate plans for joint action to stem the flow of American dollars into Europe.

A suggestion that all Common Market countries float their currencies was opposed by the French delegation, which argued that a joint float would cause European currency values to rise and make European exports more expensive.

Another meeting, including representatives from Canada, the United States and Japan, is to be held today.

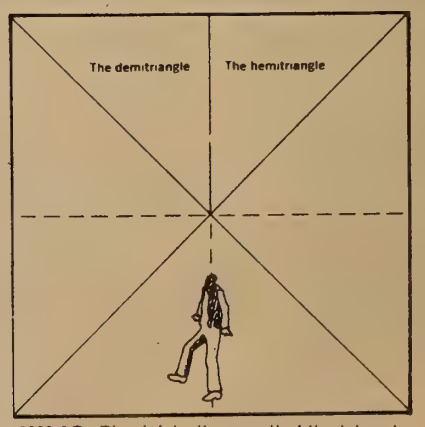
European exchange markets have been closed all week because of the monetary crisis.

PARIS — Encouraged by their strong showing in last Sunday's preliminary elections, French Communists and Socialist are conducting an all-out effort to wrest power from the Gaullists who have ruled France since 1958. The two parties, forming a loose leftist coalition, are co-operating in their campaign for the final runoff elections which will be held on Sunday. Although they elected only 9 candidates to the Gaullists' 50 in the first round of the elections, so many seats still remain to be decided that observers give the Communist-Socialist coalition a good chance of toppling the Gaullists in the Natinal Assembly.

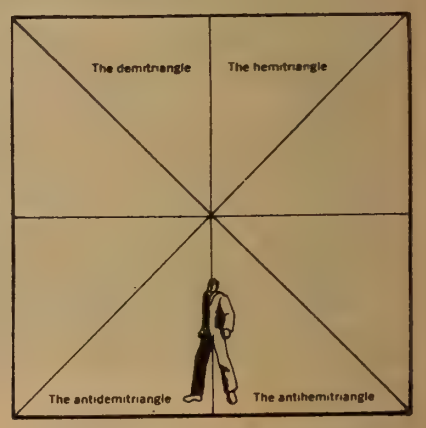


SANTIAGO — Preliminary results of the Chilean congressional elections have both government and opposition parties claiming victory. Amid complaints about slow ballot-counting, the ruling left-wing coalition supporting President Salvadore Allende reported 42 per cent of the vote, while the opposition Christian Democrats claimed more than 56 per cent. If these results are condirmed, they would not give the Christian Democrats the two-thirds majority in both houses needed to impeach President Allende.

backpage



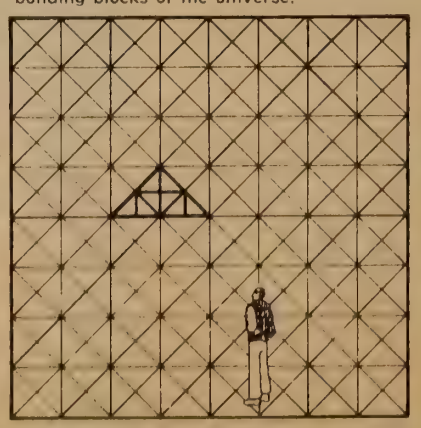
Learning to live with the universe



10,000 BC: The inhabitants of the paper square have no conception of the true nature of the universe they inhabit.

1900 AD: Physicists of the square discover a basic subdivision of their universe. They call it the "triangle" and consider it to be the fundamental building block of the universe.

1930 AD: Physicists discover that the triangle can be split. Its parts are termed the "hemitriangle" and the "demitriangle". These are thought to be the fundamental building blocks of the universe.



1950 AD: Mirror images of the hemitriangle and the demitriangle are discovered. These are termed "antihemitriangle" and "antidemitriangle".

1960 AD: Physicists' conception of their universe is further clouded by new discoveries, the rhombus, the parallelogram, the antiparallelogram, the nonalateral and many others. It is unclear what these discoveries signify.

1970 AD: A new configuration, the "hemidemisemitriangle" is hypothesized, out of which all known configurations of the universe can be constructed. The hemidemisemitriangle is thought to be the fundamental building block of the universe.

1975 AD: The hemidemisemitriangle is discovered. The following year the hemidemisemitriangle is split.

2000 AD: The inhabitants of this paper square have no conception of the true nature of the universe they inhabit.

from The Uniter

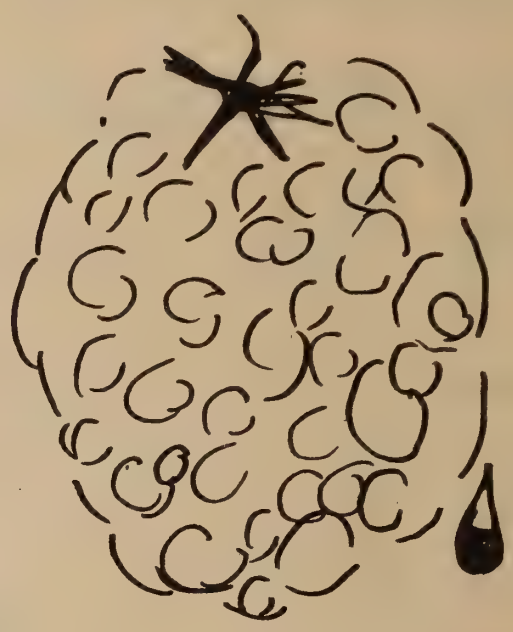
Queen's
Journal

Volume One Hundred, No. 45

Tuesday, March 13, 1973

Work permits for foreign students hard to get ...see p 3

Continuing saga of the Wright Report ...see p 21



IRC Chairman elections today ...see p 15

Golden Words scooped ...see p 3

No tax receipts yet ...p 9

the raspberries

grant hall
march 18
8:30 p.m.
$2.00

New laws hit foreign students

Foreign students will find it much more difficult to find summer jobs this year because of changes in immigration regulations announced last fall by the federal government. But Jim Whitley, told the Journal that the people at 165 University, the International Centre and Career Planning and Placement will do everything in their power to help foreign students obtain summer employment.

Last fall, the federal government announced that all visitors to Canada (that is, people who are not Canadian citizens or landed immigrants) must obtain special work permits before they are allowed to get a job. The decision was intended to cut off the flow of illegal immigrants to Canada, but foreign students were caught by the change of rules.

A foreign student must now go through a very complicated procedure before being allowed to work for the summer. On his own initiative, he must find an employer willing to hire him who must write a letter stating that there is a job available for the student and giving a detailed description of the exact nature of the job. The student must then take the letter to a Canada Manpower Centre, which surveys the labour market in the area where the student wants to work. If the survey indicates that there are native Canadians or landed immigrants available to work in that area, no work permit will be issued, and the student must start his search all over again.

Whitley said this will make it almost impossible for foreign students to get the "menial but reasonably paying jobs" many students have during the summer.

The main hope a foreign student has is to emphasize his special skills on the application for a work permit, thus narrowing potential Canadian competition for a job.

The foreign students' position is made more difficult by the fact that Canada Manpower Centres are not legally allowed to help them look for work. The federal government also has a legal hold over many foreign students, who signed a statement before they came to Canada saying they had sufficient funds for the programs they were about to start.

Even if a work permit is obtained, it is worded so specifically that any change in the nature of the job, whether of position or duration, invalidates the permit. If a student quits his job, he must get a new work permit before being hired for another.

Unlike the Canada Manpower Centre, the Queen's placement facilities are not legally forbidden to help foreign students find summer jobs. Whitley suggested that any foreign student looking for a summer job get in touch with 165 University the International Centre or Career Planning and Placement, where every effort will be made to help him.

Whitley also reminded foreign students doing any kind of paid work within the university that as of January 1, they must have work permits to continue. If they don't, they and the university are liable to be fined.

A preview of GW

In a press conference held late Saturday night, a junior staff member of Golden Words, a local campus "newspaper", announced that tommorrow's edition of GW would be a parody of The Queen's Journal.

The spokesperson, who refused to be named and would not elaborate, said the issue would be devoted entirely to doing things which make the Journal look good, while making the Words look like a rag.

During the interview, which was cut short by GW editor Kevin Van Koughnett, it was learned that tomorrow's issue would be the last issue of the year.

Van Koughnett refused to comment on the plot but did say he hoped he had learned not to engage in battles against the giants of the publishing industry.

Journal editor Jennifer Grass when asked for a statement on the parody said to the assembled multitude, "Isn't that cute!"

- bourns

They could have danced all night at the Rehab Formal but [redacted]

Status of Women

And now for the report

by Janet Ritchie

The Principal's Committee to look into the Status of Women at Queen's has begun to draw conclusions from its investigations and predicts that its report will be published sometime this summer.

Its staff of six, including two male members, have been researching areas of discrimination against women at Queen's at the levels of faculty, administratives staff, and students. In doing so, they have been acting partly on their own initiative and partly on the basis of briefs received from people with particular problems and complaints.

By now, they have met with most of the heads of the admissions committees and deans of faculties in their examination of the admissions policies and procedures of faculties.

In particular, they have been gathering statistics on the rates of advancement and tenure of the faculty and on the promotion and fringe benefits of support and administrative staff to find areas in which there is not complete equity between men and women.

Their research has revealed that certain jobs of a support of administrative nature have no set classification, or are at least very difficult to classify. This situation needs to be rectified but the committee feels that it is also important to draw it to the students' attention in case they ever find themselves in a similar kind of job. It often happens that because the job is not specifically named, those who tend to be timid - usually women in the past - are usually ignored as canddidates for promotion.

The Committee has also become aware of an extensive socialization process which conditions women from a very early age not to enter fields such as engineering which are traditionally masculine interests. As a result, many girls enter Mathematics when they have the aptitude and desire to be in Engineering. This raises the question of whether the university has a role to play in "de-socializing" these attitudes.

Another area of concern has arisen in the matter of day-care. Should the university provide such facilities and, if so, to what extent? This is especially important as a question which is also facing the industrial world. Marney Cousins, student member of the Committee, feels that this affects the faculty, administrative staff, and students in that it is a determinant of the accessibility of the university to women.

The Committee realizes that its study many have missed certain areas and it is open to further comments and opinions. In the hope of receiving these, it is holding an open meeting in the second floor common room of the Union this Friday at 3:30 where it would appreciate the suggestions of any member of Queen's community.

Tragic joy: Yeats versus Neitzsche

by Steve Winnett

All perform their tragic play,
There struts Hamlet, there is Lear,
That's Ophelia, that Cordelia;
Yet they, should the last scene be there,
The great stage curtain about to drop,
If worthy their prominent part in the play,
Do not break up their lines to weep.
They know that Hamlet and Lear are gay;
Gaiety transfiguring all that dread.

- Yeats, "Lapis Lazuli"

Mrs. Virginia Evans, a PhD. candidate in the Department of English, addressed the third meeting of Illiterates Anonymous in Watson Hall on Friday evening on the topic of "Tragic Gaiety in Neitzsche and Yeats," in which she attempted to explain how Neitzsche's ideas on the Apollonian and Dionysian elements of tragedy help to explain Yeats' conception of "tragic joy." Mrs. Evans was quick to eschew any attempt at discovering any direct influence of Nietzsche on Yeats, taking cover behind warnings on this vexing subject of critical nightmare found in The Pooh Perplex.

It is difficult to estimate the impact of Nietzsche's thought on the early 20th century. What should be looked for are not ideas which have been directly copied down by another man, like W. B. Yeats, but rather those seminal ideas which have been moulded and transformed to fertilize this poet's imagination.

W. B. Yeats was "extremely receptive" to Neitzsche's work, said Mrs. Evans, especially to his ideas of the Apollonian and Dionysian elements of tragedy enunciated in The Birth of Tragedy, and the idea of eternal recurrence, first stated in Thus Spake Zarathustra. Yeats claimed in a 1902 letter that he had been reading Neitzsche so much that year as to weaken his eyes! Certainly at this time, in Yeat's circle of friends, there was "a flurry of interest in this irreverent philosopher."

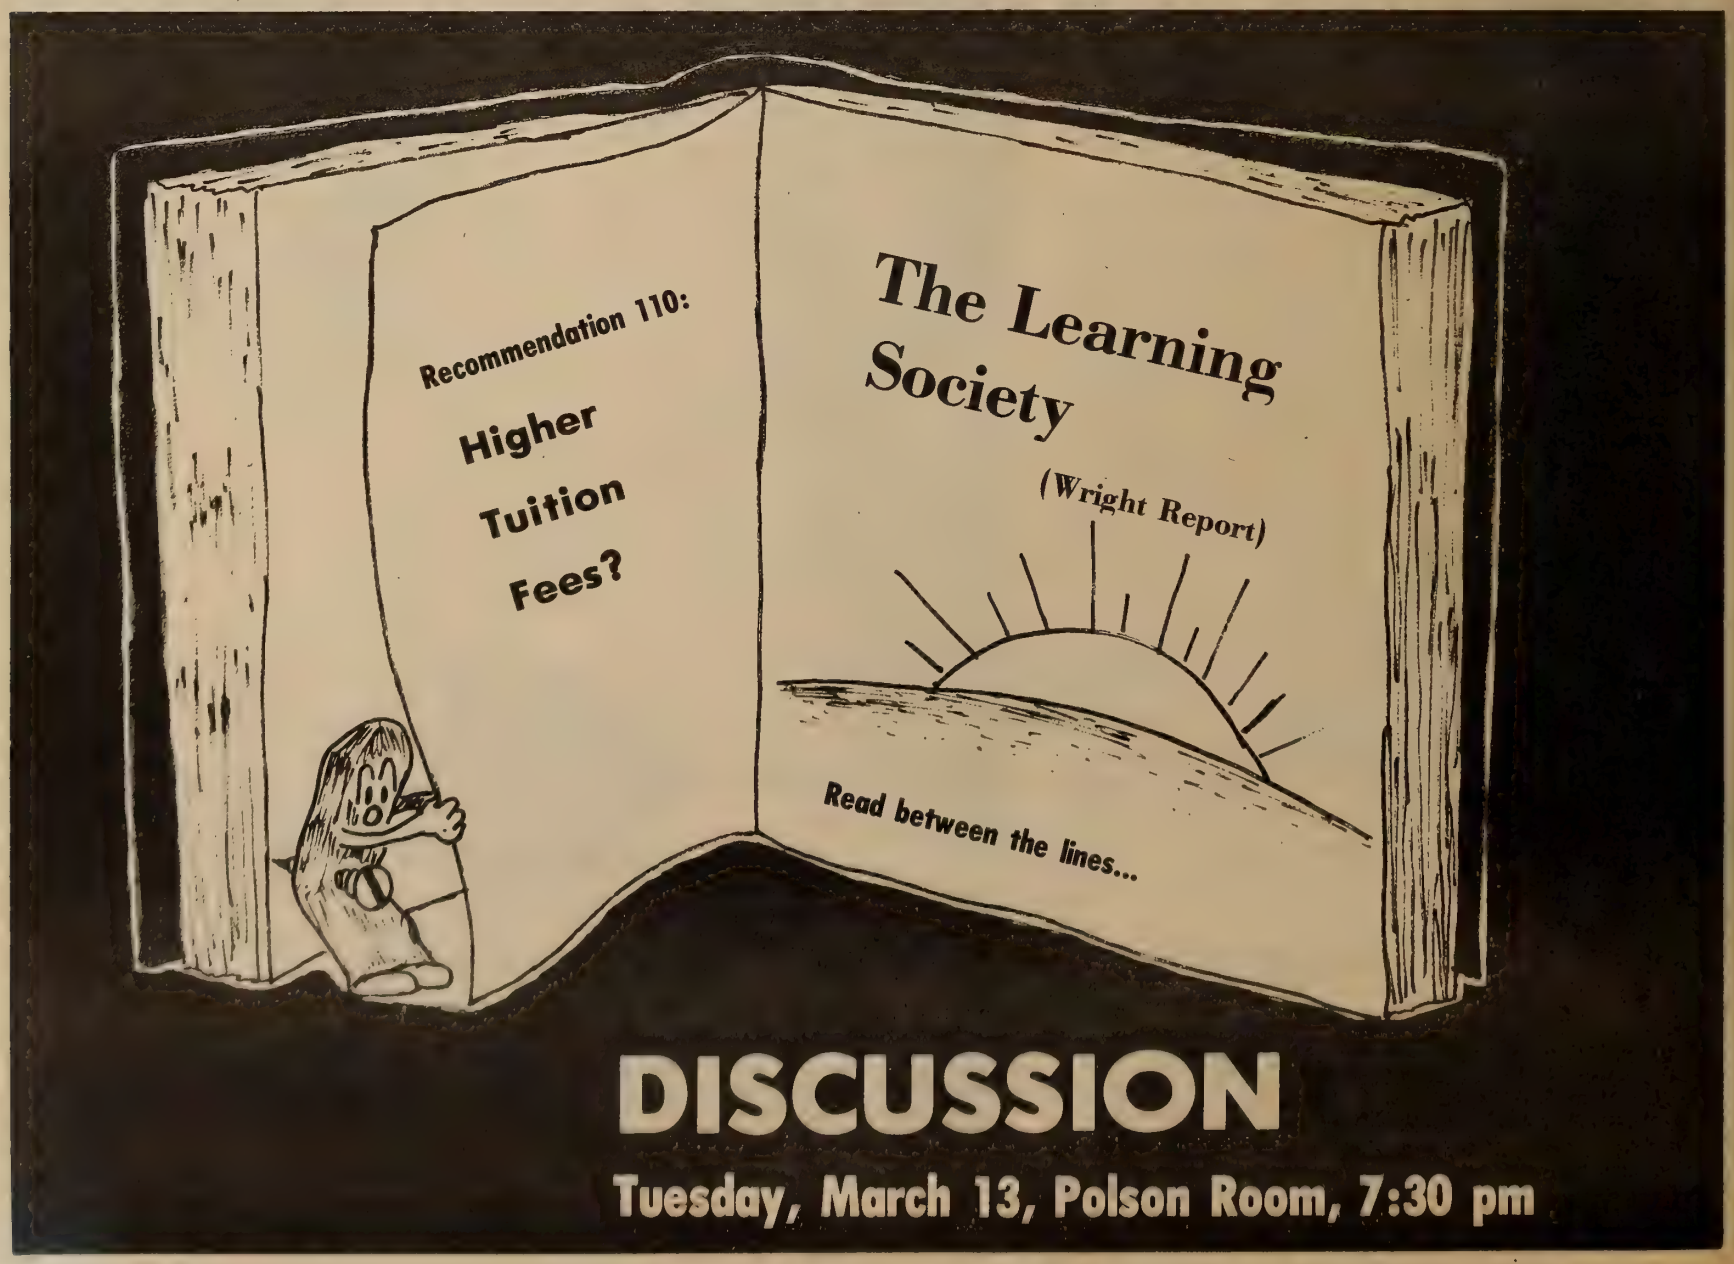
For Neitzsche, the Apollonian and the Dionysian were the two opposing forces in human nature, and were fundamental psychological experiences, with the "rapt repose" of the Apollonian state being forever in opposition to the "strenuous becoming" of the Dionysian state. The development of art was as bound to this duality as was procreation to the opposing duality of the sexes.

The early Greeks, wanting order in a universe of seeming chaos, created the gods. A superabundance of order in a materially satisfied civilization, however, meant that the Greeks could again afford chaos, and so they created Dionysos. In the Attic tragedy, these two opposing elements, according to Nietzsche, were married. The Apollonian ideal embraces the solemn gods on Mount Olympus, a state of dream, the plastic arts, epic poetry, self-consciousness, individuation, the realm of Being and of Eternity. The contrary Dionysian state exalts the Bacchic Rites, a state of drunkenness, music, self-forgetfulness, a Unity which annihilates the individual, the realm of Becoming and of Transience. In tragedy, the chorus provided the musical, Dionysian element, from which individual, masked, Apollonian actors stepped forth, only to be destroyed and submerged once more in the chorus. For Neitzsche, this art came to express "the joyous hope that the spell of individuation may be broken."

While Nietzsche preferred the Dionysian, Yeats, it is clear from a 1903 letter, preferred the dreaming, contemplative, Apollonian state. His poetry bears several references to the state of dreaming (going right back to "The Song of the Happy Shepherd," first in the Collected Poems; "Dream, them, for this is also sooth").

Nevertheless, the theories of Neitzsche go a long way toward explaining Yeat's conception of "The Tragic Theatre," as outlined in a 1910 essay of that title. For Neitsche, tragedy was an "overwhelming feeling of oneness", a remark which is directly comparable to Yeats' comment on the pure passions of tragedy "breaking the dykes between men", as heroes like Cuchulainn transcend the individual. For Neitzsche, the catalyst to the drama is supplied by the musical chorus. Mrs. Evans hypothesised that Yeats "substitutes the rhythm of verse drama and the use of stylized movement to provide a parallel effect to that achieved by the Greek chorus." (In later questioning Mrs. Evans admitted that this hypothesis may not be completely tenable.)

For Neitzsche, tragedy lifts us above the world of everyday concerns; so argues Yeats in his essay. For both men, tragedy goes beyond the limits of normal human experience. Yeats wrote in 1922, "We begin to live when we have conceived of life as a tragedy," that is, when we have come to perceive the lyric of tragedy, immanating from a universal experience.



Neitzsche, commented Mrs. Evans, would have considered Yeat's desire for Byzantium "a cop-out."

To understand Neitzsche's idea of tragic gaiety, we must understand the ideas of eternal recurrence. The Ubermensch, the Superman, must forego the comfort of Apollonian images, and accept life as eternal becoming. This is not a passive action, but a conscious act of will, as he learns to say, with Zarathustra, "If that is life, well then, again!" Zarathustra's love-song to Eternity is a song of tragic gaiety, which is, for Nietzsche, "to realize in fact the eternal joy of becoming, a yea-saying to antithesis and war."

This view has some parallels with Yeats' vision of history and of life as a pair of endlessly interpenetrating and opposed cones or gyres. Yeats's own "song to eternity" might be found in the conclusion of "A Dialogue of Self and Soul": "I am content to live it all again." There is a kind of tragic gaiety here, a raising of a heroic cry, not against the flux of time, but with it. Eastern philosophy (see the poem "Mohini Chatterjee") has its release from the cycles of rebirth. "The East," wrote Yeats, "has its solutions always and therefore knows nothing of tragedy. It is we who must raise the heroic cry."

Yeats, however, even in finding tragic joy in the Haraclitean flux of the world of becoming, always held on to the Apollonian images of being, as opposed to Neitzsche (as in the poem, "Beautiful Lofty Things."). And here we can understand a beautiful synthesis of these two views, Apollonian

Continued on Page 7

Baum charts new university direction

by Steven Winnett

Dr. Gregory Baum, OSA, of St. Michael's College, University of Toronto, one of Canada's leading theologians, advised graduates at Sunday morning's Baccalaureate Service in Grant Hall not to become "tedious and boring people, conformist and unimaginative."

Dr. Baum contrasted criticisms levelled at the university by radicals in the 1960's and by governments in the 1970's. Radicals had criticised the university as not being "relevant" to the needs of society, by which they meant, not being critical enough of the standards of society. In the 1970's, governments have also criticised the university for not being "relevant", on the idea that the primary function of the university is to render social service to society and thus to produce people who will "fit in" to the structures of society. There is clearly a great gap between these two criticisms of "relevance".

The second great attack on the university by radicals, said Dr. Baum, was that the university curriculum denied man his freedom of choice, because it stresses man's rational factors at the expense of his emotions. This led to demands for freedom of course selection, and for an unstructured university. In the 1970's the universities are facing a similar attack from government, but with a different twist. Now, governments, are demanding that the university become an open market, with its courses based on the laws of supply and demand. The danger here is that the mentality involved in this demand is that of the supermarket, where the "hidden persuaders" determine what range of products we will unthinkingly consume. The hidden demand here is that the universities help to make the dominant cultural and political values universal, by catering to the demands of the majority. "Freedom" has a different meaning when it is uttered by a minority who demand change and by a majority who demand conformity. And illustration is provided by the issue of the language in which immigrants to Quebec should be educated. The French minority insist that it be French, so as to protect their freedom; the English majority in Canada insist on the freedom of immigrants to choose the language of education, an insistence which will perpetuate the domination of the majority.

The new critics from governmnet want "mirror universities", reflecting the values of society. Rather, argued Dr. Baum, the university should be an X-ray lamp "which brings people together to look critically at the society to which we belong". By being in touch with the multitude of values in the great intellectual and religious traditions of the West, the university can provide this necessary critique of society.

In the New Testament, we are told, "do not love the world. If you love the world, you will die with the world." When the authors of the New Testament refer to "the world", they mean the nexus of exploitative systems of the Roman Empire which had conquered Israel for so long. This phrase, translates as follows for those who are about to graduate: "Do not love the system. If you love the system, you will die with the system."

The task of the university today, then, is to convince the government that the lamp function is of service to society, "for the sake of our country, for the sake of our culture." Graduates, of the universities should not become boring conformists; rather, they should be "people who can live with many questions, for truth is an ongoing discovery." Graduates should become, in the Biblical phrase, the "salt of the earth", imaginative, resourceful, and finally, useful persons.

perry

Kierans speaks

World using outdated economics

by Janet Ritchie

One of the problems we face today, according to Eric Kierans, is that of attempting to apply past economic theory to a world which is now based on an entirely different set of economic circumstances.

In his address to the Second Annual Commerce Banquet last Wednesday night, Kierans wryly noted that professors of Economics must be finding it difficult to explain the current predicament of European and Japanese money markets through the traditional elasticity of trade curves. This, he concluded, illustrated that "we are not taking into account sufficiently how economic realities have changed.

Kierans contrasted modern-day economists unfavourably with those of the "best economic period in history". He called the classicists realists who were concerned with the mercantalism, monopolies, and trade surpluses which characterized their world.

Unlike economists of today who are faced with similar conditions, they set out to change their world, proposing a radical new philosophy of individualism "which tore the old world of monopolies into shreds".

They believed, he said, that the ends of economic activity lay not in military activity or in power, but in raising the standard of living through wholly democratic means rather than through the planning and government controls which are prevalent today.

Kierans hastened to assure his audience that he was not advocating a return to the policy of "laissex-faire" which had emerged from that period. He wished instead to emphasize that the classicists understood their world and changed it for the better and that many of the same problems are currently in evidence.

What distinguished the classical from the present economic world was, he said, the rise of the corporation as the dominant economic institution.

Yet economists have been slow to recognize and take into ccount this development and its implications.

Kierans observed that, as the beginnings of the corporate structure became apparent to many, economists tended to regard corporations and monopolies as "disappearing apparitions". They continued to deal with the classical model of competitive monopoly, disregarding the rise of an industrial structure which featured barriers to entry, concentration, monopolies, and the "overwhelming economic significance of a perpetual form of business organization, the corporation".

Although in 1930 economists such as Keynes, Ferguson, and Chamberlin began to bring logical analysis to bear on the current industrial structure, Kierans described the time lag of thirty years as costly.

He was alarmed by what he considered to be a trend towards multi-nationalism on the part of corporations who "having conquered time, now wish to conquer space". The present difficulty of economists is, he said, to know what the objectives of society and government are and, at the same time, to recognize the "engine", or corporation which society has created and take it into account in their analysis.

At present, society seems driven towards growth and expansion rather than improving the standard of living. This, Kierans noted, was not an objective accepted by the classicists. He quoted their belief that "a stationary condition of capital and population implies no stationary state of human achievement".

Kierans denied that he was suggesting no growth but stated that attention must be paid to the "impelling drive to compounding growth perpetually".

If the corporation's objectives are the growth of its assets, revenues, and net income, then these are in conflict with the social objective of greater and better distribution.

Kierans conceded that Russia needs its state corporations to accumulate wealth and to achieve military and technological superiority. The United States, because it is working towards the same ends, requires its private corporations.

It was inevitable that their standard of living and quality of life would suffer as a result. However Canada need not have the same economic policies and objectives, he argued.

If Canadians are truly interested in improving their standard of living and creating a "just society", they "must be more concerned with the distribution rather than the accumulation of income, and quality rather than growth".

They must attempt to bring the corporation into harmony with national and social objectives Kierans predicts that, if this can be accomplished, Canada will ensure her independent future - independent because it will be different and better.

On March 21st You Can Vote to:

(a) fight CCC[1]

(b) Combat VD[2]

(c) Eliminate TB[3]

(d) Conquer PLP[4]

BUSIT  MARCH 21

1. Campus Car Congestion
2. Vehicular Discharge
3. Transportation Blues
4. Parking Lot Proliferation

Arctic transportation study

The economics of environment

by Raj Anand

"Transportation and environmental problems in the Arctic" was the subject of a talk by Mr. C.E.Law at the Inter Residence banquet last Tuesday in the Leonard Hall cafeteria.

Mr. Law is the Executive Director of the Canadian Institute of Guided Ground Transport and a former Operations Research teacher at the Queen's School of Business.

In the spring of 1971 Carnegie Mellon University asked the Defence Board on which Mr. Law held a post to investigate the feasibility of transportation of oil from the Arctic to the U.S. Mr. Law said that for any means of transportation there are major difficulties to be overcome.

The first obstacle is permafrost. North of the permafrost line, the ground is frozen all year round down to a depth of between a few inches and several feet. The topsoil is largely ice; analysis of "melted soil" from seven feet down showed that the soil is 68 per cent water. While explosives are needed to chip the soil when frozen, the slightest distrubance of the permafrost results in a huge area of land "caving in." On one slide Mr. Law showed the result of clearing away a two inch layer of mosses and lichens to prevent an arctic fire from spreading: a corridor of land thirty feet wide collapsed.

This permafrost behaviour, of course, affects the oil transportation problem. Pipelines of oil at 180 degrees temperature rapidly melt the ground they lie on. Any heat-producing means of transportation must be supported by piles and be kept above the surface; this in turn means blasting piles in to rock-hard permafrost.

Another obstacle is the distinct possiblity of earthquakes. "Alaska is a very significant earthquake zone," Mr. Law stated. The Yukon River system, which a proposed pipeline was to cross is in a region where the prospect of earthquakes of greater than eight on the Richter scale is very great. Most of Alaska and the Yukon is threatened by earthquakes of magnitude greater than five. The effect of an earthquake on a pipeline would be disastrous, economically and environmentally.

A further complication to oil transportation in the northwest is the danger of oil spills in the waters between northern ports and the western markets of Los Angeles and other southern coast cities. A particular area of concern in the narrow Juan de Fuca Strait near Vancouver and Seattle.

All of the obstacles suggest consideration of a railway solution. Mr. Law said that Arctic railways already exist in Canada and in Europe. They can be constructed above ground to minimize the permafrost problem. Their mobility lessens the earthquake damage which can occur. Railways would obviate the possibility of oil spills; furthermore, they employ more people than do pipelines, and they can be used long after the oil resources have been exhausted.

Even in terms of cost, Mr. Law argued, railways seem to be an advantageous solution. He quoted a study which revealed that the railway from Prudhoe Bay to Trout Lake would cost $2.4 billion to build and $193 million a year to operate; a comparable gas line would cost $5.3 billion and a gas pipeline greater than $4 billion. Railway cars can be loaded by a carousel system which simultaneously pushes the cars around the carousel and loads them. Using this system, 168 cars can be loaded with 100 tons of oil in a total time of one hour.

Mr. Law believed that only railway transportation can provide an alternative to oil pipelines, hundreds of miles of which lie unused in the Arctic due to environmental suits. "We think we can construct a railroad at less cost than a pipeline, and gain an environmental improvement as well."

Problems plague the crippled

by Laurie Hayhurst

The last article depicted Kingston as a community imposing numerous architectural barriers to the handicapped. It should have been concluded from it that the city poses difficult, if not impossible problems to the handicapped individual's fight for independence. Having made such a conclusion, it is unrealistic for us, as students at Queen's, to sit back smugly and feel that the problem is not relevant here. It is, and with the increasing numbers of handicapped young people who wish to further their education, the need for its solution is becoming more critical every year.

Consider the dilemna of the student confined to a wheelchair who, in the organization of her day, plans to drop a term-paper off in Kingston Hall, meet friends for coffee at the Union, research an essay in Douglas Library, and attend a concert in the Arena. Assuming she could get out of her residence (Ban Righ, Chown and Adelaide all have steps at all entrances), she would have to manipulate two curbs and an inclined sidewalk to get to Kingston. At Kingston, she would have a choice of several entrances, each of which has at least four steps to climb to reach the first floor - an almost insurmountable obstacle even if she had the help of a two hundred and fifty pound flootball player.

The list of obstacles goes on and on and can be easily recognized by the reader if he will mentally picture the entrances and general set-ups of the Union, Douglas Library and the Arena. Although this problem has been neglected in the past, there is hope for the handicapped potential student of the future if public indignation against this form of discrimination is felt.

As Occupational Therapy students, we have become concerned with this issue and have organized a seminar on March 14th at 7:00 p.m. in Brockington Hall to present the facts to anyone interested. Please come and contribute any ideas or questions to us at that time.

AMS OUTER COUNCIL MEETING

This Wed., Mar. 14

7 p.m.

- 3rd Floor Common Room

ALL WELCOME

ARE YOU GRADUATING IN JUNE?

All students in the Faculty of Arts and Science who expect to graduate in June, should come now to the Faculty Office at 131 Union Street, to check that their names are on the degree list.

TRICOLOR

If you did not opt out in October, you paid for a copy of Tricolor '73 with your fees last fall.

The book will be available in September.

If you will be here, you may pick up your copy then IF you have your green student card.

IF you won't be here, you may have it mailed for $1, payable at the AMS Office starting Monday.

APARTMENTS TO SUBLET

We have 1 and 2 bedroom apartments available to sublet during the summer. Rents are negotiable. We also have a limited number of rooms still left for intercession.

For more info: phone Elrond College

544-1842

Society news

Grad soc stresses communications

by Liz Trotter

Problems of the Graduate Students' Society

The most important problem faced by the Graduate Society is the dilemna of foreign students on student visas who are attempting to get work permits. Fraser Dunford, president of the Society, expressed the fear that this will become a serious problem in the future. A committee has been set up by the Grad Students to inform the foreign students of the regulations and hassles involved in getting work permits, and the Society plans on joining and giving support to the International Center to petition the government.

The Grad Society will also be looking into the problems faced by the foreign students around the campus. A study might possibly be done on why foreign students are here at Queen's and other general questions.

This year, the Grad Society also plans on putting more emphasis on on-campus concerns than off-campus areas. This is not being done to ignore the outside, but the balance will be weighted in favour of Queen's.

The Grad Society is looking at the possibility of getting letters of support for Grad Students. The Society wishes to get a written contract between the Grads and the departments they work in. The difficulties and problems of this possibility have to be worked on.

The communication gap between Grads and the rest of the Academic community is an area to be explored. The Society notices a major lack of communication to the undergrads and to the faculty. Before this problem is looked at, the Society must first find what the relationship is. Dunford gave the example of the 'blind' relationship between the undergrad and his marker, as the two are unknown to each other. There is a need for communication both to the undergrads and to the faculty.

This leads into the problem on the campus in general of general communication. There are about 800 Grads on campus, and the Society is looking into the means of communicating with their own Grads. The Society puts out a newsletter, and this device may be used more, and another means may be initiated. A Committee has been established to look into this.

The Society is of course worried about the nagging problem of fees. The Society is prepared to continue the fight against fee increases. Grad fees were doubled last year and Dunford fears the possibility of another increase in the future. Dunford believes that the "whole area of fees has to be watched very carefully" and the Society "intends to do it."

Engineering Events.

Saturday was the day for the annual Engineering meeting. This was held for the outgoing and incoming outer councils at Cataraqui Golf and Country Club. This year the Annual Banquet was a combined working luncheon. The business dealt with was the reviewing of the three largest concerns faced by Engineers: academics, employment, and structures and services.

Approximately thirty-five people attended the luncheon, including Dean Uffen, Outgoing Honourary President Dr. Reg Clark, Associate Dean Edwards, and guest speaker Jim Brown. Brown is president of QUESSY, which owns Queen's technical Supplies, and he spoke on the operation of Technical Supplies.

The Science Formal Committee activities are underway with a year party held for Science '74.

A change was made in the duties involved in being an engineering AMS rep. The two junior AMS reps and the sophomore rep will be excused from attending the engineering outer council meetings. The senior AMS rep. will still be required to sit on both outer councils.

Rehab Reports.

The Rehab formal was held Saturday the 7th in Wallace Hall. The programme included a Champagne Party before the dance at 7:00 in the Ban Righ Common room. Following the dance, was a Midnight Buffet, and following the buffet, was a Breakfast Party held at 10:00 a.m. Sunday to help undecorate and clean-up.

During the festive activities, a school ring was presented to outgoing president of Rehab, Donna Collins.

Rehab is sponsoring a Seminar on architectural barriers to be held on Wednesday. The seminar will deal with the difficulties of the handicapped in moving around. Reporters, city officials, Parks and Recreation members, Flora MacDonald and Syl Apps have been invited. This discussion will also be on open-line one morning. The Rehab Society is aiming for public awareness of this problem.

Turnover of the executive will take place March 21st.

Nursing Science News.

Back-Rubs - to be held in the Polson Room This Friday from 12:00 to 8:00 p.m. Cost: 50c Girls are also invited to come.

Commerce Society.

A joint meeting was held last Thursday with last years' executive to change over office. The results of this meeting was the conclusion that the Commerce Society could be improved by improving the year levels. It was felt that the society could be strengthened from within, and that organized year committees would lead to better communication and better activities within each year. Only when the Society was strengthened from within would it then turn outward and Dionysian, in "Lapis Lazuli". Hamlet and Lear, caught in the tragic world of flux, "do not break up their lines to weep." But the Chinamen, whom the poet imagines as already seated in "the little half-way house", stare "on all the tragic scene" of civilization and its eternal flux, and in their stare they assume the artist's role, creating the Apollonian world of images which transcends the Dionysian realm of flux while still containing it. Hamlet and Lear may strut; but the tragic gaiety of the Chinamen is of a higher kind: "Their eyes, their ancient, glittering eyes, are gay."

Continued on Page 14

Tragic joy

Continued from Page 4

"Brownies need help"

Due to business increase, Brownies Steak House requires part-time waiters during term and summer.

Must be neat in appearance

Apply in person to:

CAPRI MOTOR HOTEL
1217 Princess St.

AMS Concerts

in conjunction with the Division of Concerts

presents:

McGill Chamber Orchestra

Alexander Broth, Conductor

March 28, Grant Hall

with Concert Card $1.00. General Admission $2.50. Tickets in John Orr Room or Division of Concerts

Dons for Women's Residence for 1973-74

Life within the residence community is an important aspect of university experience.

We welcome into residence women students and couples who want to share with younger students the benefit of their learning and maturing, who are interested in being a liaison with campus groups and services, and who are concerned that residences provide the best possible environment for intellectual, personal and social growth.

Persons appointed as dons will receive room and board for the academic year.

Applications are to be made at the Office of the Dean of Women, Victoria Hall.

CANADIAN GUEST LECTURE SERIES
NO. 3

EDGAR J. BENSON

PRES. CANADIAN TRANSPORT COMM

SPEAKING:

"BUSINESS AND POLITICS"

dunning hall
room 14

thursday,
march 15,
8:00 p.m.

We would like to thank all who helped at the Spring Boogie. It could never have gone as well as it did without the persons who helped, even a little

THANK-YOU

John Gray
Gord Stewart
John Sakson

newsbriefs

Benson coming to Queen's March 15

On Thursday, March 15, the Queen's Commerce Society is presenting Mr. E. J. Benson as the third in a series of guest lectures. Formerly the Federal Minister of Finance, Mr. Benson is currently President of the Canadian Transport Commission.

Mr. Benson will be speaking on "Business and Politics". Through this subject he will connect political decisions with business situations. The Canadian-US autopact may be brought into clearer focus when the economics of the contraversy is related to politics. The recent economic and political disturbance relating to the Michelin Tire Company will be another topic for discussion.

The atmosphere of the evening is intended to be informal, with the audience participating in lively discussion. Mr. Benson will be speaking in Dunning Hall, Room 14 at 8:00 P.M.

Director: research needs priorities

MONTREAL (CUPI) — University research must address itself to Canadian problems of fare outside control, the Executive Director of the Science Council of Canada said March 9.

P.D. McTaggart-Cowan said universities don't have the resources to work effectively in all areas and must prioritize their research efforts.

"This isn't a choice between pure or applied research," he said. "It is a myth to divide these up. Rather, it means you should look at specific problems of Canada."

McTaggart-Cowan, who was fired as president of Simon Fraser University in 1968, was speaking to academics at a conference on research policy held at Sir George Williams University.

"At the moment anyone can stand up anywhere in Canada and be rude about universities and draw applause", he said. "Universities are under attack by politicians and the public." If they don't respond, changes will be imposed on them "from outside."

Because governments give the universities millions in research funds, universities are in politics whether they want to be or not, "And in politics the image is as important as the fact," he said.

He pointed out that given the high cost of research, people have a right to expect the research community is taking into account the country's goals.

University departments should agree on areas to be stressed. But if their interests are antagonistic, they should resolve their conflicts within the university, rather than by applying to the government "for chunks of money for it, as we did in the '60's." "These disagreements have to be solved where the authority of knowledge is -- in the university".

Staff recruitment should follow the university's previously agreed-upon priorities. "Then there will be an inner logic developed in the university and you will be able to explain to the public that there is a logic and that you are relevant.

The Science Council, which McTaggart-Cowan heads, published a study last October which said the lack of research and development in Canada is caused by the high degree of foreign control over Canadian industry.

Office occupation ends at U of T

TORONTO (CUP) — Forty students Friday ended their occupation of University of Toronto's Mathematics Department Offices in order to broaden their fight for increased student say in departmental decision-making and the rehiring of three dismissed professors.

The former occupiers decided at a meeting March 10 to mobilize student support for a mass meeting confrontation with Math Chairman George Duuff, Arts and Science Dean Bob Green and University President John Evans.

Students contended that the 11 day occupation was becoming too time consuming to continue, and that little had been won in the form of concessions from the department.

Some informal gains were made, however. Some improvements in grading of first year Math courses were promised and a committee set up to examine problems in these large enrollment courses. Also the three dismissed teachers have been given indications that appeals for rehiring will be received more favourably than they might have been otherwise.

However, on the crucial demand of the significant student say in departmental decision-making, including hiring, firing, and tenure decisions, nothing was won. Another committee was set up to look into the department's governing structures, but nobody has been named to it yet.

SHARE is coming

Speaker of Outer Council Required

apply in writing to Paul Greenwood, c-o AMS Office.

ADSC

First class one-way flights from Toronto to London $79. Toronto-London round-trip from $155.

A special discount of $10 is available to students booking round-trip flights 90 days prior to flight departure - so book early.

Information is also available on Icelandic Airlines, camping trips, jobs in Europe, student-rail passes and Eurailpass, students flights within Europe, International student cards.

Contact ADSC:
44 St. George St.,

44 St. George St.,

Toronto 5, Ontario
Tel. (416) 962-8404
or your student union for more information

osmoker

QUEEN'S BIOLOGY SOCIETY
QUEEN'S GRAD HOUSE
157 KING ST. EAST
WED., MARCH 14TH, 8:00 p.m.
beer 3/$1. - hardstuff 2 tickets
members free - others .25¢
everyone welcome

BEER & BINGO
Presented by Commerce
Grand Prize
- 1953 Plymouth
value $200.00
PRIZES, PRIZES
10 speed Bike 40 Ounces
$25 - $50 Gift Certificates
LEONARD HALL, FRI., MARCH 16 8 p.m.

Principal's Status of Women Committee open meeting
Friday, march 16th 3:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m.
2nd floor common room Student's memorial union
Come and meet the committee, find out what it has been doing, voice your ideas, complaints, etc.....all welcome!

I.L. Horowitz

Trend is toward multinational corporations

by Sue Wishart

"Communism, Capitalism and Multinationalism" was the title of a paper presented by Professor I. L. Horowitz of Rutgers University on Tuesday night. In his lecture, which was sponsored by the Sociology department, Horowitz examined the effect multinational corporations have had on communism and capitalism.

At the beginning of the lecture, Horowitz asked not to be introduced, because any biographical information would give away his generic background, and "people wouldn't want that".

As Horowitz sees it, "the emergence of multinational corporations is the paramount trend in the present era", so its effect on the world's two ficiency, multinational corporations need the fusion of dominant ideologies is too important to be ignored.

Multinationalism is not a new phenomenon. The gradual fusion of more and more industrial firms into one conglomerate, however, tipped the balance from a national to an international level of corporate participation. The aspect of multinationalism which is new is not just its transcendence of nationalism but a reduction in profits (to the home office) for finished manufactured goods. Although dollar profits may rise, percentage profits fall. Even so, the enormous economic leverage of multinational corporations gives them a potent, though diffuse, political power.

According to Horowitz, multinational corporations are a key factor in what he called "the buying of western capitalism by eastern socialism." These capitalist-oriented corporations have expanded into eastern European socialists countries to meet booming demand for consumer products. Multinationalism "has stymied the socialist outcome and at the same time it has improved the consumer situation of people living within the socialist nations." In a similar way, the western capitalist corporations are dependent on the eastern socialists, mostly for technological developments.

The increased economic interdependence, said Horowitz, has obvious ideological implications. For maximum efcapitalism and socialism into a single social science network. Horowitz recognized that this is not practically possible, but suggested that at least a parralelism of ideologies is developing.

It is at this point that the political power of multinational corporations is exercised. Economic cooperation born of necessity has made political cooperation between East and West a reality. In fact, claimed Horowitz, the breakdown of the cold war can be directly attributed to the action of the multinational corporations.

Horowitz concluded that in the future the development of multinationalism will serve both to avert conflicts between the superpowers and to keep the countries of the third world in a subordinate position at least until the end of the century.

No tax receipts yet for withholders

Students who withheld their fees until after Jan. 30, will have to continue to wait for their tax receipts according to Ken Brodie of the University Accounting Office. He was unable to give an exact date when they would be available. Those who paid before the above deadline, have already received their receipts.

Brodie explained that the reason for the delay concerns the computer which runs through once a month. He and his assistant are trying to arrange a special early run in order to get the receipts out as soon as possible.

Meanwhile, confusion concerning educational deduction as outlined in the 72 Income Tax Return guide, has been created among students who have been informed by the District Taxation Office that the new exemption program has not been officially approved by the government.

Finance Minister John Turner introduced the exemption allowing students to claim $50 for each month of full-time attendance, up to a maximum of $400. The bill, which failed to pass in May, is expected to pass in the immediate future.

Students are advised by Fred Patterson to fill out their forms as if the education deduction was legal.

Students may also apply for a tax reduction under the province's new property tax credit plan. Students 21 and over are eligible to apply for the tax credit whether or not they live at home. Students under 21 are eligible for the period that they live away from home.

Any student living in residence can claim $25 occupancy cost for the year. Additionally, rent paid during the year for an off-campus residence can be calculated towards the tax credit.

Two or more unmarried people renting or owning the same residence have two choices: the principal taxpayer can claim the entire credit, or each one can claim themself as a principal taxpayer, and they can divide the tax bill or rent. Each person should show the combined claim and list the names of the other payers on the reverse side of the mauve claim form.

The formula for calculating the 72 Ontario Property Tax Credit is as follows:

$90, plus 10 percent of 1972 occupancy cost, minus one percent of taxable 1972 income (maximum credit $250)

Renters: occupancy cost is 20 per cent of the amount of rent paid in 1972.

Students in residence may claim only the flat $25 credit; their residence fees may not be considered as an occupancy cost.

Students who left Canada, or foreign students who came to Canada, or students in Canada having to change residence in order to take a job, or attend full-time courses at a post-secondary institution may claim moving expenses against the award income which has been reported on their income tax returns.

LITTLE BIG MAN

DUSTIN HOFFMAN ET AL

THURS. 7:00 and 9:30

MARCH 15: DUNNING AUD.

ADMISSION $1.00

—CINEGUILD—

Heidelberg

Brewed from pure spring water.

And that's the truth!

Speakers avoid confrontation

Friday Strike Symposium disappointing

by Bob Mutrie

The Friday night Strike Symposium, sponsored by the Law Society, and the Kingston Tercentenary Committee, featured a fiery film of labour hitting out at management, but the speakers which followed refused to become ruffled and failed to live up to their controversial image.

William Dodge, treasurer of the Canadian Labour Congress was present on the panel which followed the film showing of a highly emotion charged strike by the employees of a small town factory and included chaotic union meetings, a slick union boss, a workers' riot, an unintended death, and a hint of destroyed ballots.

Dodge, looking slightly embarrassed, started by saying that the CLC had protested the film to its CBC originators, adding that it "had about as much application to collective bargaining in this country as the Godfather has to the practice of law in Kingston." He noted that it was a throwback to the Hal Bankes and the Seafarers' International Union era, stressing that the CLC is nothing like that and that this period has been left behind.

Dodge proceeded to ignore the question of morality in collective bargaining which he had been invited to discuss in favour of a dry dissertation on how worker demands are formulated and how they come to the bargaining table.

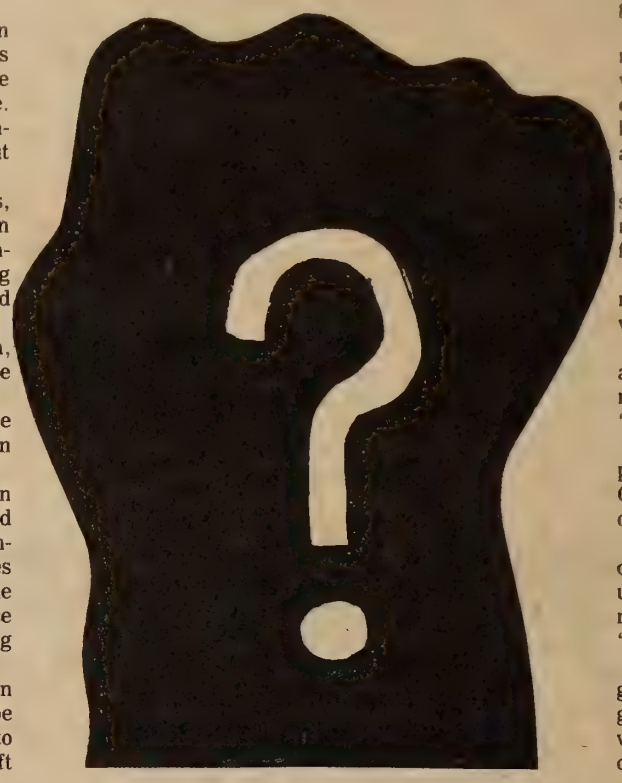
At one point, he did note, however, that there is concealing of facts on both sides of the bargaining table but wrote it off as a fact of our existence."

Tom Storey of the management law firm, Hicks, Morley, Hamilton and Storey started his speech with an outright refusal to discuss his topic, problems of the individual employee with relation to the union, announcing that he didn't think Dodge answered his question and adding "so why should I."

Storey, who sat beside Dodge in the showing of the film, noted that his experience with the CLC treasurer was like "taking one's mother to watch the very last tango."

Despite his earlier remarks, Storey did manage to give some very real examples of the problems a union has in reconciling various membership demands.

He noted the conflicts which have been developing in forming a policy for a local where there are both older and younger members, the former looking for more non-monetary and fringe benefits while the latter desires more direct monetary payments. He also pointed out the split along incentive and hourly payment lines where there are too completely different needs and working conditions.



However, Storey failed to come to any conclusions on the problem or suggest any improvements that could be made to deal with this problem. Instead, he went on to discuss the morality of union negotiations problems, left unanswered by Dodge.

He accused the union bargaining table negotiators of playing politics at the bargaining table, insisting that many of the demands put forward in the name of the workers were there because of the self-interest of those on the negotiating committee and some are even favours owed to a small number of people.

He criticised both union and management for lack of intelligent preparation "with respect to realistic goals" before going to the bargaining table. Storey also pointed out that management is not given enough chance to communicate to employees their position while the union is engaging in weekly or even daily meetings to discuss their side.

Storey called for more flexibility in the pre-bargaining positions of the two sides so that an early solution might be reached before the flexibility is totally lost.

It seemed to be a night for mismatching speakers and topics as union law firm representative Ian Scott of Cameron, Brewin and Scott, began his speach with a blatant "I am not interested in the question" which was put to him by the organizers. Instead of discussing minority rights in the union, Scott embarked on an academic oration of the strengths and weaknesses of "tiered democracy" as it applies to the union.

He started out on topic, noting that the unions must "confront the problems of dissident members if they are to remain true to their tradition," but immediately lapsed into discussion of his pet theories of democracy, questioning whether this was the right system for the union to be following but without reaching any conclusions.

Bob Abbott, Industrial Relations manager for Ontario Hydro, the last to speak, proved to be the most informative of any of the panel.

He appeared pleased by the film, noting that labour was made to look the "bad guys," while management "looked good," but noted that in the end "we closed the plant."

Abbott lamented the fact that unions feel that management has no right to communicate with the workers during a strike and that this has resulted in a fear of union reaction to any such moves, a factor which has been consciously building barriers between employers and employees.

However, he conceeded that the fault has been on both sides due to the paternalistic attitude taken by so many managements who feel that they alone know what is best for their employees.

Abbott insisted, however, that management has the right and the obligation just as the unions to communicate with its employees.

In the question and answer period which followed, the audience made an attempt to arouse the panel out of their reverie, one spectator even telling the panel outright to "stop beating around the bush," but all to no avail.

Prompted by a question from the audience the panel proceeded to have a friendly discussion of Section 60 of the Ontario Labour Relations act which places an obligation of fairness on unions in considering employee demands.

Scott emphatically noted that in spite of the fact that only three cases out of sixty have been decided against the union in favour of the employee, under the Act, the Act is not being circumvented. "The union," he claimed, "cannot avoid compliance with the act."

Dodge agreed, noting that "unions do not reject grievances in a frivolous way," and added that many grievances do not stand up at the bargaining table and would result in the union being "in danger of losing credibility with arbitrators."

Saturday session: The right to strike

by Pat Wanless

"Lessons we can learn from public sector labour disputes" was the central theme of the strike symposium session Saturday morning, opened by the chairman, Donald Wood of the Queen's Industrial Relations Centre, with a brief background of Canadian Industrial Relations.

"The number of civil servants has doubled in the post-war period," he commented, stressing the growing importance of the public sector labour force. He added that those in related services have more than quadrupled in the same time.

The introduction of federal legislation in 1967, granting full bargaining rights to federal civil servants set the precedence that most of the provinces have followed. Ontario is a partial exception to this, since employees do not have the same right to strike that federal workers have. Wood pointed out that the public is now much more involved in bargaining in the service sector because of the repercussions it feels. The question is if this degree of inconvenience is enough to warrant limiting the right to strike.

Peter Riggin, Vice-President Corporate Relations of Noranda Mines Ltd., was of the opinion that it was a "policy mistake" to have ever granted public employees the right to strike. The public has not become strike hardened, and the inconveniences of such strikes are succeeding only in turning public opinion against them. The public service is not a business organized for profit, but (usually) a monopoly, and therefore not subject to market trends. A strike in this case would only be used to "extract concessions from the public" at the expense of less organized groups, which, Riggin feels, should not be used.

At present, federal public servants are settling with arbitration only because this method is working as well for them as strikes are for their colleagues in the private sector. When it fails, however, Riggin believes that they too, will resort to strikes, if the option is open to them.

One of the major problems in discussing who should have the right to strike is the definition of essential services. According to Riggin, all tax-supported services should fall under this classification, and thus should not be granted the right to strike.

The next speaker, Director of Staff Relations, Federal Treasury Board, Russell Stewart, insisted that the strike weapon is not a failure, but a success, even if all unions do not choose to use it. The public, as the third party, is the most inconvenienced by, and often the real target of such action, however, and therefore a discussion of alternatives is needed.

Stewart did not feel that the right to strike would be indulged in just because it existed, nor did he feel that those strikes that have occurred in any way jeopardized over the table bargaining.

He noted that several ways of avoiding strikes included better labour relations, of which removal of the right to strike is NOT a good example, arbitration, and comparability. This last action, by which public servants are guaranteed what their equivalents in the private labour force have gained, is one of many that are making strikes less attractive, and perhaps even unnecessary in the federal public service.

Dr. Mario Hikl, Director of Legislation for C.U.P.E., supported international, rather the national trade unions. He defined collective bargaining as "a tool of social justice based on three freedoms; freedom to form a union, freedom to bargain collectively, and freedom to enforce collectively, and freedom to enforce collective bargaining if necessary for economic sanctions." He felt the first was available in Canada, but the second and third were lacking. The limitations on bargaining in most provinces leave the public employees with, in fact, only the right to collective negotiation, and much of the bargaining that is concluded takes so much time that it cannot be called successful. He insisted that "delayed justice is denied justice," and the results of collective bargaining warrant the need for the right to strike.

Claude Edwards, the final speaker, and President of the Public Service Alliance, voiced unequivocal support of the right to strike for public service employees, but also stated that modification of the right in some essential areas was acceptable.

He didn't believe that the right would be abused, just because it was there, for the employees would choose between strike and arbitration, and if unsuccessful, could then reverse the decision. He pointed out that outlawing strikes would not prevent them, and that a system supporting the orderly use of strikes would be superior to one denying the right.

Edwards mentioned that many sectors do not have "strike muscle" in any case, and so a strike on their part would have no impact on the public. Referring to over the table bargaining, he acknowledged the need for many more skilled mediators, and for an expansion of the areas open for negotiation, if this method of settlement is to be successful in the future.

Saturday symposium looks at strikes

by Kathy McDonald

Professor Gordon Simmons of Queen's Law School, acting as chairman, introduced the afternoon session of the Strike Symposium which discussed the future of dispute resolutions. Labour-management problems have increasingly been receiving considerable attention in the past five years, and Simmons expressed the hope that some of the following questions would be answered: "What is the future of strikes?"; "Have they gone wrong in the past?"; "What will future trends bring?"; and "Will a crisis situation arise?" The speakers attempted to develop these questions but nothing definite was resolved and the future of the strike vs. arbitration question is still debatable.

The first speaker of the afternoon session, Dr. Saul Frankel, a member of the Public Services Staff Relations Board in Ottawa, spoke on the trends of interest disputes in the public service.

Dr. Frankel, representing the interests of employees, explained that the federal government and several provinces (excepting Ontario and Saskatchewan) leave it to the parties involved to choose which method of negotiating they want to use. Before the bargaining begins, the union must decide which route it wants to take: that of settling the dispute by arbitration; or by using a consilliatory board, which may lead to a strike.

If the concilliatory route is chosen, a provision is made for the employer to have some say in the activities that have to do with the safety of the public. Rarely do the employer and employee agree on the people designated to remain on the job in the interest of public safety, which does not simply mean that business will go on as usual.

Mr. Rollie Scott of the Ontario Treasury Board, Senior Staff Relations, spoke on the future trends in compulsory arbitration.

Scott admitted having a bias in favor of binding arbitration as being much more acceptable than a strike.He said that strike routes are not acceptable for public services, and that, although, there should be no such thing as the employee's "right to strike", the employee does have the right to expect favorable treatment. This can be achieved through arbitration.

Scott claimed that arbitration has been successful in the ten years it has been practiced in Ontario government jobs. Both parties (union and management) can discuss situations, wages and benefits and have been just as competitive as in other provinces. There have been tense moments, such as the takeover of the Don Jail (Toronto), but most unions have been content to let their disputes be solved by arbitrators.

Scott said, some labour leaders (i.e. Claude Edwards) have admitted that strike action is not the best method of solving problems. There has to be a better way. Manitoba employees for example, are opposing the government who wants to give them the right to strike.

Scott's purpose was to speak on the future trends of arbitration. He felt that the changing attitudes of various union leaders was the first and foremost trend in favour of arbitration. As more and more leaders begin to think that it is not a disgrace to favour arbitration over strikes, arbitration will become more acceptable. He does not say that arbitration is the perfect solution; it is just that strikes are becoming less and less acceptable.

Secondly, with arbitration, the employer will probably open matters up for discussion that previously had been "for management only." These matters will not necessarily be brought up for negotiation but they will be discussed.

Thirdly, the use of a core group of arbitrators will probably be more widely incorporated. This is already being done in Ontario. The Ontario Arbitrary Commission is headed by Judge Little. The use of a core group means that similar decisions will be made for similar situations.

Scott felt both parties would be more willing than ever to make arbitration work. They would be more open to new ideas and new experiments to improve the system. The arbitrator is employed to make the procedure official. However, he and the other board members are expected to be totally unbiased.

Eventually Scott believes that even the most hardened opponents will give in. They will end the phrase that says "Only God is capable of being an efficient arbitrator, and He isn't available." Scott believes arbitration can, and does work.

Mr. Martin Levinson, of Levinson, Sask., and Dunn, spoke on the usefulness of strikes as an effective negotiating tool in the future of dispute resolution.

His position was that strikes have not been a failure from the social point of view, and that it is best for the employees to have this right to strike.

The alternative to the right to strike is compulsory arbitration. He agrees with arbitration as it is on the federal level, but not from the Ontario Government's position.

Levinson claimed that although one half day per year was lost by each industrial workder due to strike action (Rand Commission - table 5; 1965), this did not create social chaos. He felt the half day lost was a very small price to pay for democratic freedom for the working segment of society. Lawyers raise their fees; landlords raise their rents, and the only comeback the worker has is to strike.

Economic reasons are not the only purposes for strikes. For example, the 1969 Inco strike, lasting six months, would not have been settled even if twice as much money was offered. Emotions are involved; the workers were frustrated by the work in the mines and their employer's arrogance. The strike acted as a safety valve to let off steam. Because production line jobs are so monotonous and impersonal, strike gives the worker a psychological feeling of manhood, (power or control).

Levinson agreed that compulsory arbitration was another alternative; however, he brought up some disadvantages to the arbitrary system, esp. as it is in Australia. The man hours lost through illegal strikes there were greater than those lost through negotiations in the consilliatory board. The labourors should not have to explain why they want four dollars an hour, when the company does not have to justify its reasons for making millions of dollars.

Levinson said that most people cannot decide what is fair and what is not fair for both sides without some uniform method of measuring fairness. He finished by saying that compulsory arbitration is a denial of freedom to the worker, and that the strike has basically worked.

The final speaker, Mr. Gordon Donnally, is the Vice-President of Personnel for Alcan Fabricating. He commented on the difficulties with various present systems of dispute settlement in private industry from the employer's point of view.

His own experience has been with fairly orderly and well-organized labour debates. He has not directly been involved with any major difficulties.

Donnally outlined the steps which lead up to strikes. The union attempts to recruit members and because the employer is usually reluctant to see this happen, the atmosphere becomes tense with charges and counter-charges. Although there may be unrest or wild-cat strikes, legal strikes seldom occur during this certification stage.

What is workable on one side is not necessarily acceptable on the other. Once the union has been certified, relations may be strained (i.e. "no one can push us around now"). A slow down or wild cat strike may occur as a pressure tactic.

Donnally assumed that negotiations were either about change or renewal. If an agreement is not reached, a new round of bargaining may begin, and if either side refused to budge, a strike may take place.

If an agreement is reached, difficulties may arise involving interpretation and application of the agreement. There is a definite distinction between the policy makers and the administrators.

The press tends to give picketers scant support. Donnally claimed that not all employers wish to continue operations if their workers go on strike, but those who do want to, have the right to continue working.

He felt a strike offered two basic positive aspects that other alternatives don't have. With strike threat, both sides have a deadline to meet, and a condition is set up in which both sides work hard to come to an agreement because a strike is often undesired by both sides.

Variations to binding arbitration are possible. For example, the FOS encourages both parties to reach an agreement. No compromise is reached, but one side is chosen totally over the other. Therefore both sides put in offers that will be acceptable because they may have to put up with the other's ideas. Donnally said it was an imaginative approach but he would hesitate to try it. Donnally concluded with the idea that arbitration of some kind seems to be the approach used the most, and looked at more often when disputes arise.

if you have tried everything and everything has failed
TRY JESUS
stirling 'C', wed., march 14th, thurs., march 15th, 7:30 p.m.

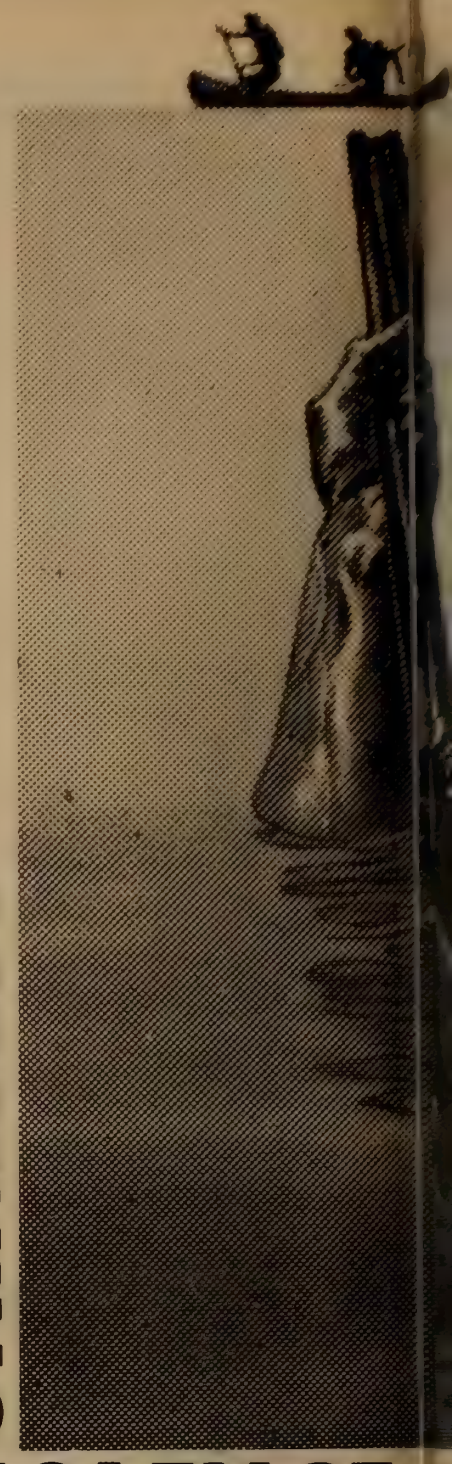
nursing science presents:
back rub day
march 16th polson room, union
12 noon to 8 p.m. .50¢ per backrub

People Wanted for:
Union Program Committee
University Centre Users Com.
Asst. Pub Managers
(Summer & Winter)
Apply to Wil Kranenburg
AMS Office



Queen's Journal
Vol. 100, No. 45
Tues., Mar. 13, 1973
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ontario

Editor: Jennifer Grass
Business: Charles Schwier
Management: John Solman
Arts: Sandy Naiman
Features: Pat Devitt, Steven Winnett
Passepartout: Bob Wood
News: Susan de Stein
Events: Alison Dandie
Sports: Chris Boon, Nada Bogdanovic
National Desk: Bob Mutrie, Sue Wishart
Photography: Peter Boag

We had the last of the suma opus tonite which will now be forgotten . . . the caucus personcotted but we got along without them (even though we did want them, but they thought we were being nasty) . . . Watts and Boon came round but have decided to hang up their jocks for the season . . . Sandy was back on the day shift . . . Woodie and Bob ran the show . . . Mung and Lee and Bogus did the fotos . . . Heather and Anne typed their fingers off on some mind-rotting material . . . Pat and early bird Steve worked on essays . . . Kathy and Pat, newest members of the zoo, stayed longer than many . . . Helen looked after the mess for a while . . . and Korn is yelling, "don't forget me!"

Published twice weekly on Tuesdays and Fridays by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc., Member, Canadian University Press. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society of the University. Offices are located in the Student's Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

SCREENING VIOLENCE

by George Kaufman

The discussion (problem? question?) of violence in film is dangerously close now to becoming a cliche—which is to say, a crashing bore—but this will be my first and hopefully last extended outburst on the subject, and is both directly and indirectly prompted at this time by Paul Stuewe's article in last week's Chevron ("Offing the Audience").

Just such an article has been running around in my head for some time now, but I decided to wait for his to see if mine was even necessary. And, to possibly incorporate some of his ideas into my viewpoint, being something of an intellectual amoeba.

Unfortunately, although I found much of interest and much to be seriously discussed in Paul's finished article, I was disappointed to discover that very little of what he wrote had anything to do with "film violence". He did not seem to define—or try, informally, to set certain standards—what he means by "the gratuitous and excessive character of violence" in recent films, once having introduced the phrase into his essay. "Excessive", I fear, is a word which demands parameters and cannot be left to a presumed concensus of opinion. "Excessive film violence" means no more than does "pornography" unless it is accompanied by an attempt at fixing it in an understandable context. This attempt, in fact, is the one major statement I wish to incorporate into this evaluation, and the one sticky point which has kept me from putting these thoughts into form until now; the problem of definition still makes me somewhat uneasy about being understood.

(Admittedly, at first glance we seem to be caught up, as far as definition goes, on an almost classically liberal escalator of permissiveness and personal freedom, but this is a discussion of personal views and consumer choice, not of law-making and "protection of society from itself"—and, ultimately, we will be concerned here with the quality of violence rather than quantity.)

About as far as Paul gets in drawing a line at "excessive violence" is to name a few films which have upset him in this regard personally, and that is probably as good a starting point as any. The Godfather, A Clockwork Orange, Straw Dogs and Dirty Harry upset me, too; but if physical violence was what put you off these films, I think you missed the real impact of their message.

"Violence", as we all know in these days of enlightened mass awareness of psychology, can take on many forms, and the physical violence presented in the above-mentioned films were, to me, certainly secondary to the "mental violence" aimed at the audiences. At some I wanted to vomit, but mostly simply to walk out and demand my money back. These movies, plus The Getaway, The New Centurians, The French Connection and others of recent vintage have put me off or angered me, not for their portrayal of physical violence, but for their mindless and uncritical reinforcement of society's roles, their intellectual and literary banality and often—as with Clockwork Orange—simply for their lack of sufficient technical competence to interest me for the hour-plus. Perhaps some of these require individual comment about content to demonstrate the roots of my objections, before stating the objections themselves.

The Godfather, for instance, turned into—after only 15 minutes—simply a series of exhibitions on how to kill people. Soon, I was not interested in the characters, the plot, the acting...only guessing who would be done away with next and what glorious new way the mafiosi would uncover to carry out the murder. Even if you were able to brush aside this distraction and pay attention to the characters, what was presented? Two rival gangs of killers and exploiters, killing each other off for the right to get the biggest cut off the dope, gambling, prostitution, show business and various other ventures they were involved in. Except that that was not the way they were presented at all. What you saw was a script dwelling almost lovingly on a "good" gang of killers, and a "bad" gang came on screen occassionally to supplement the sense of competition. The camera took us inside the one family and we suffered with them the trials of big-time crime through the murders, death and "persecutions." We got to know them; many viewers were even brought to like them. Since the other gang was just a bunch of faces behind guns, what was there to like about them? So we were "told" (cinematically) to like the only people presented in any depth, however shallow. I was appalled when many people I saw the show with and talked with later actually felt sorry when Sonny got machine-gunned by "the others" at the end. They had been manipulated into identifying and empathizing with this gunman because the presentation had been so one-sided, and we all know a movie-goer will pick someone to identify with or lose interest, and The Godfather was too cleverly and slickly produced to lose most people's interest. And the presentation of women in The Godfather: Either mindless receptacles for a penis and a raiser of children or passive, accepting ornaments with shoulders on which to cry between he-man gun battles.

Straw Dogs at least started off with an acceptable enough premise: pacifistic professor-type and wife try to get away from it all in the smotheringly-closed-in society of a small English village. Fine. Except that the wife turns out to be a flirtatious nymphomaniac who has had an affair before with the village's most menacing young workman. And then the whole village (men only, since that's all we see) turns into a gang of murderous idiots and the wife gets willingly raped and the husband finally unpacifistically kills a handful of the idiots in order to protect his house (a man must choose a place to make a stand). The view of men is that they are aggressive and possessive by nature—even the ones who try to hide it or repress it, like the professor—and the view of women is that they are constant prey to their overpowering sexual needs and give themselves (sexually and loyally) in the end to the man who will fight hardest for them.

Director Sam Peckinpah—who classifies females as either "women" or "pussies"—has denied the universality of Straw Dog's characters in several interviews, but the Peckinpah stamp on a movie has become easily recognizable and almost undeniably representative of the stereotypes of Straw Dogs. Take his most recent "adventure", The Getaway. Other than the fact that it is badly made and poorly paced—in a word, boring—the film presents Steve McQueen as a man who loses his sense of manhood when he learns his wife has had sex with another man in order to get him out of prison; not only that, but the "other man" has—as she put it—"gotten to her" in some cryptic, dark, sexual way. In the same picture, the (previously content?) wife of a vetrinarian immediately becomes the willing sexual plaything of a sadistic gunman when he abducts the couple and eventually drives the vet—who has, natch, lost all sense of worth upon losing the sexual loyalty of his wife—to suicide. It would be hard for even Peckinpath to deny the message of the simple-minded wife lingeringly fondling the villain's upraised phallic gunbarrel in unmistakeable masturbatory fashion. Again the statement is there: men are for dominating and fighting, women are for fighting over and fucking.

In Dirty Harry, as I said a year ago while reviewing it, the "criminal" was presented as a slavering sadist, a craven coward of a sex maniac and he dressed funny. The herioc policeman, on the other long hand of the law, was beset by liberal legal restrictions and effete permissive politicians. The only women were peripheral, but again : a prostitute, a murdered nude girl and a passive policeman's wife whose weight on the cop finally drove him to denounce his manly job and, by inference, his manhood. He was "going back into law", which from the cop's point of view is going from the side of the law to the side of crime.

French Connection, basically the same story. The only female in this movie was a promiscuous girl with whom the cop spends one night before discarding her and going back "to the job", which has no place for women.

If this has not formed into some kind of identifiable and almost conspiratorial pattern by now, try tuning in some of the TV cop shows some night; they are, if anything, even more explicit in their portrayal of men and women, crime and society. In the only episode of Streets of San Fransisco I have seen the other night, the story centered on a young woman who had gone to police college and wanted, of course, to work alongside the men in the apprehending-dangerous-criminals work. Now, all thoughts of the desirability of female cops over male cops aside, the issue to be resolved in this episode was clear: either she would make it and prove herself, of she would learn once and all the superiority of men. Of course, in our present Nor American liberal atmosphere, I was sure the outcor would not be as clear-cut as the situation seemed. Sadl was right. After a vicious sadist had raped and killed t girl's roomate—also a woman cop—she wanted natura to be a part of the hunt for the killer. The wise, old head c said no—you know how emotional women can get abc these things—and she kept disobeying orders and messi things up trying to get him anyway (women aren't disciplined as men, and are ruled by emotion, not me tality). In the end scene, the murderer returns to her roc while the men cops are out looking for him and confror her. She is a cop trained in karate and othe skills, but fa apart and screams when she sees him (have you ever se a male cop in film or on TV scream when confronted wi his quarry?). He knocks her around, karate eviden forgotten in the emotion of the moment, and the killer finally shot from outside a window by a male cop who h returned to the scene to rescue the woman.

Without letting this become a one-issue essay on m and female role-playing, I simply want to make it cle through these examples that it is this form of med violence, carried over in popular, classical and rock mus art and books, which disturbs and worries me much mo than the realistic and even "excessive" portrayal physical violence.

That being said, I will try to return to the topic physical violence which I left off at the front of t piece. I believe, first of all, that there is an ir portant difference between 'fantasy" or "illusory" violen and "ficitve"or "non-fictive" violence. I will try to defi these terms as I see and use them.

"Fictive" and "non-fictive" violence is that which occu or has occured in either a general or a particularized context, such as gunfights, sword duels, wars of ancient or modern type, murder, rape, etc. These appear in our newspapers and on our TV sets and around us everyday and, while generally over-dramatized by the media, are not creations of it. An example of "non-fictive" violence would be a pseudo-documentary of a real event, like In Cold Blood or Gunfight at the O.K. Corral. "Fictive" violence would be films like Straw Dogs or Clockwork Orange. These types are films which emulate, or even project beyond its present scope, the violence of the society; emulating it, they are also liable to be emulated in turn by those who see it, and are turned on by it (Bremer being macho sexually turned on by Clockwork Orange before running Nixon and finally settling for Wallace; his own real-life experience with "the old ultra-violence").

"Fantasy" or "illusory" violence, on the other hand, portrays ("projects, in the best sense of the word) types of violence which come from the folk-tales, fantansies or violence-repressive stories and themes of society, such as werewolves, vampires, witches, invasions from Mars and horrible mutant creatures. These stories rarely emulate any form of real violence around us and, hence, do not have themselves so open to emulation. It is an enjoyed and shared illusion through which one can absorb and repress; or, as Paul's article quoted someone, "It made me feel." But to break this statement down into a simplisitc two-sided categorization of "those who are turned on by violence" and "those who are upset by it" is both unfair and shallow. Speaking personally, I am "turned on" in a semi-sexual way by some forms of "fantasy" violence, but extremely upset by either real violence or most portrayals of real violence, especially war films. So which category shall I condemn myself to? Obviously, the question is much deeper than the treatment Paul gave it.

To make my point here clearer perhaps than I need, a heritage of overwhelmingly approving and patriotic war films provided an almost-perfect atmosphere for which men growing up in the United States between 1940 and 1965 were prepared to go to Vietnam and carry out there all the atrocities and "normal" carnages of war. There were, of course, wars before there were war films, but my point here is that patriotic films took the place, during that period of American history, of folk tales and heroic stories which had before been passed on to young men by spoken or written word; these films were an extension of that reinforcement agency of society and gave those men something to emulate, even often be proud of. The same can be said of Westerns. They serve, with only the handfull of recent exceptions Pail noted, to reinforce the "rugged he-man individual-frontier" mentality and the male macho image which America still tries desperately to hold dear. While few men it is true, are tempted to strap on their guns and shoot it out, it is the portrayal of frontier justice, which is nearly the anithesis of modern liberal interpretations of social and legal justice, which emerges as the lasting and cumulative effect of these sagas. Matt Dillon is the perfect attorney-general for the U.S.: cold, dedicated unmovingly (and unmoved) to the Law, he places the unbending execution of the Law above any human or humane considerations; it is the Law which must be preserved, not the human beings caught up in it.

Seen in this light, Straw Dogs is almost the perfect Western updated. The hero, deserted by "civilization" during his hour of crisis, ostensibly does not wish to use his guns (he has "hung them up", dislikes bloodshed, etc.) but in the end is "forced" to—because of an arbitrary tolerance line he has drawn (protection of his house, the citizens, Law, etc.)—and when he does kill, it is completely "justified"; the killings are seen, in retrospect, as "inevitable" and now, under Peckinpah, even as enjoyable—a necessary release.

"Fantasy" violence—and here I should add that I include the highly sensual sense of fear which many so-called terror movies employ instead of actual blood-and-guts violence—conversely gives the viewer-reader-listener no role to emulate, no heritage to uphold, no background of which to have great pride; the person or persons you identify with in order to experience the "fright" have no carry-over outside the walls of the theatre. It is ephemeral, non-particularized, too difficult to bring down to the level of our own lives and, on top of that, too much fun. If a quote-horror-unquote movie is done badly or is too much of a cliche, I laugh through it; indeed many are done with just this purpose in mind... they are intended to be paradies of the genre. If a war movie or western is done badly I do not laugh, and neither do those who take them to heart.

And so my conclusion, I think, is this—talk of "excessive" violence in films is a red herring; is, in fact, totally undefinable and misleading, like "redeeming social value" in the arguement over literature. It draws you away from the real issues, the "gut" questions, the aspects which we must live with, day by day.

The graphic portrayal of physical violence was paramount to films like Catch-22, Deliverance or The Wild Bunch. It was central to the film's—and book's—theme and without it the power of the movie would have been lost. But that is a moot point: it is my personal evaluation, it is telling you where my "squeemishness line" is drawn. It is important only after a first consideration is applied: what type of violence was portrayed and how was it presented (approval or disapproval). The gore in Catch-22 sickened Yossarian, and it sickened me and it should have shocked and sickened everyone who saw it; that was its purpose. It was not meant to make a hero or martyr of the man who was killed, but to show him as a victim, in the full and absurd sense of the Catch-22 mentality. Was it "excess" to show the kid's guts hanging out? The question is unanswerable. But ask this question: What was the intent of the film, how did it portray people? Or, perhaps better, what sort of people did it give us to portray? Those are questions that can, and should, be answered before questions of technical skill in presenting death and dismemberment are argued. Catch-22 presents a view which runs counter to the prevailing patriotic and military heritage in North America and the Western World; The Green Berets is just another attempt to present that heritage. The question of which, or even whether both, presents, "excessive" violence in its physical form does not interest me. Enough.

Now, having come to that, there is still—as Paul stated—the question of alternatives. The first, of course, is critics. This is admittedly a weak alternative, but one worth mentioning. After comparing a few reviews to the movies, you can draw some definite conclusions as to which critics you can trust as far as fairly articulating the thrust of the film, and which cannot or do not. I have seen enough previews and read enough reviews by people I trust and respect to avoid The Green Berets and even comment on it without having seen it. I knew I did not want to pay the people who made it, nor subject myself to the forms of violence and role-portrayal it presented. While that particular decision was fairly straight-forward, I must confess that other movies present less precise distinctions. I still don't know, for instance, whether I should have avoided Patton as I did, since some reviewers indicated it approvingly portrayed the general and others saw it as having an almost anti-war tenor. But, I stayed away from it.

There are other, and probably better, forms of action. Walk out, demand your money back. There are few movies I have felt that strongly about, but the alternative exists; even if you don't get a refund, the manager is aware of your objection and you have removed yourself from an unpleasant situation. Write letters to editors, talk to your friends. When you disapprove of a popular movie, ask your friends why they enjoyed it. Perhaps they honestly haven't thought it out; at any rate, it is better to talk it out than just nod and say, "Well, I didn't like it."

And, I believe, some of Paul's remarks about "making our own" (music, art, films, etc.) apply alternatives. But they are weak and fairly unrealistic alternatives at this point. In the first place, until you are working at it full time, few of us can manage financially or time-wise, to produce any form of art but the most basic, the most amateur and so, the least appealing and powerful. This is not "mystifying" the process of making films, music, etc.; it is recognizing the realities of the hard work, time and experience demanded in doing them in ways that contain potential to affect people's lives in ways other than making them laugh at incompetence.

In the end, I suppose, it comes right down to you; your judgement, your choice of critics and friends to trust, your own method. I don't mean that facetiously, because I take the subject very seriously, or I wouldn't have bothered to write this piece at all. This article was not really meant as a presentation of cures, but my ideas of the "definitions" of the problem. Perhaps from there, we can have some discussion, in the pages of this paper, of the "solutions."

Stuewe replies

While my article did not spend much time in dealing strictly with film violence, this was because I got into some things which seemed both more interesting and more important. George's response does much to fill the gaps, although some of his remarks call for specific clarifications and/or rebuttals, namely:

1. "Gratuitous and excessive" was defined, in a preceding paragraph, in terms of being contextually unjustified—i.e. as being excessive in relation to the internal logic of the film. George does provide a much more detailed explication of this, although his comments here do not seem to invalidate anything in "Offing the Audience."

2. The effects of "mental violence" were dealt with at some length, particularly in the 7 paragraphs following the one which begins with "Indict a society." Again, George provides a more detailed explication with regard to certain films.

3. George's attempted distinction between "Fictive and non-fictive" and "fantasy" violence strikes me as an intellectualization which does not relate to the cumulative experience of the film-going public, particularly children.

4. To 'fixate' on excessive violence is indeed a "red herring," but I frankly cannot comprehend how anyone could miss the articles' attempt to connect excessive violence with larger social issues. Readers' opinions invited.

5. I violently [so to speak] disagree with George's opinion that "making our own" culture is either "weak" or "unrealistic"—unless one thinks in terms of epic films, massive printed volumes, etc., a criticism which I would at least provisionally apply to George's remarks. His comments on "audience power" are, however, right on.

Finally, I would like to say that "Offing the Audience" was intended as a "probe" rather than a definitive work on film violence per se, as the beginning of a discussion rather than an end to one. In that it has provoked an extensive and often illuminating response from George, I consider it at least a partial success.

—paul steuwe

African seminars

The last two Tercentenary Commonwealth Seminars focus on Africa, East and West. The subject of the next Seminar has been changed from Tanzania to Zambia. The speaker will be Professor J.O. Reed, Professor and Chairman of the Department of English, University of Zambia in Lusaka, who arrived in Kingston from Zambia last week to spend six months as Visiting Commonwealth Fellow at Queen's University.

Reed took his B.A. at Oxford University and after lecturing in English at the University of Edinburgh and King's College, London, went to Africa in 1957 to become Senior Lecturer in English at the University College of Rhodesia and Nyasaland. In 1966 he became Professor of English at the new University of Zambia.

Reed will discuss some of the problems and implications of Zambia's situation on the frontier between Independent Africa and Occupied Africa and Zambia's reorientation of its economy and communications from South towards East Africa.

The Seminar begins at 2.30 p.m. on Tuesday, March 13th in Room 516 Watson Hall.

Society

Continued from Page 7

into the university and satisfy the committments there. The greater participation at the year levels is the first objective to be achieved.

The Commerce Society Annual Banquet was held last week and approximately 300 people attended. The Society extends grateful thanks to Steve Clien and his committee who organized the banquet.

This week is Commerce week, with activities planned by last year's executive. On March 15, the 3rd speaker in the Canadian speakers series will be Edgar Benson. On Friday 16th, Beer and Bingo will be held at Leonard. There will be cash prizes as well as a grand prize of a 1953, running, Plymouth. Also on Friday will be a hockey tournament between the inter-years. The Holiday Inn will be the place for the Commerce Society Formal on Saturday. This is not a grad formal. On March 20, A Commerce Variety Night will be held in Dunning.

John Farell, incoming president for Commerce Society, expresses thanks to the outgoing executive for a job well-done. This year's Society "will try to follow the precedents they set, and if possible, will try to improve the society in itself and to the university."

March 15 is the day of the elections of the year executives. These elections are important so as to improve the year themselves and strengthen the society as a whole. On March 19, a general meeting will be held for the incoming new executive. A discussion will be moulded around the possibility of the Commerce Society becoming a corporation, and the possibility of the Society getting a faculty house.

BAN RIGH FIRESIDE

Eugene Laszkiewicz, on accordian

(also six songs after Canadian poets)

Julia DuPrey (voice), Craig Tompkins (flute)
Eugene Laszkiewicz (accordian)

coffee & dessert 5:45 p.m. thursday, march 15 music at 6:00 p.m. everyone welcome ban righ common room admission free

IRC Chairman Election

Tuesday, March 13

Candidates:

Mike Peterson, Andy Scott

Polls in the Leonard Lunch and Dinner Lines.

interested in being an

AMS Constable

next year?

applications are available in the AMS Office 'til Fri., March 16th, 5 p.m.

S & R THINKS STUDENTS SPEND TOO MUCH FOR CLOTHES

And we're doing something about it

At S and R you can buy great looking clothing for a lot less than you'd expect. You see we're giving you what's so hard to get these days. What you pay for .....and more.

Men's pin-wale corduroy
WESTERN JACKETS
4 covered front pocket effect. brown, beige and navy.
sizes 36 to 46 $13.66

Ladies' Pull-on
FLARES
100% polyester double knit in latest fashion styles and new spring shades.
sizes 10 to 20
$6.66

S&R DISCOUNT

Corner Princess at Ontario

ASUS NEEDS PEOPLE FOR THE FOLLOWING POSITIONS FOR 73-4

Judicial Committee (three people)
Clubroom Chairman
Editor of the ASUS TAIL
Other Events Committee Chairman
Faculty Athletic Stick
Suzie-Q Week Chairman
Concert Committee Representative

All applications should be placed in the ASUS mailbox in the AMS Outer Office by 5 pm, March 15. For further information, call Eleanor Crowder at 547-6347.

budgets

clubs remaining active this summer must submit budget to the AMS office by March 29th, 1973

Internal Affairs Commission

Queen's University Music Department

Graduating Students Recital

bassoon - Howard Alexander accordion Eugene Laszkiewicz clarinets: Gordon Craig, Stephen Irwin
FREE

Dunning Auditorium: 8:00 pm: Tuesday 13 March ring day

JOSTEN'S

DATE: WEDNESDAY, MARCH 14
PLACE: TECHNICAL SUPPLIES
Full Name Engraved FREE

Elections today

Two candidates for IRC chairman

Mike Peterson, candidate in the Inter-residence council chairman elections, is a second year chemistry student, a former floor senior, Wanderlust committee member and has served as a DSC in the Chemistry Department.

Peterson has set as his major target closer relations between the Inter-residence Council and the Women's Residence Council and hopes to achieve this through closer contact between the two executives, the establishing of more joint activities, and a re-evaluation of the sister-brother floor idea.

Peterson also stressed that he would initiate more activities for the fall which he feels has been lacking in past years.

Peterson is also looking for an expansion of co-ed residence and investigation of the possibility of one of the women's residences being converted, given the success of Morris Hall. He also noted that there are people on the new WRC executive who feel that it may be worthwhile.

He showed some disillusionment with the failing role of don and warden in the residences. "People are just not making use of them," he note, promising to continue an investigation on the subject which is already in progress.

Peterson also called for an end to the IRC being "taken for granted" by residents and promised to make the name and its functions somewhat better known next year. He suggested that this could be achieved by informational bulletins being put where people can see them. He also indicated that he would support residence newspapers similar to that being put out by McNeill House at present.
present.

His feeling is that McNeill House residents are "getting ripped off" in that they are paying the same fees as residents of other buildings while having to put up with "older dirtier building" and poorer furniture.

In addition, Peterson promised to bring in films or initiate programs to educate residents on problems involved in leasing houses and similar topics to aid them upon leaving residence.

Andy Scott, a second year computer science student and an avid ski racer has also indicated his willingness to tackle the IRC chairmanship.

Scott placed major stress on the evaluation of residence fees and stated that if at all possible, he would see that they are reduced. However, he was not certain just how far the budget could be stretched to allow such a policy.

Secondly, the candidate was enthusiastic about the co-ed experiment and stressed the fact that he would give it consideration this year in co-operation with the WRC. The women did not seem to want a co-ed residence according to last year's referendum, he noted, but added that there was a large minority definitely in favour and that this has probably grown after the success of the Morris Hall experiment.

However, the exact degree to which the co-ed idea should be instituted, he felt should be left to referendum of the residents.

A major bone of contention for Scott was the recent legislation passed in the IRC requiring all floor parties to have an AMS constable and a liquor license. He claimed that this was preventing one of the major forums for people to get together and meet other people, reducing the unity of the floor.

Scott also suggested that the field should be educated as to what the IRC does for them and then should be asked via questionnaire whether it really does fill this position adequately.

He also called for an extention of the morning meal hours presently ending at 9:00 which he feels is too early, especially for Saturdays.

In addition he promised a critical evaluation of Beaver Foods present service, feeling that the food served by the company could be greatly improved. He noted that they can make very good meals and they are capable of very bad meals. What he proposed was to find out how much food is wasted when bad meals are prepared compared to good meals and to determine how this could influence lower food costs.

Scott also supported a re-evaluation of the role of don and warden but was less enthusiastic about it feeling that he had no complaints about those with whom he had been associated.

Have you claimed your credit?

Even if you don't pay income taxes you may benefit from the Ontario Government's new Property Tax Credit Plan. And you can apply only by filing a 1972 Income Tax Return.

If you are a student and 21 or over, you may be eligible for a tax credit, whether or not you live at home. Students under 21 may be eligible for the period they live away from home, even though they are claimed as dependents for tax purposes.

If you lived in a residence owned by a college, a university, or a school of nursing you may claim $25 occupancy cost for the year. In addition, rent paid during the year for a principal residence off-campus may also be calculated towards your Tax Credit.

If you haven't received your income tax kit you can pick one up at the post office. The mauve claim form is included in this kit and explains the Ontario Property Tax Credit Plan.

Send in both the tax return and the claim form. The sooner you file, the sooner you'll receive your benefit.

Ontario

Hon. John White
Treasurer

Hon. William G. Davis
Premier

Hon. Allan Grossman
Minister of Revenue

I Solisti di Zagreb - Slow start, Fine Finale

by Merle Bolick

I Solisti di Zagreb, the final offering in the Grant Hall series, gave a perceptive if perlexing performance last Wednesday night. Perceptive because, I am told, their interpretations were interesting and challenging; perplexing becamse the impetus of the interpretation sometimes became lost in the performance. This was especially true in the Bach works played in the first half of the concert, featuring Visnja Mazuran on harpsichord.

The Suite in B minor for flute, harpsichord and strings included also the eminently accomplished Tinka Muradori on flute. She has that kind of ease of artistry that makes it look as if playing flute were just a matter of pushing the right buttons at the right time. But it became evident even here that something was not quite right in the strings. In the fugato section of the first movement, and occasionally elsewhere, there was a definite time-lap in the celli, which righted itself each time almost mechanically, as if it happened all the time. It reminded me of a clock I used to have which would get out of time with itself and then catch up. Irritating, and yet signifying no loss of control. Perhaps this was due to boredom?

The Concerto for harpsichord and strings in F minor which followed had the same difficulties. Dynamics were again vigorously observed. Everything went smoothly, but ensemble playing seemed a dreadful chore. Although Ms. Mazuran displayed admirable technical skill, there were occasional near misses which seemed a bit sloppy to me. A combination of woodenness and carlessness - is this possible? Perhaps, if you've been on tour for a long time. But nobody is forced to play Bach, and if you're bored with it, try something else.

Although we were left with only the strings for the second half of the concert, there was no lack of variety and enthusiasm in the performance of the more modern works of Martinu and Bartok. Martinu's Sextet for Strings highlighted the string tone which is almost a hallmark of this orchestra. In particular, the first viola and cello had a chance to display their technique and sensitivity, as Martinu continually builds from viola to cello to full ensemble in the ebb and flow of the work. It was really a great performance, unmarred by hesitation or dreariness.

Again the performers added spirit to perfection in the Bartok Roumanian Dances which ended the program. Naturally the Dances contain a great emphasis on the work of the solo violinist. Dragutin Hrdjok, leader of the group, executed the solo part with skill, sweetness and sincerity. Perfection once more.

The kinds of imperfection displayed in Wednesday's concert are in part inherent in the nature of the chamber orchestra. As the name of the group suggest (the Zagreb soloists) there is a kind of democratic participation by all of its members. Once interpretation and style have been agreed upon, it still remains to practice, to the stage where responses become almost automatic. There is no conductor to remind players of their own interpretation or even to take the blame for the whole group if something goes wrong.

The orchestra must therefore find some kind of mid-point between chaos and a type of warmed-over approach to concerts. I Solisti di Zagreb have almost found their happy medium.

There were two encores from Britten and Mozart. Audience and orchestra were enthusiastic. So, from a slow start, the concert finished with a flourish worthy to end the fine Grant Hall Concert season.

The Dorian Quintet, Friday at Dunning

The Dorian Woodwind Quintet will perform on the last Dunning Hall Series Concert of this season on Friday 16 March at 8:30 p.m.

The programme will include works by J. S. Bach, Ibert, Vivaldi, Berio, Milhaud, and Reicha.

The Dorian Quintet was founded in Tanglewood in 1961, when Aaron Copland described them as "an outstanding group of young instrumentalists." After their New York debut in the fall of 1961, the New York Times said "The five performers are marvelously coordinated, instantaneously responsive to each other, and as individuals are strong, expressive musicians." Since that time, the Quintet has toured extensively throughout Canada, the U.S., Europe , the Far East, and Africa.

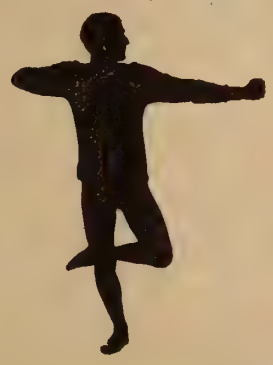
Each member of the Dorian Quintet has an impressive musical background. Karl K. Kraber, flute, performed for the BBC, the Irish, Italian, and Swiss radio, has toured with the Trio Guarino and was a Creative Associate at the State University of New York at Buffalo.

Charles Kuskin, oboist, was a scholarship student at the Julliard School of Music and studied with Harold Gomberg. He has performed with the Symphony of the Air, Leopold Stokowski's American Symphony, the New York City Opera and the New York Pro Musica. He has recorded for RCA, Columbia, Decca, Vanguard, and Vox.

Jerry Kirkbride has been first clarinetist with the Metropolitan Opera National Company and the San Francisco Ballet Company and was also a Creative Associate at the Centre of the Creative and Performaing Arts in Buffalo, New York. He has recorded with Columbia and Deutsche Grammophone.

Jane Taylor has studied bassoon with Sol Schoenbach, Bernard Garfield and Harold Goltzer. She has performed with the Symphony of the Air, the American Symphony, the New York City Opera and Ballet Companies and the Marlboro Festival.

Barry Benjamin, French hornist, graduated from the Eastman School of Music and has been a member of the Pro Arte Symphony, the Buffalo Philharmonic, the New York Brass Quintet, and has been a soloist with the Eastman Wind Ensemble.



The Dorian Quintet is replacing the Melos Ensemble who have had to cancel their 1973 North American Tour owing to the death of Ivor McMahon. Tickets for the Melos Ensemble will be honoured at this concert.

The Many Faces of Tony Montanaro

Tony Montanaro is today one of the few performing artists who create exciting theatre. A piercing insight has led him to create mime sketches, studies and illusions of a broad range and mischievous commentary. His is a theatre of significance and of mature statement - of impudent sharing of hilarity sharpened by acute and sardonic observations of man and his involvements. With a great gift of talent and superb discipline as a noted and distinguished American theatre artist, Montanaro is a Mime whose fully realized artistry communicates to innocent and sophisticate.

Mime, probably the oldest form of theatre, is a performing art that comes to us in the present day with recognitions for its audience out of the universal past and our rapidly changing world. Its talents, disciplines, skills and methods having passed through the years from father to son, master to apprentice, from clown to clown, in many traditions. It reveals worlds of the mime's awareness 'a mime's eye view' of man and life often comic sometimes tragic with crystal clarity and pathos.

Montanaro first performed "A MIME'S EYE VIEW" in New York city at the Gramercy Arts Theatre and was widely acclaimed by reviewers as fascinating and a theatre artist to watch. Following season after season the title brings Montanaro in a programme fresh with new material to college and community stages on far flung regional tours of the United States and Canada.

Montanaro performs with an assisting artist in "A MIME'S EYE VIEW", in a wide range of beautifully expressed pieces. For his audience there is not only the recognition of keenly humerous and profound perceptions but also the thrill of experiencing magnificence in the theatrical field.

Montanaro started training in college drama club activity at Rutgers University and then with the Maine Masque Theatre at the University of Maine - Orono, which led him to intensive training in modern dance, classical drama, and with Louise Gifford at Columbia University and in France with Marcel Marceau and Etienne Decroux in Mime. The on going experiment in his own home studio-theatre has developed the artistic attitude and the works revealed in the performances on tour that make Tony Montanaro the major American theatre artist and personality that he is today. He will be at McArthur Friday night, 8:30 p.m.

Middle March Days

Tuesday, March 13

Trip open to members of the University. Today is the last day for applications for a trip to Fontainebleau exhibition in Ottawa. Organized by the Art History Dept. One day round trip - $4.50. Departure March 18, Sunday, at 10:00 am from University Ave., Art Centre.

8:00 pm - Music Dept. presents Graduating Student Recital. Dunning Aud.

8:30 pm - Hillel Coffee House. Live Entertainment and Refreshments. Open to all.

Wednesday, March 14

11:30 am - "The UN Conference on the Human Environment: An Industrial Viewpoint." A one-hour lecture by Dr. Louis Renzoni, Vice-President, INCO. Dupuis Hall Auditorium.

8:00 pm - Third lecture on the theme "One Human Community" by Prof. H. R. S. Ryan, Faculty of Law, Queen's University. Lecture title "Nuclear Weapons and International Law." Room 517, John Watson Hall. There will be a question and discussion period following the talk.

9:30 p.m.: Take a coffee break in Chown Hall East Common Room with George Perlin of the Department of Political Studies; discussion of current Canadian political issues and personalities.

Thursday, March 15

1:30 pm - "The UN Conference on the Human Environment: A Government Viewpoint." A one hour lecture by T. C. Bacon of the Dept. of External Affairs. Dupuis Hall Auditorium.

5:45 - 6:30 pm - Ban Righ Fireside. Works for accordian and six songs after Poets for Accordian, Flute and voice. Performers from Queen's Music Dept. Coffee and desert. Everyone Welcome. Ban Righ Common Room.

7:30 pm - Bridge Club meeting. McLaughlin Room. Student's Union.

9:00 pm - Dept. of Film Studies presents "Force of Evil." (Abraham Polonski, 1948). Ellis Hall.

Friday, March 16

12:00 - 8:00 pm - Nursing Science presents Back Rub Day. Polson Room. Students Union. Price 50c per backrub.

3:30 - 5:30 pm - Principal's Committee on the Status of Women. Open Meeting - come and see what the committee's doing, voice your ideas, complaints etc. 2nd floor common room, Union.

8:30 pm - The Dorian Woodwind Quintet will perform on the last Dunning Hall Series Concert of this season presented by the Division of Concerts. The program will include works by J. A. Bach, Milhaud, Berio, Ibert, Vivaldi and Reicha. Dunning Hall.

8:30 pm - The Drama Dept. presents Tony Montanaro's "Mime's Eye View". Tickets are available from the Drama Dept. at $2.50 non-students, $1.50 students. McArthur Aud.

Off Campus - Theatres

Capitol - Lady Sings the Blues. Starting Fri. - The Snowball Express
Hyland - Play Misty For Me and You'll Love My Mother. Starting Wed. - Avanti
Odeon - Assylum

Chinese surgery

Acupuncture: an old art with new use

by Kathy McDonald

"Acupuncture", an ancient process of painless medical surgery, the topic of a film presentation in Dunning Hall last week.

Acupuncture is a form of anethesia, or loss of feeling and sensation, that is brought about by the therapeutic insertion of needles as an alternative to the use of ether, nitrous oxide, or ethylene.

The silent film, produced in colour in the People's Republic of China, showed a series of operations, including the removal of a brain tumor, a left cancerous lung, an ovarian cyst, the cesarean delivery of a baby, and an appendectomy.

Since June, 1971, over four hundred thousand patients have been operated on in more than three hundred major and minor types of operations.

The brain operation patient initially showed some concern at the ordeal he was about to undergo. However, as soon as the needles were inserted in his ear and foot, he seemed to be more at ease, remaining fully conscious, and talking with the doctors throughout the operation.

The film showed the top section of his head sliced off, exposing the brain. A doctor lifted out the tumor which was about one and a half to two inches in diameter, and showed it to the patient. The head was bandaged back together, and the operation was completed.

After the needles are removed, the absence of any feeling of pain usually continues for as long as six hours before any further sedation is required.

Some operations showed the patient sitting up on the table at the conclusion of the operation, shaking hands with or appearing to congratulate the doctors. During one operation a patient was seen sipping a drink through a straw.

Another showed a girl eating while doctors removed an ovarian cyst. She smiled as the needles were inserted in her leg and continued smiling throughout the operation. While one doctor operated, others took turns taking pictures of her as she was fed solid food by a nurse. The cyst was taken out and shown to the girl who simply shook her head at its ugliness. However, as in all the operations shown, the patient did not watch the actual procedure. In all cases, the patient's attention was diverted by a nurse or doctor who talked and joked with them throughout the operation.

The appendectomies were shown - one on an adult and one on a boy of about eight. Needles are inserted about fifteen to twenty-five minutes before operations. In this case, they were placed in various parts of the patient's legs. Some were left alone and others were poked in and out.

The needles can be vibrated by hand or electrically by a blocking oscillator up to one hundred and fifty vibrations per minute and this can be increased if the patient feels any pain.

The adult showed no sign of pain or emotional turmoil and although the little boy did not appear to be as self-assured as the others, he remained quiet, conscious and free from physical pain at all times.

The film finished with the showing of a cesarean delivery. Two six-inch needles were inserted at the umbilical level of the mother, two inches on either side of the midline. Other needles were inserted in the woman's legs, all attached to a blocking oscillator and electrically vibrated. The incision was made; the baby was removed, handed to the nurse and shown to the mother. The mother was conscious during the operation and did not show any signs of stress.

Only recently has acupuncture received any wide degree of publicity in Canada. In the second week of August, 1972, a small party of Canadians were invited to observe a series of operations involving acupuncture in Peking. They were impressed and suggested that acupuncture be studied more intensively with the view to being used in future operations.

Culhane returning

Claire Culhane will be asking the question, "Why is Canada in Vietnam" and promises an answer somewhat different than "who cares, the war is over, isn't it?"

Culhane, an administrator of a Canadian hospital in Vietnam, is to be speaking on March 15, hosted by the Community Support Agency.

She will be presenting her views on Canadian objectivity in Vietnam, noting that in their 19 years with the International Control Commission, Canada has been consistently siding with the United States.

Culhane has written a book on the subject with the same title as her topic of discussion in which she relates how Canadian aid officials in Vietnam were supplying the Americans with information. She also claims that the Canadian medical aid program in Vietnam is token and is consistently subordinated to the political purpose of maintaining a Canadian presence to legitimize and "whitewash" the Saigon government and the US aggression against Vietnam.

While claiming neutrality, she insists, the Canadian government has encouraged and aided the sale of millions of dollars worth of Canadian produced vital war materials for the US war effort in Vietnam. She expects the Canadian presence on the newly formed International Commission of Control and Supervision in Vietnam to behave no differently than before.

This controversial speaker will also be touching on her belief that the Canadian government is run by people who see their chance for power and profits in running Canada as a neo-colony of the Americans who control or dominate our economy, resources, culture, universities and other institutions.

She will be speaking at 7:00 in Dupuis Hall.

OCUFA on evaluation

TORONTO (CUP) — Ontario university teachers should attempt to deal with student evaluation of courses, the Chairman of the Ontario Confereration of University Faculty Associations said March 6.

James Stevens, Chairman of OCUFA said the Association was preparing up to 20 annual teaching citations for teachers who receive good marks from their students.

Stevens considers student evaluation of teachers beneficial. If it (evaluation) is not done teaching is evaluated by hearsay.

But he wants more control of evaluations by faculty.

'Students initiated the whole thing, but where students alone did it the effect has been disruptive,' he said.

'I knew a number of faculty who almost had heart failures over what students said about them.'

But he didn't say what could prevent a denunciation of teachers by their students, when they were given a chance to speak freely.

He gave two reasons for supporting student evaluations.

First, he said, most of Ontario's 9000 post secondary teachers have been evaluated in some way by their students. Evaluations are a "Fait accompli."

He also said he wants to see good teaching properly judged and given equal weight with research and creative work in regard to promotion and salary levels.

'If it comes down to a hard discussion, no more than 25 per cent of the time is spent discussing teaching while the rest is spent discussing his research, scholarship, etc.'

In your own way.
In your own time.
On your own terms.
You'll take to the taste of Player's Filter.

A taste you can call your own.

Warning: The Department of National Health and Welfare advises that danger to health increases with amount smoked.

The Learning Society

Wright Report Revisited (part III: Instruments of Change)

This is the last in a series of condensations of the Wright Report. Today, we present the last section which deals with the meat of the situation -- the financing of higher education and the structures of universities and other educational institutions.

We have not reprinted the pages and pages of detailed recommendations which are contained in the report. These are available in a precis produced by the student government at the University of Toronto and can be obtained free in the AMS Office.

Tonight, at 7:30 in the Polson Room of the Union, there will be an open discussion of the Report. Panelists will include Principal John Deutsch and David Black, members of the Commission of Post Secondary Education, and Craig Herron, general coordinator of the Ontario Federation of Students.

Chapter Seven

Structure: Coordination and Diversity

At present, many governmental departments and agencies, advisory bodies and voluntary organizations are involved in policy-making and administration within the post-secondary system. Among the several sectors of post-secondary education, the structures of the Ontario system of colleges of applied arts and technology (CAATs) is the simplest to comprehend and explain. On the institutional level, it consists of 22 colleges, each a separate corporation with its own administration. Within the colleges, students and faculty lack the power to influence major decisions.

Despite promising efforts to decentralize initiative in the system, decision-making power still rests mainly with central bodies. Essentially, the colleges are controlled by the Ministry of Colleges and Universities through its Applied Arts and Technology Branch.

Close links between the CAATs and government have proved quite fruitful in the past. Now, however, the goals of diversity in program and institutional individuality among the colleges and the emergence of increasingly articulate and responsible student bodies, faculty, administrators, and lay boards suggest both the need for and the possibility of a more decentralized system.

the university system is more complex

The university system is more complex and tangled.

In 1964, the government established the Department of University Affairs as its executive mechanism. During the same year, on the urging of university spokesmen, it modified its advisory instrument by adding academics to its membership and calling it the Committee on University Affairs. This important body, with wide but never clearly defined functions, has rapidly explained its research and policy recommending roles. The formal university organizational system was completed in 1968 with the establishment of th Council of Ontario Universities, designed to encourage coordination among universities on a voluntary basis. It has achieved recognition by the government as the voice of universities, although this exclusive status has been questioned by university faculty and student organizations.

The Committee on University Affairs advised the government on various aspects of post-secondary education: the funds required and their distribution among institutions, future development of the sector, and strategies of coordination. But as government became more heavily committed to and more deeply involved in post-secondary education, it learned, as the universities were learning in their local jurisdictions, that academic and financial decisions were inseparable. Thus, the CUA also came to advise on a broad spectrum of academic and other priorities: the implications of formal financng; appropriate definitions, for grant purposes, of part-time and full-time students; embargoes on proliferatıng graduate programs; accreditation procedures, and many similar issues.

The Department of University Affairs represented an unambiguous assertion of governmental executive powers over the universities; the government now had an agency through which it could, if it wished, excercise direct control over the universities.

the impression advisory powers has been erroneous

Yet the government did not employ its executive authority arbitrarily;and because it acted on the advice of the respected Committee on University Affairs the impression took root that the executive powers of the new department were limited by the Advisory Committee.

Adding to this impression were the buoyant times in education. As government and the public pressed for wider access to education, the Committee on University Affairs found that it could scarcely recommend an expansion that was rapid enough. Staff salaries increased substantially; staff-student ratios improved. Small wonder that an erroneous view of the status and function of the Advisory Committee became widespread, particularly in some university circles, where it strongly persists today.

It was assumed that the CUA, of mixed academic and lay representation, was either an advocate of universities speaking to government or a neutral body with real powers of its own, standing between institutions and government. That it was neither became clear only later when, under the impact of greater financial stringencies, the government demonstrated that the CUA was not an advocate, or an intermediary, but an advisory appendage whose counsel it could accept, modify, or reject.

It emerges that Ontario's present system for the administration of universities has two major flaws. First, its delineation of the appropriate responsibilities and jurisdictions of government and institutions is vague as to inhibit seriously the effecient functioning of the system. Second, despite explicit reassurances by government that it does not condone, direct government control of post-secondary institutions, the fact remains that the machinery does exist that has enabled it to ssume wide powers of direction and control that properly belong with the institutions.

most systems have tended to follow three main models

Government-institution relations may theoretically operate through a variety of administrative structures, ranging from total government control to total institutional independence. But most systems of post-secondary education in the Western industrialized world have tended to follow three main models, any one of which could conceivably be adopted in a pure or modified form in Ontario. First, we could establish a single unified system of colleges and universities, similar to that which exists in the United States. This we shall call the University of Ontario model. Second, we could adopt the bureaucratic model, which would lead to the direct governance of all universities and colleges in Ontario by a provincial department or departments. Third, we could create a system in which relations between institutions and government are mediated by a third body or bodies with clearly delegated powers. This is the buffer model.

Total institutional autonomy has been suggested. Absolute autonomy exists today only in the rhetoric of convocation platforms; public financing involves public service and public accountability.

Also proposed is the "regionalization" of education services. The idea of integrating under one board all post-secondary education services within a single geographical region is based on the erroneous assumption that all colleges and universities draw most of their students from the immediately surrounding area. Moreover, such regionalization would inhibit the differentiation and specialization of institutions provincially and it would leave another undefined body the chore of provincial planning and coordination.

Another suggestion has been made by the Council of Ontario Universities. The COU proposes a complex system of authority and responsibility consisting of three levels; institutions government, and between them an intermediary consisting of a reconstituted advisory Committee on University Affairs (CUA) and a buttressed Council of Ontario Universities with delegated government powers. Essentially the system would invest a voluntary interest-group organization, the COU, with delegated governmental executive powers.In terms of public policy. It would be a step backwards from the present trend in Ontrio to curb the extensive delegated powers of existing interest groups and to appoint lay members to their governing bodies.

We are left, then, with three reasonable alternative structures to consider for Ontario. All have particular strengths and weaknesses, and these must be carefully weighed.

a University of Ontario would be efficient, but standardized

The single centralized University of Ontario would more or less duplicate in a province-wide system the governing structure now found at most universities: there would be a board of governors, with lay and academic representation, which would be responsible for financial affairs, and an academic senate to explore academic options and formulate academic policies. Such a system would clearly have the necessary machinery to plan and coordinate the development of the whole spectrum of post-secondary education; the combination of central academic planning and central financial control could accomplish both ends with greater ease and in shorter time than almost any other system. But the price would be high. It is impossible to divorce central planning and central financial control from central administration. And uniform administrative procedures may lead to standardized academic practices.

government control is an allarming alternative

The second model, the direct administration of post-secondary institutions by government, appears at first sight to be the most alarming alternative. However, in terms of planning and coordination, it has all the advantages of the University of Ontario model, and it can provide as much academic freedom as is found in

Continued on page 21

unclassifieds

NEED AN APARTMENT for the summer? Choose one with character; cozy one bedroom - entire third floor- tastefully furnished. Close to campus and downtown, $120 a month - available May 1 to September. Phone 546-0554, or visit, at 234½ Brock, Apt. 3.

1970 NORTON 650, 6500 miles, excellent condition, extras. Only selling because am going to Europe. 542-5719.

CAROL - Thanks for the cookies. Chas.

QUEEN'S CAMERA CLUB: meeting 8:00 p.m. Wed., March 14, Polson Room. Elections will be held for next year's executive.

THANKS FOR THE dinner, Glenn. Bob.

WANTED: 2 BEDROOM furnished apartment, close to campus, for next year. PLEASE! Phone 544-8727 or 544-8422.

BICYCLE FOR SALE: Enjoy Spring on a 1971 Screamer 3-speed. Hi-rise handlebars, cissy-bar, T-bar gear shift. Like new. $55 or nearest offer. Call 548-7095 after 5:30 p.m.

TO GAEL GROUP 2: SORRY we didn't get together last week - we'll try it again this week - I'll send you details in the mail. Hopefully, our special feature will be Derek MacLean! XO, Les.

WALNUT CHESSBOARD: 3 months old. New, $65; asking, $35. High quality stereo cassettes $2 a piece. Call 542-2297 anytime.

"LARGE TWO-BEDROOM APARTMENT" for next year. Take over in May. OK Landlord. 286 Queen St. (7 minutes from campus). Call 544-5221 NOW!

WANTED: 2-3 girls and 1 guy to join 5 others in 8-bedroom penthouse for next year. Phone 549-0696, 327 William. P.S. No Trenchcoat Trojans, High-School Halfbacks or Frivolous Felines.

90 ALL THE way!

TO SUBLET: TWO room flat with private washroom and kitchen. Semi-furnished. Clergy behind Physical Health Education Building. Perfect for a couple staying for Intersession. Call 544-9571 or 544-8611. Rent negotiable.

WANTED: RIDE FOR two to Toronto. Leaving March 15, Thurs. or March 16. Fri. Will help pay gas. Please call 544-9571 or 544-8611.

IT'S AWFUL QUIET here tonight. No RANTING or RAVING or even elastic band tournaments. It must be because Sue isn't here . . . it must be . . .

BEER AND BINGO. 20 PRIZES - $50, $25, 40 Ouncers, 10 speed bike, and . . . 1953 Plymouth. Leonard Hall, Friday March 16.

FOUND. (10 days ago on campus) Gold-framed men's glasses. Available in Richardson Hall, Room 12.

HAPPY 21st BIRTHDAY, MARJ!!! Now you are a Mature Woooman, lend me those shoes so that I can go to my room and you can go and eat your dinners in the Union . . .

QUEEN'S CAMERA CLUB: meeting 8:00 p.m. Wed. March 14, Polson Room. Elections will be held for next year's executive.

",. . .THE WORD IS SCHIST . . ."

NEED A PLACE to live next year? Sublet our place for the summer and take it over in September. It has two bedrooms and is only 10 minutes from campus. Rent for the summer is negotiable. Call Chris or Ed at 544-0913.

ART WORK NEEDED FOR ORIENTATION '73 display. Photography and paintings badly needed. Good care will be taken of all articles lent; Show the Frosh what talent Queen's has! Phone Ann 544-8315.

STEVE: LAYoff of that Kraft.
LET'S PRETEND

LOST: A SMALL gold ring with blue stone with crest in it. FAMILY ring, sentimental value. Reward offered. Lost probably at the Boogie Fun Club dance. Call Vicki 544 8032 or leave message with Dale 542 7003.

DESPERATE! 2 GIRLS LOOKING for 2 bedroom furnished apartment for next year. If you can help us, call 544 8422 or 544 8427.

REMEMBER SUNDAY March 25th, 1:30 p.m. in the John Orr Room SMU. WHY? There is a general meeting of the Education Commission. Come with all your thoughts and suggestions.

CAMERA OUTFIT, Practica Super TL with 2.8 lens, 35 mm, 135mm preset lenses, 2X converter, complete with case, $250. Call 382-4834 Gananoque.

ROOMMATE WANTED (FEMALE) to share modern one bedroom apartment at William and Bagot for 73-74. For further info call Lindsey at 546-5936.

ALL INTERESTED PEOPLE COME with your ideas and thoughts to a general meeting of the Education Commission, Sunday March 25th, 1:30 p.m. in the John Orr Room, SMU.

I WANT to be with you.

ARE YOU OR WERE YOU AN INTERCOLLEGIATE ATHLETE? IF SO READ THIS. The W.I.A.C. (Women's Intercollegiate Athletic Committee) has two positions open for student appointees of the AMS, to serve two-year terms commencing in Sept. 1973. This committee is one of five within the University Council on Athletics. It governs all matters pertaining to women's intercollegiate athletics at Queen's.

If you wish to stand for nomination please leave your name and phone number in the W.I.A.C. Appeals and Suggestions Box outside the Women's Locker rooms. For more information phone W.I.A.C. Chairman 548-4288.

TO THE COLLECTIVE CRUST: The Ides of March are here and so is the mail. (P.S. See H. Vivian.)

IDEAS, QUESTIONS OR SUGGESTIONS? BRING them all to a general meeting of the Education Commission, Sunday March 25th at 1:30 p.m. in the John Orr Room SMU.

LOOKING FOR AN APARTMENT IN MONTREAL this summer? 1½ ROOM APT. AVAILABLE May 1st - Aug. 31st. Within walking distance of McGill and Sir George. Newly Decorated, wall to wall carpets and curtains. Rent (unfurn.) $100.00 per month. (includes all taxes, electricity, utilities.) Contact Lucinda Bray, 1645 Lincoln St., Apt. 4, Montreal 108. Tel. 514-931-2689.

CHAS, SORRY ABOUT OUR NEGLECT ON FRIDAY. DOES THIS MAKE UP FOR IT? ADDY III.

WATCH FOR THE NEW comic strip soon to appear in your local newspapers -- the Adventures of FLUFFO.

$25 REWARD FOR the finding of a 3 or 4 bedroom apartment or house for next year. We ain't fussy. 542-1366.

8 BEDROOM apartment. Girls only. 5 minutes from campus. May to May lease. Phone between 5 and 7. 544-1896.

YOU CAN BUY A PUC BUS, for $3. BUSIT Vote March 21.

LEARNING SOCIETY discussion. Tonite Polson Room, 7:30.

SHARE is coming.

WALNUT CHESSBOARD, 3 months old. New $65. Asking $35. High quality stereo cassettes. $2 a piece. Call 542-2297.

PREVENT INSANITY: do not call 542-6680 and ask for Judy. Her phone privileges have been revoked between the hours of 6 pm and 11 pm. She will call you. Thank you. Sincerely the rest of us at 264.

CAN THE RASPBERRIES JAM!

NEED A DEMOLITION crew -- Call Kokonut. Furniture is his specialty.

WALLY -- did you ever get your saw?

SHARE is coming

DON'T SWEAR and cus -- take a bus. March 21.

RASPBERRIES opens with the finest burst of lightweight English rock I've heard all year. Mike Saunders, Rolling Stone.

FALL SOCIAL EVENTS

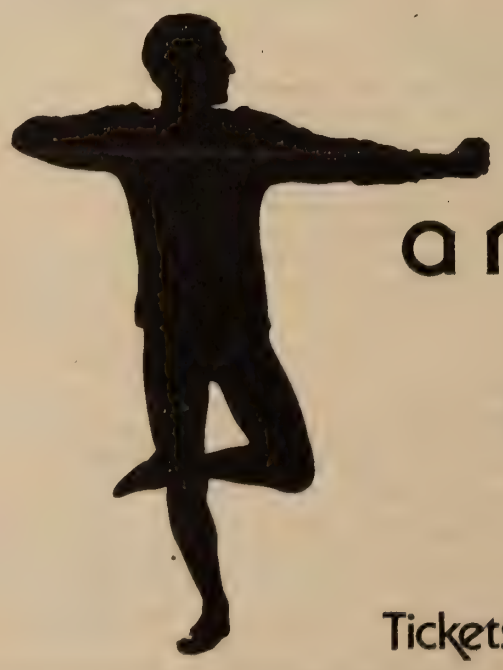
All campus groups wishing to sponsor a social function next fall must fill out an application form in the AMS Office by March 19, 1973. Applications received after this date will be considered on a first-come-first-serve basis for any remaining dates.

Approved applications may be picked up in the AMS Office on March 30, 1973.

PROCEDURE FOR BOOKING ALL ROOMS

FOR MEETING, SMOKERS, DANCES AND CONCERTS.

1. Obtain a STUDENT ACTIVITY APPLICATION FORM FROM THE A.M.S. office in the basement of the Union.
2. Complete the Form and hand it in at the A.M.S. Office.
3. When the Application has been approved, a "Form C" will be issued. You must pick up this form from the A.M.S. and take it to the Specific booking office concerned. This will be indicated to you when you pick up the "Form C".
5. Any Audio-Visual or Public Address systems must be booked through the University's Room Reservation Office.
6. If Grant Hall booked, a cloak room must be provided.
7. Arrange people to staff the cloak room (if necessary) and the door.
8. Ensure there is petty cash at door to be used as change if there is an admission charge.
9. Check lighting with Janitors beforehand if necessary.
10. The Group sponsoring the event is responsible to see that all of the above conditions are met.



REVOLUTION in AFRICA

PROGRAM ON AFRICAN LIBERATION MOVEMENT

Films, speakers, music,
posters, photos, literature

DUPUIS AUDITORIUM, FRIDAY, MARCH 16th 8:00 p.m.

TONY MONTANARO'S

a mime's eye view

Duncan McArthur Auditorium

8:30 pm March 16/73

Tickets at Queen's Drama Dept. 547-6291

many independent institutions. Moreover, its capacity for offering equality of educational opportunity to its citizens is as great as that of any other system. But it, too runs the risk of opting for uniform administrative solutions and tends to encourage student unrest and polictical intervention.

Yet surprisingly, this is perhaps the end to which present trends are leading us. Behind the undefined authority of the advisory system lies the wholly undefined executive power of government residing in the Ministry of Colleges and Universities. The only limit on government intervention in the affairs of individual institutions is the discretion of those exercising authority on its behalf.

Already, the Ministry of Colleges and Universities is requiring individual institutions to supply searchingly detailed information about their operations. At the same time, the Ministry itself is rapidly acquiring experience in matters of planning and coordination. We fear that the day is not far off when public and Treasury Board demands for stricter controls on expenditures in post-secondary education will spur the Ministry to act immediately and independently, rather than await the problematical outcome of discussions among the institutions.

No government advisory committee however vigilant its membership, will be able to impede even the grosser forms of the Ministry's developing administrative control. On the contrary, by unintentionally rendering it less apparent an advisory group may facilitate its evolution.

the buffer model may offer a solution

Can we devise an alternative structure which has the recognized merits of the two systems without their prohibitive costs? It is imperative that we try. If the values of diversity are to be preserved in our almost wholly pubic system of post-secondary education, we may have to be less insistent on presumed administrative efficiency.

Structures alone are not enough to foster a highly decentralized system of post-secondary education for Ontario that fully recognizes the public interest. Our institutions are corporately weak and vulnerable. They depend for their legal existence and funds on the largesse of government. However inventive, no organizational mechanism that we can devise or recommend can protect institutions from untrammelled government intervention unless that system is buttressed by the conviction of society and government that institutions with a large measure of independence are worth preserving.

Given such convictions, the third alternative - the buffer model - may offer a solution. It would require a general reallocation of powers within the system of post-secondary education.Government and institutions would have to delegate part of their jurisdiction to a third body - the buffer - to be used in accomplishing those tasks that no government body, university, or college can perform, alone or in concert, and that would satisfy public authority that system-wide planning and coordination were orderly and effective.

In the use of public resources for post-secondary education, the public interest involves three central issues. First, from among the competing claims on limited resources basic decisions must be made concerning the proportion of public funds to be assigned to post-secondary education. This decision only the government can make, and it must be made directly by the government itself. Second, the sums must be distributed among the different institutions and programs. Finally, there is a public interest in the purposes for which these amounts are to be used. There must be methods for performing these functions. Because of the sensitivity of institutions of postseondary education to political intervention, the latter two functions should be exercised, not by government directly, but by a responsible appointed public body with delegated authority - the buffer.

A purely advisory body to government cannot function as a satisfactory buffer.

If government is to be held publicly responsible for its decisions it cannot delegate de facto decision-making powers to an advisory appendage.

three councils should be established

We propose that three councils be established one for each sector of post-secondary education: colleges, universities, and the open educational sector. Each council should be given certain executive powers that are presently held by both the government and the institutions. Each should be structurally strong enough to withstand pressures from both sides. Their chief purposes would be, not the administering of the programs and institutions under their jurisdiction, but the planning and coordination of an orderly development of their sector of post-secondary education in close consultation with the institutions and related voluntary associatons.

councils for open education and the arts are required

As proposed, the councils would have responsibilities in three major areas. First, in addition to other sources that the government might choose to consult, they would advise the goverment as to the global funds needed to attain the educational objectives of each sector. Second, they would allocate and distribute the funds appropriated by the government among the different institutions and programs falling within their respective jurisdictions, allowing institutions considerable discretion in details of expenditure. The third principal function of of the councils would be to plan and coordinate the overall development of their respective sectors. This must be done with restraint and in close consultation with the various institutions and associated organizations.

As important as the defined responsibilities and powers of the councils is their composition. They should be comprised of both lay and institutional representatives, with sufficient academic and institutional representation to ensure that the councils will be sensitive to the issues facing them. But if the councils are to be credible to government and the public as guardians of the public interest, they must not be dominated by members from the institutions whose activities are to be planned and coordinated. The councils should work in intimate consultation with the institutions and province-wide organizations of staff, students, and administrators, who will voice the concerns of their constituents, as well as provide some of the expertise.

If the government is to delegate these extensive powers, the councils to which they are transferred must,at least in part,be sensitive,to the same concerns as government. The councils will be public bodies. They should make known their transactions. They should follow open procedures, and well-defined and publicly known policies in the areas of their jurisdiction. As a rule, they should conduct their business in public. Only such matters as personnel policy and property dealings should be treated in camera. The councils should hold frequent consultations with all interested groups and lobbies within their sectors, and should periodically conduct hearings at the institutions under their jurisdiction. Reports scanning the council's areas of responsibility and describing their activities should be published and tabled annually in the Legislature.

We should add a few comments on the Council for the Open Educational Sector.

Recommendations for the open educational sector have been enthusiastically endorsed. For years, a need has been building among our libraries and museums to have the funding of their cultural and educational facilities focused, enlarged, and coordinated.

An enlivening of local participation is not only compatible with, but may in some cases depend upon, a measure of central planning and coordination. The Council for the Open Educational Sector will have powers and responsibilities comparable to those of the councils for the colleges and universities.

A fourth council, the Council for the Creative and Performing Arts should have functions quite different from those of the other three councils. Basically, it should be a granting agency with very limited executive powers and a small staff. It should make awards for outstanding achievement in the creative and performing arts; provide grants, scholarships, and loans for training or research in the areas of its concern; assist and collaborate with organizatons whose purposes are similar to its own; and stimulate and promote the creative and performing arts throughout the province.

The four sectors are not exclusive and independent of each other.

A liaison might be effected through the formation of joint committees and ad hoc task forces, initiated as necessary.

there is a need for a permanent committee and a revised ministry

Finally, to encourage the overall coordination of all areas of post-secondary education, a permanent Ontario Committee on Post-Secondary Education should be established. This important body should have no executive or administrative responsibilities and should not be part of any other body involved in post-secondary education in Ontario.

It should be responsible for the uninterrupted scanning and monitoring of educational needs and resources in the province. Through studies, hearings, and publications, it should generate a steady flow of reliable information; it should isolate problems, suggest criteria for their solution, forecast trends, and identify new challenges. Above all, it should provide a valuable forum for participants in all areas of post-secondary education. Its membership should be small and drawn from government, various lay groups and institutions.

The decentralization of powers proposed in this Report will require the transfer to the councils of many of the current functions and personnel of the Ministry of Colleges and Universities (the MCU). The proposed Ministry of Post-Secondary Education should retain a relatively small staff, adequate to advise the Minister on the important policy decisions that will continue to be the government's alone and to administer the student grants and loans program. Since this latter program applies to students across the whole spectrum of post-secondary education, we recommend that it remain under the aegis of the Ministry; related policy, however, should be determined only after consultation with the council for each sector.

voluntary associations should be bolstered

In the open educational sector, organizations of the pertinent institutions and of their employees should be actively involved in establishing the council for their sector and in developing policies to strengthen and enlarge the activities within it. In the college and university sectors, a number of voluntary associations already exist that have established close cooperative relations with government. The Committee of Presidents of the Colleges of Applied Arts and Technology is at present the only well-established spokesman in the colleges. The Ontario Confederation of University Faculty Associations and the Council of Ontario Universities (COU) are the recognized representatives for faculty and institutions respectively in the university sector.

If the organization and membership of voluntary associatons render them incapable of undertaking systemwide planning and coordination on their own, it equips them admirably for their proper role - as spokesmen or advocates of the interests of their members in the counsels of post-secondary education.

We recommend that existin voluntary associations of faculty and institutions be bolstered and that students be encouraged and supported in creating one or more of their own. We anticipate that the important provincial role for students proposed in this Report will help to stimulate the creation of an association or associations through which their views also can be voiced. As an incentive to such a development, the Commission proposes that student associations be recompensed for the contributions in time made by their members through participation on joint boards, councils, and committees.

The Commission supports that increased participation of faculty and students on all levels of institutional decision-making should be encouraged further by the requirement that publicly supported institutions make public all pertinent information relating to their operations. Meetings of governing bodies should be open whenever possible, and they should be supplemented by regular public hearings to provide opportunities for communities to voice their interests.

Lay representatives on governing bodies have important functions as, community spokesmen, as sources of expertise, and as public trustees. A strong lay voice is essential if the programs and purposes of Ontario's institutions are to reflect regional and community needs.

independence must be protected

Within institutions, the liberties of individuals who play a critical social role require safeguards that a large measure of institutional independence alone cannot provide. An important duty of college and university teachers is to voice criticism and dissent. Teachers and scholars who speak out on contentious subjects need to be shielded from the wrath of the government and the society that fund them, as well as from the constraints of the not always tolerant institutional community of students, administrators and academic colleagues in which they live. One important safeguard is for institutions to recognize the right of academic freedom in explicit procedures and rules regarding academic appointments, promotions, and dismissals. These should include provisions for due process and for protection against double jeopardy and a statement on academic freedom. When such procedural safeguards have been established, interested groups should take a dispassionate look at the related and much disputed issue of tenure in relation to its perceived aspects of job security and academic freedom.

Continued on next page

To further protect the rights of individuals in post-secondary education, institutions should establish and publish, in consultation with their faculty and students, policies on grievance procedures for both. These should provide clear avenues of appeal for a broad spectrum of grievances of both students and teachers.

the office of provincial ombudsman should be created

The recent growth in the size and range of Ontario's educational institutions suggests the need for a provincial ombudsman for post-secondary education. Such an office should be created.Its paramount duty would be to help individuals find their way and protect their rights within the increasingly complex maze of educational bureaucracies; in doing so, it would also foster the spirit of accountability that tends to flag among officials in large, impersonal bureaucratic organizations. The office's main function would be to provide information to all parties confronted by administrative complexities; it would supervise the observance of procedures, not their general suitability.

To carry out his responsibilities, the ombudsman should have all of the necessary attributes of such an office - in particular, the right of access to information, including pertinent confidential documents; the right to observe all deliberations in post-secondary education at which administrative officials make rulings; and the right of publication.

individuals have obligations as well as rights

In dealing with the rights of individuals within academic institutions, we must not forget their obligations also. The rights of the student do not include the right to evade the intellectual standards required of his fellows in his particular field of study; nor do the rights of the teacher allow him to give less than complete commitment to the carrying out of his academic duties.

A growing body of evidence indicates that the holding of additional jobs or contracts to the neglect of primary, full-time institutional responsibilities are practices that have grown widely in academic circles over recent years - largely as a result of our society's very need for increasing specialized knowledge.

The desire of this Commission to strengthen a decentralized post-secondary system suggests that the abuses of moonlighting should be controlled locally, in each institution, rather than through a general regulation from above. Accordingly, each post-secondary institution in which the problem exists should develop policies procedures, and regulations that delineate the prime responsibility of an academic staff member to his or her institution, while recognizing the legitimate social and intellectual value of much work done by academics outside their institutions. These regulations should ensure that an academic's non-institutional, contract, and off-campus work does not conflict with his or her prime responsibility.

As for students, the principle of openness and the fact that we envisage post-secondary education as an open and continuing activity necessitate that they not be treated as immature underlings, to be superintended, guarded, and controlled as words of their institutions. The time has come for all vestiges of in loco parentis, or guardianship, rules to be abolished. Equally, however, students should face the full, general responsibilities of any citizen, as well as their special responsibilities to the task of learning itself.

Chapter Eight

Financing: Equity and Quality

Structure and financing are complementary facets of the post-secondary system; they are the instruments whereby we may achieve our goals. We have already described the emergence of government as a significant agent in the financing of post-secondary institutions in Ontario. Although this increased financial involvement was inevitably accompanied by greater government influence, institutions were able to retain a large measure of their independence.

To the institutions, the public entrusts the education of its citizens and the duty to explore the unknown, question the known, and criticise the social order; and public funds enable them to perform these functions. Because institutions are supposed to be truly critical of the society that supports them, special administrative and funding arrangements have been devised to allow them a degree of independence.

Existing administrative and financial arrangements reflect a conscientious attempt to reach an appropriate balance between social need and institutional independence.

At present, public support is provided through grants, loans, bursaries, scholarships, and subsidies to institutions. Funds in both categories have increased in the past 10 years; the funding method, however, has developed in a piecemeal fashion, often in response to a particular pressure or immediate need. Some of these needs no longer exist; others are not met adequately; and with changing conditions, entirely new needs have emerged which the present funding arrangements could not anticipate.

in 1966-67, the government, initiated formula financing

In the case of universities, public funding has taken two forms. Until 1966, each university received grants based on as individual requests submitted to and reviewed by the government.

In 1966-67, following consultation with institutions, the government initiated formula financing that was designed to solve or alleviate most of the problems. At the recommendation of the Committee on University Affairs, the government announced that public support of operating expenses would be based on the number of students at each institution. In order to reflect the variations in the cost of different programmes, the subsidies would be weighted according to costs per student. Moreover, other private or public income that institutions might receive, with the exception of tuition, would not be deducted from government subsidies. Finally, extra-formula grants would be instituted to cover the higher operating costs of emerging and French-language institutions. operating costs of emerging and French-language institutions.

The new policy, based on clearly anticipated criteria -- actual student enrollment -- met one of the chief problems facing the system. From the government's viewpoint, the formula established the importance of student demand as a basis of planning. It allowed the government to curb the trend towards detailed scrutiny of institutional operating budgets, while giving institutions incentives to respond to the social need of accommodating an increasing number of students. Both the government and institutions saw in formal financing a safeguard for institutional independence.

We favour the retaining of the formula financing method; the very same considerations which argued for its adoption, support its retention. It explicitly recognizes student demand as an important basis for planning. It ensures the equitable financial treatment for institutions. It preserves a large measure of institutional independence. But the present formula should be modified and supported by other policy changes.

coordination was not achieved

Growth in enrollment and course offerings may have been stimulated by the formula, which ensured that universities would provide sufficient places for all qualified students; but coordination was not achieved. For instance, graduate programmes were proliferated across Ontario's universities without adequate attention to the need for quality, specialization, responsiveness to regional wants and economy. And universities often needlessly duplicated programmes while ignoring local needs.

A second problem that needs correcting is the steering effect which the formula had on universities. It tended to inhibit innovative academic policy; and led to pell-mell expansion. The fault does not lie in the formula as such, but partly in the large number and size of weights used to calculate support, and partly in the use of the formula to determine subsidy for all activities of post-secondary institutions. Since the formula was adopted, universities have often designed their programmes in order to maximize their income rather than to realize institutionally determined pedagogical goals. The result, has been a tendency for institutions to duplicate programmes that yield high financial returns.

To help remedy some of the baneful steering effects of the present formula, effective provincial planning and coordinating structures are needed. While the formula should continue to be based on weighted student enrollment, we propose two important changes: the formula should be much simplified by reducing the number and narrowing the range of weights; and the formula should be used solely to determine the subsidies for an institution's instructional and related functions.

We question the assumption of the present formula that the weighted number of students is a reliable indicator of what an institution should receive as a lump sum grant for all of its activities. It is imprudent and harmful to establish a deterministic relationship between weighted number of students and the subsidation of research and special projects.

research funding is a difficult matter

In research, public support granted entirely on the basis of enrollment is undesirable because society may have an immediate need for new knowledge in an area where few, if any, students are enrolled. At the same time, indiscriminate support of research that is based in student enrollment hampers the development of excellence; this can be achieved only through the judgement of performance according to specific and high standards.

The most obvious modification required is the separation of funds given to institutions for educational purposes from funds they receive for other activities. Public subsidy for operating costs should be allocated to each institution as a single global sum and should distinguish between a subsidy for educational or instructional functions within a range of one-half to two-thirds of their costs; and payments for research and other activities, where applicable, on a long-term basis.

The task of separating the functions of instructions and research is not as difficult as sometimes thought. The kind of research that should be funded separately is that which is not directly essential for teaching effectiveness. Activities which are heavily capitalized and involve non-teaching functions need separate funding and accountability. Scholarship and research can be classified as essential should continue to be funded as a charge on instructional costs.

An additional argument in favour of separating the funding of certain kinds of research relates to the role of the federal government. It is imperative that much of Ontario's research effort be viewed as part of a national strategy. The federal government and its agencies should provide the necessary leadership, instruments, and funds to achieve nation-wide coordination in this area.

If research funding is separated from instructional funding by the formula method, the reasons for the excessive weights given to students in professional and graduate schools will disappear, and we can devise a formula that will eliminate the present steering effect. Also, the number of programme weights can be reduced to three or four categories. To facilitate long-term planning, policies regarding research grants and formula subsidies for instruction should be made and announced on a "rolling" three-year basis. At the same time, institutions should be free to set their own tuition fees. Part-time students should be subsidized on a pro-rata basis.

enrollment patterns have begun to fluctuate

During the last two years, fluctuations in attendance patterns and the sudden deceleration of enrollment increases have made it difficult to forecast enrollments accurately. For some institutions, this has resulted in considerable financial instability that is conducive neither to learning nor to rational planning. Early each calendar year, colleges and universities draw up enrollment forecasts for the academic year that begins in the fall. On the basis of these, they determine staffing requirements, draw up budgets, and make commitments with faculty and staff. Their real income, however, is calculated on the basis of an actual weighted student count taken in the late fall. The continuous, smooth and apparently easily predictable growth of enrollment almost invariably resulted in institutions achieving or exceeding their enrollment targets. Thus, they received their full budgeted income and could formulate plans for subsequent spending.

At present and for the immediate future, more varied enrollment patterns are likely. Some institutions have experienced a considerable shortfall in actual over forecast enrolment and have been faced with serious budgetary deficits. They have frequently responded to these shortfalls by indiscriminately freezing costs, or by imposing across-the-board cuts on faculty and programmes – measures which have demoralized their students and staff.

Current income should no longer by determined by an institution's current enrollment. Instead, its formula income should be allocated and distributed on the basis of official enrollment estimates, calculated from the institution's previous year's weighted enrollment adjusted by the sum of its projected weighted enrollment changes. They should be consonant with province-wide enrollment projections and long-term institutional plans. These institutional enrollment targets should not be expected to be realized precisely each year.

support of institutions should be regularized

Originally, activities of CAATs were funded by funds distributed at the discretion of the department of Education. In the college sector, the operating income of an institution is computed on the basis of weighted student-faculty contact hours. This approach has had the effect of encouraging curriculum planners to maximize their institution's formula income by increasing the number of courses offered, as well as the number of faculty-student contact hours in each course, often without regard to the educational goals.

The formula used in the college should not undermine one of the chief purposes of formula financing; to provide institutions the freedom to offer programmes in flexible and diverse ways. Instructional functions should be financed through a formula on the basis of enrollment, not contact hours.

As for capital grants, colleges, universities, and similar institutions should be treated equitably with respect to the provision of capital funds for all purposes, including cultural, athletic and social activities.

In the proposed open educational sector, the funding of libraries, museums, galleries, and other cultural and artistic activities represents one need that is not satisifed by existing policies.

Support of these institutions and activities should be regularized and, in some cases, increased. Increased funds are needed, but more essential is the need for a broad policy regarding the functions of these institutions.

Students of all accredited private post-secondary institutions should be eligible for public support on the same basis as all other students. Church affiliated colleges should be eligible for the same financial support as secular ones, subject to the following qualifications: the governing body of the college must conform to certain general guidelines; the college may not exercise religious discrimination in the admission or in its hiring, promotion, and tenure policies; the college must give assurances that no public funds will be used for religious indoctrination; the college must obtain approval for its academic programmes from the senate of an affiliated secular university.

we must revise our system of public support for students

If we reform our method of financial support, we must also revise our system of public support for students. The guiding principle of the financing policy should continue to be universal access. All financial barriers to accessibility should be progressively abolished.

We propose that three kinds of assistance programmes be established: scholarships, grants and loans. Under the first, a limited programme of provincial scholarships, should be established for outstanding students in colleges and the open educational sector, and for outstanding undergraduates in university. The present system of Ontario Graduate Fellowships should be discontinued and a new, more selective programme introduced for exceptional students.

Public financing of students should be accomplished through two additional types of programmes: a grant programme designed to provide increased access to post-secondary education for students from lower income groups; and a contingent repayment loan plan open to all students.

The grant proposal rests on two assumptions: first, increased access implies the provision of increased opportunities for students from lower income groups, for adult students, and for part-time students; second, opportunities for students from lower income groups can be increased only if public financial support embraces both the provision of educational services and individual maintenance.

Students from families in the lowest income bracket should be eligible for total allowable grants. The amount granted should be sealed according to the recipient's parent's income group and the size of family on a graduated basis. These grants should cover fees and maintenance for the first five years of post-secondary education, or the equivalent in part-time studies.

The loan programme that complements the grants is designed to facilitate accessibility for students covered partly or not at all by the grant scheme. Many students in this group from the middle and upper income strata could not afford to attend college or university unless given the opportunity to borrow. The loan programme would also help students wishing to obtain professional or higher degrees. To prevent exploitation, the recipient of a loan should show reasonable progress towards a delcared academic goal. If through lack of personal income a student is unable to repay his loan during a period of from 20 to 30 years after graduation, the loan should be forgiven. The loan policy should apply equally to both male and female students, and the burden of debt should not be shifted to the spouse if the student marries and does not work.

all forms of education should be accessible

Accessibility should apply not only to established institutions, but to all forms of educational and-or cultural activities that can reasonably fall within the definition of post-secondary education. We therefore recommend that Canadian citizens who reside in Ontario who have not received formal post-secondary education in a traditional institution, but have the desire and ability to pursue further education in some other way, should be eligible to apply for grants up to an approximate value of the per student public subsidy provided to individual students and to institutions. These grants should be awarded to an individual citizen or group of citizens for the purpose of educational and cultural services.

For the past decade, the question of year-round operation of universities has been viewed as a way to cut costs without sacrificing quality. Recent research has indicated that the benefits of variations of the year-round calendar have been exaggerated, and that increased costs and organizational problems have not been clearly recognized. We suggest there is no pressing need at this time to move towards year-round operations at our post-secondary institutions.

free educaton is not the answer

It has been suggested that post-secondary education should be provided free through an increase in grants to institutions. We have rejected this as well. First, we believe that a general subsidy which supports all students regardless of financial background is inequitable. Second, "free" education would not solve the problem of accessibility; students from lower-income families would continue to be underrepresented in post-secondary education. Our loan and grant programmes should shift some of the present burden of post-secondary educational support from the public and lower income groups to those who can afford to pay for it, while providing increased support for those who need it.

All existing provincially supported programmes of aid should be phased out gradually in favour of our recommendations.

We assume that, for the forseeable future, the public will continue to subsidize students. But students should also bear a fixed percentage of instructional costs. We propose that the split be within a range of one-half to two-thirds. But the exact proportion and the question of what is to be included in the item of "instructional costs" will have to be determined finally through consultation between institutions and government. It should be mentioned that the shift of the cost would not significantly affect the present fee structures for undergraduate arts and science students, but it would imply increased fees for students in CAATs and in graduate and professional schools.

So far we have said very little about what the actual size of public funds allocated to post-secondary education in Ontario "ought" to be. The reason for this is simple: the decision is a political one.

In U.S.

World: Death penalty proposed

WASHINGTON — US President Richard Nixon has announced that he is seeking the return of the death penalty in tough new legislation geared to fight organized crime.

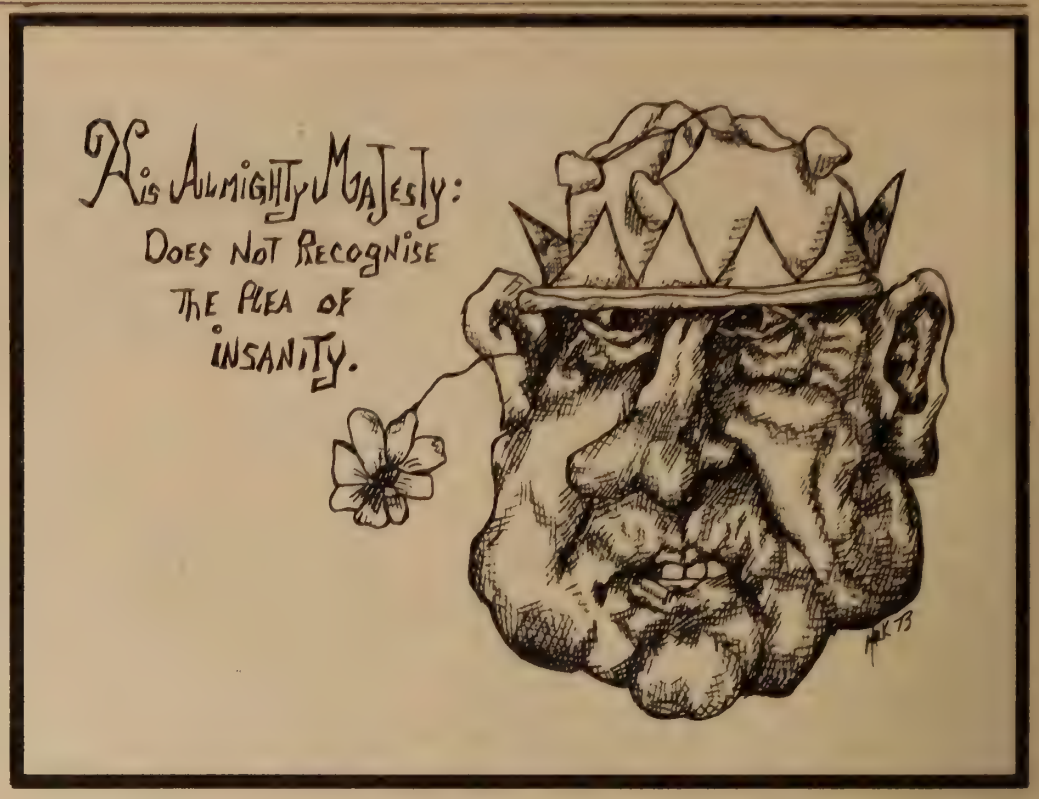
His announcement stated that the special legislation would allow "tougher penalties and stronger weapons in the war against dangerous drugs and organized crime".

He also stated that the legislation would raise the limit on monetary fines and restrict the use of the insanity plea.

Nixon noted that the death penalty would be used to punish cases of murder over which the federal government has jurisdiction as well as in cases of treason and other "war-related crimes."

He also stated that the legislation would apply to the hijacker, the kidnapper, the fire-bomb thrower, the convict who attacks a prison guard, and the person who assaults a policeman.

LONDON — This city experienced its worst outbreak of terrorism since 1939 last week when a group of over twenty members of the extreme provisional wing of the Irish Republican Army set off two bombs, one in front of the agricultural ministry, the other in the court house, injuring 243 and killing 1.



Ten of the special bomb squad have returned to Ireland, eight have been captured and five are still being sought while Britain is being maintained under the strictest set of security rules since the Second World War.

PARIS — All the major world foreign exchange markets were kept closed last week to avoid the heavy speculation which has been occurring against the weakening dollar. In Paris, the major world currency countries have been meeting to try and find a solution to the crisis and, led by Germany many European nations are favouring a joint float for the European Common Market countries.

The joint float would mean that the nine member countries' currencies would be pegged in terms of each other and then allowed to float on the foreign exchange markets as a block. The proposal would mean that the American dollar would cease being supported by the European central banks and probably would end up devaluting even further.

The largest obstacle to the joint float is agreement as to what rate the currencies should be pegged to each other and this has yet to be resolved.

Germany, now with the strongest world currency, has been forced to purchase an ever increasing amount of American dollars to avoid appreciation of their own currency and so is seeking a float which would mean an end to the trade of marks for dollars which has totalled over $8 billion.

SAIGON — The largest single exchange of prisoners yet occurred last weekend when the South Vietnamese released 1300 Communist POW's and the Communists released 200 South Vietnamese. No word has yet been received as to when the next release of American prisoners will occur. There are still at least 280 to be freed. A total of 299 have been released. Only about 53 US soldiers and 14 civilians are still in Viet Conc hands.

WASHINGTON — Did Canada win or lose on the old auto pact agreement with the United States? This is the question which is presently plaguing many people as the US government announced plans to release the second set of figures this time showing Canada with a $99-million surplus on the pact after last week announcing a $35 million deficit for Canada.

The problem is one of determining what to include in determining the benefits of the agreement and even Statistics Canada is now revising its statistics on the pact which previously showed a $5.8 million surplus, revised from an even earlier estimate of a $41 million deficit. A General Motors executive claims that the balance sheets should read rather a $100 million deficit.

back page

Canada: CPI soars again

OTTAWA — The consumer price index rose again in February to 145.3 from 144.5 in January, according to figures released by Statistics Canada.

Soaring food prices were again the main culprit in the rise, jumping 1.1 per cent. The price of restaurant meals rose 1.6 per cent. Meat,fish and poultry costs are up 17 per cent since February 1972. The samplings used to compile the Statistics Canada figures were taken before Finance Minister John Turner brought down the budget which removed or reduced federal sales taxes and tariffs on many consumer items. The index showed a sharp jump from last February's reading of 137.3, and the 100 of 1961, the base year.

The latest rise in the cost of living caused opposition MP's to criticize the government for failing to contain rising food costs. They were told that the government is constantly monitoring higher food prices. Mitchell Sharp refused to reveal the government's contingency plans for extreme controls and commented that the establishment of the special Commons committee currently studying food prices was fortunate.

In hearings before that committee last week, the Canadian grocery Distributors' Institute predicted food prices will continue to rise. The institute claimed its members are powerless to control such increases because they "do not make prices" and pointed out shrinking profit margins as proof of their good intentions.

A delegation from the Grocery Products Manufacturers suggested the government consider "adequate income guarantees" instead of drastic market controls to slow rises in food costs.

KINGSTON — Life at Millhaven Penitentiary returned to near normal over the weekend in the aftermath of serious disturbances which shook the prison last week.

On Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday a number of prisoners at the maximum-security institution went on a smashing rampage, badly damaging 45 cells and causing an estimated $25,000 damage. Tear gas was used Thursday night to control the rebels. The ringleaders were taken to Kingston Penitentiary and the others placed in solitary confinement at Millhaven.

The rebellion was caused by an intensive search of the prison for weapons earlier last week following reports of a planned mass breakout.

TORONTO — The first steps towards the creation of a no-fault car insurance package will be taken later this month by Canadian private insurance companies. A survey will be taken of the collision, property damage, bodily injury, and medical claims of a selected group of companies to determine whether a no-fault plan will be economially feasible for the industry. The results of the survey are expected to be combined into a no-fault program by the middle of June.

Manitoba, Saskatchewan and British Columbia have government-run no-fault car insurance plans.

TORONTO — Jobs for 7,500 students - 2,000 more than last year - will be provided this summer through special programs organized by the Ontario government. The government will also co-operate with industry to create summer employment opportunities for students, a program which opened up 12,000 positions in 1972.

The programs are being co-ordinated by the youth secretariat of the Ontario government. Several of the schemes are new this year and will enable students to work in areas such as municipal administration, natural resources and labor rights.

OTTAWA — The Progressive Conservative party last week twice refused External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp's invitation to send a representative on an all-party fact-finding tour of Vietnam and Laos. The Conservatives claimed the trip is mainly a publicity stunt by Mr. Sharp.

The mission, which leaves today, includes Sharp, members of the NDP and Social Credit parties and officials of the departments of Defence and External Affairs. Its aim is to make a first-hand appraisal of the Vietnam situation, an appraisal which may be a critical factor in deciding whether Canada will remain as a member of the International Commission of Control and Supervisision after the 60-day probationary period ends at the end of the month. The possibility of pulling Canada out of the ICCS is apparently being given serious consideration.

An official of the Hungarian government, which is also a member of the ICCS, said in Ottawa last week that Hungary hopes Canada will keep its ceasefire observers in Vietnam.

Queen's Journal

Volume One Hundred, No. 46

Friday, March 16, 1973

Queen's-Kingston relations are still a problem

The turnout at the Town and Gown Tercentenary Seminar, organized by the AMS External Affairs Commission, on Monday night emphasized, more than any speeches ever could, the problems that exist between the City of Kingston and the University community.

The twenty or so who managed to pull themselves away from the library and-or the Pub, to attend, found an interested panel constructively evaluating student involvement in the community and citizen reaction to students.

Queen's principal, J.J. Deutsch, emphasized the changing position of Queen's relative to Kingston. The strain put on the community for land space and housing in the sixties, due to rapidly increasing student population, is now lessening, as enrolment levels off. During the sixties, a liaison committee was set up to inform the city of the University's activities, and since that time it has worked as a sounding board informing one another of their problems and goals. This committee exists only on the level of city officials and university administrators, though the main problem lies in the area of student-citizen relations.

Queen's is a sore point with many Kingstonians in a city where tax-exempt property including the university, hospitals, churches, government property and schools total 35.4 per cent of all property valuation in the city.

J. M. Courtright, Vice Principal of Development and Information, indicated that the University was sympathetic but the problem was not of their making. It is the result of provincial law.

Delegations of Kingston residents have tried unsuccessfully this past year to get government grants in lieu of taxes on all tax exempt property in the city but the issue is still very much a live one.

Kenneth Rowley, proprietor of Hair indicated that 15 to 20 per cent of Kingston business is directly related to Queen's and added "most landladies and corner stores owe their existence to the presence of the university."

Both Steve Brereton, AMS president, and Lyn Whitham, former External Affairs Commissioner, emphasized the fact that many students in residence have no knowledge of the city.

Due to the self-sufficiency of campus residences "many students feel they have some sort of special status in the community," Brereton remarked.

However, he enumerated such projects as SVB, Legal Aid, Camp Outlook and Medical Aid as evidence that some students are very actively involved in the city.

He suggested that it would be advantageous to place more emphasis on the community during Orientation Week.

Gordon McDiarmid, Director of SVB elaborated on just what students were doing in the Community. "The philosophy of student involvement has grown rapidly in the last few years," and with it the number of volunteers has increased by more than 300 in the past four years. SVB is also concerned with coordinating the efforts of other social agencies in the area in order to serve the city more efficiently.

Isreal Barsky, an official at the Prison for Women, praised the volunteers from SVB around whom many of the programs at the prisons are based, but questioned what the University administration was doing. "It is time for the University to plan this type of involvement in the community and to put some resources into it," he said. If this is not done, he feels, then the rest is "just tokenism." "For the University to get back to its roots, to survive, it has to go back to the community," Barsky concluded.

Alderman George Webb turned his attention to Elrond college. He praised it for bringing more students into the downtown sector.

However, Rowley quickly retorted that Elrond looked like the "Tower of Babylon," and said that most businessmen were very unhappy with it. He did qualify his remarks by admitting that is was better than a self contained unit on campus which would discourage students from visiting the downtown area altogether.

Jim Cook, past member of the Faculty Council Liaison Committee indicated that many people were afraid that Elrond might become another Rochdale.

All Panelists agreed that seminars of this kind should become an annual affair.

User's Committee

Comment invited on report

In a final report released this week, the University Centre User's Committee repeated the recommendations of its draft which was covered in the March 9 issue of the Journal.

Strong support was given to a proposed new centre consisting of a renovated Student's Union with an addition extending northward on the site where 163 and 165 University now stand.

The block bound by Alfred, Union, University, and Earl Streets was the site originally designated by the Senate for the new Centre.

However, after consultation with the firm of Arthur Erickson, Architects, the Committee has decided that it is more advantageous to develop the present Union with a northward extension.

The report is being widely distributed at this time to allow further proposals or comments to be made. These should be directed to G. A. Harrower, Vice Principal, (Academic).

A general meeting will also be held to discuss the report on Monday, March 26 at 3:30 p.m. in Ellis Auditorium. Members of the User's Committee and representatives of the Architect's firm will be present.

Kurt Gesell, User's Committee secretary told the Journal that "at this point, we're just trying to decide if the idea of a northward extension is a good one." The details will have to be decided later, he added.

This comment was made in reference to a question concerning the fate of the Student Affair's Centre at 165 University. Many people have indicated that it would be a pity to tear down this house.

C. W. Jones, Director of the Department of Physical Plant, said that "it would be quite possible to move the building," and indicated that cost estimates are being sought to discover whether or not it is economically feasible.

Between $6,000 and $7,000 was the figure quoted by Jim Whitley, Director of Student Affairs.

The decision on this rests with the Campus Planning Committee, a joint committee of Senate and the Board of Trustees.

- solman

You better believe it, it's that time of year again.

SHARE WEEK

March 19-24

SHARE BAKE SALE
Monday, March 19th
Victoria Hall 6-9 pm

SHARE CABARET NIGHT
Thursday, March 22nd
Lower Lounge,
International Centre 8 pm - 1 am
Female impersonator and Queen's talent

SHARE PUB NIGHT
Saturday, March 24th
MacArthur College Pub 8 pm - 1 am with dancing

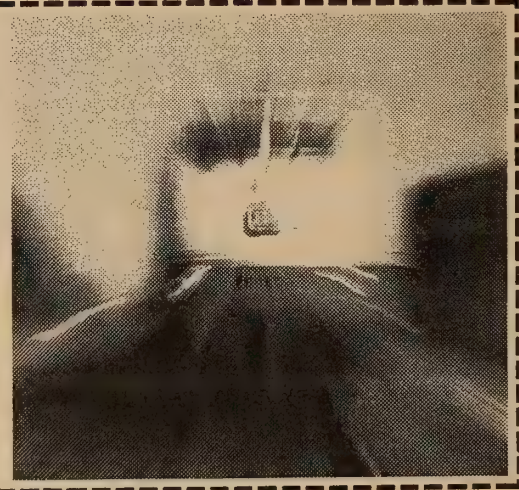
Rip off Europe.



STUDENT-RAILPASS
The way to see Europe without feeling like a tourist.

Student-Railpass is valid in Austria, Belgium, Denmark, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Luxembourg, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland.

Eurailpass, Box 2168, Toronto 1, Ontario

Please send me your free Student-Railpass folder order form
Or your free Eurailpass folder with railroad map. [ ]

Name
Street
City
Zone Prov.
QUE 3

So you plan to spend the Summer in Europe this year. Great. Two things are mandatory. A ticket to Europe. And a Student-Railpass. The first gets you over there, the second gives you unlimited Second Class rail travel for two months for a modest $135 in Austria, Belgium, Denmark, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Luxembourg, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, and Switzerland! All you need to qualify is to be a full-time student up to 25 years of age, registered at a North American school, college or university.

And the trains of Europe are a sensational way to travel. Over 100,000 miles of track links cities, towns and ports all over Europe. The trains are fast (some over 100 mph), frequent, modern, clean, convenient and very comfortable. They have to be. So you'll meet us on our trains. It really is the way to get to know Europeans in Europe.

But there's one catch. You must buy your Student-Railpass in North America before you go. They're not on sale in Europe because they are meant strictly for visitors to Europe—hence the incredibly low price. Of course if you're loaded you can buy a regular Eurailpass meant for visitors of all ages. It gives you First Class travel if that's what you want.

Either way if you're going to zip off to Europe, see a Travel Agent before you go, and in the meantime, rip off the coupon. It can't hurt and it'll get you a better time in Europe than you ever thought possible.

letters

Exasperated

Dear Editor:

As a former student at Queen's, I've maintained my interest in campus goings-on. Thus I was happy to learn of the birth of a new literary magazine, and equally interested in the apparent controversy centering its title. It seems to me that the name Escorial was applied to the journal in the spirit of art, not of politics. The palace Escorial owes its primary distinction in history to its architectural beauty and its noted collection of Spanish paintings. Simply because the Escorial is located is Spain is no reason to tar its namesake with the Fascist brush. The palace stood long before France and will probably endure long after. As for the charge of Catholicism, I doubt that the magazine will espouse such a persuasion. The Christian religion with all of its denominations is an integral part of Western civilization and on various occasions some of its terms and traditions have been adapted for "non-religious" purposes. If the anti-Catholic argument of certain critics of Escorial were to be carried to its logical (?) conclusion, we should want the name of Victoria Hall changed, because after all, Queen Victoria was an Anglican; ergo, the building betrays an Anglican bias. Is this what the power of reasoning has come to?, Escorial is meant to connote the grandeur and beauty of art, - not - political authoritarianism or religious sectarianism. Has no one heard of art for its own sake?

To lay down the charge that the magazine Escorial displays "Fascist-Catholic" overtones in advance of its publication; that is, without having even given the new journal a chance, is idiotic.

G. L. Vanderhaden
Arts 72

Out to lunch

Dear Editor:

Why is it that every time an attempt is made to visit a University office - anv office. it is closed for lunch? Yes, it is realized that there is a physiological need for food, and yes, it is realized that labour unions provide an hour for such a necessity to their members. However, one would think that the possibility of staggering lunch hours was beyond the mental capacity of University personnel (unlikely?) or that the problem has never been given serious consideration Staggering personnel lunch hours in University offices would assure that at least a skelton staff (better than none) would be in the office at all times. This would result in better service for the student at University services - presumably that is what it's all about.

F. Phelan Arts '73
et al

Choral cares

Dear Madam:

I was profoundly saddened by an incident which marred the Baccalaureate Service at Grant Hall on Sunday morning. The Queen's Choral Ensemble, for whom the first four rows of seats had been reserved, duly took their places, and then transferred themselves at the appropriate moment to the stage to sing the Anthem. They sang very beautifully and enhanced the Service.

However, in retiring from the platform at least three quarters of the Ensemble simply walked straight out of the Hall as though their part in the proceedings was completely finished. I submit that it was not.

The very nature of what they sang bound them spiritually to the other people in Grant Hall. By abandoning the Service they utterly negated what they had sung. No longer were they there to make an offering and share in service. It became transparent that they had come as performers and for their own adulation. Even if they felt no common ground with the mere hoi-polloi who had gathered for the ceremony, they should certainly have recognized some faint respect for Father Gregory Baum, who had listened to them, and who, after all, was the important guest, not themselves.

Would somebody please correct me and reassure me if I am wrong. Did the Ensemble leave because they had another Choral engagement? Or did they actually stay, and listen from the back? Or were they rushing off to study for a big exam on Monday morning?

Whatever the case, those few of the Ensemble who played their part more fittingly will not regret having stayed to hear Father Baum's superb sermon. I fear the others missed something they very much needed.

Respectfully yours,
Robert Common.

Too old for residence?

Never!

Mature women students and women in post-degree courses are being offered accommodation in Adelaide Hall, ground floor, for the 73-74 session. Apply to the Office of Residence Admissions, Victoria Hall.

New Outer Council

They're at the post...They're off!

by Susan de Stein

Steve Brereton, President of the AMS welcomed the new members to the first meeting of the new Outer Council on Wednesday night.

The commissioners were asked to make preliminary reports.

External Affairs.

Kiloran German, External Affairs Commissioner commented on the general approach that her commission would be taking. "We are hoping to establish better contact with different outside groups. In this way the External Affairs Commission would act as an intermediary board for coordinating these activities," she said. German added that "our liaison with the city should be strengthened as should those with the Alumni Committee and the high school liaison committee. This strengthening of ties with the community will be a priority."

She noted that the External Affairs Commissioner will no longer have the added and time-consuming responsibility of being OFS delegate. The appointment of Lyn Whitham as Chief OFS delegate "will allow the commissioner more time to concentrate on other important areas, such as those previously outlined," she concluded.

Internal Affairs.

Paul Greenwood, Internal Affairs Commissioner reported that the functions of and the benefit to the students of each club on campus will be reviewed in great detail, in the future. Policies regarding each club and the loan program for clubs on campus will be drawn up.

Education

"The scope of the commission is very broad," Mary Bloos, Education Commissioner noted. "We are going to explore areas which have not been investigated before," he said, adding that "worthy of note is the possibility of counter courses, smaller symposiums, and the like."

Campus Activities

"We hope to achieve a better layout of activities and better organization of activities," commented Don Krestel Campus Activities Commissioner. "We want to get this campus going socially and in any other way we can," he added.

Services

Wil Kronenberg, services Commissioner, outlined the plans of her commission to look into certain neglected areas such as day care and the library. "We will also be looking into initiating various incidental projects such as increasing the number of bicycle racks on campus and establishing a typing room," she commented.

Bus-It

Doug Vallery commented on the fact that the Bus-It referendum would be held next week. On the basis of the number of students using the buses during the Bus-It experiment in October, the AMS and the PUC arrived at an agreement last month regarding the cost per student of the proposed bus service. The figure arrived at, was $5 per student, for the 8½ month period. The administration in its concern to improve communications between the West campus and the main campus, has agreed to contribute $2 per student for the service. Vallery noted that the administration "did not plan for the campus to be disjointed." The students will thus be asked to decide, through a referendum whether or not they were willing to pay $3 for the service.

If the referendum question were not supported by the students, Bloos noted that the administration then could not guarantee that there will be a bus service provided between the West campus and the main campus in the future. "The administration is concerned to arrange this," Bloos said.

Foreign Students

Outer Council discussed the question of the new immigration laws as they affect the foreign national student. Through the new laws the foreign student cannot apply for a landed immigrant status within Canada. It is necessary under the new regulations for the foreign student to return to his native country to apply for that status.

The federal government also announced that all visitors to Canada must obtain special work permits before they are allowed to get a job.

A foreign student must now go through a very complicated procedure before being allowed to work for the summer. On his own initiative, he must find an employer willing to hire him who must write a letter stating that there is a job available for the student and giving a detailed description of the exact nature of the job. The student must then take the letter to a Canada Manpower Centre, which surveys the labour market in the area where the student wants to work. If the survey indicates that there are native Canadians or landed immigrants available to work in that area, no work permit will be issued, and the student must start his search all over again.

Several Outer Council members noted that certain faculties have begun to distribute information on the subject to propsective employers and to the foreign students. It was felt that the AMS should start objecting strongly to the changed laws, and not merely through issuing a complaint through the mail. A committee will be set up to acquaint itself with the specific problems that foreign students encounter and to explore all aspects of the question of the foreign student at Queen's. The committee will also deal with the implications of new immigration laws.

Faculty Financial Matters.

A great deal of discussion centered on a motion that called for "each individual faculty to be responsible for submitting a financial statement and financial records, for the immediately preceding fiscal year to a Faculty Financial Review Committee under the Internal Affairs Commission, by October 15."

An objection to the motion was raised by John Macdonald, President of the Engineering Society, on the grounds "that it is ambiguous and it seems to restrict the faculties' control of their financial matters."

Al Cruess, President of the Aesculapian Society, criticized Macdonald's "defensiveness", adding that he felt that "the substance of the motion is not to make faculty societies cower in the corner." He noted that business practices have been poor on this campus. "This action could improve this situation," he claimed.

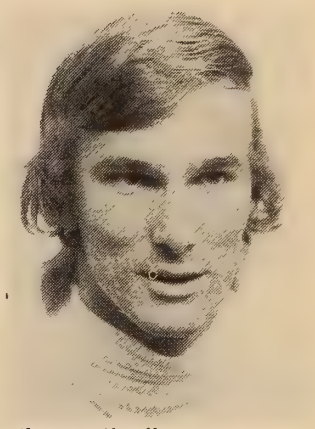
Bloos agreed that Macdonald had misconstrued the meaning of the motion. Trotter emphasized that the "AMD is not rrying to pry. We are trying to save the faculties some money."

Previously each faculty was required to have a professional audit of its financial records, at a high cost to the faculties.

A Grad Society representative pointed out that the motion does not in effect ask any society to do anything that wasn't done before.

Trotter felt that the purpose of the motion was to ensure that the faculty money was being well-spent, and in a way that was beneficial to the students. He added "we would like to see that no one takes a trip to Acapulco on faculty funds."

"If someone goes to Acapulco, it is agreed to by the society as a whole," said a spokesman for the Queen's Theological College. He added that "the motion devaluates the integrity of the society."



However the motion was carried.

The Queen's Excursion Club.

An Internal Affairs Committee will be undertaking an investigation in the next two weeks into the activities and the quality of the service proviced by the Excursion Club. Steve Sibold, in

Continued on Page 9

Pipe receives award

Andy Pipe, meds '74 and outgoing AMS Services Commissioner has been named this year's recipient of the highly prized A.E. MacRae Social Engineering Award. This award is given annually to the student who has "developed and exhibited the greatest capacity in leading the student body during his graduating year."

The purpose of the award is to "aid in the development of persons with real capacity for social leadership who will think in terms of ideals, policies and laws rather than of institutions and political or other parties."

The award's value is $725.

Fac Board talks slip year financing

R. L. Watts, Dean of Arts and Science, told a meeting of the Faculty Board last week that the new slip year system of financing universities will help to reduce the interuniversity competition for students.

He said the "bucaneering spirit affecting our collegues", was partly due to the past financing scheme, in which grants were based on expected enrolment.

Unexpected short falls in enrolment this past year have caused many institutions to experience serious financial difficulties.

In the new fiscal year, grants will be based on the actual student enrolment of the previous year.

Jack McNie, Minister of Colleges and Universities announced this revised method of paying operating grants to colleges and universities last week.

"Now there will not be the same pressure that revenues may fall short of expenditures," Watts remarked.

The "numbers game" of student recruiting will also be affected by a set of guidelines introduced by the Council of Ontario Universities. These guidelines governing recruiting procedures have been adopted by most Ontario universities according to Watts.

Both measures have helped to improve the situation. However, he indicated that "competition has not dried up."

"Even with the slip year scheme, grants are still tied to enrolment," he said.

ARE YOU GRADUATING IN JUNE?

All students in the Faculty of Arts and Science who expect to graduate in June, should come now to the Faculty Office at 131 Union Street, to check that their names are on the degree list.

PHILOSOPHY DEPARTMENT

presents a public lecture

100 years of Bertrand Russell
AN APPRAISAL by J. G. Slater,
Chairman of Philosophy Dept.,
University of Toronto

WEDNESDAY MARCH 21st
DUPUIS LECTURE HALL
8 pm
EVERYONE WELCOME

newsbriefs

New complex causes concern

Plans for the Queen's-Kingston Health Sciences Complex have remained in a state of flux ever since the moratorium on hospital and university construction was announced last November.

The proposed complex now includes Kingston General Hospital, Hotel Dieu, St. Mary's on the Lake, Kingston Psychiatric Hospital, St. Lawrence College and the basic science department of Queen's University.

Two parts of the complex are already underway. These include an addition to St. Mary's and construction of a new ambulent-patient clinic at KGH.

Although planning continues on the rest of the complex, construction will not begin until the government again releases funds.

The freeze on hospital construction announced by Richard Potter, Minister of Health will last for one year.

However, it is not known how long the Health Sciences element of Queen's will be affected by the moratorium on university construction because Jack McNie, Minister of Colleges and Universities indicated last November that the freeze would last for "years".

In negotiations with the government, the Queen's University and Affiliated Hospitals Councils (Quafhop) hopes to get recognition of the fact that many of the hospital facilities in Kingston are obsolete and the Health Sciences facilities are small in relation to student input.

John Ackland, Acting Secretary for Quafhop told the Journal that representatives of the Council hoped to meet with government officials from the Ministry of Colleges and Universities, and the Ministry of Health in April.

The planning process is rather "frustrating until we get a directive from the government," he concluded.

Recruitment policy deplored

WINDSOR WATERLOO (CUP) — University recruitment patterns have become more and more like old time raiding parties, the University of Windsor senate was told Tuesday.

Last year Waterloo University had a telephone blitz in which nearly all their high school student applicants were called in an attempt to woo them away from their first choice of universities.

President of the University of Windsor Dr. Francis Leddy said that if universities don't control themselves in their individual recruiting practices, "the government of Ontario will likely feel it necessary to step in and impose controls."

Rod Scott, assistant to the president said Tuesday that "the recruitment process must be brought under control immediately, or the same stunts will happen again this year."

He referred to the case of a dean and faculty members from York University recently in Vancouver. A hotel suite was rented, and an advertisement was taken out in a newspaper announcing that they were recruiting for students.

Dr. Leddy said that York University is not usually noted for aggressive recruitment habits, while Waterloo is.

"What it boils down to is a matter of ethics", Dr. Leddy said. "Somewhere, there must be a line drawn where public funds are spent for purposes other than imparting information to prospective students about the university."

Scott said "The University of Windsor faces increased competition from a greater number of schools that are sending recruiters into the Windsor area. Once one school pushed into an area, other schools feel they must follow suit."

TAK talks about future

TAK, 544-1771, has been in operation for a month and a half now, and has proved itself a worthwhile addition to campus services. For the uninitiated, TAK is Telephone Aid Kingston, an open line phone service in operation every night between 7:00 p.m. and 7:00 a.m. Organized by students for the service of all campus members, TAK volunteers man the phones in four hour shifts, ready and able to perform as a referral service, or act as a sympathetic listener for personal problems, school stresses, or just someone wanting a friendly rap.

Financed with the help of the AMS, TAK operates with approximately one hundred volunteers, all of whom participated in an intensive training workshop. Since the phone lines opened, volunteers unanimously feel that the experience has been a valuable one on their end of the line, as well as for the callers. A fairly steady stream of phone calls have dealt with a vast range of topics, and most people find that having the opportunity just to talk with an impartial concerned and anonymous listener makes the difference.

So far, TAK publicity has been low key, and now that more students are aware of it, the word has got around that volunteers are easy to talk to, and always willing to listen. TAK volunteers are not psychiatrists, psychologists or professionals in any way, and it is only their enthusiasm and genuine concern that makes the project a worthwhile and unique service. It should be stressed that there is a comprehensive list of professional back-up people supporting TAK ideals, and while they are standing by to help, and advise, the students volunteering are drawing on their own experiences and understanding of student life. The TAK office is supplied with an excellently equipped file of campus resources, community organizations, various professional people, as well as miscellaneous information that should supply an answer to all queries. Anyyone with specific questions concerning campus activities, life in Kingston, personal problems or difficulties, or just passing through a quiet period and needing someone to talk to is welcome to call 544-1771. Two phones are in continual operation, and while individual volunteers rotate, an interested voice at the other end is guaranteed.

Oriental art expert expected

The Departmental Student Council of the Art History Department will be presenting a lecture by noted linguist and oriental scholar Peter Swann.

Born in London, Swann has been curator of such institutions as the Ashmolean Museum in Oxford and from 1966 until 1972, the Royal Ontario Museum. During his term at both museums, he was instrumental in establishing the concept of the museum as an educational resource. To complement this, he has always worked towards bringing the Museum directly into contact with public involvement.

Both of these institutions have excellent Oriental art collections, and Swann himself speaks several dialects of Chinese. He will be speaking on "Chinese Art through the Ages" in Dupuis Hall on Tuesday March 20 at 8:00.

AE at the art centre

TREVOR HODGSON
ROBERT VAN de PEERE

You are invited to the opening of these two one-man exhibitions on Sunday March 18 2-5 p.m.

Exhibition of Four Kingston Photographers Also Continues

The Political Studies Department and The Institute of Commonwealth and Comparative Studies Present:

MR. J. MARKER
Pakistani Ambassador to Canada

Speaking on the topic of:

The Foreign Policies of the Soviet Union, China and India with regard to the Indian Sub-Continent.

March 19, Rm. 517 Watson Hall 3:30 pm

HELP

IS NEEDED FOR LEVANA ON SATURDAY, MARCH 31/73.

Ever thought of yourself as a Highland bar maid? Come give it a whirl. (or is that "fling"?) We need waiters and waitresses and lots of other helpers too!

Anyone interested in working at Levana should call Jann at 544-8267.

There's a big party afterward for those who lend a hand. (You'll be glad you did!)

Science '44 Co-op

SUMMER RENTALS

May - Sept.

- Single and double rooms
- Free parking
- No pets
- Furnished Rooms, Common Rooms and Kitchens

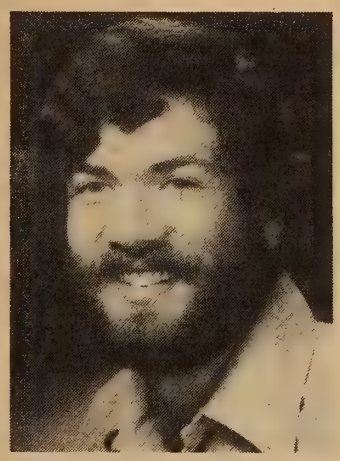
Rates:

	Single	Double
Day	$ 3	$ 4
Week	$12	$15
Month	$40	$55

Low rise living at its best for summer.

8 win Tricolor Awards this year

Eight names were added to the rolls of the Tricolor Society this year. Tricolor Awards which represent admission to the Tricolor Society are the highest awards which students at Queen's can receive. They are given to those few who, in the judgement of an AMS committee have made a substantial contribution to the university in their non-athletic extracurricular activities.

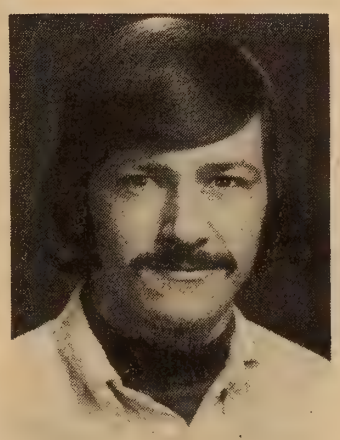


Ted Grandmaison

Ted Grandmaison has been a very dependable worker for the Graduate Student Society. A graduate student in chemical engineering, Ted held GSS office as treasurer. More recently he has served as Clubs Manager and has been involved with Bitter Grounds since its inception. He has also worked on International Weeks for the past two years.

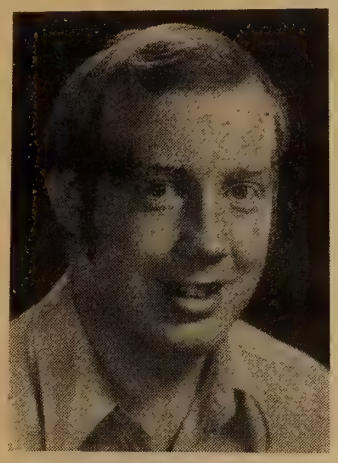
Ron Kimberley

The founder and principal moving force behind Camp Outlook is Ron Kimberley of Meds '73. Camp Outlook, which will soon begin its fourth summer of canoeing has involved over 250 members of the Kingston Community and about sixty Queen's students. Ron is a past president of the Aesculapian Society as well as an AMS Outer Council representative for Meds students.



Doug Pritchard

Past president of the Graduate Student Society, Doug Pritchard, has been a keen spokesman on campus for several worthwhile causes, especially the fee withholding issue. As well as serving as the GSS representative on Outer Council, Doug has served as the only student representative on the Council of Ontario Universities of the Ontario government.

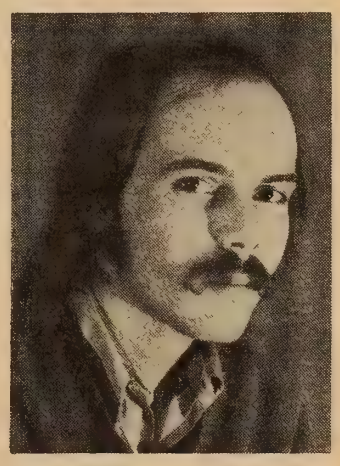


Graham Millington

Graham Millington, a graduate student in physics, has been speaker of the AMS for the past year. In addition to this responsible job, he has been an Outer Council Representative for the Graduate Student Society and very active on their executive.

Wally Palmer

Most well known this past year as the competent and conscientious Vice-President of the AMS. Wally Palmer of Law '73 has also served as an AMS representative for the Law Society and as Campus Activities Commissioner last year. In addition Wally has been elected permanent President of Science '70.



David Pritchard

David Pritchard has been a very effective voice in Senate and very active in the Theological Society. He has been particularly outspoken on scholarships and awards as chairman of the Senate Committee on Scholarships and Student Aid.

Doug Romans

Doug Romans of Meds '73 has been involved in several areas of student affairs. He has been coordinator of the Heart Fund Drive for the past three years, and is a past IRC chairman. Last year Doug was manager of the Queen's Bands and was instrumental in bringing co-ed living to Queen's at Morris Hall.

Charles Schwier

Charles Schwier, a special student, has been instrumental in the production of Journal, Tricolor, and Who's Where for the past three years. Having seen many political heavies come and go, Schwier has been a good reporter and critic of the AMS.

Fight the SPCA[1]

BUSIT  MARCH 21

1. Sickening pollution caused by automobiles.

AMS CONCERT COMMITTEE PRESENTS

the

RASPBERRIES

along with the GOOD BROS.

SUNDAY
MARCH 18TH
GRANT HALL
8:30 p.m.

a spring concert of light-weight English rock don't miss it good times for all

Tickets: $2.00 with concert card
$2.50 general admission
Available at door and HOUSE OF SOUNDS

letters

Disgruntled

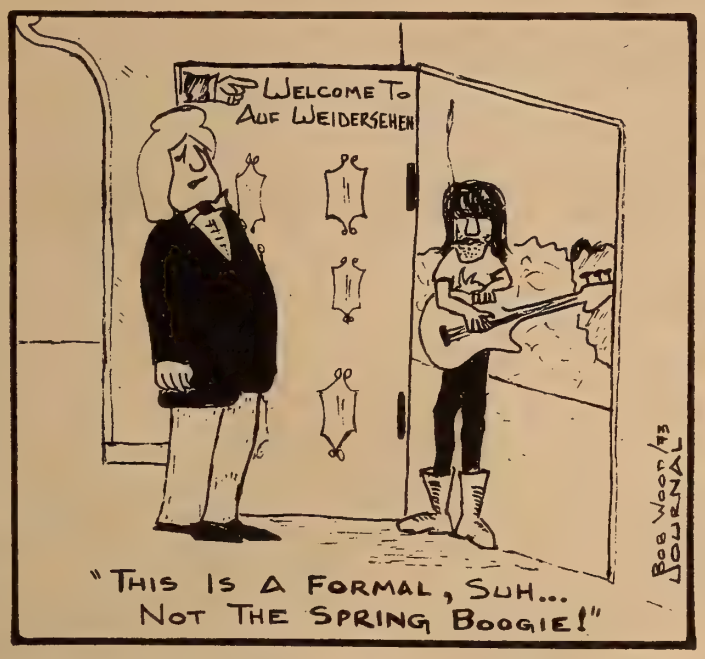
Dear Editor,

I had the misfortunate opportunity of attending the biggest farce of the past year at Queen's University on the rainy evening of March 10. For those of other faculties, laymen and fellow artsmen who either had the luck or foresight to miss it, or ignore it, the event was the Arts spring formal or better called in another opinion the Arts spring boogie.

"Auf Wiedersehen" was widely advertised as a formal event. False advertising would certainly win the day in any court of law.

No formal or semi-formal or any decorations of any kind were to be seen anywhere in the dance area. The dance floor provided enough space for at least elbow room, for a complement of possibly 150 people.

The majority of the tables were of a long bench type which by the end of the night contained more people than did the dance floor for some reason.



Possibly the little note on the bottom of the advertisement was an indicator of the type of dance it was, "no tux required," in fact blue jeans would have been more appropriate for dancing to the heavy rock music of the tee shirted, blue jean clad band. Is it possible that the groups got mixed up and the group for Auf Wiedershen went to the spring boogie instead at Grant Hall. The type of music offered contained no recognisable dance beat, in fact at times there was no beat recognisable enough to dance to, especially since some people came dressed formally. The group managed to stray from its routine fifteen minute instrumentals long enough to permit two in the groove songs; Rock around the clock and Rock and Roll music . . . formal music?

Is it not time or not possible to put a halt to the rip-off of such dances at Queen's.

I suppose it is wrong or perhaps unfortunate to believe that university life would entertain better formal dances than were experienced in the years at high school.

There was absolutely nothing at Auf Widersehen that even suggested formal tones, in fact the lead singer asked publically, "is this a party or something?"

A disappointed and thankfully graduating Artsmen.

Letterless

Dear Editor,

This letter seems to be becoming an annual event. When I wrote my last letter to the Journal, (it appeared in one of the last issues of the school term last year). I said I was annoyed. Now even more so. It may seem that an Arts athletic letter may not mean much to many people, but obtaining mine has now become a matter of principle. During the Bews Banquet last year, I was disappointed to find that, for the second year in a row, ASUS had not provided the athletic letters that the other faculties seem to have no problem obtaining. This prompted me to write to the Journal to ask why. In the reply, I was told that there had been some sort of mix-up and that the letters were to be ordered and sent to those who had won them during the summer. When I returned to Queen's this September, I attempted to find out why this had not been done. After getting in touch with the Arts athletic stick, I was told that the person who was supposed to order them had quit and that he was in the process of ordering them himself. He even went as far as to say that he had taken the job so he could finally get his letter. Well, here it is, the beginning of March, and I have heard nothing. In two months exams will be over, in three I hope to be obtaining my degree. I wonder if I will ever get my athletic letter?

Rick Smith.

A reply

Dear Editor,

In response to the letter of unimpressed Artsci which appeared recently in the Golden Words, I must comment that it was the most humiliating thing that I have ever experienced.

Not only was it discrediting but depreciating that she would accuse me of taking my article from a magazine such as Seventeen. My work was entirely my own and I am sorry if I trod in your intellectual fields.

Yours truly,
Rick Janes.

Queen's Journal
Vol. 100, No. 46
Fri., Mar. 16, 1973
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ontario

Editor: Jennifer Grass
Business: Charles Schwier
Management: John Solman
Arts: Sandy Naiman
Features: Pat Devitt, Steven Winnett
Passepartout: Bob Wood
News: Susan de Stein
Events: Alison Dandie
Sports: Chris Boon, Nada Bogdanovic
National Desk: Bob Mutrie, Sue Wishart
Photography: Peter Boag

All in all it wasn't a very exciting evening until Sandy came back from the plaza to entertain us. Helen got upset about the hands, Liz and Peter dropped in, Pat and Kathy typed madly, Raj learned to layout, the prospective gods appeared, would you believe, slightly nervous, and a couple of political heavies came and went. Yes, it was just a regular press night, for once.

Published twice weekly on Tuesdays and Fridays by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc., Member, Canadian University Press. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society of the University. Offices are located in the Student's Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

SUMMER studies in VENICE

MAY 13 to JUNE 23
1973

ART HISTORY 245
Venetian Art and Architecture

ITALIAN 202
Intensive Italian

MUSIC 211
Music in Venice
1530 to 1750

For further information contact the individual Departments,
APPLICATION should be made NOW to
DEPARTMENT OF UNIVERSITY EXTENSION

hillel dance
&
casino night with music by
"ANYTHING CO."
sat., march 17
9:00 pm.
hillel house 26 barrie st.
REFRESHMENTS & BEER
$1.00 single $1.50 couples
all welcome!

Come all ye lads & lassies to the enchanted city of BRIGADOON
alive for one night on March 31st
Lower Vic., 9 pm - 1 am
Tickets available March 19-24 in meal lines and March 26-30
in John Orr
$5.00 per couple
The Levana Formal Committee

St James Anglican Church

9.00 a.m. — HOLY COMMUNION
11.00 a.m. — MORNING PRAYER Questions Pilate Asked "The Question of Identity" — The Rector.
7.30 p.m. — Worship Service in Chalmers, Community Lenten Program
Tuesday
10.00 a.m. — HOLY COMMUNION
Wednesday
7.45 a.m. — HOLY COMMUNION & Breakfast.

SERVICE COMMISSION needs:

1. Union program committee
2. University centre committee
3. Assistant pub manager

Apply at AMS Office before 5 p.m., Fri., March 16th

tonight

REVOLUTION

in

AFRICA

PROGRAM ON AFRICAN LIBERATION MOVEMENT

films, speakers, music
posters, photos, literature

DUPUIS AUDITORIUM 8 p.m.

Queen's
Division of Concerts

presents

DORIAN WOODWIND QUINTET

Programme: Bach, Ibert, Vivaldi, Milhaud, Berio, Reicha

DUNNING HALL SERIES NO. 4

Friday 16 March

8:30 p.m.

SHARE is a WUSC drive

Posters have been going up around campus proclaiming the fact that SHARE, a World University Service of Canada (WUSC) fund raising drive, is coming.

Annually SHARE comes onto Canadian university campuses in search of aid for WUSC administered projects conducted in various Third World countries. The drive will be carried out at Queen's between March 19 and 24.

The World University Service, originally founded in 1920 to help education in war-torn Europe, has for many years led in the field of development education now all over the world.

WUSC sponsors a number of summer study seminars in other nations, primarily the underdeveloped countries where education needs are great. This summer's excursion will be in India and studies will be made of the country's culture and its economic, political and social situation.

WUSC also sponsors scholarships for refugee students in Brazil and South Africa as well as a development scheme in Bangladesh.

This year's SHARE campaign will be placing emphasis on publicizing WUSC and its programmes and to this end a number of activities have been planned for the campaign week.

unclassifieds

GIRL WANTED to share large apartment with 3 others for 1973-74. Own bedroom, good location at King and Earl. Rent reasonable. Phone Sally 546-4306, Kris 546-4306, Kerry 546-2008.

TWO SUBLET FOR SUMMER, 1.0 bedroom apartment, large paneled living room, and bedroom (630) square feet. Only used by lil'ol Chemical engineer on Sundies. Fone 546-1948.

APARTMENT FOR RENT, sublet for summer - option for next year. Three bedroom. $175-month and phone, light heat, insurance, water, door keys. Excellent location (if you can fly). Available May 15.. Phone 544-0347. Bathroom included.

LOOKING FOR AN APARTMENT FOR next year? There's an ideal one available for one or two people, very close to campus. Call 542-7685 after 5:30.

FEELING PHILANTHROPIC? If you have a big apt. available (3 bedroom) for 72-73, call me now at 544-7073 and be rewarded for your humanism. . .

Holy Desperation BATMAN, we sure need a 2 or 3 bedroom apt. quick for next year! $20 reward. Call Crunchie at 544-7132.

Sharon - you are not quite as clothily mature as your might think - you retard.

PLEASE READ THIS! HAVE A 2 or 3 bedroom apartment available for 73-74? Call Pete at 544-7077 NOW. Valuable reward offered.

Dear Gang: DO YOU WANT TO JOIN THE JOHN WILSON FAN CLUB? Call 549-0030 after 7. First meeting tonight 7:30 in fourth stacks. Pack your flashlight for flashlight tag. It's easy! It's fun!

To the girls on BAN RIGH 11: Thanks for the party on Monday - even if it was a bit wet!

THREE-QUARTERS of the FEARSOME FOURSOME -- Thanks, merci, gracias, danke, bitte, ad finitum for the most fantastic birthday and weekend; oh, yes, and the champagne cork, too! Love from the last quarter.XOXO

TO SUBLET: May 1 to Sept. 1. New three bedroom apartment. Stove, refrigerator, laundry facilities.Fully carpeted. Semi or unfurnished. Rent negotiable. 217 Collingwood Street. 544-9366.

TO A CERTAIN REHAB-CHIC: You made my day. I was very flattered but also puzzled. I do not quite understand clearly the implications of the flowers and heart. Who let the cat out of what bag? Bud SUBLET: May 1 to August 30. Two bedroom apartment on Emily St. adjacent to Macdonald Park. Wall to wall carpeting. Rent $130. Call Norm at 544-9559.

ON FRIDAY NITE we visited a Victorian house. The atmosphere of cooking delights tingled the body on entering into this world. Wine and dined by elegant hostesses we continued on once again in the real world thankful for passing into the fourth dimension even though for just an evening. Thanks to Nan and Leslie. The Boys.

SNOWBALL '74. We're looking for a publicity manager, treasurer, organization heads and any suggestions and opinions concerning last year's and this coming year's Snowball. All people interested come to Lowe Vic, 7:30 March 22. Or call Dave 544-4399; Linda 544-8790; Jamie 544-7384.

WANTED: one cheap used refrigerator right now. Please phone Tim Gavin. 542-3832.

The lines to 549-2903 are now closed. (but call anyway.)

FINAL SPRING ROCK AND ROLL CONCERT - the AMS Concert Committee presents the RASPBERRIES and the GOOD BROS. in concert this Sunday. Come out - it's good times.

WANTED: 1 girl to share a 3 bedroom apartment a) for next Sept. - May b) girl needed to stay with 2 nurses May-June (73) Apartment located at Johnson and Victoria Street. If interested, phone 544-8067 or 544-8068.

APARTMENT TO SUBLET for 1 or 2 persons. Modern facilities, Pool, Parking, Utilities Incl., Rent negotiable. Available May 10, Phone 542-7918.

For RENT 5 man furnished house, June 1 to Sept. 1, only 1 minute from campus, cheap, for information call John 544-7259.

FOR SALE: 3 fold-up cots of variable sizes, 2 in excellent shape, includes mattress. Ideal for small apartment bedrooms or use as couch. Inquire at 67 Adelaide St. or phone 544-5614. Rick Simspon.

GAEL GROUP 47 Reunion Tuesday, March 20, in the Pub. See you there!

BUSIT ON March 21 -- $3 can save a lotta shoe leather.

AHA, Miss Feheley! It's Friday!

TOWNHOUSE - modern, spacious, three bedrooms, free parking, ideal for 5 people. 20 minutes from campus. Available May. 542-1918.

ATTENTION! There will be a mass rally of the Weasal Fan Club (WFC) on Sunday, April 29, 1973. All members meet in Room 138 McNeill House at 12:00 p.m. To be followed by a reception in Rm. 144 (c) . . signed THE FOX. (P.S. There will be lots of babe action.) Member(s) only.

POSITION OF swimming director available at a diabetic camp near Huntsville for July and August. Must have Red Cross Instructors. Camping experience preferable but not necessary. Call Fran 544-6434.

FOR SALE: one ladies (medium) racoon coat - $50; one G.E. hairdryer - $10; Solaray electric curlers - $8. Call: Jean 544-3778.

LARRY R.: read the classifieds, please.

BRILLIANT DESIGN for upcoming Artsci 75 T-shirts needed; valuable gift for person designing chosen shirt. Send through campus mail to 149 Morris Hall. Please be brilliant quickly.

WE CANNOT think of anything to say, but BUSIT Anyway. March 21.

FOR SALE: one pair (hopefully) of Lange skates. Fantastic shape - beautiful shape - unbelieveable shape - worn twice - TWICE. If interested phone Brother Dave. 544-7437. I need the money.

THE CHINESE Literature Society presents a pictorial exhibition "To know China". Time March 16 (Fri) 10:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Place: International Centre (Upper Lounge). Admission is free. All are welcome.

TO SUBLET: 4 bedroom house, furnished. Large kitchen and living room. Close to campus at 264 University Ave. Rent negotiable. May to end of August. Phone 542-6680.

WANTED: a five bedroom house or apartment for the 73-74 term (for females.) Phone : 544-8225 or 8227.

LOST: a blue corduroy hat (with "A" in middle) on Toronto bus. (Sunday March 11, 10:00 p.m.) $10 reward - Dave 549-2324.

Q — WHAT'S THE difference between a doughnut and kokonut? The word of a fluff!

SHARE CABARET NITE with Fran Francis, Female Impersonator and Queen's talent. Thursday, March 22. Lower Lounge of the International Centre. 8 pm to 1 am.

WIC BANQUET: Sunday March 25. Tickets available from athletic sticks and in the meal lines.

WE KNOW WHO SLEPT IN Kathy's bed.

FOR SALE: Lady's 5 Speed Bicycle. Less than a year old. It has: kickstand, back carrier, bell, and reflectors. $75. Call Betty Anne - 549-2520.

SHARE BAKE SALE,Monday,March 19th, Victoria Hall 6 pm to 9 pm

TO THE TARTLETTE and the Bosco Boy: Congrats on your engagement. Love from all your friends.

WANTED: A good used bicycle. Call Pete at 542-5453.

LIVE IN A 7 MAN castle for the summer. Avoid the student slums. 556 Johnston. Call 544-7725 or 544-5962, Rent negotiable.

THIS IS JUST A reminder for the Fairy Tale cast reunion, at the pub, Friday, March 16, 2:30 and only invitees: Royal Plumber, 3 daughters (less one), King, Dragon (Front and back, please), Messenger (Don't forget your wings,) and two guards. This meeting proclaimed throughout the land. Sound and FX.

SCRIBES meeting Tuesday at 7 pm. Tricolor Office.

SHARE PUB NIGHT -- with dancing 8 pm to 1 am, Saturday March 24th, MacArthur, College Pub, 8 pm to 1 am

BEDSITTING APARTMENT -- sublet May 1 to Aug 1 or Sept. 1. Can also lease for 73-4. Furnished, Separate kitchen, private bath. Close to campus and downtown. Clean and bright. 546-4442.

ANYONE DOUBTING in mysticism, the Occult or the Supernatural, please call Bob at 544-7581. You will be doingOrientation'73 a big favour.

FOR RENT -- 1 third share on furnished 3 bedroom apt. May 1 to Aug. $60 a month. 544-3640.

LOST: BROWN leather tobacco pouch outside library on Friday night at 11:30. Reward. Tony at 549-2502.

WANTED: A fourth girl preferably in 2nd or 3rd year to share apt with 3 others (own room) 544-8244 or 544-8254.

WANTED A 3 bedroom apt for 73-4. We have a 2 bedroom one, you can have for trade. 544-5459.

TO SUE COISH, Kitty Noble and others involved in the preparations for the Rehab formal. Many thanks for a great evening. OT 76.

ORIENTATION 73 needs a fiddler and square dance caller for September 13. If available, call Carol at 544-8768.

WHO THE HELL screwed up the classifieds today?

FOR RENT: a large three-bedroom apartment. Phone 544-0318

HEY ADDY TWO -- I'm going to come home for a visit one of these days. Love from the phantom who travels in korn frito.

HAVE A NICE vacation, MORRIS, AND DON'T FORGET TO PRINT.

HEY FLUFFO -- he says you apoligized for being bitchy. Don't compromise the cause.

DOES THAT make it 6?

Zambia loses national consciousness to east

by Steven Winnett

Zambia has had to re-orient its political and economic life towards its East African neighbours since independence in 1964, because of the continuing presence of white-supremacist rule in most of the remaining countries of southern Africa. This has produced a somewhat "frozen" situation in the development of a Zambian national consciousness. Such was the substance of a lecture given by Prof. J.A. Reed of the University of Zambia on Tuesday afternoon in Watson Hall.

Professor Reed, Visiting Commonwealth Fellow at Queen's for the next six months, began his talk by outlining Zambia's geo-political situation. The country is bordered by three distinctly unfriendly regions: Rhodesia, Angola, and Mozambique. The colonial development of Zambia has been from the south. Thus what was once Northern Rhodesia was originally a "colony" of Southern Rhodesia, which was in turn a "colony" of South Africa. In Cecil Rhodes' grand scheme of gradual northward British Colonisation until there would be a great railroad "from Cairo to the Cape" (it was never built). Northern Rhodesia was planned as a kind of wedge between the two Portugese colonies. In 1953, Northern and Southern Rhodesia and Nyasaland were united in the Central African Federation, a state which was set up entirely by the European populations of the three colonies. While in other African colonies independence from Britain was accepted as inevitable, the Federation began to talk of Dominion status, a move which was interpreted by African nationalists as an attempt to establish a second large white-supremacist state along the lines of South Africa. By the efforts of these nationalist groups, the Federation was broken up, and Northern Rhodesia became the independent state of Zambia in 1964.

In 1965, Rhodesia unilaterally declared independence from Britain. Zambia offered its territory to Britain as a base for an invasion, an offer which Whitehall did not take up. Zambia accepted the oil blockade of Rhodesia, which meant that she herself was also cut off from oil supplies. Construction of a pipeline to the East has helped to alleviate this problem since.

Indeed, the problem of Rhodesia's continuing independence and British failure to bring down the Smith regime has forced Zambia to re-orient its economy toward East Africa, and especially toward Tanzania, at no small economic cost. Prof. Reed noted that in this respect Rhodesian independence has been of indirect benefit to Zambia, in that Zambia, unlike most newly-independent nations, has had the opportunity to be immediately geared toward the future rather than be tied down to the present.

The consequences of this national decision have been twofold. First, the de-activization of the independence movement has been much slower in Zambia than in other newly-independent African states, and as a result there has been in Zambia "a much slower growth of a parasitic bourgeoisie", living off the profits of Zambia's immense copper resources. Secondly, ideals about the nature of the country have had to be postponed; in the words of President Kaunda, this critical time has "no room for complacency and lofty ideals."

The effect of this on Zambian thought, according to Prof. Reed, has been to "freeze" the situation in a way: while the revolution has not sunk into complacency, there also has not been very much development. No other African nation, for example, is so concerned about what the old "mother country", Britain, will do about Rhodesia. As well, Zambia has become a one-party state, and this party has not yet become "a forum for national debate."

Thus there has been a tremendous amount of activity in Zambia in getting things done but little has been accomplished in the development of a "national consciousness" among Zambians. A national ideology of "Zambian humanism" has been formulated by the ruling party, but its exact nature remains somehwat unclear.

Within Zambian literature, a similar situation of doubt exists. Dominic Malisho's 1971 novel, The Tongue of the Dumb, illustrates the problem Malisho shows that the two societies portrayed in his novel, the European and the African, are not in conflict, but rather are subject to parallel forces of disintegration in their respective theologies - ideologies.

Prof. Reed predicts that the border situation with Rhodesia is likely to take a fairly critical turn in the coming year, especially if Britain makes a settlement with the Smith regime. Thus he is optimistic that the present "frozen" situation in Zambian development will "thaw" as orientation towards East Africa and away from South Africa continues to grow.

YORK UNIVERSITY

FACULTY OF FINE ARTS
SUMMER '73

DANCE
Studios: Modern Ballet
Pas de deux
Improvisation and Composition
Spanish
Jazz
East Indian Dance Forms
History: 20th Century Dance

FILM
Studios: Film and Film-Making
TV Tape and Film
History: The 20th Century Art

MUSIC
Studios: Workshop in Musicianship
Indian Drumming
Jazz
History: Music of the Americas

THEATRE
Studios: About Acting Production
Introduction to Design
Principles of Stage Directing

VISUAL ARTS
Studios: Matrix
Photography
Printmaking

For further information write:
Summer Studies '73
Faculty of Fine Arts
YES Centre
York University
4700 Keele Street
Downsview, Ontario
M3J 1P3
(416) 667-3636

New Outer Council

Continued from Page 3

presenting the motion, commented that he had received several complaints about that quality of the service, specifically concerning the Quebec Winter Carnival trip. It was generally agreed that it would be generally worthwhile for the AMS to undertake an inquiry.

COPSEO

A committee to formulate a response to the report of the Committee on Post-Secondary Education in Ontario, was set up at the request of Steve Brereton. A preliminary draft should be made available in June and a final report will be made to the first Outer Council meeting in October. Kiloran German, External Affairs Commissioner, noted that "we will thus be able to study the report in detail, and consider its immediate effects, and make appropriate recommendations to the government."

Restructuring

Brereton presented a motion by which a committee would undertake a complete review of the purpose of the AMS and in which structure the AMS could best achieve its purpose. Brereton commented that the committee would discuss the purpose of the AMS, "where it's headed, where it came from, how it works in relation to such bodies as Senate and Faculty Board." The AMS in previous years, "has had difficulty looking critically at itself," he commented.

Other Business

In recognition of Andy Pipe's long and valuable service to the AMS in his years at Queen's, Outer Council voted unanimously to make him an honorary life member of the Alma Mater Society. Previous recipients of this award are Alan Broadbent, former Queen's University rector, Patrick Riley, former MS President, and Colonel Sam MacLaughlin.

Trotter stressed that the awarding of an honorary life membership "is not a token thing and it is only awarded to outstanding students." However he pointed out that the practice should not come up every year. Brereton had high praise for Pipe and he also echoed Trotters words in adding that the Tricolor Award still represented the highest award given to students for extra curricular activities.

In other business, the Outer Council agreed to loan the Student Typing Service an amount of $5000. Queen's Student Agencies Director, Paul Mahaffy, outlined the reason for the request. The actual typing service, he pointed out, accounts for 15 per cent of all revenue. He noted however that the Student Typing Service has been losing money on the larger Zerox machine that is used for large volume copying. The $5000 was necessary in order to clear up outstanding debts to the Zerox company.

Gary Gannage, rector, commented that the financial situation of the Typing Service was reaching "Heffalump proportions". Outer Council decided that the problem will be studied during the summer and fall.

Outer Council voted to have its meeting next week at McArthur College.

The Outer Council unanimously extended its congratulations to the new members of the Tricolor Society.

Marv Bloos, was appointed Deputy Speaker of Outer Council. Nominations for Speaker are still open.

CHEAP ROOMS FOR THE SUMMER

Furnished rooms at $50-mo. for single and only $60-mo. for double (1 or 2). Sundeck on the 14th floor, parking, sauna, great view, cool breeze on hot evenings. Best deal in town for intercession. Full kitchens and living rooms in each unit. Also, apartments available on sublet starting soon. Get on the list early.

Phone Doug Fletcher, 544-1842
between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m.
or come to Elrond.
No deposit 'til Spring

REQUEST FOR SUBMISSIONS TO THE JOINT COMMITTEE ON EXTENSION OF THE ACADEMIC YEAR

What is the academic merit of an extension of the Academic Year in the Faculties of Applied Science and Arts and Science from two twelve week terms to two thirteen week terms considering that:

(1) The present academic schedule is demanding on students and staff. Is there anything to be gained by adding to the teaching load - or would it be better if the present load were spread over a longer 'think' period?

(2) Increased costs for students staying in Kingston another two weeks

(3) A longer Academic Year for upper year students means an opportunity to work longer at their subjects?

Submission of views, both for and against extension, from students and staff in the Faculties concerned, to be sent to:

W. R. Conkie, Chairman,
Joint Committee on Extension of Each Academic Term,
Stirling Hall, Queen's University.

Wax Works

Some More Trivia and the Grammy's

by Geoff Henning

A lot of people commented that they liked the Trivia column I had in a while ago so here are some more questions.

What ten movies are the following songs from?

1. The First Time Ever I Saw Your Face
2. The Sweetheart Tree
3. Something in the Air (2 movies)
4. Moon River
5. Windmills of your Mind
6. What Is A Youth
7. Shadow of Your Smile
8. Look of Love
9. The Weight
10. Everybody's Talking

The Movies are:

1. Play Misty For Me
2. The Great Race
3. Magic Christian or the Strawberry Statement
4. Breakfast at Tiffany's
5. Thomas Crowne Affair
6. Romeo and Juliet
7. Sandpiper
8. Casino Royale
9. Easy Rider
10. Midnight Cowboy

In 1972 Carole King was honoured at the Grammy Award Presentation. How many Grammys did she win and for what categories? Miss King won four Grammy for:

1. Best Album - Tapestry
2. Best Record - It's Too Late
3. Best Song - You've Got a Friend (recorded by James Taylor)
4. Best Female Performer

What three singles did Carly Simon record before You're So Vain?

They were That's The Way I've Always Heard It Should Be, Anticipation and A Legend In Your Own Time.

Helen Reddy achieved success with her version of a song from a popular rock opera. Now for a triple question: What was the single, who sang the song on the original album and who wrote the title song from the album?

The song was I Don't Know How To Love Him from Jesus Christ Superstar. The song was done by Yvonne Elliman on the Album and the title song was written by Leonard Bernstein.

Who is this person? His father is a famous actor recognized mainly for his work in musicals. This person has recorded such songs as Windmills of Your Mind and Leonard Cohen's Suzanne and he also starred with Stephanie Powers in the T.V. show The Girl from U.N.C.L.E.

This is Noel Harrison, the son of Rex Harrison.

Who is the person who has written the musical scores from the following movies:

A Man and A Woman
The Thomas Crowne Affair
The Umbrellas of Cherbourg and Summer of 42?

He is the talented French composer Michel Legrand.

Well there are some unexpected surprises in Grammy Award winners this year, Probably the biggest are was the fact that The First Time Ever I Saw Your Face won both categories of Best Record and Best Song. Roberta Flack did a superb job on the recording of the song and she just may have a Grammy coming to her next year for her single Killing Me Softly With His Song.

Concert for Bangla Desh managed somehow to win Best Album although I can't see why. The album, which is a collage of music by George Harrison and "his friends", is as far as I was concerned, not even worth an honourable mention never mind winning the award.

Nilssen Schmillsen is one of the best albums I've heard. The variety of songs from the novelty song Coconut to the very touching Without You Shows a man with a great versatility in both writing and recording songs.

America won the Award for the Best New Performers. Their success with the albums America and Homecoming is tremendous. This group, unlike many other new groups, should be around for quite a while.

After all the hassle with Curtis Mayfield and his songs Superfly and Freddie's Dead, the award for best Rhythm and Blues Vocal Performance went to Billy Paul for his song Me and Mrs. Jones.

A big surprise was the fact that Don McLean was shut out of awards in the three categories he was in. I was literally amazed that American Pie didn't win at least one award. After the tremendous popularity of the song one wonders on what grounds Grammy winners are based. It appears right now that any song that's Number One for the year doesn't win a Grammy Award the next year.

My predictions in an earlier column weren't very good. I think the only one I got right was America. O well, no harm in trying.

RASPBERRIES

Eric Carmen: piano, bass, spokesman-leader, music student, Cleveland Institute of Music, former member of the group Cyrus Erie.

Jim Bonfanti: drums, ex trovert, merrymaker, says he learned to play by rapping a butter knife on the kitchen furniture, former member of the Choir.

Wally Bryson: lead guitar, born in North Carolina, says he learned to play by imitating the Rolling Stones, former member of the Mods and the Choir.

David Smalley: rhythm guitar, born in Dill City Pennsylvania, moved to Cleveland, joined the Mods and later the Choir.

Altogether the Raspberries are a group which calls Cleveland its home and record for Capitol Record Company. So far they have released two albums, Raspberries and Fresh Raspberries; each album has produced a gold-record single: "Go All The Way" from the first and "I Wanna Be With You" from the second. Unfortunately as is true with many groups, especially new ones, both these singles sound almost identical. But the group is much more versatile than their first singles let the public know. On both albums they display a talent that shows a fairly good range of musical styles. The group attributes the variety in their music to several factors. They each write independently of one another although occassionally some collaboration takes place. Eric is credited with most of the arrangements on their albums. His creative touchtransformeda ballad like "It Seems So Easy" to a rock tune and added the necessary spice to make "Go All The Way" a hit.

Although the group does not like being compared to the Beatles in reviews there are similarities in style and presentation. The Raspberries feel there is a certain amount of inherent "Beatleness" in most contemporary rock sounds; their style is reminiscent of early Beatles. However they also believe that a group should be judged on individual merit.

The group is not really concerned about their so called "clean cut" look, they would still sound the same if they were bald or if they had hair down to their ankles - their primary concern is audience reactions, whether it concerns their albums or their live performances. Eric Carmen says indignantly, "Who says I'm supposed to be as 'cute' as Paul (McCartney)? I'm not a model, I'm a musician! . . The real review is the Gold Record on our wall!"

Appearing with the group this Sunday is an Ontario group called The Good Brothers. These musicians have received several good reviews for their appearances in Canada and the United States. They will be appearing with Arlo Guthrie in his upcoming tour.

This is the Raspberries premiere Canadian concert. Go and see this group and the Good Brothers Sunday night in Grant Hall.

What it's like to be a stripper

by Brook Macpherson

What's it really like being a stripper? This question and many more were answered by two girls presently "taking it off" at Kingston's newest body shop, Aunt Bee's.

Abbey is an attractive outgoing, talkative, 22 year old stripper with a smile and personality that never quits on or off stage. She dropped out of school in her late teens and began working as a secretary. "That didn't last long", she said. "I got fired for being too friendly. I hitched around Western Canada for a while but it wasn't until I got back to Canada that I got my first dancing job. It was really funny, being on stage. I was like a little kid. For the first six months all I could do was smile. I guess that was OK though. I think I reminded them (the audience) of their daughters."

macpherson

Roxanne

"When I go on stage, I think about seducing the audience. Not all the time though. Sometimes I just want to become friends and I'll strip differently." They're only human you know- the nicer you come across, the better they like it."

When asked if her private life reflects the mood on stage, she replied, "When I leave the dressing room I leave my personal life there too."

What's a Kingston audience like? "Let's put it this way. Playing out of town (her home base is Toronto) is like a paid vacation. A small town audience is easy to please."

"I don't want many things. Just a roof over my head, lots of music around me and people to love. The only hassle to this game are some of the club managers. Some treat us like trash. Most strippers I know have more morals than a secretary."

The featured stripper, Roxanne, is a very soft spoken trilingual who graduated complete with scholarship from an Ottawa high school. She started out as a ballet dancer but ill health soon ended this chosen career. "There were no jobs, at least none that let you live comfortably. Living is not seeing three weeks pay going only for rent. I started dancing topless in bars but once I got pulled off stage and figured this is not for me. I had a friend who introduced me to belly dancing. It was really fun. I even went to a belly dancing school but they were only interested in getting students and not preparing you for a job. Of course there's no money in it because you don't take off your clothes."

macpherson

Abbey

"I have always been interested in drama, both acting and contemporary dancing. In fact I tend not to be happy unless I'm on stage."

Roxanne is happily married and lives in Toronto. Most of her spare time is spent raising cacti. She spends one or two weeks every month on the road. Most of her jobs are booked through an agency.

"Being featured usually pays $200 to $250 a week. It sounds like a lot but one of my costumes including veils gowns, bras, panties and g-string may cost as much as $200. Depending on how you take care of things, they (the costumes) can last anywhere from two months to two years. The biggest problem is losing them, either in the dressing room or forgetting them on stage. I try to save some money by making my own."

Roxanne and Abbey will be in Kingston until Saturday.

Leprechaun Days

Friday, March 16

12:00-8:00 pm - Nursing Science presents Back Rub Days. Polson Room, Students Union. Price 50c per backrub.

3:30 - 5:30 pm - Principal's Committee on the Status of Women. Open Meeting - come and see what the committee is doing, voice your ideas, complaints etc. 2nd floor Common Room.

8:00 pm - Liberation Support Movement Information Center presents an Audio Visual program - Revolution in Africa. (Films) Dupuis Aud.

8:30 pm - All welcome. African Club Party. Lower Lounge International Centre. Admission free.

8:30 pm - The Dorian Woodwind Quintet willperform on the last Dunning Hall Series Concert of this season presented by the Division of Concerts. The programme will include works by J. S. Bach, Milhaud, Berio, Ibert, Vivaldi and Reicha. Dunning Hall.

8:30 pm - The Drama Dept. presents Tony Montanaro's "Mime's Eye View." Tickets are available from the Drama Dept. at $2.50 non-students, $1.50 students. McArthur Aud.

Saturday, March 17

9:00 pm - Hillel House Dance and Casino Night with music by the "Anything Co." Refreshments and bar; $1.00 singles and $1.50 couples. All welcome.

9:30 pm - At Hillel House. Purim Casino Night. "Play-Dance-Drink."

Sunday, March 18

10:30 am - Dunning Aud. Folk Mass followed by coffee and donuts at Newman House.

11:00 am - University Service, Memorial Chapel.

2:00 - 5:00 pm - Two Kingston Artists Trevor Hodgson and Robert Van De Peer. You are invited to meet the artists at the opening of their exhibition. The exhibition wil continue until April 1. Agnes Etherington.

4:00 pm - Eucharistic Celebration at Queen's Theological Hall. Faculty Lounge. 2nd floor. All welcome.

5:30 pm - Liberation Study Group presents a Sunday Supper in the Lower Lounge of the International Centre followed by a talk on Puerto Rico by Humberto Pagan - a Puerto Rican writer and poet. Dinner $1.00 per person.

7:30 pm - Folk Mass in Senior Common Room at McArthur Hall.

7:30 pm - Concert: Queen's Chamber Singers and Queen's Chamber Orchestra. Under the direction of Dr. Rudolph Schnitzler. Elegisher Gesang, Opus 118; Haydn, Missa Brevis No. 5; Mozart, Regina Coeli. St. George's Cathedral.

8:30 pm - The Raspberries along with The Good Brothers will be playing in concert live at Grant Hall. Tickets are $2.00 with concert card and $2.50 general admission.

Monday, March 19

2:30 pm - Composition Recital: Electronic and instrumental works written and performed by Bachelor of Music Students, Dunning Aud.

Tuesday, March 20

7:30 - 9:30 pm - Meeting of Queen's Spanish Club. Movies from the Spanish Embassy. "Palma de Mallorca" and "Toledo". i Vengan Vds., hablamos espanol!

7:30 - 10:00 pm - Public Lecture sponsored by Sociology Department. Stirling D. "James Bay Hydro Project."

Wednesday, March 21

8:00 pm - Philosophy Dept. and DSC will have Professor John Slater (Chairman U. of T. Philosophy Dept.) to speak on "One Hundred Years of Bertrand Russell." Dupuis Aud.

Physical Education Centre Information - Jock Harty Arena Ice Removal. The ice will be removed for the season from Jock Harty Arena at 6:30 pm on Wednesday, March 28.

Off Campus

Theatres

Capitol - The Snowball Express
Hyland - Aventi
Odeon - The Mechanic

Pubs

Commodore - Bev Marie and the Canadian Show Band
401 Inn - Mainstream
Manor - Honey West
Seaway Pub - Stage Train

BITTERGROUNDS

AN OLD FRIEND OF THE Grounds, Mose Scarlett, will be playing at the Grounds this weekend. Having played here many times, Mose has always performed to enthusiastic audiences.

A fun person, Mose has been a terrific hit with previous audiences due to his warmth and his ability to produce a cozy and relaxing atmosphere. Having a wide range of performing styles, from blues to sing alongs to new renditions of familiar material, Mose is a great performer. His voice and guitar playing are both amusing and interesting.

His rapport with his audience provides for funfilled evenings. So if you missed him before or want to see him again come and join Mose at the Bitter Grounds upstairs in the Union Friday and Saturday nights March 16th and 17th from 8 p.m. to midnight.

Canada: Women employed grows

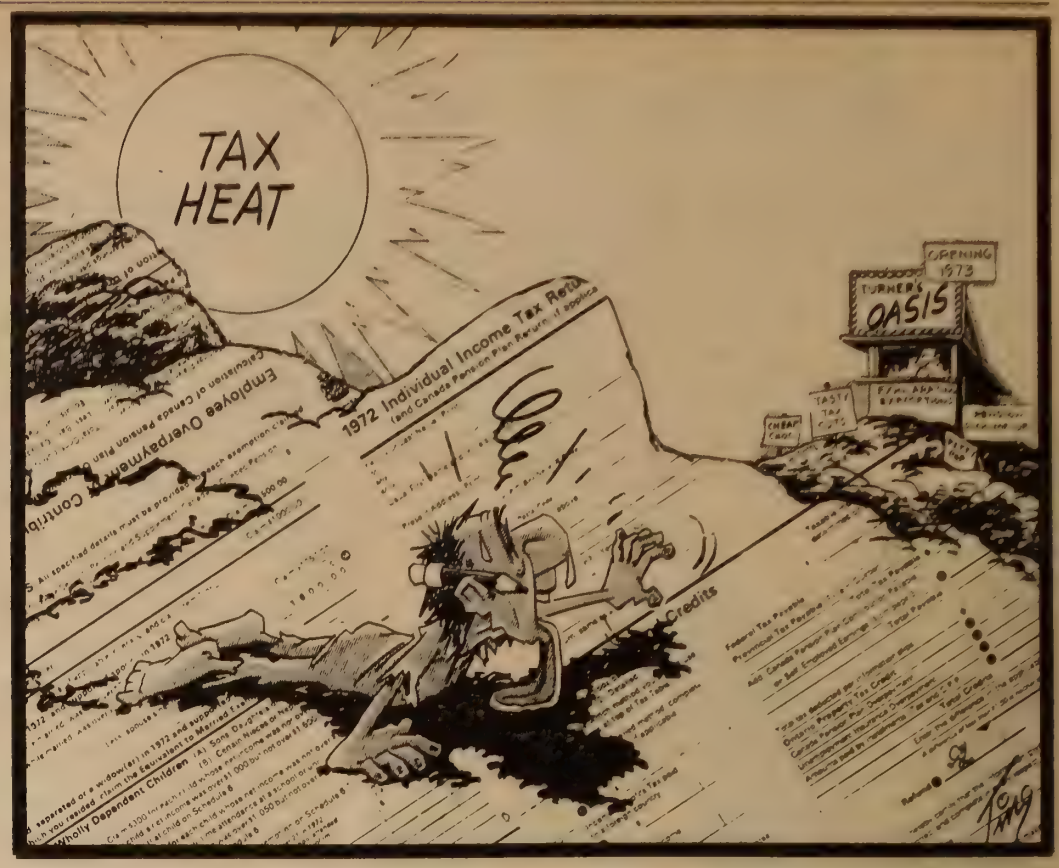
OTTAWA — The unemployment picture has shown marked improvement as 33,000 persons who were jobless in January have found employment bringing the percentage still unemployed in February down to a seasonally adjusted 5.9 per cent from 6.2 per cent in the previous month.

At the same time the labour force experienced a 57,000 person increase to 8,938,000 people and the number of women employed increased to 2,876,000 from 2,816,000.

Ontario unemployment fell to 5.7 per cent of the labour force or 170,000 persons. In Canada there were 482,000 men and 173,000 women out of work.

TORONTO — The Ontario government has announced that it will propose a set of informal tirbunals to deal with minor traffic offences.

Attorney-General Dalton Bales, in outlining the proposals stated that it would help take some of the pressure off our overloaded court system and make appeals by motorists less expensive.



In the new system, police officers would not be called on to give evidence in the case and the prosecutors would be specially trained law clerks also replacing the police.

Bales suggested that the tribunals would be introduced cautiously and expanded as funds permit.

OTTAWA — The Gross National Product has broken the $100 billion mark but the new record comes primarily at the expense of greater inflation.

The GNP, which includes the value of goods and services produced, reached $102.9 billion compared with last year's $93.1 billion. Of the 10.6 per cent increase, inflation accounted for 5.1 per cent leaving real growth in the economy at 5.5 per cent, the same as last year.

The bulk of the gains that the increase might have had for the labour force was offset by labour force increases last year.

The major gains came in the area of public consumption aided by growth in disposable incomes. Farm production showed a loss, however, due to bad weather and labour problems. Spending on new cars increased by a hefty 15.5 per cent and food outlay increased by 13 per cent and most of this was offset by inflation.

back page

British workers' strike

World: Government, trains, hospitals halted

LONDON — Strike-torn Britain is being hit by yet another dissident faction as 4,000 civil servants are beginning a series of selective strikes throughout the country in opposition to Prime Minister Edward Heath's tough anti-inflationary policies.

The civil servants' one-day strike, their first in British history, almost paralysed government business activity. Meanwhile, the island's railway system remains chaotic with the periodic walkouts, and trains running late as well as being cancelled. The strike by non-medical staff of the country's hospitals is still continuing and has caused evacuation of many of the institutions.

PARIS — Six of the nine European Economic Community members have reached accord on the joint-float proposal brought before them two weeks ago. The move will mean that these country's currencies will be pegged in terms of each other then allowed to float as a unit against the American dollar.

The policy came about in hopes of stabilizing the international speculation against the dollar which was forcing virtually every European currency to come under speculative pressures.

The implication now is that the European nations would not be forced to continue purchases of American dollars in support of its pegged rate and that it would now be forced to seek its own level.

Britain, Eire, and Italy, already floating their currencies did not join the other countries in the joint float. These countries were basically adverse to supporting other European currencies which would come under pressure with respect to each other so that their peg might be maintained.

Germany revalued their mark by 3 per cent at the outset and it is hoped that the joint float will have a balancing influence on the strong pressure that has been exerted on the mark vis a vis the dollar.

As a result of the new program, the dollar will be at the mercy of speculative pressures and so will depend on investor confidence which in turn will partly be invoked by how much the European countries will allow their currencies to float upward against the dollar.

However, it is expected that if the upward pressure becomes too strong due to the stronger currencies, the other European Economic Community members may lose their willingness to continue the alliance.

MANILLA — The last American prisoner of war from the Korean War has been released by the Republic of China, after a plea from President Richard Nixon asking that he be returned to his ailing mother.

The former CIA spy had been in Chinese prisons for 21 of his 42 years.

SAIGON — The withdrawal of American troops from Vietnam has resumed after a brief stoppage last week to ensure that the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong were still going to act in good faith and release the remaining 286 American POW's being held.

Shortly afterwards the North Vietnamese released an additional 108 prisoners and the Viet Cong announced that they would be releasing an additional 30.

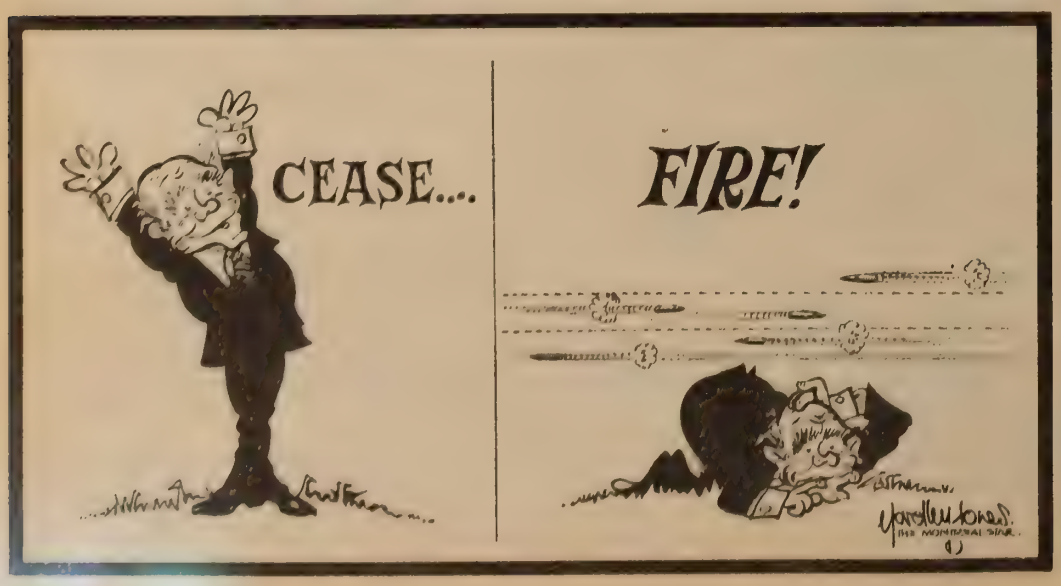
This leaves 156 to be removed by the March 28 deadline which is also the deadline for total withdrawal of American troops. There are at the present 6,935 American troops left in Vietnam of an original 23,516. There are also 5,607 foreign allied troops, mainly South Koreans.

PARIS — The Gaullist party managed to come through the second and decisive round of the French elections with a razor thin majority but combined with the allied parties it gives them a strong 271 of the 490 contested National Assembly seats.

The Socialist-Communist coalition managed to only muster 181 seats more than they had before but certainly not as many as they were expected to receive.

The Gaullist ranks were badly depleted, losing 100 to the other parties in addition to Foreign Minister Maurice Schumann, spelling a desire for new blood and elimination of the social inequalities.

Re-elected Gaullist Premier Pierre Messmer stated that he was prepared to follow up the French electorate's demands.



WASHINGTON — The first public rift in the International Commission of Control and Supervision came earlier this week as Canadian frustration mounted following refusal by two other delegations to follow up an investigation of a Hanoi missile base which the Canadian team reported seeing.

Head of the Canadian delegation Michael Gauvin called for the probe but was blocked and he subsequently threatened withdrawal of the Canadian contingent. However, North Vietnam has since removed the base and it is expected to be due to the public protests made by Gauvin.

HAMILTON, Bermuda — A state of emergency has been declared on this island as police hunt for the assassins of Bermuda's Governor, Sir Richard Sharples appointed to the British colony in October.

BUENOS AIRES — The Peronist supporters gained their first victory in 17 years as Argentinians were allowed to elect their own assembly after years of military rule.

President-elect Hector Campora, hand picked by the expelled dictator Juan Peron during a recent visit to Argentina ran on a platform of renewal of relations with Cuba, a raise for workers' salaries and a promised battle with the military over political prisoners. Other policies revealed during the election campaign were state control of bank credit, the oil industry, petro-chemicals and steel and other basic industries not already controlled by the government.

Queen's
Journal
Volume One Hundred, No. 47
Tuesday, March 20, 1973

And Now, Only Once A Week

In a move of ecological concern, The Journal has decided to help save the forests of North America by publishing only once a week until September, with the exception of a few dead weeks.

The decision came after long arguments over the state of essays, exams, and events on campus. After another long discussion, Thursday was picked as the once-a-week publication date.

Journal printer, John Morris, said "fine, now I can play golf on Mondays and Thursdays".

The change will not take effect until next week.

Status of Women Committee

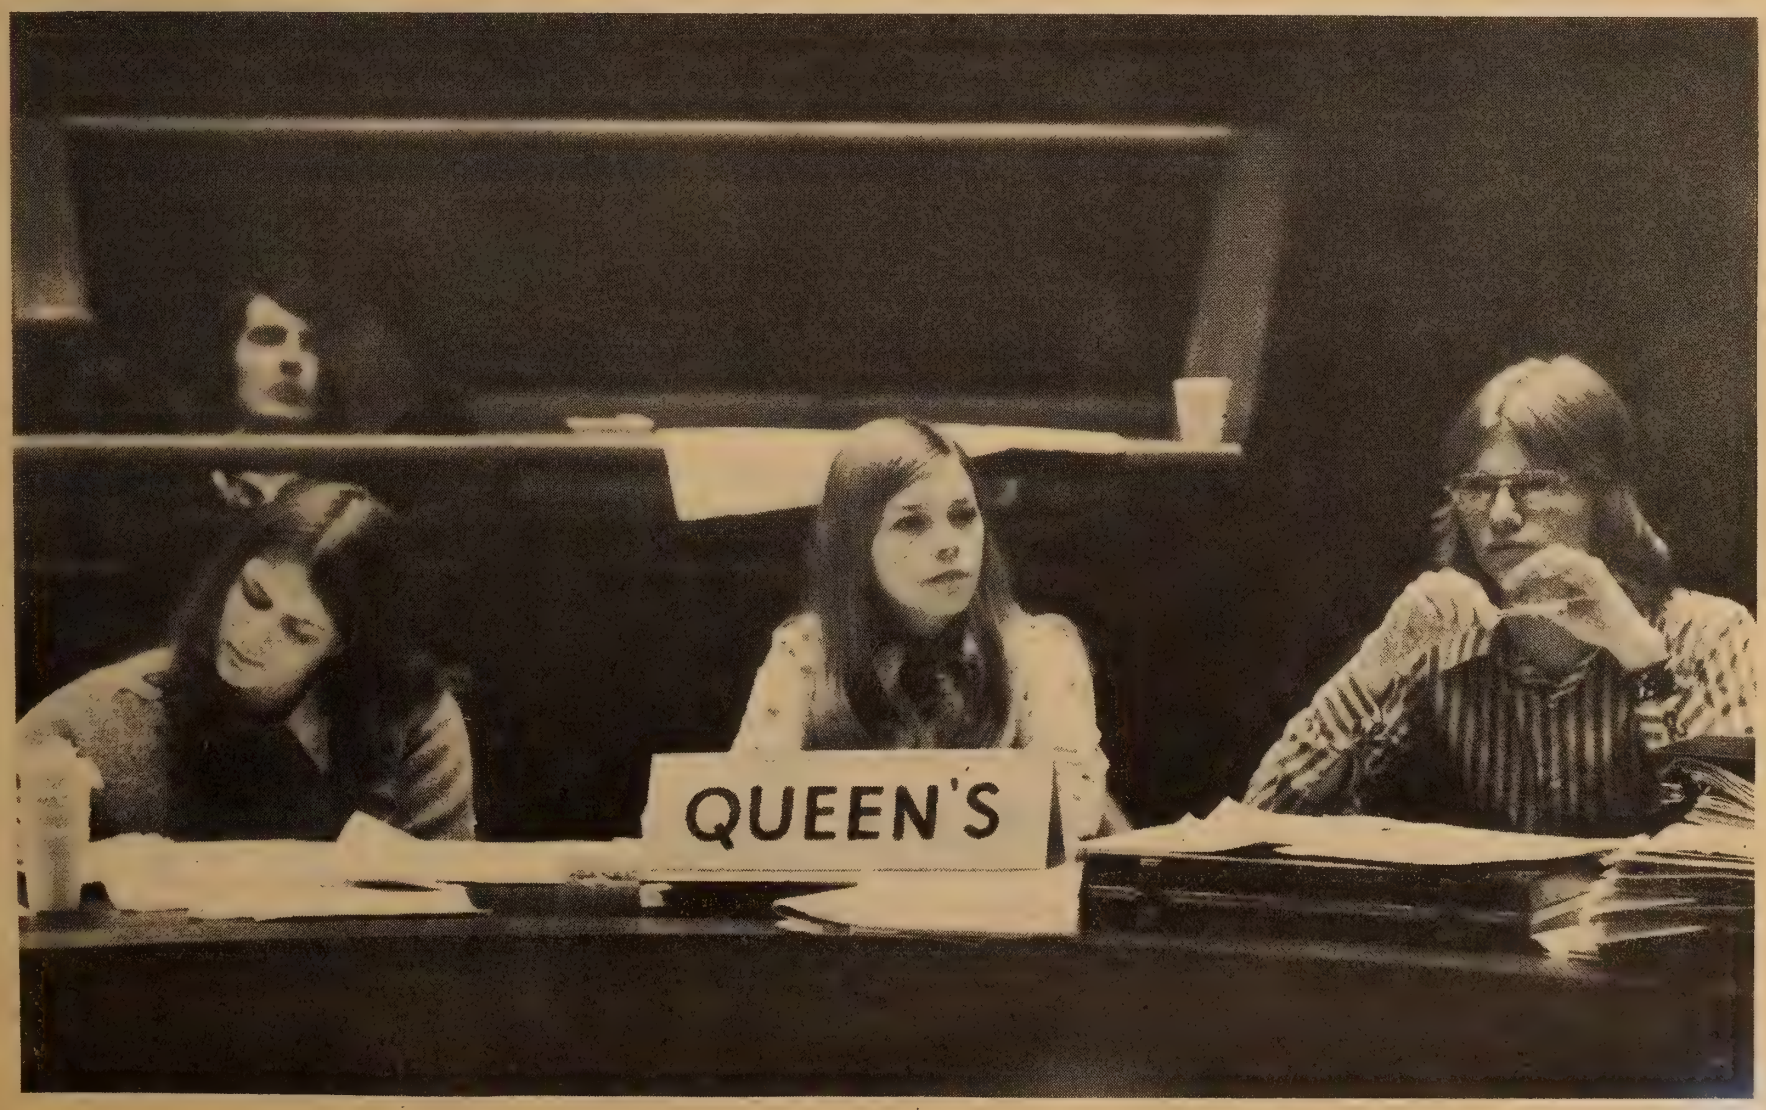
Discovers evidence of discrimination

by Sandra Bernstein

A meeting was held Friday, at which the public was given an opportunity to meet with members of the Principal's Committee on the Status of Women at Queen's. The committee, which plans more meetings of this sort, will release its report several months from now. For this reason, chairman Mrs. L. Good emphasized at the outset that any opinions expressed by members are personal and do not reflect a consensus of the committee. Nevertheless, a fairly lively discussion was provoked among the sixteen people in attendance Friday.

The report will deal with the conclusions of the committee, its recommendations, and will hopefully dispel some of the myths about the role of women on campus. It will examine women as students, faculty, and non-academic staff.

Regarding the faculty, Mrs. Good said that there were very few women in this category. A working committee is currently examining confidential data on their status, and, she commented, will have to take extra precautions to protect the privacy of individuals since in some cases numbers are so low that people might otherwise be identifiable.



On the subject of non-faculty women, she stated that there are more of these, and that the committee is examining their distribution and placement. A major problem, she remarked, is that there is virtually no mobility in this area of employment, particularly between departments. The committee has had more representations on a personal basis in this category than in any other.

However, the formation of a staff association and the innovation of job posting have created more ferment, and employees now have the right to apply, at least, for open positions. Mrs. E. Flint, a committee member, has been instrumental in this agitation. She suggested that mobility is becoming a more accepted and positive concept at Queen's. However, she sees a need for across-the-board standardization of job levels, to ensure fair salaries, and for job-posting bulletin boards. As several women at the meeting pointed out, many employees are married women who cannot move from Kingston because their husbands are employed here. This "captive staff" has a particular need for challenge and career development. One person observed Friday that many secretaries at Queen's hold degrees, and are therefore probably not being given the chance to fullfil their potential. An employee stated that in the past, "If you did well, that was where you were left", and that one's boss could intervene in one's promotions. She wondered whether this had changed. Mrs. Flint replied that official university policy has now been changed so that job mobility is an accepted part of employment; bosses should have, at present, no authority to prevent this.

Mrs. Good pointed out that many of these abuses do not apply specifically to women, but due to their effect on female employees, will be dealt with in the committee's report. And, as another woman observed, many problems such as salary raises by percentages would never have arisen if men were in those positions. Several committee members emphasized a need to reiterate grievances against the existing structure, to carry them through. As Mrs. Good said, there is often no battle, once you make something an issue, but this takes that initial spark of courage to begin. Perhaps, some thought, women are too compliant in many cases.

Mrs. Good wondered at the small turnout at the meeting, and was told that many secretaries and other employees had been very keen on coming but had been afraid to ask for the time off work. This surprised her, since such time off is a right of each employee.

continued on page 2

Some of our "women in power", Kiloran German and Lyn Whitham talk it up at the OFS conference in Toronto on Saturday.

Status of women committee

continued from page 1

During a discussion of attitude problems, Gail Brent, a law professor and committee member, said that barriers to female professionals will probably linger for a long time, although it will not be discrimination on which one could put one's finger. She remarked that with the advent of the equal rights code, prospective employers became less honest about their biases. Mrs. Good gave the example, in another respect, of a high school student of her acquaintance whose mother will not let her go to university, let alone enter Commerce, because the girl is "too pretty"

A Psychology student gave another instance of attitude problems. One professor told her quite bluntly that it was common for attractive female students to be given high but undeserved marks by male professors, and implied that this was acceptable practice. In another conversation, professors were considering the hiring of a male candidate for the faculty, and when she suggested that there was another candidate, a woman, whose qualifications were very good, they stated that she must be worse. However, when the fact emerged that the candidate had once modelled, the professors expressed interest in her coming and giving a "show", although they were wary of tripling the female staff in one year by hiring a second new woman. There was also considerable concern that a female prof could not be "feminine", since "at Queen's they only like feminine women." The student was upset by what she considered to be bigoted attitudes, and regretted that these men could not look on women as colleagues.

Another student, who has found in her studies very little prejudice, although in a predominantly male field, expressed anger that a friend in thermal physics had been told flatly that "women are not intelligent enough to go into science". This friend, furthermore, was unknowingly given an unjustly poor letter of recommendation for a job, because she is a woman.

Mrs. K. Morand, a professor in the department of Art History, pointed out that in the United States if a suitable woman is rejected for a position, she is required by law to receive a written explanation. In some institutions, grants are being withheld from universities until quotas of female faculty members are met. Mrs. Morand, however, is of the opinion that such quotas are condescending.

One woman, an English student, wondered why it was that no female received a tricolor award this year, why most graduate students are men, and so on. She wondered whether females have mental cut-off points which induce them to stop, for instance, at a B.A. Mrs. Morand confirmed this from her own observations, saying that many women seem to lack drive, though not ability. She said that women who pursue careers do have to sacrifice. Although it is feasible to return to school when one's children are past infancy, she said, the shorter career which will follow qualification may affect one's job potential and pension.

WARNING: The Department of National Health and Welfare advises that danger to health increases with amount smoked

SHARE WEEK

March 19-24

Thursday, March 22

SHARE Cabaret Night, Fran Francess, Canada's leading female impersonator and Queen's talent.

Lower Lounge International Centre, 8 pm - 1 am

Saturday, March 24

SHARE Pub Nite and dance to the music of Bolt Upright

McArthur Pub, 8 pm - 1 am

How about a

"Dief the Chief"

Day

Or more interesting courses such as environmental studies? Is there someone you would like to see or hear speak? Is there something you would like to learn about?

Bring your ideas to the:

Education Commission Meeting

March 25, 1:30 pm, McLaughlin Room

newsbriefs

Bus-It referendum tomorrow

Tomorrow Queen's students will be asked to vote on a $3.00 increase in the non-academic fee which will provide unlimited use of Kingston buses for the 1973-74 school term.

In spite of spurious advertising, this is not a free service.

The actual cost of providing the service is $5.00 per student for 8½ months but the university has offered to pay $2 per student to the Kingston Public Utilities Commission in order to offset the cost to students.

The AMS reached an agreement last month with the PUC regarding the cost per student of the proposed bus service. This was calculated on the basis of the number of students using the buses during the Bus-it experiment in October.

If the fee increase does not pass, the university has not considered so far, making arrangements for a bus service between the main and west campuses in the coming year. "We'll have to face that if and when it comes up," Ross Kennedy, Vice-Principal, (Administration).

Pipe foresaw several advantages in the scheme. Primarily, increased use of public transit facilities would help to alleviate the parking problem on campus, he indicated.

SVB receiving volunteer requests

The SVB is still receiving requests for volunteers from city agencies. Have you some spare time? Are you going to be here in the spring and summer?

If you are a swimmer, how about the following:

-a male student with Red Cross Bronze, to take and swim with a 16 year old emotionally disturbed boy. Wed. from 11:30 a.m. to noon, at the YMCA.

-another swimmer is needed for Tuesday afternoons for Sunnyside kids.

- swim instructors needed from April 19th to May 17th on Thursdays from 3:30 to 4:30 at the Queen's Pool (A male also needed to supervise the change room during that time.)

Other needs:

- two volunteers with their own transportation for a Thursday night Youth Centre - 7 to 9 p.m. on Highway 15.

We have continuing needs, if none of the above interest you. Stop by our Office in the Union or give us a call at 547-5766.

A thought for returning volunteers - come on in to the office and sign up as soon as you can - there is no reason for you to wait until SVB Nite in October to commit yourself as a volunteer. The sooner you sign up the sooner some of the agencies can start their programs in the Fall. This office will be open (we expect) starting Labor Day week.

Agnes Etherington director

Principal John J. Deutsch has announced the appointment of Mr. Michael Bell as Director of the Agnes Etherington Art Center, effective May 1, 1973.

Mr. Bell, who holds a B.A. and M.A. degree from the University of Toronto in Fine Arts, has been Head of the Paintings, Drawings and Prints Section of the Public Archives of Canada since 1968. In this capacity he has had custodial responsibility for the very large picture collection in the Archives and for its conservation. In 1972, he was instrumental in organizing the first public exhibition of water colours and drawings from the Public Archives.

(Image of Canada-Visage du Canada) which will be seen in ten major centers across Canada.

Under Mr. Bell's leadership, the Art Center will continue to play an active role in the cultural life of the campus and the community. A major event of this year at the Center will be the five-month exhibition entitled Heritage Kingston, a visual representation covering the more than 300 years since the establishment of a community on the site of Kingston.

New director for School of Planning

It has been announced that Professor Gerald Hodge who has been in the Department of Urban and Regional Planning at the University of Toronto since 1964, has been named to the Directorship of the School of Urban and Regional Planning, effective July 1, 1973.

Hodge holds degrees from the University of British Columbia, the University of California at Berkeley and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and has held teaching positions at M.I.T. and U.B.C.

Prof. Hodge has wide professional and research experience involving urban and regional problems in Ontario and in most other provinces of Canada. He recently spent a year studying the relation of cultural patterns of Canadian Indians to the needs of modernization and economic planning, doing his field work at Moose Factory.

One of the more recent of his forty publications was a report on The Supply and Demand for Planners in Canada, a study of particular usefulness to his new positions.

Learning Society debate

Deutsch backs Wright Report

by Bob Mutrie

The problem of accountability of post-secondary institutions to the government and maintenance of autonomy for universities and community colleges was the major theme of a discussion on the Report on Post-Secondary Education given at the Empire Club in Toronto by Principal John J Deutsch.

His remarks closely paralled those made at a panel discussion of the Report held at Queen's last Tuesday at which David Black, a member of the Commission and Craig Heron, General Co-Ordinator of Ontario Federation of Students also presented their views.

Deutsch discussed the maintenance of adequate accountability while allowing universities "freedom from intervention both from the deadening hand of bureaucracy and the capricious will of politics".

Deutsch was enthusiastic about the proposal in the report which recommended the establishment of a council which would act as a buffer between the government and the universities. Deutsch noted that the council would be vested with both planning and executive functions which he felt were "essential for the achievent of public accountability", and noted further that it would be removed from the normal machinery of government.

Heron, however, was less optimistic about the proposed council pointing out that "most members are to be appointed by the government" and that the chairman would head a large bureaucratic staff. He also took exception to the fact that the commission was given broad, poorly defined powers and called for a clarification of their responsibilities.

Deutsch, during the question and answer period which followed the panel discussion of the Learning Society debate, noted in reply to Heron's statement, that whether or not the buffer committee just becomes another arm of the government depends on the philosophy of the committee. He added that a wrong kind of philosophy would leave a lot of people unsatisfied. He stressed that somebody has to appoint them and commented that there has been provision made for public representation.

Deutsch further noted that the university's autonomy could only be ensured under the recommendations of the Commission. Under the new system, he pointed out, students would be bearing a much larger responsibility for the financing of post-secondary education operating costs. Where the government now provides 90 per cent of the needed funds the proposals would reduce this by 33 per cent to 50 per cent, the rest being borne by students. This he felt would be a major factor in reducing the degree of interference by the government.

From the standpoint of both the institution and the student, Deutsch insisted that education is essentially a private and non-governmental affair. He assured the audience that he believed that universities must maintain a high degree of independence in order to achieve their purpose and in order to best serve society.

On the question of accessibility of education to low income and minority groups, Heron felt that the Wright Commission Report was somewhat inadequate. He claimed that too much attention was devoted to those who have already been drawn into the universities and colleges and too little for those who have not considered it.

Heron felt that the Commission's intent to impose a range of alternatives was still geared towards the segments of the population which are already in post-secondary institutions. He was particularly critical of the report's lack of attention to the streaming of lower class students out high school programs which lead to later academic work. Heron stressed that this problem must be dealt with before examination of the present post-secondary school system can be made possible.

However, Deutsch felt that the proposed Open Academy of Ontario and further attempts to provide experimental programs suited to specific local needs, would to a large degree aid in helping population groups such as the native peoples, the French-speaking minority, citizens living in smaller and remote locations and persons seeking part-time study while working.

Heron was adamant in his belief that the commission should have gone further in their recommendations. He noted that the increase in coverage of the Student Awards package to students whose parents are earning $10,000 to $15,000 would help these income groups finance a hike in tuition fees. However, he felt that a large change in fees could very well continue to keep lower income groups out if not adequately compensated for by a new rating scale determining how much each person should get.

Council appointees

The AMS Outer Council Wednesday night ratified the following appointments:

Snowball Committee Co-Chairman: Dave Searle, Linda Lesueur, Jamie Corbette.
Homecoming Committee Chairman: Glen MacNeil
Cultural Committee Chairman: Bruce Chown
Concert Committee Chairman: Steve Sugar
Queen's Entertainment Agency Director: Bill Mandich
Assistant Campus Activities Commissioner: Dorothy Lloyd
OFS Chief Delegate: Lyn Whitham
Community Liaison Committee Chairman: Rob Nicholson
Alumni Committee Chairman: Beth Barr
High School Liaison Committee Chairman: Anne Marie Sidlovsky
AOSC representative: Jackie Claxton
Chief AMS Constable: Ian Nordheimer
AMS Clubs Manager: Mike Robson
Queen's Student Agencies Director: Paul Mahaffy
Summer Pub Manager: Dale Johnston
Winter Pub Manager: Reg Rickaby
Bulletin Board Committee: Ken Schewan

Save tax money

TORONTO (CUP) — Almost every Ontario student not living at home can make at least $25 this year by filling out an income tax return.

But many students are likely to miss the gift simply because they don't know about it and have no other reason to consider income tax questions.

The money is from the Ontario Property Tax Credit Scheme, a plan to return to tenants part of the property tax the government collected from owners. The scheme replaces an earlier one where the landlords were supposed to return the money themselves.

Key to figuring out how much people get back is a figure called the "Occupancy Cost" (O.C.). The OC is 20 per cent of the rent paid during the year. Residence students get a pre-calculated flat sum of $25 as their OC for the period of time they spent in residence, although this sum may be added to an OC otherwise determined (for example, calculations on rent paid off-campus during the summer).

If your OC is under $90 you get it all back minus 1 per cent of your Taxable Income. If it's over $90, you get $90 plus 10 per cent of your OC minus 1 per cent of your Taxable Income.

As a result only students living rent-free or with a relatively high income aren't entitled to a rebate.

Students who file a return and mistakenly don't make a claim for the Property Tax Credit should send a letter to their district Taxation Office outlining the error and showing the amount to which they are entitled.

The AMS Concert Committee in conjunction with the Division of Concerts invite you to enjoy an evening of fine music with:

The

McGill Chamber Orchestra

Alexander Brott, Conductor

this Friday, March 23, in Grant Hall at 8:30

tickets: $1.00 with concert card, $2.50 general admission, available in the John Orr Room from 10 to 6 daily, or the Division of Concerts

BC students may get loans easier next year

VICTORIA (CUP) — "It looks as though obtaining a student loan will be easier for British Columbia students next year," an unidentified source in the B.C. Student Affairs Branch of the Education Department recently told the Martlet, the Student newspaper at the University of Victoria.

The Source, who did not want to be identified by name, was the Western Provinces' representative at a recent federal student loan meeting in Ottawa. The meeting was attended by Federal Ministry of Finance and Education Departments from Ontario, Quebec and the Atlantic Provinces.

Since the meeting was not the annual plenary session on student loans, no definite decisions on loan requirements were made.

Last year's loan requirements were a point of contention among B.C. students because of unequal treatment of the province's students compared to those of other provinces.

B.C. students must enclose a photocopy of their own and their parents' income tax return, and copies of numerous other personal documents.

The large contributions which B.C. students make towards their education from their summer earnings has also been criticized.

For example, a third-year male university student, if employed during the summer, was expected to save $850 in 1972 from his summer job before he could be eligible for federal support. A woman had to save $525.

It has been argued that assessment should be made on an individual basis so students unable to obtain a job or unable to save a great deal of money would not be unnecessarily penalized.

One of the recommendations to be considered at the plenary session at the end of March is a standard application form for students in all provinces.

bews news

by Peter Watts

The Men's Intra-mural Athletic Committee closed down its 35th year of Bews competition on Sunday evening with the annual awards banquet held in Wallace Hall. Following the dinner, athletic letters and pins were presented to individual members of championship teams. As well, five different trophies were presented. The Dick Emmett Trophy, awarded to the outstanding freshman in Arts & Science went to Carl Fitzpatrick. Rick Smith, hardworking athletic stick of Civil & Math, won the Edwards Trophy as the person who has contributed the most to intra-mural athletics this year. Smith also won the Doug Adams trophy as the athletic stick of the year's top Bew team, Civil and Math. Commerce won its own trophy for their championship in interfaculty hockey.

The James G. Bews trophy was awarded to Civil & Math, the team who have led the race almost since the first of the season. Civil won only three championships this year compared to four for Commerce '73 who finished second and no less than eight for PHE who finished third. Nonetheless, the Engineers were more consistent in overall performance in nearly every sport and withstood a late season challenge from Commerce '73 to pick up the victory.

Bews director Bob Carnegie released the final standings on Sunday night. Here is the complete list:

1.	Civil & Math	48,802
2.	Commerce '73	45,177
3.	PHE	38,587
4.	Commerce '74	30,042
5.	Mechanical	29,809
6.	Mining	29,782
7.	Commerce '75	27,610
8.	Business Grads	26,770
9.	Chemical	23,834
10.	Law '74	23,481
11.	Science '76	21,489
12.	Arts '73	21,228
13.	Commerce '76	19,660
14.	Law '75	17,446
15.	Medicine	17,114
16.	Electrical	13,877
17.	Arts '75	13,111
18.	Eng. Grads	13,002
19.	Chem. Grads	12,086
20.	Law '73	11,288
21.	Arts '74	10,377
22.	Arts '76	8,388
23.	A & S Grads	7,544
24.	Education	4,581
25.	Independent	1,560

This marks the last column of Bews News this year. I think it only appropriate that I congratulate Civil and Math for their fine performance in winning Bews. But I must add congratulations to all those Queen's men who took advantage of the fine intra-mural athletic program offered by the university this year. A special word of thanks to Bews director Bob Carnegie, to George Smith, chairman of MIAC and to all those people who have helped to make this year's men's intramural athletic program the great success it has been.

UBC SUB dispute

VANCOUVER (CUP) — Five years of working through proper channels ended March 14 when the University of British Columbia's (UBC) Alma Mater Society (AMS) voted unanimously to prepare legal proceedings to force arbitration in a dispute with the university administration over the lease on the Student Union Building.

The dispute, which began with the opening of the SUB in 1967, involves administration refusal to provide adequate cleaning maintenance and supervision of the building as specified in the lease.

It was compounded by University President Walter Gage's recent announcement that the administration would not collect a student fee levy from summer and part-time students, regardless of the decision of an AMS General Meeting, scheduled for March 16.

Council replied to Gage's announcement by voting to close the SUB from May 1 to Aug. 26, thus denying access to summer students.

"Basically, the administration keeps telling us it is our building, especially when we ask them for more money and upkeep," AMS Treasurer David Dick said March 14.

"But when we, the supposed owners of the building, decided to find ways to pay for our financial problems by getting other members of the University community who use the building to help pay for it, they say we don't have the jurisdiction -- it is a university building belonging only to winter students."

Come all ye lads & lassies to the enchanted city of

BRIGADOON

alive for one night on March 31st

Lower Vic., 9 pm - 1 am

Tickets available March 19-24 in meal lines and March 26-30 in John Orr

$5.00 per couple

The Levana Formal Committee

Art History DSC presents:

PETER SWANN

Speaking on:

Chinese Art Through The Ages

Dupuis Hall, Tues., Mar. 20

8 pm

A Ban Righ Fireside presentation

"How He Lied to Her Husband" a one-act comedy by Shaw directed by Rob McClure

Tuesday, March 20

coffee and dessert at 5:45

ban righ common room

curtain at 6 pm

everyone welcome

come on time

AMS OUTER COUNCIL MEETING

Wednesday, March 21, 1973

MacArthur Hall

7:30 pm

ALL WELCOME

Benson says "government biggest business in Canada"

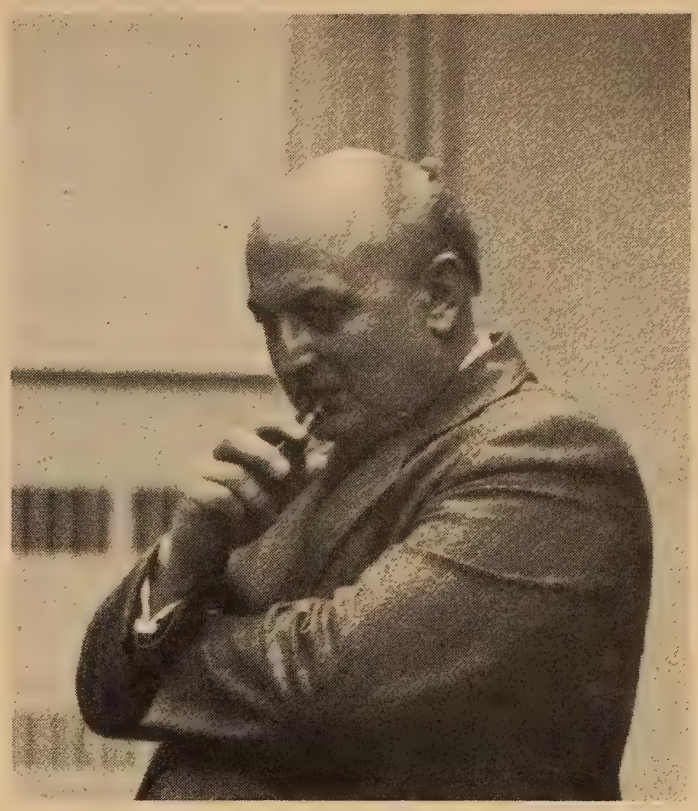
by Janet Ritchie

Government is becoming increasingly involved in all aspects of life, observed Edgar J. Benson to an audience consisting mainly of Commerce students last Thursday night. However, rather than being alarmed at the extension of government control which this represents, Benson feels that this is a fact of life which business should support.

As the latest speaker in the Canadian Business Leaders Guest Lecture Series, a programme presented by the Commerce Society, Benson expressed definite opinions on the relationship between business and government amid reminiscences of his days at Queen's and in government.

Benson, a graduate of Queen's Commerce in 1949, taught at Queen's for ten years until 1962 when he was elected to Parliament as a Liberal representative. Currently, he is president of the Canadian Transport Commission, a job which he feels has added to his understanding of business-government relations by giving him a business viewpoint.

He implied that the policy of "laissez-faire" which business seems to prefer, is becoming outdated as the Canadian government policies become more socialist. Benson enumerated the many responsibilities which the government has gradually assumed, remarking that "government is responsible for everything except conception."



Apparently endorsing this policy, Benson spoke deprecatingly of the antagonism between business and government. He noted that while business would prefer reduced government expenditure, the government insists that it must provide certain services.

This antagonism should, Benson said, be replaced by a spirit of co-operation between business and government. He lamented the fact that businessmen seem generally unwilling to give up their jobs temporarily in order to serve terms with the government.

Although he admitted that some businessmen participate in government in an advisory capacity, he seemed to feel that greater involvement was necessary. He described the government as being "the biggest business in Canada" and, as such, requiring greater input from all people in Canada and, in particular, "other" businesses.

Business should contribute to government policy-making through its representation to government officials rather than through pressure groups which tend to resist change. Benson described lobbying as "a waste of time" and suggested that businessmen should instead facilitate the changes which were taking place through direct co-operation with the government.

He commented that the system of democratic government in Canada has certain drawbacks in that "it is terribly cumbersome and results in a lack of control over the economy". However, he sees these disadvantages as inherent in a democratic system which, according to Benson, still describes Canadian politics despite increasing government control.

- perry

OFS calls on Governments to reconsider foreign studies

TORONTO - The Ontario Federation of Students this weekend called upon the Ministry of Colleges and Universities not to change financing schemes involving "Foreign" students until the Ministry had obtained and published comprehensive information on the subject.

The move came following a presentation of material indicating that the government was considering cutting financial support to institutions for students who are not residents of Ontario. The Ministry material also contained a discussion of what constituted in its own words "a foreign student." Proposals for the definition ranged from non-residents of Ontario to student visa holders.

OFS members said the figures regarding the cost to the public of educating these students were not accurate and very sketchy thus making it impossible to assess the situation from a policy stand-point at this time.

The Federation also called upon the Federal Government to grant an exemption from Manpower regulations regarding work permits for foreign students attending Canadian Universities.

Queen's chief delegate, Lyn Whitham, called a government directive making work permits almost impossible for foreign students to attain "a direct attack on students, especially unwarranted in the light of other government policies."

Delegates spent a long time discussing the motion and considering the qualification of the word foreign, so that exemptions might only be asked for students from under-developed countries. Some members charged that this "latent anti-Americanism" and on the suggestion of OFS general co-ordinator, Craig Heron, qualifications were left out of the motion in order to "side-step the American issue at this time."

Outside of the discussion of the foreign student problem the meeting was uneventful. Four interim members of the executive committee appointed in November had their terms extended until May and Mike Clifford of Franshawe College was appointed to the executive. He promised to create better ties between community colleges and universities through the federation.

Committees were struck to study the COPSE then (Wright) report and the foreign student situation; and the recent day of study on COPSE report was discussed.

For the most part, a provincial-wide day of study did not exist. At the University of Toronto, nearly 800 people listened to a discussion of the report by Colleges Minister Jack McNie and others. At Lakehead University, 250 students participated in a discussion.

New editors selected

Sue de Stein, an English student and Bob Wood, a Math student have been selected co-editors of the Queen's Journal for the 1973-74 school year.

They were chosen last Thursday night by the AMS publications selection committee.

de Stein has been an influential member of the news department since she joined the staff in September, while Wood in his position as passepartout has been instrumental in drawing large numbers of students to the staff of the Queen's Journal.

The co-editors plan to increase news coverage and editorial writing of the newspaper along with adding a little humour to it. They also plan a major clean-up of the office. We wish them luck.

Asked to comment on the selection, de Stein said "excellent, just excellent."

RED CROSS means People Helping People

The AMS Concert Committee regrets to announce the concert scheduled for Sunday night was cancelled as bad weather grounded the Raspberry's Flight.

Ticket refunds will be available in the John Orr Room today through Friday, 10 am - 6 pm

THE MAGIC CHRISTIAN

Ringo Starr Peter Sellers

Thurs. Mar. 22, 7 & 9:30 p.m.

Dunning Auditorium

Tony Mon
in convers about t well spri of his a
with Photographs by Brock

"I am a screen...."

For someone who has rarely spoken a word on stage until just recently, Tony Montanaro is a powerhouse of talk. When the lights come on and he walks out to stage centre to strike the pose of a young boy enraptured by an imaginary book or a glutton in front of an imaginary feast, or a middle aged man thirty years too late in an imaginary gymnasium, Montanaro is the master magician, the maker of dreams and the mirror of Life.But in a small room, sitting with Craig Babcock his assistant in "A Mime's Eye View" which was performed at McArthur Auditorium Friday night, he is not so different. And he talks.

"Well, I was a mime when I was a kid, but it was called pantomime then and charades too. We called it the Hot Chocolate Fudge Mother and Son Club; or something like that. When mothers were invited to come into the classroom and we would show off. I did my first pantomime for them. It was a boy eating spaghetti, and another was finding a skunk I really though was a kitty cat."

This was back in Paulsboro, New Jersey when Montanaro was not thinking about making a career of mime but just liking it. He went on to enjoy drama in high school, then went into the army and after two years went to Rutgers University to study liberal arts where he found himself drifting into drama again.

"I saw a great film called Children of Paradise, which is a classic about mimes and the father of mime Etienne Decroux. I saw that film and it kept eating at me all the time." So Montanaro went from Romance languages to acting to puppeteering to children's theatre to mime, where he has stayed for 18 years but where within the form he has never stood still.

He has been influenced by "a real collection of backgrounds", by working with Marceau for three months, with Decroux for several weeks, with Giles Sagal, Marceau's assistant, by reading literature about mime, by the Children of Paradise.

"I am a screen, I am a mime, whatever I see falls into place, a group of words, a pattern. Now we're using words, in fact. My definition of a mime is one who can imitate all of life and that means the sounds of life and the cries of life."

Montanaro has found that working on political themes, war themes, has been very difficult."I don't feel that's where it's at right now. The war is already too late, it's beyond the point of no return. The relationships between people, that's what intrigues me now. In fact, I'm more intrigued now, in that there are too few real Christians around, too few real Jews or too few real Muslims".

"It comes out in a show called Face to Face. A lot of the pain is shown through a recurring character who represents the Madison Avenue type man who cons you into thinking you need a certain way of life, or a certain product, or a certain relationship."

"My art reflects life, reports it well, and its many facets. It lets the observer see the trends, but doesn't think for him or judge for him."

"Right now I'm more interested in the birth of the clown, for he is the true resister. He resists society. He doesn't play their game at all. He's off beat and out of their worlds. He's not angry at them. He says simply, I don't like that game."

"And at the same time the clown does not post a real threat. He is not going to challenge you, or hit you. He simply does not want to play by your rules. So be breaks them and that makes him look kind of ridiculous and funny."

Montanaro relates the theory of why the clown evolves to a film he recently saw about Mahatma Ghandi, in which Ghandi says at one point, "If no one understands your message anymore, it's best to walk alone."

Montanaro has worked in Woodstock, in New York and is presently living in almost a community of mimes, about nine, in South Paris, Maine, where he is training his troupe in an old barn they call the Celebration Mime Theatre. Play is at the centre of this work. Acrobatics, juggling, an Italian game must like horseshoes called Bocci, and volleyball, for as Montanaro says, "To play at life is so much more important than the play of life. We take it all so seriously."

Several years ago Montanaro went through a period in his life when he wanted to stop, perhaps because he was tired of performing the same show so often. "I was getting bored. I couldn't think of any more ideas in the same line, that were really interesting to me. I've done practically everything I can do with my body, but now, with this troupe and the writing and the new ideas. Street mime, the improvization, I'm groping. It's unbelievable, its going too fast. The group will have to catch up to me now, technically."

Montanaro corrected a fallacy about mime, that it must be silent, "It's a mystique that it's a freak show, a specialty act, yet the first mime actually used words, he talked on stage. I resist all the traditinal rules about mime. The white face, it could be pink face. Just because Marceau uses heavy white face, everybody thinks that's what mime is. I've been silent for three or four years but for a real purpose, just to see how much I could call upon my movement and space ability."

"I feel I could not go more than I have within the silent art. I can evoke anything I want in silence. Now I feel frustrated.Now that I've done that I trust myself to ta speak or make sound ef because I will not by pass the feeling of movement. Motion a precedes speech,even in ord life."

Babcock added that "no on jects to the sounds of our bodi the stage. It's legitimate and t we were supposedly true t silence of mime, we would without making any noise."

"Mime falls dead centre i scheme of contemporary thea Montanaro continued, "If I h mime actor as opposed to an mime, I'd do far better with a
If he is a mimic, if he unders the movements of life the kineti life, the origin or gesture, the of it and how and why he m that's what a mime is. He know movement, and that person great potential actor."

I asked him how he saw his in retrospect. "It's subtler, I expend as much energy, it's pler, more to the point, gentler

"Mime's

Last Friday night at McA
Auditorium, Tony Monta assisted by Craig Babcock, his students, made magic. A enthusiastic audience was ca from the tender realms of child experience into a world of fan from the harsh realism of ever occurrence to the bizarre. Ea Montanaro's ten pieces began a simple premise, a freeze companied by a short taped v title. Then coming to life, he use highly disciplined body as a pi does his instrument, to tell stori give a graphic impression of life all its tempers, and to const undercut many of the im created.

Montanaro is a small man an his presence filled an empty st
In Etcetera, a potpurri of ma the tricks of mime, he was ofte victim of his own obstacles. V that slowly enclosed him, ball that carried him away, ropes pulled him from side to side, movable boxes were made s accutely believable by the artist the audience could actually things that were not there.

The childhood experience is central to Montanaro's work bot stage and off. The concept of imagination taking a premise t farthest extremes are most ntanaro rsation

the rings ar ndy Naiman cpherson

tense, much more free and more into the causality of things. I'm interested in why things happen."

"I don't like theatre too much. I'm soured on it I guess. I don't like histrionics. I don't like aping. I don't like showmanship, and artificiality. I like good drama in the hands of brilliant people who are using themselves. They know how to use their own mechanisms superbly. They don't exclude themselves from the work. They're not using method acting. They're not becoming the person. There is a separation.There, is a sense of artistry."

"Brecht is great, he is more in my line. I want to see someone play himself with the material. That's exciting, that's real. I want to see players more than plays, because great plays, Shaw, Shakespeare, they can intimidate the performer."

"Ultimately I want to direct, to write, to work with all the performers, to get other mimes to come to the Celebration Mime Theatre . . and someday . . to retire!!"

ye View"

parent in his work. In the Bad Dream, a young boy uses a scarry book as a ticket to a nightmare about hideous giants who victimise him with ease. Montanaro made quick changes, from being the gigantic monster to being the frightened boy, and back, and yet made this isolated little vignette very personal through the expressiveness of his unpainted face. We saw and felt fear, horror, anger, triumph, and we were involved in this drama. Montanaro uses perspective beautifully, both in this sketch and in the last one entitled Checkmate, where two players became the pieces on the chess board and re-enact the battles that ensue. Again, Montanaro and Babcock switch back and forth from player to chess piece, showing relief when another skrimish is over and shoring up their strength for the next.

Babcock is a very capable mime and is at the same time very different on stage than his teacher. This was most easily seen in a sketch called Animalia, when the two went into the kingdom of the wild for their inspiration. As birds, spiders, chickens, peacocks, chimpanzees they imposed the human form on the essence of the beast they portrayed. Humorous or wanton, we saw animals as we've never seen them before, perhaps because we take them so much for granted. Although in the chimpanzee sequence both men clowned around the same way, where Montanaro seemed more precise, in his movements Babcock was more unrestrained, more clowny. Partially this is because their body types are so different, Babcock is bigger and somehow a better chimpanzee. They both delighted the audience particularly when they lunged off stage to play with members of the audience. It was a process of discovery for the chimps as they grabbed a coat or perched on one of the seats.

In another piece, The Glutton, Montanaro showed the ultimate manner in which the mind of a man obsessed with food works. He was able to describe the different items of food simply by the way he chewed or the way he held something as he brought it to his mouth.

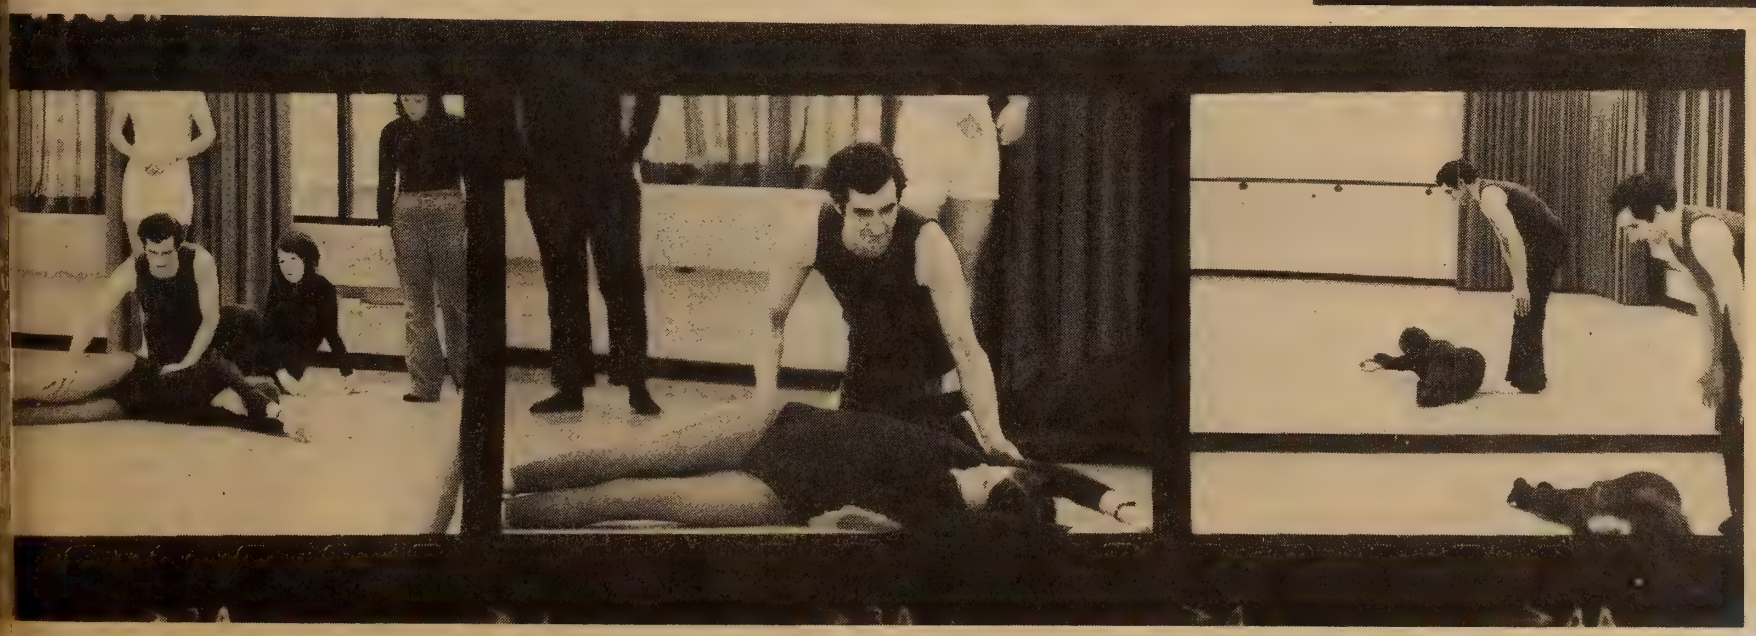
As with many of his pieces he gave his gourmet an extra little twist at the end when he showed him gathering all the items on the table with frenzy and shovelling them into his mouth.

Although Montanaro avoids making political statements through his work he approaches the subject of war in his sketch entitled Games. Here a young boy playing with a ball becomes enchanted with the idea of aggression and violence. He tosses his ball away as if it were a grenade, he jabs an imaginary bayonet. He makes war exciting, glamorous, adventuresome and his fantasy is framed within the mind of a child, whose play is shortened by an improbable summons from the parental outside. Where is many of the sketches the body of the piece is humorous with a cutting finish, in Games, the body is rather serious with an amusing tail, in that the child gets furious with his progenitor and sidles off muttering silently at the top of his lungs.

In Games Montanaro is making very subtly a statement not so much about war as its cause. The statement is not political. It is humanistic. It shows us the childhood fascination with what has been sold to us by the media.

In The Gym, a man labours under the delusion that its never too late to be physically fit and proceeds to dispel the delusion. In Masks we watch as two young boys climb up the stairs to a cobwebbed attic to discover an old trunk filled with masks. During an almost carefree try-on spree one boy misplaces his own face and is left with one of the masks. In the Museum, a statue comes to life to play with the observer. In On The Baseball Diamond, we get a slow motion look at the mechanics of a team with each of its individual players, including a huge wad of gum that was very much a part of the pitcher.

Montanaro cannot be overly praised. He is a master of mime and superb technician. His theories however, which cannot be read too easily through a performance did evolve during a three hour workshop on Saturday morning when thirty students trooped into the Dance Studio and went through a exhausting battery of exercises and movements.



Mime is, according to Montanaro as much an exercise of the mind as it is the body. You must believe in the capabilities of your own body before you can make others believe in the situations you are going to place it.

So much of Montanaro the Man came across in this short period and through him we learnt about the art behind mime, the mind of mime, not just its tricks. We were made aware of every part of our bodies, from our finger tips to the backs of our heads if they hit the floor in an awkward front roll.

And Montanaro demonstrated to us the newest area of his work, improvisation. On Friday night we got a glimpse of this when he asked members of the audience to give him situations to play with. In only one instance did this really work and this was probably because the audience seemed to want to stymie him more than stimulate him.

It is extremely exciting to speculate where Tony Montanaro will go with his improvisational ideas, with his interest in graphic theatre, with his new troupe and with his use of sound, for not only is he a superb artist, but he is a creator of new forms and he never stands still.

letters

Dear Editor,

On Wednesday, March 21st (tomorrow) students at Queen's will be asked in referendum to raise their non-academic fees by $3.00. The $3.00 per student so raised (should the referendum be successful) would be applied, with a $2.00 per student administration grant, towards the cost of providing unlimited student use of the Kingston P.U.C. Transit system next year. Travel on all routes would then become "free" upon presentation of a Queen's I.D. card, and where applicable (Barriefield, Dial-A-Bus) the appropriate premium fare.

It may be recalled that last October, such a service was instituted in order that the response to such a proposal might be assessed. The results, as determined by a number of measurements throughout that month-long period were heartening - even some hardened critics were amazed! Figures released in late fall showed that statistically each Queen's student used a P.U.C. bus once a week (ie an average "student ridership" of 6,000-week) Further, as the month progressed (and people became more familar with bus routes etc.) use of the buses increased. The results of this trial period prompted the AMS (with much assistance from the administration) to negotiate a tentative agreement for the upcoming academic year with the PUC. The agreement was acceptable to the Public Utilitics Commission of Kingston and to the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University before it came into effect. Shortly after the terms of this agreement were worked out, it received the approval of the P.U.C. All that remains is for the student body at Queen's to indicate its acceptance in tomorrow's referendum.

Basically the agreement provides for "free" bus service, upon presentation of a student I.D. card for the period beginning Sept. 1st, and extending into May 1974. It was understood that premium fares would apply on those routes where they presently exist. It was further understood that during the time period bwtween Sept. 1st and the particular faculty registration dates, old student I.D. cards would be accepted, and in the case of freshmen students an appropriately designed card for this time period would be made available. (Orientation week planners - your intracity transportation problems may be over!) For this service the A.M.S. and Queen's University would pay The P.U.C. the sum of $5.00 per student. Of this sum, the administration agreed to contribute $2.00. Consequently students will only bear 60 per cent of this service. The administration's willingness to participate in such a way is explained in part by their desire to facilitate travel between East and West Campuses, and also to stem the flow of automobile traffic into the campus. The university also feels that, should such a referendum fail, it will not be able to continue the present scheme of free bus transportation between West and East Campus, and that the present time no alternative programmes are likely to develop.

While it cannot be argued that public transit in Kingston offers as extensive a programme as can be found in other cities, many of us discovered last October that, when we became more familiar with timetables and routes, the bus suddenly became very convenient. The shopping centre, West Campus, and the downtown area became that much more accessive, especially to residence students who have bus stops virtually at their doorstep. Even "the Manor" became a cheaper place to visit when a taxi fare was no longer required!

The success of this service would gradually increase as more and more students become "bus oriented", it is hoped. The availability of the service depends on the results of tomorrow's referendum. Critics of the proposal, (there are some) have suggested that the proposal represents another example of "student elitism" in Kingston. They point out correctly that Queen's students would be the only citizens able to "pre-pay" for their bus service; they ignore the fact that no other groups have approached the P.U.C.

I hope that in tomorrow's referendum, students will consider the advantages of such a programme, and consider the use they might make of uuch a service. When contrasted with say, the price of two taxi trips to the station, Bus Terminal, or even to Highway 401 (the hitchiker's special!) BUSIT- very appealing.

Yours sincerely,
Andrew Pipe

Queen's Journal
Vol. 100, No. 47
Tues., Mar. 20, 1973
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ontario

Editor: Jennifer Grass
Business: Charles Schwier
Management: John Solman
Arts: Sandy Naiman
Features: Pat Devitt, Steven Winnett
Passepartout: Bob Wood
News: Susan de Stein
Events: Alison Dandie
Sports: Chris Boon, Nada Bogdanovic
National Desk: Bob Mutrie, Sue Wishart
Photography: Peter Boag

Jennifer (who did page one) complained when we tried to say that not much was happening tonite, but she drove her slaves (angels) to get out by ten, all except Sandy who was still struggling with her five. Sue and 'poor' Chris who was bored didn't believe that they would be home before midnight, and Woodie went to the races and invaded the AMS. The typists Cathy and Pat typed, would you believe. Gian printed pictures while Roberto complained about being in the same office as the politicos, as Chas and Sue went and bought pop-sicles.

Published twice weekly on Tuesdays and Fridays by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc., Member, Canadian University Press. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society of the University. Offices are located in the Student's Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

unclassifieds

FOR SALE: one couch, two arm chairs. 546-7522. Cheap. Good condition.

GAEL GROUP 13: Instead of lasagna dinner we will have Pub night, Thursday, March 22nd. Meet at main entrance of the Union at 9 o'clock. Love and kisses, JC and MC.

"FOUND FROM the Sault 200: one tukky. Can claim at Vic Hall fish hatchery. Password: Happy Birthday. 'Night Dick, 'night-mare!"

FOR RENT: (summer months): 2 bedroom, semi-furnished apartment in Elrond, 12th floor, view over Kingston and Lake Ontario with spacious sundeck. Phone 549-2077 and ask for Norm. Rent negotiable.

LOST: in the Pub Friday afternoon March 2. Book of Life magazine with Robyn McMorris' name written inside. If found, please phone Robyn at 544-0974. (It's not mine and Robyn would really appreciate having it returned!).

SHARE entertainment and bar at the Cabaret, starring Canada's hilarious female impersonator Ms. Fran Francess. Thursday, March 22, 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. Lower Lounge International Center (Admission 50c).

QUEEN'S BANDS MEMBERS - past and present. The Bands will be playing several engagements during Orientation '73 and your presence would be appreciated. Please plan to be back for Signing-In on Sun. Sept. 9. We will need people in all of the Band sections to help out, especially Cheerleaders. The events and times will be explained in the summer publications of The Banner. p.s. Poster Putter: Uppers are also needed to help the freshmen come. Phone Sue Toy 544-7852 if you can help.

LIVE BAND at SHARE Pub night. Dance to the music of BOLT UPRIGHT. Saturday, March 24th. McArthur Pub, 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. (Admission 50c single, 75c couples).

FURNISHED THREE BEDROOM APARTMENT for rent. year's lease. 10 minutes from campus. Near McArthur Hall. 542-6005.

APARTMENT to sublet. May-Sept. Married Students Complex. 15 MacPherson Ave., furnished, ground floor - excellent playground facilities for children. Rent $161.00 including utilities. Phone 546-4627.

WUSC elections, Wednesday March 21st, Upper Lounge, International Center, 4:30 p.m.

A ROOM IN THE Earl St. Residence is available immediately until the end of the session. Any undergraduate male interested should apply to the Business Office, Leonard Hall, phone 547-2685, Miss Smithies.

APARTMENT TO SUBLET. May to Sept. furnished. Rent negotiable. Apartment No. 12. 210 Colbourne St. Call 544-7420 or 544-7423. Three or four people.

QUEEN'S STUDENT LIBERAL CLUB is for you. Come and join us. . . We want your help, your ideas, your suggestions, etc. . . Sign up now for next year. For more information, Call Rich Hudon, Paul Leyton, Tom Troughton, Don Manson, Marlene Pitchers, Tony Layton, Dave Bell, Dave Thomas, Scott Fairley, Malcolm Orr, or Dan Andreae. We're in Who's Where. Leave your name and summer address with us. QSL elections, Thurs., March 21, 1973, 7:30 p.m. Stirling B.

FOUND - watch at Math department - can be claimed and identified at main Math department office.

BEAUTIFUL, modern, fully furnished, 2 bedroom apt. to sublet May-August. Option to sign lease in Sept. Phone 544-6157.

FIVE DRAWER DRESSER for sale. Available April 1st. Call 544-9472 after 5:00.

AOSC special return flight Toronto to Brussels May 4, Milan to Toronto, June 6. Price $190. Fly Sabena and enjoy world renowned service and in flight bar. Contact AOSC at 44 St. George St., Toronto 5. (1-416-962-8404) or contact your student council.

BEAUTIFUL 2 bedroom, apt. to sublet May to Sept. Sunny and clean. Close to campus (University and Johnson). Has all the advantages you could ever want plus a reasonable price. Phone Cornelia at 546-1033.

TRAVELLING THIS SUMMER? Get quick quality service on passport photos from Photo Image, 33 Brock Street. If you bring one or more friends, you'll all get 20 per cent off our regular low prices. Same rates apply on job application or I.D. pictures too. Call us at 546-7770 for an appointment today.

ARE YOU GETTING MARRIED this spring? Let Photo Image record the things YOU want to remember. Our rates are competitive and we guarantee quality results. Call us at 546-7770 or drop by the studio at 33 Brock Street.

LOST - BROWN WALLET on Friday night somewhere in Ellis Hall, the Manor or a Taxi. If found, please call John at 544-7572 anytime.

WANTED: TWO GIRLS to share large, bright, furnished apartment during summer. Close to campus, downtown, KGH. Phone 544-8524, 544-8384, 544-8397.

WE'VE GOT WHAT YOU'RE looking for and it's available from May to September: A three bedroom apartment on University Ave. Call Les 544-8528, Margaret 544-8539, Karol An 544-8541.

THE WELFARE DEPARTMENT REQUESTS the return of all empty baskets so that future distributions will be possible.

LITTLE SPENCE: ONLY four days to go. Nothingness approaches rapidly. Soon you will be on the other side of the hill. - J.W.

WHAT GOOD IS SITTING ALONE IN YOUR ROOM . . . Come to the Cabaret! International Centre, 8:00 Thursday. Special features, Cathy Robertson, Ann Vogl, Sue Harvey, Tim Lawson. . . great fun and atmosphere guaranteed.

CONTRARY TO POPULAR BELIEF "542-6680" IS a hotline to Judy. Anyone else who answers is part of my answering service: Please disgregard Delilah, Chris, Sue and Di.

WANT TO TRADE? WE'RE looking for a 2-bedroom apartment close to campus, preferably under $145.00. In return we have a furnished 3-bedroom apartment, Earl and Frontenac. If interested PLEASE call 546-6710 between 5 and 7 p.m.

M. DANNY: You could always be a tour guide!!

SOBER. . . EYE IT TEA. WANTED: alive and kicking M. Cees for Sobriety next fall, males and females. Qualifications: outgoing, uninhibited, freewheeling, loose(?) bodies able to ad-lib, keep up hilarious insane chatter if somebody misses a cue, and to work with five other wierdos as a Laugh-In type comedy team. Due to shortage of above will accept the average Joe-Joanne too. Very informal interviews to be held on couch, in Room 102, Theology Building on Sunday March 25, what sacrilege, at 2:00. For more . . . details, phone Linda - 549-0790, or Lennie - 544-8649.

HUGE APARTMENT FOR NEXT YEAR. living room, kitchen, 4 bedrooms, or three with dining room. Utilities free. Available June 1. Presently $150; new lease Aug. 1, probably $160. Furniture to sell. 544-6578.

LOST - Brown leather wallet. At Spring Boogie Dance. If find please return to Hugh Dysant 544-5394.

ELRONDERS: Don't pay March's rent until you hear about your rebate. If you pay now, Elrond will have ALL the bargaining power.

Frontenac Superstar: Funny for many reasons

by Sandy Naiman

Once again, the nasty Critic, (or is it Reviewer?) the enemy of the Theatre, the self indulgent hack, who uses the columns of newspapers to infest the public with esoteric ideas, rears its ugly head, to tell it the way it is about the theatre.

In most cases these esoteric ideas have nothing to do with the play or its performance. Instead, such "articles" talk obscurely about things like "spirit", and "verve" and "enthusiasm" and who cares about that?

However, in the case of Frontenac Superstar, the Rotary Meistersingers' Tercentenary Production which opened Tuesday night at the Grand Theatre, it seemed that no one really cared about what a critic, or even a reviewer would have have to say. Clearly the Meistersingers were not competing with the Royal Shakespeare Company. Entertainment, pure and simple, was the bill of fare for the evening and that's what the audience got.

Frontenac Superstar is a show about the making of a show and the benign attempts of a Critic and his Reviewer sidekick to make that show so bad that they can ultimately pan it. For after all, everybody knows that it is a critic's supreme pleasure to pan a show and such articles are so much easier to write than raves, and have so much more impact.

And so, in the first scene when the Meistersingers are blessed with the arrival of Count Frontenac, who walks off the pages of history and into their planning meeting, Fairly Scorne the Critic and Roger Drawbridge the Reviewer have their work cut out for them.

- macpherson

But with evil on their side, they thwart each of Count Frontenac's attempts to improve on history. Several comic through lines are imposed onto this basic framework. Ex-Mayor Valorie Swain, who plays himself and Bobbi Spark, played by Jennifer Hodges, are constantly having their sexes confused by the misdirected Count who, in the 300-year time lapse, is willing to accept any kind of oddity, and who is so befuddled that he mistakes the two villains, Scorne and Drawbridge, for Jesuits, since they were equally as dangerous in his time. The director of the play within the play, Robert La Salle, is confused with the historical one, who wasn't very popular, we are told, and the ever-present antipathy between the French and English is also mentioned.

With comments about the Meistersinger failures of past years and how much fun they were to do despite the lack of critical acclaim, one can't help but empathize. In fact, anything that one could possibly say about the show that is in the least bit unfavourable, the show says about itself and before you get a chance.

Jon Frizzel is arch-villain Fairly Scorne the Critic decked out, no less, in black cape, top hat and tails, gave a performance filled with spirit, verve and enthusiasm that even Walter Kerr could not pan. Jim East, as Roger Drawbridge, played a perfect foil for his master and together they were an excellent example of the oppressor — oppressed relationship.

As Count Frontenac, Jim Rahn was a wonderful period piece with his nasal manner and a tendency to disseminate dust whenever he was touched.

The Count manages to hustle Donna Michelle with his tactile tactics rather successfully and Barbara Marrison as the lady in question provided just the right mixture of blondness and dumbness to make her role and the relationship work.

Jennifer Hodges gave us a very throaty Bobbi Spark and Valorie Swain a very croaky Valorie Swain.

As a mild and silly spoof on conventional theatre, on Kingston and on even the audience, let alone the role of the critic, Frontenac Superstar mildly triumphed. Gord Love's script which adapted new lyrics to old songs worked musically because the coupling of all those old favorites, Leibestraum, The Blue Danube, If I Were A Rich Man, among others, with lyrics which were totally unsuited to the tunes and their sentimentality made the musical numbers parodies of themselves. And even though the play is structured very simply and one - dimensionally, the audience works with it. The show declares itself, jokes about itself and when you laugh, you're not laughing so much at the joke as at the company's willingness to laugh at itself.

Director Peter Lichtenfels has taken the Meistersingers and made them into a living cartoon strip. They do ridiculous things, pull ridiculous stunts and get even more ridiculous results. And although Frontenac Superstar cannot be called Theatre, it is entertaining, it is funny and very refreshing in its unpretentiousness.

SHARE is coming

For a cleaner community S.O.A.P.[1]

1 (Stamp out automobile pollution)

BUS
-
IT

•$3.00 per year

•Premium fares where applicable

SUMMER
studies in VENICE

MAY 13 to JUNE 23
1973

ART HISTORY 245
Venetian Art and Architecture

ITALIAN 202
Intensive Italian

MUSIC 211
Music in Venice
1530 to 1750

For further information contact the individual Departments,
APPLICATION should be made NOW to
DEPARTMENT OF UNIVERSITY EXTENSION

Dorian Quartet: relaxed, informal

by Merle Bolick

In a relaxed and happy atmosphere, the Dorian Woodwind Quintet brought the Dunning Hall concert series to a satisfying end last Friday. The five musicians of impressive credentials eschewed black or white-tie dress in favour of red-tie. They announced and chatted about each piece in turn, and filled the hall with a lively presence of sound.

Though suffering under the common delusion that it is best to begin a concert with Bach, they went on to bigger and better things, especially works by Reicha, Milhaud, and Berio. These were suitably enthusiastically received by the audience, but I would like to state at this time that one may laugh out loud in Dunning Hall. After the mock-heroic treatment of the cat fight in Berio's "Opus Number Zoo", for instance, concert etiquette need not have checked the spontaneous applause that seemed called for. The performance of this number was great stuff, drawing upon the unique vocal styles of each of the group's members as they recited and played their parts in the children's play.

The "neo-medieval" style of Milhaud's "La Cheminee du Roi Rene" was also eminently suited to the quintet's talents. Movement four, 'La Maousinglade', was especially noticeable for the spirited but disciplined approach to ensemble playing that emerged as one of the hallmarks of the group.

Ibert's "Trois Pieces Breves" was notable for some good clarinet work by Jerry Kirkbride who had little to do in some other works presented. The second movement "Andante" was uniformly lovely. And the final movement was exciting and under control even in the oboe, flute, and clarinet unison passages.

My sympathies go out to bassoonist Jane Taylor who had to play all the rum-tum in the Vivaldi "Concerto in G minor for Flute, Oboe, and Bassoon." The ground bass-like bassoon past of the second movement provided some respite for her and a chance to show off a lovely and controlled sound. But it was not until the final work, the Reicha "Quintet in E flat major" that she had a chance, with French hornist Barry Benjamin, to let go on challenging and exciting parts in the first and final movements. In the "Andante grazioso", oboist Charles Kuskin and Flautist Karl Kraber were again as excellent as in the Vivaldi. The audience came early to expect great things from these two and were not disappointed.This piece might have been made for the group, for it certainly fired the imaginations of both the performers and their audience who demanded an encore. This was a sherzo by Eugene Bozza, another display of virtuosity and fun by the Dorian Quintet.

The only problem with the concert, then, was the insistance on playing Bach as the first number in the programme. The "Concerto after Vivaldi" has survived two transcriptions, from Vivaldi's concerto grosso to Bach's organ concerto to Mordechai Rechtman's rendition for woodwind quintet. In consequence it must be treated with tender loving care to cover any awkwardnesses that have arisen in shifts of instrumentation. The sound was there, but there were a few iffy moments when oboe and bassoon contrived to make some ugly uncontrolled noises, and at one point in the Adagio when the overlap of a horn-and-basoon to an oboe-and-clarinet line was compromised by clarinet intonation. Clearly this is not a wise piece to go ripping into at the beginning of a concert and I question the wisdom of placing it here. I think it would have been just as proper to start with a more lively and modern number since these are what make the quintet shine anyway.

The concert was a felicitous happening bringing as it did a little different fare to the campus. I still refuse to think of Berio as an upstart, and the concert Friday fed my prejudices in his favour even more. The Dorian Quintet are not a group to waste their time on the insignificant or the unmusical.

McGill Chamber Orchestra

The McGill Chamber Orchestra will be presented by the AMS Concert Committee and the Division of Concerts in a special concert on Friday 23 March at 8:30 p.m. in Grant Hall. Under the direction of Alexander Brott, the orchestra will perform works by Vivaldi, Bartok, Haydn, and Mozart. Featured soloist will be cellist Denis Brott in a performance of the Haydn Cello Concerto in D major

Founded in 1939, the McGill Chamber Orchestra has presented 34 consecutive seasons under the baton of Dr. Brott. In addition to giving a regular series of concerts at Place des Arts' Theatre Maisonneuve, the orchestra frequently appears on radio and television and has made numberous recordings for RCA Victor, London, Baroque, and Janus. They have toured Canada and the U.S. as well as the Soviet Union. In May 1973, the orchestra will tour Switzerland as part of the first Cultural Exchange between Canada and Switzerland.

The conductor of the orchestra, Alexander Brott, is a well-known figure throughout Canada as a violinist, conductor, and composer. He is presently professor of music at McGill University, Musical Director of the McGill Chamber Orchestra, the Montreal "Pops", and the Kingston Symphony Orchestra. As a conductor, he has given concerts with major orchestras in Europe, Russia, Mexico, and Israel. His many honours include the "Sir Arnold Bax Gold Medal" as composer of the Commonwealth, several Olympic Medals and an Honorary Doctorate from the Chicago University.

Tickets are available from the Division of Concerts Box Office, Agnes Etherington Art Centre (547-6194), the House of Sounds, and the John Orr Room in the Student Union. Admission is $1.00 with student concert card and $2.50 general.

PHILOSOPHY DEPARTMENT
presents a public lecture
100 years of Bertrand Russell
AN APPRAISAL by J. G. Slater,
Chairman of Philosophy Dept.,
University of Toronto
WEDNESDAY MARCH 21st
DUPUIS LECTURE HALL 8 pm EVERYONE WELCOME

Queen's University · Music Department

CONCERT
Queen's University Choral Ensemble
Queen's University Wind Ensemble
Grant, Hall 8:00 p.m. Thursday, 22 March
Admission Free

Introductory Lecture and Physiological slides from the "Scientific American" article February, 1972

TRANSCENDENTAL MEDITATION
Wednesday, March 21
8:00 P.M.
Stirling Hall 412C Queen's University

S & R THINKS STUDENTS SPEND TOO MUCH FOR CLOTHES And we're doing something about it

At S and R you can buy great looking clothing for a lot less than you'd expect. You see we're giving you what's so hard to get these days. What you pay for .....and more.

Men's Blue Denim WESTERN JACKETS two front covered pockets, two front slash pockets. sizes 38 to 46
10.00 to 13.95

"LADY WRANGLER"
CUFFED BAGGIES AND FLARES
three spring plaids
mfr's. suggested retail price 13.95
$7.00

S&R DISCOUNT DEPARTMENT STORE
at Ontario

SHARE is coming

ARE YOU GRADUATING IN JUNE?

All students in the Faculty of Arts and Science who expect to graduate in June, should come now to the Faculty Office at 131 Union Street, to check that their names are on the degree list.

QUEEN'S FACULTY DUNCAN

TEACHING AS A CAREER

Representatives of the Faculty of Education will hold a meeting in Dupuis Hall Auditorium at 3:30 p.m. on Wednesday, March 28, 1973, to outline the program for 1973-74

BUS-IT REFERENDUM

Tomorrow, March 21st

Polling stations will be open as follows:

Union	10:30 - 6:30	Library	10:30 - 6:30
Kingston Hall	10:30 - 3:30	Humphrey Hall	10:30 - 3:30
MacDonald Hall	11:30 -12:30	Matheson Room (KGH)	11:30 -12:30
Ban Righ	4:45 - 6:15	Leonard	4:45 - 6:15
Gordon	4:45 - 6:15	Elrond	4:00 - 6:00

McArthur Hall (near the Auditorium) 12:00 - 4:00

You must have your green student card to vote

The wording of the referendum is as follows:

"Shall the Student Non-Academic Fee be increased by a sum of $3.00 in order to provide for "free" Bus service for Queen's students on the Kingston P.U.C. Transit System."

The actual cost of this programme is $5.00 per head; the University Administration is subsidizing the service by a sum of $2.00 per student.

The programme for next academic year will commence on Sept. 1, 1973 and terminate on May 15, 1974.

Service is available on all P.U.C. routes. Additional premium service will be collected where applicable (i.e. Barriefield, Reddendale and Dial-A-Bus).

Book worm - daze

Tuesday, March 20

5:45 - 6:30 - Ban Righ Fireside presentations; "How He Lied to Her Husband," a one act comedy by Shaw. Coffee and desert. Ban Righ Common Room. Everyone Welcome.

7:30 - 9:30 pm - Meeting of Queen's Spanish Club. Movies from Spanish Embassy. "Palma de Mallorca" and Toledo." i Vengan Vds. habalamos espanol! Red Room.

7:30 - 10:00 pm - Public Lecture sponsored by Sociology Dept. Stirling D. Visiting Speaker Chief Billy Diamond - National Indian Brotherhood. "James Bay Hydro Project."

8:30 pm - Professor Geoffrey Smith of the History Department will speak on "American Demagogues in the Great Depression." Followed by coffee and discussion. All welcome. Watson 517.

Wednesday, March 21

4:30 pm - WUSC elections. Upper Lounge. International Centre.

7:30 - 9:30 pm - The Department of Economics Coffee and Donut Party in the Faculty Common Room, 2nd floor, Dunning Hall.Adivsors in the Department of Economics will answer questions on courses and requirements of the Economics Depar'-ment.

8:00 pm - Philosophy Dept. and DSC will have Professor John Slater (Chairman of U. of T. Philosophy Department) to speak on "One Hundred Years of Bertrand Russell." Dupuis Hall.

9:00 pm - Department of English presents a poetry reading. Phyllis Webb, author of "The Sea is Also a Garden" and "Naked Poems." Agnes Etherington.

Thursday, March 22

8:00 pm - 1:00 am - SHARE Cabaret Night. Fran Francis Female Impersonator and Tim Lawson, Sue Harvey, Ann Vogl, Cathy Robertson and others. Lower Lounge, International Centre.

8:00 pm - Concert by the Queen's Wind and Choral Ensembles. Directors: Duane A. Bates and Denise Narcisse - Mairy Works by Mozart, Shoenberg, Handel, Kodaly and Somers. Admission Free. Grant Hall.

9:00 pm - Department of Film Studies presents "Lady From Shanghai" (Orson Welles, 1947). Ellis Hall.

Friday, March 23

8:00 pm - The Kingston Waffle presents the first of three public lectures. "The Capitalist State in Canada." John Hutcheson, York University, International Centre, Lower Lounge. (Students' Union)

8:00 pm - GSS Film Club presents Cul-De-Sac. Roman Polanski.

8:30 pm - Division of Concerts and the AMS concert committee presents the McGill Chamber Orchestra, conducted by Alexander Brott. Grant Hall. Tickets $1.00 with concert card and $2.50 general admission. Tickets available from Division of Concerts Box Office in Agnes Etherington and in John Orr Room in the Students' Union between 10:00 am and 6:00 pm daily.

Saturday, March 24

8:00 pm - 1:00 am - SHARE Pub Night. Dancing. McArthur College Pub.

Thursday, March 29

8:00 pm - The Kingston Waffle presents the 2nd of three public lectures.

Classical concert

The second of the twice-yearly concerts presented by the Music Department of Queen's University featuring the Queen's University Wind and Choral Ensembles will take place in Grant Hall, on Thursday, March 22nd, at 8:00 p.m. Over the last four years, the two ensembles have grown both in numbers and in maturity. The Queen's Wind Ensemble now numbers forty-seven instrumentalists and the Queen's Choral Ensemble eighty-eight voices.

During the first half of the program, the Queen's Wind Ensemble conducted by Dr. Duane A. Bates will perform music by Alternburg, Schoenberg and Mozart. Schoenberg's "Theme and Variations" written in 1944, employs none of the techniques of serialism with which this composer's works are most often associated. Mozart's "Serenade No. 10, Gran Partita" is generally considered to be one of the most beautiful of all wind works, in fact that "Gran Partita" was Mozart's choice for his own wedding serenade and was so performed as the concluding event of the wedding banquet.

After intermission, the Queen's Choral Ensemble will sing two folksongs, taken from Kenneth Peacock's "Songs of the Newfoundland outports" and arranged by Harry Somers, "The Old Mayflower" and "She's Like the Swallow". "Missa Brevis" by Zoltan Kodaly which was originally conceived and performed as an Organ-Mass in 1942, then was in 1944 the composer transformed the work into a Missa Brevis for voices with organ or orchestral accompaniment. Handel's composition "Aado K the Priest" was written in 1727 especially for the occasion of the coronation of George III, since when it has been performed on like occasions for several monarchs with textural changes from "King" to "Queen" depending on the reigning monarch.

The Queen's Choral Ensemble is conducted by Professor Denise Narcisse-Mair, organ soloists, Paul Harding and Mark Sirett, piano accompanists: Mrs. McLelland and Mark Sirett. Admission is free.

Sharp in Vietnam

World: Pleas for CDN ICCS presence

SAIGON — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, during his visit to Vietnam last week received pleas from seven parties to maintain the Canadian presence on the International Commission of Control and Supervision but none were able to give a clear cut reason.

Statements have been made by Japan, South Vietnam, the Soviet Union, China, the United States, North Vietnam and the Viet Cong asking Canada to stay. However, Sharp, on a fact finding mission to South Vietnam, pointed out that he was not satisfied with the way in which the ICCS was working.

He noted that it was up to the parties involved to make the ceasefire work and thereby maintain the Canadian presence. The Canadian staff on the ICCS has been becoming increasingly pessimistic as to the effectiveness of the force as their moves have been often blocked by the parties on the Joint Military Commission, lacking a higher more objective body to which to report.

WASHINGTON — The United States has issued sharp warnings to the Communists in South Vietnam and Laos noting heavy movements of men and equipment into the two areas, in violation of the Paris Peace Agreement.

Pentagon officials have acknowledged that as many as 30,000 North Vietnamese troops have moved into Laos. The Viet Cong, meanwhile are charging the South Vietnamese with violation of the ceasefire claiming that they must stop conducting military operations and start releasing civilian prisoners.

PARIS — According to Le Figaro, a Conservative French newspaper, the Russians are considering the Gaullist victory over the Socialist-Communist coalition to be a blessing.

The paper stated that a Communist victory coming after fifteen years of solid Gaullist majorities would have caused a reaction against Russia's current policy of reconcilliation with the west. In addition, the paper noted, Russia would have found it difficult to continue their encouragement of a growing commercial interest occurring between the Soviet Union and some large French companies.

PARIS — Fourteen nations meeting in Paris have hammered out an agreement effectively scrapping the fixed exchange rate policy where currencies are pegged in terms of each other in favour of flexible exchange rates in which currencies would be allowed to seek their own level.

The agreement comes in the midst of a speculative wave of unwanted dollars coming into Germany to trade for the stronger mark and renewed pressure on the price of gold pushing it upwards.

"Say, are you sure these are the official identification markings of the peace keeping force?"

The currencies will now be floating either in unison as is the case of Euopean Economic Community members or individually in other cases with interference only to "maintain orderly markets".

NEW YORK — According to the American Social Health Association, the incidence of gonorrhea has reached its highest since figures were first kept in 1919. The Association reported 718,401 cases in 1972, an increase of 15 per cent and speculates that if unreported cases were to be included the figure could top 2.5 million cases. The number of reported cases figure to 350 cases per 100,000 population.

Canada: By-elections shatter Conservatives

TORONTO — The Liberal position at Queen's Park was strengthened significantly last week with decisive victories in two provincial by-elections.

Margaret Campbell won Toronto St. George and Jack Riddell was elected in Huron. Both victories were regarded as upsets because the Liberals defeated strong Conservative cnadidates in ridings which have returned Tories for the past 30 years.

The seats were vacated by the resignations of two cabinet ministers - Justice Secretary Allan Lawrence, who represented St. George and Treasurer Charles MacNaughton, who held Huron.

The victories reinforce the Liberals' position as official Opposition in the Legislature. They now have 22 seats to the NDP's 19. The Conservative government has 76 members.

"Wherever I get a bit, put a tick."

KINGSTON — Kingston's rising crime rate is being investigated by the Ontario Police Commission. News of the inspection, which is described as "routine", was welcomed by Mayor George Speal and Police Chief Robert Nesbitt.

The investigation was called slightly more than a week after Solicitor-General Warren Allmand promised a group of concerned Kingston residents that the federal ggovernment will study the effect of five local federal penitentiarieson crime in Kingston.

VICTORIA — About 1,200 irate farmers gathered at the Legislative Buildings in Victoria last week to protest a British Columbia government bill to set up a commission which would have the power to decide what uses land in the province may have.

Premier David Barrett told the protestors that the government will go through with its plan for these controls.

Blaming poor public relations for the widespread opposition to the bill, Barrett claimed later that many people have misunderstood the government's intentions. The bill is designed to give economic protection to the province's small farmers, he explained. He said the government would welcome amendments to the legislation.

OTTAWA — Members of the Commons special committee on food prices refused last week to accept the Association of Canadian Advertisers' claim that advertising is only minimally reasonable for rising food prices. They criticized the ACA for breakfast cereal advertising directed at children and accused the ACA of insulting the intelligence of Canadians and abandoning ethics in "the scramble for a buck."

Delegates from the Retail Council of Canda, representing the large food chains, did not fare much better. Committee members claimed the RCR brief was just one more example of the continuing "snow job" the committee is forced to endure from big interests in the food industry.

They were more sympathetic to the complaints of independant grocers caught in a cost-price squeeze. The grocers' representative was complemented for his "straight talk."

TORONTO — Granola, one of the most highly lauded health foods, may not be as healthful as it has been made out, according to a University of Toronto faculty of sciences professor.

He noted that while granola contains slightly more protein than commercial whole wheat breakfast cereals, it also costs more and is slightly higher in calories.

OTTAWA — Gerald LeDain, chairman of the federal drug commission is calling for a whole new approach to judging of drug offences to overcome the problems of widely diverging sentences handed out by courts for very similar offences.

He noted that this problem is tending to create a sense of injustice in the mind of many Canadians. LeDain called for some sort of forum in which judges might be able to exchange sentencing experiences.

TORONTO — The Ontario government will impose compulsory arbitration on elevator companies and their striking employees tomorrow if the dispute is not settled by then. The strike has stalled elevator maintenance and installation for almost seven months.

Although this will be the first time compulsory arbitration has been imposed on an industry in the private sector in Ontario, Premier William Davis ex-explained that a settlement is "in the public interest."

The union negotiating team has announced that the union will view an Ontario settlement as applying to striking elevator workers across the country, but the elevator companies say it will affect Ontario only. They will wait to see what action is taken in other provinces.

backpage backpage backpage

AMS pledges support for foreign students

The Alma Mater Society will take action to help alleviate the plight of foreign national students who are facing restrictions on employment due to tighter government enforsement of work permit regulations.

Vice-president Bruce Trotter told the AMS Outer Council Wednesday night that the AMS is undertaking an information campaign to inform all Queen's students from other countries of the regulations so they do not get in trouble. He indicated there would be mailings to foreign students and advertisments placed in the Journal and elsewhere.

In addition, the AMS plans to seek changes in immigration laws to allow students not to be classified as 'visitors' so they will be eligible for exemptions to the work permit rules.

Trotter said the AMS, in cooperation with Jim Whitley, student affairs officer, the Graduate Student Society, and the International Club, will be sending out questionnaires to foreign students seeking information on the need for employment while attending university in Canada in order to finance higher education.

He said this information would be used to help convince the Department of Manpower and Immigration to reclassify students.

In the meantime, a delegation from Queen's will meet with Kingston MP Flora MacDonald in Ottawa tomorrow, and talks are being held with Dean of Law, D.A. Solberman, and the Legal Aid Society to handle any cases that come up regarding foreign students and wok permits.

The regulations presently require that any foreign national, not including landed immigrants, to hold a work permit as a requirement for employment. This can only be issued after the student has obtained a definite offer of employment stating the place, duration of employment, and type of job.

This must be taken to a Canada Manpower Centre which will assess whither a Canadian could hold the position. The decision is left to the discretion of the Manpower Officer.

After the issuance of a work permit, it must be endorsed by an Immigration Officer to ensure the student's visa is valid for the period of employment. This depends on the student's proof of re-admissibility to university in the fall.

Students who are doing work which is directly related to, and an integral part of their studies, do not need to obtain a work permit, but must have permission from the Immigration Department. This permission is usually granted on the strength of a letter from the University stating the need for the job.

The AMS also reaffirmed on Wednesday, the Ontario Federation of Students' resolution calling on the Provincial government not to change any of its policies regarding aid to foreign students in universities until sufficient comprehensive information on the subject has been gathered and published.

Some members of the Outer Council objected to the wording of the motion, saying it was as vague as the problem it was addressing, but as explained External Affairs Commissioner Kiloran German, and OFS Chief Delegate Lyn Whitham, the government had published a number of figures gibing numbers of foreign students at Ontario Universities, the amounts of aid given these students, and estimates of the cost to Ontario taxpayers of educating foreign students.

German pointed out that this information was incomplete in a number of ways - including complete blanks in the tables. She said the OFS had not been a position to assess the foreign student question because of a lack of information. In addition, Whitham pointed out that the OFS was not sure exactly what information was necessary for the task.

Whitham said the indications from the provincial government, through the minutes of the Ontario Committee on Student Awards, and through statements

(continued on page 6)

-flahift

On Wednesday, at about 2:00 pm, a group of students and other passers-by gathered to watch a Happening in front of the Student's Union. Players dressed as clowns, some resembling Harlequin figures, some dressed in long black capes, some with funny hats, some with grotesque masks all re-enacted the events of the day as depicted in the Toronto Globe and Mail and the Kingston Whig-Standard.

Documentary drama was the premise and comment via satirical improvisation, using the newspaper copy as the script, was what we got. Wounded Knee, the crime rate in Kingston, George Bain's poetic aspirations, Canadian Parliamentary procedure and several other areas were covered in this exercise by an Experimental Drama class. Unfortunately only the weather was working against it.

Despite cold winds and the consequent loss of small props and hats, the audience was receptive. It numbered about 50 and amusement seemed evident from the expressions on their faces.

There will be another Happening today in the same place at about 1:00 p.m. and if the weather does not get worse, all will go well.

Queen's
Journal
Volume One Hundred, No. 48
Friday, March 23, 1973

Busit passes easily

By a margin of more than six to one Queen's students approved the Busit proposal for next year. The scheme will allow Queen's students unrestricted use of Kingston PUC buses on normal routes without the payment of any fare. This service will be paid for by a three dollar levy per student and a two dollar a head contribution from the University.

2406 favoured the scheme while 387 opposed it. Number of ballots cast was 2793, 177 more than the number cast in the AMS presidential elections last month.

Steve Brereton, AMS president said that he was extremely pleased by the result, and further felt that it indicated a significant desire among students to bring the central and west campuses closer together.

ALMA MATER SOCIETY & DIVISION of CONCERTS

PRESENTS

McGILL CHAMBER ORCHESTRA

Alexander Brott, music director
Denis Brott, cello soloist

programme:

Concerto Grosso Op. 6, no. 8	A. Vivaldi
Cello Concerto in D major, Op. 101	J. Haydn
Divertimento for Strings	B. Bartok
Divertimento in D major, K. 136	W. A. Mozart

tonight
march 23rd
grant hall
8:00 p.m.

tickets: $1.00 with concert cards
$2.50 general admission available in Student's Memorial Union, Agnes Etherington, and at the door

COME & MEET ORCHESTRA AT RECEPTION AFTER CONCERT

The continuing saga of the AMS outer council

by Bob Wood

"We don't want to see something that could cost us a pile of money decided upon without the consideration of the Outer Council", cautioned Fraser Dunford, President of the Graduate Student Society, at the AMS meeting held at West Campus Wednesday night. He was speaking in opposition to approving in principle the establishment of an Information Bank.

Commerce rep, Ken Wong, who introduced the idea, explained that the proposed Information Bank would serve as a "physical Who's Where" which would provide information on any topic, ranging from a calendar of AMS events, to recipes, to answering queries concerning faculties. Wong hoped that the Bank would be able to use the John Orr Room as an office, providing a central location for registering student feedback.

He suggested that financial support might be available from some of the breweries similar to a financing arrangement at the University of Guelph, where Information Guelph is subsidized by Heidleberg, a division of Canadian Breweries.

Dunford asked for a budget for Information Bank, including an upper limit of expenditures, to be presented at the next AMS meeting. "Once this thing gets rolling, it might end up costing us $3000 to $4000", he stated.

Wong replied that he could not provide a "logical budget" within one week. He went on to estimate that the actual cost to the AMS would be in the range of $500 to $1000. According to him, the programme would start during orientation and no major expenses would be incurred until then. He pointed out that approval in principle of the motion would enable him to garner information from clubs and begin "scrounging up blackboards, furniture, and the like".

Outer Council approved in principle the establishment of the Information Bank.

A committee was struck to study the University Centre User's Committee Report and draft a statement to be presented at the open meeting on Monday. Ross Sutherland, Artsci rep, stated "we have lost control of the situation", and urged the Outer Council to take action. Sutherland and vice-president, Bruce Trotter, suggested that the AMS should support the basic idea of Scheme I, which involves renovation of the Union and expansion northward. They further recommended that two or three subcentres of limited area providing coffee and sandwiches be allocated; a bank be precluded from the Centre; and the offices of the AMS and the Journal-Tricolor be separated but for them to remain in close proximity.

Outer Council assigned a committee to study implications of a proposal before the Joint Commission on Extension of the Academic Year, which is evaluating the merit of an extension of the academic year in the Faculties of Applied Science and Arts and Science from two twelve week terms to two thirteen week terms. In advertisements in the Journal, they have pointed out the benefits of an opportunity for upper year students to work longer at their subjects and spreading the present work load over a longer "think" period and the disadvantage of extra costs for students to live in Kingston for the extra two weeks.

John MacDonald, President of the Engineering Society, felt that the "profs would say, oh boy, now we can teach what we really want to teach."

The AMS intends to undertake a programme during orientation week to inform first year students about the AMS itself and its functions. Approximately thirty people will talk to freshmen to explain what the AMS is all about and ways to get involved. Campus Activities Commissioner, Don Krestel asked if this programme would include McArthur students. Trotter stated that the McArthur orientation had not yet been set up and that when it was organized, the programme would include West Campus.

External Affairs Commissioner, Kiloran German reported that a meeting with Alderman Keith Norton, who serves as a liaison representative from Kingston City Council, had been very promising. Artsci rep, Rob Nicholson, will represent Queen's at City Council and field questions from aldermen. Nicholson is head of the Community Relations Committee.

Quic/Law lays off staff

Notice of termination has been given to 49 members of the Quic-Law project because funds are drying up. Ontario Labour Law requires 8 weeks notice to be given if 50 or more members of staff are laid off.

Quic-Law is a computer information retrieval system which at its outset was applied to treaties. All treaties entered into by commonwealth countries with other countries were stored in a computer from which information could be extracted. Recently, it has developed into a tool for storing and retrieving legal statutes and other information.

Signs of discontent have reached the Journal through several members of the project who are about to be laid off. Their annoyance stems from the fact that it is unlikely that the university will be able to absorb the large number of people.

David Bonham, Vice Principal (Finance) told the Journal that "every effort is being made to get them jobs." However, the university is "not expanding at present" and it is "unlikely that it will be able to absorb 49 people."

"This may seem like an arbitrary thing to the employees but they should have known that funding for research projects is very tenuous," he explained and added that the Director of the project, Hugh Lawford is responsible for hiring and firing, not Queen's University.

Funds dried up, IBM decided not to renew its support after fulfilling its commitments to the project.

Similarly, the Board of Trustees agreed in February to discontinue its support of Quic-Law because the project has passed the research stage, according to principal John J. Deutsch.

He explained that the project has been in the testing stage since last August. "Commercial Development is not a university function," Deutsch stressed and added that the university cannot replace every research grant when it stops or it would go bankrupt."

There are $6-7 million worth of research projects presently operating at Queen's under the support of different government agencies and businesses.

Lawford told the Journal that "if we can't get university funding beyond April and if we can't get grants from the government we might have to close down." However, he was hopeful that funds would come through.

Former GW editor MCP winner

During the Busit referendum Wednesday, a number of ballots were cast for the "MCP Award". AMS returning officer Kathy Mitchell expressed surprise on finding the ballots, which were apparently produced in connection with Wednesday's issue of Golden Words which announced an election for Male Chauvinist Pig of the year, with six "nominees". Having no use for the ballots, Mitchell gave them to the Journal to count.

The winner was Golden Words Editor Kevin Van Koughnett who received 50 votes, followed by former AMS president Greg Leblanc, and more than 50 other names.

Van Koughnett, when contacted by the Journal indicated that he was very happy with the results, and added that he found it "very hard to establish a frame of reference in which to work in his new capacity". He refused to elaborate further at first but then added that he "would try as hard as possible to fulfill his intended function".

After the results were announced, the Womens' Caucus stated that they would present an award to Van Koughnett on April 6 at 2 pm in the House of Commons.

SHARE is coming

CEGEP's battle union and government

MONTREAL (CUP) — The Quebec Government has ordered the banks used by Dawson and Vanier CEGEPS (Community Colleges) to stop all payments issued by the colleges.

The Government move is in response to the CEGEPS Administrations' refusal to follow government-ordered de-classifications of their teachers. The de-classifications would drastically slash salaries for many CEGEP teachers.

In a telegram to the banks, Quebec, Deputy Education Minister Yves Martin said because the colleges had resolved "to incur unauthorized expense", the banks should "stop immediately all payments of any nature until authorization to the contrary is received." The college Board of Governors in February voted to proceed with pre-declassified salaries, despite a government declaration the move was illegal.

The government action means staff workers at the colleges may not be paid March 22.Wording of the telegram also means pay will be withheld from administrative and support staff, although they are not affected by the classification issue.

About 500 people would be affected at Vanier and about 625 at Dawson.

MONTREAL (CUPI) — A common front of five unions has gone on strike, closing down three Quebec universities.

The workers are pressing for changes in the job classification system presently in force, increased sick pay and salaries. The three affected universities are the Universite De Montreal (U De M), University Du Quebec A Montreal (UQAM) and Universite Laval.

The five unions represent secretarial, library and maintenance workers and are affiliates of The Confederation of National Trades Unions (CNTU) and the Quebec Federation Of Labor (QFL).

The main point of the dispute is a move by the universities to create a hierarchy among the workers that would not be based on equal pay for equal work. For example, a Dean's secretary would be better paid than a secretary working for an Assistant Dean.

Dalhousie goes conventional

HALIFAX (CUP) — Starting with the 1973 Summer Session, grading at Dalhousie University will be based on "the instructor's bonafide assessment of the level of his students' performance in formal class assignments and-or examinations", if Senate approves.

This recommendation was made by the Faculty of Arts and Science in early March and a March 20 meeting refused to reconsider the motion which effectively bans experimental courses.

Only one innovative first year course per department would be permitted if the recommendation survives the Senate committees on Curriculum and Studies.

Dalhousie first allowed experimental courses about three years ago.Students could draw up a course plan, obtain a professor and decide on the method of marking, teaching, etc., themselves. The system often meant grading was done by the students themselves. It has also been done in some other courses, usually ones taught by progressive teachers.

The faculty recommendation would eliminate the practice, except for one course per department.

UBC to enter NUS

VANCOUVER (CUP) — A small quorum of University of British Columbia students March 16 approved membership in the New national Union of Students (NUS).

NUS membership was approved on the condition fees not exceed 30 cents per member of the student society, the amount estimated by Alma Mater Society (AMS) External Affairs Officer Boni Long.

Membership fees will not force the $9 AMS membership fee up because the students also voted to levy fees against graduate students and part-time students. This would enable the student union building to continue functioning with its present services and will prevent a deficit in the budget projected for 1973-74.

The administration, however, has said it will not collect these fees.

The AMS decided March 14 to take the UBC Administration to court over the lease of the student building. The administration has refused to provide adequate cleaning maintenance and supervision of the building as specified in the lease, which has been under fire for five years.

Storm warnings

ST. CATHARINES (CUP) — The provost of Brock University has warned senior administrators to prepare for massive cutbacks in a few years.

In a letter to all Department Chairmen, Allan Earp indicated the current financial crisis left the university no alternative but to fire faculty. His warning was the first time a Brock administrator had admitted the gravity of the situation.

The university is currently giving the departments time to consider ways to implement the firings to do "the least damage to the quality of education".

Earp hinted that Brock is considering similar measures to those proposed in January by Trent University President Thomas Nind. Nind proposed massive faculty cuts in certain areas and the abolition of several academic programs.

In your own way.
In your own time.
On your own terms.
You'll take to the taste of Player's Filter.

A taste you can call your own.

Warning: The Department of National Health and Welfare advises that danger to health increases with amount smoked.

REMEMBER!
General Meeting of the Education Committee

WHEN? Sunday March 25, 1:30

WHERE? McLaughlin Room, S.M.U.

WHY? To air your views about us.

AMS EDUCATION COMMISSION

Attention: FOREIGN NATIONALS on STUDENTVISAS

1) As you all should know by now, ALL FOREIGN STUDENTS as of January 1, 1973, must have a work permit for ANY job for which they are paid. (This includes part-time and summer employment.)

2) IF YOU HAVE NOT DONE SO, go to your employer (or your department office at Queen's) and get a statement stating, type, location and duration of your job. Then go to the Canada Manpower Office (395 Princess Street) and apply for a work permit.

3) These new government regulations will have a tremendous effect on foreign students who need summer employment to partially finance their studies in Canada.

4) The Alma Mater Society feels that these regulations, which are necessary to control illegal immigrants, are too severe on foreign students and will request the Government to reclassify foreign students so they may be exempted from the new regulations.

5) In order that this can be done, the AMS needs a lot of information. An effort will be made to send a questionnaire to every foreign student on campus. Please take five minutes of your time to complete it and return it by campus mail to the AMS Office, Student Union. If you do not receive such a questionnaire by next week, come and get one from the AMS Office. Please complete ONLY ONE questionnaire.

6) Please give this your immediate attention. We can only help if you can help us.

Dept. of Film Studies presentation a diversion from the horrors of studying...

a study in horror

hitchcock's

PSYCHO

Tues., March 27 8 p.m.

Ellis Hall $1.00

●●●ASUS annually sponsors a scholarship to attend the SUMMER SCHOOL IN PEACE RESEARCH at Grindstone Island, Portland, Ontario, July 1-21st.

●●●Anyone or any group interested may contact Richard Meech Secretary of ASUS at 549-0499 after 9 p.m. Applications must be in by April 6th.

Come all ye lads & lassies to the enchanted city of

BRIGADOON

alive for one night on March 31st

Lower Vic., 9 pm - 1 am

Tickets available March 19-24 in meal lines and March 26-30 in John Orr Room

$5.00 per couple

The Levana Formal Committee

SUMMER ALTERNATIVES

Science '44 Co-op Summer Rentals

Singles and doubles available from May 1 to September.

21 Co-ed houses close to campus. Free parking, no pets.

Singles: $40 a month

Doubles: $55 a month

Call or write: Jean Hanink 395 Brock 544-3778

Gymnastics growing in Kingston

Gymnastics Kingston, in co-operation with the Kingston Gymnastics Club, is hosting the first annual Kingston Invitational Gymnastics Meet at the Queen's Bartlett Gymnasium this Saturday. Boys and girls from ages eight through eighteen will be competing on all the various gymnastic apparatus. The holding of an invitational meet in Kingston is yet further evidence of the increasing foothold which the sport is gaining in the city.

For any who viewed the rather amusing antics of the Kingston Gym Club members at the mammoth display held two weeks ago, this should be an interesting opportunity to see the competitive division of the Club when it is at its best. At least two of those competing on behalf of Kingston will be proceeding to the Ontario Championship in Toronto at the beginning of May: Dean Perrett, 10, and Gord Nye, 18. In addition, top competitors from the Brookfield Gym Club in Ottawa, the Deep River Gym Club, and other clubs in Eastern Ontario will be competing. It should be an interesting event. Admission is 50c, and home-made refreshments will be available. See you there!

-merrithew

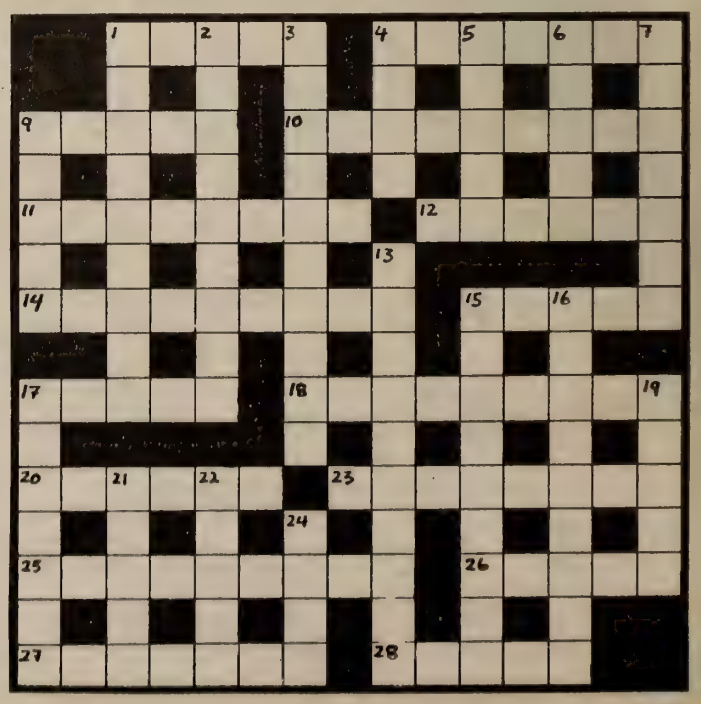
Foreign students (continued from page 1)

made in the last few months by Colleges Minister Jack McNie, were that it was considering not paying the universities formula grants for foreign students.

She refered to one portion of the OCSA minutes which said "modify the Provincial Formula Fee Schedule so as to effect a substantial reduction in provincial assistance to institutions with respect to foreign students." OFS General Co-ordinator, Craig Heron, who had prepared the material was not able to immediately connect the exerpt from the minutes to any definate recommendations.

The minutes did indicate, however, that there was internal dissention on the foreign student aid question. In particular, under discussion was the definition of foreign -- did it mean nonresident of Ontario, or non-citizen of Canada.

SHARE is coming



crossword

ACROSS

1. Adhesive particle of paper issued by a government as a certificate of revenue collected.
4. Joins together ropes.
9. Junior military officer.
10. What the raven quoth.
11. Dairy girl.
12. Of the mind.
14. Girl's name, indicating she doesn't waver.
15. Essay, journal or cheque.
17. It hath charms.
18. Powerful little guns.
20. Saints' bones.
23. Not yet eighteen.
25. Wedge-shaped writing.
26. Sharp.
27. Make a bondservant of.
28. Father's daughter's brother's daughter.

DOWN

1. Where the cheerleaders stay.
2. Powerful little gun.
3. Those over 65 receiving government grants.
4. Conserve.
5. Big.
6. Hit solidly; obsolete clothing.
7. Starry.
9. Funny.
13. Footmen.
15. Petty theft by employees.
16. Too early.
17. Wonderful (e.g. a cure).
19. Bits of chain where golf is played.
22. See 24.
24, 22. Thin, expensive crockery.

ARE YOU GRADUATING IN JUNE?

All students in the Faculty of Arts and Science who expect to graduate in June, should come now to the Faculty Office at 131 Union Street, to check that their names are on the degree list.

Would you throw away $4?

If you did, not opt out in October, you paid for a copy of Tricolor '73 with your fees last fall.

The book will be available in September.

If you will be here, you may pick up your copy then. If you have your green student card.

If you won't be here, you may have it mailed for $1 payable at the AMS Office.

BA + RIA =

more earning power and scope.

The B.A. and the R.I.A. (Registered Industrial Accountant) designation go well together. B.A. + R.I.A.'s get to the centre of management action. Because they have the depth and breadth of a university education and the practical problem-solving ability of the R.I.A. It's a combination that will open the doors to a solid and challenging career, and add earning power to your degree. Your university credits will likely win some exemptions from R.I.A. program courses. Mail this coupon today for more information.

REGISTERED INDUSTRIAL ACCOUNTANT
the professional management accountant
THE SOCIETY OF INDUSTRIAL ACCOUNTANTS

Registrar
The Society of Industrial Accountants of Ontario
Box 176, 154 Main Street E., Hamilton, Ont. (525-4100)

Mr.
Ms. .....

Address .....

City ..... Tel. .....

Institution Attending ..... Degree Program .....

newsbriefs

Deutsch on financing

The new slip-year method of financing Ontario universities is a "gesture to the problem of shortfalls", but it is unfair to growing universities", according to Queen's Principal John J. Deutsch.

The current financing of these contribution ties the operating grant of each institution to proposed student enrolment.

In the new fiscal year, grants will be based on the actual student enrolment of the previous year.

The new scheme is intended to affect financial difficulties which many universities have experienced this year as a result of unexpected shortfalls in enrolment.

Deutsch told the Journal that "growing universities will not get additional BIU grants for their increases" unless the government decides to give compensation. "Then the financing scheme becomes a very mixed up thing", he said.

"The government wants the medical faculty to grow but it doesn't give us enough money for increases", Deutsch said and added "increases in the Faculty of Medicine are very costly".

Deutsch has asserted all this year that universities should be financed on the basis of enrolment forecasts for the following year.

The government would study the projections of the fourteen Ontario universities and decide whether projected enrolment was too high or too low. Adjustments could then be made across the board.

"This scheme would assure universities of a fixed sum of money" and "automatically take care of increases," Deutsch concluded.

AMS establishes a first

At the Outer Council meeting on Wednesday night, the body moved into secret session to discuss the appointment of the speaker -- a precedent setting move in its own right.

After approving secret session, the Deputy -speaker Marv Bloos asked all "but the rector" to leave. When challenged, he pointed out that Article II section 2, sub-section A makes the rector an ex-officio member of the AMS Outer Council.

The section, in fact, says that the Rector is an honourary member of the Alma Mater Society, which is different from the AMS Outer Council.

After the meeting Bloos admitted that his ruling had been incorrect.

The rector stayed at the meeting anyway.

SCM summer projects

Again this summer, the Student Christian Movement (SCM) will be sponsoring summer work projects for students. Two projects, both in the Toronto area, are planned for this summer: an Industrial (students in industry) and a General Labour Work Project. The SCM does not actually provide employment, but job availability in the two work areas has been studied. Participants will cooperate to find jobs which are related to the project topic.

A central feature of each project is communal living. The SCM hires a cook and a project director and finds a living site (usually a church hall) for project members. All participants pay into a travel pool to equalize the cost of getting to Toronto. Day-to-day living expenses and chores are also shared. The SCM encourages the creation of a wage pool in each project. Participation in the wage pool is not compulsory, but it serves to maintain a fair "distribution of poverty" and ensures that everyone will have enough money to return to university.

There will be some formal study each week of various aspects of the project topic, which may take the form of special activities or seminars.

Students who wish to take part in one of the projects must be willing to accept the advantages and disadvantages of communal living. They must also be prepared for discussion of ideas - religious, social, moral and political.

Eight to ten students of each sex will be chosen to participate in the projects. Applications can be obtained from: The SCM of Canada, 736 Bathurst St., Toronto 4, Ontario. They should be submitted by April 7.

WIC to hold banquet

The annual banquet of the Women's Intramural Committee will be held on Sunday, March 25 in Lower Ban Righ. Everyone is welcome including interested males.

The intramural awards will be presented at the banquet.

The dinner is a roast beef buffet — all you can eat for just $1.00. Tickets are available from athletic sticks or in meal lines. Can you find a better deal for a Sunday evening meal?

Zambian

Interview by Raj Anand

John Reed is a Canadi... Fellow from the Univer... Queen's for about six m... professor at the Universi... years. The following inte... talk he gave on the eco... Zambia.

JOURNAL: First, in reference to Zambia's colonial background: what was its historical background before independence was declared in 1965?

REED: Well, Zambia was a British colony called Northern Rhodesia, but for almost all of the ten years before independence it had been part of the Central African Federation, or the Federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland, which was a rather odd sort of political setup. It had a Federal government which was very much European-dominated, but in Southern Rhodesia a completely settler-controlled, and in Northern Rhodesia British colonial, government. The functions of each government were in each territory divided between the territorial government and the federal one. It was quite a curious arrangement; for example, European education belonged to the Federal government, and African education belonged to the territories. So that education was split up not only between different sections of the government but between different sections of different governments.

The whole problem of moving towards some kind of integrated educational policy was very difficult indeed. It was this kind of situation that Zambian independence inherited. A number of very good schools, which were reserved for Europeans, came under the power of the new Zambian government; these schools were really adapted to serve the European settler population, which was rapidly vanishing away.

The Zambian government has managed to use this rather odd legacy, and to put together something which is working rather well as an educational system....

This is the kind of thing I was talking about: the rather special situation which Zambia faced at independence, owing to the fact that unlike most British colonies, it didn't move steadily towards independence. It passed through this rather awkward experience - the Federation - when it seemed it would in fact never reach independence.

JOURNAL: Was there an attempt in the Federation to assimilate the peoples of the three territories?

REED: Well, the ideal which the Federation claimed to support was called partnership, which was a deliberate contrast to the South African doctrine of apartheid. In fact, there was very little of this multiracialism in practice, and the first Prime Minister of the Federation is reported to have sold the idea of partnership to his European constituents by the image of the partnership of the man and the horse, the Europeans being the man and the African population being the horse. I'm not sure whether he actually said this, but it's quite on the cards that he did.

This was certainly the idea. It was a front, although of course there was no intention either of establishing the immensely complicated superstructure of apartheid. In practical terms, there was little change in the customs, in the complete segregation of most institutions of ordinary life until very near the end, when things became fairly desperate. Until that time, hotels had been completely reserved for Europeans; the Africans weren't allowed into public swimming baths as well, as most restaurants and shops.

Finally the Southern Rhodesian government decided to reverse that policy, but then just before the breakup in federation the Rhodesian Front Government came to power in Southern Rhodesia and that particular crisis stopped. Of course, since U.D.I., the process has been reversed.

JOURNAL: This attempt to integrate the activities of these colonies: did this extend to the economic side? Did the British government treat the colonies as one and exploit their resources as one?

REED: Well, the British government in a sense set up the Federal government and then, as it were, negotiated with it. The economic basis of the Federation was very much the fact that, taking the three colonies together, the really important wealth lay within Northern Rhodesia, in the copper mines. Southern Rhodesia, although it is quite industrialized, doesn't have very much in the way of natural resources. What happened during the Federation was that a viable economic unit was linked to an industrial sector to form something which went through a considerable boom during the fifties. The wealth from the copper tended to flow into Southern Rhodesia.

This is one of the reasons why when the Federation broke up, it didn't undo the enormous unfairness which had been brought about. The whole of the development had in fact gone into Southern Rhodesia. The advantages in bringing the countries together were almost entirely for the Europeans. For example.....when I lived there, there were no restrictions whatsoever on my moving from one territory to another, for Africans this wasn't so. The African was controlled not by an ordinary passport, but by a special card which he had to carry. It wasn't possible for Africans to travel from Southern to Northern Rhodesia without permission. You can see how the thing worked: it was a federation, but on a level where all the advantages of unity...accrued to the whites. As far as Northern Rhodesia was concerned, an enormous amount of development and wealth which would have been there at independence did there's no doubt about it - flow into Southern Rhodesia. The university which is where I taught before I went to Zambia, was built in Salisbury as a Federal university, and it was of course a multiracial university; this was considered to be an embodiment of the concept of partnership. But when I went to the university in 1957, there was residential segregation...and there were eight African students out of a student body of over a hundred at the beginning. There was in fact one African woman in the whole university, one person with a residential hall to herself. Obviously, it was impossible to make such a system work and very soon racially mixed halls were introduced.

JOURNAL: In view of this advantageous European position, why was there the push for independence in Southern Rhodesia?

REED: You're talking about the period while the Federation was in progress . . .

JOURNAL: The early sixties, I mean.

REED: The very early sixties. The fact was that Southern Rhodesia was still a colony of Britain, which has reserved powers which were supposed to control legislation which might be unfavourable to the Africans. The Prime Minister of that time, Sir Edgar Whitehead, was very anxious to clear up this position and get complete independence, and he used this . . .as an election goal with the white voting population. . . .

It became apparent by 1961 or 62 that the Federation wasn't going to last. If it wasn't going to last, the Southern Rhodesians, who thought they had fallen over backwards in accepting a policy of partnership . . . felt they had nothing to gain. They thought, why shouldn't we go back to our old traditional, more explicitly-segregated way of life?

JOURNAL: Did the polar... Rhodesia tend to promot... Rhodesia?

REED: The African nationa... was at first directed against ... Federation had broken up, a ... as a British colony, their ult... was assured, because Britai... But I don't think it's fair to ... the nationalist movement. T... in the nationalist movement ... and take a full part in nation... positions, but I think this is p...

JOURNAL: Zambia has ba... this develop?

REED: It used to have a mu... party since independence ... dependence Party, or UNI... change was made by which ... became a "one-party partic... that is used). This doesn't ... only party which has held po... the sole party.

JOURNAL: Has the opposi...

REED: Well, the way in w... dissolving the other politica... National Congress. Now, the ... Congress MP's in Parliame... as independents.

JOURNAL: Was this a unil... Zambia?

REED: It was a decision m... appointed a commission to ... which Zambia should beco... mission both the President ... National Congress were invi... up their seats.

JOURNAL: Do the public, t... have a significant voice?

Consciousness

Photography by Gerry Hogarth

...ernment Commonwealth ... Zambia who will be at ... He has been an English ...ambia for the past seven ...vas taped the day after a ...and political situation in

...ard white rule in Southern ... nationalism in Northern

...vement in Northern Rhodesia ...leration . . . because once the ... went back to their old status ...estiny as independent nations ...is policy of decolonisation . . ...re was any rigid racialism in ...re some Europeans involved ...ll live in Independent Zambia ...There are none in top political ...not surprising.

... one-party system. How did

...y system, although the ruling ...en the United National In... ...e beginning of this year the ...came the only party; Zambia ...democracy" (this is the term ...change in party, because the ...Zambia is the one which is now

...en outlawed?

...is change was made was by ...then in existence, the African ... a number of African National ...hese remained in Parliament

...ecision, or was it accepted in ... the government, which then ...commendations on the way in ...ne-party state. On this com... ...Vice-President of the African ...t. Neither of them in fact took

...ia, the newspapers in Zambia

REED: There are two newspapers, one of which is a government newspaper; the Zambian Broadcasting Service is government-controlled.

JOURNAL: Basically what I am asking you is: is there an outlet for public protest?

REED: It's perhaps less outspoken than one is used to in countries like Britain or America, but basically I think there is no restriction on freedom of speech. You find that the newspapers tend to criticize the government rather more circumspectly than you would expect in countries with a different kind of political tradition. . .

JOURNAL: Do you think that this one-party system is good for Zambia in the beginning of its development?

REED: This is a difficult question to answer, because really one can only speak from what happens. The development of the country in the first period, since indepencence, has been very good. You may say this is the result of a . . multi-party system, but there has not in fact been a change in government.

It is arguable that the kind of political life which develops with parties competing, with changes in government which result from two properly functioning parties . . it is arguable that this is very difficult to fit into the political situation in underdeveloped countries. One quite simple problem is that in order to have a two-party system, you've got to be able to support twice as many politicians . . . .half of them out of office all the time. This may seem to be only a minor thing, but I think it's one of the things which tends to be overlooked . . Two-party systems really only work in conditions which we tend to take for granted, in Western countries. These conditions often don't obtain in Africa.

JOURNAL: Do you think that the one-party system will result in a more solid and dynamic leadership for the economic program than perhaps two?

REED: Well, it certainly could make sure than an economic policy is held steady for long periods of time, longer than the average life of a government under a two-party system. I think the economic problems of Zambia really are long-term; for example, the whole reshaping of the direction of communications is something that has to be seen in terms of perhaps fifty years . . I mean, I think we do tend to forget the enormous problems of two-party systems. One's only got to think of such problems as Ireland has been for England. It seems to me to have been enormously exacerbated by the fact that in England, no one knows who is going to be the government in two or three years' time. It's very difficult to settle problems which . . . demand long-term settlements. It's very easy for people in the West to have an automatic reaction; two parties, good; one party, bad.

JOURNAL: The ideological theme of the Zambian government has been "Zambian humanism." What does this term mean?

REED: It means the search for a society which is man-centred and in which the common man is the "purpose" of the society . . If you ask in detail how this is effected, it becomes rather more difficult to answer . . It's a path against the abstract or inhuman quality which is to be found in capitalist society, with its placing of material wealth at the centre of the function of society, and also the kind of abstractness and lack of concern which is said to be characteristic of some kinds of socialist societies.

JOURNAL: Does the doctrine of Humanism give any sort of indication of how this is to be brough into practice?

REED: Well, I think one can find the general range of ideas with which Zambian humanism is concerned in the works of Franz Fanon. If you look at the way in which he uses the word humanism, you get an idea of the way it's understood in Zambia . .

JOURNAL: In your talk yesterday, you said something to the effect that Zambian humanism "seems to be connected with non-alignment, socialist criticism of capitalism, and the capitalist criticism of socialism." If it criticizes capitalism and socialism, each from the opposite view, how can it tend to avoid both extremes?

REED: Perhaps it doesn't. What I said was an attempt to give you an impression of the way Humanism finds lack of concern for the ordinary man is common to both capitalism and communism in practice. One can see a core of truth here, which is what Zambian humanism is concerned with. It's the need to reach the ordinary man: the peasant, the person who . . hasn't got the organizations, like Trade Unions which the worker in the city has got; who is a sense has not really spoken, yet.

This common man - we mustn't think of "the man in the street" in the European way, but really the man in the bush - whose future is really what independence and the escape from underdevelopment should be all about . . This does seem to me the central problem in politics in Africa, because whatever we do in these countries, if this man's life is not made better, it doesn't really matter whether you have a booming economy. It doesn't really matter whether you have created within urban pockets model cities . . .what really matters is what happens to these masses of the population living lives which, in many ways, still haven't been changed or touched by independence or by economic development. It's the problem of Africa, it's the problem of South America, it's the problem of most of Asia.

JOURNAL: How has the Zambian consciousness been reflected in Zambian literature?

REED: There has been so far little Zambian literature if you define it as books in English which have been published and are available to read. It exists in other ways: in other languages, in songs, or in dances . .

I suggested that the one novel that so far has appeared, a novel called The Tongue of the Dumb by Dominic Mulaisho, claimed that in a sense the important thing about society is loyalty, rather than leadership. It is a rather strange novel in that it concerns the relationships in a Zambian rural area in the 1940's between a Jesuit mission and a village; but the unusual thing is that it's not the conflict between African values and European values. Both of these communities are in danger of disintegration because of forces within themselves, and both are led by weak men . . .Both these men are threatened by men within their own community who claim to embody the doctrine of theology of the community. .

The novel as a whole in both communities shows that in the end, the salvation of the community is loyalty against all the odds, to the man who is the head, however incompetent he may be; the insistence on a rigid set of ideas which define the society is in fact destructive to the society. I think this is an interesting view of society and I think it may be quite an important one to come out of the Zambian context.

letters

Best defence, the offence

Dear Editor,

As a target of wierd letters to you (March 6 & 9), I feel I must give the matters raised the better perspective which so conveniently evaded your earlier correspondents, as well as fill some lacunae.

Let me first say, that while some events have genuinely come as a surprise to me, the public commentation by Mr. R. R. Dunsmore, in retrospect did not.

Mr. Dunsmore had a cute turn of phrase when he wrote of "pompous inexactitude". As usual he must have been thinking of himself as a reference point as he knows as do his associates that he is pompously exact. But enough of this crap. Mr. Dunsmore's activity of the Law Student's Society executive can best be described as pompously unconstructive. His behavior, dear editor, ranged from that of child-like but cunning obstruction (mainly due to the fact that he was denied the opportunity of being king of the sandhill) to that of a palpably greasy co-operativeness and friendliness whenever he needed money to finance scenarious for possible future employers.

Mr. Dunsmore should not complain of the lack of a united voice on the Society executive. He knows very well that his "Dunsmore's Gang" on the executive was very much disconcerted and outraged that their spiritual leader was denied his due in piling up the sand as he saw fit, and only too readily and for too long took part in his obstructionist tactics.

Try as he might, Mr. R.R. Dunsmore could not stop all motions of import and consequence. He neglectfully (as he must see it now) did not with exactitude damnify the motion to have a shuffleboard installed. He was not perceptive to the danger it could pose to the size of his audience at his periodical and public outpouring with society financed out-of-town heavyweights. Perhaps he should ask law students whether their freaked-out state is better relieved by a game of shuffleboard or a sleep during a Dunsmore-speaker debate.

As for his remarks that the far-sighted constitutional changes steered by me through an audience of sceptical and sharp-minded embryo lawyers was the only "outlook" of the Society executive, I will accept that statement only if Mr. Dunsmore agrees that he was at all times an active and committed representative to the Society executive using his experience of two years on the Society executive positively and responsibly. But judging from his railings and convictions that all 13 members of the executive except him were soundly asleep when obvious issues came along, Mr Dunsmore obviously did not make even the slightest move to wake us up from our deep slumber.

But the fact is that all those issues mentioned were dealt with. For example, the "bigoted" professor was soundly thrashed and scrutinized by the faculty board reps including myself, and was an issue to which many students were drawn and involved in. The executive did not, and rightly so, try to dominate the dealings with the issue when so many other students wanted to have their punches. As far as the new Dean thing goes, (By the way Dean Soberman is back for another 4), the law school has yet to gain the power to hire one; rather he is appointed by the Principal who is advised on his choice by a committee which has a student member. The executive demand that the committee do more than decide whether to recommend Dean Soberman or not for another term. The strong recommendation that the committee consider all comers was made and taken up while R. R. Dunsmore was busy in another sandpile.

And who says any profs are being forced to leave. Maybe they want to go out and earn the big bucks instead of having to put up with the pompous exactitude of students like RRD.

It is clear that Mr. Dunsmore had taken the slightest pretext to yet again make a cheap pitch to the sensibilities of law students and the many credulous Journal readers with his schizophrenic accusations just as the old executive is retiring from a year of clawing, biting, and spitefulness engendered by Mr. Dunsmore.

As to the letter of Mr. Kees W. Kort (Mar. 9), what lucid remarks can be expected from an 'iolop' that can neither do without ham sandwiches, nor enjoy a cigarette and shuffleboard game unless it's free.

If I may add, Dear Editor, I now recollect that during a recent visit to Ukraine, my grandmother warned me, when we were alone, that a donkey would come to haunt me. Little did the dear old lady know that here in Canada, standards are much higher: one donkey there, is equivalent to a small herd here, and in human form at that.

Sincerely,
Walter V. M. Petryshyn.

Lost letter

Ms. Editor:

In reply to Rick Smith, and all other frustrated and letter less artsies - thank-you for bringing this matter to our attention. The Arts Athletic Stick, appointed Thursday, is Stu Beck. If you did not receive your letter at the BEWS banquet, please contact him at 544-9531; he will do his best to clear up the case of the missing letters before the end of term.

Eleanor Crowder,
President, ASUS

Queen's knight at arms defends himself against a barage of criticism. Decked out in a suit of mail he raises his shield emblazoned with the Queen's crest which was designed by Peter Dorn, Co-ordinator of Graphic design at Queen's.

Don't stand in way of progress

Dear Editor,

The Liberal government of Quebec is proceeding with the early phases of the James Bay hydroelectric project. They have yet to negotiate in good faith with the Indians and Eskimos who live in the James Bay region. The rights of the native people are being abrogated, and our parliamentary system gives them no course of action.

There is no real question about who is entitled to the land. The native people have lived there for generations, their way of life dependent on and in harmony with the natural environment. But they will be displaced and stuck on whiteman's organized reservations (what more could they want?) or forced to the cities. Lord knows what will happen to their fishing and hunting grounds. The major rivers flowing into James Bay will be dammed. Rivers will be diverted, thousands of acres will be flooded. Crumbling clay, tree trunks, floating islands of peat moss and sunken debris will turn the water to an oozy brown sea in which fish cannot survive.

What will occur in the chemistry of the waters in Hudson Bay? That is unknown. What will happen to the whales and seals? Unknown. What affect will the project have on Ontario's climate? That is unknown, or rather they are not saying, and you can not find out.

But the most frightening part of this whole specious fraud is the Quebec government's inference that the whites have the right to negotiate for the Indian land.

Apart from the question of aboriginal rights, why is the James Bay project disasterous for Canada?

-First, it is based on disasterous forecasting: exponential growth. Quebec hydro justifies the project by predicting, and planning for a 7 per cent increase in hydro consumption every year for the next thirty years.
- it is a "make-work" project to rescue Quebec's dismal record of unemployment. But after it is built, then what?
- of the 400 page environmental impact study, only 30 pages has been released to the public. (that's pretty hard to take, in this land of the free home of the brave)
- It is dependent on selling power to the United States, particularly the New England states. But their energy crisis still won't be satiated. Then what?
- independent, self-sustaining Indian communities in Northern Quebec are being destroyed. This project is an enormous rape.

It seems that any minority, be it the Eskimos on the Mackenzie Delta, the farmers in Pickering Township or the Indians in James Bay, that stand in the way of "progress" end up annihilated. And oh how the masses will rue the day.

Bob Almack, Arts '74

Praise for the Words?

Dear Editor,

Since Golden Words has ceased publication for the year, we feel that the Journal is the appropriate place to express our opinion. We would like to congratulate Mr. Van Koughnett and the Golden Words staff for their brilliant self-parody. In particular we are referring to the issue dated March 21, 1973. It is gratifying to know that there are some people on this campus who are willing and able to laugh at themselves. Therefore, we are looking forward with great anticipation to Golden Words' first issue in the fall.

Yours sincerely
"the boys and girls"

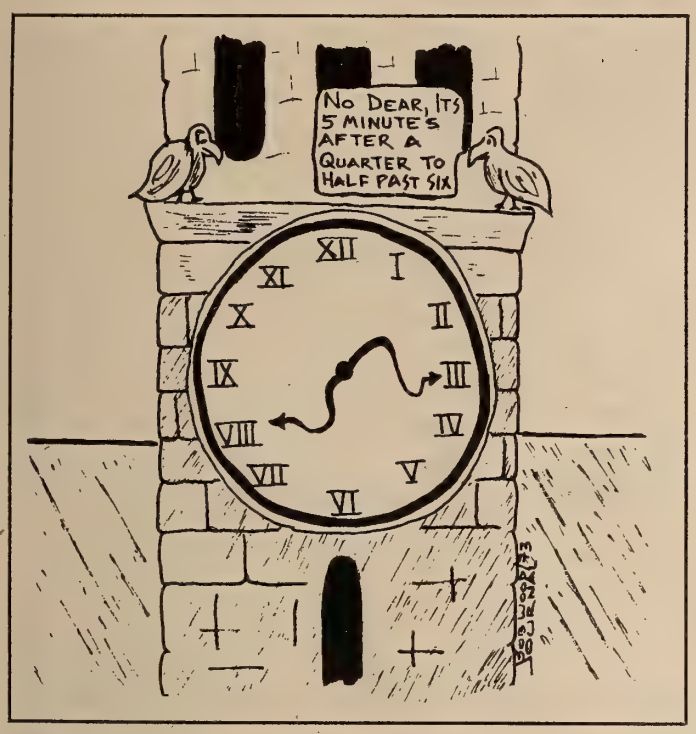
and more

Reply to "disappointed"

Dear Editor:

In reply to "a disappointed and thankfully graduating Artsmen", I should first state that I too attended the Arts formal on March 10th. However, my opinion of the evening differs from that of "disappointed".

"Auf Wiedersehen' was indeed advertised as a formal, but if "disappointed" had read the Journal the week prior to the formal he should have noticed an article which adequately explained the nature of the event. If he had wanted to attend a stuffy affair dominated by people formally attired in rented tuxedos I would agree that "Auf Wiedersehen" was definitely not the dance for him. However, for those who enjoyed the opportunity of getting dressed up and having an evening of fun, "Auf Wiedersehen" was the place to be on March 10th.



"Disappointed" complained that there were no formal or semi-formal decorations of any kind to be seen on the dance floor. What did he expect - paper streamers? The 401 Ballroom is not a high school gymnasium.

It is true that the dance floor was fairly crowded, however, the situation was far from being unbearable. Any other formals or semi-formals which I have attended have been at least as crowded as at the Arts formal. Besides, if it were true, as "disappointed" suggested that more people sat at their tables than those who danced there really should not have been any problem with the dance floor congestion. I should add that I will have to make an appointment to get my eyes checked this week since my eyesight seems to have failed me. Believe it or not, my supposedly twenty-twenty vision did not see the vast numbers of disgruntled couples sitting at their tables. Instead, my tricky eyesight lead me to believe that the vast majority of people were up dancing.

"Disappointed" did not even mention the buffet, probably because the food was good and therefore left nothing about which to complain. He also made no mention of the fact that the tables were tastefully decorated with vases of spring flowers. "Auf Wiedersehen" in the same category as the Spring Boogie? Hardly!

Obviously, a social event such as the Arts formal is not going to satisfy everyone. I enjoyed myself and various people with whom I have talked voiced the same opinion.

Yours Turly,
G.Westlake.

What time?

Dear Editor:

For those of us who don't wear watches, couldn't something be done about keeping the Queen's tower clock "on time?" It seems always to be anywhere from 10-30 minutes fast - and at night its not even lit up! There should be something we can depend on.

Respectfully,
Alan Davenport

Biggest farce at Arts Formal

Dear Editor:

In reference to Disgruntled's letter in the Journal March 16th concerning the Arts and Science formal of March 10th, It would seem to be that he was the biggest farce attending the formal.

First of all, it was raining early in the day but certainly not past 6 p.m. The only time I noticed a majority of the people sitting was between 8 and 9.30 when the buffet was being served; and a very good meal at that. The tables were set for approximately 4-6 couples and arranged with fresh cut flowers. Granted there were no decorations except for the flowers, but did he realize that the $6.00 ticket would not cover the meal he had?

I do feel that the members of the band could have been a bit more presentable. Apparently it was taken for granted that they would dress in appropriate attire. There was a variety of music played, certainly enough to please almost everyone. What did he expect to dance to 'Tchaikovsky's Swan Lake'?

I feel confident in saying that almost all who attended the formal enjoyed themselves.

Yours truly
Jack Alblas

"Disappointed" is a yahoo

Dear Editor:

To reply to the "disappointed and thankfully graduating Artsman" who described the Arts Formal two weeks ago as a "ripoff" etc. Firstly, this formal was by far the best attended, entertaining and inexpensive of any Arts formal in the past few years. The executive of Arts '76 especially Anne Macdonald and Pat Sinclair raised the Arts formal from the grave and deserve praise not the sour criticism they received in this letter.

Secondly, why the hell didn't Mr. disappointed Artsman get off his ass and help organize the dance rather than bitching post facto. He is typical of the many people around this place who think that the concerts, films, dances and other services from which they benefit are simply pulled out of a magician's hat in the back room of the AMS office. Were these stone throwers to think past the entrances of their caves, they might realize that for something like an Arts formal not to mention the other functions and services on campus, many hours of dog-work on the part of all too few students are required. The next time some yahoo like Mr. disappointed Artsman starts boiling his cauldron of bile, he should ask himself whether things might not have been more to his liking if he had helped out.

Yours very truly,
Ted Cape

Arts formal, great fun for most

Dear Editor,

This is in response to the letter from "A disappointed and thankfully graduating Artsmen" and any other people who are somewhat confused about "Auf Wiedersehen" held on March 10 in the ballroom of the 401 Inn.

"Auf Wiedersehen" was the combined Arts formal and Grad Ball sponsored by Artsci 74 with the support of ASUS. Both these events in the past have been traditionally "no tux" formals, and traditionally have suffered from poor attendance. It is for this reason that this year, Artsci 74 and ASUS decided to hold a joint formal and subsidize it heavily. By bringing the ticket price down to only $6.00 and advertising "no tux required" we hoped to encourage a lot more students to attend.

The anonymous writer of last Friday's letter to the editor complained that "no formal or semi-formal or any decorations of any kind were anywhere in the dance area." We felt that the room did not need much decorating and that streamers and such (which are very high school'ish) would clutter up the dance area. Instead, we thought it more appropriate to have fresh flowers on every table.

The writer complained that "blue jeans would have been more appropriate for dancing to the heavy rock music" which supposedly "contained no recognizable dance beat". It is too bad that he or she did not appreciate the music offered - I can only say that it is a matter of personal taste. We felt that Windmill played the type of music which appealed to more students, than did a formal-type orchestra. After all, how many students know ballroom dancing?

It is unfortunate that the "disappointed Artsmen" felt that Auf Wiedersehen was a "rip off". He or she failed to even mention the delicious hot and cold buffet (value $9.60) included in the $6.00 ticket.

I have not written this letter to open verbal warfare on the "disappointed and thankfully graduating Artsmen". Though I feel his or her claim of "false advertising" and statement that "there was nothing at Auf Wiedersehen that even suggested formal tones" were both unjust and unreasonable, I particularly feel that it is not fair for one student who did not enjoy him or herself, to condemn an event which many others did enjoy. I sincerely hope that this will not discourage others from giving their support to the Arts formal-Grad Ball in the future.

Janet Mills

Cow Moose Party, a women's group?

Dear Editor,

As Information Officer for Moose Parties Ltd., I would like to clear up a misunderstanding which has recently arisen. In a four page flyer which appeared on Wednesday and was entitled 'Golden Words' (the name having been borrowed from a reputable campus paper which recently ceased publication for the year), there appeared an article entitled 'Speaking of Women'. The article was credited as being written by Craig Miller. However, this flyer was published by the female wing of our organization, The Cow Moose Party, with which Mr. Miller has absolutely no connection. Mr Miller's position is as campaign director of the Bull Moose Party Ltd. The real author of the article is a woman known in lofty political circles as KG, but more formally as Ms. German. It is unfortunate that, due to a printer's error, the names of Ms. German and her helper Fluffo did not appear in the flyer, for they certainly worked hard in putting out this bit of publicity for the Cow Moose Party.

Thank you for your consideration in publishing this letter, which I hope clears up the misunderstanding.

Yours sincerely,
Otis Criblecoblis
Information Officer
Moose Parties Ltd.

Queen's Journal
Vol. 100, No. 48
Fri., Mar. 23, 1973
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ontario

Editor: Jennifer Grass
Business: Charles Schwier
Management: John Solman
Arts: Sandy Naiman
Features: Pat Devitt, Steven Winnett
Passepartout: Bob Wood
News: Susan de Stein
Events: Alison Dandie
Sports: Chris Boon, Nada Bogdanovic
National Desk: Bob Mutrie, Sue Wishart
Photography: Peter Boag

Published twice weekly on Tuesdays and Fridays by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc., Member, Canadian University Press. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society of the University. Offices are located in the Student's Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

unclassifieds

I WOULD LIKE TO RENT your bachelor or one bedroom apt. May 1 to Sept. 1. Maximum rent $70-month. Bob 544-3349.

TO: Jonatham Wigley, Scott Campbell, Ian Fraser: PLEASE return your band uniforms SOON to Bev Muir, Adelaide Hall.

APARTMENT TO SUBLET with option to RENT in the fall. Two-bedrooms, only 10 minutes walk from campus. If interested phone Ed or Chris at 544-0913.

CHUCK: Spring has sprung. Bonne chance avec tes examens. Liz.

LONELY APARTMENT NEEDS tenants for 73-74. 2-bedroom, ideal for three people. Phone Gayle 544-2202.

NAPANEE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE - home of the Napanee Green Belt. c-o W.D. Samuel Peckenpah; The tourist information was very helpful. Please keep my name on your mailing list and continue to send any further pamphlets on your "fair town". Yours, as ever ...

1972 240Z DATSUN, only 7000 miles - 7 months old, 5000 miles- 5 months left on warranty. Ziebarted, Michelin XAS radials. BEST OFFER. Will consider good used car (esp. Volkswagen) as part payment. 544-4388 (after 5 pm).

FOR IMMEDIATE SALE - 6 dogs residing at 926 Elrond. Great buy. House trained.

ALL FURNITURE GONE - now selling self. Call Craig Brown.

DI - done forget the cookies. Love Chas.

WELL FLUFFO - looks like things went OK. Can't let up now. Have a good trip.

APARTMENT FOR RENT: SUBLET for summer- option for next year. Three bedrooms. $175-month. Excellent location (½ block from Plaza Hotel) Available May 15. Phone 544-0347. Bathroom included.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY TRISH ! ! ! !

JOCK, FRED, AND STEVE are raging at home this Saturday night. All friends, relatives and lovers are most cordially invited to participate.

"LONG LIVE THE NAPANEE NEPTUNES!" M.D. "Be yourself - no one else can." B.W. "A giant leads a lonely life." Don't worry, M.D. you'll be a man before your mother.

KATH: A stitch in time saves nine!!!

WANTED: All back issues of Women in Love comix. Will pay any price. Call EC at 544-6347.

For TC, a reminder for a psychiatrist appointment at 1 today.

MEETING OF ACADEMIC liaisons Saturday at 11 am in the John Orr Room.

ALL LINES OF STEREO equipment. Top prices. Call 544-4850 for quotations.

Pat, Karen, Kathy, Liz, Jane, Deb, Bev, Audrey, and Joan: SET the date for a Sunday dinner at 154...Now that Sunday press nites are over maybe we can get Monsieur le chef Danno to whip up something, with a little help from roomie...

ADMIRAL SPUD WANTS YOU!!! Press gangs here been outlawed and the Royal Navy needs volunteers. See Niagara Falls by night, Rangoon by day, the British Empire at twilight and the Spanish Inquisition anytime, all through your own private porthole. Limited to all those under 18 and over 65 years of age. So don't delay! Do it today!

THE BOYS OF COMMERCE '74 would like to thank Bob Sedgewick for the great job he did as athletic stick in the past. A job well done and appreciated by all.

PROMETHEUS, POSEIDON, and Zeus are dead, but, alas, decadence must live on in their wake!

ARE THERE 3 to 4 girls still lookin for a place to stay? How about staying in one of the better student houses around, with 4 other people? It's only 5 minutes from campus (walking) and it has a couple of lovely spacious rooms left. Ralph (544-8939), Bruce (544-7740) or Gary (544-4140) will be glad to show you around and help you decide.

CAMP OUTLOOK still requires volunteer girls' staff for both July and or August. Applications are available in Outlook (SVB) office. Hurry !! Closing date for applications is March 28.

SUBLET - three bedrooms, comfortable, mostly furnished, close to campus on university. Option to rent next year. Rent negotiable. 542-9375.

BABYSITTER required in my home for April and May for 3-5 afternoons for 2 preschoolers in Princess and Portsmouth Avenue vicinity. Will pay $1 per hour. Call 548-7167.

TIRED OF STUDENT SLUMS? Need a place for the summer? We have just what you're looking for! Beautiful 3-bedroom, furnished, split-level apartment located close to campus and downtown. Occupants sadly must vacate for summer months due to other commitments. For further information and a chance to see our palace, phone 542-9426. It's a chance you can't pass up!!

WANTED: one or two people to share a furnished house for the summer; rent negotiable. Call 544-5997 or 544-9635.

WANTED: female models for erotic photographic work, 'blue movie' screening. Must supply own camera. Call Pete Flynn at 544-7177.

FOR RENT: during those glorious summer months, rent your very own AMS house. Because it is an AMS house it is super cheap. (for those of you without money) and for those of you with money we are not prejudiced. Any months there is still room. Come and get them while they're hot. Price negotiable. 4½ houses from a drunk at the Union! If interested call Brother (non-denominational) Dave 544-7437.

WANTED TO BUY: blackboard in the neighbourhood of 4 ft. by 6 ft. with or without stand or frame. If you know of one available kindly contact Pete at 544-9571 around 6:00 p.m. any evening.

FOR SALE: one pair of size 9 Adidas skates, excellent shape. If interested phone 544-1976. I need the money.

FURNISHED APARTMENT TO sublet for summer. Large panelled livingroom, newly painted bedroom, and kitchen. 15 minutes from campus, laundry facilities, parking. Phone 546-1948.

LOCAL QUEEN'S STUDENT WINS AWARD: On March 16th, 1973, at 8:15 p.m., history was made at the fine institution of Queen's University and we were there! Ms. Eleanor Estey won the noble award for the HONOUR OF WOMEN (at the expense of her legs and baby fingers) for carrying a case of 24, non-stop, from the King St. Breweries to Albert and Johnson. A victory party was held afterwards at the home of Gay in honour of Ms Estey. Celebrities attending were Rod (the one who wouldn't bet), Byron and Evanne (the assistant photographers), Holly and Gay (who provided moral support for Ms. Estey on her journey), Bruce (who lost his case of beer and started the whole bet), and Bryce and Bob (the other poor souls who still owe Ms. Estey a case of beer each). Congratulations, Ellie!

LOST: a wine coloured coat belt with large round buckle. If found please contact Pat, 544-7219 or 547-3178.

NEED A ROOM just for April? We have one. $50 a month. The room is also available for the summer. Call 544-9207.

SUBLET: May - Sept. '73, 2 room flat plus private washroom and kitchen (furnished if desired). Clergy behind Physical Education Complex, $100 a month. Call 544-8611 or 544-9571.

TO WHOM THIS MAY CONCERN: Oh no it won't! Sue.

LOST: brown suede purse in Theological Hall Rm. 106. Monday March 19 between 10:30 and 11:30 a.m. Contains necessary I.D., glasses and keys. If found, please call 544-8104.

LADY MACBETH can be socialized with red licorice.

SPENDING THE SUMMER IN KINGSTON? Need a place to stay next year? Wanted 2 or 3 individuals to share a large, furnished house, close to campus. Low rent. If interested - call Marilyn 544-5710.

BOB: I have sworn off the Kraft. Signed, Steve.

SAILING CLUB MEETING, Wed. Mar 21, 7:30, Stirling C. Important that all interested sailors be there.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN, AGAIN: Could we arrange a meeting?? Sue.

HELL KNOWS NO FURY like a woman ('s caucus) scorned.

SUBLET: May 1 to Sept. 1 new three bedroom apt. with stove, refrigerator and laundry facilities. Fully carpeted. Semi-or unfurnished. Rent negotiable. 217 Collingwood St. Phone Kent 544-9366.

ROOMMATE WANTED (upper year girl) starting Sept. or May for 2 bedroom apt. 15 minutes from campus. Call Nancy Ann 549-0392.

LITTLE SPENCE: Well your time has finally come. Tomorrow is the big day. Best wishes from Big Spence, Donald J., Pegance, Lou P., Coop, Rodo, the boys at 365, Anne, Jane, Sheila everyone at the Manor, Ernie, Bob and Bob, Hey You, A.H., Mace, guys at R.M.C. and X-cdts. And many others. Happy 20th. J.W.

BEDSITTING APARTMENT - sublet May 1 to Aug 1 or Sept. 1. Can also lease for 73-74. Furnished, separate kitchen, private bath. Close to campus and downtown. Clean and bright. 546-4442.

LARGE 2-BEDROOM APT. AVAILABLE FOR NEXT YEAR. Suitable for 3. Take over in May. 7 minutes from campus. 30 seconds from downtown. Call 544-5221 now.

BEAUTIFUL 2-BEDROOM APARTMENT. Sublet May-Sept. Furnished, sunny and clean. It even has a balcony. Perfect location on University and Johnson. Even the price is great at $100 a month. Don't let this bargain pass you by. Phone Cornelia at 546-1033 or Pat at 544-9172.

SQUASH RACKET WANTED. Phone Doug at 548-4671.

WILS, DI, MILROY, Judy, Liz Terry, Doreen, Toni, Craig, and Tilden Rent-a-Van. Moose Factory was fabulous. Thanks and congratulations to all and sundry. Next time I'll take the Waders and avoid the feathers. Pat.

ACE KIDNAPPERS AND ABDUCTORS! Fast, clean getaway; No fuss, No muss and specializing in blue contour sheet and beer at the moustache jobs. Apply to Wils, Di, Milroy, Judy, Liz, Terry, Doreen, Toni and Craig.

MODERN 2 BEDROOM APARTMENT to sublet May 15th - Sept. 1st. Earl St. at Albert. Furnished. Phone 544-7552.

WHAT are you doing here Steve?

OUT DAMN SPOT - it takes more than red licorice.

SUPER-BRILLIANT design still needed for Artsci '75 T-shirts (note Larry, Chris and others). Valuable prize offered. Send to Doug at 149 Morris Hall. Hurry! Only two weeks left in contest.

Drink for thought.

Molson Golden
A good smooth ale
Do you know what you're missing?

golden words

wishes to advise that Wednesday's

"golden words"

was not published by the staff.

It was a phoney

published by the Women's Caucus

really!?!

the women's caucus and its gentlemen's auxilliary

have no difficulty in believing

Kevin's disclaimer. As for his claim, they would appreciate any evidence of the origin of the issue

"One of the strangest little plays"

by Bram Shipley

William Butler Yeats' brief one-act drama The Words Upon the Window Pane (1934) is having a rare revival at the Queen's Guild Hall Theatre this week under the direction of Laurie Fyffe. It is probably one of the strangest little plays you are ever likely to see.

It begins, improbably enough, in the house of an Irish spiritualist where a collection of stage eccentrics that would make Alfred Hitchcock blush have gathered for a seance.On hand,in varying degrees of need and credibility, are Mrs. Mallet, a blunt matron keeping tabs on her deceased husband; Dr. Trench, the incisive, pink-cheeked head of the spiritualist society; Cornelius Patterson, a doggy squire who relished whippet hounds; Mr. Johnson, a rather high-strung defrocked curate given to impromptu fits of exorcism; an understandably sceptical young scholar fresh from Cambridge where he is writing his doctorate on the celibacy of Jonathan Swift; and the inevitably dewy ingenue, Miss MacKenna, who is far too well-bred to betray any untoward astonishment at the company (either living or dead) in which she finds herself.

Just as one is beginning to wonder what Yeats was up to in this whole silly business, the spiritualist Miss Henderson enters and, as if anticipating our criticism, remarks that the spirits of the dead sometimes speak in incongruous contexts, like characters in a cheap play. The rest of the action is an ironic and convincing realization of that idea, for before the seance is over, this motley and trivial crew of characters is visited by no lesser a spirit than Jonathan Swift who manifests himself with a passion so intense as to make the flesh crawl. And when this happens, it dawns on us that Yeats' deliberately sleazy context is the theatrical analogue to Swift's own ludicrous and improbable body in which -- to paraphrase Yeats -- the fierce indignation of his spirit lacerates still.

The often discordant interplay between spirit and matter is one of the play's subjects, then, realized in a form that recalls in miniature Pirandello's Six Characters in Search of an Author. This theatrical conceit places enormous demands on the actress impersonating Yeats' spiritualist, for she must not only establish the integrity of her own character if the essential changes of mood and tone in the play are to work, but she must also convince us of her successive possessions. This Kathy Weeks manages with great skill and clarity. To give you some idea of the complexity of Miss Weekes' task, in one simultaneous moment she is the actress playing the spiritualist, speaking as Swift, quoting Dryden. Or, in another mesmerizing set of reflections, Miss weekes gives us Swift confronting in turn the two loves of his life, first the sensual Vanessa, and then the brilliant Stella. Miss Weekes speaks all three roles, of course, and each is unmistakably individualized and maintained. All in all, it's a tour de force bit of acting in which the actress's performance and the theme of spiritual possession suitably reflect and demonstrate one another.

For all of its occasional melodrama and spook-show theatrics, the play finally becomes like the pane of glass of its title: at times a brittle surface marked with words reflecting the flat images of those who attempt to read its message; at times a transparent mirror through which we glimpse beyond the words into the darkness of the past. Either way, the words themselves--written to Swift by Stella--remain enigmatic gestures until the action of the play recovers their spirit:

You taught how I might youth prolong
By knowing what is right and wrong;
How from my heart to bring Supplies of lustre to my fading eyes.

Whether or not you are a fan of Yeats, a devotee of Swift, or a dabbler in the occult, I think you'll find the weird theatricality of The Words Upon the Window Pane an interesting experience.

SHARE

IS COMING

AND NOW A WORD FROM OUR CREATOR:

Have fun, but don't get a lastfridays

Friday, March 23

8:00 pm - The Kingston Waffle presents the first of three public lectures. The Capitalist State in Canada. John Hutcheson, York University, International Centre. Lower Lounge. (Students' Union.)

8:00 pm - The GSS Film Club presents Cul-De-Sac. Roman Polanski. Ellis Hall.

8:00 pm - 12:00 - Bitter Grounds presents Robert David, RCA recording artist. Admission $1.00 per person, $1.75 a couple. Last weekend.

8:30 pm - The Division of Concerts and the AMS Concert Committee presents the McGill Chamber Orchestra conducted by Alexander Brott. Grant Hall. Tickets are $1.00 with concert card and $2.50 general admission. Tickets available from Division of Concerts Box Office in Agnes Etherington and in the John Orr Room in the Students' Union, and the door.

8:30 pm - Queen's Drama Guild presents "Words on the Window Pane" by Yeats. Guild Hall Theatre.

Saturday, March 24

8:00 - 1:00 am - SHARE Pub Night. Dancing. McArthur College Pub.

8:00 pm - 12:00 - Bitter Grounds presents Robert David, RCA recording artist. Admission $1.00 per person, $1.75 a couple. Last Weekend.

8:30 pm - Queen's Drama Guild presents "Words on the Window Pane" by Yeats. Guild Hall Theatre.

Sunday, March 25

10:30 am - Dunning Auditorium Folk Mass. Followed by coffee and donuts at Newman House.

11:00 am - University Service. Memorial Chapel.

1:00 pm - Eucharistic Celebration. Queen's Theological Hall. Faculty Lounge. 2nd floor.

6:30 pm - Hillel and Newman House Skating Party. Meet at Jock Harty Arena. Later coffee house at Newman House, 164 University.

7:00 pm - Ukranian Club. Guest Speaker - Andrew Semotiuk, B.A., LLB. President Ukranian Canadian Universities. Topic - "Multiculturalism for Canada?" Students' Union. International Centre Upstairs.

7:30 pm - Folk Mass in Senior Common Room. McArthur Hall.

8:30 pm - Queen's Drama Guild presents "Words on the Window Pane" by Yeats. Guild Hall Theatre.

Monday, March 26

8:00 pm - Department of History presents Commonwealth Studies Lecture. The Frozen Continent? Constitutional Amendment in Australia. Speaker Dr. John A. La Nauze, Professor and Head of the Department of History in the Research School of the Social, Sciences, Australian National University, Canberra. John Watson, Room 517.

Tuesday, March 27

7:30 pm - The Drama Department presents Chronicles 17. "Second Degree." Ian Elliot. Studio Theatre. Free tickets available from the Drama Department. Running until March 30.

Wednesday, March 28

7:30 pm - The Drama Department presents Chronicles 17 - "Second Degree". Ian Elliott. Studio Theatre. Free tickets available from the Drama Department.

8:00 pm - Department of French presents a film "L'Etranger." (Luchino Viscónti) based on the novel by Albert Camus. Version francaise. Admission $1.00. Ellis Hall.

8:00 pm - Music Dept. presents a harpsichord recital by Joyce Redekop-Fink. Admission free.

Thursday, March 29

5:30 pm - Christian Science Organization at Queen's holds meetings every Thursday. Room 210, Kingston Hall. Open to all.

5:45 - Ban Righ Fireside. Kirk Elliott-lute and Jean Callum vocal. Elizabethan music; coffee and desert. Ban Righ Common Room.

7:30 pm - Medical Sciences Lecture Series. Digitalis "Clinical Implications of Recent Advances Arising from the Measurement of Blood Levels," by Dr. Thomas W. Smith. Etherington Hall Auditorium.

8:00 pm - The Kingston Waffle presents the second of three public lectures. Quebec: Stanley Ryerson, Universite de Quebec. International Centre, Lower Lounge. Students' Union.

Physical Education Centre Information. Jock Harty Arena Ice Removal. The ice will be removed for the season from the Jock Harty Arena at 6:30 pm on Wednesday, March 28.

Off Campus

Theatres

Capitol - The Snowball Express
Hyland - Avanti
Odeon - The Mechanic

Pubs

Commodore - The Hunters
401 Inn - The Mainstream
Manor - The Honey West Show
Seaway - The Paul Christopher Show

Robert David at Bitter Grounds

This weekend Bitter Grounds ends the term on a soft and easy note with folk-rock artist Robert David. Robert has his own album out on RCA, where he demonstrates his fine talents as a songwriter and musician. An easy blend of words and music is characteristic of his style. With his piano and guitar work he creates strong and varied rhythms. He has a wide vocal range and marvelous control over his voice, which is deceptively gentle but at the same time powerful. Never strained, his voice seems to float over the melody, falling and rising with ease. Robert David involves the audience with his music and carries them through his moods.

For a relaxing evening and some beautiful music come up to the Grounds Friday or Saturday night between 8 and 12 pm. Admission is $1.00 per person and $1.75 a couple.

Chronicles 17

Second Degree

SECOND DEGREE has a long history. Early in the century, it was Hungarian. Percival Wilde translated it into English in the 1920s. That version was substantially rewritten by Ian Elliot in 1954. Now we have added some touches to bring it up to date and give it a little Canadian content.

The comic idea of SECOND DEGREE is simple. An irritable man who has been a total failure in life returns to his university and demands his tuition fees back since he claims he didn't get a decent education. Sensing how catastrophic this would be if the idea got around, the administration and faculty unite to thwart it. How they do this provides the opportunity for some low-brow satire and high class farce.

SECOND DEGREE, a show that dares to laugh boorishly at the university system, is precisely the medicine to make these tense days of term papers and examination go down a bit more smoothly. It will play in room 102 (Studio) in the Old Arts Building from Tuesday Mar 27 to Friday Mar 29, at 7:30 pm. Tickets free in Drama Department.

SHARE is coming

St. James Anglican Church

9.00 a.m. — HOLY COMMUNION
11.00 a.m. — MORNING PRAYER Series by the Rector on "Questions Pilate Asked" — 3 The Question of Contempt.
7.30 p.m. — Worship Service in Sydenham St. United Church. Community Lenten Program.
Tuesday
10.00 a.m. — HOLY COMMUNION
Wednesday
7.45 a.m. — HOLY COMMUNION & Breakfast

EDUCATION IS MORE THAN JUST ATTENDING CLASSES!

Education is the entire university experience - you can enhance this experience. How? Bring your good ideas to the Education Commission meeting, Sunday, March 25, 1:30 p.m. McLaughlin Room, S.M.U.

WHAT GOES ON SHOULD CONCERN YOU

AMS Education Commission

McArthur Student Society

ATTENTION: all students expecting to attend McArthur college next year

Those interested in working on next year's orientation program must apply to:

M.S.S. Office
McArthur Hall

Give name, address, and qualifications.

3 persons will be chosen

G.S.S. FILM CLUB

presents its final film of the season

Roman Polanski's

CUL—DE—SAC

- "best film" - 1966 Berlin International Film Festival
- "critics award" - 1966 Venice Film Festival
- "tantalizing and hypnotic" - Judith Christ, NY. World Journal Tribune
- "a merry-go-round of emotional violence!" - Wm. Wolf, Cue Magazine tonight, 8 p.m. ellis auditorium

McGill Chamber Orchestra presents Denis Brott

"One of the star virtuosos of today"

When the McGill Chamber Orchestra performs in Grant Hall this Friday evening, many people will have their first opportunity to hear the young Canadian cellist, Denis Brott, son of the orchestra's conductor, Alexander Brott. The twenty-year old Montreal-born musician will be featured in a performance of the Haydn Cello Concerto in D Major.

His reviews have been astounding. One Los Angeles critic called him "one of the star virtuosos of today".

Although currently in the master class of Gregor Piatigorsky in Los Angeles, Denis Brott is coming to Kingston specifically to perform in this concert.

Denis Brott has in his repertoire all the standard cello concerti and has appeared with over 20 symphony orchestras in North America including Washington, Toronto, Montreal and Vancouver. In England, he was guest artist with the Little Symphony of London.

In recital, he has toured Eastern United States universities and given his New York debut.

Twenty year-old Montreal-born cellist featured in Haydn concert in D Major, Friday night at 8:30 in Grant Hall.

But while fulfilling a busy concert schedule, he is intent to remain on a course of diligent contemplation in order to find the delicate balance between active participation and intensive musical research.

Mr. Brott's past teachers include Janos Starker, Leonard Rose, and Zara Nelsova. The Canada Council sponsored four years of his study and various grants and scholarships provided additional aid.

In competition, he won the coveted 12th annual Marriweather Post Contest, the Jeunesses Musicales Competition, the Canadian Centennial Award and many others.

Tickets for this concert on Friday 23 March are $1 for students with an AMS Concert card, and $2.50 general admission. They can be purchased at the John Orr room, Students Union, Division of Concerts Box Office - 547-6194, or at the door.

Pre-Registration for 1973-74
Department of Psychology

All students wishing to take psychology courses during the 1973-74 academic year MUST pre-register for them NOW.

March 29 & 30 - Pre-registration materials may be picked up in the foyer of Humphrey Hall

April 5 & 6 - Pre-registration forms must be returned to the Psychology general office in Humphrey Hall

•All students must pre-register for Psychology courses even if they have already pre-registered in some other department or Faculty or even if they are only taking a single course

Northern Ireland

World: Britain claims to have answer

LONDON — The British government has unveiled a white paper designed to provide an end for the three and a half years of sectarian and nationalist strife which has been sweeping Northern Ireland.

The paper guarantees full civil rights for the Roman Catholic minority with a new 80-member legislature elected on a proportional representative basis to replace the old Protestant dominated parliament suspended last spring when Britain imposed direct rule.

Northern Ireland's link with Britain is to be maintained as long as a majority of the population agrees. Ultimate power over the Ulster legislature is still to remain in British hands.

BRUSSELS — The European Economic Community is expected to take a tough line in the initial stages of bargaining with Canada over questions of tariff compensations for trade loss due to the enlargement of the economic bloc.

It has been estimated that the total 1973 loss to Canadian business as a result of the January 1 entry of Britain into the ECM would be approximately valued at $300 million. This loss represents what would have been gained by continuation of the previous Commonwealth preferential treatment.

The ECM representatives will be arguing that the bloc is giving more concessions in the areas of lower tarriffs on industrial products as a part of the British entry but it is expected Canada will be arguing that these aren't sufficient. The talks are to go on for the next four months.

LONDON — The United States dollar's value is declining once again in major world markets under the new agreement reached last weekend to float most of the major world currencies.

BERLIN — A Siberian salamander ended its hundred year hibernation last week when rudely disturbed from its permafrost resting place in the Kolyma tundra where gold miners dug it out of the ice.

The frozen reptile reawoke to life once the ice had melted away. It had been burried 36 feet underground. Salamanders have a life expectancy of 10 to 15 years.

backpage

Sharp deliberates

Canada: The ICCS - to stay or not?

OTTAWA — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp will decide "very quickly" whether or not Canada will continue to supervise the Vietnam ceasefire. He made the announcement upon his return from a six-day fact-finding tour of North and South Vietnam and Laos. Sharp said that from his first-hand observations it is clear the International Commission of Control and Supervision is not working well.

Sharp claimed that although "a whole series of governments" have asked Canada to remain a member of the ICCS, he has not yet decided what action he will recommend to the cabinet.

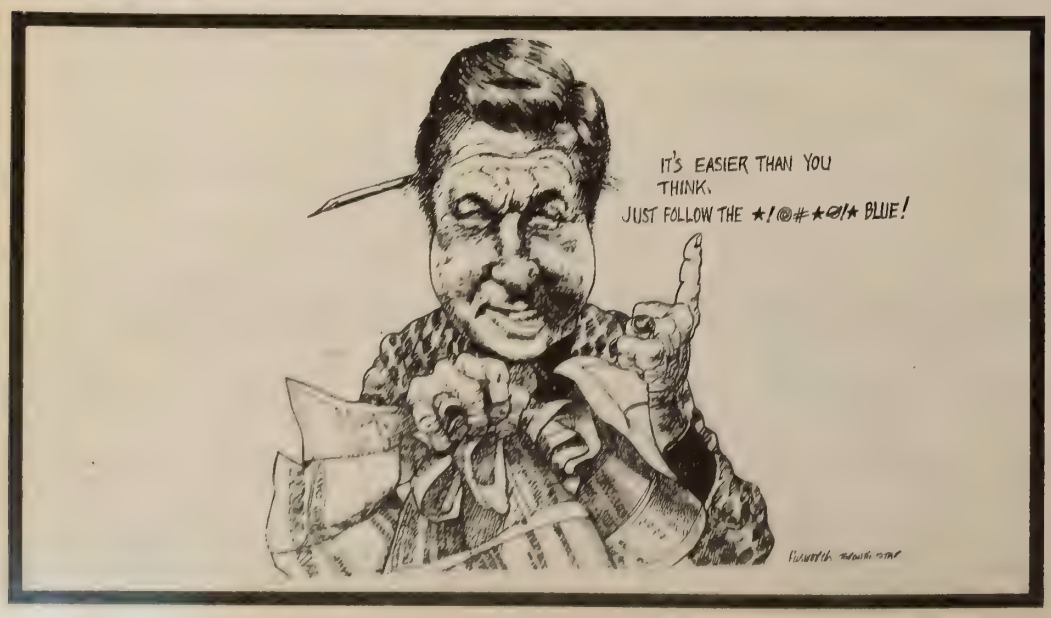
OTTAWA — Canada's system of government needs to be reorganized, claims a brief presented to Prime Minister Trudeau by the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities. The brief argues that the present distribution of powers between the federal, provincial and municipal levels of governments is "inappropriate" and says municipalities need more freedom in order to function most efficiently and serve the best interests of society.

The brief calls for continued consultation between the three levels of government to lessen waste and conflict, and a better system of financing municipalities.

KINGSTON — Although there has been much concern recently about high rates of crime in Kingston, police figures show that crime in Kingston actually declined in the first two months of this year. The number of crimes dropped and the number of cases solved increased sharply over 1972. Neither the deputy chief nor the chairman of the police commission could explain the change, but both were glad to see it.

TORONTO — A national railway strike could be the eventual result of a breakdown in negotiations between the nonoperating railway unions and Canada's two major railways. First of all, however, the dispute must move to conciliation. The two sides are apparently far apart on the issues of wages and job security, although an agreement on improvments to the pension plan has been reached. Observers give conciliation little chance of resolving the dispute.

KINGSTON — The price consumers will have to pay for milk will probably rise again on April 1. The increase, an expected 2 cents per quart, will be the second in three months. It is attributed to the decision of the Ontario Milk Marketing Board to riase the farm price of raw milk by 50 cents a hundredweight effective April 1. Kingston dairies claim they will not be able to absorb the price increase, so it will be passed on to the consumer.



LONDON, ONT. — Environment Minister James Auld has announced new noise control regulations which the Ontario government will introduce this year. The regulation will limit noise created by cars, factories, and rural, urban and commercial districts.

"Our objective is to reduce the irritating and annoying sounds which invade our daily lives in many ways, to acceptable and reasonable levels," Auld said.

Several methods will be used to spot noise polluters. For example, roadside sound traps, similar to the speed traps now in use, will be used to catch noisy vehicles.

KINGSTON — Kingston landlords are facing the highest apartment vacancy rate in years, so apartment leasing is a "renters' market" this year. One landlord blamed the high vacancy rate, which has kept some apartments empty for as long as four months, on the creation in the Kingston area of hundreds of new housing units, such as Elrond, and on the desire of many people to own their own homes.

The oversupply of apartments will not result in lower rents, but some landlords are encouraging prospective tenants with incentives such as one or two months' free rent.

Users Committee faces the music

by Bob Mutrie

The University Centre Users' Committee came out in full support of not including a comprehensive bookstore in the new university centre during a poorly advertised - thus a poorly attended open meeting on Monday to discuss their recently released report.

The Committee effectively endorsed Alternate Scheme I for the new centre which would involve complete renovation of the present Student's Union Building and provide for a further 60,000 square foot addition northward to Clergy Street. This Scheme specifically precludes a comprehensive 20,000 square foot bookstore as found in Alternate Schemes II and III where a totally new building would be erected on the north-east corner of University Street.

Committee Chairman Dan Norman of the Mathematics Department asserted that even if the cost of inclusion of a large bookstore in the new centre proved not to be as prohibitive as it now looks, he would still endorse Scheme I as a more attractive proposal, adding that it is "still a better building." He added that in the unlikely event of a decision advocating inclusion by the Interim Bookstore Committee, he would still favour Scheme I.

Engineering Society President John A. MacDonald recently noted that it could cost the bookstore an additonal $80,000 a year in operating costs to locate in the univesity centre.

However, Norman strongly supported the inclusion of 2,000 square foot "browsing" bookstore which would be set up to sell non-course related texts if it is organized somewhat like Pickwicks on Montreal Street.

It was suggested by AMS Vice-President Bruce Trotter that such an operation could be profitably combined with the sundries store mentioned for inclusion in the Committee report.

The Users' Committee, successor of both a steering and a planning committee, was set up in November 1971 to determine what facilities should be included in a new university centre and report back to the Vice Principal (Academic) after conferring with interested members of the university community. The report published two weeks ago, including three proposals for the centre, is the result of their two and a half years of research.

The general concensus of the meeting held last Monday was that the report's endorsement of Scheme I was, in principal, acceptable, but in particular, it was agreed that more attention might be given to specifics before becoming committed.

Those present showed concern for where the functions presently housed in the Union would go during the proposed renovation. The Committee suggested that this would be left to a later body to decide.

In addition the question of the displacement of 165 University St., the Student Affairs Centre, by the new centre was also broached.

Jim Whitley, Director of the Centre has requested that the function not be included in the centre because of the cozier atmosphere of the house. However, under Scheme I, it would have to move. The Committee was unable to give any indication of a possible resolution of the problem other than that it was being looked into.

A major bone of contention was the inclusion of floor plans in the report of the Users' Committee which many felt could be more deeply studied. However, Norman assured the meeting that the plans merely represented an exercise in illustrating the fact that a building could be designed to include all the necessary facilities. He added that the location of specific uses in the new centre is still very much subject to revision and changes.

C. E. S. (Ned) Franks of the Department of Political Studies took exception to the committee's recommendation that a bank be included in the new centre, insisting that such a facility would be of more value nearer to Technical Supplies if the latter is to remain at its present location. He argued that both buildings would complement each other, adding to both their drawing power and allowing more flexibility in future revision of space in the new centre.

Committee member Dean D.A. Soberman of the Law School, however, pointed out that "banks are fussy people" and that they require a "ground floor location

Continued on Page 10

AOSC flights threatened

by Jennifer Grass

Overseas charter flights handled by the Association of Ontario Student Councils are being threatened by government regulations which were announced on January 8.

Students travelling to and from Europe this summer may be in for some difficulties because the government is only allowing affinity charters to run until June 30.

After that date only flights booked 60 days in advance will be legal and the price must be on a par with the lowest Canadian airline which is approximately $209. The new regulations also stipulate that charters must depart and return at specified times.

AOSC is an affinity group offering flights to all university and college students who as members of post secondary institutions are automatically members of its organization. Flights cost between $155 and $175 at least $34 cheaper than the lowest Canadian airline. Students on AOSC flights can decide from a series of dates of one way charters which combination is the most convenient. They are not confined to set dates contrary to the new regulations.

Kiloran German, AMS External Affairs Commissioner who is presently in Ottawa lobbying for special consideration for AOSC told the Journal that Rodney Hurd, Executive Director of AOSC has indicated that "we'll fly students out of Seattle and Niagara Falls, New York before jacking up the price."

AOSC established their program for this summer in the fall of 1972.

Upon the advice of a "minor official" of the Air Transport Committee, AOSC did not apply for approval of the program until after the new regulations were announced according to German.

It was expected that advanced booking charters would be announced but in other countries affinity group charters have been permitted to exist along side ABC flights until the end of the summer.

The new regulations are intended to prevent misuse of the affinity thing and protect Canadian airlines.

German and John Helliwell, Vice President of the University of Toronto Students Council are hoping to get AOSC exempted from the new regulations until after their summer program ends in early October.

The ATC was responsible for suggesting the new regulations and German indicated that they were not very likely to give AOSC an exemption.

However, concerted efforts are being made to bring the issue to the attention of the cabinet and German was hopeful that students would "be able to get out and come back on AOSC flights somehow this summer."

Queen's Journal

Volume One Hundred, No. 49

Thursday, March 29, 1973

CHARLES LLOYD

A spring Jazz Concert

Sunday, April 1, 8:30 p.m. McArthur Aud.

Tickets: $1.50 with concert card; $2.50 general

Available in John Orr Room 10 am to 4 pm daily, at HOUSE of SOUNDS and at door.

Memorial to Davis?

by John Davidson

Admittedly Bill Davis, Premier of Ontario, has rubbed some students the wrong way. He raised fees for all, cancelled stipends for Rehabbers, changed OSAP in many weird and not so wonderful ways, and refused to announce (or develop) projections of probable changes in the Government's policies toward post-secondary education. He also put the wraps on the Queen's Health Sciences Complex whose budget is now being eaten away by inflation. However, realizing that if you can't beat him (through fee strikes, letters to M.L.A.'s etc.) you might as well join him, and also recognizing that in Canadian politics a good smile is worth more than a good policy, a group of progressive Queen's students has proposed that some measure be taken to honour the man's many contributions to post secondary education in Ontario. After all because of the Premier's efforts, for the first time in years, all the university student government's have been united in a province-wide federation, the "intimacy" of many teaching and office facilities has been maintained by a building freeze perpetuating the cramped but cozy atmosphere in some departments, and many students have been able to collect an extra month's interest on their second fee installment.

This leads to the search for a fitting thank-you gesture. Being short of funds those proposing this tribute have had to rule out the establishment of a lectureship, a scholarship, or a research fellowship. As building funds have been cut off, the possibilities of erecting an architectural memorial are also limited. Thus it has been suggested that the only likely project is to arrange that a campus building already nearing completion but as yet unnamed be designated in honour of the Premier. And what building could be more appropriate than the underground parking garage soon to be completed beneath lower campus playing field. Think of it: "The William G. Davis Subterranean Parking Lot", or more simply "Davis Hall", or more accurately, "Davis Hole!"

To secure support for this project, those responsible will be circulating a petition in the residence meal lines, in Douglas Library and in the Union, Thursday and Friday of this week.

- solman

The man who has raised our fees, changed the OSAP program and just generally been the object of a great deal of student anger may receive his just reward. A group of students has suggested that the lower campus parking lot be called 'The William Davis Subterranean Parking Lot" or more accurately "Davis Hole."

Orientation Week

by Pat Wanless

The Artsci Orientation '77 Committee, has already formulated many of its plans for this coming September. The committee consists of Eleanor Crowder, Sue Harper, Kathy Turner, Brent Seymour, Bill Fallis, and Sue Meech.

According to Eleanor Crowder, Committee chairman, Orientation '77 will be run with 4 gaels and 20 frosh per group, providing a better Gael to Frosh ratio and giving the new students better chances to make friends. It is also hoped there will be more staff participation in some of the events.

The weekend will begin with signing in on Sunday at Jeffery, and group meetings and dinners.

The Monday road rally, which will acquaint students with the campus and Elrond, will be followed by the new Academic Bazaar in Grant Hall, where profs and students from each department will be available to give all new students an idea of what is offered in the faculty of Arts and Science. The evening will be used for a Staff-Student party, followed by inter-faculty parties.

Tuesday morning is scheduled for course counselling; the afternoon will be free time. The evening will be an ACE activity, sponsored by the Engineers. ACE is a trifaculty committee, consisting of members from Arts, Commerce and Engineering, set up to coordinate events for the week. Each faculty will be responsible for one event. Tuesday's activity will be a Tequila Party and films of concerts such as Woodstock.

Wednesday also will start with course councelling, followed by a meeting over lunch with AMS reps. This will be Charity Day, with Shinerama and slaves, and possibly AMS sponsored mini-lectures on World Problems and on the AMS. The second of the ACE events, this one sponsored by Arts, is the WRC-IRC Carnival. This is hoped to be along the lines of Wanderlust, using movie themes for the various common rooms.

A free morning on Thursday, and more meetings with AMS reps leads up to Registration and all Kingston Day. This event will combine the circus ideas of other years, with tours by hay-wagon of the city, a "Hyde Park" speakers' corner, and a variety of Old-World contests (such as pie eating). Tentatively set for the afternoon and evening is "Under Attack". Thursday, the Cultural Night, with feature speakers on magic and other topics related to the Supernatural theme. Films and folksinging will also be presented at night.

Friday is to begin with the remainder of the groups registering. A massive picnic by the lake with a water-skiing show and games is planned for the afternoon, which is also the time set aside for the engineering grease pole. "Spy versus Spy" is the theme for Sobriety this year. There will be two shows, in the evening centering on conflicts in addition to Spy vs. Spy such as commerce vs. engineering, freshette vs. BMOC, (freshmen vs . BWOC) and involving as many Gael groups as possible. The shows will be followed by a street dance and all night movies.

Saturday will wind up the week with a Frosh Parade to West Campus and a Queen's vs. Carleton football game. The last big event will be a commerce-sponsored ACE dance, to be held jointly in Grant and Leonard, with folksinging in the Polson Room, and possibly another Street Dance.

Throughout the week, Adelaide and Ban Righ common rooms will host a coffee house art workshop, while the Polson Room will serve as an information center for all activities. As usual, there is one early morning rise in the plans.

AMS keeps tabs on Centre

by Bob Mutrie

Scheme I of the University Centre Users' Committee report has received qualified support from a special committee of the AMS mandated by Outer Council to study the document.

The Committee was established as a result of a motion brought before Outer Council on March 21 suggesting that further consideration was needed in certain partially neglected areas of the report.

One particularly disquieting problem facing the Committee was the question of what constitutes a question dealt with vaguely in the report. The committee, while recognizing that flexibility in planning is still necessary at this early stage, felt that the report needed to be more specific in this area.

They focused their attention on whether the subcentres were to be "lounges with a coffee machine" or cultural centres.

The Committee recognized the need for orientation of the Subcentres towards the cultural aspects of the area, for instance drama in Theology Hall. They further recommended that the subcentre must serve a supplementary function to the main centre and that detraction of one from the other must be avoided at all costs.

Clearer definition of the use of Wallace Hall was strongly urged. The hall will be maintained intact in the new centre with the addition of a second floor balcony. It is tentatively designated as alumni office area, but the committee suggested that, given the nature of the room, it could be far more valuable as a meeting room or lounge.

There was also considerable concern expressed for sound levels in the new centre where the concept of "openness" was expressed as being desirable for the traffic generating operations, especially the Pub, where provision is made for live entertainment. In their report, the Users' Committee had the quiet Pub located directly opposite the main facility. The AMS Committee recommended that more consideration be given to noise transmission in the placement of the various facilities.

Another recommendation of the Committee concerning considerations for actual allocation of space called for the placing of the AMS reception office in a high traffic area to ensure easy accessibility. This was followed with recognition that the offices of the commissioners could be placed in an area somewhat less popular.

Also demanded was a clear statement in the near future of what is to happen to 165 University Street, the Student Affairs Centre, displaced by the addition to the new centre under Scheme I.

The inclusion of a barber shop-hairstylist was also questioned in light of the actual use such a function would get and the provision of similar functions in the community nearby. It was recommended that any commercial faculties to be included in the centre should not be in direct competition with Kingston business. It was felt that the proposed laundromat was a case in point of a necessary function not adequately provided in the community and perhaps even a means of attracting Kingston residents to the centre.

AMS Vice-President Bruce Trotter, Chairman of the Committee suggested that the Users' Committee needed to come to grips with more imaginative ways of introducing the community into the centre. He suggested that the provision of meeting rooms could be thought of as an attraction for community organizations to participate in the centre.

"Taking The Masses To The Arts"

by Harold Persaud

Infiltration of student government at Queen's by an underground organization has recently come to our attention. The AMS Outer Council recently ratified the appointment of Bruce Chown, a member of the Guerrilla Movement for the Arts, as chairman of the Cultural Committee under the Campus Activities Commission. The Movement was formed as a direct consequence of the cultural scene at Queen's. As reported by this paper, this group of dissident activists on campus was formed to protest the financial policies with regard to classical concerts. Their first successful coup was the AMS Concert Committee's sponsorship of the concert by the McGill Chamber Orchestra last weekend.

Further investigation has revealed the existence of a complex plot to infiltrate the hierarchies of the AMS and the ASUS bureaucracies. The AMS representatives on the Richardson Trust Fund Advisory Committee, one of the organisers for the Arts Festival, and applicants for ASUS rep on the Concert Committee and the chairmanship of the Other Events Committee of the ASUS are all members of the Provisional Steering Committee of the GMA. When asked to comment, Chown said, "It is much easier to worm one's way into the AMS than into the ASUS". In reply to the question how widespread was the plot, the GMA spokesman refused to comment beyond the statement that it involves elected officials and members of the media.

The GMA now that the infiltration is partially completed, has plans in hand for the setting up of a cultural propaganda machine in the liberated areas. They are interested in the education aspect of cultural exposure, as a necessary requirement for the complete liberation from the technological society. Chown envisages the Cultural Committee as a co-ordinating body to collocate information pertaining to the arts at Queen's and its environs and to make it available to people. Also, the Committee would act as a catalytic force to initiate cultural events that are lacking in the community, eg. professional theatre companies, professional dance, noon hour music recitals. The GMA's aspirations are "not to take the arts to the mass but the masses to the arts."

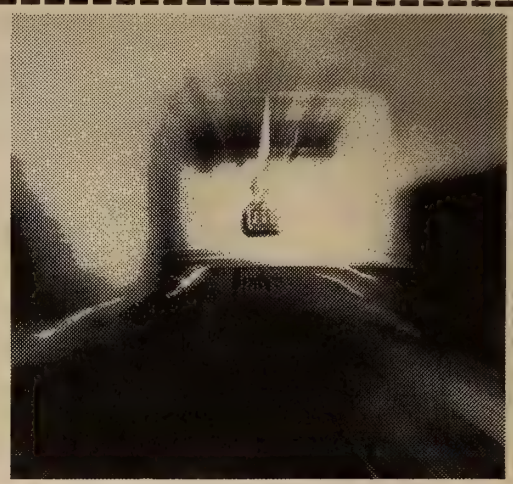
Rip off Europe.

STUDENT-RAILPASS

The way to see Europe without feeling like a tourist.

Student-Railpass is valid in Austria, Belgium, Denmark, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Luxembourg, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland.

Eurailpass, Box 2168, Toronto 1, Ontario



Please send me your free Student-Railpass folder order form. ☐
Or your free Eurailpass folder with railroad map. ☐

Name_____

Street_____

City_____

Zone_____ Prov._____

So you plan to spend the Summer in Europe this year. Great. Two things are mandatory. A ticket to Europe. And a Student-Railpass. The first gets you over there, the second gives you unlimited Second Class rail travel for two months for a modest $150 in Austria, Belgium, Denmark, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Luxembourg, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, and Switzerland! All you need to qualify is to be a full-time student up to 25 years of age, registered at a North American school, college or university.

And the trains of Europe are a sensational way to travel. Over 100,000 miles of track links cities, towns and ports all over Europe. The trains are fast (some over 100 mph), frequent, modern, clean, convenient and very comfortable. They have to be. So you'll meet us on our trains. It really is the way to get to know Europeans in Europe.

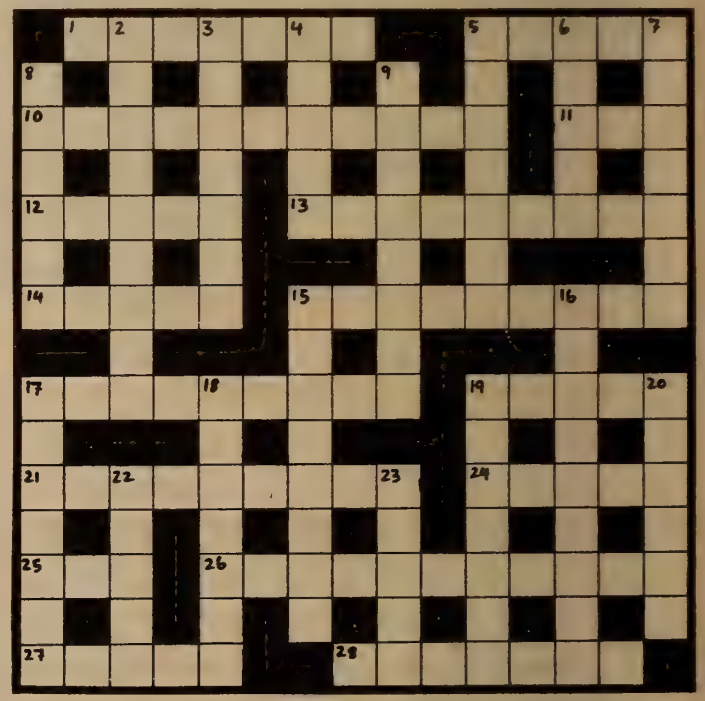
But there's one catch. You must buy your Student-Railpass in North America before you go. They're not on sale in Europe because they are meant strictly for visitors to Europe—hence the incredibly low price. Of course if you're loaded you can buy a regular Eurailpass meant for visitors of all ages. It gives you First Class travel if that's what you want.

Either way if you're going to zip off to Europe, see a Travel Agent before you go, and in the meantime, rip off the coupon. It can't hurt and it'll get you a better time in Europe than you ever thought possible.

Prices quoted in U. S. dollars.

QUE-4

Ripping-off Europe?



Student Railpass available from AOSC.

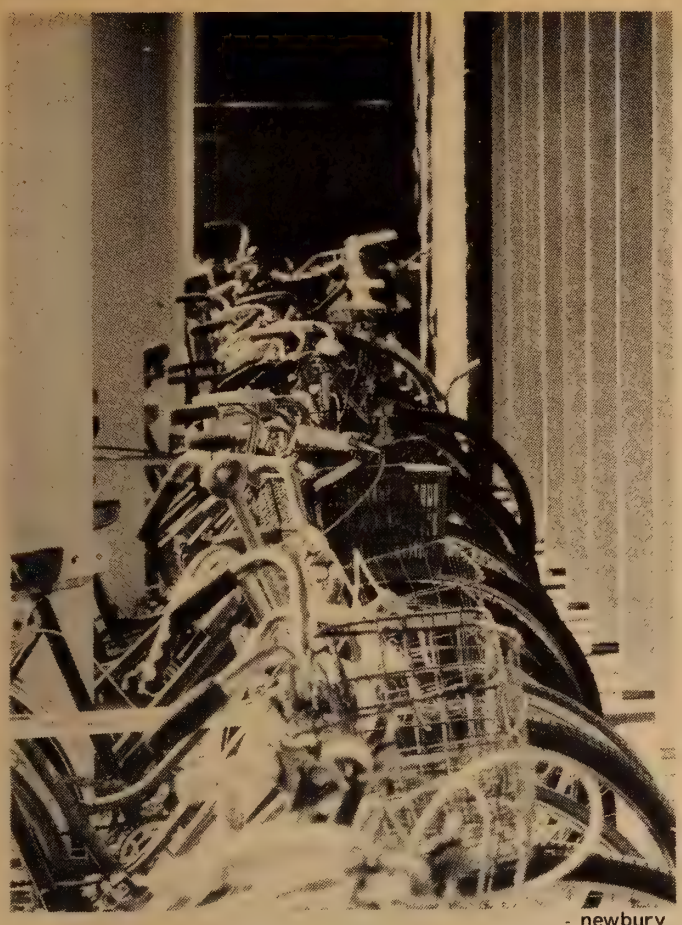
Association of Student Councils
44 St. George Street, Toronto 5, Ontario (416) 962-8404

Also available: student flights to Europe and within Europe, car rentals, international ID cards, tours, student hostels and jobs abroad.

All at student prices

Journal Crossword

ACROSS



1. What "Green Acres" was from "Petticoat Junction".
5. Chubby
10. Crowning ceremonies.
11. Be wrong with.
12. Babies' complaint.
13. Varying.
14. A second time.
15. This word is absolutely necessary.
17. What Queen's students are not, except chronologically.
19. Locations.
21. Broadcast.
24. Was concerned about.
25. One-third of a half-inning.
26. Inhabitants of Baffin Island.
27. Curt.
28. Roads over rivers.

DOWN

2. What a coffee-pot does.
3. Target in a form of lawn-bowling.
4. Stagnant.
5. Rear (as a gate).
6. Tsarist order.
7. Pertaining to the roof of the oral opening.
8. Southern tree.
9. Bewilders.
15. From now on, always.
16. Get in the way.
17. The main downward root.
18. Set out in proper array.
19. Made safe.
20. Someone who likes hurting others.
22. Black sea animal.
23. Thin air, or heavy anaesthetic.

Too old for residence?

NEVER! Mature women students and women in post-degree courses are being offered accommodation in Adelaide Hall, ground floor, for the 73-74 session. Apply to the Office of Residence Admissions, Victoria Hall.

- newbury

If you own one of these, you'd better get a license.

City police have been out in force this week warning that they will soon be cracking down on bicycle riders who do not obey the law.

They say there will be fines for anyone who rides a bicycle on sidewalks, through red lights, and who ride without bicycle licenses.

(Licenses can be obtained at the Police Station on Ontario Street near the lower LCBO.)

One officer said that this is not the usual spring warning, but the real thing and indicated that there will be enforcement of the rules this year.

Library hours extended

"The extension of library hours during the upcoming exam period is still undergoing discussion," Chief Librarian, Donald A. Redmond told the Journal.

Douglas Library maintains the longest university library hours in Ontario and is constantly studying the traffic patterns of its students, according to Redmond. Maximum occupancy recorded to date is 75 per cent of the available seating positions.

A tight budgetary situation restricts the extension of hours, however, the Periodicals Room schedule has been revised. It will be open from Monday to Friday between 8:45 a.m. and midnight, Saturday from 8:45 a.m. to 10:00 p.m. and Sunday noon to midnight.

Job Bank opens in April

by Debbie Coyne

Job Bank is a free community service created in order to help students in and around Kingston find summer jobs. Employers list jobs that will be available in the summer and Job Bank, in turn, find the students to fill the positions. Anyone who is unemployed is eligible for Job Bank's services and the types of jobs cover a wide range.

Last year, Job Bank was financed by funds from Queen's University, the Alma Mater Society, ASUS and the Engineering Society. It also received a grant from the Ontario government. The city of Kingston had intended to provide money, but unfortunately, this possibility fell apart when the budget was brought down.

Tom Kennedy, one of the co-directors in 1972, said that Job Bank was successful in finding full-time or part-time jobs for 942 students of the 1,049 students who registered. Seven hundred and ninety five were Queen's students, 36 were from St. Lawrence College, 193 were from Kingston high schools, and 33 were from other schools. The number of employers who listed jobs with Job Bank was 671. Kennedy expressed the hope that more students would take advantage of the services this year, since Job Bank, in fact, was unable to find enough students for the jobs offered.

This year, under the directorship of Alan Coxwell and Donna Hackett, Job Bank is hoping to net over $400,000 for Kingston area students - an increase of $150,000 over last year's figures. This is based on an average salary of $2.00 per hour.

Job Bank's office in the Career Planning and Placement Building, 121 Union St., will be officially open to students in early April. Applications, though, will be available as of April 1st at the same address. Following the opening of the office, students may register directly with Job Bank. Anyone planning on working in Kingston during this summer would be advised to file an application form as soon as possible.

Other contentious issues, too

AMS charged with discrimination

By Jennifer Grass
and Charles Schwier

The last regular meeting of the Outer Council of the AMS lasted until 12:45 this morning in what was one of the longest, most rangling, and contentous gatherings that that body has seen in many years.

The underlying theme of much of the rangling was financial, but a number of other contentious issues were raised:

Discrimination against women was blatantly exhibited at the Outer Council meeting last night by chief constable Ian Nordeimer.

He openly admitted that he had established a quota system for the selection of female constables which allocated a maximum of 20 constable positions to women of the 120 positions available.

Lyn Whitham, OFS delegate and former AMS External Affairs Commissioner accused the chief constable of an action that contravenes the Ontario Human Rights Code. She referred to section 4 of the code which states that "no person shall refuse to refer or recruit any person for employment because of race, creed, colour, age, sex, marital status, nationality, ancestry or place of origin of such person or employer." The establishment of a quota system constitutes a discriminatory action under the code.

"The quota system was probably undertaken by the chief constable in good faith," Whitham said, but she deplored the action because it was, "indicative of an antiquated system and value structure." The AMS could be brought to court for this transgression and severely fined.

Education Commissioner Marv Bloos stated that an illegal quota existed and "Outer Council cannot be blinded to this."

This was uncovered during discussion on a motion to ratify Nordheimer's selection of sergeants. There were no women at all on the list and Nordheimer explained, "I didn't think there was a qualified female." However it was pointed out that in his report at the Annual meeting on March 1st he had recommended that the use of women as sergeants was not advisable at this time and that indications were that women did not have the requisite attributes. He remarked last night that "a female sergeant had been appointed last year and it hadn't proved as successful as it might have."

In urging Council to defeat the ratification because of the evidence of discrimination, Bloos stated, "This is not just some symbolic cause. It is a matter of principle and of utmost importance to the AMS."

When the motion to ratify was finally called to a vote, Council was evenly split on the issue and so the new Speaker, Steve Gilchrist, cast his vote to defeat the motion.

Whitham subsequently moved that Nordheimers selection of sergeants be ratified until the first Council meeting in September when the adjudication of the AMS Court is available. The motion passed easily.

After long debate, Council passed a motion deploring the current laws governing the possession and use of Cannibas and urging the Minister of Health to review the laws towards their liberlization.

Artsci rep Teri Macli, who introduced the motion, claimed it was a necessary thing for the AMS to do because of the large number of students, "our constitutants", are liable for punishment under the current laws. "It is really negative for us to sit back and not make any input into the issue," he commented.

Council immediately polarized on the issue with External Affairs Commissioner Kiloran German saying that the AMS had no business issuing statements on "this type of issue. It is a personal matter." German said the AMS would loose its credibility when it comes to making specific policy statements on strictly student issues if it made policy statements on issues like Cannibas.

Bloos disagreed. He thought it was a student problem — "my interests are at stake here and I think this council should represent my interests."

As discussion rangled on around the issue President Steve Brereton and Vice-president Bruce Trotter disagreed on the scope that the AMS should take. Brereton spoke in favour saying that it is a social issue that a "lot of people have hang-ups about", but should be thought the AMS should take a stand. Trotter warned the Outer Council of the precident it was setting and stated the AMS should restrict itself to educational issues.

Whitham pointed out that the AMS had already defeated a similar motion in the fall since "the AMS is not a body for this type of motion." She charged the issue was important enough to be referred to the campus for a referendum, "you people (Outer Council) cannot represent the students on an issue like this."

To which Bloos replied: "Then what are we doing if we cannot make up our minds and have to go to the students."

The debate ended on a roll-call vote. Fourteen were in favour; twelve opposed; and one abstained.

Even a short coffee break didn't cool tempers much when the summer budget debate finally started at 11:30.

Trotter pointed out the proposed summer budget was being presented as the requests had come and he was leaving to Council "a search and destroy mission." And search and argue they did.

Someone immediately questioned a $315 allocation for a campus poll. Commerce rep. Ken Wong explained that since there existed a large credibility gap, he intended to ask students what they thought about issues that the AMS is working on and what new areas should be looked into. He said he intended to send out 1500 questionnaires to students over the summer on the subject in order to have useful information available for the resumption of Outer Council in the fall.

The allocation was approved, and then thrown out after many pointed and detailed questions regarding the survey were directed at Wong. Artsei rep Ross Sutherland asked what the survey could do that personal contact through Information Bank and Outer Council members visiting specific areas of campus couldn't do.

A $2,000 grant to help cover summer operation of the Legal Aid Society was approved after long debate about the relative merits of the AMS granting moneys to outside service organizations. ASUS vice-president Craig Brown favoured granting $1500 for the whole year and "letting them come back if they need more." Bloos disagreed pointing out that the Legal Aid Society is "one of the few contacts people have with the AMS. Are we only going to spend the money on ourselves? By taking money out of the Legal Aid Society," we will be making legal services much more expensive for many people.

An allocation of $500 for Orientation in the Education Commission budget provoked a heated exchange between Bloos and Orientation Convenor Kevin van Koughuett and others about who was in charge of the AMS portions of orientation. The allocation stood after Bloos said he would consult with people about the spending of the money.

The rest of the budget got through intact but not without a number of questions, most notably from Sutherland, asking "why" (is this higher than last year.). In addition, a $750 "joke" allocation for a fact finding trip to the Bahamas was almost approved; however, after Council realized so many people had voted for the joke, the $750 was put back in the pot.

Among other items in the $19,000 summer budget (of a total yearly budget of $69,000) were: $9,000 for salaries of the President, Vice-president, Business Administrator and secretary cum bookkeeper; $605 for the Student Volunteer Bureau; $500 for conference attendance; and $1750 for Job Bank.

Briefly, the Outer Council also:

— Censured the Concert Committee Chairman for placing advertising for the Charles Lloyd concert on campus trees.

— Received a report on the Student Typing Service showing it was loosing money, especially on the Xerox machines; but rejected a motion to intigrate part of typing service with the AMS administration.

— Discussed a Journal-Tricolor financial report but sent it back asking for more detailed information so that "it could get its teeth into it."

— Listened to Alderman Keith Norton, City Council's AMS liaison, say he felt the lines of communications between the AMS and the City Council are being expanded in "the right sort of way".

Honourary degrees for thirteen

Principal John J. Deutsch has announced that thirteen honorary degrees will be conferred at spring convocations in late May and early June.

The convocations for the Faculty of Education and Queen's Theological College will be held on May 25. Recipients of honorary degrees will be Reverend Monsignor J. G. Hanley of Kingston, co-chairman of the Religious Services Committee for the Kingston Tercentenary Committee; Reverend Gordon C. Smyth, author of a locally syndicated religious column and immediate past president of the Queen's Theological Alumni Association; A.C.E. Ritter, of Nairobi, Kenya, the first Director of Education with the Kingston Municipal board of Education, and Alexander Brott of Montreal, world renowned violinist, conductor and composer and conductor of the Kingston Symphony Orchestra since 1965.

On May 26, honorary degrees will be awarded at the convocations of the Faculty of Applied Science and the School of Business to Robert H. Hay, member and six-time chairman of the Kingston Public Utilities Commission; Reginald G. H. Smails, one of the founding members of the Kingston Planning Committee and a member for 23 years; and James C. Cameron, a pioneer in Industrial Relations and Head of the Queen's Industrial Relations section for 23 years.

The School of Graduate Studies and Research, the Faculty of Law, the Faculty of Medicine, the School of Nursing and the School of Rehabilitation Therapy will hold their convocations on May 26. Receiving honorary degrees at that time will be W. Ford Connell, director of the Heart Department at Kingston General Hospital; E. H. Botterell, a distinguished neurosurgeon and former Dean of Medicine and Vice-Principal (Health Sciences) at Queen's; and Clifford A. Curtis, former alderman and mayor of Kingston and past Dean of the Queen's School of Graduate Studies.

Margaret Angus, historical author and President of the Kingston Historical Society, will be honoured at the first convocation of the Faculty of Arts and Science on June 2.

The School of Physical and Health Education and the Faculty of Arts and Science will hold convocations on June 2. Recipients of honorary degrees will be John E. Hodgetts of Toronto, former President and Vice-Chancellor of Victoria College at the University of Toronto and head of the Queen's department of Political Studies and Thelma Boucher, an authority on gardening and consultant to Canadian Homes and Gardens magazine and to Upper Canada Village.

All will receive Doctor of Laws degrees except the Rev. Msgr. Hanley and the Rev. Mr. Smyth, who will receive Doctor of Divinity degrees.

The convocations will be addressed by Hanley, Hay, Connell, Angus and Hodgetts.

More grad gatherings

The School of Graduate Studies has recommended to the Senate that three small convocations be held each year for those receiving post-graduate degrees.

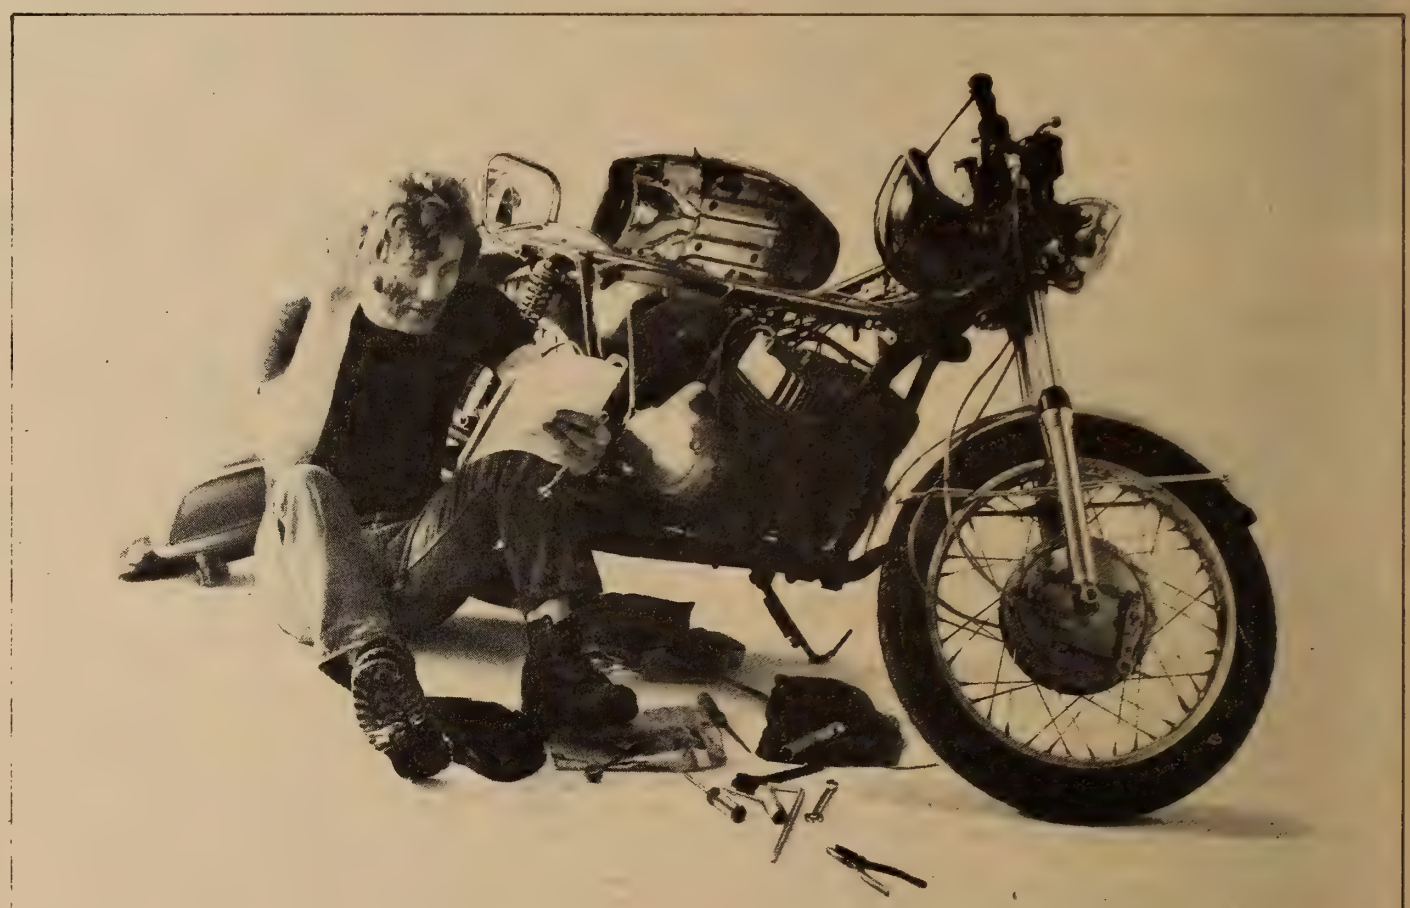
Degree lists for post-graduates are presented to the Senate three times each year in October, January and May.

Students admitted to a degree in October or January are denied the privilege of having laureation close to the time of obtaining their degree.

The report indicates that the largest number of graduations have in recent years taken place in October.

The report recommends simple signified ceremonies. The Principal would act for the Chancellor in each ceremony and the Registrar of the School would arrange to distribute the certificates. There would be no choir, no organist and no extended speech-making.

These recommendations seek to substitute a small, inexpensive gathering for a large, expensive, unsatisfying occasion from which the Graduate students stay away.



The report was referred to the Senate Committee on Academic procedures.

Dean Watts suggested that a fall convocation for undergraduates should also be considered. Last year, 236 people completed their degrees at summer school.

Foreign student situation 'grim'

OTTAWA — The situation looks "grim" for foreign students seeking jobs in Canada this summer. This report comes from Kiloran German, AMS External Affairs Commissioner, who is here speaking to government and other officials regarding both the foreign student situation and the problems of AOSC charter flights.

German got the grim report from Jill Stalker of the Canadian Bureau for International Education. Stalker claims one of the problems is the political future of Manpower Minister Robert Andras.

Having a bike is a bit like having a dog. Be faithful to it, and it will be faithful to you.

A two-stroke plays hard, so you'd better feed it right.

That's what Castrol's Motorcycle Injector Oil is all about.

Keeping the heart of your bike (its engine) strong and healthy.

So your two-stroke doesn't have a third stroke.

The whole range of Castrol products, from GTX for 4-cylinder models to Shockol and Chain Lube, has been developed for the same reason.

To keep your bike in the best of health. And you out of trouble.

Because you don't want your two stroke to have a third stroke.

SHEAR OFF THE SHACKLES SUPPORT FREEDOM OF CHOICE

Castrol The engine protector

Queen's University Music Department

A Recital of Harpsichord Music

Joyce Redekop-Fink
Harpsichord

DUNNING AUDITORIUM
8:00 P.M.

WEDNESDAY
MARCH 28

FREE

Québec today

its struggles and relationship to other anti-imperialist struggles a discussion with L. Bergeron, author of The History of Quebec : A PATRIOTE'S HANDBOOK

SUNDAY
APRIL 1st
7:00 p.m.
2nd FLOOR UNION

HEADS -- See what could happen to you

"REEFER MADNESS"
(1936, UNCUT)

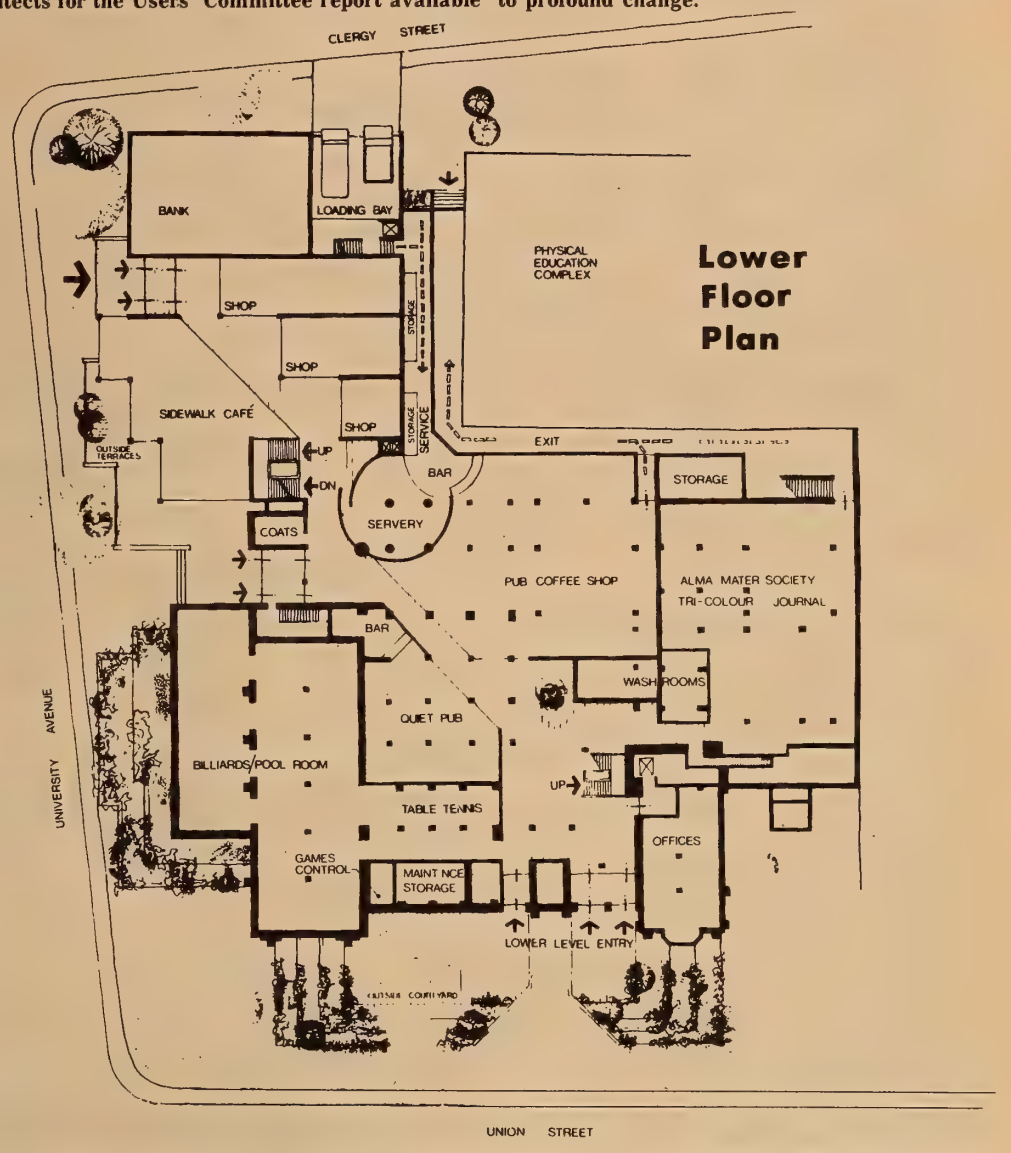
Thursday and Friday
March 29 and 30

Monday and Tuesday
April 2 and 3

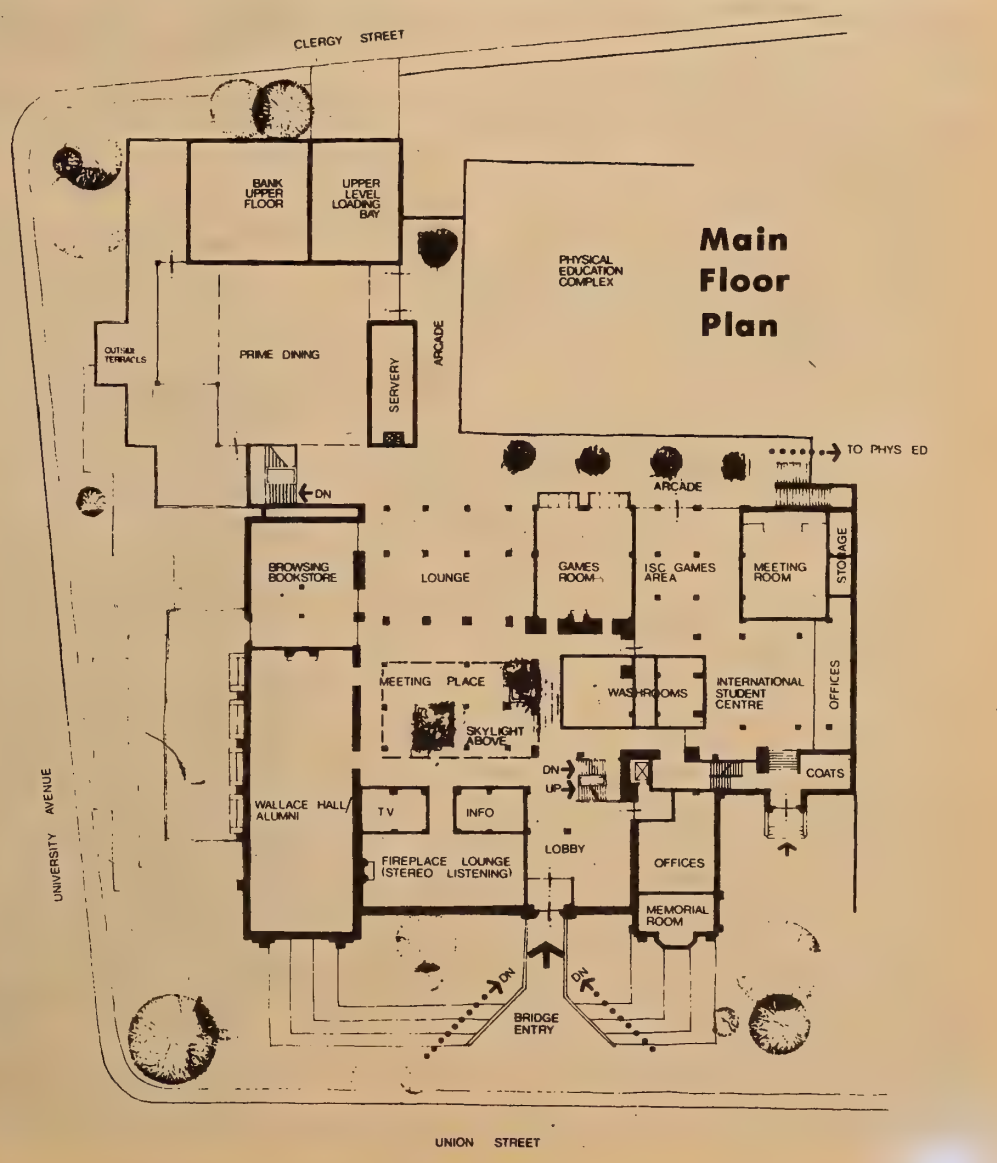
CINEGUILD

DUNNING AUDITORIUM

ADM. $1.00



"Free" Bus Service to West Campus for this year ends April 17



See Scenic West Campus by bus

While this "Free" offer lasts

Unicentre proposed floor plans

A tentative Scheme I floor plan for the new University Centre drawn by Arthur Erickson Architects for the Users' Committee report available from the office of the Campus Planner. Its intent is to show the feasibility of the scheme and is subject to profound change.

"100 Years of Bertrand Russell"

Everything you wanted to know about Russell...

by Kathy McDonald

Professor John Slater recently addressed an audience in Dupuis Hall Auditorium on "One Hundred Years of Bertrand Russell". Slater, who is from the philosophy department at the University of Toronto, has been studying the work of Russell for twenty years.

Slater introduced his lecture with a detailed account of Russell's birth and early life. He explained that Lady Russell wanted to name young Bertrand Galahad, but when his parents realized that it might cause him to be laughed at, they decided against the name. He posed the philisophical question: "Would Bertrand Russell have had the same effect on the world, if he had been called Galahad Russell?"

His parents who had lost most of their religious beliefs by the time Bertrand was born, died before he was four, leaving him and his brother in the care of athiests. However, Russell's grandmother, who didn't like the arrangement, took over the job of raising her grandsons, and was to have a profound effect on Bertrand.

She encouraged him to have enormous dedication to his work, to be a fierce individual, and above all, to have confidence in his own judgement

Of Russell's many endeavours, Slater elaborated on three of these: his achievements in the field of logic and philosophy; his work on behalf of the career and teaching of philosophy: and his involvement as a political activist.

In 1903, his release of "Principles of Mathematics" attracted the interest of C.Whitehead who collaborated with him in working on a second volume. In addition the three volumes of "Principia Mathematica" were aimed at developing and proving that logic and arithmetic were interrelated aspects of mathematics.

Symbols had previously been used to a slight degree, and by 1900, Russell realized he could relate these symbols to more and more of the questions which were arising concerning mathematics and logic. "Principia Mathematica" is a great work of analysis covering even the most minute details of both logic and math.

As well as leading many students to take a course in philosophy (largely through his book "Why I am not a Christian") Russell paved much of the road to academic freedom. He actively recruited those he felt had talent, often discussing essays and other articles face to face with their authors.

With the onset of World War I, and the development of Russell's anti-war ideas, the university where he was teaching (Trinity) quietly refused him tenure when he did not bow down from his ideas against war.

When Russell was hired to teach in New York in 1920 the action brought in so much protest that he was quickly fired, but this time, not quietly. Charges were brought about due to his religious beliefs (he taught mathematical philosophy) as papers, citizens, and religious officials were scandalized at his athiestic views.

His case was brought to court by one hysterical mother who feared that her daughter was about to be corrupted, because she felt Russell (who was teaching at an all-male school) "advocated sexual immorality". She and the prosecution claimed his books were "lustful, athiestic, and bereft of moral fibre."

Russell, in the opinion of many, was a Sophist, making deductions without reason. and was out to mislead people. The judge decided that the appointment of Russell would be a cause for indecency.

He was discouraged from defending himself because "he had no legal interest in the case". The newspapers criticized him for trying to defend himself - they felt he should have retired quietly. In his rebuttal, Russell said that retiring quietly might seem to many to be the best idea but it would have been cowardly and non-profitable. He felt it would be immoral not to stick up for academic freedom.

Concerning his political career, it has been said that Russell was "the stage army of the good". He worked for the liberaton of women until they were given the vote and for the cause of peace until he died in 1970.

When fined for distributing antiwar material, Russell felt he would do more for publicizing his stand on the war issue, if he spent time in jail. However, when he refused to pay his fine, the authorities, who did not want to jail him, confiscated his books and put them up for auction. A group of his friends put their money together to buy back his books, and pay the fine.

Contrary to the expectations of many officials, after this, he spent even more time writing

Continued on Page 10

Levana Formal Committee
Presents:
BRIGADOON
Featuring Octavian
March 31
Dress: Formal
9:00 pm - 1 am
Lower Vic.

Heidelberg
Brewed from pure spring water.

And that's the truth!

Human Sexuality Not Homosexuality

by Michael J. Brady

On Wednesday, March 21 while visiting MacArthur College, George Hislop, of Community Homophile Association of Toronto (C.H.A.T.), a group dedicated to helping the homosexual in society, explained his view of homosexuality.

Homosexuals are a minority group of healthy people with the same rights as any ethnic or political group that have full rights to participate in our society, according to Hislop.

He was both informative and entertaining as he ran his little sexual gauntlet and helped (hopefully) to open up some of the minds in this audience to new posibilities of tolerance.

He began by explaining that the common view of sex as procreative, and thus necessarily heterosexual has its roots in a Judaeo-Christian tradition that goes back through thousands of years of high infant mortality and the need for profuse baby production to insure personal, state, and economic survival.

However, with the decrease in infant mortality and the increase in technological automation, present concern of demographers is about over, not underpopulation. The prejudice against homosexuals that has arisen from this tradition is not as quickly changed as the technology of the society. "Cultural Lag has caught the fag," is a phrase that Hislop might use.

The time has come for views to change, and Hislop with C.H.A.T. is committed to helping them to do so.

For those who will adhere strictly to the Bible for their moral standards, Hislop points out that there are exactly seven instances in the Bible of the prohibition of homosexuality. On the other hand, there are more than 650 instances of the prohibition of heterosexuality. Where does that leave you?

On the subject of transvestites, Hislop notes that there are more heterosexual ones on a per population basis. The same goes for pedophiles. As for sex changes: "Those my dear, are Transexuals, another group entirely."

To point out the blind prejudice of society, Hislop related a recent observation he had made on reading the Toronto Sun. On the front page were headlines to the effect of: "Homosexuals Arrested in Child Prostitute Scandal." Three pages later was an article headed "4 Men Rape teen-aged girl". Why not "4 Heterosexuals rape?" Why "homosexuals" instead of "2 men and a woman?" Why must the antagonists in the earlier story be identified on the basis of their sexual preferences while those in the latter are identified on the basis of their act? Such is the unthinkable attitude Hislop and his group are fighting.

When asked what makes a person heterosexual or homosexual, what tips the balance on the sexual continuum, Hislop admitted that he knew no more than any other honest person. But he did express his belief that popular ideas such as the dominating mother and the emotionally distant father leading a child into homosexuality are psychiatric hogwash.

He allowed that a person's manners, his "masculinity" or "femininity" are affected by upbringing, but that sexuality itself was something intrinsic, instinctive, and would come out at some time in one way or another. It cannot be taught by anyone. In his view, massive socialization towards one extreme or the other will only make a person's adjustment to his or her sexuality either more or less difficult.

Unfortunately for the homosexual, his socialization is almost always a heterosexual one. "When you are part of some minority group and the kids start calling you a wap, kike, dego or nigger, you have your family to give you positive reinforcement. But when they call you a queer, whom do you turn to?" Most mothers and fathers would pack little Jamie or Sue immediately off to the psychiatrist to be straightened out.

Hislop related the story of a young friend whose homosexuality was discovered by his parents. With the mother in tears, and the father inconsolably wounded, the boy was sent to a psychiatrist. After one session during which the psychiatrist found that the boy was quite comfortable with his homosexuality, it was decided that his parents, and not he needed the treatment.

When questioned about promiscuity in the gay world, Hislop noted first of all the promiscuity is best defined as "anyone getting more sex than the definer." More seriously, however, he noted that the gay male is socialized as a man, not a woman, and that when he goes on the prowl, he meets not a passive woman (that is changing), but another hunting male, who like him has not been taught the virtues of chastity. Because of this many homosexual relationships begin in bed, and perhaps have an advantage for it since so many non-verbal things are so quickly discovered between the sheets.

On the topic of the duration of homosexual relationships Hislop admitted that many of them do not last a lifetime as marriages are supposed to. But remember that the homosexual relationship is based purely on personal commitment and has no contracts of children to bind it. He himself has been living with his lover for fifteen years.

The question arises as to whether Hislop and his group in their support of homosexuality are not guilty of the same narrowmindedness as that of the heterosexual majority that chooses to define people in terms of sexual behaviour rather than some other aspect of their social interaction. Hislop explained that he personally believed in the concept of human sexuality as opposed to either hetero or homo, and that in an ideal situation, gender would not be the major factor in the desire for physical contact.

However, he defended his homosexual activist stance on the grounds that homosexuals, like any other minority group i.e. negroes, must first turn inwards and gather strength in their self concept through numbers. With this inner strength, they would be able to turn outwards and more effectively deal with a hostile society. It is a question of identity. "Once the negro didn't know who he was; then he firmly established himself as a "black". Now he can absorb his enemies slander by unflinchingly calling himself a nigger, coon, spade, etc. Hopefully the same thing will happen with Homosexuals."

Hislop would welcome the end of Homosexual acquiescence to Heterosexual chauvinism. Prejudice does not mean merely job rejection or peer group ostracism, but a huge inferiority complex. What would happen if all those homosexual teachers, doctors, athletes, secretaries, truckdrivers, bookkeepers, lawyers, students, psychiatrists, etc. stood up and refused any more to tolerate the derogatory drivel that is everywhere?

The situation of the Homosexual to this campus is very much the sort of think Hislop and his group are fighting against. Queen's is the only university in Ontario that has no Homophile Association. U. of T. formed theirs in 1968; C.H.A.T. was formed in 1971. Homosexuality at Queen's is more or less a secret affair, with members of the community being discovered haphazardly in various public places, at parties, or by word of mouth. For the experienced homosexual such contacts are not extremely difficult to make, and with some mental adjustments, not too degrading.

But for the boy or girl who is unsure of what he or she wants, or how to get it, such decisions and the personality - rending introspection that goes with them are often insurmountably complicated by enforced anonymity and loneliness.

It would be a credit to the belief of the students in the liberated ideals of their community, not to mention society in general, if not only homosexuals, but those who know and respect them, and those who support them would speak up and help to eradicate both the spoken and unspoken prejudice of the unthinking majority, according to Hislop.

Pre-registration for 1973-74
Department of Psychology

All students wishing to take psychology courses during the 1973-74 academic year MUST pre-register for them NOW

March 29 & 30 - Pre-registration materials may be picked up in the foyer of Humphrey Hall.

April 5 & 6 - Pre-registration forms must be returned to the Psychology general office in Humphrey Hall.

All students must pre-register for Psychology courses even if they have already pre-registered in some other department or Faculty or even if they are only taking a single course.

BICYCLE BUY OF THE YEAR!

MEN'S 10 SPEED "FLANDRIA"
RACING BICYCLES

European Precision Built. Featherweight Frame. Famous "Simplex" multiple gearing system. Must be seen to be appreciated.

list price 139.95
wholesale cost 104.95
89.95

Nobody But Nobody Can Even Come Close to this incredible value. Other European-built Men's 10 Speed Models at Similar Bargain Prices

ON SALE 79.95 and 84.95

S & R WAREHOUSE CLOSING OUT SALE
3 CATARAQUI STREET
Just Off Rideau St.
Free Parking - Chargex - Dial 542-9615

User's Committee faces music

Continued from Page 1

close to busy corners". In addition he questioned whether such a facility would be amenable in what is specifically a drama oriented area. He also pointed out that if the bank were to be taken out, there would be nothing to replace it with in the centre plans.

Soberman emphasized the fact that too much must not be taken out of the centre or it will begin to lack traffic generators attracting people into the centre.

Soberman was also on the Subcommittee on Subcentres introduced in January by the Users' Committee to ensure that various possible areas of activity elsewhere on the campus would receive ample consideration. He gave the meeting an indication of the direction in which Committee consideration of Subcentres had headed.

Soberman explained that the recommendation for subcentres in the Art-Social Sciences Complex, the Drama Building and Ontario Hall were made in recognition of the fact that they would become important centres of activity which could benefit if further promoted.

This remark received considerable criticism in light of the proposed inclusion of the ticket booth in the main centre when the Agnes Etherington Art Centre has offered space for the function which it is expected, would add to the viability of a sub-centre there.

Soberman fielded the question but failed to reach any definite conclusion on the issue. He noted that a ticket booth would benefit from the high traffic flows if centralized in the main centre and that it could become locked into Agnes Etherington's shorter hours (which do not include weekends), if located there. He pointed out however, that with the advent of the Arts-Social Sciences complex in close proximity, traffic may just be large enough in that area to call the Arts centre a centralized location.

Franks also levelled criticism at the report claiming that it does not, in its present form, provide enough interest for the Kingston community, one of the original motives for its being built. He did not, however, specify how this might be furthered.

A function not originally in the report but generally agreed to when presented by Ross Sutherland, Assistant AMS Education Commissioner, was a soundproof typing room open generally to anyone wishing to use it.

100 years of Bertrand Russell

Continued from Page 8

articles against conscription and war.

In 1916, he appeared in court for "insulting the United States". During his ensuing six month imprisonment, he continued writing his anit-war material. At times Russell felt his efforts were futile; however, if he had not raised a continuous fuss, it is quite probably that conscientious objectors would have received much more harsh treatment than they did, and many of the inhumanities of the war would not have been made known to the public.

Over the last few yars, he became more and more of a lone protestor. From the 1960's, Bertrand Russell's Peace Organization has been concerned with all world problems coming to their attention. However, Russell's main focus has been on the problems of nuclear war.

He became convinced that nuclear was so horrible that it has to be prevented at all costs; so convinced in fact, that by his own admission, he became somewhat of a fanatic on this topic.

His disapparoval of the Viet Nam War and nuclear war made their dangers well-known to the public. It is too early however, to tell what effect, if any, efforts such as the War Crimes Tribunal, had on ending the war.

His own personal philosophy was that man had within himself all that was necessary to create paradise on earth. "Man could truly grace the universe, if he could only learn to stand alone, rely on his senses, and not have any supernatural faith." He felt that people relying on religion missed the pride of being able to say "I have lived life myself."

sparks

Birth Control and Abortion Information and Referral Service

Drop in: 1-9 daily, 1-5 Saturday

165 University 547-2806

ARTSCI76 PRESENTS

"BYE BYE BASH"

(The Smoker to end all Smokers)

featuring:

THE VERSATILE ARTSCI 76 DRINKING TEAM

in the pub
Thursday,
Apr. 15
8-12 p.m.

free with year card
50¢ without
Beer 3/$1.00

Go to H.E.L.L.

(Help Everyone Leave Laughing)

FACULTY STAFF STUDENTS

Apartments for Rent

Faculty, Staff and Students are cordially invited to tour Elrond. We have a limited number of one and two bedroom apartments available on four and twelve month leases; Both starting May 1. Children are welcome

CORRIDOR 1 BEDROOM	$160-MO
SPLIT LEVEL 1 BEDROOM WITH BALCONY	$175-MO
CORRIDOR 2 BEDROOM	$195-MO
SPLIT LEVEL 2 BEDROOM WITH BALCONY	$210-MO
LARGE SPLIT LEVEL 2 BEDROOM FOR 3 OR 4 PEOPLE	$245-MO

Call Elrond Office 544-1842
Between 9 & 5

letters

How To Be An M.C.P.

Dear Sirs,

Ah Yes! It's that time of year again when a young man's thoughts turn to the more beauteous aspects of human existance. Hangin' around the Union, checkin' out all the great bods, as I have for most of my three years here at Queen's, I have developed a philosophy for dealing with the age-old problem of the fairer sex. (Why not? I haven't done anything else here.)

I believe that this philosophy will eminently qualify myself as one of the doctrinaire M.C.P.'s on campus. Incidentally, the election of that cop-out, pinko, fairy engineer as M.C.P. of the year shows that Queen's women just aren't aware of how many really great M.C.P.'s there are on campus.

The products of the aforementioned philosophy are listed below in the form of recommendations to the powers that be, for some change around here;

1) The admission requirements for women should be changed so that the emphasis is on good-looking, loose-living chicks.

2) All guys who try to monopolize poor unwitting chicks with lines like "going steady" or "engaged" should be expelled and sent home to their security blankets.

3) Good-looking chicks should not have to attend so many classes in the springtime. Rather, they should divest themselves of their heavy winter garb and be encouraged to spend more time walking between classes; breathing deeply that wonderful fresh air and facilitating detailed study of the lusty wenches.

4) In classes, seating arrangements should be governed by the principle that women are sex objects. Therefore, tables and other obstacles which obstruct the view of we connoisseurs of that noble art form; girl watching, should be removed in order that we are given the greatest opportunity to experience their visual objects d'art.

5) Women on campus should be allowed the illusion of equal involvement in campus activities, but the minute they start giving us M.C.P.'s a bad name, they should be put in their place.

- schwier

Kevin Van Koughnet, winner of the Queen's Male Chauvinist Pig Award, signs autographs outside the Library

I believe that if these recommendations are adopted, life at Queen's would be improved immeasurably. Incidentally if you chicks want to meet a really neat, suave, debonair, handsome, rugged, erudite, athletic, intellectual guy, look for the little white dog with floppy black ears, wearing sunglasses and hanging around the Union. That's me.

Yours sincerely,
Joe Cool
Real name witheld upon request

P.S. All those who would like to join the Joe Cool Fan Club are urged to send their loving letters to the Women's Caucus c-o The Journal.

McArthur Elite Discriminates

Dear Editor,

On Thursday night March 22 we decided to go to McArthur pub for a night of good company and good cheer. When we arrived we soon realized that we did not belong to the McArthur or West Campus 'elite' and thus we were rejected. You are probably wondering why we were rejected, since we are Queen's students and they did ask for our Queen's I.D. card. We showed our cards but soon found that we were 'from the wrong side of the tracks', A snide comment that 'I belong to McArthur not Queen's' was made by the patron at the door. When we replied that McArthur was part of Queen's, he said 'McArthur was a faculty of Queen's'! To us, what is the difference? We were then told that we could get in after 10:30 p.m. (we arrived at 8:30 p.m.).

We are sick and tired of hearing McArthur and West Campus bitching about being left out of main campus activities. As far as we are concerned they are screwing themselves.

Mary McClennan
Cathy Shannon

Why trees?

Dear Editor,

Many of our precious surviving campus trees today appeared to be covered in posters advertising an upcoming concert at McArthur Auditorium by Charles Lloyd.

In the past, I have noticed numerous other posters and flyers littering the trees on campus.

The AMS is always talking about posters and bulletin boards and trees and publicity and etc. They pass motions reaffirming the city by-law prohibiting the posting of bulletins on trees. They even appoint bulletin board committees.

But alas, I fear our trees are like the weather, everyone talks about it but no ever does anything about it.

Disgruntled

Queen's Journal
Vol. 100, No. 49,
Thurs., Mar. 29, 1973
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ontario.

Editor: Jennifer Grass
Business: Charles Schwier
Management: John Solman
Arts: Sandy Naiman
Features: Pat Devitt, Steven Winnett
Passepartout: Bob Wood
News: Susan de Stein
Events: Alison Dandie
Sports: Chris Boon, Nada Bogdanovic
National Desk: Bob Mutrie, Sue Wishart
Photography: Peter Boag

Another late nite at the old salt mine fighting for our very office space . . . the staff liberated the cans and held an intellectual discussion thereof . . . Cathy and various others (like Deb and the Addy III mob) worked away . . . Pat and John were rapidly falling asleep . . . the Jocks as usual looked in . . . Sue called in "sick" and her other half loafed with Winnet who worked... Bob learned about political involvement...Sandy acted up but did half the paper . . . while Helen and Lee plotted . . . Mung did darkroom while he should have been in bed as should have our roving reporter up north . . . and thanks for the bagle.

Published twice weekly on Tuesdays and Fridays by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc., Member, Canadian University Press. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society of the University. Offices are located in the Student's Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

IS THERE ANY HOPE FOR TOMORROW'S WORLD?

tonight, thurs., march 29th stirling 412 B, 7:30 p.m.

Revolution 68
Nostalgia 73
What happened to the NEW SOCIETY?
Presented by IAN TAYLOR
prof. of sociology, faculty of Law, Sheffield, England Watson 517, 7:30 p.m., Mon. April 2
AMS Education Commission

ROYAL LIFE-SAVING SOCIETY
EXAMINATIONS STANDARDS CLINICS (INITIAL)
Sat. April 28, 10:30 - 4:30
Re-qualification only:
Sat. May 5, 10:30 - 4:30
For information call 547-5756

"Free" Bus Service to West Campus for this year ends April 17
See Scenic West Campus by bus
While this "Free" offer lasts

unclassifieds . . .

TO 1-3 OF THE FEARSOME threesome: (Strome, you dummy, that means YOU!) Have a happy 21st. H. and H.

TO DEAL: SORRY there's no roast beef or Yorkshire Pudding this year, but to keep you young, there's another surprise. Let's see if you know where to find it. By the way, HARTELYK GEFELICITEERD!

MODERN 3 BEDROOM apartment available for 73-74 from May 1st. 7 minutes from campus. Call Mary, 544-7235 Marg or Deb, 544-7861.

MAY STILL HAVE available two single rooms in a three bedroom apartment at 217 Colborne. $65 a month - utilities paid. Want to share as apartment next year? Call 544-5715, if no one is home try again after midnight. OK? Dave Grimes.

LOST: ONE QUEEN'S ring, possibly at the library. Please phone 546-1919.

ROOMMATE WANTED TO SHARE 3-bedroom apt. with two other girls from May to Sept. only. Contact Arlene 542-5498, or Cheryl 542-6610 after 5 p.m.

REWARD OF $40 for anyone who can find us a four bedroom apt. or house for 73-74. Close to campus and relatively cheap, please. Phone Janey 544-8063 or Marg 544-8102 or Cathy 544-8096 after 6 p.m.

PETE - TINKERBELL IS ON YOUR TRAIL . . .

FANTASTIC: AVAILABLE May to Sept. A beautiful, newly redecorated, furnished 6 bedroom house, one block from campus, equipped with kitchen, living room, and dining room facilities plus a garage. Willing to rent whole house or individual rooms. RENT NEGOTIABLE. Please call 544-8362, 544-8363, 544-8368.

WANTED: ONE BEDROOM apt. (furnished) or bed-sitting room near MacDonald Park for May 1st. As inexpensive as possible. Call Jacquie, 544-6516.

TWO ROOMMATES WANTED TO share 2½ bedroom apartment at $140 a month for next year. Phone Dan at 544-9567. Also summer sublet cheap!

NEED TO FURNISH YOUR APARTMENT NEXT YEAR? Kitchen table and 4 chairs-$30.00; dining room table and 4 chairs-$30.00; couch (converts into double bed)-$30.00; chair-$10.00; small chair-$7.00; coffee table-$10.00; Philips "hifi" (used as table but only needs $5.00 needle)-$12.00; pair of tri-light lamps-$12.00; 18" black & white T.V. with stand and rabbit ears-$40.00; single bed with springs and mattress-$40.00; small table-$5.00. IF INTERESTED IN BUYING EVERYTHING OR THE MAJORITY OF ARTICLES --- TOTAL PRICE IS NEGOTIABLE! Must sell furniture by April 30th. If interested phone 544-1839 (Nancy) between 9:00-11:00 a.m. and 6:00-12:00 p.m.

ROOMMATE WANTED FOR April to Aug. to share large apartment (3 minutes from Douglas Library) with two students and a parakeet. Call Ed Smith at 546-9717.

IN THE LAND OF the never-never, this sort of thing never happened.

TWO SINGLE ROOMS IN a three bedroom apartment at 217 Colborne - up for grabs for next year. $65 a month - all utilities paid (except phone) Call 544-5715. Ask for Dave Grimes.

SUBLET: LARGE 2 bedroom, fully furnished flat. 10 minutes walk from campus. May 1st to Sept. 1st. Rent negotiable. Super garden for sunbathing. 542-4015.

BOOK EARLY AND SAVE - Travelling in Europe INTERNATIONAL STUDENT I.D., card, student railpass, car rentals, cheapest and most dependable charter flights, camping tours etc. All available now from: AOSC, 44 St. George St. Toronto 5, 416-962-8404 (The Student Travel co-op owned by your Student Council).

FRUSTRATED? Let us help you. Only $10, special group rates. Call Kathy and the Blossum Girls at 542-5453.

SUMMER APARTMENT: for sublet from May 1st until Sept. 1st, 3 bedrooms, close to campus, lake and downtown, free parking, rent negotiable. Call 544-7541, 544-7278.

TWO BEDROOM APARTMENT FOR RENT at Student Married Quarters. Available May 1st with the option to renew in September. $161 monthly. Utilities paid. Phone 548-7095 after 6 p.m.

FOUR BEDROOM HOUSE AVAILABLE for summer and next year. 268 University Ave. Phone 544-9321.

ANYONE DABBLING IN THE MYSTICAL, OCCULT, OR SUPERNATURAL, please call Bob at 544-7581. You could be doing Orientation '73 a great service.

LOST: ON MARCH 22nd in Jeffery 116, all my 2nd term history 121 notes. They were in a yellow cover with my name "Ariane Bissonnette" on it. If you have them by any chance, PLEASE let me know. I would be glad to do the same for you in such a case. I need these notes desperately for my final exam for I will be tested on them. Please phone me at 549-2145, or leave the notes at room 12, Richardson Hall.

WANTED: ROOMMATE FOR NEXT YEAR. Female - 2 bedroom flat. Preferably someone in last year or grad student. 542-4015.

10 SPEED BIKE FOR SALE. CCM Tourismo - used only three months. $100. new: asking $80. Call 542-5542.

LOST: LEE denim jacket, several weeks ago on Leonard Field. (Leonard Hall) Reward $10. phone 544-7286.

LOST: ONE SILVER COLOURED Sheaffer fountain pen, probably on Johnson Street near Division. Needed urgently for exams and lectures. If you have found it please phone - Helen 542-7772.

DOUG CHRISTENSEN, OF ARTSCI 75, invites all year-card holders to attend his sister's debut at the Bodeeshop this Friday night. Phone 544-7132 for complimentary discount vouchers.

QUEEN'S BANDS MEMBERS - past and present: The Bands will be playing several engagements during Orientation '73 and your presence would be appreciated. Please plan to be back for Signing-In on Sun. Sept. 9. We will need people in all of the Band sections to help out, expecially Cheerleaders. The events and times will be explained in summer publications of the Banner. p.s. Poster Putter: Uppers are also needed to help before the freshmen come. Phone Sue Toy 544-7852 if you can help.

STAY TUNED SUNDAY EVening for the wine and cheese and BRing your Own STeak Party at 154. The boys are getting it together .

TO ALL THE DOUBTING THOMASES, we're back together again. John and Ferelyth.

APARTMENT AVAILABLE FOR NEXT YEAR. Ideal location. Halfway between the campus and downtown. Suitable for 3-4 people. Rent $175 per month. Phone 544-5867.

WORKING OR TAKING COURSES IN KINGSTON THIS SUMMER? If you are one in number and require a summer roost, investigate the unoccupied half of large two bedroom apt. completely furnished, large living room, midway between downtown and campus. Room available has double bed, and a large study desk. Rent - about $60 a month. By the lake - 203 King St. East, 549-2856.

THAT HUGE (4 bedroom) CHEAP apartment for next year - advertized last week is still available after all. This time I'll want a deposit. Furniture for sale 544-6578.

But

MS TURNER: Don't forget. Peter Pan is vindictive as hell.

STAMP OUT FEMINISM: Contact Miss (Barefoot, pregnant, and in the kitchen) Dorothy at Elrond College.

KT, 926 C ELROND, now available for centrefold poses.

THANKS FOR THE bagel.

CAPTAIN HOOK NEVER HAD IT SO GOOD.

FOR SALE: ONE ARTSCI 75 jacket, size 42 in excellent condition. Call 549-2320 or 549-2799.

BACHELOR APARTMENT, FURNISHED, $100 all included, from May 1st to Sept. 1st, with option for next year. Close to campus 544-0667.

DO NOT DISTURB THE SLEEPING BITCHES.

EUROPE SUMMER 73 TORONTO to LONDON from $79 one way or $155 return - Take a dependable charter. Contact AOSC, 44 St. George St., Toronto 5, 416-962-8404 - or your Student Council.

ASUS ANNUALLY sponsors a SCHOLARSHIP TO ATTEND THE SUMMER SCHOOL IN PEACE RESEARCH at Grindstone Island, Portland Ont. from July 1 to 21. If interested contact Richard Meech, Secretary of ASUS. 549-0499 after 9:00 p.m. (applications must be in by April 6).

SAIL THE CARIBBEAN aboard 43' Trimaran Yacht. Special rate - $500 apiece per month. All inclusive. Write: P. O. Box 1235, Guelph, Ont. Phone (519) 821-3412.

TO SUBLET: 3 bedroom, furnished apartment at University and Brock, May to Sept. 73. Rent negotiable. Phone Rich (544-6579) or Dave (542-9135).

APARTMENT TO SUBLET May 1 to Sept. Beautiful one bedroom, split-level apt with balcony on the 12th floor of Elrond. Call Nan or Dave at 544-5264.

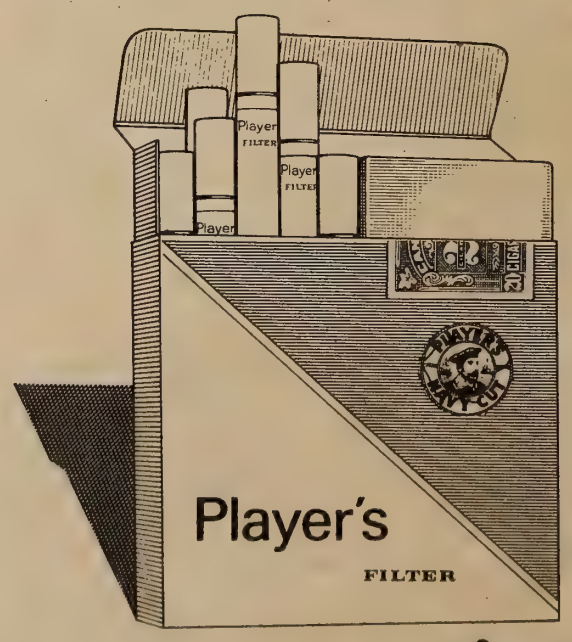
SUBLET: July and Aug. (summer school) Unfurnished one bedroom, $135 or best offer. 544-7304.

"Who loves me, will love my bitch also. ." St. Bernard of Clairvaux. . .

SUM OF MONEY found last week on campus. Call and ask for Steve to claim.

TO SUBLET FROM MAY 1st or June 1st to August 31st. One bedroom apartment, with stove, fridge, curtains, laundry facilities, storage and parking facilities, sun terrace adjoining apt. $141 per month (all utilities included) Possibility of renewing lease. 546-5954.

TO SUBLET FOR SUMMER. 1 or 2 bedroom apt, excellent condition, May-Sept. one bedroom plus living room, kitchen, bathroom, or two bedrooms plus kitchen etc. Will furnish. Rent $100 or negotiable. Contact Paul at 544-5433.



BIKE FOR SALE: Lejeune 10-speed, men's 1 year old, in excellent condition. New Simplex front derailleur. Call 544-2157.

4 BEDROOM HOUSE available (May to May lease) one block from campus on Division St. Call 544-9383.

BURNUM WOOD comes to the office next week.

KG -- what about the fone bill??????

In your own way.
In your own time.
On your own terms.
You'll take to the taste of Player's Filter.

A taste you can call your own.

Warning: The Department of National Health and Welfare advises that danger to health increases with amount smoked.

and more of em . . .

APARTMENT TO SUBLET: May to Sept. furnished. Rent negotiable. Apartment No. 12, 210 Colbourne St. Call 544-7420 or 544-7423. Three or four people.

TO SUBLET: TWO bedroom, fully furnished apt. available May 8 to Sept. 1; 319 Collingwood St.; Rent $120 per month 548-4913 or 542-9156.

COULD THERE BE ANYTHING ELSE?? to sublet May-Sept. Ultra-modern 2 bedroom apt. Completely furnished, or unfurnished, free parking, laundry services, great location. Phone 544-5474 or 546-1014.

ARTSCI 76!! Back during orientation next year? Interested in helping Orientation and your year?! Artsci 76 is looking for people to staff a coffee house that will be open throughout the week. So, if you have a few hours to spare next Sept. call Chris at 544-7034 or Jacquie at 544-8778. We'd really appreciate it!

WE WILL PAY $20 to the person who finds the house we take. Four bedrooms ... Near Queen's, available May 1. Phone 544-8426, 544-8360, 544-8622.

NEED A PLACE TO LIVE NEXT YEAR? apartment available for two girls. Two bedrooms and a kitchen. Close to campus on University Ave. Call Doug or Dave 544-7486.

MR. LIPPENCOTT (our four footed freaky associates): Felicitations on your natal anniversary. Love and kisses (XO) Dode, Sue, Craig and Doug.

"THE DOG IS TURNED to his own vomit again" . . . II Peter. II.22.

WE HAVE EXACTLY what you're looking for: a three bedroom apt. (semi-furnished) on University! If you're interested call Maggie: 544-8539, Karol An: 544-8541 or Les: 544-8528. May to Sept.

IF YOU HAVE A TRIUMPH TR4, TR4A or TR250 that you would like to sell - or something similar, call 542-7003 around 6 p.m. and ask for Alan.

3 BEDROOM APARTMENT for rent beginning May 1st. Pleasant location, within walking distance of Queen's campus and McArthur. Phone 542-7978.

WE HAVE A SPACIOUS TWO bedroom apartment to sublet from May to Sept. It is fully furnished, close to campus, and has parking facilities for two cars. Rent negotiable. For further information please call 544-0745.

ROOM AVAILABLE FOR GUY OR GIRL in house with 5 girls, 10 minutes from campus, $47 a month rent. Phone 544-0821.

HAL YOUR PAL WANTS YOU to know that he has a 3 bedroom apt. to sublet from May 1 - Aug. 31. It has a fireplace, wall to wall carpeting, picture window, and running water. The place is 278 University. Call quickly 544-1462 and ask for Rob.

THE CULTURAL COMMITTEE OF THE AMS is a catalystic and co-ordinating body. It needs people, ideas, and soup can labels. Please leave names or other information with the Campus Activities Commission of the AMS or contact Bruce Chown, 544-1462. Thanks.

DEBBIE - GET YOUR bungie up to 517 or 514 pronto .... love the phantoms.

ME AND THE LITTLE WOMAN, we gotta place to rent for da summer. It are got 2 bedrooms with beds and stuff, and indoor plumbing that hardly never backs into the tub. The windows is just great, more than half of them have glass and the steel bars almost ain't got no rust. For more info concerning this summer palace, give a call to Chuck at 542-6390. P.S. Those with communicable diseases or open sores need not apply.

GAEL GROUP 43: See you in the pub tonight (Thursday) at 9:00.

STEREO FOR SALE: Lloyds, excellent condition. AM-FM radio, 8 track and turntable $225 or best offer. Call 544-8647.

WANTED: ONE ticket for Levana Formal. Phone 544-7447 or 546-1851.

WHOEVER "BORROWED" MY WALLET FROM THE Outer Council office please return at least the ID either to the office or to Adelaide Hall by campus mail. Thanks muchly.

HEY . . .DON'T FORGET . . . Sunday is . . . april fool's day . . .

LOOKING FOR A PLACE TO LIVE NEXT YEAR? There's a furnished apartment available in May for one or two people very close to campus. Phone 542-7685 after 5:30.

YOU WOULDN'T NAME A PARKING lot after someone you like, so why not name it after someone you DON'T LIKE. Sign the PETITION!!!

FOR RENT FROM JUNE 1st. 2 bedroom apt. with garden. Cheap rent. Call 542-2157 after 6.

FRIENDS OF ROB, DOUG AND CRAIG are cordially invited to a Wake (in traditional Irish style) on Friday March 30th at 9 p.m. on Elrond 612. Guest of Honour will be Ms. Kathy Turner. Dress: Black Tie (Black shirt, Black pants . . .)

CAR -- when did you think we got italics. What do you think Morris is? Chas.

HEY KIDS OF GAEL GROUP 23: mommy Cathy and daddy Stu are getting it all together on SATURDAY night at STU's. Something informal to catch up on news since September . . . and bring your own booze. (Carolyn- that means vodka). Hope everyone can make it since Steve won't be back next year (going travelling) and Laurie won't either (leaving for university unknown). Phone the parents for more particulars . . .

SUMMER SPECIALS: SCIENCE '44 CO-OP offers you a room in any one of a number of great houses. Summer rentals are from May 1st until early in September. Stay with us a while for intersession, summer school, or an entire Kingston summer- they are great! Cheap rooms $40 and $55 per month, complete kitchens, common rooms, free parking, and ground access. For rentals call Jean Hanink at 544-3778 or write Summer Admin. Mgr., Science '44 Co-op, 395 Brock St., Kingston, Ont.

What on earth is AOSC?

Among other things, it's a little house in Toronto that is the rock bottom place to buy travel.

AOSC stands for Association of Student Councils, a non-profit organization owned and operated by the student bodies of 60 Canadian campuses.

As a student who may be thinking about going somewhere sometime, you are eligible for all kinds of special privileges and services you probably don't even know about.

You see, AOSC's principal function is to make available to students the best, most economical travel arrangements possible.

The idea is to provide a service, not make a buck.

And it shows.

You're offered the lowest dependable airfares available, on 40 charters flying between April 30 and October 5. For example — jet Toronto to London from $86 one way, or $155 return; Vancouver to London from $225 return or $125 one way.

Through AOSC's affiliation with the international network of student organizations, you have access to another 5,000 special flights originating all over the world.

All in all, this results in some fairly incredible deals.

Say, for example, you wanted to fly Toronto—Hong Kong return. A normally-routed ticket would take you westward and allow one stopover . . . for about $1,200. AOSC can fly you the long way, through Europe, with stopovers, for $600.

Such fare savings of up to 75% make your flying a dirt-cheap proposition.

AOSC also offers a wide variety of land arrangements, all specially designed for students, all ridiculous bargains.

For example, you can spend 22 days in Turkey for $235 . . . sail the Greek Islands for a week on $54 . . . or go on a 72-day camping safari from London to Katmandu, 10,000 miles, for about $400.

If you're thinking of travelling, there is more you should know about. A whole lot more: lists of student restaurants and hotels, Eurail pass deals, special car-leasing arrangements, overseas job opportunities, the International Student Card . . .

AOSC. It's your travel bureau. Use it.

Why not pick up more specific information from your student council office.

Or, contact us direct.

VANCOUVER:
AOSC,
Room 100B,
University of British Columbia,
Vancouver 8, B.C.
(604) 224-0111

TORONTO:
AOSC,
44 St. George Street,
Toronto 5, Ontario
(416) 962-8404

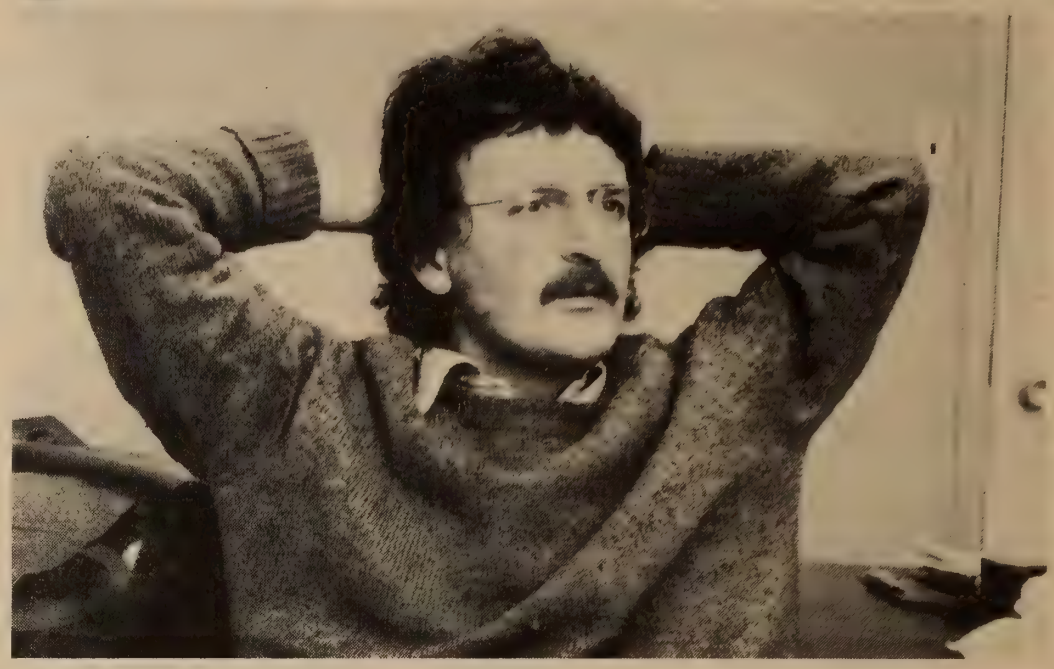
HALIFAX:
AOSC,
Dalhousie Student Union,
Dalhousie University,
Halifax, Nova Scotia
(902) 424-2054

Ian Taylor on the 60's:

A generation of losers

by Marv Bloos

Sociology is used by the powerful, to provide more data on the "down" people. The expanding academic profession of Sociology has been largely concerned to map out discontents, not with a view necessarily of ameliorating them but rather with dampening them down. For example, you may get guys going around doing surveys of the level of aspirations among Canadian Indians;the obvious implication of that is that one can thereby find what level of handout will dampen down their discontent.



Secondly, sociology has increasingly come to take on the role in social work that Freudian psycho-analysis used to occupy outside of the university. One of the most rapidly expanding professions is social work. The rapid growth in this area is not accidental or arbitrary, the government isn't creating jobs because people need jobs, but rather it's providing a whole kind of social control apparatus which has been made necessary by the structural dislocations which have occurred in the last ten years. Now sociology has taken the place of Freudian psycho-analysis precisely because you can't individualize social problems when those social problems are in fact all around you. That is, when a guy has been captured by the policy for some reason and the social worker goes and does his inquiry on the guy's household and finds it in a state of incredible decay and that there's a fantastic amount of poverty, it doesn't make too much sense for the social worker or probation officer to say to this fellow, "well, tell me what happened in your early childhood. What was your relationship like with your mother?"

Ian Taylor, formerly in the Department of Sociology at Queen's, is currently a professor of Criminology in the Faculty of Law, Sheffield, England.

He is the co-author of a recently published book, called THE NEW CRIMINOLOGY which is a critical analysis of present approaches to criminology.

In a situation where it is difficult to psychologize the vastly increasing number of social issues, sociology has been taken up by social work; and social work concerns - social control concerns - have come to dominate and direct sociology.

As for critical sociology on the other hand, I guess the starting point would be firstly, a recognition of the way in which the original question posed by sociology, i.e. how do we explain why people accept authority when people are so very different in interests and values and so forth; has gotten distorted, particularly in the American translation, to read, how do we get people to accept authority? The second question is, how do we wrench what's called sociology from the hands of practitioners? That is, from those people who read a few books on inmate subcultures and, then attempt to apply their knowledge in the reality situations confronted in a penitentiary. - We've got to say, no, you're not doing sociology, what you're doing is social control and you're using something you call sociology to legitimize that practice.

"The purpose of my book is to make an aggressive grab on reality, rather than merely to take a snap shot of present society."

We've got to look at the adequacies of general social theory, whether written by academic sociologists or half-baked journalists and say, "How adequately do those theories explain what is going on in the society now, in the way that it's dislocated, and so on"and more importantly we must ask how far they can tell us what to do about the problems in the present situation? Do they tell that what we need is more sociology of the penitentiaries, more sophisticated techniques of controlling the subordinate, or do they tell us something abut human liberation, i.e., Man being able to transcend the kinds of constraints and repressions that he faces on a day to day basis? Any kind of social investigation that is not relevant to the task of transcending present social arrangements or creating asituation where human diversity can be institutionalized, that is, can be seen as normal, is not really a relevant sociology at all.

Our society is out of control; its dislocated - so what do you do in a situation like this? Well, you try to regenerate a normative set of social arrangements in some way so that man and his needs are in tune with the whole social arrangement. But the individual head politics of our time i.e., creating theory that is relevant to the kind of individual anxieties that we all experience in everyday life - this kind of individaul head politics is turning people off to the idea that their own happiness and their own contents are somehow related to social arrangements. Individual head politics of our time, academic or otherwise, are saying, "it's in your head, it's in terms of reflection and sensitivity," and stuff like that, as though those particular sentiments were in some separate social reality, which they're not.

I see his role as one of trying to engage in a kind of cultural exercise with whats left of the opposition - maybe it's a lost cause anyway - but maybe he should be trying to engage the left in the whole debate about the culture of our society, right through to questions which will arise if we move beyond material demands to quality of life demands. Are we talking about things like making psychiatrists available to everybody; or are we talking about creating social arrangements where that will be unnecessary? From that question we could go to more central questions such as, do we need to create whole categories of people labelled mentally ill, do we need to create categories of people labelled criminal, do we need to create whole categories of people, that because of physical attributes are labelled, hunchbacks, fat, ugly and so on. We have to bring to the fore the whole set of cultural queries that will be involved in making a social revolution which will be relevant and meaningful to all pepple.

In our attempt to show that various problems are arising as a result of the criminal nature of society as a whole, radical sociologists are presently engaged in debunking the myths concerning the youth culture, the threat from immigrant labour, or from communists, the left, those labelled criminal and so forth, and they are trying to point up the real nature of society's ills! For example, 97 per cent of people in jail in Britain and probably Canda, too, are petty property offenders from the working class. Now one could demonstrate in action, in propaganda and polemic, that that situation results in part or in whole from the criminogenic nature of the system as such, and it is the working class as such, (by virtue of their being in the working class) who are most clearly affected by the ill-effects of the system, and this, not because they are particularly responsible for their position but because they happen to be less immune from the process of the law than are other segments and classes of our society.

To point up these kinds of problems, especially in the area of Criminology, I have co-authored a book, recently pubished, the purpose of which is to make an aggressive grab on reality, rather than merely to take a snapshot of the present society. Our concern is to point up through the medium of our research in criminology, the ways in which the important philisophical questions of our time are being rendered technical by an increasingly technocritized society. Our discontents are being rendered technical and de-politicized, and the whole political content of our personal discontents is being diffused by specialists, by experts, and increasingly we are being asked to accept on trust that they know best.

As against that, The New Criminology, is saying, no, you can know whats best for you, not through individual privatized reflection, but by knowing whats been said over the centuries by the great social thinkers who've engaged in social practise about the nature of industrial society, and what could happen to industrial society under certain sets of circumstances and political conditions, and seeing if there's anything that they say that is relevant to our times.

As to who will lead the battle against the increasingly technocratic society and prevent its creeping encroachment in the areas of our personal and political-philisophical lives, it's hard to say. A large number of young people were being trained in the institutions of learning during the social and political upheavals of the 60's, which culminated in t1968 and it's only a matter of time till we can see the effects of the them polical climate on that generation.

The possibility in North America today of the emergence of new political formations, I would think is minimal, but this is what is required ultimately. Unless the long march through the institutions in the 60's, unless all the critical work that was being done on the various sets of academic popular knowledge resulted in new political formations, then there is no hope for change, no chance for a proper social re-generation, there is no chance of anything other than a repressive solution to our present discontents. Eventually what it boils down to is the emergence of new political parties which can hand out some set of meanings to the divisions and disruptions in society and which will either give rise to votes (if parliamentary action is still appropriate; or to collective action, regenerative social action of alternative kinds - presumably a revolutionary party. I don't see one of those on the horizeon; I see a lot of left functions scattering around in the undergrowth, but I don't see the emergence of a party that is relevant to social regeneration as distinct from economic regeneration. Until that emerges the people of our generation, that is the generation that started with the Who, the Stones, and a general disillusionment with social democracy - our generation- will probably go down in history as a generation of losers. But if we are going to lose, let's go down well, let's produce the cultural critique in the meantime, let's not retreat into ourselves in the kind of private, elitest middle class way, and contemplate on a perennial everyday basis the nature of our individual discontents. Let's recognize that those individual discontents are culturally and socially generated and do the critique properly, whether it is on Criminality or on being an artist, but let's do the cultural critique and if we lose, O.K., so we lose!

Mr. Taylor will be presenting a public lecture titled "Revolution 68 - Nostalgia 73", in John Watson Hall, Room 517 on Monday, March 26, 1973, at 7:30 p.m. All are welcome.

Members of the community who would like to meet informally with Mr. Taylor are invited to attend a social gathering for this purpose on Wednesday, April 4, 1973, after 8:30 p.m. at 104 Queen's Crescent.

McGill Chamber Orchestra

Brott Family provides a very good evening

by Michael J. Hodson

Last Friday was a family affair at Grant Hall, as Alexander Brott conducted the McGill Chamber Orchestra (including Mrs. Brott on cello) in a program which included Haydn's D major cello concerto op. 101 performed by their talented son Denis.

It is always exciting for an audience to meet a new Musician of world-calibre, who also happens to be only 20, and Canadian! Denis Brott came to Kingston with impeccable credentials, having been a pupil of Janos Starker, Leonard Rose, Zara Nelsova, and Gregor Piatigorsky, and, I might add, having adopted some of the platform mannerisms of each! No doubt he will grow out of those; for in the Haydn concerta, he showed us indisputable evidence of a strong individual talent.

The playing was technically flashy, beautifully toneful, and passionate. The phrasing was smooth, even in the difficult first movement, and the playing in the cadinzes was appropriately improvisational. One could have asked for more control of the upper register, more tonal contrast, and an over-view of this work which so easily breaks into whiplash technical lines - but these are flaws of enthusiasm only. It is refreshing for me to be able to say the most important thing about Denis Brott, which sets him well apart from most performers today: "Here is a most thoughtful and soul-searching cellist who can climb the technical heights without ever losing sight of the emotional depth." The orchestra fully lived up to the challenge of accompanying such a performer.

In fact, I was pleasantly surprised at the playing of the orchestra, which has continued steadily to improve over the 6 years I have know them. In spite of their name - McGill Chamber Orchestra - this is a group not of students but of professionals, which presents a full season of highly acclaimed concerts at the Place des Arts in Montreal each year. Their serious and skilled music-making has earned them a devoted and also sophisticated audience. And their playing on this occasion seemed to infuse their Kingston audience with the same rapt attentiveness and good spirits I recall in Montreal.

The concert closed with the D major Divertimento K. 136 which Mozart wrote at the age of 16. It was gracefully and incisively - even stridently - played. But, frankly, I find this piece rather irritatingly anticlimactic after the superb music earlier in the program. Because, for me, the high points of the evening came in the other two works: the Divertiments of Strings of Bela Bartok and the Concerto Grosso op. 3, no. 8 by Vivaldi.

The Bartok, written in a mere 2 weeks in 1939, is somewhat of a problematic work. To us nowadays, it sounds alternately like cartoon music, music for a cowboy chase, and potted-palm chamber music from the Ritz Hotel played in nightmarish distortion.But then we remember that Bartok originated such effects! And to be aware of such pressures does not remove the validity of the work, especially when it is given such a stunning reading as Mr. Brott's. I really don't remember a more soal-searing performance of the work. The brutality, the despair, the claustrophobia, the whining self-pity, the merciless self-persecution - they were all there in this beautifully contrasted reading. And because they were, they put the burlesque elements in perspective, as the involuntary twitchings of a soul in pain. I don't feel this is one of Bartok's better works, but I do feel it gave every ounce it had this time! A really exhausting experience.

And what of the Vivaldi which opened the program? Oh, my goodness what a pleasant surprise! We are so supersaturated with Vivaldi these days that I never thought I'd ever find him refreshing again. But here was incisive solo work by violinists Yaela Hertz and Morry Kennerman, and a superb lush orchestral tone, not to mention a fine taut performance of the slow movement. There are many orchestras which can dazzle us in quick playing, but how few can give us such sustained tension in a very slow movement!

So it was a very good evening! It was wonderful to hear such playing and to be among old musical friends again - friends, I might add, who don't allow themselves friendly musical eccentricities! The encores were a fast movement and a slow, from concerti grossi by Handel and Vivaldi. I think that after Yaela Hertz's moving solo work in the Vivaldi encore, not a few of us went purring home!

Lambdays

Thursday, March 29

7:30 pm - Discussion on the topic "Is there any hope for tomorrow's world?" Stirling 412B.

7:30 pm - Drama Department presents Chronicles 17 - Second Degree. Ian Elliot. Room 102, Old Arts Building.

8:00 pm - The Kingston Waffle presents the 2nd of 3 public lectures - Quebec; Stanley Ryerson, Universite de Quebec. International Centre, Lower Lounge, Students' Union.

5:30 pm-Christian Science Organization holds meets every Thursday, Room 210, Kingston Hall. Open to all.

5:45 - Ban Righ Fireside. Kirk Elliott, Lute and Jean Callum, vocal; coffee and desert. Ban Righ Common Room.

7:30 pm - Medical Sciences Lecture Series : Digitalis: Clinical Implications of Recent Advances Arising from the Measurement of Blood Levels". By Doctor Thomas W. Smith. Etherington Hall. Aud.

Friday, March 30

7:30 pm - Drama Department presents Chronicle 17 Second Degree - Ian Elliot. Room 102, Old Arts Building.

8:30 pm - Concert by Queen's Collegium Musicum. Grant Hall.

Saturday, March 31

9:00 pm - 1:00 am - Levana Formal Committee presents Brigadoon in Lower Vic. Featuring Octavian. Dress formal.

Sunday, April 1

10:30 am - Dunning Auditorium Folk Mass followed by coffee and donuts at Newman House.

2:30 pm - Kingston Symphony Association presents final concert of the season. Soloists: Adriaan Filius - trumpet, Valery Watts - piano, Rhoda Pendleton - soprano. Grand Theatre. The Kingston Choral Society will also participate in a tribute to Ralph Vaughan Williams on the centenary of his birth singing Toward the Unknown Region.

4:00 pm - Eucharistic Celebration. Queen's Theological Hall, Faculty Lounge. (2nd floor).

7:00 pm - Quebec Today - it's relationship with the Anti-imperialist struggle in the world. A discussion with Leandre Bergeson, author of "The History of Quebec: A Patriote's Handbook." Second Floor Common Room. Students' Union.

8:00 pm - Professor Ami Bravdo (visiting Prof. from Hebrew University, Jeruselam) presents Massada -a slide presentation. Hillel House.

8:30 pm - Charles Lloyd in concert at McArthur Auditorium. The AMS Concert committee presents the final concert of the year. Come on out for an evening of jazz. Buses are free with your green card between the Union and McArthur. Tickets are only $1.50 with concert card, $2.50 general admission. Tickets available in the John Orr Room, House of Sounds and at the door.

Thursday, April 5

9:00 pm - Department of Film Studies presents Strangers on a Train. (Alfred Hitchcock, 1951). Ellis Hall.

Thursday, April 12

8:00 pm - The Kingston Waffle presents a public lecture. Resources and the decline of manufacturing industries in Canada. Jim Laxer, York University. International Centre, Lower Lounge, Students' Union.

Off Campus

9:00 pm - The Domino Theatre's entry in the Eastern Ontario Drama League festival presents "Lock Up Your Daughters" based on Henry Fielding's "Rape Upon Rape." At the Domino Theatre, Thursday, March 29, Friday, March 30, Saturday, March 31 and Sunday, April 1. Running next weekend as well. On Tuesday, April 3 there is a performance at the Grand Theatre. Lyrics are by Lionel Bart, Music by Laurie Johnson. Adapted from the original by Bernard Miles. Tickets are $2.50 $1.75 for students on Sunday only. Tickets are at Mahoods and the Domino Theatre.

At the Grand Theatre the Eastern Ontario Drama League Festival '73 will present a series of plays:

Wed. April 4 - 8:00 pm - Brockville Theatre Guild presents Christopher Fry's "Ring Round the Moon."

Thurs. April 5 - 8:00 pm - Cornwall Little Theatre presents "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown."

Fri. April 6 - 8:00 pm - Lindsay Little Theatre presents "A Time to Reap."

Saturday, April 7 - 8:00 pm - John Osborne's "The Entertainer."

Theatres

Capitol - The Godfather

Hyland - Save the Tiger

Odeon - Love Camp Seven and Nine Ages of Nakedness

Pubs

Commodore - The Jerry and Joanne Show

401 Inn - Halequin

Manor - Orvil Prophet, backed up by "Jack Bailey and the Bailiffs."

Seaway Pub - Muriel Day and the Night Squad.

March 30, 31, and April 1. The University of Toronto is hosting the Canadian Intercollegiate Bridge Championship this year. Please contact Hart House at 928-5361 for further information or just arrive.

CFRC am-fm Highlights

CFRC & CFRC-FM, 1490 and 91.9

THURSDAY March 29th

7:30 THE GOON SHOW from the BBC. Tonight: "The Canal".

FRIDAY March 30th

10:00 "THE FABULOUS BEACH BOYS". "Nocturne" presents a four-hour look at The Beach Boys -- from the Surf Kings of the sixties to one of the most experimental groups of the seventies.

SATURDAY March 31st

8:00 MUSIC CANADA The Orford String Quartet plays music by Beethoven.

SUNDAY April 1st

9:00 a.m. SUNDAY MORNING on Queen's radio 1490. Good music of all kinds .
MUSICAL PANORAMA on CFRC-FM, 91.9 The best of the classics

1973 SCM SUMMER WORK PROJECTS

deadline for applications: April 7th for info contact Paul Michaud 549-2387

Books

"Miriam of Queen's"

by Chris Redmond

Anne of Green Gables never came to Queen's, but Miriam Cambell did.

Who?

Miriam Campbell is the heroine of a novel very much like the story of Anne.Miriam of Queen's, by Lilian Vaux MacKinnon, published by McClelland and Stewart in 1921, tells the story of a girl who comes from Ottawa to Queen's College and eventually meets her true love. As a novel Miriam is probably best forgotten, but it does contain bits which shed an interesting light on Queen's as it was just before the turn of the century.

Miriam joins in chanting the Oil Thigh, for instance, and in singing the famous old Queen's song about eh "old Ontario strand". The students wear tricolor ribbons, and somebody has an athletic Q. King Street, Barrie Street and Deacon Street are mentioned – but so is a road called Artz Street which apparently leads across the Lower Campus, about where the tennis courts are now; surely there has never really been a street there.

One of the most spirited chapters describes a session of the AMS Court, under its old name, the Concursus Iniquitatis et Virtutis. Things seem to have been more high-spirited in those days. The accused is just being sentenced (amid great glee) to be publicly spanked, when the doors are broken down by a charge of engineers bent on rescuing him. And they shout their war-cry:

Hail! Hail! The gang's all here!
Steam drills and concentrators,
Gold and iron ore,
Science Hall forever!
Queen's forever more!

"Science Hall" was Carruthers Hall, the only science building Queen's had until 1902. Indeed, it had very few buildings of any kind; Arts life in Miriam, as in reality, was concentrated in Theological Hall.

Several times the novel mentions the principal at the time, the Rev. Dr. George Munro Grant, who was dearly beloved during his long tenure and well remembered after it. In one passage, the university is thrilled when the Duke of York visits to present Grant with an honour "from the King" – the rank of Companion of the Order of St. Michael and St. George. In another scene, based on what really did happen, the student body goes to the Kingston railway station en masse to welcome Grant home from his famous, year-long trip around the world, which he undertook partly for the sake of his health and partly to publicize and establish the unity of the English-speaking Commonwealth. And over and over again in the book, the students sing the ditty with which Grant was honoured all the time he was at Queen's, and which he loved:

Rule, rule, Geordie!
Geordie rules the boys!
Oh, what a happy man is Geordie!

It was in honour of Grant, as the book mentions, that students and friends of the university raised the money to construct an auditorium and tower,which were attached to Grant's own last project, a second arts building which was named Kingston Hall.

There are many other Queen's details, and one of them is difficult to understand. Half a dozen times the book mentions "the Minerva cloak-room" and once a girl is called "the Minerva president". But Minerva has never had anything particular to do with Queen's. The goddess for whom the women's society was named was a much less famous one, Levana, the goddess of childbirth. (And the ladies cloakroom was named after the society).The error is a puzzling one – was the author truly absent-minded, or did she perhaps change that one detail because the name of Levana would not be familiar to her readers?

A present-day Queen's student would find some of her other details quite familiar, and others bewildering: an indication of how much Queen's has changed since the days of Principal Grant. Things have altered. It is probably a good many years since theology students have chanted this yell in the hallways:

Divinity, Divinity,
Faith, Hope and Charity,
Swallow-tail coat and poverty.

'I Don't Do Nothing Live'

BY CROSS R. LEGS AND HOPEFUR DeBEST
(An exclusive interview special to the Journal)

On March 22, 1973, at the Cabaret sponsored by WUSC in the basement of the International Centre, Queen's University was treated to a performance of the ancient art of female impersonation, in the person of Mr-Miss Fran Francis.

Female impersonation dates back seven hundred years to the ancient Noh drama of Japan. In the East, female impersonators are the superstars of their dramatic culture. In the West, unfortunately, this art is not treated with the same respect. Whereas in Japan, the impersonator spends his whole life studying the physicalization and psychology of womankind, in the West it often appears that the impersonator is just a man who enjoys performing in women's clothes. The end result becomes a gross caricature of a woman which is insulting to the female members of the audience.

In an interview, Mr-Miss Francis stated that he was born in 1927 in New Haven Connecticut and began his stage career at the age of thirteen as a fill-in for singer Patti Page in Quinsey Mass. with the Transport Co. Band. "From then on, I had it made", he stated.

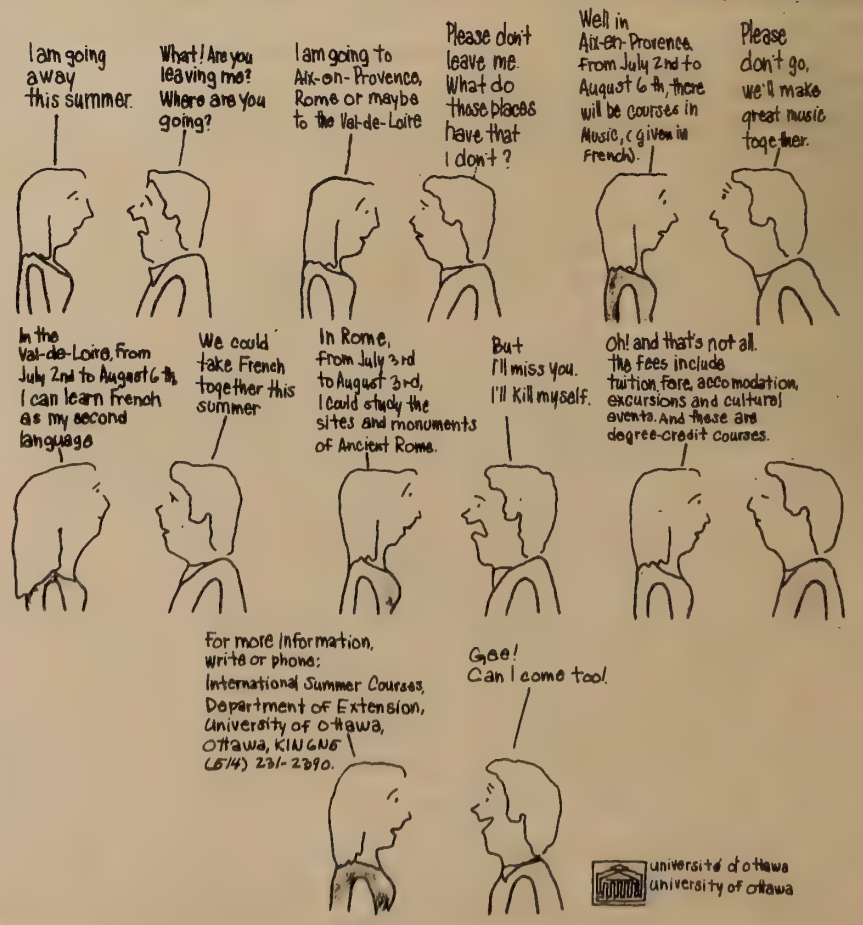
His family moved to Kingston in 1961 and he joined them from Boston last year when his mother was about to undergo open heart surgery in Kingston. Mr.-Miss Francis works as a chef by daytime and we were given to believe that he entertains at the Capri Hotel in the evening.

Mr.-Miss Francis specializes in impersonations of Connie Francis, Shirley Bassey, Barbra Streisand and Rusty Warren. On Thursday night, however, Mr.-Miss Francis was unable to perform any live numbers due to union restrictions.However, he did perform one pantomime number to Barbra Streisand's "I'm the greatest star."

Mr.-Miss Francis' main duty was as the M.C. for the Cabaret which consisted largely of amateur folk singers. In contrast with the self-indulgence and lack of stage presence of many of the Queen's performers, Mr.-Miss Francis oozed professionalism and slickness. With her repertoire of blue jokes and her cloying sexuality, she easily captured the attention of the audience. Such lines as "You think I'm a fruit . . .well . . this is the whole orchard!"were mild compared to the majority of her repertoire. Criticisms and cat-calls from the audience were completely and clearly undercut by her frank and jocular remarks about the nature of her own perversity. As we have said, many of the Queen's performers lacked style (many were downright hostile to a talkative audience whose noise was unavoidable due to the careless arrangements of seating), but Chris George and his banjo-playing friend were clearly the highlight of the Queen's performers.

After midnight, the show descended into decadent chaos allowing certain members of the audience to scramble onstage to perform their own weary and besotted talents.

Kinnear d'Esterre has



The Tender Trap Diamond

You picked him out. And campaigned to capture his heart. It worked and you both won. He wants to do it right with an engagement ring. We show our prestige collection and advise you with your choice. The diamond gleams with rich beauty and clarity. And he beams at leaving bachelorhood.

KINNEAR D'ESTERRE
JEWELLERS
168 PRINCESS STREET
KINGSTON, ONTARIO

"The Grand Tour" by the University of Ottawa

Domino Theatre presents

"Lock Up Your Daughters" - - TONIGHT!

by Sandy Naiman

Perhaps the best way to capture the spirit of the Domino Theatre's entry in the Eastern Ontario Drama League Festival '73 is to relate a short vignette told the play's adaptor, Bernard Miles.

"The title Lock Up Your Daughter came out of the blue. Obviously Rape Upon Rape was the most appealing, but this was considered a little too warm for the city. One day the composer Anthony Hopkins came down to the site to have a look round and I offered him a glass of wine. 'No thanks,' he said, 'I don't drink.' I offered him a cigarette - 'No thanks, I don't smoke . . . but Lock Up Your Daughters!' "

It is just this kind of lustiness that Mr. Miles adored in the original novel he happened to fall upon in a second hand bookshop back in 1952, by the author of Tom Jones, Henry Fielding. The word "rape" caught his eye and after reading the book, which was first published in 1730 he scripted it and decided it would make a viable musical. He found a composer, Laurie Johnson and a lyricist, Lionel Bart, who would go on to become renown for his music and lyrics for "Oliver", and the transformation from novel to musical was complete.

The Domino production is most definitely a Canadian premiere, but Director Val Hirschfield, who directed the EODL Festival winner last year, Oh, What A Lovely War, mentioned during a rehearsal earlier this week that Lock Up Your Daughters was performed in Boston several years ago. However, it has not been performed elsewhere to her knowledge.

This is rather difficult to understand. The team of Johnson and Bart has given this restoration period piece a varied score, from charmingly precocious ballads to broadly raucous show stoppers. Mr. Bart's lyrics are clever, compact and beautiful counterpointed in several numbers. The music is well integrated into the plot of the show and reflects its over-all mood.

However, Lock Up Your Daughters is not the kind of musical North American audiences are accustomed to. It is smaller and more intimate, more like a play with song rather than the traditional musical fare.

The music tempers the entire play with the rakish aura of Restoration England, for it is a time when a woman is idolized for her beauty and sexual naivity and a man adores playing the game of winning her. The pursuit was just as important then, as the finish and the more complicated the scheme, the more precious the prize.

This year's cast includes some of Kingston's most well-known theatrical personalities: Annabelle McCullough, Deryck Hazel, Ken Smith, Sheila Tetlow and Gerry Millar. There are several new faces in the cast: Norman Campbell and Robin Routely.

Aside from Kingston's entry, the Brockville Theatre Guild will present Christopher Fry's Ring Round the Moon, the Cornwall Little Theatre will perform You're A Good Man, Charlie Brown, which was one of the Tent Theatre's summer offerings, in which Mr. Campbell starred. A new Canadian play will be presented by the Lindsay Little Theatre, A Time To Reap and the Deep River Players will be performing John Osborne's The Entertainer.

Festival '73 marks the EODL's 40th anniversary and Kingston's 20th year of membership. The EODL, which has been linked with the Dominion Drama Festival since its inception in 1933 is now under the jurisdiction of a new group, Theatre Ontario, and Theatre Ontario is part of the DDL - Theatre Canada, which is what the Dominion Drama Festival has been called since 1971.

For this year's festival, which runs from April 3 to April 7 at the Grand Theatre, nightly at 8:00 o'clock, Michael Sinelnikoff will be adjudicating. Mr. Sinelnikoff is a graduate of the Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts in London, England and has been associated with CBC Halifax and now CBC Montreal for almost 15 years. He has directed and produced plays for television and professional theatre in Montreal as well as being involved in community theatre festivals himself.

Mrs. Pat Beharriall, who has sat on the board of the Domino for many years and who has been closely aligned to its festival activities said "There is always a tremendous amount to be learnt from festival work. It gives us an opportunity to see other people's work, an opportunity we don't often get".

The Festival '73 winner will be invited to perform at the Theatre Ontario festival in St. Catharines between May 19 and May 26. Unfortunately there will be no Theatre Canada festival this year.

- macpherson

Ken Smith and Annabelle McCullough in foreground, Sheila Tetlow and Deryck Hazel (behind) in a scene from "Lock Up Your Daughters".

A Satisfying Student Recital

by Merle Bolick

I confess to having been late at the concert Thursday night of the Queen's University Wind and Choral ensembles. I was outside Grant Hall when the first fanfare-chords of Altenburg's Concerto for Clarini and Timpani were heard. Ably conducted by fourth-year student Howard Alexander, the group carried on admirably after I entered the hall.

Thereupon, director Duane Bates gave the trumpets a rest while thirteen assorted woodwinds and French horns were coaxed through a performance of Mozart's Serenade No. 10 (Gran Partita) K. 261. There was nothing wrong with their interpretation; there were a few rhythmic confusions perhaps, but there was good work all round, from the double reeds notably. The group's main problem seemed to be a belief in safety in numbers, which caused the tutti passages to be spirited and confident, while other parts seemed to fade away.

However, I did not go to the concert to hear Mozart or Altenburg, but to hear a full concert wind ensemble, so perhaps my impatience was telling also. I kind of like saxophones and trombones and things, so I may be forgiven if I show a prejudice in favour of the Schoenberg Theme and Variations which was the most exciting work on this portion of the programme. It gave the whole band challenging work to do, and it was fascinating for the audience with its constant shifts of key and mode and its colourful and well observed dynamics.

The second half of the concert was given over to the Queen's University Choral Ensemble, under the direction of Denise Narciss-Mair who demanded and got great things from her vast group. The standards, "The Old Mayflower" and "She's Like the Swallow" (as arranged by Harry Somers in Five Songs of the Newfoundland Outports), started this section not just nationalistically but musically. The songs themselves may be long on "diddles" and "swallows" but the choir proved themselves capable of handling these works with an avidity that kept up audience interest.

Then followed the Missa Brevis of Zoltan Kodaly. Organists Paul Harding and Mark Sirett did a great job on their side, and the vocal ranges of all sections were taken to their utmost limits from lowest bassland in the "Sanctus" to arid soprano reaches in the "Kyrie" and "Agnus Dei". The sopranos showed a surprising ability to hit the high and dry notes but then relaxed and went unaccountably flat shortly thereafter. All in all however, it was an effective if ambitious performance, and I would rather see the chorus taxed than bored.

Handel's Zadok the Priest ended the concert confidently and joyously. I don't know what Handel would hav done if the words "forever" and "Hallelujah" had been delted from his vocabulary. If this anthem had not been written it would have deprived the tenors of a chance to show off. As it was, everyone went home happy Thursday night.

Queen's Musician wins scholarship

by Colleen Jensen

The Bachelor of Music programme here at Queen's is proud of fourth-year Eugene Laszkiewicz, who placed first in the Canadian Accordion Competitions held at the King Edward Hotel in Toronto on the 24th and 25th of March. This honour includes a $100 scholarship and a trip, including accommodations, to Vichy, France in September of this year.

After only three years formal instruction on the instrument, Gene captured the top award by demonstrating both his technical and musical talents. The pieces performed were: Sonatina Piccola by Torbjorn Lundquist (test piece), Monologue by Gerhard Wuensch (Canadian composer), Sonata in F, Hoboken 16 No. 23 by F. Joseph Haydn, Four Sounds for Accordian by Mojcic Oojcic, and The Italian Concerto by J. S. Bach.

Gene competed against twelve other performers from all over Canada, including Gloria Masaro and Joe Petric, from the Music Department here at Queen's. The inspiration behind this and other competitions in Canada, and the driving force in contemporary Canadian accordian study is Torontonian Joe Macerollo. Mr. Macerollo is a highly competent musician in his own right, and the teacher of all the accordian majors in our department. For the past ten years he has worked tirelessly to elevate the instrument and its repertoire to a level where it can be seriously accepted by Canadian composers, musicians, and the public at large. The instrument Mr. Macerollo is promoting and teaching is the chromatic free-bass accordion, and not the polka oom-pah-pah type so familiar to most of us.

The winner is a twenty-three year old, soft-spoken native of Oshawa. He is not only one of the top academic students in the program, but a versatile musician on bassoon, piano, percussion, and of course, accordion. His university career has been interspersed with performances of top calibre, from classical music to jazz to rock.

Future plans for Mr. Laszkiewicz include studying accordion and theory for his Master's degree from the University of Toronto, after which he hopes to go to Denmark to study his instrument with the top performers there. Next year he plans to translate A. Mirek's book on the accordion and its history from the original Russian to English. "The problem now though," remarked Eugene, "is to prepare for France, both psychologically and technically. I'm looking forward to meeting accordionists from other countries who share a love for the instrument and a desire to do away with the double-standards that have been forced on all of us. We want to be taken seriously. Many accordionists in our country aren't aware of contemporary developments in the instrument - its pedagoguey, its facility, and its repertoire."

In the Second Degree

University Gets Third Degree

by Sandy Naiman

It's that time of year again!

And do you ever wonder how the people at the top feel when exam and essay season rolls around? when the teaching stops and the toting begins? When students begin to get that haggard look and the professors start looking better than ever?

Well to get a real look at the bureaucracy and those who manipulate it, I highly recommend a visit to the office of President Douche, head of a medium sized university not far from here. Here the true workings at the nerve centre of this university begin and end, the top decisions are formulated and future plans are made. Then a crisis develops. A not-so-young alumnus barges in to demand his 19 year old fees for an education that has proven impotent in his pursuit of a job and his subsequent millions.

Pierre Elliott McNasty, this not-so-young alumnus, decides that an examination to prove his stupidity and secure him his fees will be the only way to handle the problem and so President Douche summons the trusty staff of Duchess U. to administer the rigourous test.

I hesitate to tell you any more about this charming little farce now showing at the studio theatre of the Drama Department. To give away too much of the plot would spoil the ticklish experience of a first hand look at the action that results when the test is administered.

But I can congratulate Director Rod Robertson and his cast for drawing upon their outlandish and wildly comic resources to sketch the colourful comic strip that unravels before our eyes. The metaphor is perfectly counterpointed by a set which includes sketches in chalk of the typical executive office appointments, clock, window, books, globe, etc.

The entire production rings with the broad, clownish almost hysterical pitch that seems to hit students at this time of year. This makes the humour in the Second Degree double edged. It is with a mixture of pleasure and pain that you take the time out from the library to whip over to the Studio for the half hour required to watch the play. The activities therein are like a Mad Hatter's dream when compared to the material that you know awaits you in the bowels of the Douglas.

Nevertheless, the pleasure anaethesizes the pain. The performances and the script provide a perfect excuse for your miniature rendezvous.

President Douche, the proud patriarch of D.U. is played by Richard Johnson, who both physically and mentally moulds himself into the part of the gamesome, readily intimidated head of a big, bustling academic family. He mixes pedantry and play in his relationship with his secretary, Miss Earmuff and the other members of his staff, to create a tight and succinct satiric sketch of the victimized bureaucrat who resorts to pitching paper airplanes into a waste basket as his prime pastime.

His staff includes, Dean Praecox, of Psychology, Professor Hypotenuse of Mathematics, Professor Hindsight of History (an American) and Headlock, the lamebrained, dim-witted football coach. They all help toflesh-in the heavily caricatured portrait of modern day university life which author Ian Elliot drew in his original version of the play, fashioned for an American school and adapted to our Canadian one.

Marjorie Woodbridge impresses me with her versatility. From her lusty portrayal of Audrey in As You Lke It earlier this year to her overtly masculine creation of the hardened, canine-like Praecox, she has made a complete transformation. Her bull dog stance, her gravelly voice, her tough cigarette toking style texture her character superbly.

And the animal imagery does not end here. Janice Irvine's aging and prudish Hypotenuse is exceedingly bird-like. Her body vibrates with the quick, sporadic movements of a chicken and her constant squinting and blinking, her hunched posturing suggest a world eternally enclosed by the coop of sterile scholarship.

This is Irvine at her best.

Stan Willington, as the puck plucking coach makes the hackneyed stereotype of the idiot athlete, energetic and fresh. David Bowker, as the American historian, although the most restrained of the four, is strangely appropriate in tempering the high flown farce of his colleagues.

And Glen Piper, as McNasty himself, is somehow horribly adorable in his educated bewilderment.

I feel that I'm jilting you in giving you so little information about the action of this play. But on the other hand I would also be jilting you if I gave you any more. All I can say is that I saw it twice in dress rehearsal and then again with an audience on opening night and it still struck me as funny. It is so delightful, in fact, that even when sitting alone, without the contagious stimulation of an audience, I laughed out loud.

The Tuesday night performance did suggest a hint of nervousness and unfamiliarity with a somewhat reticent audience. But as the play gained momentum this reticence dropped away and the performers seemed to relax and enjoy their inane behavior.

By the time you read this the cast of the Second Degree will be seasoned to the giggles and guffaws that accompany the numerous slapstick sight gags and ridiculous stage business they play.

And you will still have a chance to run over to the Drama department and pick up your free ticket for either tonight's or tomorrow night's performance.

Furthermore, if you do, you will more than likely have yourself a good hearty laugh at the totally unsubtle roasting that university life takes.

Harpsichord Recital Wednesday

The Music Department of Queen's University will present, on Wednesday 28 March, in Dunning Hall Auditorium at 8:00 p.m., a Harpsichord Recital by Mrs. Joyce Redekop-Fink.

Canadian born Mrs. Fink, a three-time Canada Council award recipient, has studied under Irmgard Lechner in Detmold, Germany, as well as with Ralph Kirkpatrick, the internationally renowned American harpsichordist. Mrs. Redekop-Fink now resides in Berlin and pursues her career on both sides of the Atlantic. Frequently heard as soloist on the CBC, she has performed extensively in Canada, Great Britain, Germany and Switzerland, and was one of the artists selected to perform at the opening of the National Arts Centre in Ottawa in 1969.

Wednesday's program will consist of harpsichord music by Rameau, Couperin, Bach and Scarlatti: all leading composers in the "Golden Age of Harpsichord Music", in the first half of the 18th Century.

The twentieth century, which has seen a renewal of interest in harpsichord music, has produced a number of significant compositions by important composers, including "Six Absences pour le clavecin" written in 1961 by Hans Werner Henze, to be heard in this program.

This Recital, the next to the last to be presented by the Music Department in the current academic year, is open to the public without charge.

unclassifieds

THE FOLLOWING IS A LIST OF RUNNERS-UP for the hotly contested MCP AWARD: Greg Le B-35; Ian N-27; Prof Finlayson-26; Brucie T-25; Ted B-16; Jim R-15; H.G.-12; John A.M.-9; Walter P (not Palmer)-6; Lyn W-4; Kiloran G-3; J.J.-3; Jennifer G-2; BMOC-2; plus more than 70 others with one vote each.

IMPERATIVE: GAEL GROUP 23. Please meet in front of Summerhill at 7:30 p.m. for an important meeting: Big Boogie planned, Love Cathy and Stu.

MOTORCYCLE 1966 305 cc Honda Hawk Good condition $175.00. Must sell. Call 548-8861.

TO SUBLET FOR THE SUMMER: 4-5 bedroom house, Alfred and Brock. $175. or negotiable. 544-2383.

TRAVELLING THIS SUMMER? Get quick quality service on passport pictures from Photo Image, 33 Brock street. If you bring one or more friends, you'll all get 20 per cent off our regular low prices. Same rates apply on job application or ID pictures too. Call us at 546-7770 for an appointment today.

ARE YOU GETTING MARRIED this spring? Let Photo Image record the things YOU want to remember. Our rates are competitive and we guarantee quality results. Call us at 546-7770 or drop by the studio at 33 Brock st.

HOW WOULD YOU LIKE A back stairs for the maid or an ironing room? This and much more in a fabulous 8 bedroom house to sublet May to Sept. Room by room or as a unit. $45 a room a month. 5 minutes from campus. Call 544-8299.

PAULETTE- your typing was beautiful.

●●●ASUS annually sponsors a scholarship to attend the SUMMER SCHOOL IN PEACE RESEARCH at Grindstone Island, Portland, Ontario, July 1-21st.

●●●Anyone or any group interested may contact Richard Meech Secretary of ASUS at 549-0499 after 9 p.m. Applications must be in by April 6th.

NOTICE

Parking Regulations Queen's University

Queen's University parking regulations state in part.

Restricted Areas.

"Vehicles will be permitted to park only in designated areas. Vehicles must not be parked in No Parking or Service Areas, in driveways, on lawns, patios or fields or on footpaths or sidewalks. Unattended vehicles will be towed away if parked in any restricted area."

While the Parking Regulations in respect to permit parking apply during specified hours on a daily basis the above restrictions are applicable 24 hours each day, seven days per week on a continuing basis.

Intersession Course offerings

This Intersession program has been designed to make available a selection of both introductory and advanced degree courses to both currently registered intramural and extramural students at Queen's, and applicants who meet the admission requirements of the University.

On the basis of registrations received up to February 16, the following courses will be offered in Kingston between May 14 and June 26, 1973.

Students may register for those courses in which places still remain up to May 11, 1973.

Biology
12-030	-	Living Systems
Chemistry
17-283	-	Organic Chemistry
Commerce
20-112+	-	Accounting!!
20-151+	-	Human Behaviour in Business I
20-315+	-	Current Issues in Financial Accounting
20-381+	-	Business Law I
Computing and Information Science
22-101+	-	Introduction to Computing (May 14 to June 8)
22-102+	-	Computer Organizatin and Programming I (May 28 to June 22)
Economics
29-110	-	Principles of Economics
29-210	-	Modern Economic Theory
Film
34-310	-	Fundamentals of Film Production
34-423	-	The Director's Cinema
French
35-011	-	(1st part) - En France comme si vous y etiez (This is a full course taught over both Intersession and Summer School sessions)
Geography
38-323+	-	Historical Geography
38-336	-	Spatial Interaction: Movement and Networks
History
46-274	-	Race Relations in North America
46-277	-	Europe Since 1870
Mathematics
55-005+	-	An Introduction to Algebra (the first half of 55-004)
55-162	-	Probability and Statistics
Music
64-314	-	Studies in Mediaeval and Renaissance Music
Philosophy
77-110	-	Introduction to Philosophy
Politics
81-280	-	Empirical Analysis of Political Behaviour
Portuguese
85-100	-	Introductory Portuguese
Psychology
84 100	-	Principles of Psychology
84-205+	-	Experimental Psychology: Learning (the first half of 84-210)
84-230	-	The Study of Personality
Religion
89-345	-	Christian Interpretations of History: Augustine to Toynbee
Sociology
92-122	-	Introduction to Sociology
92-274	-	The Sociology of Deviant Behaviour
92-341	-	Canadian Society
92-370	-	Social Change

Colour night... ... a great improvement

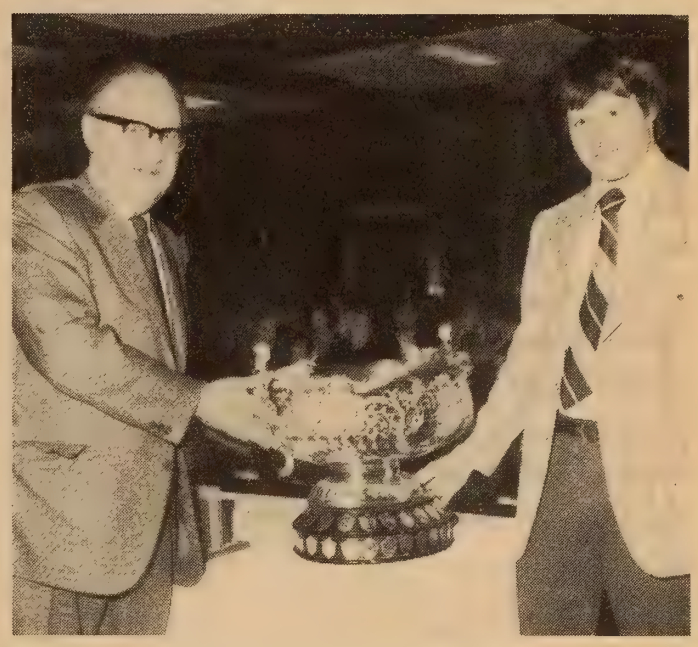
Warrender, Celdoma win top awards



by Chris Boon

A new format and some old names highlighted the annual Colour Night athletics awards banquet held last Thursday night in Leonard Hall cafeteria. Brian Warrender and Kaiva Celdoma carried off the top awards given to the graduating student who "has brought most honour to Queen's by . . . athletic and scholastic ability." Warrender carried off the Jenkins Trophy, while Miss Celdoma was awarded the P.H.E. '55 Alumnae Trophy.

The format change, which was well received by athletes and guests alike, eliminated the tedious naming of every member of every team, a tradition that was losing its significance with the expansion of both men's and women's programs. The net gain was about a full hour; the time was put to excellent use in many, many many post-event celebrations. A second time-saving change was the elimination of presentation of MVP and Rookie-of-the-year Trophies; most teams are awarding these at individual parties, or have already done so.

Kaiva Celdoma accepts PHE '55 Plaque from Mrs. Anglin

Dr. Deutsch presents Jenkins Trophy to Brian Warrender.

Other major trophy winners were Darryl Penner and Leslie Ferrari, who shared the Alfie Pierce Trophy as the outstanding male and female freshman athletes, and Brian Aikin, who was awarded the Jack Jarvis trophy as the outstanding graduating student in individual Intercollegiate sports. Darryl won his honours for football and swimming, while Leslie picked up her share of the trophy for field hockey and ice hockey; she was part of the OWIAA Championship Gals' highest-scoring line, which is a pretty good start for a rook.

Penner also collected the Royal Todd Trophy as the outstanding football rookie. Joining him in the rookie parade were Dave Hadden (Hockey), Dieter Stein (Track), John Pearson (Swimming) and Norm Hagarty (Basketball).

In the MVP sequence, Doug Cozac was a surprised winner of the Johhny Evans Memorial Trophy in football, while Jim Adair collected the Senator Powell award for hockey. Veteran centreman Paul Howard won the R.A.F. Trophy for his basketball efforts, Dave Jarvis (who was, uh, occupied in Austria) picked up the Track Alumni Trophy, and Jamie Archibald collected the Gymnastics MVP trophy Still on MVP's, Rob Beamish claimed the Jack Day Trophy as the best wrestler, George Craig hauled in the Gaels Waterpolo award, and John Pearson made it a double with the Clark Trophy in swimming. John Earle won the Waterpolo Trophy (as distinct from the Gaels Waterpolo . . .) as the MVP, while Clyde Harris won the Managers' Trophy as the best defensive player on the Hockey Gaels.

Finally, in its first presentation ever, the Orrin A. Carson Trophy was awarded to Dave Whiteside as the "Lineman of the Year" on the Football Gaels. A fine choise for a magnificent trophy.

As well, many additional plaques, mementoes and awards were presented to various champions and outstanding individuals. They are too numerous to even begin to mention here, so I won't. Congratulations to all from Journal Sports.

University of Windsor

The Faculty of Education

University graduates may now apply for admission to the 1973-74 consecutive program leading to the

Bachelor of Education Degree and Ontario Teacher Certification for both elementary and secondary schools. Applicants must have an undergraduate degree or be eligible for graduation by September, 1973.

University students entering first year can enrol in concurrent programs leading to an undergraduate degree, a B. Ed., and the appropriate certificate.

For additional information and application forms, write:

The Registrar
University of Windsor
Windsor 11, Ontario

WHO'S WHERE

EDITOR

or

CO-EDITORS

NEEDED

Apply in writing to AMS office

Deadline is 5 p.m., Mon., April 2.

World: US fears Canadian influence

WASHINGTON — A growing concern for American independence from Canada is beginning to be heard south of the border. According to the annual report of the President's Council on Economic Policy, American economic dependence on Canada is a major factor in the huge trade deficits which they have been experiencing.

The report also blamed the now defunct auto pact between Canada and the United States in which Canada was granted major automobile trade concessions, as a major contributor to the American deficits.

It called on the Nixon Administration to get together with Canadian officials to agree on "ground rules for future imvestment". The report noted that their exports position had been hurt because of Canadian government incentives to American firms who set up operations here.

BELFAST — In their zeal to achieve equal rights for the Catholic population in Northern Ireland, the British government has come up against a strong vocal Protestant protest group.

Within about a week of the release of a British government white paper designed to end the three-and-a-half years of violence in Northern Ireland, Protestant forces banded together en masse under Rev. Ian Paisley, head of the Democratic Unionist party, to protest the policy.

The policy paper contained provisions for a new provincial assembly with equal representation for the Catholic population and a new constitution outlawing political and religious discrimination.

WASHINGTON — President Richard Nixon of the United States has ordered the remaining 6,000 American troops to stay in Vietnam until nine American prisoners captured in Laos are returned. The return of these POW's was not included in the Paris peace agreement but according to Nixon there it was tacitly agreed upon.

The North Vietnamese had just turned over a list of the last 107 prisoners to be released before the March 28 deadline and it did not mention the names of the Laotian captives.

Meanwhile fighting in Vietnam is continuing amid pleas by ICCS head and leader of the Canadian delegation Michael Gauvin to end the bombing attacks as a danger to the lives of the Canadians and other members of the ICCS.

WASHINGTON — The giant American International Telephone and Telegraph Conglomerate was offering $1 million dollars to anyone with a plan to block the 1970 election of Marxist Salvador Allende as president of Chile, according to one of its directors.

Former CIA director, John McCone, also an ITT director stated that the company had made the offer to forestall Allende's promised expropriation of ITT's 70 per cent interest in the Chile Telephone Company, valued at $150 million dollars.

Allende won the 1970 election and followed it with the promised expropriation. McCone stated that he was charged by the Chairman of the Board of ITT to relay the information of the offer to Presidential Advisor Henry Kissinger and added that he heard nothing afterwards.

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union has added another space craft to those already circling the earth in an effort to study more closely weather conditions on the third planet from the sun.

WASHINGTON — The joint economic committee of the United States Congress is urging President Nixon to get out and solve some of the problems which the United States is presently facing.

They called for meetings with Canada, Japan, and Western Europe to revamp the monetary system and deal with trade problems. The committee called specifically for an end to tariff and non-tariff barriers to American trade and endorsed prompt changes in world money values with a more central position for Special Drawing Rights. SDR's are a newly issued international currency designed to meet the need for growth in world monetary reserves, a move which would effectively take some of the burden off the American dollar as a reserve currency.

The American dollar has been declining slightly in world markets after the agreement reached to float the major world currencies as a temporary solution to the persistent monetary crisis.

JOHANNESBURG — Evangelist Billy Graham told a South African audience that rapists should be castrated adding, "that would stop him pretty quick". Graham also spoke out strongly in favour of capital punishment "where it is administered equally".

'. . . and a fresh deck.'

backpage

Food prices

Canada: Ottawa probe can't find culprit

OTTAWA — The special Commons committee on food prices ended the first stage of its investigation last week after learning, in the words of one committee member "absolutely nothing".

In six weeks of hearings, the committee was presented with briefs from farmers, food processors, wholesalers, retailers and consumer groups all claiming that they are not to blame for rising food prices.

Food prices have risen by over 10 per cent in the last year and have been labelled as the main cause of recent inflation in Canada.

The committee will present an interim report to the Commons by the end of the month, but it expected to make few recommendations. It will resume hearings later in the spring and committee members have promised that they will be much tougher with witnesses in order to find out the real food price story.

OTTAWA — Canadian authorities should experiment with heroin maintenance to treat the growing number of heroin addicts in the country. This recommendation is included in the final report of the LeDain Commission on the Non-Medical Use of Drugs, which is now being prepared.

The report also suggests that the Canadian program of oral methadone maintenance be expanded and that experiments with intravenous administration of methadone be conducted to see if they are more effective than oral treatment.

Members of the commission hope that officially-sponsored heroin maintenance programs would cut down addicts' need for illegal supplies and would thus shrink the illegal market.

The recommendations come shortly after the disclosure that the most recent federal drug statistics show that heroin use in Canada rose sharply in 1972. Ottawa sources claim that the figures, which have not yet been officially released, are being suppressed by the government.

KINGSTON — A request by Conklin Shows to add two more rides - a ferris wheel and a chuckwagon ride-to the amusement section of Lake Ontario Park was not approved by the Kingston finance committee last week. The vote on the proposal ended in a tie, which means that a recommendation of no action will be passed on to City Council.

Conklin Shows, which operates the rides at Lake Ontario Park, has also proposed construction for a $4 million amusement complex in the park.

OTTAWA — The NDP federal caucus has decided that Canada should give 90 days' notice to the other members of the International Commission of Control and Supervision and then withdraw its observers from Vietnam. The caucus acted on the recommendation of Douglas Rowland, an NDP MP who accompanied External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp on a recent fact-finding tour of Indochina. Rowland claims the prospects for peace in Vietnam are "minimal", so Canada should get out.

The Social Credit party recently decided that Canada should remain on the ICCS as long as the other members want us.

OTTAWA- Air emission standards for Canadian cars built in the model year 1975 will be just as strict as those which will apply to 1975 American cars, Environment Minister Jack Davis announced last week. The decision to stiffen air emission regulations comes as the result of an Ottawa study which revealed that the average Canadian car with present emission controls gives off 20 per cent more air pollution than a smiliar car in the US with the same controls. The pollution problem exists because average Canadian temperatures are lower than in the US, and the cold air makes car engines burn fuel less efficiently.

WINNIPEG — Girls who have been hoping to receive battle training this summer under the federal government's program of militia training for students will have to make alternate plans. The Department of National Defence has announced that it has scrapped a student summer employment program which gave women combat training last year. A department spokesman said that the program was "introduced in error" and will not be repeated. Although last summer's training of girls was very successful, it was against departmental policy and ministerial orders, which forbid the use of women in combat roles.

Queen's
Journal
Volume One Hundred, No. 50
Thursday, April 4, 1973

Report plans better bookstore

The Report of the Interim Bookstore Committee was released to the university community yesterday, after several months of study on the question of the bookstore at Queen's. The study was also intended to aid the University Centre Users' Committee in finding a solution to the problem.

The Committee was struck by the Senate following the suggestion of the Task Force on the Role and Operation of a Bookstore or Bookstores at Queen's. The committee was directed to recommend policy and to advise on all aspects of the creation of the comprehensive bookstore in which there is a university interest.

After much deliberation and consultation with professional consultants, the committee concluded that "there is a need, and, indeed, an obligation on the part of the university, for the provision of a comprehensive multiserviced bookstore." Such a bookstore, the report says, is nothing less than essential in a university of the size, reputation and interests of Queen's, and should not be considered a "bonus" or a luxury.

The committee arrived at the conclusion that the proposed bookstore "would sell textbooks and stationery as Technical Supplies now does, but would add a wide range of other books chosen to meet the wants and needs of the campus." The report continues to say that "the comprehensive campus bookstore would offer for sale general interest books, fiction, light reading and magazines." It was understood that the selection would not be as extensive as that for textbooks or supplementary academic books, but it would be chosen to generate a high turnover and pick up a good portion of the student-faculty market.

It was recommended that the present site of Technical Supplies be used for the new bookstore. Thus, to meet the needs of the expanded services, Clark Hall would be renovated and refurbished.

The Committee does not deny that a large store in the University Center would be the ideal solution. Given the more modest proportions of the revised University Center plan, such a location now seems impossible. However the committee believes that the site is relatively unimportant since the bookstore of the kind recommended would draw its own traffic.

The report suggests that the possibility of a small bookstore (as an adjunct to the main store), be kept in mind. Such a store would offer a varied paperback selection and a selection of the best newspapers and periodicals.

The committee and the consultants expressed the opinion that a completely new management structure be established. The report states that the staff of a comprehensive bookstore requires special knowledge of a kind which is not available in the present staff of Technical Supplies, Although the report states also that it is in no way suggesting that the present staff does not work efficiently, given Technical Supplies present intentions and ambitions.

The consultants recommend the hiring of a manager who is a specialist in the comprehensive book trade, a man "not only able to manage the store as an efficient business, but also a man who can keep himself cognizant of the changing intellectual interests of the university community."

In addition, the committee feels that the manager must be backed up by a team of knowledgable specialists who know what is happening in their respective fields of interest and are able to talk to and advise students and faculty,while taking the responsibility for ordering for and managing their department.

The Committee subscribes to the belief that a Bookstore Management Board should be appointed in a manner which would be representative of the university community in general.

Some way should be found for close mutual cooperation between the bookstore and the trained staff of the Douglas Library, the report says.

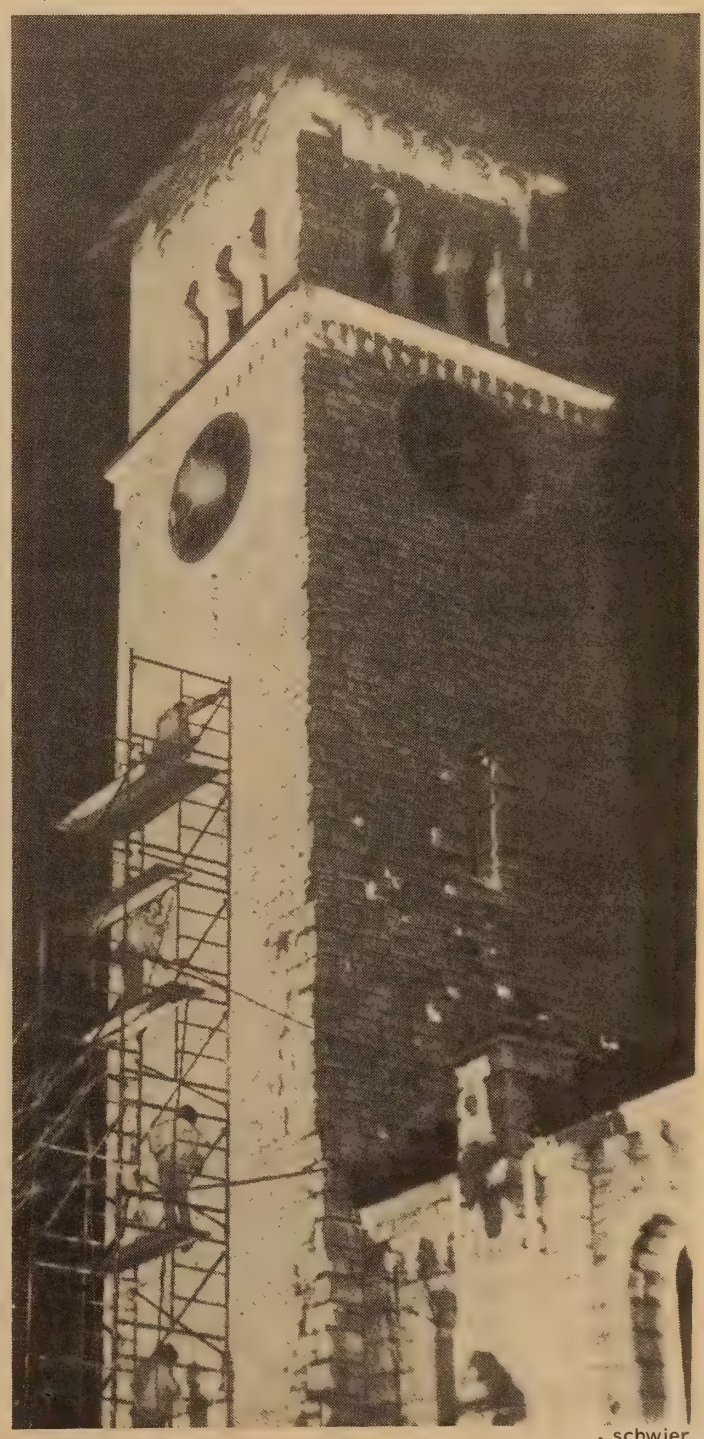
The committee believes that the University should own the bookstore and that the full support of the university will be required to bring about the necessary changes.

The consultants were of the opinion that though expenditures would have to be made for physical alteration and for new staffing, the store would not lose money or become a financial burden for the university.

Body found

City police issued a statement to The Journal at 4:15 this morning saying that the body of a 50-55-year-old woman had been found in the water just off Lower Albert Street at 7 p.m. last night. No foul play is suspected.

Rehab stipends back in time for summer



Dr. Richard Potter, Ontario Minister of Health announced in the Ontario Legislature on Monday, that the stipend for Rehab students, will be reinstated.

'Stipend' refers to the payment Rehabilitation Therapy students receive for working in hospitals during the summer. After second year, it's sixteen weeks of internship for both groups. Last summer, the students were paid a 'stipend' of $37.50 per week after second year, $50 per week after third year - a figure recommended by their professional associations and accepted by the Ontario government. which provides the money through the Ontario Hospital Services Commission. The 'stipend' was abolished when the provincial budget was unveiled last March.

The move on the part of the government to reinstate the 'stipend', ends several months of furious letter writing between Rehab students and Dr. Potter, according to Rehab student, Sue Drowley. In a meeting with students on December 5, Dr. Potter stated that a decision would be made by the end of February. However, as no decision had been made, and the letters written since February seemed to be having little effect, a group of Toronto students visited the legislature last week. The question of Rehab stipends was brought up by Stephen Lewis. Further questions were asked by Margaret Campbell, a Liberal M.P.P. who was recently elected in a by-election after this issue as part of her platform. This was her first question in the House.

In an interview with John Creelman, Vice-President of the University of Toronto's Student Council, Potter said that the letters had been received and considered, and that the stipend would be reinstated.

Drowley reports that the Rehab students are very happy about the announcement, and that the stipend will probably remain the same as in previous years, at the $37.50 per week for first year students, and $50.00 per week for second year students.

- schwier

Hickory, dickory, dock. The Plumbers ran up the clock.

Yes classes at an end, but...

Loud sighs of relief should begin to be heard around campus tomorrow only to be cut short as students in the faculties of Arts and Science, Rehabilitation Therapy, Nursing, and Physical Education wrap up their second term classes before embarking on the two week examination period beginning April 14.

In their enthusiasm, the Faculty of Applied Science will continue to impart knowledge to the lucky few on Saturday before commencing exams on Monday.

Passover will begin on April 17 and students in the Faculty of Law will have something to be thankful for with an April 19 ending to their lectures. However, they will be writing exams until May 12.

Medical students will have a chance to study outside during balmy May days and catch up on their bird watching with a May 4 class termination for the third Medical year followed on May 11 for the first two Medical years. They will be here writing exams until May 25.

In hopes of providing some sort of continuity, the Journal will continue to pubish until late this month before breaking briefly in anticipation of intersession when it will once again appear on campus. In order that you will not be "left out in the cold" next week when the provincial budget is brought down, we will be appearing on Friday and not Thursday as has been the case in the recent past. Subsequent issues will again be appearing on Thursdays.

A legal revolution

There has been a revolutionary coup at the Queen's Law School. The Judiciary Of the Law Students Society has seized the permanent positions of the graduating year Executive and has legitimized and sanctified the take over. Any challenges to the Judicial Decrees have been deemed unconstitutional.

The result of the Law 1973 permanent executive are: President, Sam L. Cureatz; Vice Pres., Wayne Barnes; Tres. Ted Gulliver; Secretary, John Hill.

Famous futurist coming here

R. Buckminster Fuller, inventor, engineer, scientist, mathematician, poet and philosopher, has accepted an invitation to be the fourth Brockington Visitor to Queen's University.

John Bankes, chairman of the Brockington Visitorship Committee, has announced that Dr. Fuller will visit Queen's from October 14 through 20 and will deliver the Brockington Lecture on Monday, October 15 in Grant Hall.

Dr. Fuller, now 77, is on the faculty of Southern Illinois University. With his wife, Anne, he has travelled extensively, lecturing and writing. Possessing one of the most fertile minds of the century, he is widely known for his design of the Geodesic Dome – "the first major basic improvement in mobile structure in the past 2600 years" – the Dymaxion Car and House.

The Brockington Visitorship was established in 1968 to honour the late Leonard Brockington, rector of Queen's University from 1947 until his death in 1966. The stated purpose of the visit is "to bring an articulate spokesman of our time, someone of international reputation, to meet in an informal way with members of the university to discuss his field of interest and expertise".

The first Brockington Visitor, in 1968-69, was Lester B. Pearson. The 1969-70 Visitor was Sir Bernard Lovell, head of Britain's Jodrell Bank Observatory. Swedish economist, Gunnary Myrdal was the third Visitor. Former UN Secretary-General, U Thant was scheduled to visit Queen's as the Visitor for 1972-73, but was forced to cancel the arrangements for personal reasons.

Funds to support the Visitorship were provided by the late Col. R. S. McLaughlin, the Oshawa industrialist – a generous benefactor to Queen's over the years.

Toward a better Student Volunteer Bureau

This year saw many innovations for the Student Volunteer Bureau: the Interprovincial Volunteer Bureau Conference - "Students in the Community"; the same evening which was held for you, the volunteers; the L.I.P. project; and Town 'n Gown. All these have helped us with our re-organization. The re-organization is internal; hopefully to make the operation more efficient. The L.I.P. workers are involved in interviewing agencies and volunteers. Various role expectations and guidelines will be decided upon and communicated to all that are involved. The areas have been broken down and re-arranged:from four Supervisors to seven,and two Assistant Directors added.It is also being suggested that in any agency where there are more than a dozen Queen's volunteers, there will be a "Project Co-ordinator": a liaison person who will be the contact person for the agency, the other volunteers and the SVB Supervisor. IF you are coming back and are interested in being a co-ordinator, come into our office now and let us know.

IF YOU ARE COMING BACK, and if you want to volunteer again, don't wait til SVB Nite in October, come on into the office as soon as you can in September.

Next year's Executive includes, Director, Helen Barkley; Assistant Director, JoAnn Kaitting, Pat Neville; Supervisors - Education, Claudia Sorenson; Health-Home, Karen Priest; Health-Instins, Chris Thompson; Prisons, Frank Archibald; Recreation, Gloria Thomson; Youth Activities, Bob Taker.

We're going to try to operate this summer, so if you have some spare time, come on over to the office, and we'll find you the volunteer position that you want! In the Union - 547-5766.

Summer's coming...

Where will you be? List it in the Summer Who's Where

Summer Who's Where will list the address of Queen's students staying in Kingston for the summer. If you will not be at your regular home address (as listed in the winter Who's Where) you may also have your non-Kingston summer address listed.

Fill out the coupon below and return it by campus mail before May 8.
Please do not bring it in to the Journal Office
The Summer Who's Where will appear near the beginning of intersession.

Leaving?

Get your Journal by mail

Again this year, the Queen's Journal will be publishing during most of the summer, with at least one issue a week during intersession and summer school. If you won't be here but would like to keep on top of campus happenings, you may have the summer Journals mailed to whereever you are for only $1.00

Send your dollar and address to Summer Mailings, Queen's Journal, Student's Union Bldg.

To:
SUMMER WHO'S WHERE
c/o Queen's Journal
Students' Union

I hereby request that the following information be included in the 1973 summer Who's Where. I understand that the producers of the Summer Who's Where will take reasonable care to ensure the correctness of the material included, but that neither they, the Alma Mater Society or the Queen's Journal can accept any responsibility for the ommission of any listing or any errors contained therein, however caused.

Name: (surname first) .....

Address: .....

City: .....

Phone: .....

Area Code: .....

WARNING: The Department of National Health and Welfare advises that danger to health increases with amount smoked.

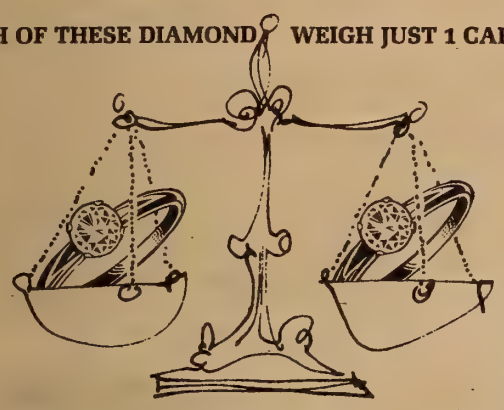
QUESTION?

DOES IT PAY TO ADVERTISE IN THE QUEEN'S JOURNAL? THE OWNERS OF S & R DISCOUNT DEPT. STORE INTEND TO FIND OUT!

TONIGHT 6-9 p.m. ONLY

10% OFF EVERYTHING IN THE STORE

This Discount In Addition To S & R's Already Famous Low Prices!
Only Tobacco Products, Confectionary And Bicycles Omitted From This Offer.



S & R DISCOUNT DEPARTMENT STORE

Princess St. at Ontario.

●●●ASUS annually sponsors a scholarship to attend the SUMMER SCHOOL IN PEACE RESEARCH at Grindstone Island, Portland, Ontario, July 1-21st.

●●●Anyone or any group interested may contact Richard Meech Secretary of ASUS at 549-0499 after 9 p.m. Applications must be in by April 6th.

BOTH OF THESE DIAMOND WEIGH JUST 1 CARAT!

WHICH ONE WOULD YOU CHOOSE?

You probably couldn't tell by just looking which diamond was worth more. Even though they both weigh 1 carat, one is worth a lot more. It takes an expert to know the difference. Whether you're spending $50 or $5,000 on a diamond . . . we can help you make the right choice. Come in and let us show you.

KINNEAR D'ESTERRE
JEWELLERS
168 PRINCESS STREET
KINGSTON, ONTARIO

©

Course evaluation on the rack

by Jennifer Grass

A special committee of the Faculty of Arts and Science released its report this week.

Peter P. Platenius, Associate Dean of Arts and Science and chairman of the committee told a meeting of Faculty Board one month ago that "any report on course evaluation is bound to be controversial." This one is no exception. At that time has asked that consideration of the report be deferred until October so that all members of the board would have plenty of time for discussion before a policy decision is made. This move is designed to ensure that students have a chance to make their opinions known before school ends or when they return in the fall.

The report raises several contentious issues, the most significant of which is the recommendation that appraisals be kept confidential.

Fears that "potentially good instructors may become embittered and turned off" and that the academic substance of courses may become de-emphasized in favour of entertainment value were used to substantitate their demand for confidentiality. The report further states that "interested students may come to feel that their courses are being designed to appeal to the lowest common denominator."

Ross Sutherland, Co-ordinator of this year's course guide told the Journal that "confidentiality by nature will take alot away from the effectiveness of course evaluation." "Students will lose complete faith that evaluations have any effect if they are kept secret", he said.

Although the report indicates that the faculty will continue to co-operate in the publication of the ASUS Course Evaluation Guide, Sutherland remarked that "two separate evaluations cannot exist along side one another as they both require class time", and "we haven't received as much co-operation this year from faculty or students as we expected", he added.

The report also expressed the sentiment that course descriptions written by instructors and published in the Freshman Studies Guide and Profiles '72 were more effective than the published evaluation data and comments from students who took the course in the previous year. Sutherland did not agree but indicated the combination of the two factors was one of the best means known to course counsel.

Evaluations should be made at least twice a year, according to the report, in order to enable changes to be made in courses during the school year.

Evaluation by colleagues was favoured though not required. To maintain informality and a spirit of co-operation among faculty members it was felt that this kind of appraisal should be allowed to evolve gradually. The report admitted that the Ontario Council of University Faculty Associations has recommended that class visits be required and written reports submitted to the head of the department for use in salary and tenure decisions.The report couches its recommendation in the suggestion that class visits could be made a requirement within two years after further consideration.

What UWO did

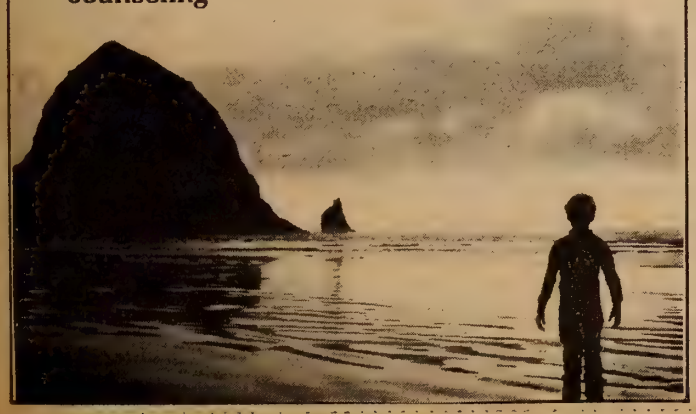
LONDON (CUP) — Two University of Western Ontario professors, claiming libel, are taking the University Students' Council and their field worker, Ben Johnson, to court in an attempt to end, once and for all, student evaluations of professors and courses.

The evaluation controversy has been raging at UWO since Christmas with attempts by the Senate, Department Heads and individual professors to prevent it. However, the student run evaluation was finally administered and now Applied Mathematics Professors Stanley Davis and Trevor Luke are seeking to prevent it being published on the grounds that it contains material which is detrimental to the character of some of the university teaching staff.

The two obtained an injunction temporarily barring widespread publication of the evaluation book and are now seeking a further injunction which would stop publishing until the case can be heard in court.

The university Senate refused to take a stand on the subject during heated discussions in their January and February meetings and in the end left it up to the individual departments of which the French and English were especially hostile. The Senate later agreed to appoint a special committee to look into the matter and report back next fall.

Meanwhile, the USC was faced with considerable difficuulty in obtaining class time from various professors in order that they might administer the evaluation. Despite several cases of reported underhanded actions by the academic staff, the USC managed to get a 90 per cent response rate from the concerned students. They are now effectively barred from distributing these results.



The Paulists are helping to build the earth.

downtown
on the campus in the parish in the office building bridges working with the young and old spreading the Christian spirit, praying celebrating counseling

North American priests on the move throughout Canada and the United States.

For more information write: Father Donald C. Campbell, Room 101CA.

Paulist Fathers.
647 Markham Street
Toronto 174, Ontario

AOSC appeals regulations

Rod Hurd, Director of the Association of Student Councils will make a formal submission to the Air Transport Commission in hopes of receiving exemption from government regulations introduced January 8.

After June 30 only flights booked 60 days in advance will be legal and the price must be on a par with the lowest Canadian airlines which is approximately $209.

AOSC is an affinity group offering flights to all university and college students who, as members of post secondary institutions, are automatically members of its organization. Affinity charters will not be allowed after the end of June. Similarly, AOSC flights cost between $155 and $175, at least $34 cheaper than the lowest Canadian airline. Students on AOSC flights can decide from a series of dates which combination is the most convenient. They are not confined to set dates, contrary to the new regulations.

External Affairs Commissioner Kiloran German told the Journal that the "best chance for AOSC is acceptance of regulation 6 of the European Civil Aviation Council". This regulation, which permits student affinity charters, is in effect in every country except the United States and Canada.

John Drummond, Vice President of Air Canada told German last week that "as far as Air Canada is concerned, government regulations have put AOSC into this predicament and they should get them out."

If AOSC doesn't get special consideration for its summer program, Hurd has indicated that "we'll fly students out of Seattle and Niagara Falls, New York, before jacking up the price."

Loan guillotine set

TORONTO — In a step in a campaign to force repayment of more than $1.6 million in loan defaults, Ontario plans to take 110 to court to recover $275,000 in overdue student loans.

Sixty summonses are on their way or about to be issued and another 50 are planned, Basil Cooke, director of the government's Central Collection Service said.

He said Monday night the summonses are a last resort which he thought might spur other defaulters to make repayments.

CCS was assigned in October, 1971, to attempt collection of $336,507 on 594 student loans. It has collected $78,000.

"I doubt we'll collect anything from some — there are some on welfare," Mr. Cooke said.

Another 191 loans involving $120,000 are being studied to see if they have passed the legal time for action.

Another $800,000 is owed on the federal-provincial awards program. Only 35-per-cent recovery is expected.

A "whole world" celebration

by Nelson Coyle

As a part of the Kingston Tercentenary, a "whole world celebration" weekend will take place on Bell's Island, August 4th and 5th.

The celebration will be an opportunity for many of the people and community groups in the Kingston area to join in a festival of crafts, drama, music, art. film, dance and plays.

It is hoped that, as a response to the weekend, a link can be established with Kingston, Jamaica, and a self-help project supported in cooperation with OXFAM-CANADA.

Bell's Island, a beautiful, wooded island at the mouth of the Cataraqui River, is accessible from Montreal Street, via the new municipal golf course and a bridge. Everyone will be encouraged to complete their approach to the island on foot or by using some other form of non-polluting transportation.

The two day festival, running from mid-morning to sunset, aims to involve everyone who has something to share or the desire to be a part of the Tercentenary in an exciting and fulfilling experience. The people of Kingston, groups and institutions, craftsman and artisans, musicians and dancers, dramatists and artists, families and children - all are invited.

Some of the planners for the event are Mac Freeman (547-3281) Rick Freeze or Betty Anne Armstrong (544-6143 ext. 10, mornings); and Kaspar Pold (547-2807).

"A coming together of the world within and the world without."

Day care deficit

The Co-operative Day Care Centre is facing a financial crisis. An imbalance of revenue and operating costs have left the centre with a $540 deficit for the past three months. Unless this deficit is covered within the month, members feel that the Centre will have to close.

Located on Queen's Crescent, the Co-operative Day Care Centre has been serving the Kingston and Queen's community since 1968. It was established to provide a facility which involved parents, at minimum costs, for all Kingston residents. At present, the Centre accommodates 24 children and employs three qualified workers.

In order to meet rising costs, the Centre decided last week to raise fees, eliminate expenses for supplies, and instead ask parents to supply toys, paper, etc. However this will not be sufficient to cover the current deficit.

The AMS has pledged $270 to cover half the deficit if the Day Care Centre can produce the remaining $270. To this end a number of organizations and individuals are being approached for aid. Anyone wishing to donate time, money, or supplies is asked to contact Myralke Van Czeloven at 544-2885 (home) or 547-6118 (work); or Kathy Cook 544-1972.

Any person, department or group of people wishing to have R. BUCKMINSTER FULLER address their class, attend a departmental, function, etc., during the week of October 14 through 20, 1973, please let the Brockington Visitorship Committee know of your present interest. Send tentative details of date, number of faculty and/or students to be involved, and size of room needed to:

Brockington Visitorship Committee
Office of the Principal
Richardson Hall

In Person
Dr. Jean Vanier
Sunday Aug. 26-1:30 p.m. at the
CNE GRANDSTAND

Admission to Grandstand Free
CANADIAN NATIONAL EXHIBITION
TORONTO • AUG. 15-SEPT. 3
Adults $1.50, Students $1.00, Children .50

smoker artsci '74
friday, april 6th
red room, kingston hall
8 p.m. to midnight
admission:
free with year card
or 50¢ without

Let's get it all together one last time before exams and graduation!!

St. LAWRENCE COLLEGE
OF APPLIED ARTS AND TECHNOLOGY
KINGSTON CAMPUS (613) 544-5400
PORTSMOUTH AVE., KING W. KINGSTON, ONTARIO

SPECIAL SECRETARIAL CERTIFICATE PROGRAMME

This is a total emersion program in typing, shorthand, and secretarial procedures aimed at providing basic skills for those seeking employment in the business community. It is designed for university level students, students with some post-secondary education, or equivalent work experience, and would not be suitable for the casual student. Over the nine-week period, classes will be 7 hours-day, 5 days per week. It is not expected that there will be room for students wishing to take only a part program.

Prerequisities: All applications approved by S. Graves on special application form (available from Cont. Ed. Dept.). Course is very intensive and demands evidence of ability to cope with material quickly - hence requirement for appropriate academic or work experience.

Fee: $75.
Date: April 30 - June 29
Registration can take place daily Mon. - Thur. 9:00 - 9:00, Fri. 9:00 - 4:30 at the Continuing Education Department or by mail at P.O. Box 6000.

Apple Awards

The Engineering Society wishes to announce the recipients of the Golden Apple Award. Congratulations go to Dr. E. F. Kurtz of Mechanical Engineering, and Dr. M. E. Walter of the Math department for the consistently fine work throughout this school year. Presentations of the award will be made to the professors by the members of the Eng. Soc. in the next two weeks.

P.S. The Golden Apple Award is presented to professors for outstanding teaching throughout the year. (an annual award).

Finlay's Sport Shop

Jitane, Monshee and Raleigh bike
some bike models
still 10% off

93 Princess St.
548-8255

Finlay's
FREE
1-Wineskin with purchase of any bike

Finlay's
⅓ OFF
ANY TENNIS RACQUET

Finlay's
½OFF
ANY BACKPACK WITH FRAME

Finlay's
50¢ OFF
ANY CAN OF TENNIS BALLS

Belligerent Bergeron blasts bourgeois nationalism

by Susan de Stein

"La Parti Quebecois is a "Petty, crass, bourgeois party," claims Leandre Bergeron. Bergeron, the author of The History of Quebec: A Patriote's Handbook, and professor at L'Universite de Montreal, was speaking to a small gathering of Queen's students on Sunday night on the subject of Quebec, and particularly on the subject of last year's general strike and the PQ's involvement in that strike. He scorned the PQ, which had been against the strike and had pleaded with the government and the strikers to negotiate. The PQ, "although it has the reputation of being radical and progressive, is a legalistic party, which believes in adhering to the system," he added. Bergeron noted that the PQ, since its inception, has not supported one strike.

The week long general strike, in which 210,000 public servants participated, was the most important event of last year for the progressive elements in Quebec, Bergeron told his audience.

The three unions involved in the strike, he added, had never before come together and had united in a common struggle against the government.

"Over half a million Quebecois workers brought their support to the strike," he said.

He cited the workers' take-over of the town of Sept Isles as an example of the strike action taken by the progressive elements. During the workers' establishment of a "democratic order in the town," the mayor was informed he had been replaced, the police were given a holiday, chain food stores were closed, and the television and radio stations 'liberated'. In a Montreal psychiatric hospital, the workers did not walk off their jobs; they merely took over the administration of the hospital.

It was a "pretty spontaneous movement, not led by the official radical groups per se, and was not expected to last long," claimed Bergeron. During the entire action, the radical groups showed no leadership and merely applauded the move, he added. The action lasted a solid week, after which time it began to fall apart.

However, Bergeron added, "the political experience that developed for the workers was fantastic. Such working together, the making of decisions for the entire community, if only for a week, is seldom experienced by the workers."

He noted that strong government repression following the action is evidenced not only by the jailing of the three prominent union leaders. In a move that is "undermining the teachers' union," he said, the government is prosecuting certain union locals and imposing heavy fines, which will put the union in a difficult financial position.

"A campaign to liberate the union leaders will be intensified in major Quebec cities in the coming weeks," he predicted.

Bergeron commented briefly on the difference between the ideology of the Parti Quebecois and that of the revolutionary elements in Quebec. "The PQ merely wants to get to power to become the bourgeoisie," he said. Bergeron called the PQ idea of developing a middle of the road approach to socialism and capitalism, a "vague notion".

The PQ, he remarked, believes in the separation of Quebec, in creating a political entity of Quebec, so that it would become a sovereign state. "This is not revolution," he stressed. "A readjustment of the political structure does not mean a change of structure. The PQ is giving reassurance to foreign capitalists that there would still be capitalist exploitation in Quebec. This is the PQ bourgeois line."

Revolution implies separation and a change in the economic structure of Quebec. He continued, "it means that the workers' party would take over the political apparatus."

Among progressive elements in Quebec, the most important discussion centers on the creation of this workers' party. "We are not hurrying into founding it. We want to establish it on good solid grounds," he explained.

"We must develop the progressive forces, establish a relative balance, so we can counter the PQ's petty bourgeois nationalism. If the PQ establishes independence, then it will have to reckon with the progressive elements."

Quebec is deeply and traditionally anti-capitalist, Bergeron noted. French Canadians have never integrated capitalism. "Quebec has always been on the rotten end of capitalism."

"A French Canadian bourgeoisie has never been a bourgeoisie in English Canada, although it has sold out to the U.S.". Bergeron showed his distaste for American imperialism. "The US monster has swallowed us up. How much further down the drain can we go?"

The reaction to the cultural imperialism of the US in Quebec is evidenced in the cultural dynamism in the Quebec of recent years. "Anit-imperialism is where the action is!"

Bergeron commented briefly on the events which occured in Quebec in October 1970. "The FLQ is quiet, if it still exists," said Bergeron. He cited the events of 1970 as subjectively important. "Before the crisis there had been a building up of the desire to shake the whole system. The events proved to be a cure - a cleansing of minds, through which the folkloric revolutionary attitudes were gotten rid of." Bergeron felt that all the radical action today is away from that attidude. The concentration is now on long-term political work and political education, he remarked.

"Those who think they have a theory, must learn to put it into practice from those they are bringing the truth to." As a result, Bergeron noted that many young radicals are leaving the universities to work and to learn what it means to be a worker.

Bergeron expressed his opinion that the nationalism that is developing in Quebec, is a "shot in the arm for Canada". Evidence of this is found in the title of a conference held recently at Trent University, "Is there a English Canada worth saving?". He added, "English Canada is now wondering about their place."

Res Board notes

At a meeting of the Residence Board last Saturday a committee was struck to study the purpose of residence and its implications for the whole of the residence life-style. Members of the new committee will include Ronald L. Watts, Dean of Arts and Science, Evelyn Reid, Dean of Women, Steve Brereton, AMS president and former IRC chairman, and Kiloran German, External Affairs Commissioner and former WRC chairman.

The board had previously written to Jack McNie, Minister of Colleges and Universities requesting consideration of residence costs in the calculation of living expenses for the Ontario Student Awards Program. McNie's reply indicated that these costs could not be covered by OSAP, but that they might be included in the Canada Student Loans. However, the board still plans to look into the issue. Jim Whitley, Director of Student Affairs, will be taking it to a meeting of Ontario Student Affairs and the Council of Ontario Universities for province-wide assessment.

The Residence Board also accepted and endorsed the constitution of Morris Hall. This led to an agreement on a policy to be followed by the various residence boards with regard to student constitutions. It was decided that the boards will endorse all constitutions and refer points on which they disagree back to the students rather than completely rejecting anything.

The final issue considered at the meeting was clarification of admissions policy for West Campus. Queen's students will be given priority over students from all other post-secondary institutions.

THE CHANCELLOR DUNNING TRUST COMMITTEE

proudly announces the publication of the

October 1972 Lectures Series On

"Social Problems in Environmental Recovery"

The ONTARIO NATURALIST March 1973 issue contains the following addresses, complimented with photographs:

GROWTH, TEMPORAL AND SPIRITUAL - Raymond Moriyama

POPULATION: THE SOLUTION IS IN OUR MINDS - Garrett Hardin

DESIGN WITH NATURE- Ian McHarg

THE GARDEN AS A METAPHYSICAL SYMBOL- Ian McHarg

Available at Tech. Supplies -- 60¢ per copy

"Some Great Things Happened"

by Merle Bolick

The works of Gabrieli and Monteverdi were featured at last Friday's Collegium Musicum concert. Grant Hall was used to its full possibilities in arrangements for antiphonal choral and instrumental choirs. The combination of sensuous and sacred elements in the works of the late renaissance and early Baroque periods is always fascinating without being an intellectual exercise. So this is not going to be an intellectual review. I love the music and the performance was as authentic as is consistent with good sense. I had a good time and some great things happened.

One of the great things was the opening number, the "Nisi Dominus" from the Monteverdi Vespers of 1610. There were nice moments in the most ambitious performance at the concert, the "In Ecclesiis" from the 1615 Sacrae Symphoniae of Gabrieli. These included a good interplay of the small vocal and brass ensembles at the second occurrence of the phrase "In Deo". They did not include the men's voices at "in omni loco" or the trumpet entry at the first "In Deo". The problems here were of co-ordination and intonation - precisely those one expects in antiphonal presentations - and though the work seemed underrehearsed in full ensemble, it was a worthwhile inclusion, as a learning experience for audience and performers.

The Gabriele Canzona Noni Toni was given the moving and delicate treatment which we all expect from David Keane's Chamber Orchestra, to provide yet another highlight.

And who will forget the Canzona Quarta played by the brass quintet of Paul Shilton, Jenny Pearce, Joyce Newman, Tim Hallman, and Bruce Pearson? This was surely the peak of brass performance, evincing a clarity of tone, sureness of articulation and perfection of intonation rarely heard from the brass Friday night.

Wilbur Maust's vocalists seem to share my enthusiasm for the works of this period, which are lovely by any standard and therefore accessible to all. I wonder how many rave reviews it will take to pack the hall for the Collegium and other Music Department events. A variously textured concert like this one, with a shapely programme and a fairly informal atmosphere, is surely one of th best refuges from the hysteria of the pre-exam campus.

Lost his car

To whom it may least concern:

On Friday morning, last week, somebody threw a rock through my side window and smashed the front winshield of my car. Two weeks prior to this, somebody stole my car and spun out into a ditch on the 401, causing considerable damage to the underside. The car is a gold Corvette Stingray which is, or should I say, used to be parked in the parking lot between Morris and MacNeil. If you happened by this location at about 2:30 Friday morning, I would appreciate hearing from you. To make it worth your while, I am offering a $50 reward for the conviction of the person or persons involved in either the vandalism or the theft. I realize I am inviting trouble with this letter, but my patience is growing thin. If you are the person who did it I'd sure as hell like to make your acquaintance.

Steven Zelikovitz,
Rm. 253 Morris Hall

PARIS TODAY
an exhibition of graphics and multiples organized by the Extension Department of the Art Gallery of Ontario in co-operation with the Pollock Gallery, Toronto and the Galerie Denise Rene, Paris.
AT THE ART CENTRE
APRIL 8 to 29
at the art centre

Indian Culture in Mexico
Past and Present
TRAVEL CO-OPERATIVELY and have
1)..Travel at cost with group rates $580 plus food;
2)..Limited group size, Maximum 25:
3)..Two instructors:
(a)..Spanish-speaking instructor;
(b)..Student of architecture;
4)..A 16 day trip with educational focus leaving August 16;
5)..Reservations through regular airlines and travel agents.
Organized by SYNERGIC SYSTEMS
1230 Whiteoaks Buld.
Suite 608
Oakville, Ontario
Phone 1-416-845-6924 or write for further information.

Break the Routine
with
AN EVENING OF COMEDY
Laurel and Hardy in WAY OUT WEST
AND Charlie Chaplin in
THE IMMIGRANT
Friday, April 6 8:00 p.m.
Ellis Hall Admission $1.00

"Free" Bus Service to West Campus for this year ends
APRIL 7th
See Scenic West Campus by bus while this "free" offer lasts

YORK UNIVERSITY
THE CENTRE FOR CONTINUING EDUCATION
OPPORTUNITY TO LIVE AND LEARN
ENGLISH OR FRENCH
Federal Bursary Language Program
A special grant has made available opportunities for full time students to take a 6-week "intensive" in residence course at our Glendon Campus (Bayview & Lawrence) this summer. DATES: July 3 – August 10, 1973
ENQUIRIES SHOULD BE SENT BY JUNE 1 to:
The Centre for Continuing Education
York University
4700 Keele Street
Downsview, Ontario
OR TELEPHONE 667-2507 FOR COMPLETE INFORMATION AND APPLICATION.

Would you throw away
$4.?
If you did not opt out in October, you paid for a copy of Tricolor '73 with your fees last fall.
The book will be available in September.
If you will be here, you may pick up your copy then.
If you have your green student card.
If you won't be here, you may have it mailed for $1 payable this Spring at the AMS Office.

brock
COLLEGE OF EDUCATION
BROCK UNIVERSITY
ST. CATHARINES, ONT.
DIPLOMA IN EDUCATION STUDIES (DIP. ED. BROCK)
University graduates are invited to apply for admission to a new program, beginning in Sept. 1973, leading to the award of the PROFESSIONAL DIPLOMA in Education Studies. Academically and professionally equivalent to the Bachelor of Education degrees of other universities in Ontario, the professional diploma carries with it recommendation for an Ontario Teacher's certificate at the Elementary or Elementary and Secondary school levels.
SPECIAL FEATURES:
The college of education is progressive in outlook, modern in design, small, personal and situated in the heart of the Brock Campus. It's location enables a full social and recreational participation in the life of the University.
The program particularly emphasizes weekly field experience and practical teaching. In 1972-73 students spent a total of 84 days in schools because teachers, principals and boards of education are partners with the college in the field experience.
Successful completion of the course depends on demonstration of competencies in the interactive skills of teaching; and on the preactive skills of curriculum planning based on sound educational theory and proven principals of instruction. Goals are set and achieved by tutors and students in partnership. Individual counselling, consistent tutorial guidance, student-faculty interaction, respect and understanding, are keys to a program which is consistent with the overall Brock philosophy.
The college in 1973 will require a core preparation for elementary school teaching, but students, if they wish, may combine this program with a secondary school elective in their degree major, so they are prepared for teaching in both elementary and secondary schools. This flexibility allows maximum employment choice at the end of the academic year.
Of the 1971-72 graduating class, over 90 percent were employed in the last school year. All evidence points to successful job placement in the current year Inquiries should be directed to "Teachers Come to Brock"
College of Education
Brock University,
St. Catharines, Ontario, L2S 3A1

NEW RESIDENCE AVAILABLE

WEST CAMPUS APARTMENT TOWERS

Accepting applications for August-September '73

123 One-bedroom apartments unfurnished (with fridge, stove, drapes)

12 month leases (Sept)

Priorities:

1) Married couples without children

2) Single students. Maximum 2 persons per unit.

Applications available from:

Housing Office,
Clark Hall, 547-2890

Controversy flares over female constables

by Bob Wood

Controversy concerning the AMS Constable Force has flared following Outer Council's interim ratification of the appointments of Deputy Chief, Staff Sergeants and Sergeants until adjudication is set down in the AMS Court.

Senator Kathy Turner plans an investigation of the constable system to discover if the entire organization needs an overhaul. She has received complaints concerning elitism within the force from some of last year's constables. OFS delegate, Lyn Whitham, is preparing a case to take to the AMS Court to delve into the illegality of the quota system being used for hiring female constables.

The underlying question is whether females can handle the constabling job as competently as males. On the basis of her interviews with some of last year's constables Turner says "yes". She declared that females can handle rowdy persons at smokers and beer bashes at least as effectively as their male counterparts. Citing the section on "Disciplinary System and Rules" in the 1972-73 Who's Where, she pointed out that it states "the criterion for the selection of constables is attitude and personality more than muscle and size". This past year no female constables were posted to smokers and large beer bashes which comprise the main part of the constable work load.

She suggested that a constable handbook would be very useful. Turner explained that it might contain information regarding the AMS Court and its powers, who the constables should see if they encounter problems, and the legal consequences of an AMS Constable hitting a student.

She further suggested that the existing structure places too much responsibility on the Chief Constable who, at present, picks the Deputy Chief and Sergeants. As an alternative she recommended that a selection committee consisting of the AMS President and Vice-President, the Internal Affairs Commissioner, one member from Outer Council, and the past year's Chief Constable, or a Sergeant, should make the selections. In her opinion, this would decrease the tendency of the present organization towards becoming a clique of friends. Turner asserted that "there is a high percentage of friends getting the positions".

"Constables are terrified of going to court" she said. "They don't want to get involved in case they lose their job", she explained. Several students are putting themselves through university with the income received from working as a constable.

Turner has informally interviewed over thirty constables and is now in the process of collecting statements from members of the past year's force. She intends to send all constables a questionnaire after exams, to aid an investigation of the constable system.

Whitham explained that the AMS has violated the Ontario Code of Human Rights by hiring female constables on a quota basis and that the problem should be straightened out before action is taken in provincial courts. She is asking that women be hired on the basis of ability and not on that of hiring a predetermined number of women. Whitham stated that the ten to fifteen female constables which she had interviewed believed themselves to be as capable as men. Like Turner, Whitham pointed out that the existing structure can lead to the formation of a clique of friends and recommended that the availability of the positions of sergeants be advertised.

"The constabling system is a tradition at Queen's; Queen's is the only Ontario university where students police themselves", stated Whitham. She added that the constable force should be organized on equitable grounds and that since it is an extension of the AMS, they should be responsible for its action.

FOREIGN STUDENTS on STUDENT VISAS

Note that the Department of Manpower and Immigration has undertaken to register foreign students for job purposes -- you will be sent for interviews as jobs are available, and a Work Permit will be issued if you are hired.

It remains possible, of course, to find a job on your own and obtain a Work Permit with a letter of employment from your prospective employer. (Of course, the fact that Canadian students receive preference is still in effect.)

If you are seeking a part-time or summer job, visit the Canada Manpower Centre, 395 Princess Street or call them now at 546-3641. You will be registered and notified of possible jobs.

ARTSCI '76 PRESENTS

'BYE BYE BASH'

(the smoker to end the year)
featuring:
THE VERSATILE ARTSCI'76 DRINKING TEAM

in the pub
thurs., april 5
8-12 p.m.

beer 45¢

★ free rounds during evening for year card holders

Go to H.E.L.L.

(Help Everyone Leave Laughing)

Camping ...the

by James Stone

There is a certain image of people who for seemingly no particular reason, get off their asses in the summer and wilfully go out in a canoe or on foot with their gear and food and just wander around in the warm sunshine and cool breezes for days on end. There was a time, not long ago when this person would have been looked on as being perhaps a little strange if he exposed himself deliberately to the fierce elements, and then returned claiming to have enjoyed it. The mere thought of subjecting oneself to these hardships of the wilds; the bugs, the rain the cold the isolation, the wet; not just exposing oneself but even more incredulously, thriving on it, was almost taken as a sign of latent insanity in the age of comfort.

But this changed a great deal when our present awareness of the environment started its upswing (say about 1960) and people started to do these things "en masse". Public campgrounds in many parks were developed, nature trails came into being, and the canoe was "rediscovered". Many people found satisfaction in roughing it during a few of the summer months, "a return to the elements" as they called it; then, when it was all over, they packed up and went back to their jobs until the next summer, thinking that the camping season was over. It was nearly common knowledge that the wilds closed with the cold and the snow. But there are a few, and there will always be a few who share a slightly more radical approach to this view. They say that only then does it open, and open in a much more splendid way than in the season when the ice has become slushy and the birds fly north, and the trees leaf out. For them, the coldness brings the warmth in the forest.

While this article has no political overtones, and therefore is rather odd in appearing in the Journal, it has overtones of a condescending look at people who believe winter to be a season of cold, of snows and of bitter winds.

We, a group of three, decided that something other than reading could be done during reading week; something perhaps a little more daring and rewarding. The result was a plan for a winter trip on snowshoes and toboggan, camping in the wilderness for five days. None of us had ever done any winter trip like this before, so there would be a novelty and a certain risk, since our survival would depend on our reasoning ability and on the use of trial and error. We had a certain advantage from the start since we had had much summer tripping experience. Our way of approaching a particular problem would be influenced by past experiences.

Winter differs from summer by about 60 degrees, by the difference in amounts of accumulated snow, and the relative rigidity of water. To use summer camping methods at this time would mean fighting the winter. One just cannot paddle a canoe through ice. An adaptation would have to be made so that the effects of winter could be turned to our advantage. This seems elementary, as in the case of bringing along frozen food, but to use the cold to its fullest capability requires some imagination.

Before any planning was done, we developed our theory of travel and life in the cold. Toboggans, snowshoes, sleeping-bags, cooking methods, tents were all looked at. The implementation of the theories was merely a minor detail. One detail was deciding where we should go. The aim was to go "away from it all", to send ourselves into isolation, hopefully going for five days without seeing another person. One of the newer Quebec Provincial parks, Parc Papineau-Labelle was chosen. It lies 80 miles northeast of Ottawa, and north of Papineauville in Quebec. Formed two years ago in the Laurentian Playground, it covers about 200 square miles of very rolling terrain with several large lakes and small rivers. Although the area is a park, a pulp and paper company has a licence to log the area. To make the job of hauling the cut wood easier, the company constructed a railroad which neatly bisects the park. As logging was being carried on in the winter, the railroad was cleared of snow. We used this to vast advantage as a highway.

As the start of the trip approached, we narrowed the planning down to progressively smaller points. A typical series such as this would be the food plans. First the basic assumption was made that we would take all our food with us and not rely on fish or game. Frozen food was suggested since it could be prepared in advance, and would not thaw during the trip. A basic menu was then set up and later the frills were added; the food stuffs bought and prepared. But these are details; let's get on.

The start was early Monday morning of Reading Week, from Ottawa. By 11:30, we were by the frozen shores of one of the larger lakes of the park; Lac Gagnon; with all our gear, tobogggans and snowshoes besides us. We watched the car that had brought us up disappear slowly down the road as it was being driven back to Ottawa. In five days time, another would reappear to drive us back home. Until then we were on our own. The trip was before us. If our ideas worked, we would have a good time; if they didn't work, then they didn't work. It was an ominous day to start. Dark sky, cold wind and an indecisive sprinkling of snow.

- stone

The toboggan was loaded, the gear tied [illegible] the traces looped over our shoulders, [illegible] started to pull our 150 pound load acros[illegible] shore. Perhaps one of our more careless a[illegible] that all ice would be able to support us. [illegible] few cases, we never bothered to check t[illegible] was speckled with snowdrifts; which ma[illegible] even though on a flat surface, quite slow[illegible] continuous ups and downs in the path over [illegible]

Almost immediately two unfavorable a[illegible] camping were discovered. It is not muc[illegible] heavy toboggan; also if the toboggan is w[illegible] be pulled at about four miles an hour. We[illegible] going at about two with a very loosely pac[illegible] point in the trip a glance back at our t[illegible] made to see how much supplies had fallen [illegible] during the few minutes that had passe[illegible] looked back.

Through trial and error the best way [illegible] packing the toboggan. The heaviest [illegible] bottom and slightly to the back. After eve[illegible] been added, it was covered with a tarpa[illegible] roped down by passing a rope under the [illegible] run the length of the toboggan.

We planned to cross Lac Gagnon, trav[illegible] River to Ernest Lake, cross the height of [illegible] Sourd and travel trek to its confluence [illegible] River, all in five days. A total mileage of 5[illegible]

Unfortunately, the rivers weren't frozen [illegible] that we had to scrap a fair portion of the r[illegible] logging railroad running the length of t[illegible] gave us an alternate route road to walk to [illegible] was also much easier this way than travel[illegible] ice.

good life...

The camp that night was halfway up the Ernest in a riverside thicket of Black Spruce and Balsam Fir that reached up and scratched the clouds of the low sky. As it was the first camp, it was by definition disorganized. To find the tent and food we had unloaded the toboggan and had scattered all else in the search. The approaching darkness sponsored an impromptu race to pitch the tent before darkness fell. We lost, and were sentenced to set the rest of the camp in the dark. To elevate the campfire so that the snow melted by its heat would not drown it, the fire was built on sections of greenlogs cut from the evergreen we had hacked down. Its boughs served as an insulating pad underneath the tent, not only to keep us warm but also to prevent the snow from sticking to the bottom of the tent. After the tent had been pitched and our basic shelter assured, the fire pit was created. Our reasoning led us to believe that the best way for obtaining the most value from our fire would be from a pit. There the light from the flames would be reflected from the white walls, and any wind would blow over the pit and not disrupt the cooking. After dinner of frozen kidney stew, we had our tea and cookies and went to bed.

Next day we were back on the railroad tracks. Pulling what we were pulling with ropes looped around your shoulders is one of the most tedious jobs imaginable. A constant force is pulling you back as you plod, plod plod on. At least the snow was well packed along the tracks so no snowshoes were needed, and there wasn't that much extra drag on the togobban from deep snow. So on we plodddddddded. Ernest lake had been reached and our plans changed. Instead of going overland southwest to Lac du Sourd, we would head northwest to Armstrong Lake, an isolated Lake a few miles to the west, climbing a rather fresh snowmobile tracks had been seen heading to Lac du Sourd. This was what we wanted to avoid.

The rest of the day proved to be uneventful as we grunted and strained our way over the hill.

By sundown on Armstrong Lake, we found a deserted cabin that had been built in the 1930's and left open for travellers. The shack was indeed habitable and contained all the necesities of life. Three bunk beds, a roof, a floor and a door. A stove was missing, so we built one out of odd sorts of scrap metal and the few rusty pieces of stove pipe that lay scattered around. The house now provided all the requirements for a simple way of life.

As a place to stay, it became almost ideal when we considered the scenery. The lake, two and ½ miles long by ½ mile wide, was caught in a valley where the surrounding hills rose about 400 feet. The cabin lay on a low rocky point near the south end by the drowned forest. Clothed in white, it fitted the land so well that it became a part of what we wanted to see. On the front porch we rested our toboggan, its ropes loose and dangling while we were free of them for once.

The last set of plans would have had us walk another 40 miles to Lac du Sourd and down its river after going through Armstrong Lake. But stopping in a lonely cabin on a snowbound lake for a couple of days was far too tempting an offer. As the best way to avoid temptation is to succumb to it, we gave up pulling the load for the next day and made friends instead with our new home. The next morning, while lying in bed drinking tea and eating cookies, another set of plans were drawn up to replace the second set just scrapped. The location of the cabin made it possible to pick an alternate way back to a point where we could be picked up. We would retrace our steps back to Lac Gagnon with only a few variations, and an extra day could be spent at the cabin. The rest of that day was an indulgence in simple chores and thoughts.

We paid for it the next day. Leaving the cabin early, we crossed an old portage trail to Lac Phillipe just to the west and worked our way across the lake until we came to a notch in the high surrounding hills. In this cut lay the path back to the railroad tracks which would lead back to the starting point. The cut contained beaver ponds and a brook on the side that faced Lac Phillipe; the other side held a 200 foot drop to the tracks. To reach the top of the hill meant a climb through the small canyon cut by the creek and then crossing the ponds. After spending the first hour working our way over the creek ice that continually broke under our weight, and then inching along the sides of this small canyon cutting our path into the snow and ice that lined it, and scaling a 10 foot cliff with the toboggan, we had covered the 300 yards. Only the relatively simple task over climbing the rest of the hill and of lowering the toboggan down the other side remained. As the powder snow cover was 3 feet deep in the forest, snowshoes were used. If you can walk, you can snowshoe. Problems arose with snowshoeing when it became necessary to dart between the trees to prevent the toboggan from splintering itself against them in its steep journey down. Snowshoe harnesses are very flexible, being made out of a pliable leather; which leaves the snowshoes very free to roam around in all directions while tied to our feet. It became fairly easy for the snowshoes to slip and turn edgeways and to plunge into the snow, taking our feet with them. The harness then slipped off the foot involved and the miserable job of strapping the things back on had to be done.

Upon reaching the railroad tracks, we stopped for our usual lunch. Hot tea from a thermos, frozen peanut butter and raisin sandwiches, and of course cookies. Then down the tracks to Lac Gagnon.

..As this was to be our last night out, we decided to try to cover as much distance as possible for the hell of it. Sunset caught us on the ice in the centre of Lac Gagnon. Just as we reached the far shore, the last golden rays ducked behind the western hills, leaving us to make camp in the dark, again. After a frantic search for wood and hectically pitching the tent, we bedded down after dinner and tea with cookies (again) for the coldest night of the trip. Although the figure does not seem heroic, the temperature did reach about ? Farenheit. The cold was not bothersome, but the wet was. Prespiration from our bodies rose through the sleeping bags and froze on the insides of the tent. Beautiful crystals were formed, and the inside of the tent was grey with them. Unfortunately, whenever the tent moved, these crystals would break loose and fall like snowflakes on the warm sleeping bags, making them quite damp. The reason that the crystals did form stemmed from the fact that the tent was made for the summer, and did not have an outer fly. Had it had one, the frost would have collected on the outside layer rather than the inner, and we would have remained dry. It became potentially dangerous when the bags had collected enough moisture to make them lose their heatkeeping capacities.

Morning came and found us in a much better condition for winter camping than the beginning of the trip had found us. As soon as we had become better amateurs, we had to leave our trials, without being able to make the best use of the experiences gained. Such is life . . .

On the whole, one sort of philosophy emerged from a trip like this. One has to take certain precautions to ensure survival, yet included in our travels was a great amount of happy-go-luckiness. We took things as they came by trying to adapt, rather than attempting to follow a strickly laid out plan to be adhered to in a particular circumstance. Relying very greatly upon imagination, we played with the frills of the trip while keeping the necessities in order. The best example of this would be our continual change of route. The importance was not in the path followed.

What happened was not important, as long as we survived, enjoyed and accomplished what we wanted.

letters

In anticipation of the roar

Dear Editor,

In anticipation of comment that might be unfavourable, I've decided that some explanation of my motives behind introducing the "Cannabis motion" at the last AMS meeting might be in order.

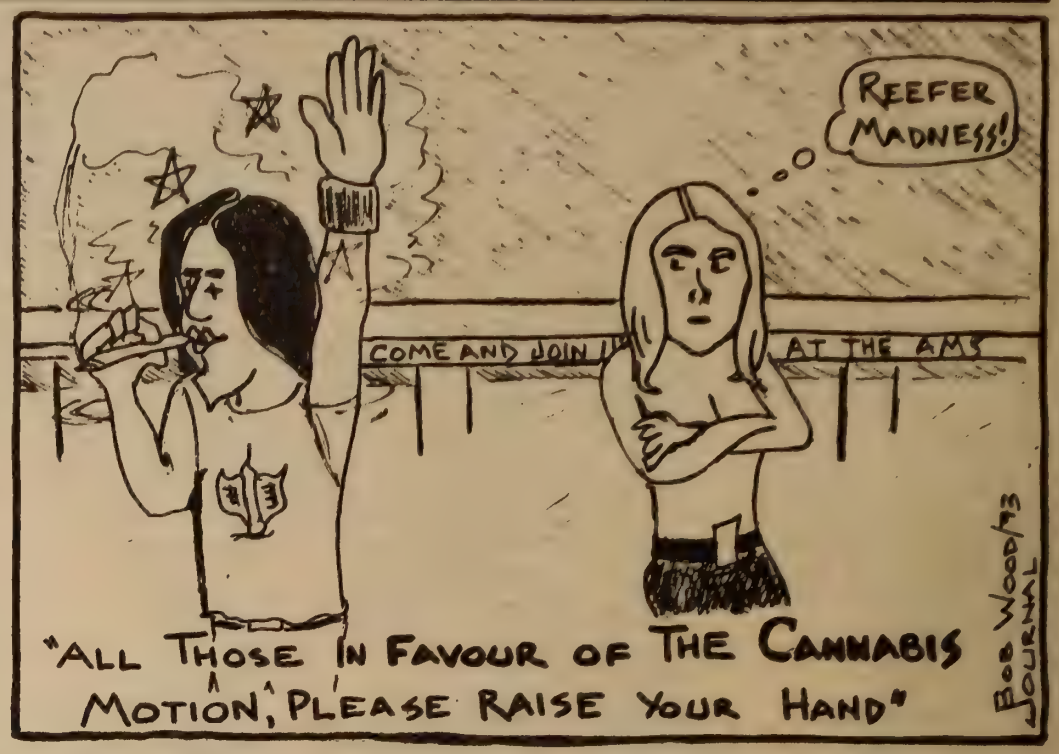
It has been proven, although not conclusively, that moderate use of marijuana is, in the short term, probably less harmful than tobacco use,or consumption of alcohol or in all liklihood less harmful than a lot of the junk we eat. Further, Marijuana users are not burdens on society. There are no wings in hospitals devoted to those who have smoked too much marijuana as there are for those who have ingested too much alcohol. The Le Dain report has illustrated quite clearly that marijuana is a relatively harmless drug and has made recommendations to the effect that the laws governing marijuana be liberalized substantially. The government has decided not to follow the advice of their own commission and arrests for possession still continue.

The Secretary of Health and Welfare announced recently however, that he will be reviewing these laws and thus there is hope that they will be changed. The most conservative statistics available, and these are two years old, indicate that 20 per cent of university students use, or have used marijuana. In other words, 20 per cent of Queen's students are liable to criminal prosecution for something which should not even be a crime.

In light of these facts, it was my hope that any kind of submission from a respected body might have some influence on Lalonde's re-evaluation of the situation. And so the motion was introduced.

Opposition from Outer Council quite frankly amazed me. The main criticism of the motion was that if passed AMS would lose credibility with the government. In other words they were looking at the motion in a political light and it was political hacking around which resulted in this whole mess in the first place. AMS has struck God knows how many committees to examine the situation with regard to foreign students, 5 per cent of our campus who face unfair hardships but not criminal prosecution. If we can't take at least some interest in the 20 per cent of our students who are faced with more dire consequences of following personal lifestyles then we are abdicating our responsibilities.

Perhaps it would be easier for us to turn our backs on the entire question and deny its existence- in that way we would offend no ones' sensibilities and keep a clean name for ourselves, but we would be guilty of neglecting student interests. By passing the motion however, AMS has shown the intestinal fortitude to say openly to the government, "Look the law is wrong, it's unjust and we deplore injustice."



In reply to criticisms that the approval of the Cannabis motion sets a precedent, I can only wonder in amazement at people who are more concerned with parliamentary precedents and nicities than with protecting other people who are being unfairly treated by an unjust law. The motion is setting a precedent but surely it is setting a good one. AMS has shown that is interested in the welfare not only of Queen's students but of all people who face or who have endured punishment for "personal possession and private use of cannabis."

Another charge levelled at the motion was naivite. It was questioned whether the government would actually heed anything that the AMS might say about the marijuana issue. Admittedly it's a long shot and the government has chosen to ignore experts in various medical fields and social areas so it might be assumed that they will ignore us. But there is a chance that it may somehow influence the decision reached by Mr. Lalonde. There is also the chance that other university councils may make similar protests to the government. The opportunity may not come again for another year and during that period countless people are liable to arrest.

Those people on Outer-Council who put politics and reputation above concern for the welfare of students and others are guilty of short-sightedness and misplaced value emphasis.

At any rate, the motion passed and that is a commendable thing. I only hope that the government shows the maturity displayed by Outer Council and does something to amend these laws.

Terry Macli

Did they represent students or selves

Dear Editor,

It was with some astonishment and chagrin that I heard that the AMS Outer Council has "passed a motion deploring the current laws governing the possession and use of Cannabis and urging the Minister of Health to review the laws towards their liberalization." I humbly submit that this action is irrational, irresponsible, and immature, both in outlook and scope.

I do not wish to censure the entire council - twelve people felt that the motion held no merit. But I do question the fourteen that voted in favour and the one abstention. Do these people feel that they have truly represented the students at Queen's or did they vote out of personal regard? I tend to think the latter alternative is the one they took. I believe the AMS does represent the student body, if not in fact, then at least to the greater community. And I further feel that it was not in the best interest of the AMS to represent Queen's as a beehive of illegal activities as this motion implies.

The AMS does not have the right to label this university in favour of drug abuse (as the law sees it) without prior consultation with its members. The AMS Outer Council members were elected to provide a student government that represents its constituents.

If the AMS feels that it is their right and duty to look out in the best interests of Queen's students, as they should, how can they ameliorate this view that the motion deploring the current laws in regard to Cannabis. If indeed it is the overwhelming opinion of the majority of Queen's students that these laws should be liberalized, then the AMS might have a leg to stand on. But as they have no knowledge as to how the students would like to be represented on this issue, then the AMS is certainly out of its depth.

The point can be made that before the AMS is ready to champion the cause of Cannabis in the Outer World, that the internal affairs of their operation be put in order. Without this credibility, any motion in this area is strongly akin to pissing in an updraft.

A further comment can also be made in the light that the previous council threw a similar motion out for lack of merit last fall. This may indicate that the present council is still politically unsavy (sic) (about three fourths of the council changed in the February elections) or the perennial and over-used term "power-tripping" may indeed have application.

It is also interesting to note that the President and Vice-president, Steve Brereton and Bruce Trotter respectively disagreed on the scope that the AMS should take. What is the point in having people run as teams for these positions when they do not provide unified leadership?

In conclusion may I suggest that the Outer Council revoke that motion until such time when they are sure of the ground they are standing on. It is indeed a sorry sight to see the powers of the AMS so used.

Dave Tupper

The motion should never come up

Dear Editor,

Last week the AMS Outer Council passed a motion urging the liberalization of the "laws governing the private possession and use of cannabis." This type of motion should never have been brought to the floor. If the AMS begins to make statements on outside issues of this nature, we are threatened with the danger of becoming too diffuse. Certainly students are concerned about cannabis. They are also concerned about traffic deaths, abortion, Northern Ireland, the price of booze, seperatism, American imperialism, the crime rate, pollution, the mafia, censorship laws, discrimination, income tax, TV commercials, unemployment - the list is endless. Having passed the motion on cannabis on the grounds that it is an issue of concern to students and that the interests of students are at stake, the AMS should be prepared to continue into these other areas. Then Outer Council would become a clearing house for philosophical platitudes on all motherhood issues.

Obviously, we don't have the time, the expertise, or the influence to overexpand our frame of reference in this way and we should concentrate our energies in those areas that we can honestly hope to contend with.

That motion should never have been brought to the floor. Having been brought to the floor, it should have been defeated - not because it was wrong, but because the AMS isn't the government that should be dealing with it.

Sincerely,
Kiloran German.

The AMS should reconsider it

Dear Editor,

Although we do support the review of laws concerning the status of cannabis, it is questionable whether the Outer Council of the AMS has the authority to speak on behalf of the student body in supporting or condemning the possession and use of cannabis. If the AMS represents the students of the university, it cannot express opinion on such a subject without prior direct consultation with its electorate.

Although cannabis is used by many students, it is not exclusively indigenous to this university community. Both at the Outer Council of March 28, 1973 and Thursday's Journal report, it appears that the council members supporting this issue did so out of their own personal conviction rather than adopting a detached and rational perspective at the ramifications of such an endorsement.

It is our opinion that Outer Council has exceeded its realm of authority in anticipating full support of the student body. We believe that the AMS should not submit this position to the federal government without stipulating, through the results of a referendum, the percentage support of this motion.

We, therefore, request the AMS to reconsider its position concerning the liberalization of cannabis laws until such time that student opinion has been evaluated. If Outer Council refuses to accept this suggestion, we feel it is necessary to send a letter of counter opinion to the federal government.

Yours Sincerely,
Jim Chauvin,
Marney Cousins,
Eleanor Crowder,
Lyn Whitham

AMS is driving a wedge

Dear Editor,

It has come to my attention that the AMS Council has recently seen fit to declare itself opposed to the present law concerning the use of cannabis. It is to be hoped that now, their radical fervour satiated, they will be able to proceed with the business for which they were elected. True, most of us outgrew such bravura gestures back in the sixties, but then politicians too must be forgiven for feeling the effects of spring fever.

If, however, the Council intends this to be a precursor of things to come, certain points should, I think, be brought out. The cannabis laws are, it is true, illiberal, and this is doubtless the basis on which the Council is opposing them (doubtless because they are

Continued on next page

letters

Mountains out of molehills

Dear Editor,

I have heard of mountains being made out of molehills before but the condemnation of Ian Nordheimer Chief Constable for discrimination has got to be the biggest put on that I have heard of in a long time. If that's the kind of nonsense that our esteemed AMS wastes it's valuable time on, then I think maybe it's time somebody somewhere went back to the drawing board.

Being a member of the rejected set of female applicants I can understand to a point (and may I repeat "to a point"), the complaints of a few disgruntled females who may be so bold as to retaliate against the quota of females accepted as AMS constables with screams of discrimination. But before we start screaming and making something out of nothing maybe we'd better take a longer look at the situation and the firehazard we're playing with.

Like first of all, "how did women first get initiated into the AMS constable force in the first place. It is my understanding that up until a few years ago there weren't any women at all as constables. Now I will admit that that was probably before the onset of women's liberation but somehow I can't imagine the AMS accepting women just due to the feminist movement. Anyway, it seems that with the university's policy of no liquor at sports events especially football games, it was found that there were situations where women could be utilized and, as a result do a better job than guys. May I again emphasize the point "some situations". But one of those situations where that didn't apply appeared to be the pub. And that is a valid argument it is incomprehensible for me to image a 5'6" 120 lb. female dragging some rowdy engineer out of the pub."

It is a valid argument to say that if a man and a woman both have equal qualifications and can both fulfill the requirements and expectations of the position and the women is rejected just due to the fact of being a woman that discrimination has occured and Section 4 of the Human Rights Code should be implemented. But what are the qualifications for an AMS constable. I have never in my travels (not that that is saying anything) come across or heard of a particular list of personality, academic, intellectual or emotional qualities that individuals must have for consideration as applicants except maybe common sense and an essence of responsibility. While I'm on the topic of qualifications, have women got the qualifications to break up a brawl at a smoker or the ability to remove a 300 lb football player from the pub before he causes damage to the place, other people or himself. What will or could she do about it. For starters how about step on his toe and tell him to stop it, or maybe pull him out by the ear, or perhaps, a "now dear you musn't be so rowdy". Now I admit that I am exaggerating but maybe it illustrates my point, ie the ridiculousness of the situation.

If a girl had the option to break up a fight herself or call on a fellow AMS constable who just happened to be a guy I'd be willing to hazard a guess that 9 times out of 10 she'd fall back on the guy, unless of course she's a 200 lb. muscle lady or perhaps a karate expert, but somehow I doubt that there are many of those around. And just for the record I defy any woman on this campus to say that she'd have no qualms about removing a drunken member of the animal squad "physically" if necessary. Now again I admit the chances that that kind of a situation arising are few and far between, but as long as the possibility exists, shouldn't one be ready for it!

If we want equality then damnit, we're going to have to take it right across the board, no pussy footing around. If we're going to demand equality and scream about discrimination we'd better be damn sure that we wouldn't have the tendency to call on a man if things got tense.

Since AMS'ing is a paying job, and the major area of concentration is going to be the pub and such, what is the use of hiring women if they can't be used, or better still if they aren't effective as a policing force, since ultimately, that is what the AMS constable force is all about. AMS constables aren't babysitters, we as students and technically as legal adults are old enough and ugly enough to know what is right and what is wrong, acceptable and unacceptable social behavior. But every once in a while it's a good idea to have a reminder of "where it's at" as it were. Is this not what the AMS constable force represents?

Yours,
Gaye Clemson

ED NOTE: The students who raised the issue of discrimination against women in the Constable System, did not apply for positions as constables (thus they were not turned down). They introduced the issue after hearing the Chief Constable openly admit to having a quota on the number of women constables hired. This contravenes the Ontario Human Rights Code and Equal Employment Opportunities Act.

No definite job description of constables has been set down, therefore, there are no grounds for claiming that six feet and two hundred pounds or five-foot, four and 120 pounds, or either sex are needed for the position. In addition, there are a number of women on this campus who could (physically) take on a number of the male constables. There is also the chance that women may have an easier time handling some drunks.

Free bus service ends and why

Dear Editor,

Re: Campus Bus Service.

The "free' bus service that now exists between West Campus and Main Campus (or between Main Campus and East Campus, depending on your outlook; will end on Saturday April 7, as per the contracted agreement for this year between the University Administration and the Kingston P.U.C. Transit System and the Alma Mater Society. The termination date is not April 17, as was erroneously reported and advertised in the Journal last week.

This is not to say, however, that the PUC Transit System will not be running buses between West Campus and Main Campus, but rather that the "free" service offered will expire and that students utilizing the buses will be required to pay normal fare.

Next fall the service will be running again on a much broader scope. Service will be available "free" on all PUC routes except Dial-A-Bus and the Reddendale and Barriefield routes which will require ad additional premium. The total cost per student to operate this service from September 1, 1973 to May 15, 1974, will be $5, of which $2 will be subsidized by the University Administration, and the remaining $3 from the individual student's non-academic fee.

It is hoped that students will note that the present "free" campus service will end on April 7th and that they will take advantage of their carte blanche with respect to the Kingston PUC Transit System in the fall.

Bruce W. Trotter,
Vice-President of the AMS

Wedge

Continued

not professionally competent to oppose them on any other grounds). However, the members should be informed that this matter is within the jurisdiction of another elected body - to wit, the Canadian Parliament. For the AMS to take an independent stand is to drive a wedge between the constituent and his federal representative, to substitute the interests of the group for those of each individual. Further, and more seriously, it effectively disenfranchises those members of the student community (and doubtless there are many- the Council vote itself was, I understand, rather close) who support the present marijuana laws. In light of these very real ramifications, the Council vote itself must be considered an illiberal action, and therefore deplorable on the same grounds as the marijuana laws.

Stephen K. Roney

editorial

They don't seem to understand

Last Wednesday's AMS Outer Council meeting demonstrated that this year's group has some potential of being an effective body, if it is able to get over some problems. There was no pussy-footing around -- people said what they thought on issues, motions were questioned and discussed rather than just rubber stamped. Such was not the case with the previous group who, for example, approved the fee withholding in December after nearly five minutes of discussion, and then fought about it privately afterwards, probably to the detriment of the campaign.

The issues raised last week contributed to the discussion of course, but still the Council had something that was lacking last year -- for one thing, quorum was still present until 12:45 in the morning.

Council even got around to some navel-gazing, although probably not enough. During the Cannabis debate, there was some discussion of the purpose and scope of the AMS. Unfortunately, the issue was clouded by the personal smoking habits of many of its members. Unfortunately also, the executive was unable or unwilling to offer any leadership in this critical area. The President and Vice-president split on the issue, as did the Inner Council, their "cabinet".

Without effective leadership, the new Council is doomed; and when it let personal feelings of its members cloud the discussion of their purpose, it is doubly doomed.

Even if the Council finds leadership and straightens out in its own mind what its purpose is in life, it still has to confront another major problem – money.

Last week, Council agreed to spend $20,000 this summer. This is more than a quarter of the total AMS budget for the year – budget in which nearly half of the money is already committed for various bureaucratic and administrative expenses. So without even considering a programme for the whole year, Council has committed a significant portion of its resources. It will eventually discover that the remainder will not go very far.

It will, we think, come to a surprise to some members of Council that money allocated for a project will probably be at the expense of some other project. Some of the members seemed surprised at the last meeting that they had to include the $1,750 for Job Bank in the budget -- the money wouldn't just appear by itself. A budget describes how the available money will be spent: it cannot be used to create more, a fact that most of Council does not seem to realize.

Members also missed the point on a rather poorly presented motions regarding the typing service. The motion, which was defeated, suggested that the salaries of the typing service employes be placed in the yearly AMS operating budget in order to truly reflect the fact that the typing service is not a paying proposition. Since the loss on this service appears to be an annual occurence, it was felt that each year it should be budgeted rather than covered from an already dwindling capital reserve. Unfortunately, no one understood.

Queen's Journal
Vol. 100, No. 50,
Thurs., Apr. 4, 1973
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ontario.

Editor: Jennifer Grass
Business: Charles Schwier
Management: John Solman
Arts: Sandy Naiman
Features: Pat Devitt, Steven Winnett
Passepartout: Bob Wood
News: Susan de Stein
Events: Alison Dandie
Sports: Chris Boon, Nada Bogdanovic
National Desk: Bob Mutrie, Sue Wishart
Photography: Peter Boag

God wasn't feeling well so the little Godletts took over and found themselves having to work on the old rag while various and sundry others came and went especially Terry who did the pics (much to the chargin of some Prof) and Sue who is starting to take over the National desk when Cathy and Pat are beginning to write stories with Anne who also helps Helen doing the ads when someone isn't trying to sneak nasty things in the classifieds or bribe the staff with home-made donuts.

Published twice weekly on Tuesdays and Fridays by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc., Member, Canadian University Press. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society of the University. Offices are located in the Student's Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

unclassifieds . . .

LOST -- A BRITISH Thorton slide rule in a plastic case. $5 reward for its return. Call Chris Allen at 542-5719 after 6 pm.

FOR SALE: 1967 AUSTIN 1100. Radio, snowtyres, good condition. $475. Call 542-9105.

DO: you dance divinely. WRECKLY

STEREO FOR SALE: reel to reel tape deck, amplifier-tuner, two speakers, headphones and tapes. In perfect shape. $625 value. Will consider all offers. Call John at 544-5066.

AW, COME ON GREG -- give me back my "bankie"!

TO SUBLET: 2 bedroom apartment in Elrond. Furnished. Sacrifice price. 542-4180 or 544-7024.

SUBLET: May to Sept. Large furnished bachelor apartment. Johnson Street near campus. $85 a month. Utilities included. Or any reasonable offer. 544-0491.

IMPROVE YOUR CONSTINGENCY! Buy a television with distinct existential qualities. The In-Itself is a 20 inch screen, a reel wood cabinte and rabit ears. The For-Itself is asking $20. Ontological status is factically sound. Call Tony at or around 6 pm at 546-1034.

GAELS: PICK UP your gael manual and summer address list on Friday, April 6, that's tomorrow, from 10:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. in the John Orr Room in the Union.

WANTED: Three people (male or female - 3rd, 4th or Graduate students) to make a committment on a house for next fall. Rent - $45 per month, location - 212 York Street (15 minutes walk). Estimated loss on summer $75-$100. Contact Hugh Connelly at 542-1738 (Evenings).

WANTED: Girl to share large 4 bedroom apartment for '73-'74 with three others. Centrally located between downtown and campus. Call Kerry (546-2008), Sally or Kris (546-4306).

APARTMENT TO SUBLET. May to Sept. furnished. Rent negotiable. Apartment No. 12. 210 Colbourne Street. Call 544-7420 or 544-7423. Three or four people.

What DID happen to that taxi anyway?

THREE BEDROOM HOUSE Available for sublet between May 1 and Sept. 1. Good condition and located on Barrie Street between Brock and Johnson. Rent reasonable. For further information call 544-5054 and ask for Dave or Mike.

GREAT BARGAIN! The month of August rent-free if you SUBLET our apartment from May to Sept. Situated minutes from campus at William and Clergy. 2-3 bedrooms. Furnished. Very reasonable rent. Call Cathy at 544-8739.

MIKE -- I've got your tickets for Sat. night. Meet you Thursday in the Green Room after "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown" -- Kisses, Kate.

WANTED: To buy three speed bike, ladies or mens, call 547-3117 or leave message 547-2810.

TO SUBLET: Three bedroom furnished apartment at University and Brock. May to Sept. 73. Rent negotiable. Phone Dave 542-9135 or Rich 544-6570.

FURNITURE FOR SALE - Matching upholstered chesterfield and chair, T.V., Desk, Rugs, etc. call Dave 542-4712.

AVAILABLE MAY 1, 1973. Beautiful one bedroom, unfurnished apartment. Carpeted throughout, private entrance, parking, close to Campus (Johnson St.) Suitable for couple. Negotiable for summer sublet. Call 544 2115 after 5:30 p.m.

NEED A PLACE to live this summer? Girl needs roommate to share great apartment on King W. by Morris. Rent cheap and negotiable. 546-2902.

ONE OR TWO PEOPLE needed to share large furnished three bedroom apartment for July and August with one girl. Cheap - 542-9375.

KATE -- What the hell is a Green Room and why does it move from the Grand on Thursday to the Domino on Friday night? Hope you got my tickets at half price -- Hugs, Mike.

TO SUBLET MAY 1 to Sept. 1 -- option to keep. One bedroom apartment in Married Student Complex. $141 a month -- phone 546-9098. Also 2 sleeping bags for sale -- only used once.

PROFESSOR GONE MAD over Brazil -- needs bread for one-way trip to Curitiba. Must sell one "magnifico-model" of 40,000 ton oil shale plant -- includes mine, gasplant, a pink refinery, retorts and own parking lot. Its a steal at $1,249.53. Phone 547-5810 ask for QUIBOS. PS -- one unfinished, highly polished, monster retort at 99c.

SUM OF MONEY found last week on campus. Call 544-7154 and ask for Steve to claim.

INTERESTED IN A RIDE TO Winnipeg at the end of April. I have a car and need one or two bodies to help fill it and help pay for expenses. Call Art at 549-2413.

LEAVE TWO inches for classifieds for Morris by his request.

TELL MORRIS that classifieds sell at $1000 an inch this week.

MR. & MRS. PRINTER WOULD like to thank Helen and Leona for the real smashed. Also to Boon for demolishing the booze; Schwier for eating the hot curry; Sandy who nibbled on other things; Woods who was weaving; Mudrie who was moving; Jenny G. who looked after the other one; John who likes dark corners; Sue for not bringing her mother; and to Mung for those three rolls of film which we will not print if the $1,000 classified charge is dropped.

OXYGEN, Chas.

LOST -- ONE PAIR gold wire framed glasses. If found, please call 544-7213.

WANTED: GIRL'S standard bicycle. Phone 542-1707.

MIKE -- If you don't know what a Green Room is, see the FESTIVAL '73 ad in this paper, ask Sandy Naiman, or query Rod Robertson, one of the great men of the Green Room -- Tsk tsk, Kate.

GAELS: PICK UP YOUR gael manual and summer address list on Friday, April 6, that's tomorrow, from 10:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. in the John Orr Room in the Union.

LOOKING FOR SOMEONE to share furnished apartment with two others for the summer. Rent $40 with PUC. Phone Gavin at 542- 3832 but talk to anyone who answers.

MARY -- IT HAS been confirmed -- I'm moving west. If you get a chance, drop in. Promise - no "hot-dogs". Best of luck in your exams. TONY.

WUCKING FOW! Does Crunchie have a beautiful summer pad exquipped with two sunporches and rec room for subletting. It's close to the metropolis and the campus. Available May 1 to August, Division and Brock. Dial 544-7132 for satisfaction.

O.K. Big Pete - You win the classified war for NOW. Doug. P.S. - You bastard!

GOOD LUCK AND HAPPY KEENING IN THE NEXT COUPLE OF WEEKS: to Prope, G. 'V.D.' Dev., Marg, Rob, Sandra, Red, George (Skinny), Wat, Brooker, Port, Belle, Clive, Gail, Dale, Bell, Hods, Scotty, Red Robin, Mac, Mooney, George , II, Tinner, Leroy, Vicki, Spencie, Brucie, Moult, Mike, Barbie and Jon from Hamlet, 'Bones' Eaton and Dougie.

DEAR HORACE, All Kingston greets you (but especially me) Welcome "HOME" old dear friend! - Love, Betty.

MIKE, are you related to Michael Sinelnikoff, the CBC actor-producer bloke who's adjudicating FESTIVAL '73?

FOR NEXT YEAR: Four Bedroom Apartment, Rent $250. Take over lease May 1, Sept - Sept Lease. 233 Johnson St. Phone Tom 542-5445.

FOR SALE: CCM Gran Tourismo, 5 speed, formerly 10. New Brakes and other great improvements. $73.95. Inquire 546-9133.

TO SUBLET, May 1 to Sept 1, with option to lease in Sept. Self contained bachelor apartment, 15 minutes from campus, rent negotiable. Phone Gary after 5:00 p.m. 548-8861.

IF YOU ARE LOOKING for a 4 bedroom house for next year which, aside from other advantages, is ideally situated call: Jamie, Pete, Keith or David at 542-5326.

WANTED: One bedroom apartment to sublet, May 1 - Aug. 31, Must be clean, partially furnished, less than 120 dollars, have kitchen, phone after 11:15 pm, 544-9321.

THREE SPEED BIKE for sale - 26 inch frame, fair condition. Imperative that it be sold due to excalating cost of educational activities. Price $30.00. Phone 549-2413.

LOST: One pair of girl's glasses with brown frames in a shiny black case -- on Friday near the library. Please phone Liz at 546-9133. I really need them.

KATIE -- Judge not, lest ye be judged, I always say. But my sister has a topless role in "The Entertainer" on Saturday. She's my big sister, as you'll see. Rule Britannia" -- Michael-not-Sinelnikoff.

FUN CLUB - T-shirts available at 329 Brock St. $2.50. Any time after 5:30 pm or call John at 544-0475. Also available at 420 Brockington House, after 5:30.

LEE - Do you still have the worms. -- Jim

DID YOU LOSE A FRONT WHEEL for a 10-speed around 11:00 pm Saturday night near Earl and Division St. Call Don at 544-4659.

DAVE D. -- Keep those reports and essays comin'. -- Jim FOUND: I found this on University Avenue, one block south of Princess, Monday at about 4:30 in the afternoon. Very small amount of money. Wallet is in A.M.S. office.

JILL - Thank you for a fantastic evening. -- Jim

SUBLET: 2-bedroom, furnished apt. in Elrond, 12th floor, rent negotiable. Phone 542-4180 or 544-7024.

KEITH B. Thanks for the pics. -- Jim

AMAZING COUCH FOR SALE: Seats 5,000 (5 at a time). Excellent condition. Available now. Phone 544-9172.

SPACIOUS 3 bedroom apartment to Sublet May 15th to Sept. 1st. Extremely modern, furnished, bath and shower, laundry facilities. Rent negotiable. Phone 544-7552 or 544-7551.

THE STAGE OF THE Grand Theatre will hold only 250 costumed party-goers, so reserve now if you want to end FESTIVAL '73 in style after the last play Saturday night. Tickets at the Grand box office. Buffet dinner $2.50, drinks extra. Dress: Tercentenary or black tie.

STUDENTS PAY ONLY HALF price for any seat at the EODL's FESTIVAL '73 at the Grand Theatre this week; $1.25 for "Charlie Brown" and "A Time to Reap"; $1.50 for "The Entertainer" on Saturday. Adjudication every night. Party after the play every night.

SO WHERE'S THE RANSOM NOTE? I'll be happy to leave a plain brown paper bag of small unmarked pennies on some tree stump if you'll please just give me back my only set of Politics 375 notes. (Kidnapped Monday after 4:00 pm) In Kingston 302. I promise I won't go to the police or RCMP. Please!!! Jamie 546-9220.

WANTED TO SUBLET, May 1 - Sept. 1 -- 3 bedroom apartment, modern, in modern or reasonably attractive building. Furnished or unfurnished. We will pay $100 a month, in return your place will receive expert and genuine TLC. Phone Kalli at 549-1399 or Linda at 546-4306. Possible we can take the place for '73-'74.

WILL YOU BE COMING back early next fall? If so, why not join in Orientation and meet the newcomers. Get into contact with the Polson Room from Wednesday, September 5 on.

PLEASE HELP! Available for next year -- 3 bedroom apartment (accommodates 5) fully furnished, washer and dryer, close to campus, May to May lease, rent $250 per month. 293 Alfred. Phone 544-8555.

FOUND A SUM OF money recently. Tell me where, when, and how much, (in what sizes) and the money is yours. 544-7290.

WANTED: One or two girls to share huge four bedroom apartment with three others. Centrally located between campus and downtown. Phone Kerry (546-2008), Sally or Kris (546-4306).

TO CHARLIE AND JOHN -- thanks for avoiding the typo in "A Time to Reap" when you set the FESTIVAL '73 ad. Love from Lucy of the Lindsay Little Theatre.

TO SUBLET: LARGE four bedroom apartment. Good central location. Cool in summer months, private back yard. Call 546-4306. Rent negotiable.

NEED A RIDE TO Winnipeg? Am leaving the 28th or 29th of April and I need people to help pay expenses. Depending on number of people going, the cost will be between $10 and $15. Call Art at 549-2413.

SUMMER ACCOMMODATION: We need one or two people (guys or girls) to live with us and share expenses in our four bedroom furnished house, five blocks from campus. Rent negotiable. Phone 544-9997 or 544-5997.

SUBLET OUR wonderful apartment this summer May 1 to Sept 1. 2 bedrooms (suitable for 3). Completely furnished. Close to campus. Rent very cheap. Phone 544-5459.

TO SUBLET FROM May to Sept. a one bedroom partly furnished apartment less than a half a block from campus on University Avenue. Rent negotiable. Phone Anne or Marilyn at 549-1315.

3 BEDROOM APARTMENT available May 1 for 1973-74. Rent $150. 10 minutes from campus. Girls preferred. Phone 542-2364.

TWO MODERATELY sane females looking for same to share a four-girl apartment in 73-74. Apartment is in vicinity of University and Princess; is clean, modern, partly furnished (living room and kitchen) and reasonable. Call Kitty at 544-8688 or Leslie at 544-8686, or drop up to 403 D Vic.

DEAR DUMMY -- Yes, THE Domino Theatre is sponsoring FESTIVAL '73, but the plays are being staged at the Grand Theatre. If today is Thursday, there are three plays left. Isn't that easy?

FESTIVAL '73 -- a play and a party every night this week. See the rest of the Journal for details.

FOR RENT in 73-74: four man apartment 10 minutes from campus, 2 minutes from downtown. Modern building, 3 bedrooms, kitchen, bathroom, balcony, wall to wall broadloom. Only $61.25 per person per month. May lease. Call Valerie at 544-8688 or Marion at 546-8686.

SUBLET: LARGE 2 bedroom fully furnished flat. 10 minutes from campus. May 1 to Sept 1. Rent negotiable. Super garden -- great for sunbathing. 542-4015.

IF YOU BELIEVE that the existing concentration of economic power in the hands of a small and interlocking business community is inconsistent with the principles of equality of human condition and political democracy then, you may be interested in working within and for a party that is dedicated to the creation of a society that offers genuine democratic, economic and social planning, that gives the beeds of the people top priority and arrives at decisions of policy by a fully democratic process. If you would like to join the Queen's Young New Democrats or find out more about the New Democratic Party, call Wendy Highes at 546-6512, Lois Miller 546-1423 or Doug Morren 546-7230. We need ideas, energy, and involvement.

WANTED: ROOMMATE FOR next year. Female. 2 bedroom flat. Preferably someone in last year or grad student. 542-4015.

IF YOU WANT TO HELP welcome the new students in September, we would like to know. Just send us your name, summer address and if possible, your field of interest (ie -- academic, social) to ASUS BOX, AMS Office, Students' Union.

AVAILABLE MAY 1: large 1 bedroom apartment. To sublet or rent -- good location. 542-7415.

TO SUBLET: May 1 to Aug. 1. Furnished bachelor apartment. Johnson near Hotel Dieu. Comfortable. Bedroom, kitchen, and living room, $90 a month. Everything included. Phone 544-2765 (preferably before the weekend).

TO THE GOOD TIMES PEOPLE: Thank you. How about a little more? EDDY.

GODDAMN SUBLET ADS.

FURNISHED FOUR BEDROOM apartment to sublet. 1 May to 1 Sept. Earl Street. Two minutes from campus. Living room, kitchen, two stoves, two fridges. Utilities paid. Will rent by the room or as a whole. Rent negotiable. Phone 544-7105 or 544-7692.

HOUSE TO RENT: for next year, 6 bedrooms, furnished. Presently rented, $400 a month, lease negotiable, 518 College. Call 544-9488

3 BEDROOM HOUSE to sublet June, July and August. Phone 544-9383.

SUMMER SPECIALS: SCIENCE '44 CO-OP offers you a room in any one of a number of great houses. Summer rentals are from May 1st until early in September. Stay with us a while for intersession, summer school or an entire Kingston summer - they are great! Cheap rooms $40 and $55 per month, complete kitchens, common rooms, free parking, and ground access. For rentals call Jean Hanink at 544-3778 or write Summer Admin. Mgr., Science '44 Co-op, 395 Brock St., Kingston, Ont.

THE WRC would like to thank Shelley Lacroix for the work she put into Levanna and for making it a tremendous success.

HOW WOULD YOU like a back stairs for the maid? This and much more in a fabulous 8 bedroom house to sublet May to Sept. Very close to campus. $45 a month each room. Call 544-8299 or 544-8188.

STU. B. : Porche with trimming arrived safely. On display Vic Hall evenings. Ann and Lee babies.

VANCOUVER — We have room for one girl (should have drivers licence) in a comfortable car going to Vancouver at end of April. Phone Larry or Margi, 544-5159 or Tony 549-1707.

BIKE FOR SALE: collapsable, Austrian, 3-speed, adult size. One and a half years old. $40 or best offer. 544-8759.

A PAIR OF GLASSES was found Monday afternoon on Earl Street between University and Alfred. If they're yours, phone the Ontario Turkey Board at 544-2110 to claim them. P.S. The lens are tinted and they could be a girls or a guys.

GAELS: PICK UP your gael mannual and summer address list on Friday, April 6, that's tomorrow from 10:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. in the John Orr Room in the Union.

ALL STUDENTS who participated in a Psychology study conducted by Patrick McGrath and have not yet received payment for participating may pick up their money in Rm. 323 Humphrey Hall on Wenesday, Thursday or Friday (April 11-13th) between 8:30 a.m. and 5:00 p.m.

LOST: ONE MEN'S black umbrella. Left in Rm. 248, Goodwin Hall at 1:30 on Monday. Will the person who found it please call Bob at 549-2775 or Linda at 544-8683.

GAEL GROUP No. 5. Don't forget our Pub Renunion, 8 pm sharp! Tonight.

WANTED: THREE PEOPLE (male or female) to make a committment on a house next fall: Rent - $451 per month, location 212 York St. (15 min. walk), estimated loss on summer $75-$100. Please contact Hugh Connelly 542-1738 (evenings) (3rd, 4th, or graduate students).

DEAR J., DON'T WORRY, the weekend will be here soon and so will April 28th. Keep Trucking, Luv A.

IN LIGHT OF THE MANY classifieds lately on Addy III, here's to conti uing a new tradition; Good Luck on Exams: Have a great summer: see you all in Sept.

I FOUND THIS ON University Ave. (one block south of Princess) Monday at about 4:30 in the afternoon. Very small amount of money.

BANDS STORES WILL BE OPEN from 7:30 to 8:30 pm today (Thurs) Please bring all parts of your band uniform you still have. Still missing are: assorted footwear, 2 complete uniforms, 1 cairngorm, 1 full plaid, 1 epaulette, 1 skirt, 1 belt, 1 busby and 6 chanters. Love Bev.

DEAR BUDDIES, (MALE AND FEMALE) good luck in your exams and have a HAPPY SUMMER. The "Passion Pit" will be open as usual next fall. Love, Screwsie and Easy Ann.

RED CROSS means People Helping People

E.O.D.L. Festival '73

Domino Show Runs Into Trouble at Grand

by Sandy Naiman

The Eastern Ontario Drama League Festival '73 opened Tuesday night, anticlimactically. This is not to say that the Domino Theatre's production of "Lock Up Your Daughters" wasn't entertaining. It was, alas, not nearly as effective in the Grand Theatre as it was when it opened last Thursday on its home ground. With transitory problems coupled and Michael Sinelnikoff's eloquent and charming but rather misdirected adjudication, I felt the theatre somewhat disappointed at my introduction to Drama Festival protocol and decorum.

"Lock Up Your Daughters", the Bernard Miles adaptation of Henry Fielding's slightly scandolous and altogether delightful restoration romp was admirably performed and lavishly set. Many of the asides so prevalent in Tony Richardson's film of Fielding's "Tom Jones", Valorie Hirschfield has been able to capture on the stage. But this intimacy was lost in the Grand. Thus, a reluctant audience tittered quickly or squelched its laughter and consequently the excellent Domino run this week end was slowed down in the larger theatre.

Speaking specifically about the show, as it was in the Domino, a vantage point on which I want to base this review primarily, few of the problems that Sinelnikoff pointed out were valid.

The set, works on several levels and uses freezes, varying light levels and counterpoints different character groups to emphasize the sonorities of their relationships.

This counterpointing also is worked closely through the Johnston-Bart score.

The music is versatile, intimate and lilting. The lyrics clever, tightly conceived and scurrilously off coloured. (Note: "I think of sweet Patricia. Is she a whore or is she, a regular for the militia"?) The songs carry the plot, and are well integrated with the choreography and the action of the play. Susan Simpson's dance routines, which are small and simple, focus on archetypal English Restoration gestures. This works, oddly enough, better in the Grand, because the actors have more space to move, and seem less restrained.

However, this is perhaps the only facet of the production that does profit in the move. In the Domino, the compact space, the intimacy of the audience to actors is balanced perfectly. At the Grand, the spacial separation lost many of the finer, more subtle movements and facial expressions. This distancing also diluted the raucous quality that was so endearing in the original. As a result, the overall sense of the period and the directors concept was weakened. And because the spaces are so totally different the set was adjusted in a way which caused problems in the Grand not apparent in the Domino.

All these little details seemed to bog the cast down at the Grand. Where there was laughter and frolick on Thursday there was silence on Tuesday.

I cannot ignore, however, some exceptional performances. Annabelle McCullough, although overlooked by Mr. Sinelnikoff whether by accident, or not, gave a highly professional performance she lent the part of Hilaret, the young, ill-done-by but virtuous woman, a glorious voice. As a prime culprit and instigator in the complex intrigue of Rape upon Rape upon rape, she sang beautifully, she acted beautifully, and she had all the whimsical, allure of a young lover. She played most tenderly with Norman Campbell, who as Captant Constant, performed more convincingly, more eloquently than he ever has in his career in Kingston. He too, brought a very tender singing voice and a polished conception of the Restoration posture to his performance of the patient and faithful lover.

As the illicit Judge Squeezum, Ken Smith was clever, soliticious but charming. He, as Sinelnikoff appropriately pointed out, was able to put a song across superbly without really being able to sing. His songs, "On The Side" and "Mister Jones" were choreographed and acted so well that his instinctual charm despite his corruption made his performance, on the whole, one of the most memorable in the evening.

Sheila Tetlow, who Sinelnikoff found initially too young for the role of Mrs. Squeezum, thought absolutely stunning. She sells a song with her body as well as a very strong if not completely melodic voice. Tetlow has captured the dual sided character of Mrs. Squeezum, the duplicity and the demureness and she uses her youth and beauty, instead of letting a stereotyped conception of the role hamper her.

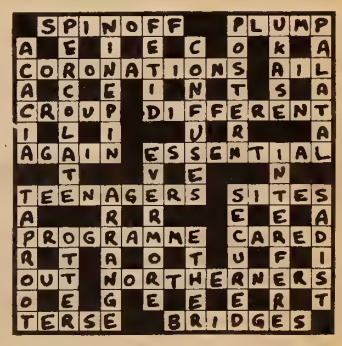
Another adjudicatory oversight, was Gerry Millar's performance as Sotmore. As a connoiseur more of red wine than wenches, Millar was an hilarious drunkard and an almost winsome romantic in his second act solo, "If I'd Known You".

Deryk Hazel, as Ramble, the typical rake of the period, was admirably played, but he seemed to find the change of theatre more harrowing than any of the other members of the company. His performance at the Domino was more cohesive, more focused than on the larger stage and his mastery of the restoration gestures more accutely focused.

Sinelnikoff's effusive praise of Mr. Hazel's performance would have been warranted had be seen the original show but so much the "styled swagger" as he called it, seemed swamped on the larger stage.

Lock Up Your Daughters is one of those theatrical gems which, because of difficulty in securing Canadian rights only became available for production in January of this year. And so because of its lack of exposure, despite the fact that it was written and produced in London 15 years ago, and in Boston 13 years ago, is totally fresh to us here. The score, which predates lyricist Lionel Bart's success with "Oliver" has many of his lyrical patterns, and Laurie Johnson's music works to compliment the words.

Sinelnikoff was very sensitive to the directorial conception in the production. It was directed with "wit, style and pace", he said, and Valorie Hirschfield displayed a grasp of the play which lent itself particularly well to her ability to bring her ensemble together despite wide variation in accent, which can often prove problematic in British high comedy.



He praised costume, hairstyle, makeup,musical accompaniment and carpentry, particularly the antique hide-a-beds, complimented the production for the "degree of success" achieved, despite a "slightly wobbly start".

Frankly though, I cannot totally agree with his effusive praise. The problems in the Grand production do not exist in the Domino but even with this allowance there are problems which Sinelnikoff did overlook. He mentioned that the set is "quite admirable, . . functional . . excellent". But is it theatrical? Trevor Hodgsons' artistic design and Jacques Saelman's meticulons execution of the set are visually charming but do not allow for any really exciting dramatic entrances or exits. The lighting is spacially adequate, but tonally too overpowered with shades of amber. The shading is consequently too warm, lacking shades of blue to cool it off.

Whether Lock Up Your Daughters fares well in the festival, or not and this will be decided on Saturday evening, is relatively unimportant. It's trip from the studio to the Grand will not hamper its chances too much since the other companies have to endure many of the same obstacles. The show was conceived for the Domino and will play there next week.

It is at home there, It works well there. It is a charming show and should not be missed.

Answer to last week's crossword

Did you ever

STOP

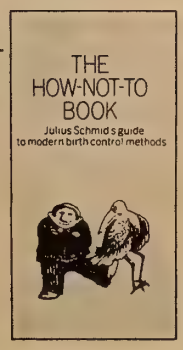
to think how it all got started?

Get some straight facts about the different methods of birth control and some historical anecdotes in the FREE "How-Not-To" booklet. Written in simple, easy-to-read language. From Julius Schmid, makers of quality contraceptives for men.

Ask for these well known brands at your drug store.

FOUREX • RAMSES • SHEIK

JULIUS SCHMID OF CANADA LIMITED
32 Bermondsey Rd., Toronto 16, Ont.



Please send me FREE "THE-HOW-NOT-TO-BOOK
(Print clearly)

TO: Name_____

Address_____

City_____ Zone_____ Prov._____

YS-73

NOTICE

Parking Regulations Queen's University

Queen's University parking regulations state in part.

Restricted Areas.

"Vehicles will be permitted to park only in designated areas. Vehicles must not be parked in No Parking or Service Areas, in driveways, on lawns, patios or fields or on footpaths or sidewalks. Unattended vehicles will be towed away if parked in any restricted area."

While the Parking Regulations in respect to permit parking apply during specified hours on a daily basis the above restrictions are applicable 24 hours each day, seven days per week on a continuing basis.

Bookendless days

Thursday, April 5
8:00 pm - Grand Theatre. EODL Festival 73 Cornwall Little Theatre presents "You a Good Man, Charlie Brown."
9:00 pm - Department of Film Studies presents Strangers on a Train. (Alfred Hitchcock, 1951). Ellis Hall.

Friday, April 6
8:00 pm - Grant Theatre. EODL Festival 73 Lindsay Little Theatre presents "A Time To Reap."

Saturday, April 7
8:00 pm - Grant Theatre. EODL Festival 72 presents John Osborne's "The Entertainer."

Sunday, April 8
10:30 am - Dunning Auditorium. A Folk Mass followed by coffee and donuts at Newman House.
4:00 pm - Eucharistic Celebration at Queen's Theological Hall. Faculty Lounge. 2nd Floor.
5:30 pm - Hillel House. Closing Dinner and Elections of 1973-74 Executive. Dinner 5:30 pm. Meeting 7:00 pm. 1972-1973 presentation of awards. $2.00 per person (dinner). No charge for those coming to meeting.
7:30 pm - Folk Mass in Senior Common Room at McArthur Hall.

Agnes Etherington Art Centre - Paris Today - An exhibition of graphics and multiples organized by the Extension Department of the Art Gallery of Ontario in co-operation with the Pollock Gallery, Toronto, and the Galerie Denise Rene, Paris. The exhibition will continue to April 29.

April 10
Gallery Association April Programs prrsents Jack Pollock Contemporary Trends in Art at 8:00 pm in the Art Centre. Jack Pollock will speak about the exhibition Paris Today, for which he was consultant, and to develop the discussion into the area of contemporary international trends in art. Students and Staff of the Bachelor of Art Education Program of the Department of Art History will be guests of the Gallery Association. This will be an informal discussion situation in which full participation by members and guests is invited.

Thursday, April 12
8:00 pm - Kingston Waffle presents 3rd of 3 public lectures: Resources and the Decline of Manufacturing Industries in Canada. Jim Laxer. York University. International Centre Lower Lounge, Students' Union.
9:00 pm - Domino Theatre - "Lock Up Your Daughters" based on Henry Fielding's "Rape Upon Rape." Thursday Apri 12, Friday, April 13, Saturday, April 14 and Sunday, April 15. Tickets $2.50. For students on Sunday only $1.75. Tickets at Mahoods and Theatre.

Off Campus

Theatres
Capitol - The Godfather. Starting Tuesday - Elvis on Tour
Hyland - Hickey and Boggs
Odeon - Carry on Round the Bend.

Pubs.
Commodore - The Jerry and Joanne Show
401 Inn - Harlequin
Manor - Orvil Prophet
Seaway Pub - Muriel Day and the Night Squad.

CFRC am-fm Summer Program Schedule

CFRC & CFRC-FM, 1490 and 91.9

THURSDAYS
6:30 Spectrum
6:55 Happenings
7:30 Hancock's Half-Hour
8:00 Let's Discuss It
9:00 Mainstream and Mindstream
10:00 Nocturne
2:00 Sign-off

FRIDAYS
6:30 Spectrum
6:55 Happenings
7:30 Music Around the World
8:00 The Living Classics
10:00 Nocturne
2:00 Sign-off

SATURDAYS
6:00 Soundstage
6:55 Happenings
7:00 Classics Unlimited
8:00 Spotlight
9:00 Free Folk
10:00 Nocturne
5:00 Sign-off (until April 28)

SUNDAYS
9:00 Musical Panorama
12:00 Classics by Request
3:45 Features
4:00 Sunday Pops
6:55 Happenings
7:00 International Review
7:30 Montage
9:00 Contemporary Folk
10:00 Sign-off

Avoid mean snakes, rotten apples, and sound systems you might regret.

We do.

PIONEER

See your Pioneer dealer for tuners, amps, speakers, headphones, turntables and tape decks.

Le Corbusier - On Film

by J. Scheinder

Does one's bias in any one direction exacerbate any opposing tendency in others? Do you feel threatened by what may be a reasonable appraisal, given doubts about the ideas in question, and mistake documentary for elegaic econium?

Questions such as these followed my viewing several weeks ago, of a film sponsored by the Art History Dept., outlining the life and works of the influential twentieth-century architect Le Corbusier, the screening of which is the most recent of Mr. Du Prey's intermittent and very interesting forays into art documentary enterpreneurship.

Last year he emerged with a three part series on other artists who have shaped modern ideas on architecture, thus luring non-artistic students away from study halls into a speculative landscape and supplementing the experience of his own students with an actual viewing, through the medium of film, of what they could only have theoretically grasped through paper and illustration.

Last year I left impressed by what I had seen, architecture envisaged by such different characters as Gaudi and MacPherson. This year, following a year marked by the vicissitudes of architectural ideas, modern and traditional, observable in the Kingston scene, my naturally somewhat reactionary soul was left in trepidation as to the corollaries of the institution of Le Corbusier's ideas for the design of the modern city.

A business section viewing Rio? Cities seen as checkerboards, devoid of individual characteristics, rigidly plotted and schemed all on one design? In a plethora of articles lining the walls of his study, Le Corbusier spoke, as architect, artist and urbanologist, outlining his views of how cities might best be constructed in the age of technology. It is a measure of the forcefulness of his arguments and the practicality of his vision that these are not easily dispelled; it is perhaps a measure of the unyielding gradual nature of change that they are instituted in part, if at all, thus destroying the totality of the creator's ideal and opening him up to criticism stemming from desire to preserve the old, however impractical this desire may be. (In Kingston, you may know, anything built of limestone before 1840 however untenable, is an historical monument.)

Jeanre was born in Switzerland in 1887. The term "child of the age of technology" remains distinct in my mind, adunbrating through a recall of the film and linking the events it shows. Certainly the later man was much influenced by the conflicting trends - traditionalist and industrial-progressive of his youth.

His early eschewed use of art as decoration, as seen, for example, in the prints of Toulouse-Lautrec's cabaret scenes, preferring the functionalism of the Acropolis or the Turkish mosques. In 1917, he reacted against Cubism, developing instead what he termed Purism, and founded a magazine L'Esprit Nouveau to propagate his views. About this time he also adopted the cognomen Le Corbusier (the architect).

From the beginning his awareness of technology is explicit in his ideas. One should not, he believed, desire like Icarus, to fly like a bird. One should rather create a machine for which one could fly. For long, his ideas were rejected, their unfamiliar aspects intimidating any prospective clients. To this the artist's response was the stoical "Life is always right."

But gradually he began to get commissions from such deliberately avant-garde institutions as universities. His hallmark- untreated concrete is to be seen in one of such works, the facade of the Swiss Student's Dormitory at the University of Paris. Accompanying our view of this was the ridiculously obvious appositeness of yodelling music, but the facade libre which it exemplifies, was more in tune, in its stark rightness, with the modernist music of the disciple of Le Corbusier, Zenakis, which was heard in the rest of the film. It was functional with no concessions.

Others of Le Corbusier's sesigns - the Plan libre, the toit-terrasse (the terrace roof), the Brise de soleil (sunbreaker), and the open structure, were manifested in views of the Brazilian Student's Dormitory (1957-59), the Paris Apartment Block (1947-52), the Villa Savoir (an early commission - 1929- which shows institution of designs shortly out of the seminal stage).

Le Corbusier, as sociologist, believed that the house per se, was of little significance. What mattered to him was the relationship of the house to the need and possibilities of man. To further a happy relationship, he developed a system of modules, in which all the proportions of his designs were based on the physique of a 6 foot man. In 1947, he got the first large commission of work - for a series of apartment blocks at Marseilles. Only one was completed, however; he was hauled into court on a charge of defiling the landscape. This venture ultimately ended, we are told, perhaps somewhat tongue in cheek, in "imposing its creator on the world."

Incongruously enough, in consideration of the advanced nature of the architect's technological ideas, the most complete exemplum of them is the city of Chungeyar in India. Here there is "harmony in order", the order which results from the creation of an entire city on "straight lines", as a checkerboard. The advantages are manifest - as the narrator informs us while we watch a veritable flood of happy Indians, coming at us on their bicycles; there has never yet been a traffic jam.

The film left me with a reluctantly-admitted realization of the soundness of Le Corbusier's ideas. He was, unlike Gaudi, no visionary. His ideas are based on sound perceptions and arguments and an awareness of the intellectual and physical demands of men. But, as I saunter through the mining engineering building, I realise how very far Le Corbusier's views of man's intellectual needs are divorced from the decorative niceties of the past. His Mondrian-like rooms and corridors, with their bright yellow and red doors, and black-bordered concrete, completely ignore the quirks of social convention and symbolism which made Lillian Hellman ask, as a child having visited the red-light district of New Orleans, why she couldn't have a red door, and which should have made Ben Jonson, had he been concerned with architectural verisimilitude, make the door in The Alchemist a bright yellow. A small point perhaps, but one which indicates a chief one. The peculiarities of the architecture of the past are associated with individuals, and their incongruous desires, while those of Le Corbusier in their lack of consideration for anyting but the needs of a faceless one man i.e. mankind, tends to bring evocations of a 1984 landscape. One might counter with the objection that half-way measures are possible and the compromise between traditionalism and modernism is necessary: but it seems to me that the totality of Le Corbusier's vision militates against such half-measures, and that a diminution of the force of his effects, if not a negation of his values, results from an indiscriminate marriage of his architecture with anything else. In his own words "Of this I am sure . . . I am right . . . I am right."

Perhaps Mr. Du Prey's next venture into the film world will present material which will help resolve the problems presented in this work on Le Corbusier.

Charles Lloyd:

Superlative Performer!

by Charlene C. Angus

The Charles Lloyd concert on Sunday April 1 was nothing less than excellent.

Charles Lloyd is a master of tenor sax and flute. As a musician, he is a dynamic and creative improvisor with a rich sound and a technical ability which allows him to break loose with emotional abandon yet still remain in control of the music. His jazz is contemporary, free, spontaneous, wild, even frenzied; at the same time it never looses its theme, nor does it become chaotic.

The jazz of Charles Lloyd has its own personal signature - an integration of unusal sounds such as corobelle, marmcas, and assorted exotic instruments producing unique effects; jazz that is full and rich; jazz that draws on many other kinds of music; jazz that is broad in scope; all of which give the music of Charles Lloyd a distinctly individual style.

The most impressive aspect of Charles Lloyd's performance was his ability to project - His solos became a physical workout showing the audience his mastery of his instrument. Charles Lloyd is a master of the extended solos His improvisations are forceful and commanding.

In general, his performance was totally absorbing, exciting, and artistically satisfying. It's truly a pity that there is not a larger jazz audience in Kingston.

Pre-registration for 1973-74
Department of Psychology

All students wishing to take psychology courses during the 1973-74 academic year MUST pre-register for them NOW

March 29 & 30 - Pre-registration materials may be picked up in the foyer of Humphrey Hall.

April 5 & 6 - Pre-registration forms must be returned to the Psychology general office in Humphrey Hall.

All students must pre-register for Psychology courses even if they have already pre-registered in some other department or Faculty or even if they are only taking a single course.

Domino Theatre Inc.
presents a competition for three-act plays from the Eastern Ontario Drama League
AT THE GRAND THEATRE

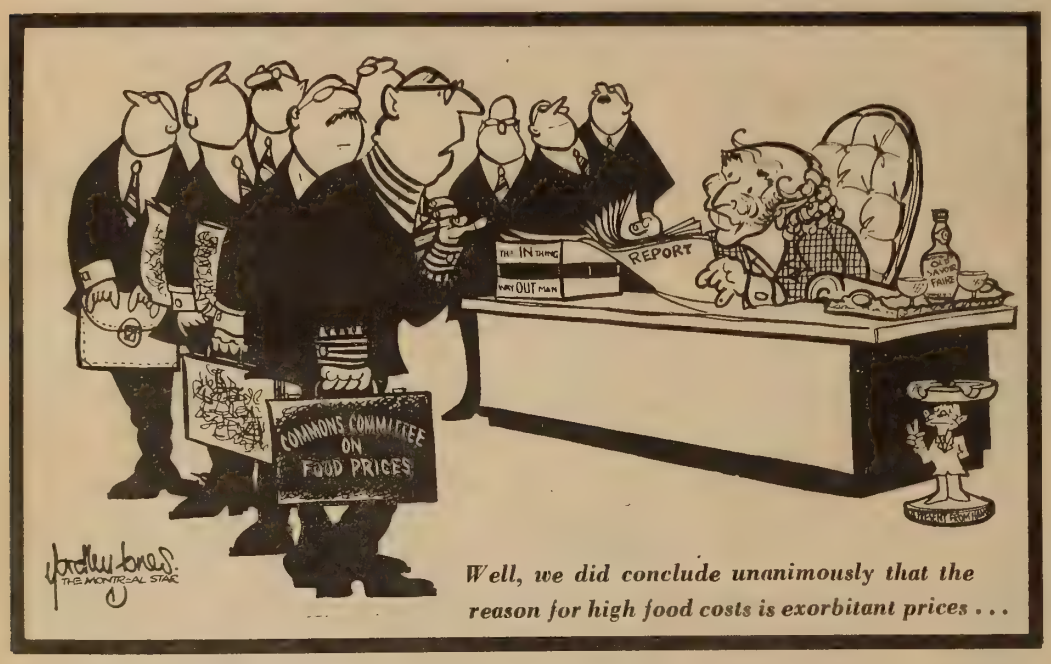
FESTIVAL'73

Three more days of plays and parties

TONIGHT:"You're A Good Man, Charlie Brown"
(Cornwall Little Theatre)
Followed by adjudication, and 'Green Room' in the foyer of the Grand Theatre.

FRIDAY: "A Time To Reap"
(A new Canadian play - Lindsay Little Theatre)
Followed by adjudication, and Gay Nineties party at the Domino Theatre -- "Chez Madame Ratte" -- $1.00 plus drinks

SATURDAY: "The Entertainer"
(Deep River Players)
Followed by final adjudication, awards, and a GREAT party on the stage of the Grand Theatre. $2.50 for buffet supper; drinks extra. Dress: Black tie or Tercentenary costume



Curtain: 8.00 p.m.
Reservations: 546-1756

Tickets:
Thursday & Friday - $2.50
Saturday - $3.00
STUDENTS HALF PRICE

Canada: Review board on food prices?

OTTAWA — The Liberal and NDP members of the special Commons committee on food prices recommended to Parliament on Monday that an independent food price review board be established to monitor food costs. Progressive Conservative committee member Allan Lawrence dissented from this proposal, claiming that a review board would be "toothless". What Canada needs, he said, is a 90 day freeze on all aspects of the economy.

Lawrence's stand was supported by his fellow Conservatives, who were also strongly opposed to the creation of a food price review board. The reaction of Prime Minister Trudeau was less decisive. He announced that no decision will be taken until the Cabinet hears the recommendations of Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Herb Gray.

Well, we did conclude unanimously that the reason for high food costs is exorbitant prices . . .

OTTAWA — The controversial bill to implement tax concessions to corporations was separated last week from the rest of the 1972 federal budget package. The minority Liberal government, facing possible defeat on this issue, decided to introduce the bill separately in order to gain Parliamentary approval for the other sections of the 1972 budget.

Both the Progressive Conservatives and the NDP immediately attacked the government's move because they have consistently opposed corporate tax cuts.

As a result of the delay in passing the 1972 budget, the revenue department is withholding payment of refunds claimed by taxpayers on the 1972 personal income tax returns. An estimated 34,000 people, mostly students, the disabled and the elderly, were waiting for refunds from the government last week. No refunds will be given until the sections of the 1972 budget affecting personal income taxes are passed.

OTTAWA — Canada will remain in Vietnam as a member of the International Commission of Control and Supervision at least until the end of May, the Cabinet has decided. At that time, Canada's position on the ICCS will be reassessed, and, if present conditions continue, the Canadian truce observers will be withdrawn. If Canada decides to pull out, it will remain in Vietnam for an additional 30 days to allow the other members of the ICCS to find a country to replace Canada on the commission.

TORONTO — Most Ontario and Quebec resident will have higher telephone bills this month as a result of substantial rate increases granted to Bell Canada by the Canadian Transport Commission. The higher rates are expected to raise Bell Canada's 1973 earnings by almost $22 million.

Under the new rates, basic residential phone service will cost 5 cents more per month. Installation charges for residential phones will rise from the current $11 to $13.75 this year, and to $16.50 on January 1, 1974. Rates for long-distance phone calls, whether dialed directly or through an operator, will also be increased.

In Ottawa, NDP leader David Lewis reacted to the rate increase by claiming that Bell Canada's profits are already "high enough", and demanded that the government reverse the CTC's decision.

KINGSTON— Most members of Kingston City Council are in favour of a proposal to close Market Street and turn the present farmers' market into a full-scale mall. Several of the aldermen surveyed said that the idea of a Market St. mall is not new, but they will support it anyway.

The proposed mall would be in nineteenth-century style, with a cobblestone pedestrian walkway. No date has been set for official discussion of the mall plans.

OTTAWA — The minority Liberal government has promised to reverse the current trend toward foreign ownership of Canadian companies. Under legislation introduced by Trade Minister Alastair Gillespie, direct investment in Canadian businesses will be screened by the Cabinet and steps will be taken to make better corporate citizens out of foreign companies which are already operating in Canada. Canada cannot afford to buy back all foreign-controlled industries in the country, Gillespie told the Commons, but this way it will at least be able to control future investment.

TORONTO — Members of Women Against Soaring Prices, a group of Toronto housewives organized to fight rising food costs, are urging Canadians to go meatless this week to protest the high cost of meat. By not buying meat, they hope to drive its price down. A similar boycott is being conducted this week in the United States.

A spokesman for the Canadian Cattlemen's Association claimed that the meat boycott is pointless, because beef prices have now passed their peak. Prices were kept high during the winter by unprecedented demand for beef, but supply is now catching up with demand and price levels should decline. The spokesman said that there is no need for meat price controls of the kind imposed in the US last week.

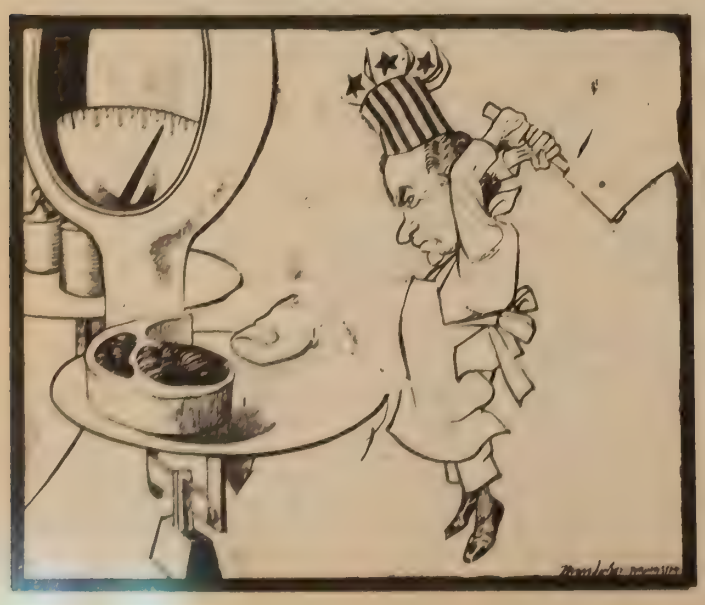
WINNIPEG — The premiers of the four western provinces will present a united front when they meet with Prime Minister Trudeau this summer. They will demand that the federal government deal with longstanding regional complaints about freight rates, agriculture, banking and economic development.

The decision to stand together was made at a meeting last week between premiers Ed Schreyer of Manitoba, Allan Blakeney of Saskatchewan, Peter Lougheed of Alberta and Dave Barrett of British Columbia. They were preparing for the conference with Trudeau, scheduled for late July in Calgary.

KINGSTON — Kingstonians will continue to be allowed to buy The Happy Hooker and Xaviera at least for a while, Kingston Police Chief Robert Nesbitt has decided. The books, written by former New York prostitute Xaviera Hollander, were banned recently in Toronto. Toronto police told book dealers there that they could be charged with selling obscene material.

World:

US attacks meat costs



NEW YORK — The United States government and an organization called the Housewives for Lower Food prices have taken the initiative in dealing with the high prices of food and appear to be succeeding.

Nixon last week announced the imposition of a ceiling on beef, pork and lamb prices in an attempt to keep them at current levels while he seeks out a remedy for their inflationary trends.

Not satisfied with this, the organization of American housewives announced they would boycott all meat products for one week in an attempt to force their prices downward. The ensuing support for the boycott was so strong that many produce prices have begin to show a decline.

The first to be hit were the mid-western hog markets which have reported declining prices as investors and farmers are beginning to panic and flood the market. The results of the falling prices have yet to appear in the supermarket.

The housewives' action group stated that their goal is to hit out at the middleman distributor and meat packer and force them to lower their profit margins.

LONDON — After 170 years of talking about it, England may yet get their tunnel to mainland Europe, and it may be as soon as 1980 according to a British government announcement.

The project came one step closer to being decided with the publication of a British government green paper outlining proposals for discussion. According to a government source, the only factor which still requires deciding is whether the extra traffic would best be handled by the tunnel.

The project, which would include twin "channels", each carrying a single rail track was estimated at $841 million.

WASHINGTON — The United States Supreme Court has ignored strong government pleas and has gone ahead and ratified a lower court decision which would effectively block the construction of the controversial trans-Alaska oil pipeline.

The court was pressured by government and oil company officials who claimed that the new pipeline was essential to national security and the country's failing balance of payments position, but the Supreme Court ruled that it should not be constructed.

In making the decision they invoked a 1920 Act prohibiting any more than a 54 foot right-of-way for the pipeline which the Alaska project demanded.

The decision may now only be overturned by a Congressional motion.

MANILLA, PHILIPPINES — The last reported American prisoners of war held by the North Vietnamese, the Viet Cong and the Pathet Lao in Indochina have been released. The releases totalled 588 since they began on February 12.

backpage

Department of Extension

Probing new areas

by Leona Perry

The Department of Extension at Queen's has made progressive changes over the past few years and now appears to be reaching a stage of stability, according to its director, Ross Wardle.

Despite the innovation of Intersession recently, and the increased demand for Summer School courses, the expansion of these sessions has not been as dramatic as the demand at other larger, urban universities, However, the director feels that Queen's has some of the best-quality courses, through tight regulation of offerings, and is fulfilling a great need and demand created chiefly through recent changes in attitudes to education. This demand is being met in proportion to the size and location of Queen's and a conscious attempt is being made to introduce new methods to cater to specialized areas of education such as night and correspondence courses.

Wardle outlined three major factors in the expansion and changes in the Department of Extension over the last few years. He cited the establishment of new universities in areas such as the Lakehead as one factor which had a great stabilizing influence on the expansion of the student population at Queen's both intramural and extramural. The changes in the teacher-training programmes have greatly affected the offerings, since historically, Summer school provided an opportunity for elementary teachers to take part-time course loads.Now,the high standards have accelerated the need for full-time offerings during the whole year. In addition, there have been several major curriculum changes in the past three years which made all programmes more open and thus increased the number of extramural students continuing under an intramural programme.

The most significant developments in the last five years have come about as a result of the Senate Report on the Department of Extension, and the Report of the Curriculum Committee. The Senate Report provided full recognition of Extension students as members of the Arts and Science faculty. The Curriculum Committee advised on the progression of such students and on the course offerings. The fact that Queen's has been very discretionary in their offerings of courses is reflected in the rather limitated sleection; however, these have been expanded through Intersession. There has been a conscious attempt to apply regulations equally and fairly to all students, whether extramural or intramural, part-time or full-time. "Our major aim is to improve the standards, and our Department is doing so", emphasized Wardle.

The director does not consider the Summer School and Intersession at Queen's as a third semester, since he feels that they provide opportunities to part-time students, mature students to enter into intramural studies, and also assist students in changing programmes without losing time. This increased flexibility complements the regular session and "opens up University to those who cannot take time off", or cannot afford the high cost of full time studies.

"I think the basic tenet running through a lot of reports coming out, such as the Wright Report, is to try to give equality to the part-time student", stated Wardle. He went on to point out that if one accepted that premise, then comparable financial assistance should be given to part-time students. At present, there are no OSAP awards available to these students; this is an area of contention and research is continuing into the possibilities of assistance.

Moving from the difficulties of the students registered in extension courses, director Wardle discussed the progressive elements of the Queen's courses. "The problems are not insurmountable, but we'd like to find the solutions as soon as possible".

At present, the staff is attempting an analysis of completin rates for various courses, especially correspondence. According to the preliminary findings, the results are "remarkably high for completionary rate", considering the difficulties isolation involves. The Department is sending out questionnaires and experimental course evaluation forms, in order to learn from the students' experiences.

Parallel to their efforts to gather and analyse data on the past performance, the Department is probing new areas of teaching methods to bring the Extension offerings to higher standards. For instance, some correspondence courses offered at local centres are being supplemented by audio and visual aids, such as tape cassettes. The newest experiment involves the use of Bell Canada's conference calls for over-the-line seminars in subjects such as history, psychology, sociology and German, among the instructor and several students.

These experiments represent two types of benefits to the extension student: teaching-learning benefit and psychological benefit. The students are starting to realize that the University is really "alive".

The students of Intersession, Summer School and Extension all seem to share similar problems and in their efforts at stabilization and innovation the Department of Extension under Ross Wardle believes that the changes and experiments being introduced are necessary to keep astride of the educational demands and trends of today. According to Wardle, these areas of University education are not inherently different, "they are just packaged differently".

Foreign students exempted

OTTAWA — Foreign students who started school in Canada before January 1, 1973 will be exempted from employment visa provisions of the immigration laws for the duration of their approved studies.

This announcement was made by Manpower and Immigration Minister Robert Andras in the House of Commons last week.

However, the Kingston office of Manpower said on Wednesday that they had not yet been informed of the change in regulations.

Queen's
Journal
Volume One Hundred, No. 51
Friday, April 13, 1973

- merrithew

SUBSCRIBE DAMIT!

Again this year, the Queen's Journal will be publishing during most of the summer, with at least one issue a week during intersession and summer school. If you won't be here but would like to keep on top of campus happenings, you may have the summer Journals mailed to wherever you are for only $1.00.

Send your dollar and address to Summer Mailings, Queen's Journal, Student's Union Bldg.

and TELL US WHERE YOU WILL BE THIS SUMMER

Summer Who's Where will list the address of Queen's students staying in Kingston for the summer. If you will not be at your regular home address (as listed in the winter Who's Where) you may also have your non-Kingston summer address listed

Fill out the coupon below and return it by campus mail before May 8.

Please do not bring it in to the Journal Office.

The Summer Who's Where will appear near the beginning of intersession.

To:
SUMMER WHO'S WHERE
c/o Queen's Journal
Students' Union

I hereby request that the following information be included in the 1973 summer Who's Where. I understand that the producers of the Summer Who's Where will take reasonable care to ensure the correctness of the material included, but that neither they, the Alma Mater Society or the Queen's Journal can accept any responsibility for the ommission of any listing or any errors contained therein, however caused.

Name: (surname first) .....

Address: .....

City: .....

Phone: .....

Area Code: .....

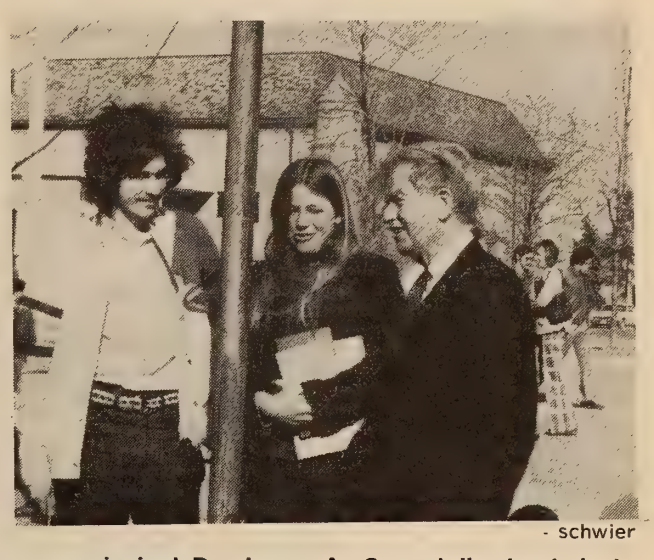
Use this handy free coupon!

Former principal receives prized Royal Bank award

Dr. James A. Corry, former principal and vice-chancellor of Queen's University has been awarded the highly prized $50,000 Royal Bank Award for his countless contributions to Canadian education.

Corry is the seventh person to be honoured by the bank and the first educator to be selected. The release announcing the award states that Corry, "played a leading role in encouraging and developing responsible student government at a time of continent-wide student unrest." It also lauds his achievements in his advisory role in university-government relations during a period of "unparallelled university expansion in Canada and increased government support."

Corry, who was principal of Queen's from 1961 to 1968 when he was succeeded by Dr. John J. Deutsch, has also been awarded the Order of Canada for his educational achievements.

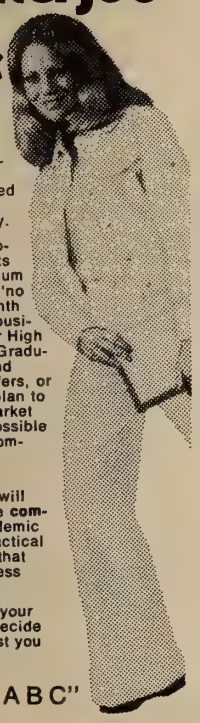


The Royal Bank Award was created to provide recognition for dedicated and distinguished Canadians who have contributed to human welfare and the common good.

Corry's most recent achievement was co-authoring with Dr. Louis-Phillippe Bonneau the "Quest for the Optimum", a report on university research rationalization prepared for the Association of Colleges and Universities in 1972.

Since he was Principal of Queen's, Corry has been consultant to the department of justice in an analysis of proposed changes in the constitution as well as advisor to the secretary of state on the future shape and structure of higher education during the 1970's.

During the past decade, he was chairman of the Canadian Social Science Research Council, a member of the council for survey of the legal profession in Canada, President of the National Conference of Canadian Universities and Colleges, chairman of the Canadian Universities Foundation and chairman of the Committee of University Presidents of Ontario.



Corry holds honourary degrees from the University of Saskatchewan, St. Andrew's University in Scotland, McGill University, the University of Manitoba, the University of Montreal, Laval University and Royal Military College.

- schwier

Former principal Dr. James A. Corry talks to students at Queen's a "mini course" means a better job and more pay

The Shaw Accelerated Business Course is designed for people going places in a hurry.

An exclusive program for students who meet minimum requirements. A "no nonsense" 6 month comprehensive business training for High School Honour Graduates, College and University transfers, or graduates who plan to enter the job market as quickly as possible and at a level comparable to their abilities.

ABC graduates will tell you "it's the combination of academic training and practical business skills that make real success possible.

Remember, it's your future . . . you decide how far, how fast you want to go.

"simple as A B C"

DROP IN MAIL

I want to find myself at Shaw Colleges. Please send me information

NAME:_____

ADDRESS:_____

PHONE:_____ AGE:____

EDUCATION:_____

SHAW COLLEGES

ADMISSIONS OFFICE
2436 Yonge Street
Toronto, Ontario 481-6477
M4P 2H4

1826-QK

Sutherland says

Secrecy will inhibit course evaluation

"If course evaluations disappear into the woodwork, students will distrust them", Ross Sutherland, co-ordinator of ASUS Course Evaluation Guide remarked as he enumerated the disadvantages of confidential evaluation.

A special committee of the Faculty of Arts and Science which was mandated to study course evaluation suggested in its final report that evaluations should remain confidential. They justify this recommendation by the questionable assumption that potentially good instructors may become embittered and turned off.

Sutherland told the Journal that the committee attempts to "downplay evaluation" and emphasized the fact that "students will only offer constructive criticism, if they think it will do some good."

"Course evaluation must be a respected thing" and "the veil of secrecy inhibits that" he said.

Sutherland was also sceptical about placing the onus for evaluation on the DSC representative. The report suggests that a student representative regularly discuss the course with the professor. He feared this would place an unnecessary burden on the DSC reps and would also permit one person's bias to show through.

Although the report suggests that ASUS be allowed to carry on with the production of their guide, Sutherland claimed that with time, "student published evaluations would be naturally eliminated". He believed that it would be unfeasible from the professors' point of view because two separate evaluations would take too much time.

The report's approach appears somewhat cowardly. "It constantly implies that it is attacking something but doesn't admit what", Sutherland observed.

He did agree with the report's suggestion that evaluation should occur two or three times a year. ASUS carried out evaluations in most departments of the Faculty of Arts and Science at Christmas. The results were submitted to professors and department heads.

Sutherland admitted that "ASUS course evaluation was by no means perfect" but he believed that appraisals should continue to be made public.

Rector gives his own progress report

by Kathy McDonald

In the November election for rector, candidate Gary Gannage said that he was running because he felt "there were a lot of shortcomings in the institution", and he wished to rectify the situation.

After 6 months in office, Gannage told the Journal, "Quite honestly I have been trying to keep out of any type of foreground in my actions, and I think I'm doing things a lot slower, and there are a lot of things I'm not doing that I should be doing." He added that a lot "depends on your pre-election image of what the position of rector is and your post-election knowledge".

He is dealing with the university rather than just the student government, and he finds this is "a pretty delicate area. You have to look at the whole scene and make sure you know what you're talking about before you open your mouth."

Gannage feels that everyone should make sure they know what they are talking about. In the student government, you are allowed to say what you feel, and "You're more of a diplomat, but at the same time you can't be wishy-washy or a bull-shooter."

As far as the official duties of the rector are concerned, Gannage says he has acted as ombudsman to certain people who have had academic and financial problems, and has been "playing games with the Board of Trustees." When questioned more specifically on these games, he evaded the issue. However the next Board of Trustees meeting will be held on Friday April 13, and it may be interesting to see what develops.

At the one Board meeting that has been held since his election, there was only one issue that he was concerned with, and "that was waiving the late penalty fee". When it came up as the Board members were discussing fees, QFS, the referrendum, and the whole situation concerning Queen's, Gannage found that the discussion was levelled totally towards himself.

Concerning other business at the meeting, Gannage explained, "I was just getting my feet wet." He has found that his positiion is quite a bit different than he had anticipated, and right now he is sitting back, watching, and judging.

When questioned as to his future intentions, Gannage stated, "Well, that's hard to say. There are a lot of things that are committee work. The things that I wanted to do; the things that I talked about during the election will take a lot more time." What he is trying to do first, is to fit himself into the position. He is finding this "somewhat difficult" as he hasn't become part of his position as much as he would like to. However, he feels that "Once I discover my own self within the whole thing, there is lots that can be done."

Gannage went on to mention that the University Centre, which is "the biggest issue on campus, not including Student Fees" was receiving very little discussion. He said that "There has to be student input. The campus isn't aware of what is happening." Concerning the campus as a whole, he says "there are a whole lot of things that are changing right now that people don't know about." He mentioned that briefs were being constructed concerning the extention of the school year, and student affairs, among others.

Many ceremonial duties are included in his job as rector: citizenship court and the recent visit of the governor-general, presentations to people, and awards all require his presence.

One of the problems that Gannage is faced with when it comes down to doing something definite is that what he wants to do and the things that he would like to see accomplished are the things that demand a lot of attention by people other than himself. According to Gannage, "The problem right now is that the student government is so factionalized that it is pretty difficult to talk seriously about getting things done with very many people."

In the whole realm of the situation, Gannage says he has to have people working with him. "It involves reevaluating Queen's and fixing up the situation." There are a lot of things that he would like to see done but it is "going to take a lot of work because they are in delicate areas." He refused to elaborate on what he would like to see done because, as he said "I don't know if I'll ever get a chance to do them. I'm trying to be evasive for a specific reason. I don't want to get into things and say 'Yes, I want to do this and I want to do that', and then find out that I can't do it, and have people say 'Why didn't you do this and that?' "

PARIS TODAY
an exhibition of graphics and multiples
organized by the Extension Department of the Art Gallery of Ontario in co-operation with the Pollock Gallery, Toronto and the Galerie Denise Rene, Paris.
AT THE ART CENTRE
APRIL 8 to 29
at the art centre

newsbriefs

IRC shows true colours

Petty objections on the part of the IRC have jeopardized Orientation committee plans to hold a Sunday night dinner in which gael groups could get together with professors and talk.

The IRC had announced that it plans to hold residence meetings from 7:00 until 9:00 that Sunday night, so the Orientation committee agreed to hold the gael group dinners earlier. At this point the IRC demanded that the committee ensure that all frosh get back to residence in time for the meetings, and threatened to cancel all residence bookings for gael groups for the whole of Frosh Week if this is not done.

Orientation committee chairman Eleanor Crowder explained that the IRC claimed it has bowed to the wishes of the Orientation committee for too long and that it has now decided to put its foot down.

After moving into secret session for an hour and a half, the IRC demanded an extension of residence meeting time from 5:00 to 9:00 p.m. and again threatened to scrap Orientation room bookings.

Bill Fallis, another Orientation committee member, said that he would try to get a petition signed by half of the members of the IRC which would allow Orientation to run until 7:00 p.m. with the promise that freshmen would be back in residence by that time. The proposal was acceptable to the IRC but not to Crowder.

The WRC has announced that it is perfectly flexible on the issue of gael group dinners, but because of the IRC protests, the dinners will probably have to be rescheduled. Rescheduling would cause more problems, however, because Sunday dinner will be served in mens' residence only. Ban Righ will be closed.

Chain letters are illegal

Kingston postmaster, J. S. Hackett told the Journal that chain letters are considered "illegal mail" and are treated as such. Hackett was replying to questions concerning the legality of the wave of chain letters which has been circulating around Queen's recently.

The latest type of chain letter promises a return of $20,480 in return for buying a list of names for twenty dollars and for sending a money order for twenty dollars to the person whose name is at the top of the list.

Hackett pointed out that under the Prohibition regulations of the Canada Postal Guide that "any article concerning schemes devised to deceive or defraud the public, or for the purpose of obtaining money under false pretenses is illegal." He was also concerned that first class mail service would suffer if the mail is flooded with chain letters.

At Queen's

Canadian Studies strong

How important are Canadian Studies at Queen's? This is one question which will be answered when the Working Group on Canadian Studies of the Faculty of Arts and Science makes its presentation to the Commission on Canadian Studies on April 23.

The commission, chaired by former Trent University president T.H.B. Symons, is currently travelling across the country receiving presentations on Canadian Studies in the universities.

The Working Committee, which was formed even before the commission, has been investigating the status of Canadian Studies at Queen's for over a year. In order to get a true picture of the nature of Canadian-oriented courses at the university, it invited representations from faculties and schools outside the Faculty of Arts and Science.

The committee's brief will emphasize the effectiveness of the interdisciplinary approach currently used at Queen's, and will bring the university's distinguished record in Canadian Studies to the commission's attention.

"Queen's is very strong on Canadian Studies," according to Working Committee member Peter Stokes. The history, politics and economics departments have stressed Canadian Studies "for a long time", and the Douglas Library is renowned for its excellent collection of Canadian materials.

In January, the Committee published a brochure which outlines the university's resources, associated faculties and schools, and lists more than 70 undergraduate courses which use Canadian content extensively or comparatively with material related to other areas such as Commonwealth Studies.

The Committee's presentation to the commission will take place on April 23 in the Collins Room, Richardson Hall, and will be open to the public. RMC is expected to present a brief in the morning and the Queen's brief will be made in the afternoon. Each presentation will be followed by a question and answer period. Private briefs will be accepted after Queen's has been heard from.

Job Bank is already open

If you are going to spend the summer in Kingston and would like some help in finding a job, then Job Bank would like to assist you. Simply drop into the Job Bank office at 121 Union Street and fill out an application form. (Career Planning and Placement)

Last year Job Bank was highly successful and found over 200 summer jobs for the students of Queen's, St. Lawrence and local high schools. In fact, at times there were not enough students available to fill all of the jobs handled by the office. So part of Job Bank's success depends on how many students use the service - it's free and was developed to aid you the student.

If you have any questions please drop in and see us or else call Job Bank at 547-5580.

Beer Store near campus

The Brewers' Retail has announced that it will open a new store near campus by early August. The new outlet, to be located on Princess St. at University Ave., will be about the same size as the store on Concession St. It will be an unusual-looking beer store, with a peaked roof, limestone front and wall murals designed to blend with historic surroundings in Kingston.

There are currently four Brewers' Retail outlets in the Kingston area.

PASSOVER at HILLEL

Queen's Hillel is again offering Kosher Passover meals during this week of Passover, April 16-24th.

1st seder - April 16th, 7 p.m.

2nd seder - April 17th, 7 p.m.

For further information and reservations, phone 542-1532
All reservations must be made immediately.

CANADA MANPOWER Centre For Students

MAY 1st

FEDERAL BUILDING
(above Post Office)
BAGOT ST. ENTRANCE
RM. 241
PHONE: 546-4204 546-4205
HOURS: 8:30 - 5:00

Pizza Chalet

286 MONTREAL ST. KINGSTON

544-1227

OPEN MON. TUES WED. 4:00 p.m. to 1:00 a.m.
OPEN ALL DAY SUNDAY 12 – 12
OPEN THURS. FRI. SAT. 4:00 p.m. to 2:00 a.m.

Chalet Deluxe EXTRA LARGE — Pepperoni- Mushrooms- Bacon Sausage- Green Peppers- Olive Cheese- Tomato Sauce $5.50
BIGGEST PIZZA YOU'VE EVER SEEN!

SELECTION WITH CHEESE & TOMATO SAUCE	11" REG	13" MED	15" LGE	SUPER 17" X-LGE
1. Pepperoni-Mushrooms-Bacon-Green Peppers Sausages-Olive	2.50	3.65	4.55	5.50
2. Pepperoni-Mushrooms	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
3. Pepperoni-Bacon	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
4. Mushrooms-Bacon	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
5. Combination Pizza Pepperoni-Mushrooms Green Peppers-Olives	2.40	2.95	3.95	4.95
6. Bacon	1.85	2.60	3.65	4.65
7. Pepperoni	1.85	2.60	3.65	4.65
8. Cheese	1.75	2.40	2.95	3.90
9. Mushrooms	1.85	2.60	3.65	4.65

Combination Special — Pepperoni- Olive Mushrooms- Green Peppers $3.95
A LARGE PIZZA SURE TO PLEASE

Co-operative Day Care Centre faces financial trouble

by Bob Mutrie

The co-operative Day Care Centre at 76 Queen's Crescent is in a financial turmoil with a deficit totalling $500 and it appears that there is not too much hope that it will be covered in the near future.

Despite an appeal to the city, the AMS and a canvassing campaign of area groups, the Centre has only managed to raise about $75 from the Women's Liberation Group. The AMS offered to help the Centre for one-half their deficit only after they had raised the other half.

The Queen's Crescent Centre is having somewhat more difficulty getting money than other city Centres due to discriminatory city regulations which require that at least one of a child's parents not be a student. In the case of the Centre, fifteen of thirty-six parents are students.

In addition, because the Centre is not directly accountable to the city of Kingston due to its co-operative nature, it was declared ineligible for the usual 20 per cent aid from the city which then entitles it to a further 80 per cent grant from the province.

Student Affairs Director Jim Whitley, who has been the traditional link between the university administration and the Co-operative Day Care Centre noted that the university has supplied the Centre with the house and that they are paying the light, heat and repair bills to help the Centre. He added that the administration is reluctant to commit itself any further financially, as it is not in the terms of their original granting system. He also stated that it is already costing the university $4,000.

Whitley insisted that the intitiative must come from the province in drafting a new set of procedures for funding day care for children of university students and centres of a co-operative nature, and added that there are already movements being made towards a more equitable system.

He noted that there has been "a lot of correspondence between members of the Council of Ontario Universities", which ultimately has ended in their support for a revised method of day care financing.He stated that plans are being considered which would no longer make it necessary for a day care centre to have municipal support before receiving provincial funding. Instead, any centre which serves a municipality would be eligible for provincial support.

In the meantime, Whitley stated, there is an OFY project planned for this summer to provide a playground near 76 Queen's Crescent so that the children may be tended for part of the time by non-professional staff to help keep down the cost of running the centre, and to help fill the gap in volunteers which occurred last summer.

For the longterm trend in day care, Whitley is somewhat more optimistic. "We have simply reached a plateau", he said, remembering the days when the local centre was a dirty, ill-kept, ill-furnished room in the Students' Memorial Union where, "all the children caught all the diseases that were going around."

He stated that there is a possibility that upon the completion of the Arts Social Sciences Centre that the Public Administration Building will be made available for expanded day care facilities. He hoped that if the plan if accepted there would be room for both a multi-purpose child-care centre and a co-operative day care centre.

Whitley was especially critical of the West Campus day care facilities. He noted that the centre will only take children in for either three afternoons or three mornings a week for a period of two and a half hours. This he pointed out is hardly enough time for the parent to catch a bus, get downtown, do the shopping and return. He felt that if its operations were expanded it could take some of the load off the Queen's Crescent Centre.

"If children need day care they should have it", he said, adding that such children will not get proper care at home. "We are providing the best substitute", he said.

Constable controversy continues

Chief Constable Ian Nordheimer has defended the controversial quota system for female constables.

In an interview with the Journal, Nordeheimer claimed that the quota system was established because there are only a limited number of areas where women can work and he wants to give all female constables enough to do.

He was replying to claims from OFS delegate Lyn Whitham and Senator Kathy Turner that the use of quotas is unjustified. Turner is setting up a committee which will investigate charges of elitism within the force and look into the need for restructuring it. Whitham charges that the quota system violates the Ontario Human Rights Code and is preparing a case of the subject to take before the AMS Court.

Nordheimer admitted that the concern expressed by Whitham and Turner was reasonable, but claimed that they have not taken an adequate look at the type of work constables have to do. He said that critics of the quota system do not have experience as AMS constables on which to base their comments.

While female constables are obviously needed to frisk girls at football games and are good at appeasing thirsty students in pub lineups, there are some jobs for which they are unsuited. According to Nordheimer, male constables must be used at events such as beer bashes at Leonard and Wallace Halls in order to show drinking students that they can back up their demands with force. "When it comes down to throwing someone out, even the girls feel that guys are better suited to the job". He claimed that female constables have been reluctant to staff events where rowdiness was predicted.

IAN NORDHEIMER

The present balance, which has 20 out of 120 positions filled by women, could vary slightly, Nordheimer said, but the number could not be increased greatly or the work would not be financially worthwhile for the girls involved.

Nordheimer explained tha the use of a female sergeant was unsuccessful last year because nobody knew what her responsibilities should be.

To avoid this problem in the future, he is preparing a constable handbook. It will explain what it is like to be a constable and what a constable's responsibilities are. The handbook is needed to let constables themselves know what is expected of them. Nordheimer hopes it will be ready by September.

Letters criticizing constable selection may be found on Page 11.

Award Committee investigates discrimination

by Kathy McDonald

The Senate Committee on Scholarships and Student Aid became aware of several instances of discrimination in existing awards.

In their ensueing investigation on the terms of award of scholarships, fellowships, prizes, and bursaries that are administered by Queen's, the committee found all but two of these awards to be acceptable under the particular circumstances. Of these two, the University was able to revise the terms of one, and ceased all participation with the administration of the other.

It became apparent that a general guideline outlining acceptable and unexceptable terms of awards should be provided for all those concerned with the establishment of new awards. The Committee decided upon four guidelines: Every attempt should be made to respect the wishes of the donor. Terms of the award that are not ideal but can be accepted under certain conditions should be clearly set out. The guides should be practical and stated in as broad and positive a way as possible. The University community should be invited to comment on any proposed guidelines before they are presented to the Senate for approval.

Awards considered are scholarships, fellowships, prizes, and bursaries. A scholarship is a monetary award given primarily for academic excellence.Need is considered a secondary factor. Fellowships are large monetary awards given at the Master's or doctoral level for academic excellence. A prize is an award or token valued at less than $100. A bursary is a gift of money, where financial need is the primary consideration in the selection of recipients, but academic competence. usually of a "B" standing or higher is required.

Recognizing the rights of a donor to specify the uses to which his gift shall be put, it follows that if unacceptable conditions are proposed or stipulated, the University will have no option but to refuse the gift unless the donor can be persuaded to remove the unacceptable conditions.

The Committee believes that conditions of award are acceptable where scholarships, fellowships, prizes, and bursaries are open to general academic competition in more than one faculty, year of program, field of study or course.

Preferably rewards should not be restricted to recipients from a limited geographical area but because of the strong and understandable interests that some donors will have in such areas, these restrictions can be accepted if there is no alternative to the donor's wishes.

With what it hopes would be rare exceptions, the Committee believes that conditions of award discriminating on basis of race, colour, age, sex, marital status, creed or political persuasion should never be accepted by the University.

Without compromising its position on the above unacceptable conditions, the Committee recognizes that circumstances may arise from time to time in which it may be considered desirable to direct financial aid to members of a particular race, color, age, sex, marital status, creed or political persuasion to help offset previous unjust treatment.

Continued on Page 9

Finlay's Sport Shop

Jitane, Monshee and Raleigh bike
some bike models
still 10% off

93 Princess St.
548-8255

Finlay's
FREE
1-Wineskin with purchase of any bike

Finlay's
⅓ OFF
ANY TENNIS
RACQUET

Finlay's
½OFF
ANY BACKPACK WITH FRAME

Finlay's
50¢ OFF
ANY CAN OF TENNIS BALLS

TOM'S SHOE REPAIR
Shoe Service
186 Wellington
George the Hatter

leathercoats and all leatherwork repaired

546-5193

Free buses for students

Queen's University students will be able to ride free on the Kingston city buses beginning September 1 of this year, merely upon presentation of the activity card. The five dollar cost per student will be covered by a three dollar increase in the student non-academic fees, the remaining $2 per head to be donated by the university.

This special deal will involve a total payment of $45,000 to the Public Utilities Commission, representing provision of transportation on city buses for 9,000 students.

Public Utilities Commissioner Reginald Potts stated that he has received some complaints from area residents that such a system of financing public transportation for students was being discriminatory to others. However, Chairman of the PUC Dr. R.H. Hay stated that if any other large city group wanted to present such a transit proposal, he would consider it as well.

The present arrangement for students was approved in a referendum about a month ago, allowing the three dollar charge to be added to the non-academic fees.

According to the general manager of the PUC, Kenneth Fee, the arrangement with the AMS is on a "one-year trial basis....it is a straight business proposal."

During a one-month trial period run last October in which rides on Kingston buses were offered free to students with green cards, the PUC discovered that the operation could succeed on a more permanent basis and that it would provide more revenue from students in total than is presently received.

It is expected that the bus service will help link central and west campus as well as allow students to get to other parts of the city more easily.

AOSC runs into turbulence

Special representations made to the Air Transport Commission on behalf of the Association of Student Councils charter flight program are unlikely to meet with any success according to Kiloran German, External Affairs Commissioner.

The AOSC program does not conform to the regulations the government adopted January 8.

They had hoped to get special exemption from the regulations if regulation 6 of the European Civil Aviation Council was accepted. In most European nations student affinity charters are permitted.

Affinity charters are those which specific organizations offer to their members. Misuse of affinity group charters was a contributing factor to the introduction of the new regulations.

By requiring the price of charter flights to be on a par with the lowest Canadian airline the new regulations are intended to protect Canadian airlines. AOSC flights cost between $135 and $175, at least $34 cheaper than the lowest Canadian airline.

However, John Drummond, Vice President of Air Canada, told German last week that "as far as Air Canada is concerned, the government regulations have put AOSC into this predicament and they should get them out."

AOSC is now seriously considering flying students out of Niagara Falls, New York.

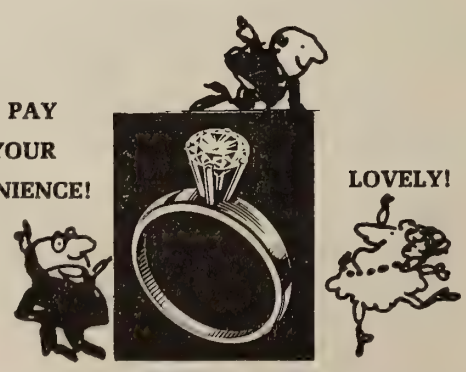
Ontario budget:

No word yet on OSAP, tuition; sales tax up 2%; aid to cities

TORONTO—Students wondering about the effect of their protests to the provincial government over university funding were still left wondering after provincial treasurer John White brought down his budget yesterday, although indications are that there may be good news.

The government will not release detailed estimates until this afternoon, and the only reference to post-secondary education in the budget speech was an additional allocation of $66 million "to modify the impact of decreased enrolments and increase student support." Some amount of this money will be used to increase the Basic Income Unit (BIU) by 3.4 percent to $1,825.

In addition to the $66 million, $31 million has been added to the budget of the ministry of colleges and universities but no explanation for this amount has been released yet.



The government increased the grants made by the province to cities in lieu of property taxes on universities to $50 per student, and seemed to reaffirm the freeze on capital expenditures on post-secondary education.

Student leaders in Toronto, some fearing for the worst, seemed happy at the increase in the BIU, but were hesitant to comment until details of the student award program are available.

The budget also calls for "an increase of the provincial sales tax to 7 percent; imposition of sales tax on energy consumption; massive transfers of revenue to municipalities; increasing taxes paid by corporations; an easing of many succession duties; and raising the tax exemption for meals served in restaurants from $2.50 to $4.00."

BUY YOUR DIAMOND NOW!

AND PAY AT YOUR CONVENIENCE!

LOVELY!

Sometimes it's not easy to pay right away. That doesn't mean you have to wait to buy a diamond. You can choose one of our credit plans. Our selection includes rings in all price ranges. Let us help you choose a splendid, exquisitely cut diamond and plan convenient payments. It's the easy way to enjoy your diamond now.

KINNEAR D'ESTERRE
JEWELLERS
168 PRINCESS STREET
KINGSTON, ONTARIO

AMAZING OFFER! PORTRAITS IN OIL

Done by Professional Artists
From your Favorite Snapshot,

AT UNBELIEVABLY LOW PRICES

PHOTOS of Loved Ones, Weddings, Graduations, or other Memorable Events, also Pets or Favorite Scenery For Further Information and Sample Display By Appointment only Phone 548-8403

St James Anglican Church

PALM SUNDAY
9.00 a.m. HOLY COMMUNION
11.00 a.m. MORNING PRAYER
"Requiem" Faure
7:30 p.m. COMPLINE SERVICE

Holy Tuesday
10:00 a.m. HOLY COMMUNION
2:30 p.m. Shut In Communion

Holy Wednesday
7:45 a.m. HOLY COMMUNION & Breakfast

GOOD FRIDAY
10:30 a.m. DEVOTIONAL SERVICE
Preacher The Ven A. J. Anderson, Archdeacon of Kingston

LOVE MOTHER'S

For your patronage during the past season Mother's offers its sincerest thanks and looks forward to our relationship in the year to come.

this coupon worth 50¢

50¢ off PIZZA SUBS & SPAGHETTI 50¢ off

Dining Room, Pick-up or Free Delivery

455 Princess St., Kingston
549-0006

MOTHER'S

coupon expires April 30th

BICYCLE BUY OF THE YEAR!

MEN'S 10 SPEED "FLANDRIA"

RACING BICYCLES

European Precision Built. Featherweight Frame. Famous "Simplex" multiple gearing system. Must be seen to be appreciated

list price 139.95
wholesale cost 104.50

89.95

Nobody But Nobody Can Even Come Close to this incredible value. Other European-built Men's 10 Speed Models at Similar Bargain Prices.

ON SALE 79.95 and 84.95

ALL BICYCLES feature the sturdy "Simplex" gearing system, sure-stop centre-pull caliper brakes, adjustable racing saddle. Engineered to satisfy even the most demanding rider. Less than wholesale cost.

S&R DISCOUNT SPORTSTORE

Princess St. at Ontario.

CHARGEX OR LAY-A-WAYS ACCEPTED

The Eastern Ontario Drama League Festival '73

Ring Round The Moon

On the second night of the Eastern Ontario Drama League Festival '73, the Brockville Theatre Guild presented Christopher Fry's adaptation of Jean Anouilh's play Invitation of the Castle, called Ring Round the Moon.

It's too bad they did.

The company could not handle the wordiness, the artificiality, the pretense of the play and as a result it was interminably long, boring and unamusing.

The play involves a gimmick and it doesn't work, the entire thing gets thrown off kilter. Two identical twin brothers, Hugo and Frederick, are played by the same actor, yet they are completely opposed in everything but appearance. The speak, think, walk and react, or should do so, in a totally different way. If this cannot be achieved, and last Wednesday night it was not, then the credibility of the play and its intrinsic humour and irony peter away.

Wayne Dailey, as Hugo-Frederick, made an admirable, but unfortunately benign attempt at the pair. His movement as both brothers was equally stiff and rigid, a general characteristic of the entire company. His vocal pattern changed only slightly between the two men, but because the script dictates such differentiation. Ideally one should be able to tell which of the brothers is on stage the moment he enters. In fact, at one point, the romantic heroine, Isabelle, played rather whinily by Nancy Lee Whitehorn is supposed to mistake Frederick for Hugo, but we are supposed to know, hence the humour. We didn't. Hence no humour.

This weakness, no matter how effective the portrayals of the supporting cast, is nevertheless the touchstone on which the play rests. Because it did not work, because we were constantly aware of Mr. Dailey running like mad around the back of the stage to make his various entrances as either Hugo or Frederick, we chuckled, but for the wrong reasons.

Shelley Graham, as the baroque Lady India, because of her more appropriate sense of the part and the play, was working on a different level than the other characters. Given a cast which had the same deliberate sense of overplay, she would not have seemed so out of place. Her stylization of the monetarily motivated mistress was instead, discordant with the other portrayals and one was disturbed by it, rather than pleased.

As Romainville, Stanley Pearce was the one actor, who both in costume and countenance seemed comforatble and credible. He was physically the aristocrat, the December lover, the romantic in his pursuit of Isabelle and exuded enough flowery enthusiasm to be deemed ridiculous by all.

The performances were hampered on all accounts by some very heavy handed direction. James Payne simply could not get his actors working at the right pitch for this comic farce. Because the play is poetic and so weighted down with speeches that need both the energy and the experience of the most prolific and practised actors, it feel completely apart.

The set was scanty and uninteresting, pale yellow, bathed in very general dry light. The costumes, particularly Isabelle's weren't attractive enough to suggest the "magic" of the evening in the winter garden of a chateau outside of Paris. In Isabelle's case, her dress represents another touchstone in the play. She, as the poor, humble, unpretentious and sweet play-piece in Hugo's intrigue is supposedly to have chosen her dress. It should contrast completely from the dress of Diana, her spoiled nouveau rich rival. The colour is supposed to be like the smoke rising from burning leaves in autumn. It should reflect an otherworldliness in its soft simplicity. But this one wasn't even pretty. Instead it was dowdy looking, almost dirty, more like charcoal dust than smoke.

The blocking and movement was abysmally conventional. It looked as if the director had recently read a book on theatrical technique and had remembered only one thing. "You must move on a line and only on a line." The use of the stage could have been simplified had the set been more compactly placed, constricted like an accordian. This also would probably have reserved Mr. Dailey's energy when rushing around to exit and enter.

Shelley Graham as Lady India and David Cody as Patrice Bombelles

Adjudication

by Sandy Naiman

In all, the evening was a theatrical failure, but an adjudicatory success. Michael Sinelnikoff spoke beautifully and sensitively about this production. He stated that the types are "deliberately overdrawn", that you need "virtuoso performances" with a "keen sense of comic timing and projection".

He explained that this play is "half way between farce and comedy" and "infused with nostalgic moonlight".

It was, he stated however, "not entirely successful". The players were hindered by the choice of play and "failed gloriously in a brave attempt".

He continued, "the director did not have enough control of the rhythm and pace", that there was extraneous movement which was not related to the text, that there was an absence of "real ensemble" playing and that the actors appeared "not to be listening to each other".

Although the set was "effective", said Sinelnikoff, it was "too plain and heavy to convey the lightness and airiness of the play".

The lighting was "too general, lacking in glamour" and specificity. Once could not distinguish between morning and evening.

He was disappointed with Isabelle's costume but liked Lady India's and was particularly intrigued with her Tango sequence. He said that Wayne Dailey, as Hugo-Frederick was "very young and lacked the flexibility and the command of language". He needed to do not only an external but an "internal study to create the two different characters" and Sinelnikoff suggested he try again when he is a little older.

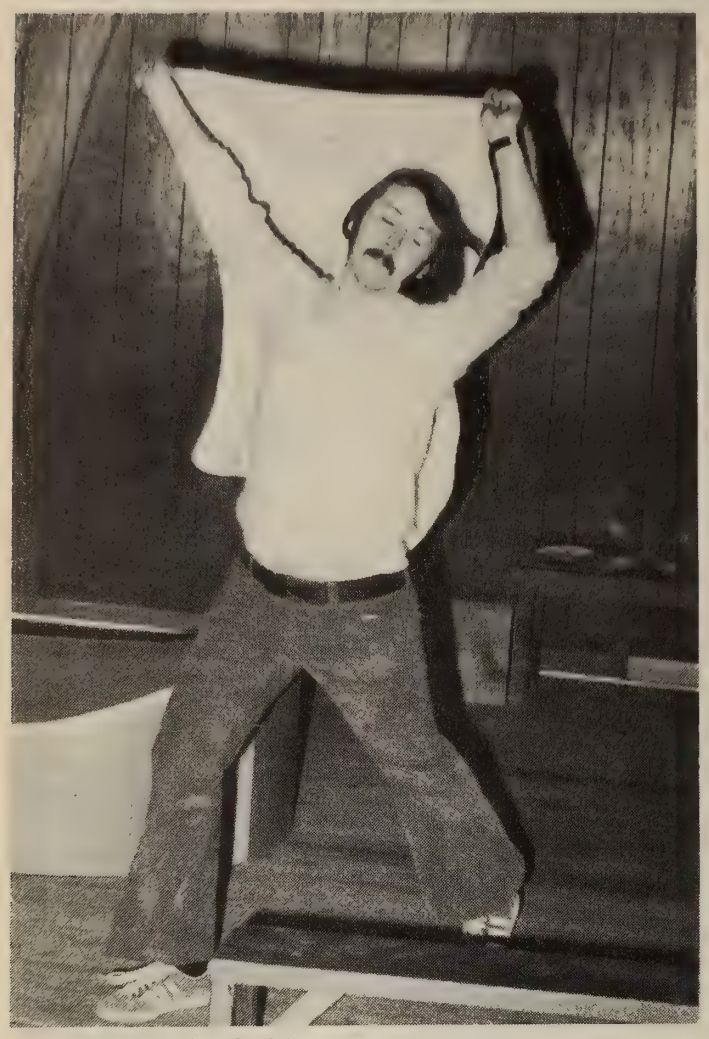
Nancy Lee Whitehorn as Isabelle "was not up to the role", he continued, "she was petulant and querulous and had a vocal problem". She needs to look "lost in wonder, to reflect this evening of magic". But her eyes were too downcast, too often and in the fight scene between she and Diana, played by Susan Bateson, Sinelnikoff expected a real down and out "wild" affair, which he did not get.

Sinelnikoff made some other personal comments regarding specific performances and concluded his tactfully executed adjudication by stating that "it was a splendid effort and at one of the most notoriously difficult plays". It is unfortunate that the production did not have as sensitive an interpretation as it did, an adjudication.

Tensdays

Friday, April 13th
8:15 pm - Handel's Messiah presented by the Chalmers Singers with Chamber orchestra - directed by David Cameron. St. Paul's Church.

Saturday, April 14th
8:00 pm A demi-dinner, with a French flavour at the Agnes Etherington Art Centre. $5.00 per couple.



Tuesday, April 17th
Ban Righ Fireside presents Brahm's Sonata in F Minor for Clarinet and Piano. 5:45 - 6:30 pm. Coffee and Dessert.

Theatre
Domino Theatre presents "Lock Up Your Daughter" at 9:00 pm Friday April 13 through Sunday April 15. Tickets $2.50 general admission and on Sunday evening Student admission is $1.75

Movies
Capital - Elvis on Tour until Monday, then Rage and Come Back.
Hyland - Assassination of Trotsky
Odeon - Love Swedish Style and The Runaway

Pubs
Commodore - The Country Sound
The Manor - The Perry Sisters
401 Inn - Fat Chance
Town House - Full Steam Ahead

"You're A Good Man Charlie Brown" - musical disaster

Baby faced Rick Bough as Linus with blanket

by Sandy Naiman

"You're A Good Man Charlie Brown", is a very hard show to wreck. After all, the songs are charming, the philosophy universal and who can resist Snoopy.

Needless to say, and I wouldn't have thought it possible, the Cornwall Little Theatre came as close to wrecking this confection based on Charles Schultz's Peanuts comic strip, as is theatrically possible.

First of all, Charlie Brown is a musical. Like it or not, one cannot deny that there are songs in the show which provide easily half of its script and charm.

But there was not one adequate singing voice in this company. When the accompaniment began and the Cornwall players broke into the first and title song, as far as I was concerned the game was over and we lost. My thoughts drifted forth in horror to the home hitting "Book Report", to the show stopping "Summertime" and to the poignant finale "Happiness". Unfortunately my dread was not relieved by the execution of these songs later on.

But aside from the musical hatchet job that this company performed, not for one moment did I believe that I was watching children. Obviously, in reality I wasn't. But the prime crux of this show is the imposition of Schultz's brilliantly conceived incisive child-like maturity onto adults who can assume, physically and emotionally the curious idiosyncrasies that we take for granted in kids.

In essence, the show must look and feel like a giant comic strip. The players and all their properties and actions are or should be scaled up to reflect the simplicity and fantasy of child like perception.

None of this fantasy or spontaneous imagination was present in the performances we saw. The pace, to me, seemed slow, the timing awkward and the sense of wonder lost to a concern for externals.

Theatrically, the piece is perhaps one of the simplest to make work. There is little need for sustained action or concentration. The script works on short one liners and these are framed in black outs. The set is simple and abstract. The vitality of the production depends upon a free and spontaneous interpretation which a clever director can really have fun with.

At the risk of sounding overly obvious, when we should have gotten "Peanuts" on the stage, we got only the shells. So in effect, we were tricked with the Cornwall Little Theatre offering. Given a charming, simple and delightful script, one which even the performances could hardly damage, the play succeeded only in itself. The production marred it miserably.

Speaking more specifically, the characters of Lucy and Linus, that famous sibling duo, never even remotely suggested any subcutaneous rivalry. Katie Burke, as Lucy, although the only member of the cast to even attempt a physical stylization with her walk, did not stylize her reading of the role. She made Lucy into a grotesque. When singing to Schroeder none of the subtle built in hostility came forth, none of the antagonism towards Beethoven. Her aggressiveness was a posture more than an internal trait. Her voice was shrill to the point of grating on the ears. She handled her one liners as if prefaced by a drum role.

As was the case with all the performances, the sense of innocence was gone. There was no spontaneity, no surprise. The actors looked like they were working too hard to be enjoying themselves. Perhaps the show was over rehearsed and the initial joy could not be recaptured.

As Linus, the most philosophical peanut, Rick Bough was also the most musical. In his song, "My Blanket and Me" he blended some stiff and clumsy movement with a weak but at least properly pitched voice. His relationship with Lucy was not nearly realized and he seemed only to relate to her in scripted sequences.

As Charlie Brown, Harry Young wasn't young enough or pathetic enough to be the object of youthful trials. He seemed deenergized and almost disinterested in the activities of his friendly menage.

Schroeder was too painfully weak and lethargic for words, as was Patty, whose only notable achievement was chiming into the last song so overtly off key that the entire audience cringed in unison.

Only Snoopy had the bodily elasticity and sense of poochiness to match his canine character. Tom Fowler was easily the best performer of the crew and he was also the only performer not to even attempt to sing

He talked and bounced his way through the aforementioned Suppertime and in so doing completely destroyed it. He missed out on the wiliness, the puckishness that the song affords him and so the latter half of the show in turn missed its climax.

The set was strangely antiplayful. The shapes, except for the dog house, which was realistic in design, were very abstract. The dog house worked against the mildly imaginative way in which other shapes were exercised. All pieces were painted pale yellow and blue, an insipid departure from the bright primary colours one so often associates with children.

The lighting was, however, both effective and well handled.

I suppose if you have never seen the show, you can't help but like it. But if you have and not speaking comparitively and qualitatively, you are aware of the limits to which it can be taken and especially the purpose the songs play in it musically.

In this case the show had the germ of a successful production. Had the players been able to discover the excitement and enchantment in the script and sing their hearts out instead of dreading those moments when the piano tinkled and they cleared the cobwebs away to croak or screech out lyrical fantasies about flying kites, imaginary red barons and losing baseball games, it would have been more palatable.

Not to discredit the direction, which did explore a few of the possibilities of the very sketchy script, the show still failed.

Handel's Messiah

As one of their many appearances of the season, the Chalmers Singers will be in concert at St. Mary's Cathedral on Friday night to perform their rendition of Handel's "Messiah".

Under the direction of David Cameron, organist and music director of Chalmers Church and Professor of Music at Queen's, the widely acclaimed group will bring their version of the Messiah to a Kingston audience on the 241st anniversary of its first performance, August 13, 1732. This is the first time that this oratorio will be done here with authentic ornamentation. According to Cameron, an attempt has been made to recreate the ornamentation and instrumentation used in the 18th century, as a tribute to Kingston's Tercentenary celebrations.

St. Mary's Cathedral, at the corner of Clergy and Johnson, was chosen as the theatre because of its architecture, and as a gesture to ecumenical goodwill in Tercentenary year. The beautiful cathedral has excellent acoustics.

The original inspiration for the production came from Cameron and his Chalmers Singers. Cameron has been with the choir for nine years now, and the majority of its members are Queen's students, faculty, and graduates from both the Queen's and Kingston communities.

This attempt at the Messiah follows a production in January which represented music from earlier in the century. A conscious effort has been made to widely publicize their performances to both the Queen's and Kingston residents. The lead artists include Margaret Campbell, Queen's graduate, Wilbur Maust, a Professor in the Music Department, and John Davies, a professor of Civil Engineering at Queen's. All are well known performers in the local area.

Tickets will be available at the door or at the Chalmer's Office, 212 Barrie Street, but supply is limited.

Adjudication...

Michael Sinelnikoff's adjudication and my criticism differed completely in the case of "You're a good man, Charlie Brown."

He loved it.

Clearly he had never seen it performed before and was completely taken in by the show and by the few innovations that Director Barbara Mallette employed.

But are his ears so numb not to have realized that as a musical it was a disaster? He never even mentioned the lack of musical acumen in the cast, the raw notes, the straining, the screeching and the diminished volume.

At any rate, here is what he said.

He explained that the "field is wide open to create the magic" of Peanuts. He was particularly "enamoured" of Tom Fowler's Snoopy, whom he dubbed a "rubber limbed young man". He commented on the ambitious effort with a difficult play and its triumph because of the "simplicity" of the directorial concept. "It has only the imagination and the integrity of the cast and crew to carry it," he continued and "the whole evening added up to a total delight."

"It could hold its own on any stage anywhere in the English speaking world," said Sinelnikoff.

Of the direction, he said that the economy of the movement was precise and sensitive and demonstrated the knowledge of the individual performers.

"The set was absolutely right and allowed freedom. It was well designed and nicely coloured," he stated and "Props had a sense of fantasy..The costumes could not be better", and were well coordinated with the decor.

He said the sound effects were "just right", the lighting was "professional", the makeup "refreshing, low key and completely credible."

"Charlie Brown," he said, "had an aire helpless wistfulness" and "believed in what he was doing."

"Linus was a delightfully baby faced actor," and Sinelnikoff particularly enjoyed the "whimsy of the Blanket routine".

Schroeder had "lyrical moments", particularly when "Beethoven made his initial appearance on stage."

Lucy was "aggressive, not always loveable, but human."

Patty was "deliciously awful, feminine enough to wear lacy underwear and display a very special relationship with Snoopy."

And finally Snoopy, who gave a "virtuoso performance", showed a "thorough knowledge of dog psychology" and Sinelnikoff complimented him for his "dog tracking down rabbit routine".

According to Sinelnikoff's, adjudication, this production was intriguing in its originality and he could find no fault with it.

"A Time To Reap" --- pathetic little exercise

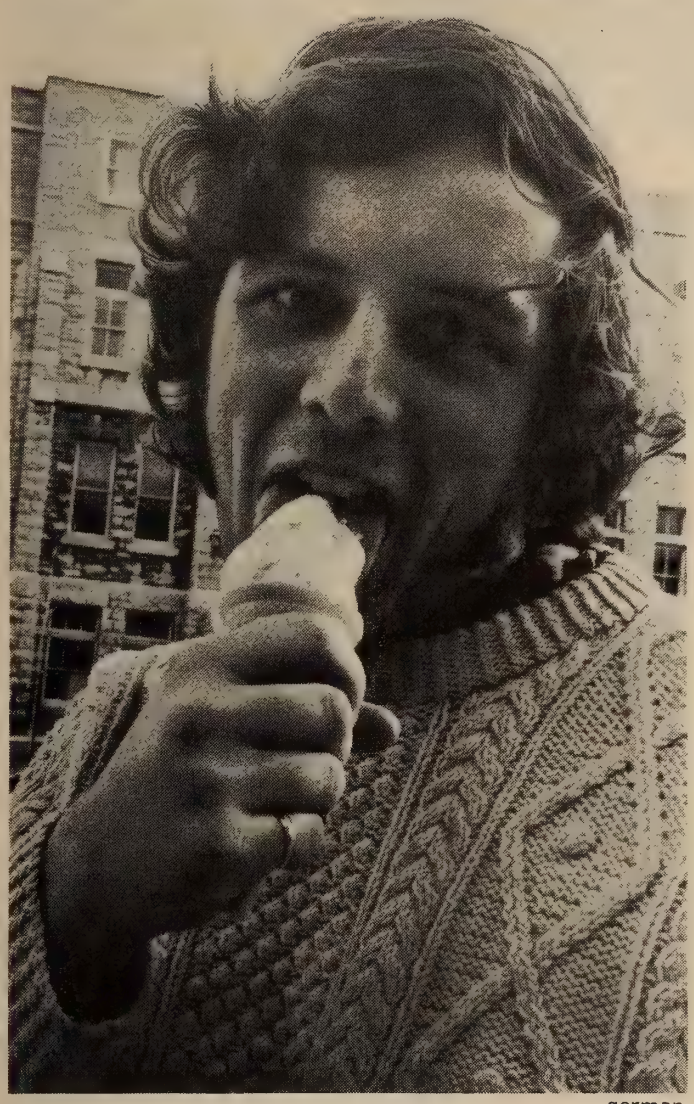
by Kiloran German

The Lindsay Little Theatre had an insurmountable obstacle to overcome on Friday night - the play that for some unknown reason it attempted to produce. "A Time to Reap" by Martin Lager is a trivial little effort with a hopelessly contrived and thoroughly uninteresting plot, dialogue which is little more than a series of well worn cliches, and a neverending parade of completely one-dimensional characters. Michael Sinelnikoff referred to it as "the genesis of a very authentic play of a very Canadian flavor". If this is true, Canadian drama is in a sorry state indeed.

As the play tended to be sleep-inducing, its fairly difficult to reconstruct the plot, but I can't resist making an attempt: little brother with tortured past requires assistance of successful big brother with villainous ambitious wife to buy daddy's farm while mummy bustles around stirring cake batter for 80th birthday of confined to a home grandaddy who shocks them all by deciding to get hitched to some old duck while pa grunts platitudes while little sister and hippie boyfriend from big bad Toronto bop in like two gnomes on a motorcycle while two incidental characters neck up a storm until iittle brother gets drunk and crashes motorcycle and villainous sister-in-law confesses all and big brother relents and hippie boyfriend takes to farming and makes a decent proposal and pa decides to move into town so he and mummy can make a new start and grandaddy elopes and mummy finishes baking the cake and they all eat it and live happily ever after amen.

The ludicrous plot was unfolded through a series of line by line gags which positively reeked of self conscious Canadianism and which effectively destroyed the playwright's abortive attempt at serious drama. The plot and the dialogue were clearly at odds with each other.

Not even a thoroughly competent company could have done much to salvage this pathetic little exercise in grade school literature and the degree of competence of the Lindsay Little Theatre is not very high if Friday's production was representative of their work.



John Arril's direction was unimaginative and as Sinelnikoff pointed out in one of his more astute observations of the evening, little attempt was made to explore the subtext of the play Arril must have stolen his blocking from a Block-by-numbers-fore-beginners-book: every line was accentuated by a move and a triangular balance was always achieved. While such blocking might be appropriate for "Oedipus Rex", it was completely out of place in the home of a rural Ontario family.

None of the acting was good enough to make the evening worthwhile - for the most part, it was sadly consistent with the play and the direction. Don Diminie, Syd Melville and Al Kirk (as little brother, Pa and grandaddy respectively; gave potentially interesting performances in that they actually achieved a level of characterization. Unfortunately however, their performances were static and no character development was evident during the course of the play.

The sound effects were incredibly poor. Every car or motorcycle that approached sounded like a jet taking off. The costumes were adequate although little sister and hippie boyfriend looked like a couple of middle aged dumplings dressed up like freaks for a Hallowe'en party.

To give the company its due, the set was technically excellent. Howard Berry, the set designer, accurately described by Sinelnikoff as "one of the stars of the show", built a beautiful interior of a farm house, realistic in every detail. Ironically, the set did not work for the play. The room was far two spacious for the director to be able to create the claustrophobic family atmosphere which was required.

Sinelnikoff's adjudication was just about as insipid as the rest of the evening. He obviously didn't want to trample on anyone's toes. However, he overdid things a little when he suggested that all the play required was "a series of production drafts" such as the ones that the works of Shakespeare and Chekhov had undergone. The only way that the playwright and the Lindsay Little Theatre could improve "A Time to Reap" would be to throw it in the nearest incinerator.

- german

It's ice cream time!

CFRC am-fm Summer Program Schedule

CFRC & CFRC-FM, 1490 and 91.9

THURSDAYS
6:30 Spectrum
6:55 Happenings
7:30 Hancock's Half-Hour
8:00 Let's Discuss It
9:00 Mainstream and Mindstream
10:00 Nocturne
2:00 Sign-off

FRIDAYS
6:30 Spectrum
6:55 Happenings
7:30 Music Around the World
8:00 The Living Classics
10:00 Nocturne
2:00 Sign-off

SATURDAYS
6:00 Soundstage
6:55 Happenings
7:00 Classics Unlimited
8:00 Spotlight
9:00 Free Folk
10:00 Nocturne
5:00 Sign-off (until April 28)

SUNDAYS
9:00 Musical Panorama
12:00 Classics by Request
3:45 Features
4:00 Sunday Pops
6:55 Happenings
7:00 International Review
7:30 Montage
9:00 Contemporary Folk
10:00 Sign-off

Award Committee Continued from Page 5

Such conditions should be as temporary as it is practical, reviewed at least every two years, and contain provisions to permit amendment of the terms as conditions change.

The Board of Trustees is responsible for legal agreements in the establishment of new awards and the Senate established the terms of the award. The Committee recommends that when new awards are established, a specific procedure should be followed. The Secretary of the University should be advised as soon as an award offer is made. The honor is to be made aware that any discussions about the terms of the award are subject to the approval of the Senate and the Board of Trustees. The Secretary will immediately inform the Principal, the Secretary of the Senate Committee, and the Board of Trustees about the potential gift. The Senate Committee will review any conditions pertaining to the gift and if they are found to be acceptable, the Committee will prepare appropriate terms of award for the joint approval of the Senate and the Board of Trustees. If no acceptable terms of award can be reached, the Secretar of the University is to refer the matter back to the Principal for advice.

The terms of the award as printed in the Universities calender should include the title or name of the award, a short statement about the donor of the award if necessary, a concise and complete statement outlining the conditions of the award, and the value of the award.

The terms of the Interim Report of the Senate Committee on Scholarships and Student Aid will be presented to the Senate for discussion on April 26. Comment is invited from the whole Queen's community, and until Oct. 9, any remarks can be submitted to Dave Ellis, assistant registrar in charge of student awards. After this date, the Senate will meet and make their final decision on the recommendations of the Committee.

WARNING: The Department of National Health and Welfare advises that danger to health increases with amount smoked.

NOTICE TO STUDENTS

Faculty of Arts and Science

A limited number of Arts and Science students will be permitted to take the following Applied Science course for credit toward an Arts and Science degree. Preference will be given to students entering their third year of a four-year degree program. Interested students should pre-register by APRIL 28 in the office of the Associate Dean (Studies) to take this course.

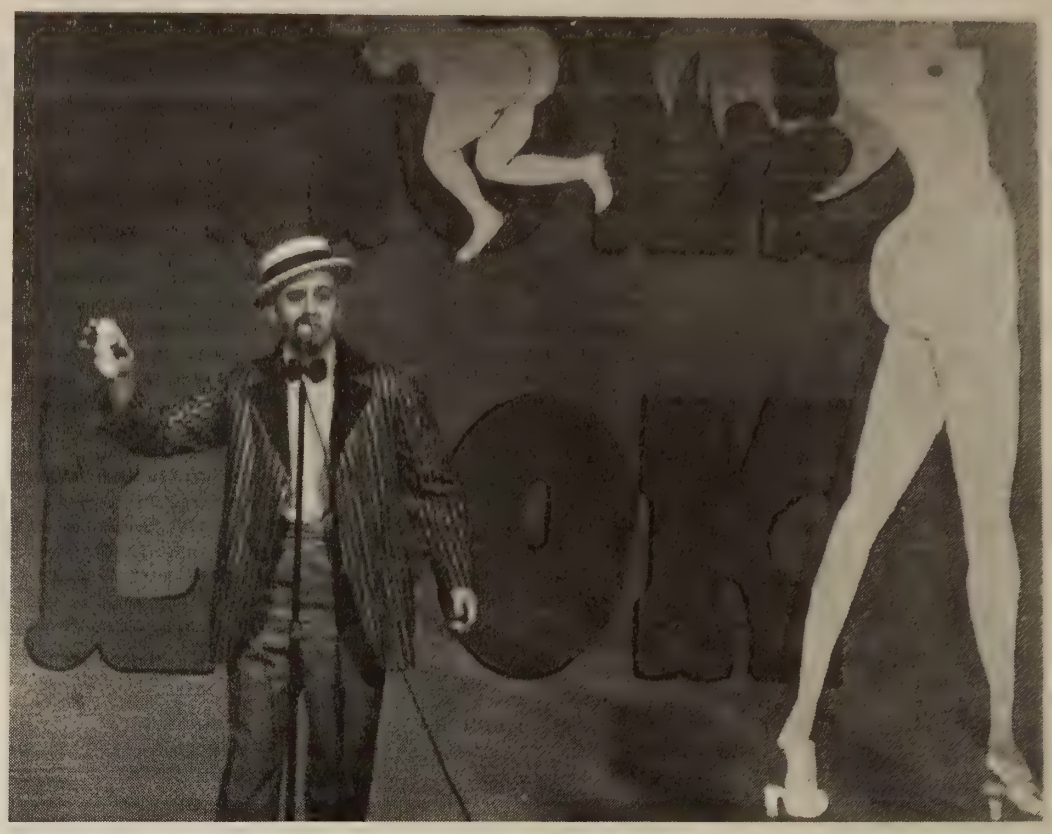
33-101 Nature, Science and Man

An introduction to the nature and development of man and his environment. The evolution of the earth and living species is briefly considered. The present nature of the earth, including its living systems and the environment, as well as the social and cultural inheritance of man is discussed. UNIVERSITY STAFF AND INVITED GUEST LECTURERS

"The Entertainer" --- a puzzling performance

by Sandy Naiman

John Osborne's "The Entertainer" was performed, none too successfully by the Deep River Players, on the last night of the festival, Saturday, April 7.



The play is an easy one to perform badly and a close to impossible one to perform well. First of all it presupposes that Archie Rice, the protagonist be able to play a bad song-dance and comedy man well. It also needs very tight, succinct movement and a psychological understanding of the characters which works on a multi faceted series of levels.

The Deep River Players were not able to accomplish any of these prerequisites. As a result the play seemed to drag interminably on through three excruciating acts.

On initial viewing, I did not think this would be the case. A ten piece orchestra played "the latest, the loudest, the worst" music beautifully badly. The gaused front cloth was gaudy and grotesque and even the set, which was strangely distorted and painted in off white and brown seemed right. But after a while, the angles began to be bothersome. The colours blended hypnotically into one another and the actors, dressed too drabbily blended in turn, into it.

This was also due to a tendency to underlight the stage which created considerable eyestrain and a tendency for the actors to speak too quietly, which created considerable earstrain.

The performance reminded me of a very thoughtful first reading. The actors did not move from internal motivations so much as externally imposed blocking patterns which repeated themselves noticeably throughout the production. Affection, for example, was displayed between daughter Jean and father, or grandfather, by a hand on the shoulder. One began to recognize this motion as the signal of a feeling which otherwise never manifested itself.

Eric LeSurf as Archie Rice

The action of the play revolves principally on two axes. The death of the music hall in England and the 1956 Suez Canal Crisis and their impact on the Rice Family; grandfather, son, daughter, granddaughter and grandson.

In the Rice family drinking is endemic and important, yet with the amount of liquor consumed during the course of the play, no one seemed to get drunk. Archie, played by Eric LeSurf, became remotely supple with gin, but his voice and focus never wavered.

With the ultimate loss of his youngest son, Mick in the war, and his father, Billie, through his attempts to out wit the income tax people, to whom he has not paid taxes for 20 years, the play closes on a sardonic note with Archie saying, "Let me know where you're working tomorrow night and I'll come and see you."

Interspersed between confrontations in the Rice living room are segments of Archie's declining night club act, which are played to the audience.

He sings horrible songs, horribly, tells bad jokes badly and clutches desperately at an age when both he and his profession have seen better days.

His daughter Jean comes home from London to weather a recent chasm in her relationship with her fiance.

Within this miasma of complex emotional entanglements and circumstances, which I have only briefly outlined, the Deep River Players became hopelessly weighted down.

The potential enormity of the individual portraits and the dramatic scope that they circumscribe was never apparent in this production. In a play which should be scathingly touching frightfully human and which can portray realism so incisively, only one moment worked: the confrontation between Billie and his daughter-in-law Phoebe, over the piece of cake he has secretly eaten. When he goes, crushed, into his room I felt a tinge of sympathy, the only emotional response of the evening.

But the play has such subtextual vitality. Archie is not really a tragic figure, for he still has a sense of hope in the end. And even though you know he will go to debtor's prison, you also feel he will always perform when he gets out. He will carry on a useless crusade to bring the music hall back to life.

And finally when given a chance to start a new life in Canada he refuses to go because, "you can't get Draught bass there" and he would lose his only chance to hang on to his identity, which is his profession, with all its decadent and slease.

The play rests completely on the portrayal of Archie but in the case of Eric LeSurf, we simply did not have an Archie Rice.

Charlie Brown named Best Play

"You're A Good Man, Charlie Brown" the Cornwall Little Theatre production was given the Leslie Frost Award for the Best Play, on Saturday night, after Michael Sinelnikoff adjudicated the final E.O.D.L. festival entry.

Tom Fowler's Snoopy, won the award for best supporting actor and "Charlie Brown" won the award for best visual presentation as well as best direction.

Kingston's Domino Theatre's Lock Up Your Daughters won five awards including best costuming, best supporting actress, Sheila Tetlow, best use of speech and best actress both won by Annabelle McCullough and the Therese May Memorial Award for a distinguished contribution to the festival, by Joan MacIntosh, for her accompaniment of the show.

Howard Berry's set for A Time to Reap won for best set design and Don Diminie won the award for best actor in that show.

A Time to Reap also won the award for best production of a Canadian play, which was the only Canadian play in the festival.

Annabelle McCullough, best actress; Don Domine, best actor; Barbara Mallette, best director.

Adjudication...

Michael Sinelnikoff's final adjudication of "The Entertainer" was a brilliant and sensitive "virtuoso performance".

Clearly he has been involved with the Osborne idiom before (he co-directed and played the leading role in Look Back In Anger) for he brought to his analysis a keen understanding of the way in which Osborne and his play work.

He stated, after reading random notes from the author's stage directions that the play "has more bite and energy than we saw this evening", but that it was a "sincere and well intentioned effort, which didn't come off."

Sinelnikoff was "puzzled" about this but wasn't sure why. He stated that the performers were "capable", that the play was "not beyond their understanding, but that it was beyond their technique".

He indicated that perhaps the play was under rehearsed, that the characters hadn't jelled and that their stiffness and blocking were upsetting.

He continued that he felt the emphasis on the family relationship was viable but that too much action was "too far upstage."

The dim lighting was a "barrier" and the stiff and formal blocking "hampered the dynamics of the play".

He stated "the only moment when Archie really sings the blues was cut, and the deletion of the last speech robbed the actor", and he couldn't understand why this was done.

He found the set initially "quite imaginative" but that when the back drop present in the first scene was removed it became "oppressive". He found the costumes "correct and convincing", although he expected Archie's costume to be more "flashy", more in line with the music hall gaudiness.

He mentioned that because of the "strangely dim lighting" we could not see the "deadness behind Archie's eyes", which he continually mentioned in the play.

"The sound," he continued," although well thought out, and sophisticated, was overly elaborate and pretentious and was no substitute for the visual sequence in the script that the director cut.

In individual performances, Sinelnikoff found it "hard to believe" that Roy Malone as Billy, was a "has been", that he should have exuded the "smell of the dead music hall" but that nevertheless he gave a "consistent performance".

As Jean Rice, Christine Ward gave a "flat characterization" Sinelnikoff said and he "expected to see the four gins come on with her." "She had low vocal projection and lacked vitality," he continued.

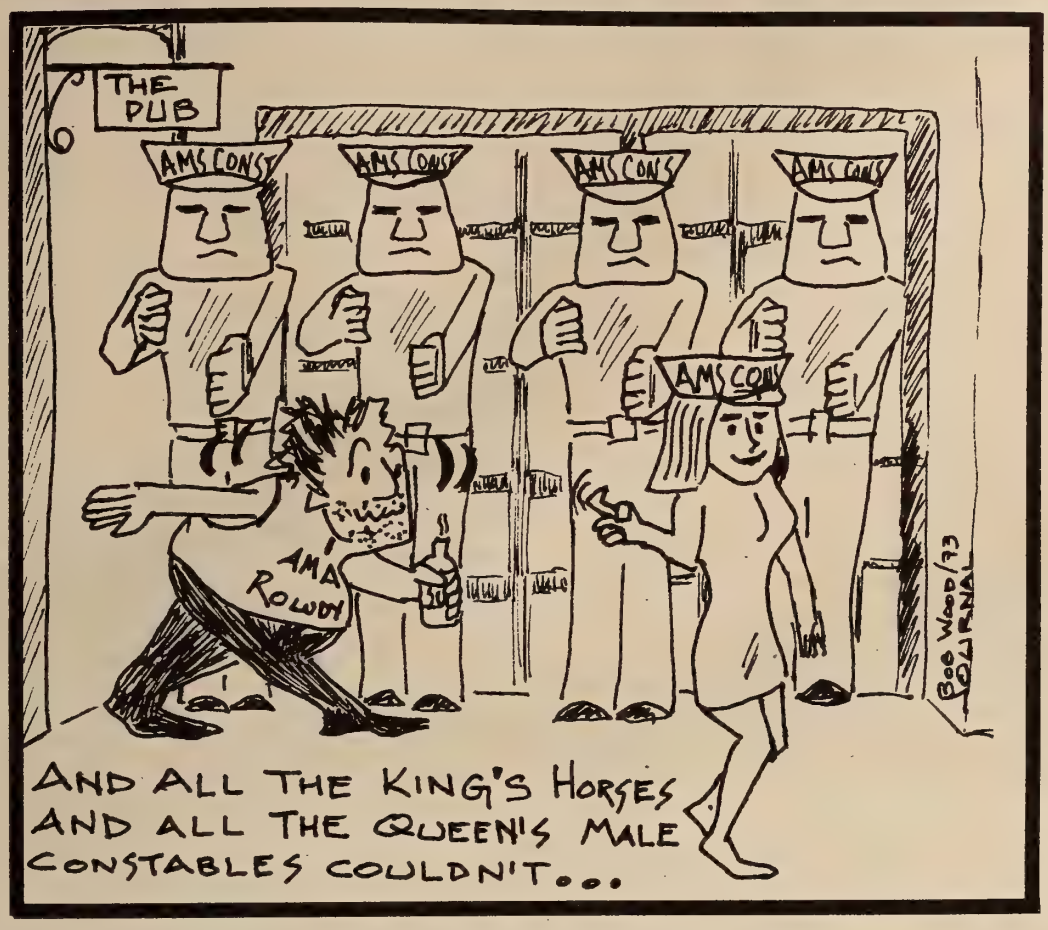
As Pheobe, May Robertson was "physically well suited" to the role and displayed the "rising tide of despair and gin, but only in one moment."

He said, "Archie should have worked, but somehow didn't. He must be able to play a bad comedian well, and there is a delicate balance", there.

Finally, the players did not "sizzle on stage". "We did not see the seething despair mixed with stubborness in Archie. The Pathos came through but we needed the stark tragedy."

letters...

Just as happy to work with female



Dear Editor,

I worked this year as an AMS constable, and I write from this point of view.

The prime concern with the usefulness of female constables appears to be whether or not a female could physically handle a 200 lb drunk at a smoker. To begin with, at least half the males on the force are considerably smaller than 200 lbs, and certainly anyone on the force will not attempt to physically handle a large drunk without assistance from his fellow constables on the job, if they do anything at all. Even allowing for equal numbers of male and female, there should still be sufficient strong, virile male constables to handle a situation as effectively as is done now.

I believe, however, there is a factor that has been ignored. Ideally, a constable should not have to use physical force to control anyone, but should rather attempt to talk with and pacify the person involved. Speaking purely from experience, a girl is much more effective at pacifying a person by this means. An angry person seems to be more readily provoked by another male such as a constable trying to tell him what to do, than he would be by a female constable requesting him to be reasonable. I personally am just as happy to work at a pub or smoker with a female for a partner as to work with a male.

Michael Walker
AMS constable No. 362

Wants to know about constable selection

Dear Editor,

We wish to inquire as to the basis upon which the selection of AMS constables was made. All applicants were issued appointments for a "selection interview" with the understanding that changes in interview times were not possible. If in fact the interviews were to be the basis of selection, it would seem to follow that those who did not attend their interviews would immediately be disqualified. This was not, however, the case, and many applicants "wasted" their time in attending their interviews. We would like an explanation from the AMS committee of their action in this instance.

Incidentally, we would like it to be understood that we did not apply to be AMS constables.

Sandra Conley
Mary Jane Eddy

Women do have muscles and others

Dear Editor,

Re: the mole of the mountain-letter-April 5, 1973.

After reading the letter about the Nordheimer affair, I realized with great frustration that the main deterrent to the equality of the sexes lies not with the proverbial MCP but with women who continue to accept someone 'ELSE's opinion of their capabilities without finding out for themselves. The "ridiculousness of the situation" lies in her role definitions. For instance, if the only function of an A.M.S. constable were to throw three-hundred (?) pound football players out of places, would they not have to match their opponents, i.e., weigh three-hundred pounds themselves? Must all such situations be resolved through physical violence anyway? Do only engineers and football players get rowdy? Does one have to be old and ugly to know what is "right" or what is "wrong"? Just the fact that Ms. Mole refers to the men in gold as "the animal squad" seems to indicate her construct of values. Yes, Gaye, women do have muscles, and they should learn to develop them. They also have tact, brains, the power of persuasion, and, believe it or not, even men call upon other men for assistance occasionally. Her fourth paragraph actually sums up the whole analysis: the mole really didn't say much of anything.

Sincerely,
Collette Dowhaniuk

West Campus

Dear Editor,

I would like to take some time and space in your column to reply to the allegation that the 'McArthur Elite Discriminates'. This letter is addressed to Mary McClennan, Cathy Shannon, and ALL of interested main campus students.

To begin with, neither myself nor anyone else at McArthur consider ourselves to be 'elite' or discriminatory. Our newly established policy of allowing entry to main campus students only after 10:00 p.m. arises from one very fundamental principle – lack of adequate space in the McArthur College Dining Hall. The Dining Hall is simply not meant to accommodate upwards of 400 people or more. As a result of many discussions with McArthur Faculty and students, I felt obliged to allow them first entry into the only social activity they have for the week.

We at McArthur come from literally all over the world and are here for a mere eight months. During those eight months we are split up by Practice Teaching and all follow different timetables; making socializing very difficult. Main Campus students, on the other hand, are together for at least three years and have adequate time for their social activities.

The second reason for a new policy of admittance is that I am directly responsible to Beaver Foods and Queen's University for the condition of the Dining Hall and facilities at McArthur. It has been noted that for the past two weeks the Dining Hall and the facilities of the College have been far cleaner and with less damage incurred than when we allowed the entire student body of Queen's early admission. This is not meant as a blow to main campus students' consideration for property, only a FACT to illustrate my point that with more McArthur students present, these damages do not occur.

I do however apologize for the attitude of my staff member on the door on the night in question (March 22). His lack of tact and diplomacy have been corrected.

I also recognize the spiritual and physical rift between the two parts of Queen's University and can only hope that this serious problem is alleviated in the near future. Until a solution is arrived at, Queen's University, NOT McArthur College students, shall continue to screw itself.

Your Colleague in Education,
Michael Grosney.

Why Phillip

Dear Editor,

We have one or two things to say about the male-chauvinist scenario that Carl Fechter is hawking around.

We have no quarrel with the proposal for a pissoir on the site of the Queen's Tea Room. But the opening ceremony is another matter. How come Prince Phillip gets to prime the pump?

Apparently it hasn't occured to Fechter that the appropriate person to the job is Elizabeth II. After all, we're talking about the Queen's Pee Room, are we not?

Or is Fechter by any change thinking of an amenity for men only? We wouldn't be surprised.

And by the way, how did Fechter come to be an authority on the Royal bladder? By hanging around the lav at Buck Pal with a mop and pail, maybe? Frankly, we're not impressed. Come off it, Carl!

Lue Liz Barb

It's no fun being a bitch...

To ANYONE WHO LIVES IN RESIDENCE

Perhaps this letter should have been written long ago, but then again perhaps this is a better time of the year for it to appear. I'm not sure but you can be the judge of it. My topic? Noise in residence. As a proctor in Victoria Hall I have been forced to deal with this situation many times in the past year. I think that by now I must be known as the "resident bitch." But it's no fun being a "bitch." I don't enjoy telling people to stop their parties when they're having such a good time, but what do I say to the girl next door who is sick and is trying to rest or the one who is studying or those who are just trying to do the very ordinary thing called sleeping? Do I tell them to "grit their teeth and bear it?" People can only take so much.

I've been told that residence is a home and as such we should be allowed to perform all the functions that we do at home. This includes having parties. No one wants to have a party in one of the rooms provided downstairs – they're too cold and sterile. Your own room is a much better location. I agree! So have a party, but keep it down! Other functions performed at home include studying and sleeping. Just as you want to have a party in your room, rather than be forced to use some other room,so do others like to use their rooms. Why should someone who wants to study be forced to go to the library? Perhaps they like to have a radio playing in the background or study in their pyjamas or whatever, so why can't they stay in their rooms and expect a reasonable amount of silence? And why should those who are sick be forced to enter the lonely infirmary? Though those who are so sick so as to need attention are sent to the informary, many just need a good night's sleep. Why can't they expect a reasonable amount of silence?

Residence living is give and take; consideration and toleration. So when someone is having a party or just unwinding try to tolerate a little excess noise. But those who are having the parties, please, be considerate enough to think of others. And when you come back from that celebration after your last exam, THINK! other people aren't finished. They may be studying or may be sleeping, trying to get enough rest so as to be awake alert for their exam in the morning. So celebrate in moderation, PLEASE!

I hope you all understand I'm not a bitch.

Sincerely,
Bernice Kaczmarski

This a beginning of a community

People,

We are the modest communal beginnings of what we hope will develop into a reasonably large intentional community. A year and a half ago 5 individuals came together to form a commune and subsequently a farm was bought within 25 miles of Kingston. Today (April 1, 1973) our group consists of 9 adults and 2 children and are in the position to expand to maybe twice this number within the next few months.

This summer we are going to build the shell of another house, farm (organically) over 200 acres, care for 70 odd head of cattle plus assorted numbers of goats, pigs and chickens, and, raise (organically) a garden to feed perhaps 20 people throughout the next year.

To do this we need people who are willing to work for room and board. What we can give in return is a chance to learn a few skills, develop calluses and muscles, an opportunity to live communally, and, very likely, an absence of boredom. We (foolishly?) believe that there more letters...

(continued on next page)

(continued from previous page)

are people out there who find the foregoing attractive. If you are interested you can get further information by writing

A.I.O.F.
R.R. No. 3,
Stella, Ontario.

Some information about yourself would be desireable.

We are primarily interested in those who are interested in communal living and who might want to join the community at some time but we don't feel limited to such people.

A.I.O.F.

In defense of Outer Countil

Dear Editor:

In response to your editorial last week in which you passed off last year's AMS Outer Council as weak etc. ("There was no pussyfooting around . . such was not the case with the previous group who for example, approved the fee withholding in December after nearly five minutes of discussion and then fought about it privately afterwards, probably to the detriment of the campaign.")

This journalistic idiocy provides me with the opportunity to defend last year's Outer Council for which I have been waiting, not that I have some time on my hands.

As usual with your AMS reporting, your facts are mangled beyond recognition. Our decision last December to endorse withholding fees was indeed pro forma-for good reason. It had been preceeded by an informal meeting of most of Outer Council last October at the time of the referendum, at which time, we discussed exhaustively the pros and cons of the action. All sides were heard, many issues raised, and, as a result, when we convened formally the next evening, we endorsed a yes-vote on the referendum, giving explicitly our reasons for doing so (in fact, we made a special point of extending debate so that the Journal could get the details).

When the time came to make the actual decision to withhold fees further debate was pointless -- everyone knew where everyone else stood -- thus the five minutes. The fact that we went to the inconvenience of such prior discussion, that we were able to reach a unaminous decision and that we made a strong effort to explain it surely indicates our concern and our decisiveness. That the Journal did not bother to pick all this up is a criticism of its reportage, not Outer Council.

More generally, the Journal can pride itself on being an utterly demoralizing influence on Outer Council all year. It chronically misrepresented our decisions and Miss Grass's self-righteous Pollyanna editorials ignored completely the good efforts of many individuals on Outer Council.

For example, when it came time to decide whether or not to close the heffalump, some of us did not feel that the store staff had had fair representation. As a result, a motion was moved to postpone decision for two weeks so that a better report in which all sides were expressed could be drawn up. The Journal, by the way, made no attempt to get the heffalump's side of the story, failing even to send a reporter to interview the store manager. For Miss Grass, this was "indecisiveness", for me it was simply rational politics.

Subsequently, discussion occurred between various Outer Council members and the staff and auditor of the heffalump. As a result, a better financial statement was drawn up and a greater awareness of the issues created -- on the basis of these, Outer Council decided to shut down the heffalump.

It would have been a hell of a lot easier to vote to shut it down at the first meeting thus saving many of us the effort of digging. The fact that we took the more responsible course does not make us models of parliamentary virtue, but it does indicate our concern.

Yet, two days later, we were accused of floundering in one of Miss Grass's editorials from the pulpit. I for one, felt like I had been kicked in the teeth. Having ensured a decision on the basis of knowledge of the facts, Outer Counciil saw the Journal riding off half-cocked on the basis of a toal misconception of what had occured. This sort of editorializing repeated itself throughout the year and after such gratuitious comments, several of us were ready to supervise personally the drawing and quartering of Miss Grass.

Certainly, there were problems on Outer Council last year at times we were terrible and deserved the axe we got. However, at times we were damned good. Our fee withholding campaign, despite the ignorant cracks directed at it was one of the best in Ontario. Thanks to people like Lyn Whitham, Kiloran German, Stu Clark, Wally Palmer and others, articles were published, residences blitzed and the campus informed to an extent equalled at few other universities. This could not have been done by an incompetent student government.

In conclusion, the Journal's editoralizing vis-a-vis Outer Council over the past year was based on a glaringly shallow comprehension of what was going on. It is negativism and its failure to recognize the several successes which Outer Council enjoyed, the Journal was itself responsible for the demoralization for which it criticised us.

Ted Cape

Ed Note:

It is a pity that Mr. Cape is guilty of doing in his letter exactly what he complains about. He accuses the Journal of mangling its coverage of the AMS executive without attempting to substantiate his charges. In fact, his letter seems to be a one man attack on th editor, who he accuses of single-handedly trying to make the Outer Council look bad in the eyes of the campus.

As we said last week, they just don't understand. The facts that Grass does not write the editorials in her pulpit and toss them down to the rest of the staff to be printed; and the fact is that the Journal is not in business to destroy the Alma Mater Society executive - we have been known to support them.

In reference to the "informal meeting of most of Outer Council" to discuss the fee withholding issue - the executive thought it would be a good idea for Outer Council to endorse a yes vote on the referenda, but was afraid to bring it up in open session for discussion as they feared it might fail, something which would be much worse than no endorsement at all. The meeting to which Cape refers to was certainly a lobbying session, if there ever was one.

In that meeting also, the main topic was the endorsation of the referenda, not the calling of the withholding. At the time, many members of Outer Council never dreamed that the withholding would actually be called, and some even said so. The main purpose of the discussion and vote was to ensure that Queen's students turned out in droves to support the referenda.

The October meeting could not discuss all aspects of the withholding action when the details of it, the support it might receive across the province, and the government reaction to the referenda were not known.

It was superficially a decisive and unanimous action when Outer Council approved the withholding in December, but that does not change the fact that discussion of the subject was minimal . Certainly many members had their doubts, but rather than debating them, they let them show up in their actions during the campaign. At times, the president of the AMS treated the campaign as a joke. Other members privately treated it as a political forum, often showing more concern for the political ambitinns of the campaign's leader than for the success of the withholding action itself.

As for Hefalump, the Journal reported on events as they occurred, including the AMS's several months of indecisiveness. We reported on both the philosophical and financial aspects of the business as seen by both sides. We even reported Cape's feeling at an April Outer Council meeting that the AMS should be planning its ventures more carefully before spending large quantities of money. It does not, unfortunately, say much for council that they decided they needed more information and so appointed a (non-council) individual to prepare a detailed statement. Having received that statement council decided to keep the store open for the summer. The members at that time, however, did their best to avoid any discussion on the fundamental question of whether or not the AMS should be running a business at all.

Finds red herring over pot issue.

Dear Editor,

I have read with interest the page plus of letters about the cannabis question. It is good to see a strong reaction in the letters section over something, even if it does boil down to just the politicians continuing their argument in print. But it looks like good fun and I do have a strong opinion on the matter, so I will add my bit to the discussion.

First let us attempt to define what the disagreement is all about. From what appeared in the Journal, it seems that no one debated the content of the motion. This is a reasonable reflection of campus opinion; most students feel that the cannabis laws should be liberalized and so the content of the motion is somewhat motherhoodish. Although your letter-writers worried themselves about "disenfranchising those members of the student community who support the present marijuana laws" (Roney, Journal, 4 April 73), it is interesting to note that not one of these supporters was willing to write you a letter and declare his belief in print. Furthermore, in the eleven years I have spent on various university campuses, I have never met a university student who did completely support the pot laws. I am the first to admit that my education is not complete, and I may yet meet a supporter, but the point is made that the student supporters of pot laws are very few in number.

There seems to be two points that are being debated: (a) AMS reps do not know the wishes of their constituents and so cannot vote on the motion, and (b) the Outer Council of the AMS does not have the authority to speak on such a matter.

Any politician worthy of the name will know his constituents' opinions on a subject that has been around as long and has been discussed as much as pot laws.

Furthermore, the argument of ignorance applies just as strongly to a vote against a motion as to a vote in favour, so anyone claiming that they do not know and even more...

(continued on next page)

(continued from previous page)

the feelings of their constituents is forced to abstain. Any other vote is illogical. Since Outer Council is comprised of logical people and since only one person abstained, it is clear that Council felt it knew its constituents' views on the matter. As stated at the start of this paragraph, I feel that Council does know its constituents' views on pot laws and so no serious argument can be based on that premise. Scratch several more inches of deathless prose from last Thursday's Letters pages.

We now come to the one remaining argument; one which has got merit: has the Outer Council of the AMS the authority to speak on such a matter? This is a question of philosophy and viewpoint. It is most certainly open to valid argument on both sides. It is also so fundamental a question that if at all possible it must be resolved. Finally, it is a question which I feel so strongly about that I am prepared to spend some considerable time thinking, discussing, arguing and writing about it. I hope others are too.

First, let us dispose of two red herrings. One is the astounding statement that the AMS cannot voice an opinion on a "matter which is within the jurisdiction of another elected body - to wit, the Canadian Parliament" (Roney, Journal, 4 April 73). Such a philosophy certainly has not affected the Canadian Labour Congress, National Farmer's Union, banks, big business, little business, provincial governments, student governments or anyone else with an opinion, so why should it apply to the AMS? Any person or group has the right to inform their leaders of their opinion on any matter.

The second red herring did not find its way into print, but I have heard it argued by some of those who voted against the cannabis motion. That is that such a matter should be left up to the conscience of the individual. At first glance this makes sense, but further thought makes one disagree. It is, I think, an example of fuzzy thinking. The question of whether an individual wishes to use cannabis is a question of individual conscience; the question of whether society should make such use illegal is a question which society must determine. Similarly the question of whether an individual wishes to have an abortion is a matter of individual conscience; society must determine whether it wishes to permit such operations. A more concrete example: if a Roman Catholic says that because of his conscience he will vote against the dissemination of contraceptive information and succeeds in preventing such dissemination to all, then he reduces my personal freedom since my conscience does not so restrict me. Social conscience, not individual conscience, must be used in determining the solution to social problems. Representative bodies such as the AMS do represent social conscience (anyone who disagrees with that will have to show me by what other mechanism a representative body has the authority to do anything). So the argument of individual conscience is not just wrong, but dangerously wrong since its use can reduce the personal freedom of others.

Now let me address myself to the question: has the Outer Council of the AMS the authority to speak on such a matter? Because of the length of this letter, I will attempt to be brief, in the expectation that this matter will be discussed for quite some time and so I will have opportunities to present more detail later.

First stop is the AMS Constitution, where Article 4.4 says: "The principal business of the Outer Council shall be (the) consideration of major policy issues . . .". There is nothing in the Constitution to prevent the cannabis motion from being considered.

Next comes the philosophy, and it is here that disagreement will occur. What follows is my philosophy, my point of view, nothing more.

There are two ways in which a representative body relates to its constituents when determining what is to be done. One is to listen closely to the views of the constituents, to consider only matters which the constituents wish to have considered and to deal with them only in the manner in which the constituents wish them dealt with. It has kindly been described as: there go my people and I must follow them for I am their leader. A less kind description, which I prefer, is: hang around with the herd until you see in which direction it is wandering, then take a short-cut through the fields so that you arrive at the head of the herd and then proceed along, loudly proclaiming what a magnificent idea you had when you decided the herd should go that way.

The other way is to have philosophy and convictions of your own. To know what is right and wrong and what is needed by your constituents. To know this by merely listening to your constituents but by talking and arguing with them. To argue, prod and persuade in order to get the constituents to go in the direction which your philosophy tells you is right. To, if need be, tell the herd it is going in the wrong direction. In other words, to lead. It is not a popular style among politicians, but our political history has many shining examples of men who would rather face defeat than lead the herd along its desired path. They were invariably right.

The first way is government by referenda. The second way is government by leadership. I will lead, thank you, and I will support those who wish to lead.

Yours truly,
Fraser Dunford.

Queen's Journal

Vol. 100, No. 51
Fri., Apr. 13, 1973
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ontario

Editor: Jennifer Grass
Business: Charles Schwier
Management: John Solman
Arts: Sandy Naiman
Features: Pat Devitt, Steven Winnett
Passepartout: Bob Wood
News: Susan de Stein
Events: Alison Dandie
Sports: Chris Boon, Nada Bogdanovic
National Desk: Bob Mutrie, Sue Wishart
Photography: Peter Boag

The godlets acted up, but we are not too mad at them ... yet. And Sandy sat around looking at Drama reviews, as others are wandering about being less than helpful. Leona is trying to attack everyone, and John is spraying water on her. Bottomsley and Mike are trying to be useful, but no one is giving them a chance. Meanwhile through all this chaos, Sue and Kathy and Pat are the only ones who are doing any work.

Published twice weekly on Tuesdays and Fridays by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc., Member, Canadian University Press. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society of the University. Offices are located in the Student's Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

THE CHANCELLOR DUNNING TRUST COMMITTEE
proudly announces the publication of the
October 1972 Lectures Series On
"Social Problems in Environmental Recovery"

The ONTARIO NATURALIST March 1973 issue contains the following addresses, complemented with photographs:

GROWTH, TEMPORAL AND SPIRITUAL - Raymond Moriyama

POPULATION: THE SOLUTION IS IN OUR MINDS - Garrett Hardin

DESIGN WITH NATURE- Ian McHarg

THE GARDEN AS A METAPHYSICAL SYMBOL- Ian McHarg

Available at Tech. Supplies -- 60¢ per copy

unclassifieds . . .

OPAL GT 1971. Has a mechanical fitness certificate. 22,000 miles. Snow tires, radio, block heater. Asking $2500. Phone 389-2401 after 7 pm.

REWARD IF YOU FIND a gold loop earing lost Friday April 6 between Law building and Gym. Phone 549-0308.

HUGE ONE BEDROOM apartment available May 1 sublet and option to renew lease. Summer rent $100. Winter $125. Call 549-0308. Usually in after 11 pm.

WATCH FOUND ON Sunday near Douglas Library. Please check at circulation desk.

WE HAVE A BEAUTIFUL 5 bedroom house that is available for the whole summer (May - Sept). It is on the corner of Johnson and Albert with two bathrooms, a large kitchen, and a big sunny backyard. Partly furnished. It's going cheap, so hurry and call 544-8402 or 544-8403 now.

BACHELOR APARTMENT TO sublet for summer. Option for 73-74 lease. Large kitchen and separate bath. Downtown.If interested,call Sharon at 544-5752.

BACHELOR APARTMENT AVAILABLE May 1 for 1973-4. William Street between Bagot and Wellington. Phone 544-6832 after 5.30. Females only. Rent $95. Incudes utilities and parking.

MR PRINTER: You don't understand -- we have the film. Printee.

MARKSMAN 10 SPEED (Shimano Changer and Touring brakes), assorted furniture, and Olympus EcBi Binocular microscope (with case and photomicrography attachments.) Must sell!!!!!Call 549-1967.

LOST -- 1 PAIR BROWN leather gloves, suede laces. Please call Angie -- 544-8767. Thanks.

WE NEED SOMEONE to help us share a large three-bedroom apartment with free laundry facilities, a parking yard and much more for next year. Call 546-2619 or 544-6490 for all sorts of friendly details.

FOR SALE: 1965 P1800 Volvo. Good condition. $950. Must sell since leaving the country. 547-2846 or 546-9994.

ONE, TWO, OR THREE nubiles to occupy for the summer an apartment (with a view) on 12th floor Elrond. Phone 542-5453 anytime.

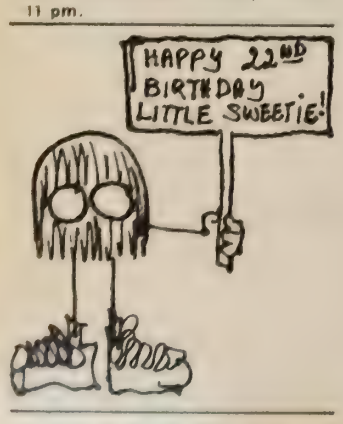
MS K G was repulsified.

APARTMENT TO SUBLET: May 1 to Sept 1. Completely furnished. 2 or 3 bedrooms. 5 min from campus. Rent negotiable. Call 544-7736 or 544-7750.

APARTMENT FOR NEXT YEAR. Available May 1. 2 bedroom. Large kitchen. Full basement. Fenced yard. No landlord hassles . Very close to campus. Phone 544-6767.

MR JS and MS PR were ticklish.

TO SUBLET: 3 bedroom furnished apartment at University and Brock. May to Sept 73. Rent negotiable. Phone Dave at 542-9135 or Rich at 544-6579.



TO EDDY: We really appreciated hearing that you enjoyed your little bag of kicks. FROM THE GOODNESS PEOPLE.

TO SUBLET: Cheap 2 bedroom apartment. July and August 542-2157.

MISS LP and MR JB were transplanting and transporting an orgy.

TO SUBLET: MAY to Sept. Option to lease. 1 bedroom apartment. Close to campus. Phone 549-1358 after 5 pm.

APARTMENT OF YOUR DREAMS. Huge one bedroom apartment. Summer sublet with option to renew rent. Summer rent $100. Winter rent $125. Call 549-0308. Usually in after 11 pm.

THIS IS A LAST reminder from the boys of the C.A.In case you don't know, our residence next year will be at 8 Aberdeen St. We would all like to wish our contractees: Fay H., Janet B., Mary C, Joanne E, Lesley M, Gail S, Angela B, Janice A, Paula T, Debi B, Sue H, Brenda N, Lizza S, Ginny S, Margi E, Jill W, Colleen C, good luck on their exams and a good summer. Practice your art so that you are able to fullfil your obligations. Signed the Big Bopper, Jeeemy, Duke, Ralph and Pa Pa Huck.

TO: LIZ, KAREN, JOAN AND SANDY: We've been here studiously studying all week. What have you been up to? Signed - you know who . . .the rest (and the best) of ADDY III.

Available May 1: large 1 bedroom apartment. To sublet or rent -- good location. 542-7415.

NEWSFLASH: Journal office turns into academic production line as staff works overtime on highly-polished essays. Typewriters reported to be functioning at record rate of clacking. Editor not available for comment.

There is still a limited time left for any nurse, rehab student, etc., who will be staying in Kingston for the 6 week work term to apply for a room in a house with 2 others. 544-8068 or 544-8067. (Anyone interested in subletting for the whole summer will be readily considered.)

SPACIOUS 12th floor apartment with magnificent view and balcony. Furnished, utilities included. One, two, or three girls needed to start May 1 or soon after. Sauna and Games rooms. Call 542-5453 ANYTIME.

AVAILABLE MAY 1 for next year. 5 bedroom house, 295 William St. $365-month. Apply 222 Stuart St. 549-1581.

LIZ: the phone bill came to $3.74 (14 minutes!!!!!)

LOST: ONE BROWN PURSE, April 5th, in Humphrey. If found, please contact Barb Whitehead. 544-8571.

IN RETROSPECT, IT appears as prenorfic to subjugation as bologna to sporism is tangentially transcendent. Thang Kyou. J. B. MANAGANER.

WILL THE PERSON who took my blue blazer with the chinese insignia by mistake, at the pub on Friday night please contact me. I have yours 544-8462.

CHAMPAGNE FREE TO INDIVIDUALS or group who sublet our 4 bedroom house - May 1 to Sept 1st. Location, 226 Earl St. at Division. Every reasonable offer considered. Phone 544-8471 or 544-7620.

DEAR BUDDIES, (MALE AND FEMALE). Good luck in your exams and have a HAPPY SUMMER. THE "Passion Pit" will be open as usual next fall. Love Screwsie and Easy Ann.

FIRST BILLING: 3 bedroom, 2 floor apartment available for 73-74. Take over in May 73. Corner of University Ave. and Brock St. 544-1585.

FOR JUST $100 a month (it costs us $150), you can sublet a completely furnished two bedroom apt. which is a five minute walk from the Union. Phone 544-5474 or 546-1014.

HELP WANTED: EXPERIENCED person to help faculty wife care for young triplets, and some light housework. Monday - Friday, 10 am - 6 pm. Call 546-4998 after 7:30 pm.

APARTMENT FOR SUBLET: May to Sept. furnished. Rent negotiable. Apartment No. 12, 210 Colbourne St. Call 544-7420 or 544-7423. Three or four people.

FOR RENT '73 - '74. VERY large 4-bedroom apartment, excellent location between campus and downtown. 54 Earl St. Rent $260. 546-4306.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY ESEL! (alias tramp champ) - from B2 and the oreo's, slubby pup, Dwight, Anni, Lopez, Bax, HT and the tartlettes, 237 El Mucho and the IBTC alumnae (time to hand over the crown - congrats!) PTL!

FOR SUBLET TILL Sept. 1 Large bachelor pad; pool; parking; modern facilities. 542-7918 after 5 pm.

FLYING DUTCHMAN olympic racing sailboat. 2 sets of sails with spinnaker. Fiberglass hull. Trailer. $1500. 544-4117.

TO SUBLET: 2 BEDROOM FURNISHED APT. includes pots, pans, utensils, dishes for 4 etc . . 2 entrances, one to backyard (with lawn) (for sunbathing). No landlord hassles. Clean, bright and big! 10 minutes from campus., on Albert near Princess, and near the PARK! $135 a month. May 1 to Aug 31. Dates and rent are negotiable. Don't wait for spring, do it now! (before April 28!) phone 544-8109, 544-8047.

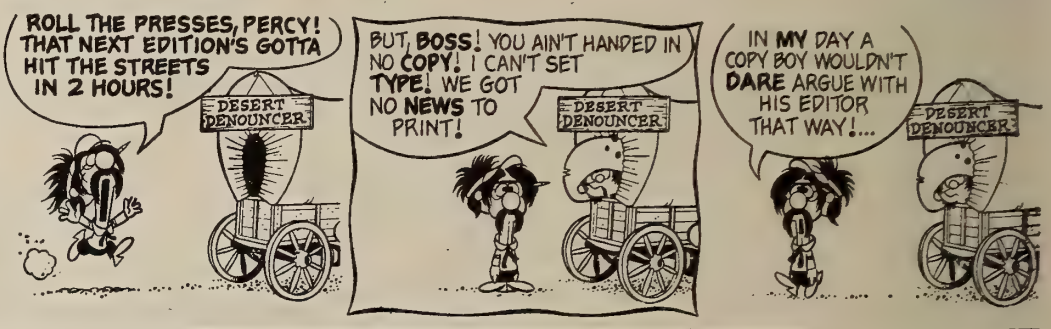
THREE NEEDED TO SHARE A 7 bedroom house at 294 William St. from May 1st on. Rent is $45 a month which includes utilities. Come and see us or phone 542-9496.

THERE IS NOTHING WORSE than a sobbing H. Beast. It's just that you are so much fun to tease. What kind of sub? Cheese, tuna?? Bastad, don't you worry, I won't fraternize with the men,smile (Spring Flower) Brian- you were right. Sorry it fell through - Sandy, don't drown the cat, we'll be watching you win, good luck.Debbie thanks for finding your way up here - love the phantoms. Cathy, keep those loaded bananas in the holster, signed Sherrif R. Sprouts. Ralph - lets keep an eye on Victor. Zapo - double beds, belly dancing, Chinese munchies, What is it you do for amusement in the trenches? P.P. By now we've guessed your name, but what really puzzles us is the nature of your game. Al - glad to see your black eye is better. Keep on trucking Max: to the morgue. Muttley- greasy suppers, football games we didn't see, hitching to the manor, changing your brand of smokes, black magic, quite a year Martha. Nimbnuts - 4 o'clock coffee breaks appreciated, love Auntie. Bar-what's that sparkling? Val, why did J.P. need that cheap substitute? No more Tuesdays Sue, just keep him from demolishing those nails. The finance company is going broke 233. Great picnic at the battlefield Sunday. love 514.

3 BEDROOM APARTMENT FOR RENT '73 - '74. 3 large bedrooms, extra large livingroom, wonderful bathroom, nice kitchen, lots of closets, clean and fresh like the morning dew.take over lease May 1. Rent $160.00 Phone John or Barry 544-3516.

BAND UNIFORMS: ANYONE who still has a band uniform from Levana is asked to return it by Monday to Ban Righ main desk or else there will be a charge.

A CHARMING, EXQUISITE, furnished bachelor apt. is available for summer session (July and Aug.) $70 per month. 10 min walk from campus and downtown. Call 549-1730.



FEMALE ROOMMATES WANTED: May, June, July, August or any part thereof, in a large lux cheap apt. 10 min from campus. August rent free. Call Ruth 544-5170.

HOUSE FOR RENT NEXT YEAR: fully furnished, presently rented for summer, lease negotiable, 6 bedrooms, $400-month, on College near bus stop. Call 544-9488.

3 BEDROOM APARTMENT FOR RENT, AVAILABLE May 1. Located at 260 Alfred St. (at Brock). Rent $180.00 Phone 546-9220.

SUBLET OUR APARTMENT. A split-level one bedroom apartment for only $140 a month. On the 12th floor of Elrond with a balcony. Can be furnished. Call Dave or Nan at 544-5264.

Journalweeds

A significant commentary on contemporary man presented by the students and library of LCVI

CELEBRATION OF MAN

incorporating the words and music of part 1 Handel's Messiah

Thursday, April 19

6 - 7 p.m.

Adelaide Common Room

CONVOCATIONS 1973

Hoods, Gowns and Mortarboards

The Alma Mater Society RENTS academic hoods, gowns, and mortarboards to graduating students on a non-profit basis according to the following conditions:

a) A deposit of $7.00 cash will be required to rent a HOOD) $5.00 will be refunded when the hood is returned.

b) A deposit of $7.00 cash will be required to rent a GOWN; $5.00 will be refunded when the gown is returned.

c) A deposit of $6.00 cash will be required to rent a MORTARBOARD; $5.00 will be refunded when the mortarboard is returned.

Please Note:

i) The wearing of mortarboards is entirely optional

ii) Hoods will NOT be available to the Faculty; however, gowns may still be rented according to b) above provided graduant requirements can be met for that convocation.

NO CHEQUES PLEASE

TIME AND PLACE

Hoods, gowns, and mortarboards may be obtained at the Basement Lounge of the International Centre, Students' Memorial Union, and must be returned there IMMEDIATELY following the ceremony. The following schedule will apply:

- Theology, Faculty of Education: Friday May 25th, after 8:00 a.m.
- Applied Science, School of Business (B. Con., M.B.A.): Friday, May 25th, after 3:30 p.m., or Saturday, May 26th, after 8:00 a.m.
- Graduate Studies, Law, Medicine, Nursing, Rehabilitation Therapy: Saturday, May 26th, after 8:00 a.m.
- B.A. (Hons.), B.A. (A-H): Friday, June 1st, after 12:00 p.m. or Saturday, June 2nd, after 8:00 a.m.
- B. Sc. (Hons.) B.A. (I-Z), B.A.E., B. Mus., B.P.H.E.: Saturday, June 2nd, after 11:00 a.m.

NOTE: Due to both morning and afternoon convocations, all garments must be returned IMMEDIATELY following the ceremony. Failure to do so will result in a $5.00 surcharge.

Most Queen's women have passive attitude

We would like to make it very clear that in discussing the co-eds of Queen's we are not forwarding a malicious attack upon them. We hope this will be received as a gentle criticism, designed to help rather than annoy, and that in its presentation the reader will attempt to maintain a conscious clarity of mind concerning the subject. Let us state, unreservedly, that the women of Queen's are much to be respected, and in respecting them we have much for which we may be thankful.

An obvious difficulty in dealing with any group of women is the attempt to classify them. Almost every female will hasten to assure you that she is different from the average member of her sex. Therefore, we will make no attempt to label the cortical pigeon-holes in which our varying pictures of womenhood lie dormant.

We must, however, accept the fact that two groups of women exist in Queen's. We shall classify them as the "greater percentage" and the "lesser percentage".

The "lesser percentage" includes those girls who take advantage of their educational opportunities first, who make their social life dovetail with their studies; and who, because of this, are often thought of as prudes or intellectuals. Actually these girls cast the greatest reflection upon the life of Queen's when they leave the college. These girls understand what a college life is worth, educationally and socially, and on leaving will make much of the opportunity of their university education. It is with the other group that we are directly concerned; that group we have called the "greater percentage."

It is very difficult to speak of this group categorically. There are many co-eds who are approaching faultlessness. There are many who have redeeming virtues. But if one facet of our criticism should raise a question in the mind of one girl, we shall consider this whole exposition worthwhile.

The key point of contention is attitude. We would like to suggest that the attitude of the "greater percentage" of Queen's girls is one of passiveness as opposed to activeness.

This passiveness we may describe as "a shallowness of expression". It is our contention that the attitude of Queen's girls to lectures, to studies, and to parties shows a shallowness of expression that defies expression as an entity.

If this fault were to concern one aspect of expression only, it would be understandable. In embracing all points of expression we find a resulting passiveness that extends from discussing lectures, professors, morality or immorality, and the closer determinants of college education to participation in the social activities on and off the campus.

This is the passiveness of which we speak; this is the passiveness that speaks to us, saying:

"I am here - amuse me - teach me - make love to me - ask me out - make decisions for me; but above all - don't ask me to make my own decisions, think actively or say anything new, find out anything for myself, examine an idea or appear as though I were genuinely interested in anything."

This would be our general observation on the minds of the "greater percentage" of Queen's women.

Financially and socially co-eds can afford to attend college. University offers them a good chance to grow up in age and mind. This is the opportunity for each girl who has made her way through life under reasonably well conditioned circumstances to take her last fling at the social game and perhaps, in flinging, absorb a little useful education. This is the period when parents, want to discover a means of keeping their children at arms length for a few years at least, find the surest method in sending their offsprings to college.

But don't get us wrong. All this is not as bad as it sounds. There is a certain degree of common sense behind it all.

So the "greater percentage" says: I am here. I raise the cause of womanhood above its crass and undeserving position of subservience to man. I am showing mankind that the universal suffrage of woman was not bought too dearly. Let no man violate the rights of woman. Let no person misunderstand our station in life. I am a woman, and I am here ...amuse me!

Do we, the unconquered men of humankind, have much in the way of comeback? These are women: the chosen of the race, the progenitors of mankind, the creatures of wisdom and beauty, the unchallenged heroes of the age. In them is our only hope for salvation for upon them lies the future of our race. Let us amuse them! Let us pour upon them the lavish praise of self denial; murmur in their ears the breath of our souls, the knowledge of our hearts, and the questionable wisdom of our minds. Let us amuse them! Let us teach them the niceties of witless conversation, the inane prattlings of gossip, the ways and means of denying the conventions of society, so that they may retire into the security of their sex, secure in the knowledge that they know the ways and wiles of man and are the more prepared for their defense against him.

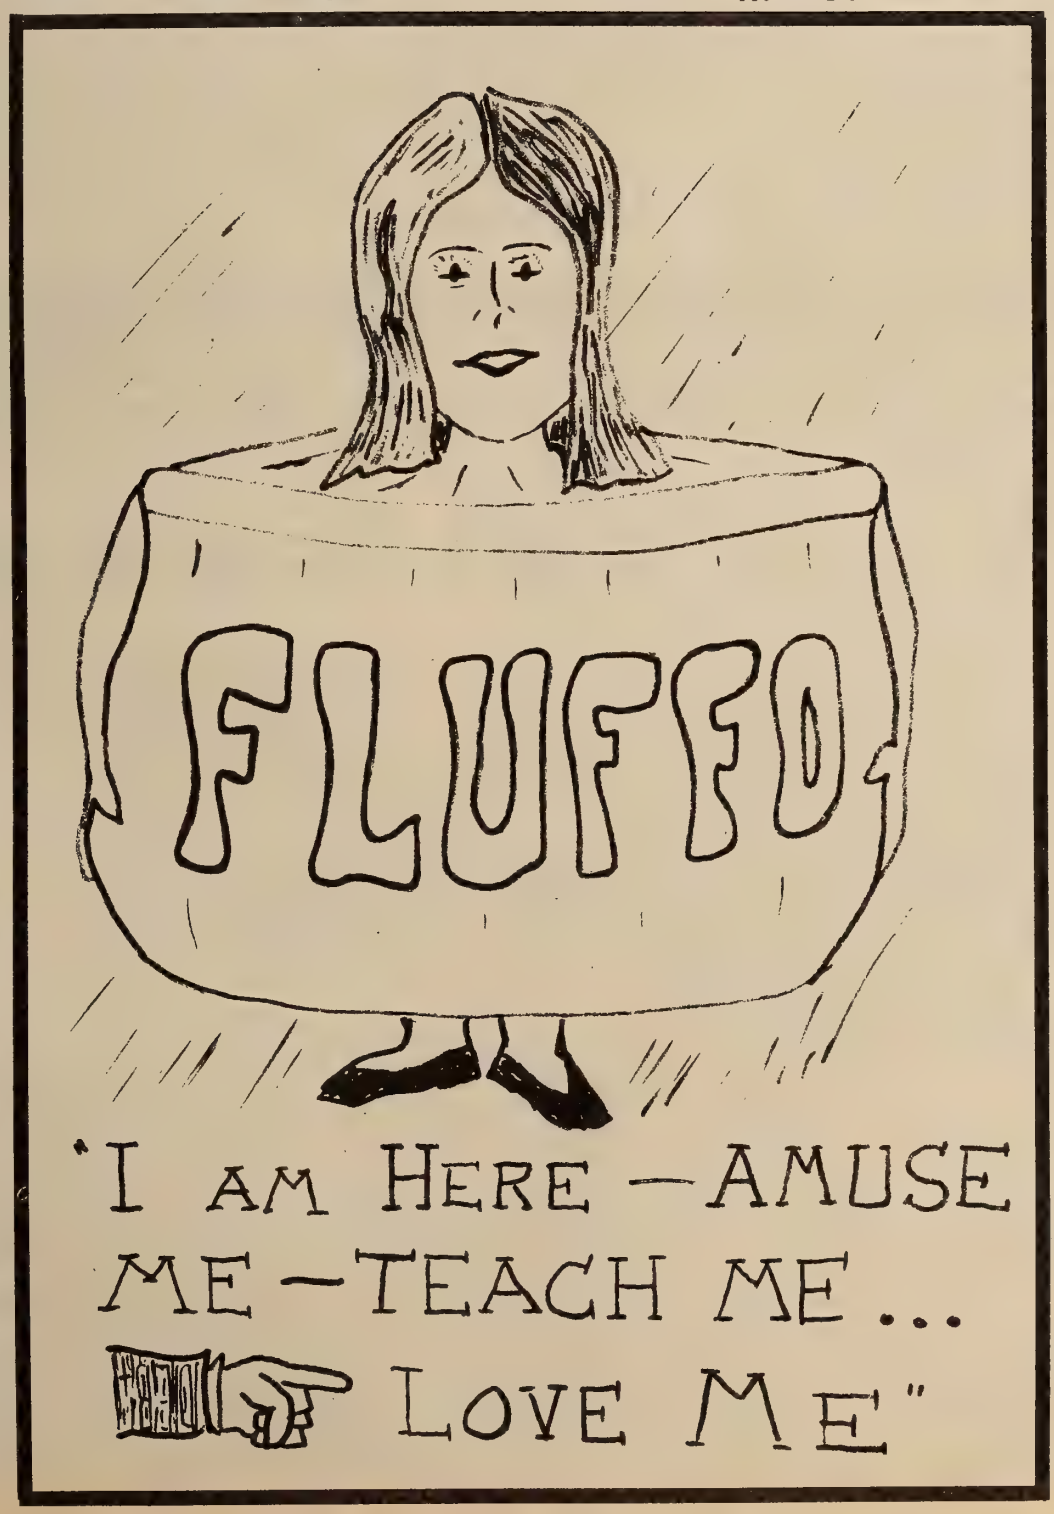
Still they say: amuse me - teach me - make love to me. I need the assurance that I am desirable. Am I not good looking? Do I not possess womanly virtues? Do I not dress becomingly?

Love me, but not too manly. Do not for a minute assume that because I am a woman and wish to be loved you may take advantage of it. Do not hope for a minute that I will enhance the evening with enlightening conversation or gay repartee.

Let us talk, dance, eat, and be happy and gay. Love me, but not too much; entertain me, but not too little; talk about me, but not where I may fear your intentions; let us discuss all those things which are not important to each others future. Let us discuss them in a flippant manner so that anyone who listens may realize that underneath it all we really are serious minded people, who are actively interested in the future. Let us discuss everything old but sex, religion, politics, morals; let us talk of nothing new for I know nothing new. But think for me, for I am tired of thinking for myself.

Therefore woman, behold the word of man. We like you. In some respects we are extremely interest in your welfare. We desire things of you, but not the unattainable things. We wish above all things that man be compatible with woman. We need that, for we are the so-called breadwinners. Without woman we cannot exist. We admire your beauty, the grace of your form, the picture of your health, the manner in which you look after your personal habits, the neatness of your dress, and the infrequent times you reveal yourselves as women, not adolscent girls. We admire you for all this and for other things we cannot mention. We admire you mostly as women becasue we are men.

But where is your intellect? You have been demanding your right place among men, where is your mind? Where is the proof that you deserve a place among men. Where is the proof that you deserve a place among men? We, as men, can see portions of that proof. But do you as women see them.



We receive the shallow picture of your lives. Where do you place your talents? Do you reserve them for moments of indiscretion at the dinner table, or reveal them momentarily during hen-discussions before bedtime in women's residences? Do you let them slip indiscriminately into philosophical essays where only the tutor will read them or do you subjugate them altogether under the covering shroud of society functions? Where do you place your talents, for we rarely see them?

But, faint heart, take cheer. Theologians will always be such, placing their God before all things; Sciencemen will always be Sciencemen and determine everything to an nth power; Arstmen will never change, and like us, attempt to rationalize all things.

But women, blessed be thy house. You each have your own and it is undeniably yours. You may be irrational but somehow or other you manage to make it your inalienable right. You may be concerned with your station in life but you never show it. You may have your troubles, but somehow they are always bigger than ours.

Woman, you are a phenomenon. But, in your usual manner, as a phenomenon, you are phenomenal!

from the Journal of March 7, 1952

Canada: Continued ICCS role in doubt

OTTAWA — Alarmed by the deteriorating military situation in Vietnam, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp warned the Commons that if there is not substantial improvement in the near future Canada will withdraw from the International Commission of Control and Supervision and bring its ceasefire observers home. Sharp observed that conditions are much worse than when Canada agreed to extend its membership in the ICCS until June 30, and explained that Canadian troops would have to be withdrawn because they would be supervising "not a peace, not a ceasefire, but a continuing war".

Sharp's remarks were prompted by the death of a Canadian observer in the crash of an ICCS helicopter shot down by the Viet Cong.

OTTAWA — Although prices usually decline in March, there was no relief for the beleaguered consumer this year - Statistics Canada figures show that the cost of living continued its steady upward trend last month. The Consumer Price Index, with a 1961 base of 100, rose to 145.7 from the February level of 145.3. The increase means that last month it cost $14.57 to buy goods priced at $13.74 in March 1972.

The main culprit in the cost of living rise was, as usual, higher food prices.Meat,fish and poultry posted the most important increases. Prices in this section are up more than 18 per cent in the past year. Fruit and milk also cost more. Housing was more expensive, but the price of eggs was down slightly. Soft drinks were cheaper because of measures contained in the 1973 federal budget.

'Hey, diddle, diddle!'

CALGARY — Ontario Premier William Davis has proposed that a national conference involving the federal and provincial governments be held to work out a national energy policy. He told the Canadian Petrolium Association that a policy is needed to satisfy both Alberta, Canada's major energy producer, and Ontario, which consumes more energy than any other region of Canda.

Alberta natural gas producers want to raise their prices, but Davis expressed fears that Ontario industries could be hurt by a rapid increase in gas prices. Later, in Toronto, he told the Legislature that Ontario may try to use the BNA Act to prevent Alberta from raising its prices.

TORONTO — The rate increased recently granted to Bell Canada by the Canadian Transport Commission have been suspended by the federal Cabinet. The decision to postpone the increases was taken after a week of intensive protest to the federal government from opposition parties, consumer groups, labour unions and the news media. The government explained that the CTC award will be reviewed, and that the rate increases were suspended to allow time for a more detailed investigation. The government's refusal to rubber-stamp the CTC's recommendation has raised speculation that CTC president E. J. Benson may be forced to resign.

KINGSTON — Kingston could get another AM radio station if long-range CBC plans are put into effect. The creation of a new station is being considered in Kingston and other areas because several privately-owned CBC affiliate stations do not carry enough network programming. The new station, if it goes into operation, would broadcast CBC programs only, probably relayed from Ottawa or Toronto.

KINGSTON — Environment Canada has predicted that water levels in Lake Ontario could reach record highs this year, surpassing the disastrous 1952 high water mark. The lake level is up more than 6 inches in the past ten days, and is expected to rise at least another 6 inches during the next month. No more water can be released into the St. Lawrence without causing flooding downstream. A combination of high water and high winds caused extensive property damage along the shores of Lake Ontario and Lake Erie last weekend.

TORONTO — Last week's meat boycott was largely unsuccessful in its primary aim to lower meat prices, but succeeded in its secondary goal of gaining extensive press coverage of consumer complaints about high food prices. Politicians, farmers, consumer groups and labour organizations all agreed that boycotts are not the real way to solve consumer problems. They said that inflation must be controlled, and in the short run production must be increased to match demand for meat.

backpage backpage backpage

World: Master artist Picasso dies

MOUGINS, FRANCE — One of the richest and most brilliant painters of all time, Pablo Picasso, master artist, is dead.

The Spanish-born revolutionary died earlier this week at age 91. The dedicated artist of over 70 years worked right up to the eve of his death. He recently completed arrangements for a showing of his work at Avignon, France at which 201 of his works will be shown.

The painter became an early master of representational art then turned his talents to invent cubism for added depth and finally embraced distortion techniques.

SAIGON — The Canadian members of the International Commission of Control and Supervision may be withdrawn from Communist held positions in South Vietnam as the result of the death of a Canadian observer when his helicopter was shot down by a Viet Cong missile.

Also killed in the crash were two Hungarian and one Indonesian peace observers, two liaison officers of the Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government as well as three crew members.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp told the Canadian Commons that if things don't get better in the near future, the men will be brough home.

TOKYO — North Korea has made an appeal to the United States Congress to have American forces withdrawn from South Korean territory, so that obstacles might be removed which are blocking the way to "Korea's peaceful reunification".

The communique added that North Korea would reduce her troop strength by one half to 200,000 or less of her own accord.

BEIRUT — Israeli troops were once again in Lebanon attacking Palestinian guerrilla installations just hours after twin Arab commando raids on Israeli targets in Cyprus. After several raids on terrorist headquarters, the Israeli forces were withdrawn.

PHNOM PENH — The United States has doubled its air shipments of military equipment to Cambodia in the wake of Khmer Rouge, Viet Cong and North Vietnamese allied offensives cutting off nearly all roads to the capital and causing a serious fuel shortage.

The United States is now making twenty deliveries of arms a week to the besieged capital in an attempt to prevent the return of Cambodia's Prince Norodom Sihanouk who has headed a government in exile in Peking since his 1970 ouster.

LONDON — Beatlemania may yet be in for a revival as John Lennon, Paul McCartney, Ringo Starr and George Harrison are visibly considering a reunion.

There have been definite indications that the four are working towards patching up their musical and business differences and that they may come back together after four years of estrangement.

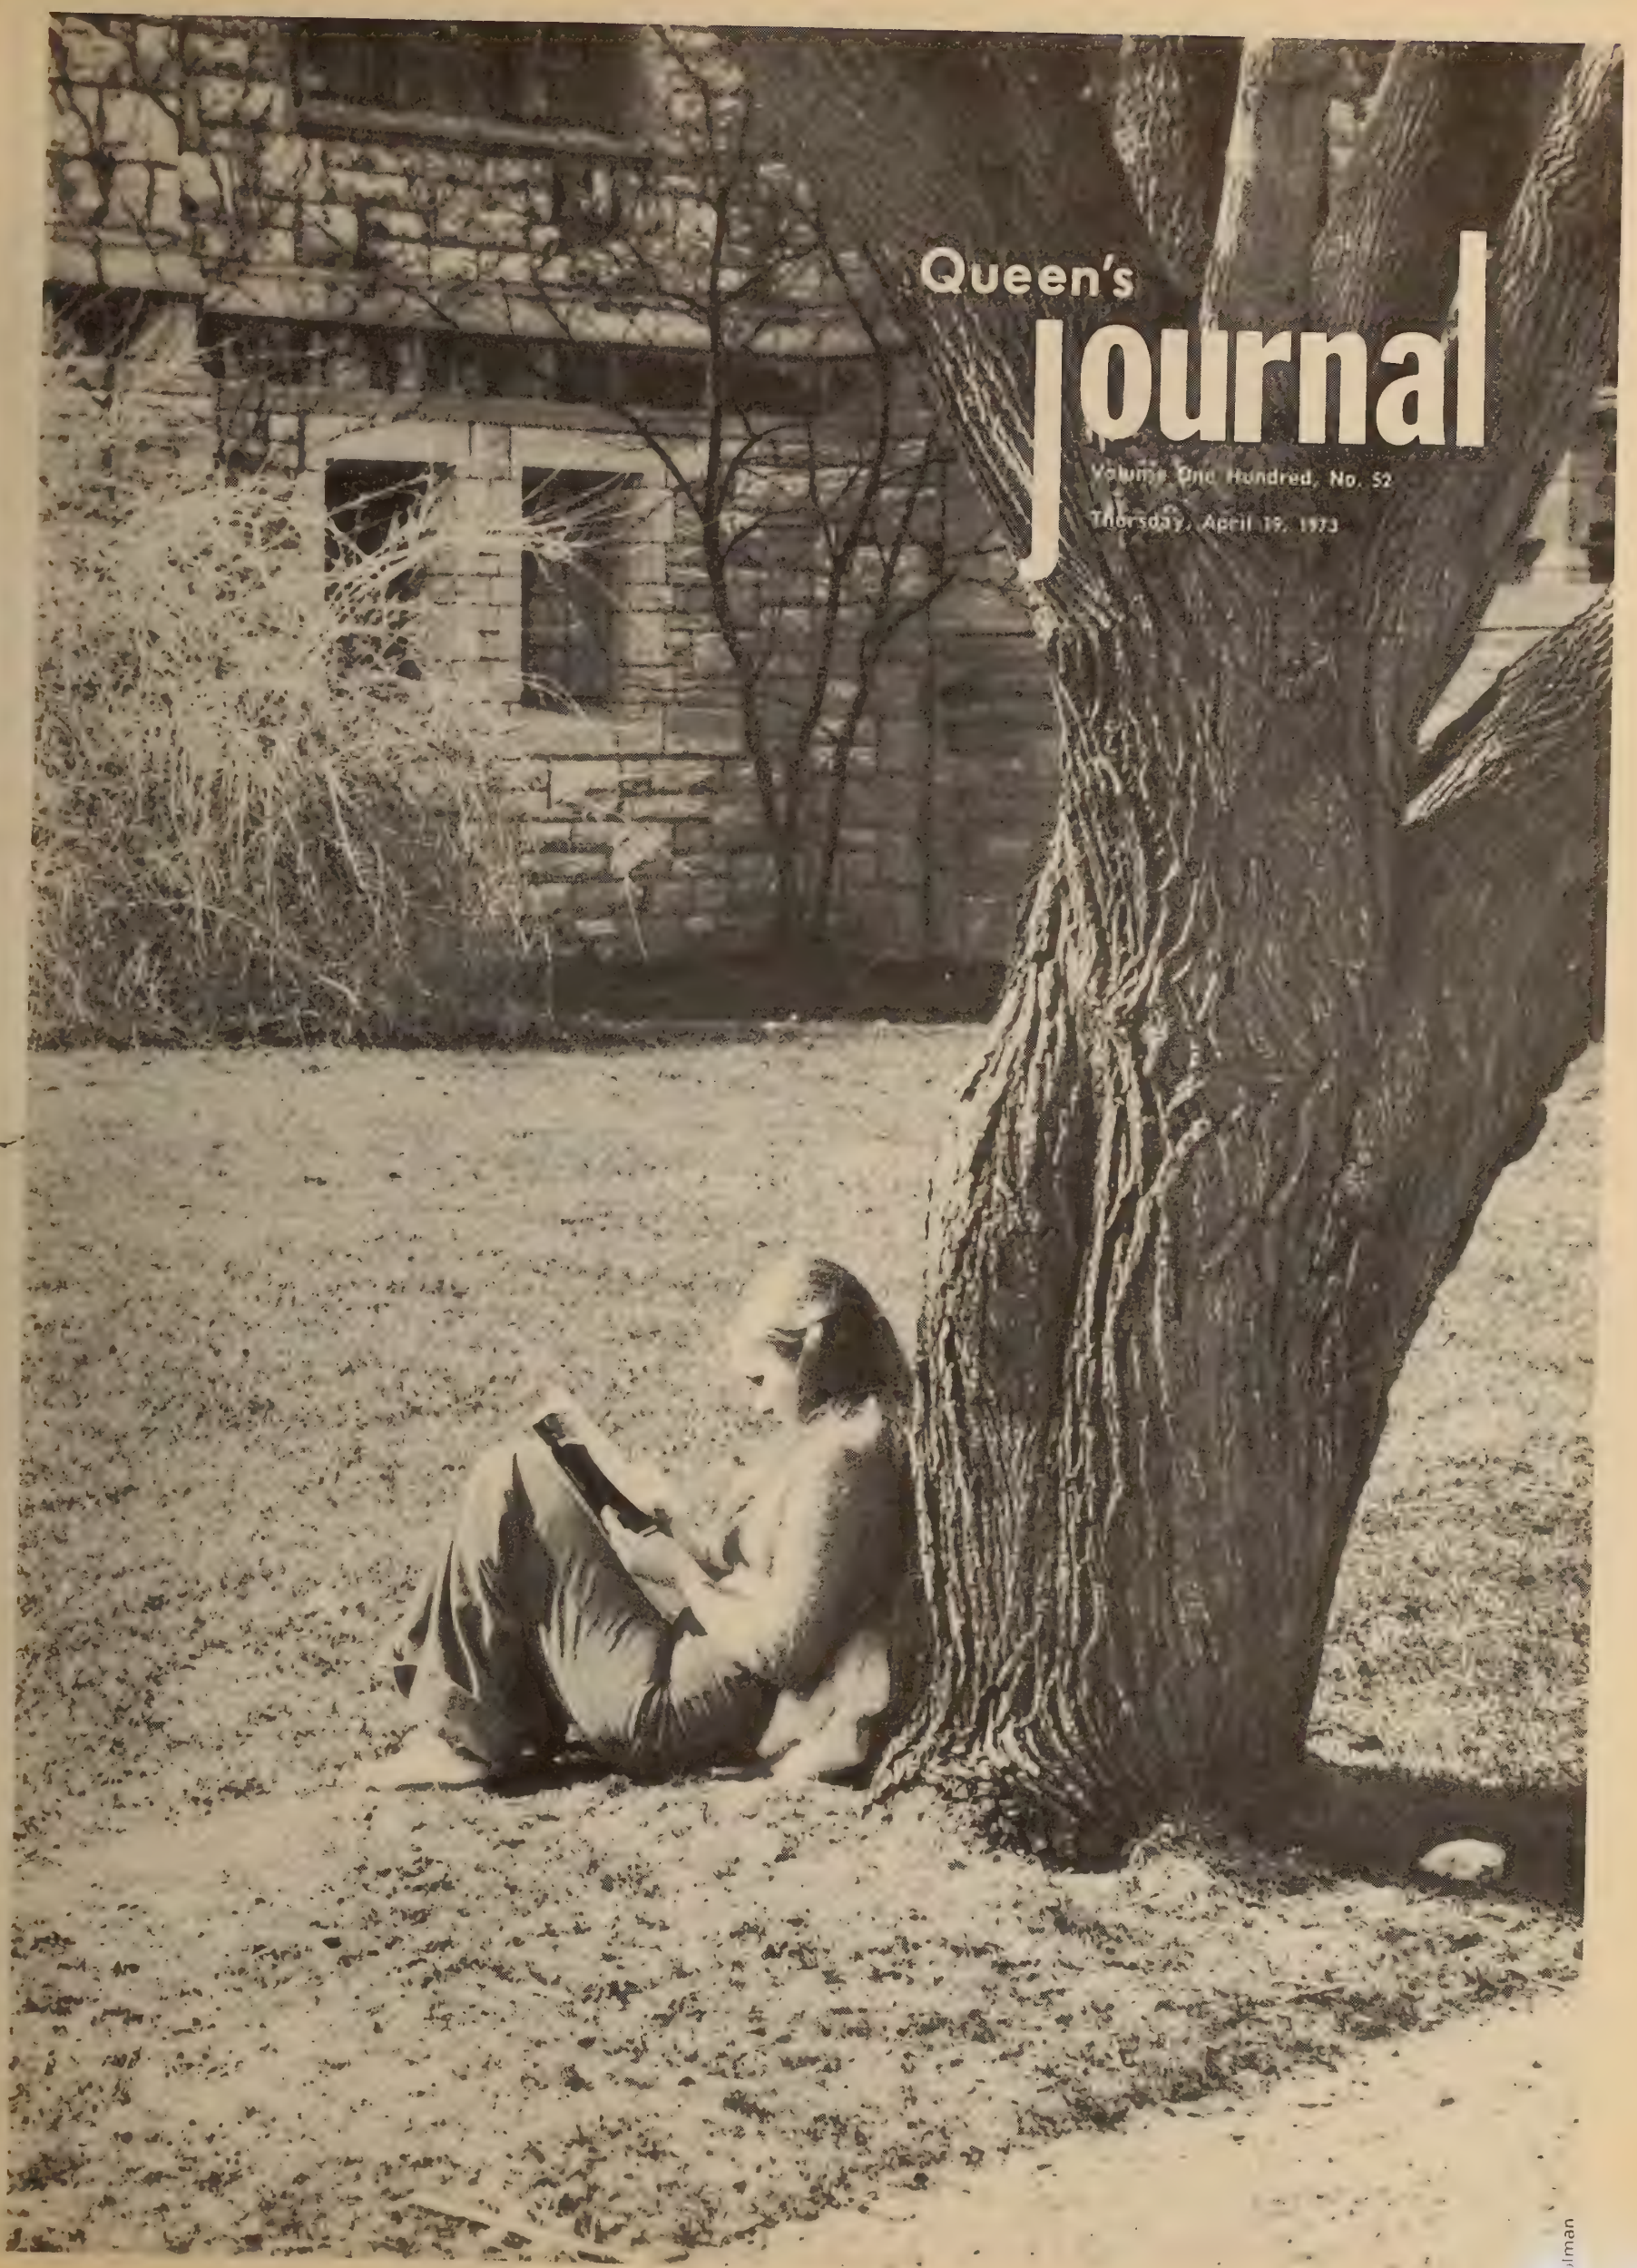
Apple Corp., the group's music company, has announced that a secret album has been recorded of the four former Beatles in individual performances featuring different combinations of them but none altogether.

Apple stated that this album will be released this summer.

WASHINGTON — The United States Senate voted Tuesday to stiffen penalties against federal felonists using firearms and non-addicted drug pushers.

The ruling states that non-addicts selling at least one-tenth of an ounce of heroin or morphine would now spend from ten to thirty years in prison for a first offence. A second offence will draw a life sentence with the possibility of parole only after thirty years.

Persons convicted of using firearms to commit a federal felony will now draw from five to fifteen years in prison instead of the previous two.



STRASBOURG, FRANCE — Forty-five persons were injured in a bloody encounter between French police and 1000 students who were attempting to take over the university telephone exchange. The students were protesting the abolition of military service deferments.

KUWAIT — Iraq and Kuwait have finally agreed to come to the bargaining table to settle a dispute which has been raging off and on between the two neighbouring nations since 1960.

The arguments have been spurred by Kuwaiti control of two islands blocking access to a major Iraqi port on the Persian Gulf. The dispute has continued since Iraq gained its independence from Britain thirteen years ago.

There is considerable suspicion among Arab nations that the Iraqi complaint has its origins in the government of the Soviet Union.

Queen's
Journal
Volume One Hundred, No. 52
Thursday, April 19, 1973

Gilman

newsbriefs

Work permit extension for foreign students

Kingston Manpower and Immigration officials have confirmed that students on student visas who arrived in Canada before the first of January can obtain summer employment without getting work permits from the local Manpower office. They must however, have approval from an immigration official.

Graduate wife wins wine

The winner of the Graduate Wives Club raffle is Jeannette Kam of 17 Van Order Drive. She won three bottles of wine.

Queen's hosts women's conference

Queen's will be hosting the second Conference on Women in the University from May 31 to June 1. Women from universities across Canada who have been actively working on different concerns of women are expected to attend and to report on what they are doing now and what they plan for the future.

Among topics on the agenda are reports from national committees on findings on what happens when Status of Women committees finish their work and on Women's Studies. Discussion will focus on the relationship of women's studies to existing academic programmes, establishing and teaching such programmes, and the relationship of women's studies programmes to the community.

An afternoon session will be devoted to a multi-media presentation of films, tapes, slides and literature by and about women, and Gail Stewart will address the conference on the topic of 'Where Are We Heading?'

The conference is open to all women in the university -- professors, students, staff, administrators, graduates. Further information regarding the conference can be obtained from the Dean of Women's Office, 547-6921.

Western prof sues Student Council for libel

LONDON — The Student Council at the University of Western Ontario has reached an out-of-courtsettlementover its Course Evaluation Guide. The settlement provides that a section containing innacurate statistics regarding the Applied Math Department be removed from the book and a supplement be published.

Subsequently, Mary Hill, a Sociology professor has filed a $100,000 libel suit against the USC over the book. She alleges that she received low ratings because the evaluation was not carried out in her course on the date originally specified.

Hill is also seeking an injunction to stop the publication of the guide.

Student Council spokesmen say that the delays in publication of the book are "irritating" and damaging because students will not be able to use it in time for pre registration.

Clear lockers by May 2nd

Totes in the Physed Centre must either be renewed or cleared by Wednesday, May 2, or university staff will clear them.

Lock refund slips will be available at the equipment counters in locker rooms and are redeemable at the physed centre office between 11 am and 4 30 pm Monday to Friday.

Queen's PC Club elects executive

One month ago the Queen's Progressive Conservative Club held its annual meeting. At the meeting, the new executive was elected. The 1973-74 executive is as follows: President: Ruth Ranson, Executive Vice President: Doug Bonnell, Vice President: Closten Ball, Secretary: Gary Vanderhadden and Treasurer: Mike Daniher.

Kingston hall, moving?

After a week of relative peace and quiet, while the engineers wrote exams, the campus has once more been inundated by the golden hordes as they measure (to the nearest 3-100th of a foot) the distance from the fire hydrant in front of the Union to that in front of McNeill House. Survey school has started again, and maybe it's just a coincidence but the young ladies are out sunning themselves again as well. Coincidence or not, the budding topographers probably appreciate it, as a break in the routine. You may have noticed at certain times the engineers acting like prime Grade A ballet students, but in reality they are using the secret engineer's code and singalling numbers to their partners. At least that's what they say. And one engineer claims that Kingston Hall is moving. It's spring, though, and we'll forgive him.

Ryerson profs lose confidence in President

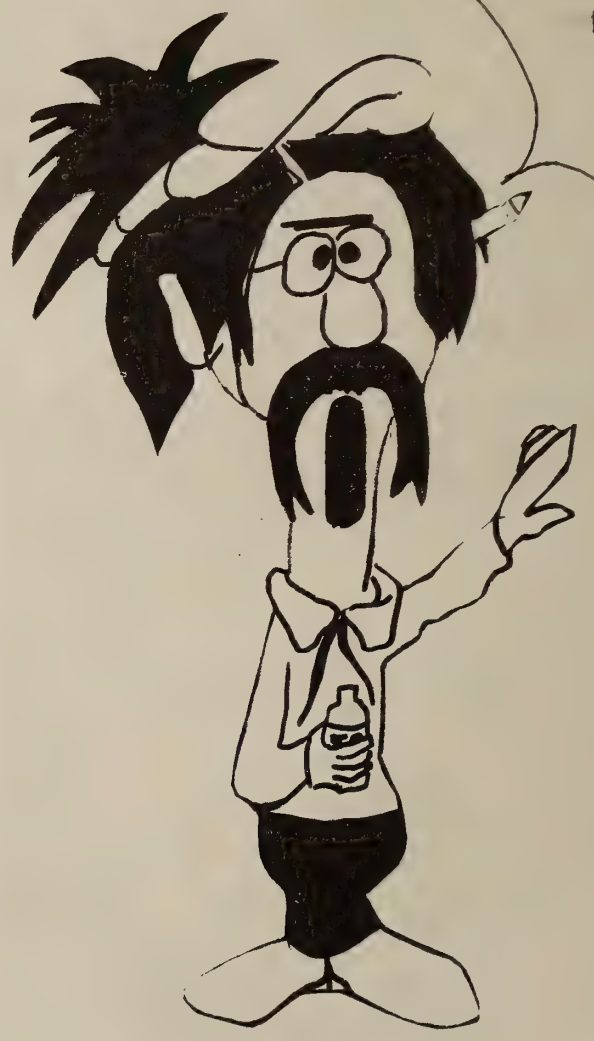
by Kathy McDonald

On Wednesday, April 11th, Ryerson Faculty Association voted on a motion of non-confidence in President Donald Mordell. Reasons behind the motion included Mordell's refusal to take the association into confidence about Ryerson's financial difficulties, and his inability to justify non-academic costs of about 43 per cent of the budget.

Of the 355 Faculty members who attended the meeting, 268 voted in favor of the non confidence motion, and 73 against it, with 14 spoiled ballots.

The faculty non-confidence vote came one month after Mordell fired 48 of 108 caretakers at Ryerson to help cope with a major budget deficit. The caretakers, their wives and children have occupied the school's 14th floor since March 28th.

Ryerson Students' Union voted unanimously on April 12th, to give President Mordell their support providing he gives into demands by the community for more involvement in the decision-making process. They gave Mordell six months to alter his style of administration. If he has not met their demands by then, the Union will call a referendum of its members concerning student confidence in the president. The students felt that Ryerson had received enough adverse publicity over the issue and that firing the president would only make matters worse.



Last Saturday, the Institute's Board of Governors pledged to support Mordell, but instructed him to report to their next meeting late in May, on his plans for meeting Ryerson's financial problems. The deficit, now set at $842,000 but predicted to triple in a year, is at the root of Mordell's problems.

In a statement Monday, Mr. Mordell said he was gratified that the board gave him its support.

Scoop sez

Once again this year, we will be publishing during the summer. If you won't be here and want to keep on top of the campus, we will mail a Journal to you wherever you are for only a dollar. Send your dollar and your address to Summer Mailings, Queen's Journal Union.

Also, Summer who's Where will be published in the May 17 Journal, if you wanna be in it, fill out the handy free coupon and return it to us by May 8 and we will put you in it!

To:
SUMMER WHO'S WHERE
c/o Queen's Journal
Students' Union

I hereby request that the following information be included in the 1973 summer Who's Where. I understand that the producers of the Summer Who's Where will take reasonable care to ensure the correctness of the material included, but that neither they, the Alma Mater Society or the Queen's Journal can accept any responsibility for the ommission of any listing or any errors contained therein, however caused.

Name: (surname first) .....

Address: .....

City: .....

Phone: .....

Area Code: .....

Fee withholding succeeds

OSAP loans, grants more accessible

TORONTO — Provincial support for post-secondary students will increase to $38.4 million next year compared to last year's expenditures of $27 million. The increases will make more aid available to lower income students, and loans easier to get for part-time students and those who wish to be independent of their parents.

In a statement released with the provincial estimates, the Minister of Colleges and Universities Jack McNie said "we are modifying the present Student Awards Programme to bring the needs assessment more into line with today's costs and to accommodate other considerations, and we want to do more to encourage academic achievement."

He said the changes will help students presently in the system and encourage high-school students who are considering post-secondary education. McNie also said that talks leading to "substantial improvements" in the Canada Student Loan Plan were making considerable progress, but no action had yet been taken on conditional repayment of student loans, or aid for part-time students under the federal GSL programme.

Changes in the method of calculating OSAP grants include:

Boosting the basic family allowance from $1800 to $4000 on OSAP parental contribution tables. The Ministry estimates this will make an additional $5 million in grants available to students from lower and middle income groups.

Substantially increasing allowable deductions where both parents are working and including baby-sitting expenses in the deductions.

Increasing by 10 percent the weekly miscellaneous allowance.

Modifying assessment procedures so that "married students will benefit to the extent of a half a million dollars in grants."

Encouraging academic excellence by increasing exemptions for academic awards to the level of tuition and incidental fees. (The previous limit was $150)

Ontario students who have worked for at least two full years and who wish to be financially independent of their parents can now apply for independent status under the Canada Student Loans Plan.

The Ministry says that it is also undertaking a programme which will make bank loans more readily available to part-time students, and will encourage post-secondary institutions to allow part-time students to spread out tuition payments over the length of the course if the fee is over $50. The government will make accelerated payments to institutions to offset any internal cash flow problems this may cause.

Permission has been given to universities to use normal operating funds to provide bursaries to graduate students in their third consecutive term, and the Ministry is formulating plans for a revised system of graduate assistance "based on a high level of academic achievement."

The effect of the changes is shown in the following examples supplied by McNie's office:

A single student with one parent making $9000 and a second child not attending university; in 1972-3, the expected parental contribution was $663. In that case, a student would have received $640 in assistance in the form of a loan. Under the new scheme, the parental contribution is $495. The student would receive $990 in assistance -- $800 in loans, and $190 in grant.

For a married student with the husband earning $1800 and the wife earning $5000 with one child under 12, last year, the expected contribution was $1430, which would have netted the student $690 worth of assistance in the form of a loan. Under the 1973-4 regulations, the expected contribution is $60. In this case, the student would receive $1910 worth of assistance -- $800 in loan and $1110 in grant.

In addition to the increased student support, the government is increasing operating grants to universities and colleges by $48.5 million. Most of the increase will go to raising the Basic Income Unit -- the funding per student which universities receive from the government.

Other parts of the increase will include added weight to part-time programmes for grant purposes, and more support for bilingual programmes.

The bilingual grants, which go to Ottawa U, Glendon College, Laurentian, Algonquin College and Sudbury are now to be calculated at 5 percent of the Basic Operating Income. Schools of social work in Universities will receive supplementary grants to finance field instruction that at one time was supported by federal grants.

The government is also supplying "extra-formula grants" for undergraduate programmes in law and medicine at nine universities. Queen's will receive such grants for its law programmes.

Smaller universities, mainly Brock and Trent -- both of which have had severe financial difficulties this year -- will receive added assistance "in the form of fixed sum compensatory grants based on a careful assessment of their needs."

McNie said of the increased amounts being spent on colleges and universities that "the financial commitment shows that post-secondary education remains very high on the Government's list of priorities." During the fee withholding campaigns across the province, students had accused the Davis government of being unconcerned with post-secondary education and cutting back expenditures on it as a scapegoat for its financial difficulties.

One of the demands of students during the campaign, and one of the themes covered in the Learning Society (COPSE or Wright Report) was increasing support for part-time studies. McNie said the government is placing a greater emphasis on this and and it is reflected in the decision to now count five course registrations as a full-time equivalent for grant purposes.

The estimates also show that the status of capital financing remains essentially unchanged since last November's capital freeze. For 1973-4, $65 million has been allocated for capital expenditures on colleges and universities, down from $147 last year. McNie said this money will be provided only to complete those facilities already underway or for emergency renovations.

Queen's OFS Delegate Lyn Whitham, who coordinated the fee withholding and related enterprises on this campus, said the estimates did not give exactly what the students asked of the government, but "it is clear that the fee withholding combined with other actions on the part of university students has resulted in loans and grants being more available to students."

She thought that the government is moving in the direction suggested in the Learning Society and said students should make responses to the report "so that there can be direct student input into government decisions on post-secondary education. Certainly, the OSAP programme has inherent problems and everyone seems to recognize that on a long term basis we should be asking for much more."

NOTICE TO STUDENTS

Faculty of Arts and Science

A limited number of Arts and Science students will be permitted to take the following Applied Science course for credit toward an Arts and Science degree. Preference will be given to students entering their third year of a four-year degree program. Interested students should pre-register by APRIL 28 in the office of the Associate Dean (Studies) to take this course.

33-101 Nature, Science and Man

An introduction to the nature and development of man and his environment. The evolution of the earth and living species is briefly considered. The present nature of the earth, including its living systems and the environment, as well as the social and cultural inheritance of man is discussed. UNIVERSITY STAFF AND INVITED GUEST LECTURERS

CONVOCATIONS 1973

Hoods, Gowns and Mortarboards

The Alma Mater Society RENTS academic hoods, gowns, and mortarboards to graduating students on a non-profit basis according to the following conditions:

a) A deposit of $7.00 cash will be required to rent a HOOD) $5.00 will be refunded when the hood is returned.

b) A deposit of $7.00 cash will be required to rent a GOWN; $5.00 will be refunded when the gown is returned.

c) A deposit of $6.00 cash will be required to rent a MORTARBOARD; $5.00 will be refunded when the mortarboard is returned.

Please Note:

i) The wearing of mortarboards is entirely optional

ii) Hoods will NOT be available to the Faculty; however, gowns may still be rented according to b) above provided graduant requirements can be met for that convocation.

NO CHEQUES PLEASE

TIME AND PLACE

Hoods, gowns, and mortarboards may be obtained at the Basement Lounge of the International Centre, Students' Memorial Union, and must be returned there IMMEDIATELY following the ceremony. The following schedule will apply:

+ Theology, Faculty of Education: Friday May 25th, after 8:00 a.m.
+ Applied Science, School of Business (B. Con., M.B.A.): Friday, May 25th, after 3:30 p.m., or Saturday, May 26th, after 8:00 a.m.
+ Graduate Studies, Law, Medicine, Nursing, Rehabilitation Therapy: Saturday, May 26th, after 8:00 a.m.
+ B.A. (Hons.), B.A. (A-H): Friday, June 1st, after 12:00 p.m. or Saturday, June 2nd, after 8:00 a.m.
+ B. Sc. (Hons.) B.A. (I-Z), B.A.E., B. Mus., B.P.H.E.: Saturday, June 2nd, after 11:00 a.m.

NOTE: Due to both morning and afternoon convocations, all garments must be returned IMMEDIATELY following the ceremony. Failure to do so will result in a $5.00 surcharge.

Journal hacks vacate

With today's issue out of the way, the Journal's high class collection of hacks decided to go on an extended vacation.

Consequently, there will be no paper next week. In addition, there will be no paper the week after that. In fact, the next edition of the Journal will not appear until Thursday, May 17, the first week of Intersession.

The Journal will run from then until mid-August, at which time it will turn a hundred years old.

As the hacks sat around the now silent news room lamenting the passing of a golden era, one voice spoke up and pointed out that with nothing doing on campus, not having papers was probably a good idea, "we couldn't fill up 16 pages with printer jokes!"

'Messiah' - Liturgy or Art?

by Steven Winnett

St. Mary's Cathedral was jammed on Friday night for an essentially successful performance of Handel's Messiah, by the Chalmers Singers and assembled soloists and chamber ensemble, under the direction of David Cameron. Certainly the performance was successful in terms of audience response.

A brief standing ovation was deservedly accorded to a hard-working cast at the conclusion of the work, and an outburst of applause inevitably followed the Singers' enthusiastic rendering of the "Hallelujah" chorus (for which the audience was requested not to stand). At the end of Part 1, however, the audience did not applaud out of fear of clapping in a church, and especially at the performance of a work which, although originally billed as an "entertainment", has come to assume pseudo-liturgical proportions in the English-speaking world.

This pseudo-liturgical appreciation of Messiah has forced the work to assume today, the role of orthodoxy's response to the challenges of Jesus Christ, Superstar a notion to which I will return later in this "review".

But first of all, it remains to deal with Friday night's performance. In his program notes, Mr. Cameron emphasised that his rendition of Messiah would depart from historical precedents in matters of tempo. He noted that the metronome speeds established by Crotch in 1800 vary "from slightly stodgy to incredibly slow". It was only in the opening part of the performance that one was led to doubt a change in tempo. The Overture appeared to be too slow, too subdued. Nor did Wilbur Maust, tenor, in his first air, "every valley shall be exalted", succeed in imparting a fiery and dynamic tempo. He also seemed hesitant in approaching the oratorio;as he raced from breath to breath. But it would be unfair to single out Mr. Maust at this point in the performance. All the performers seemed to be treading warily as they entered the oratorio.

It is inevitable in performances of Messiah that the airs and recitatives should sound rather flat beside the resounding, anthem-like choruses. It was with the intervention of the first chorus, "and the glory of the Lord shall be revealed", that the sense of hesitancy were overcome and the performance at last launched on its way. John Davies, bass-baritone, attacked his recitative, "Thus with the Lord of Hosts", with a directness that increasingly became the mark of the performance as the evening wore on.

All in all, the first part of Friday night's performance was less successful than the second part. Part 1 often seemed to be dragging on for too long. Particularly unfortunate was the chamber ensemble's rendering of the Pastoral Symphony. This work is not lachrymose at all, but rather, like all of Part 1, an expression of joy in the Incarnation. Any attempts to avoid such an air of tearfulness were defeated by the nagging failure of the violins to stay in tune with the rest of the ensemble during the performance of the "symphony".

perry

The Chalmers Singers carried the burden of the performance in Part 1. Doris Parker, contralto, provided the vocal highlight of Part 1 with her sensitive presentation of the air, "O thou that tellest good tidings to Zion."

In Part 1 however, there was a marked increase in the tempo of the performance. Margaret Campbell's presence on the stage became far more noticeable than it had been in Part 1 with her lovely singing of two airs. Doris Parker shone in her tender singing of the most successful communication of the pathos of the Crucifixion during the performance of the "Redemption" section. Her other great success was in her duet with Mr. Maust, "O death, where is they sting?" Mr. Davies forcefully set the tone of the "Resurrection" segment with his "The trumpet shall sound".

Unavoidably, the largest "gold star" must go to the Chalmers Singers for their truly exciting choral outbursts. Their voices were eagerly awaited by the audience. It might be argued that it is hard to "fail" with a piece like the "Hallelujah" chorus. It would be equally foolish to deride a successful performance of the chorus solely on these grounds, and there can be no denying the rousing rendition given by the Chalmers Singers. They brought a strong sense of dramatic awareness to the performance with their hushened presentation of the quartet, "Since by man came death". This was followed by their triumphant singing of "By man came also the resurrection of the dead." The bass section of the choir were especially vivid in their singing of "He trusted in God that he would deliver him." And the Singers gave a splendid performance of the final, victorious chorus of "Worthy is the lamb that was slain", and of the final glorious "Amen".This stunning arrangement Paul Lang has called "a dazzling piece . . .Handel meant this stupendous chorus to be the crowning glory of the oratorio. It will remain forever the envy of all choral composers."

Granted the overall success of Friday's performance, a question still remains. How are we, as audience, to encounter this strange and wonderful work, beyond the merely mechanical response of applause? There are two particular problems which are inevitable at any performance of Messiah and which make requisite a high degree of audience participaton.

Th first great problem to be overcome is the nature of the oratorio itself. It is not a narrative version of some central aspect of the Christian theme, like Bach's St. Matthew Passion. Rather, what we are confronted with is a non-dramatic work in which three meditative moods might be discerned: the lyrical, the contemplative, and the intellectual-speculative.

But here a certain contradiction is evident in the work, which leads us to its second major problem. What directly was the "message of the Messiah" as it was labelled Friday night. Unlike metaphysical poetry, this oratorio radiates not out of a center of doubt (a center enclosed by a larger context) but rather out of a center of certitude. The key word of Part 1 of the Messiah, and indeed of the whole work, is "Light" - and associated with that light are notions of the triumphant,nationalistic,comfortable God of the Old Testament, battering the foes of his chosen people. Christ the Redeemer seems curiously absent from this work. Paul Lang in his biography of Handel notes the affinity between this Old Testament God and 18th century England.

"The Old Testament supported the Englishmen's view, and they liked the Old Testament for its exaltation of righteousness,the constant emphasis on morals, the primacy of law, its Puritanism, its unequivocal endorsement of private property and 'free enterprise! And they loved the elaborate ritual, the role of the King, and above all the staunch defence of the nation's ideals, laws, and institutions by great commoners who rose to heroic leadership."

Is this the essence of "the message of the Messiah? Are we merely to see the work as an expression of "Christian smugness"? There is a real problem for the twentieth century in encountering Handel's Messiah: in an age of doubt and of personal, non-institutional exploration of religious beliefs. Here is a work which speaks out of a firmly institutional complex of doctrinal security - which may or may not provide the kind of orthodoxy for which, perhaps, our age is searching to a greater extent than it would care to admit.

It is only by dynamizing our encounter with the Messiah, by a critical examination of its promises and methods, that we can import to this oratorio the dignity of art which it merits. Otherwise, we run the risk of continuing the pseudo-liturgical approach of our Victorian ancestors, an approach which can only result in our eventual abandonment of the work. And this is, alas, the fate of so many other highly formalized expressions of faith from the past.

leedays

Friday, April 20th
Good Friday Service at 2:30 pm, Dunning Hall.
Sunday, April 21
Salvation Army, Danforth Songsters present a "Fe
McArthur Hall, 8.00 pm.
Wednesday, April 25th
"The Hollow Crown", an entertainment by and ab
Queens of England, devised by John Barton Kempt. Presented in the McArthur Theatre by Department, Faculty of Education.
Saturday, April 28th.
HOORAY!
May 2nd
"Colors," a dramatic anthology, presented in the
by the Youth Theatre Company of the Theatre
Faculty of Education. Admission free. 8:30 p.m.
May 6 - 11
Industrial Relations Seminar - Victoria Hall (all the Queen's Industrial Relations Centre.
May 7 - 9
Provincial Council of Women, in Victoria Hall. All L
May 11 - 13
Ontario Association of Certified Engineering
Technologists Annual Meeting and Convention.
Day.
Friday, May 11
9:00 pm - Domino Theatre presents "Home" by Dav by Morison Bock. Tickets available at Theatre a
May 13 - 18
National Conference and Symposium "The Child in Activity" – Victoria and Dunning Halls All Day Queen's School of Physical and Health Educati

pubs

Lakeview Manor - The Hourglass
401 Inn - Toronto
Townhouse - Canada until Saturday only.

theatres

Capital - Come Back Charleston Blue and Rage
Odeon - Shamus
Hyland - The Nelson Affair
Kingston Drive-In - Clockwork Orange and Dea

library hours

The Douglas Library will be open for only lim Easter weekend. On Good Friday, April 20, the lib a.m. to 10 p.m., with only the following areas ope
Stacks, Central Information Services Room, Main
Periodicals Room. Normal service will resume o
The library will be open from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. on noon to 1 a.m. on April 22. Reserve material chec on Thursday, April 19, may be kept for the entire back at 9 a.m. on Monday, April 23.

physed centre hours

New hours are in effect for the Physical Educatio until April 29th. All activity areas will be open Mon am to 10:30 pm, Saturday, 8:00 am to 4:30 pm, and 10:30 pm. These hours also apply to the Arena Tr the writing of exams. The pool hours will be the sa schedule.

union hours

Wallace Hall will be closed from April 28 to Jul
Coffee Shop for that period will be 7:30 a.m. to 6
Friday; 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturdays, and 11 a.m. to 6

CFRC am-fm Sur Pro Sch

CFRC & CFRC-FM, 1490 and 91

THURSDAYS		SATURDAYS
6:30	Spectrum	6:00	Sounds
6:55	Happenings	6:55	Happer
7:30	Hancock's Half-Hour	7:00	Classic
8:00	Let's Discuss It	8:00	Spotlig
9:00	Mainstream and Mindstream	9:00	Free F
10:00	Nocturne	10:00	Noctur
2:00	Sign-off	5:00	Sign-of
		SUNDAYS
FRIDAYS		9:00	Musica
6:30	Spectrum	12:00	Classic
6:55	Happenings	3:45	Featur
7:30	Music Around the World	4:00	Sunday
8:00	The Living Classics	6:55	Happe
10:00	Nocturne	7:00	Interna
2:00	Sign-off	7:30	Monta
		9:00	Conten
		10:00	Sign-of

CUS - 'a Canadian reality'

Since 1926, the existance of some form of national student union has been a Canadian reality. Between then and 1964, the National Federation of Canadian University Students operated a fairly efficient service organization for university students.

NFCUS objectives were: the promotion of better understanding among Canadian students, a higher degree of co-operation among student organizations, the advancement of legitimate student interests and the development of relationships with other national groups.

However, there were several drawbacks to NFCUS in that it failed to face the meaning and reality of the students' position in universities. First, it defined only people who attended university as students. Second, while claiming that one of its purposes was to "advance legitimate student interests," it narrowly defined those interests along service lines.

In October 1963, delegates to the annual NFCUS conference restructured the organization to allow French-speaking students an equal voice in all matters concerning them. They also changed the name to the Canadian Union of Students. At the next year's conference. French-speaking Quebec delegates took their unions out of CUS and later formed their own organization - Union Generale de Etudiants de Quebec.

Both UGEC and CUS immediately attempted to go beyond the narrow rhetoric of NFCUS and began to be involved with student problems on a political as well as a more expanded service level.

Concern over accessibility within the university and the role of university in society moved the organization into discussions of questions affecting the day-to-day existence of students -- housing, unemployment, loans, visas. The questions of universal accessibility lead them to see the problem as "the abolition of all social and financial barriers to post-secondary education". This was in its time a radical analysis; today, perhaps a more commonplace idea. But as the organization began to come to grips with universal accessibility, people found they had to consider all aspects of education and society, and this helped to percipitate the downfall of CUS.

At the same time, CUS was becoming political, it continued to provide essential services. It provided publications on co-ops, education, housing, and student unions. The union also operated research services which developed positions on student representation and participation. CUS sponsored a life-insurance plan and operated a flourishing travel service. CUS helped to create the Canada Student Loan Plan. It also lobbied for the legislation that allowed students to deduct tuition from income tax.

CUS folded primarily because it became more progressive than its member organizations. Its leadership lost touch with campuses. It was facing questions and searching for answers that were largely considered taboo by students. The press seized on these "more radical views" and capitalized on the controversy, helping to drive the wedge between CUS and the students.

It took nearly three years, but now another attempt at a national union is underway. Last winter, the Windsor student council called for a national meeting to discuss the rebirth of a national union. Not coincidentally, at least six other schools were involved in the same thinking. Windsor was the first to write the letters.

The conference was a partial success. It defined the need for a national association, analysed the errors and established a set of procedures that would bring a national union into reality. But it was also a partial failure in that it did not include students from French-speaking Quebec institutions, nor students from community colleges.

A kind of bickering that was evident at the Windsor conference could have spelled doom for the organization, but the members faced the realities of dissessention and differences between Canadian universities. Delegates selected a steering committee to co-ordinate a conference to found the national union. It drafted a constitution and encouraged campus debate on the direction of the new union. The conference was held in Ottawa in November, delegates adopted a constitution and selected a central committee. The National Union of Students was slowly getting off the ground. By January, a snowball effect had begun with several student councils voting to join and many others holding referenda required for membership. All so far have gone for joining NUS.

According to Michael Walsh, a member of the NUS central committee, NUS is both a political and service organization. "It will lobby for students with federal authorities and perform research on housing, pubs, unemployment, and student participation in university government."

Walsh sees that many of the problems of CUS have been overcome, since all post-secondary institutions are eligible for membership. The problem of UCS leaders becoming more progressive than students has been overcome structurally says Walsh. The new union requires that all policy decisions come from the floor of a general assembly after all members have been given ample notice. The organization will have no president or speaker for the organization.

The first annual NUS general meeting will be held in Halifax next month.

A significant commentary on contemporary man presented by the students and library of LCVI

CELEBRATION OF MAN

incorporating the words and music of part 1
Handel's Messiah

Thursday, April 19
6 - 7 p.m.

Adelaide Common Room

St James Anglican Church

GOOD FRIDAY — 10:30 A.M. — Devotional Service

EASTER DAY, 8:00 A.M. — Choral Communion
11:00 A.M. — Choral Communion
7:30 P.M. — Evening Prayer and Holy Communion

Preacher
The Ven. A. J. Anderson,
Archdeacon of Kingston

Would you throw away

$4.?

If you did not opt out in October, you paid for a copy of Tricolor '73 with your fees last fall.

The book will be available in September.

If you will be here, you may pick up your copy then if your have your green student card.

If you won't be here, you may have it mailed for $1 payable this spring at the AMS Office.

BICYCLE BUY OF THE YEAR!

MEN'S 10 SPEED "FLANDRIA"
RACING BICYCLES

European Precision Built. Featherweight Frame. Famous "Simplex" multiple gearing system. Must be seen to be appreciated
list price 139.95
wholesale cost 104.50

89.95

Nobody But Nobody Can Even Come Close to this incredible value. Other European-built Men's 10 Speed Models at Similar Bargain Prices.

ON SALE 79.95 and 84.95

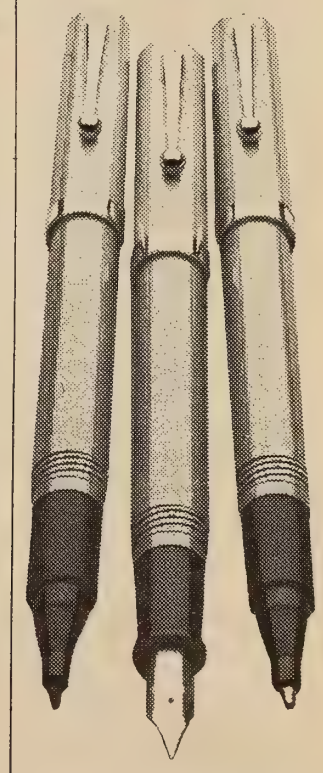
ALL BICYCLES feature the sturdy "Simplex" gearing system, sure-stop centre-pull caliper brakes, adjustable racing saddle. Engineered to satisfy even the most demanding rider. Less than wholesale cost.

S&R DISCOUNT DEPARTMENT STORE
Princess St. at Ontario.



CHARGEX OR LAY-A-WAYS ACCEPTED

WATERMAN-BIC

NoNonsense Pens

Simple, straight-forward, classic—out of step with today's throwaway culture. Refillable cartridge, ballpoint or fiber tip marker in basic tan or navy blue. $1.98: not bad for a pen you may use the rest of your life.

$1.98

SHEAFFER, WORLD-WIDE, A textron COMPANY

unclassifieds . . .

NO ONE is to attribute this week's paper to me. The EDITOR.

GERMAN SHEPARDS are probably just as good, you know.

FURNISHED APARTMENT for rent. 3 large rooms and pantry. Private home, new building with free off-street parking. Electric heat with low hydro bills. Plenty of closet and cupboard space. Quiet location. Few blocks from campus. No lease. $135 a month. Available May 1. Call 544-1987.

COUPLE WANTED to live on nearby farm for summer, help with child and chores. Call 542-2000 weekdays.

WANTED IS A LARGE student-type desk, preferably with abundant filing and storage space. Phone 544-6833.

M. K. wants to wish all his friends and enemies good luck on their exams, even Pat who should be studying but isn't.

SEVERAL SMALL APARTMENTS coming available Sept. 1. Close to Queens and Hospital. $110 and up. Call Davy Real Estate Limited at 546-2256.

TO SUBLET: Spacious, aesthetically inoffensive single apartment with queen-size waterbed. Conveniently located on Princess and Barrie. $80 a month with heat and utilities. 544-6833.

TO EDDY: We are interested in keeping you well-supplied. If you are interested yourself, please feel free to contact us if you are dying to have more sent to you. Feel free. From your good old friends. THE GOODTIMES PEOPLE.

NEWS FLASH! Addy Two Virginity Squad is disappearing day by day! Korn will soon be left destitute!

WEREN'T YOU flattered when the nice gentleman at the bar asked for your ID?

NEED AN APARTMENT next year? Take over Ours on May 1. Two bedrooms (suitable for 3). Albert and Union. Rent $150 a month. Furnished for the summer. Phone 544-5459.

LOST: SILVER watch, in or between library and union. Of great sentimental value. Please phone 544-8242.

ENJOY Kingston in the Spring - be part of INTERSESSION 73.

FOR SALE: Queen-size water bed with frame and liner. Used 3 months. $80. 389-1582.

HOW WOULD YOU like to live only 4 minutes from fun-filled Douglas Library? We have a fully-furnished 2 bedroom apartment to sublet from May to September. Call 544-3490, preferably between 5:30 and 7 pm.

TO THE PERSON WHO BORROWED MY LIME green GranTurismo from between Addy and Ban Righ -- I would appreciate its return back behind the residence sometime within the next week. Why would you want it -- it had a flat tire?? Grass, thanx for the popKorn.

SUE —— tonite for tipping the mug?

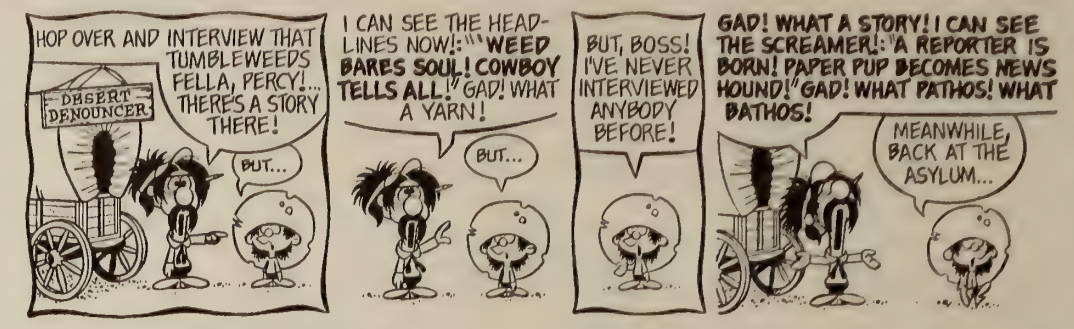
WE NEED a used chesterfield and chairs, double med, single med, chests of drawers, kitchen or dinette set, end tables, coffee table, rungs -- enough to fill an apartment. Contact Mrs. Wight at 547-2758.

SHARED ACCOMMODATION: 1 male to share modern, 2 bedroom completely furnished apartment for May to Sept. (Or a part thereof) Close to campus. Rent reasonable and negotiable. Call Ron or Bob before 9:30 am, between 5 - 7 pm or after 11:30 pm at 544-6160.

CAN'T FIND A JOB? Sorry to leave Kingston now that the monsoon season is over? CONSIDER INTERSESSION 73! Applications will be accepted until May 14.

ATTENTION: IF A CERTAIN V.W.K. doesn't phone K.M.K. soon, she won't "sock" it to him. P.S. Good luck in exams.

BIKE MISSING: GIRL'S blue and white CCM bike with carrier. Was locked when last seen in front of Adelaide Hall. Please call Janet 544-8148 with any information leading to whereabouts.



THIS IS JUST a warning to you that the Vegas Valley Leopard Frog is about to attack. It has already infiltrated the Pomegranate Pickers Society of Canada, so you had better watch out.

IF MY TRUSTY OLD BLUE 3-speed charger is alive and well in Kingston, I would sincerely appreciate its return to Adelaide Hall. Not only am I in need of a vehicle but I miss its companionship! Thanks very much. I hope you enjoyed the ride! Deb Bramm.

PLEASE NOTE: It has come to the attention of the Press that a certain notorious typist is about to add another year to her life. We sincerely hope she will continue to "carry-on" as in the past, and that old age will not slow her down. Best wishes Pat . . .from the rest of us.

CONSIDER THE ALTERNATIVE - consider INTERSESSION! Information and application available from the Arts's and Science office, the Department of Extension office, and the AMS office. Registration is MAY 14.

Journalweeds

SEE YOU tonight Ann. Don't forget the Tim Horton car.

PEN, your patience hasn't gone unnoticed. Thanks and good luck on your exams. Jen.

SORRY CLOSTEN

TO SUBLET MAY 1st to SEPT 1st. 3 bedroom apartment at 93 Clergy St. (right behind the gym) $100.00 per month. Phone 544-1765.

TO ALL THE FLUFFS WHO HAVE BEEN SUNNING themselves behind Ban Righ for the past week: Thanks a lot.

TO ADDY III . . .WRITE TO ME IN THE SUMMER, care of the Journal . . the guy at 160 (alias 154).

JOHN AND CHAS aren't people. Sandy N.

Mr. Robert Mutrie and Mr. Michael Kingsbury wish to announce that, contrary to popular rumour, they are the editors of the 1973-74 Who's Where. Be warned accordingly.

SOME PEOPLE seem to agree.

$100. reward if you take our apt. for the summer, or find someone who will. 7 minutes from campus; 4 bedrooms; 2 bathrooms. $160 per month. Deep discount for 2 or 3 people. Call Debbie 544-0974 or Robyn 544-3633.

28:4:73 . . . 160 J . . BIG BASH . . W.

SORRY CLOSTEN.

TUESDAY NIGHT WAS A very good press nite . . I sat at home, ate pizza, drank coke (BEER) and smoked my pipe . .Woody.

Ms. KG proudly exposed her . . . pics!

LYN THANKS 926 for putting up with her.

FEMALE ROOMATES WANTED: May, June, July, August or any part thereof, in a large lux cheap apt 10 min from campus. August rent free. Call Ruth 544-5170.

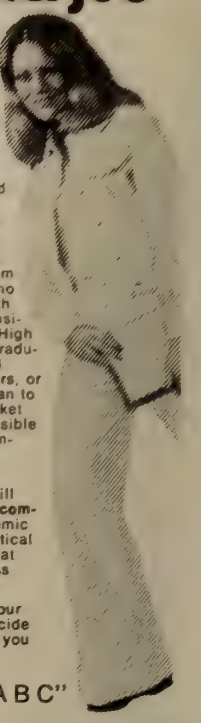
BEING soporific and tending towards latent narcolepsy, KG is going home to bed.

HAPPY BELATED birthday Duncan. Sorry the cartoon wasn't for you but we thought it was a bit Casper Milquetoast. Jen.

"APRIL is the cruelest month". T.S. Eliot.

TYPING SERVICE available after April 26. Book now: theses essays, reports etc. 545-7908.

THE ABOVE classified was submitted by someone to whom we all wish many happy returns of yesterday, even if we didn't make her a cake. We love you anyway Lee.



SHE THOUGHT that she was going home to bed, but she is still here an hour later.

WHO'S WHERE 73-74 would like to hear from you if you have any complaints and-or suggestions about this year's and-or next year's effort. Send to and-or visit Mike Kingsbury and-or Bob Mutrie at the Journal office.

WE NEED 2 girls to share a 7 bedroom large house from May 1st on. $45 a month (includes utilities). Phone 542-9496 or come see us at 294 William St.

Kentucky Fried Chicken
542-2773
286 Montreal St.
Your closest Aunt Lucy's Take Home Store

a "mini course" means a better job and more pay

The Shaw Accelerated Business Course is designed for people going places in a hurry.

An exclusive program for students who meet minimum requirements. A "no nonsense" 6 month comprehensive business training for High School Honour Graduates, College and University transfers, or graduates who plan to enter the job market as quickly as possible and at a level comparable to their abilities.

ABC graduates will tell you "it's the combination of academic training and practical business skills that make real success possible.

Remember, it's your future . . . you decide how far, how fast you want to go.

"simple as A B C"

DROP IN MAIL
I want to find myself at Shaw Colleges. Please send me information
NAME:_____
ADDRESS:_____
PHONE:_____ AGE:_____
EDUCATION:_____
SHAW COLLEGES
ADMISSIONS OFFICE
2436 Yonge Street
Toronto, Ontario 481-6477
M4P 2H4
1826-QK

INTERSESSION
May 14 to June 26, 1973
Final Lists of Courses and Timetables Are Available
Registrations will be accepted until May 11
Queen's University at Kingston Ontario
Department of Extension
25 Union Street
(613) 547-3283

Canada Manpower Centre for Students
Opens May 1
Federal Building (above the Post Office)
Bagot Street Entrance, Rm. 241
Phone 546-4204 - 546-4205
8:30 a.m. - 5 p.m.

PARIS TODAY

an exhibition of graphics and multiples

organized by the Extension Department of the Art Gallery of Ontario in co-operation with the Pollock Gallery, Toronto and the Galerie Denise Rene, Paris.

AT THE ART CENTRE
APRIL 8 to 29

at the art centre

Pizza Chalet

286 MONTREAL ST. KINGSTON

544-1227

OPEN MON. TUES WED. 4:00 p.m. to 1:00 a.m.
OPEN ALL DAY SUNDAY 12 – 12
OPEN THURS. FRI. SAT. 4:00 p.m. to 2:00 a.m.

Chalet Deluxe - EXTRA LARGE
Pepperoni- Mushrooms- Bacon Sausage- Green Peppers- Olive Cheese- Tomato Sauce $5.50
BIGGEST PIZZA YOU'VE EVER SEEN!

SELECTION WITH CHEESE & TOMATO SAUCE	11" REG	13" MED	15" LGE	SUPER 17" X-LGE
1. Pepperoni-Mushrooms-Bacon-Green Peppers Sausages-Olive	2.50	3.65	4.55	5.50
2. Pepperoni-Mushrooms	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
3. Pepperoni-Bacon	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
4. Mushrooms-Bacon	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
5. Combination Pizza Pepperoni-Mushrooms Green Peppers-Olives	2.40	2.95	3.95	4.95
6. Bacon	1.85	2.60	3.65	4.65
7. Pepperoni	1.85	2.60	3.65	4.65
8. Cheese	1.75	2.40	2.95	3.90
9. Mushrooms	1.85	2.60	3.65	4.65

Combination Special Pepperoni- Olive Mushrooms- Green Peppers $3.95
A LARGE PIZZA SURE TO PLEASE

EVERY DIAMOND IS DIFFERENT AND WE KNOW THE DIFFERENCE

Differences in quality make one stone worth more than another. Delicate gradations of color, almost invisible imperfections sometimes present, accuracy of cut are of utmost importance in the value of a diamond. You can depend on us to explain these differences to you when you choose your diamond.

KINNEAR D'ESTERRE
JEWELLERS
168 PRINCESS STREET
KINGSTON, ONTARIO

letters

IRC explains its actions over orientation

Dear Editor:

The purpose of this letter is to present the IRC's reasons for taking the hours between seven and nine o'clock on Sunday night of Orientation week. A rather grim appraisal of the situation was presented in the article "IRC Shows True Colours" which appeared in the Journal.

As stated the two hours were taken for the purpose of house and floor meetings. The purpose of these meetings is to inform the new residents of the facilities, rules, etc. of the House they are in. But more important is that they feel they are part of a House and floor and that they get to know their floor seniors. Any problems that could arise during Orientation week will most likely appear in the residence and not in the Gael Group. It is thus necessary that all members of the floor be present at these meetings and that these meetings occur early in the week.

When approached, Commerce and Science orientation were fully co-operative and stated that they would not schedule events in these two hours in order to assure a maximum turn-out of residents for the meetings. Arts orientation was not so co-operative. In it's time-tabling Arts orientation had left the hours between five and seven o'clock on Wednesday night for House and floor meetings. This time was unacceptable as it was too far into the week for the meetings to achieve their full purpose and although the committee suggested that the individual floors could eat dinner together the possiblility of having any kind of meeting within the house, within the two hours, was small.

The IRC thus decided to take the two hours Sunday night. These hours were the ones most commonly chosen for the above reasons and the new IRC decided to follow the precedent.

The decision to take these two hours was not easy to come to. Arts Orientation had many objections and many hours of discussion entailed. The discussion came up at three separate meetings and unfortunately many of the arguments did approach the stage of being "petty". The IRC was responsible for some of this "pettiness". During these discussions it was indicated that the rooms on Leonard field allocated to the Arts Orientation Committee would be taken away if any events were scheduled within the two hours designated for house meetings. If events were held during these two hours the House and floor meetings would be a complete failure as no one would show up. This was a radical move on the part of the IRC to prevent any such events. Perhaps it was too radical. But it must be wondered why such a move would be made. As indicated by Mr. Hanright, a representative of the business office, these controversies have been occuring every year since he has been on the IRC. Mr. Hanright has been on the committee for nine years. This indicates that perhaps Arts Orientation could take a little blame for the situation as it must have had some indication that controversy would arise if a suitable time for House meetings was not left open. The IRC knew full well that it was leaving itself open to criticism by making such "threats" but felt these were necessary to impress upon Arts Orientation the fact that the IRC was serious about the two hours.

Perhaps some good did come of this controversy. It was tabled in the IRC minutes that a letter be drafted to next years Orientation committees indicating that the two hours Sunday night would most likely be requested by the new IRC and that if any events were planned that they be planned leaving these hours open.

As for this year the IRC has the hours between seven and nine for House Meetings. Arts Orientation has until seven to have it's dinners. A verbal guarantee has been made by Arts Orientation to have it's gael groups back by seven for the meetings. To be sure, five gael groups will be back since five out of the six members of the IRC are gaels. There is no "threat" tabled in the minutes indicating a loss of room allocations if the groups are not back on time. We will take Arts Orientation of their word. Even if there had been such a threat, this member at least would not have voted to have the room allocations denied. Orientation week is for the frosh and their enjoyment and these cannot be denied because of a fault of the Orientation Committee.

Greg Murray
Vice-Chairman IRC
Gael Group No. 8

Why close at 10?

Dear Editor:

Last Friday night I was studying in Douglas Library along with a few hundred other people. I was bent on getting a full evening's work done when I was surprised to find the library closing at 10 p.m.

It's the end of the year and many people are finally getting serious about some work. I don't see why the library couldn't stay open a little longer on a weekend during exams when the demand for its study space is so great.

Charles Parker

Queen's Journal
Vol. 100, No. 52
Thurs., Apr. 19, 1973
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ontario

Editor: Jennifer Grass
Business: Charles Schwier
Management: John Solman
Arts: Sandy Naiman
Features: Pat Devitt, Steven Winnett
Passepartout: Bob Wood
News: Susan de Stein
Events: Alison Dandie
Sports: Chris Boon, Nada Bogdanovic
National Desk: Bob Mutrie, Sue Wishart
Photography: Peter Boag

And as another press morning (we might as well call a spade a spade) bites the dust, we can sit back and relax for a whole month until it is back to the old hell hole in the bowels of the earth. This year's 1,502,053 words of Journal (give or take a few) spread over 111,066 pounds of newsprint has been brought to a waiting campus by a lot of crying, cursing, yelling, coddeling, catering, bitching, fighting, and perhaps even some helpful and cooperative (once in a while - like when it comes time to get the damn thing to bed) mob of illiterates. Of course, there was the editor, who you don't read much about and the less said here, the better for our health, she's a real demon to work for, but we all call her God. And there are a host of other people, like them who's names appear immediately to the right, but we'll save them for last, cause they get all the glory (and write most of the screwy classifieds). All kinds of people helped this year -- like Addy II and III, and Kathy and Pat and Liz, and Sue, and Mike and Bob and Ann and Jane and Heather, who once came in at 2 am to flash her fingers across the keyboard, and Raj and Deb and Terry and James and Maryanne and Janet and Liz, and and and and all kinds of people who we cannot remember but who typed and wrote and layed out and did this and that and the other thing to keep the rag coming out. And also there were the photogs like Bogus and Mung and Ernie and Lee and Saima and Dave and Mike and Chris (a lot of these) and Jim and Bob and Gian and Brock and others who kept us supplied with high-class hole fillers and covers. And also we cannot overlook the middle management who were learning how to do it -- let's see, there are the Godlets, Suzie and Woodie, and Bob the other and Leona and Sue of the national desk and Peter and Alison and various others. Then we have them what have made it -- editors, (wow that title sounds impressive outside the office.) There was Sandy and Pat and Martin (for a while) and Steve (for the rest of the while) and Booner and, jese that's the load. Oh, don't forget Helen -- in a class by herself sitting in a pile of rubble making heads and tails out of the ads. And then there is the crew of hangers on and other helpful people who keep the place jumping -- like Korn -- the cub reporter -- and Pat and Wally and the Pub people and Di and Donna and the other Jen and Doug with his shovel and all the various politicos who come in and Fluffo, alias PL who got a lot of press and CAR who does the crosswords from afar (and other dirty work when required). We also cannot forget this guy called Morris down the road who gets up every morning to read this slop -- but then he charges us for it. And last is the other John who corrects all the glitches and tries to make sure that the rest don't get too carried away with their selves. Thanks gang, Jen and Chas.

Published twice weekly on Tuesdays and Fridays by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc., Member, Canadian University Press. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society of the University. Offices are located in the Student's Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

Division of Concerts

Announces next year's programme

The Division of Concerts has finalized its '73-'74 Dunning and Grant Hall Concert programmes. Next year's series offer a varied selection of musical modes and groupings from classical guitar to Canadian Soprano, from piano to violin and from Festival Singers to Contemporary Chamber Players.

The Dunning Hall Series will include the Orford String Quartet, Lois Marshall, soprano, Janos Starker, cellist, and Siegfried Behrend, guitarist.

The Orford Quartet is a Canadian string quartet of international status which has been praised for a "rare musical sensiblity that is most precious to the chamber music lover."

Lois Marshall is a distinguished Canadian performer who has been hailed with as many critic' superlatives as anyone singing today. Her name is on that short list of truly great sopranos.

Often referred to as "the king of cellists", Janos Starker will perform a solo recital.

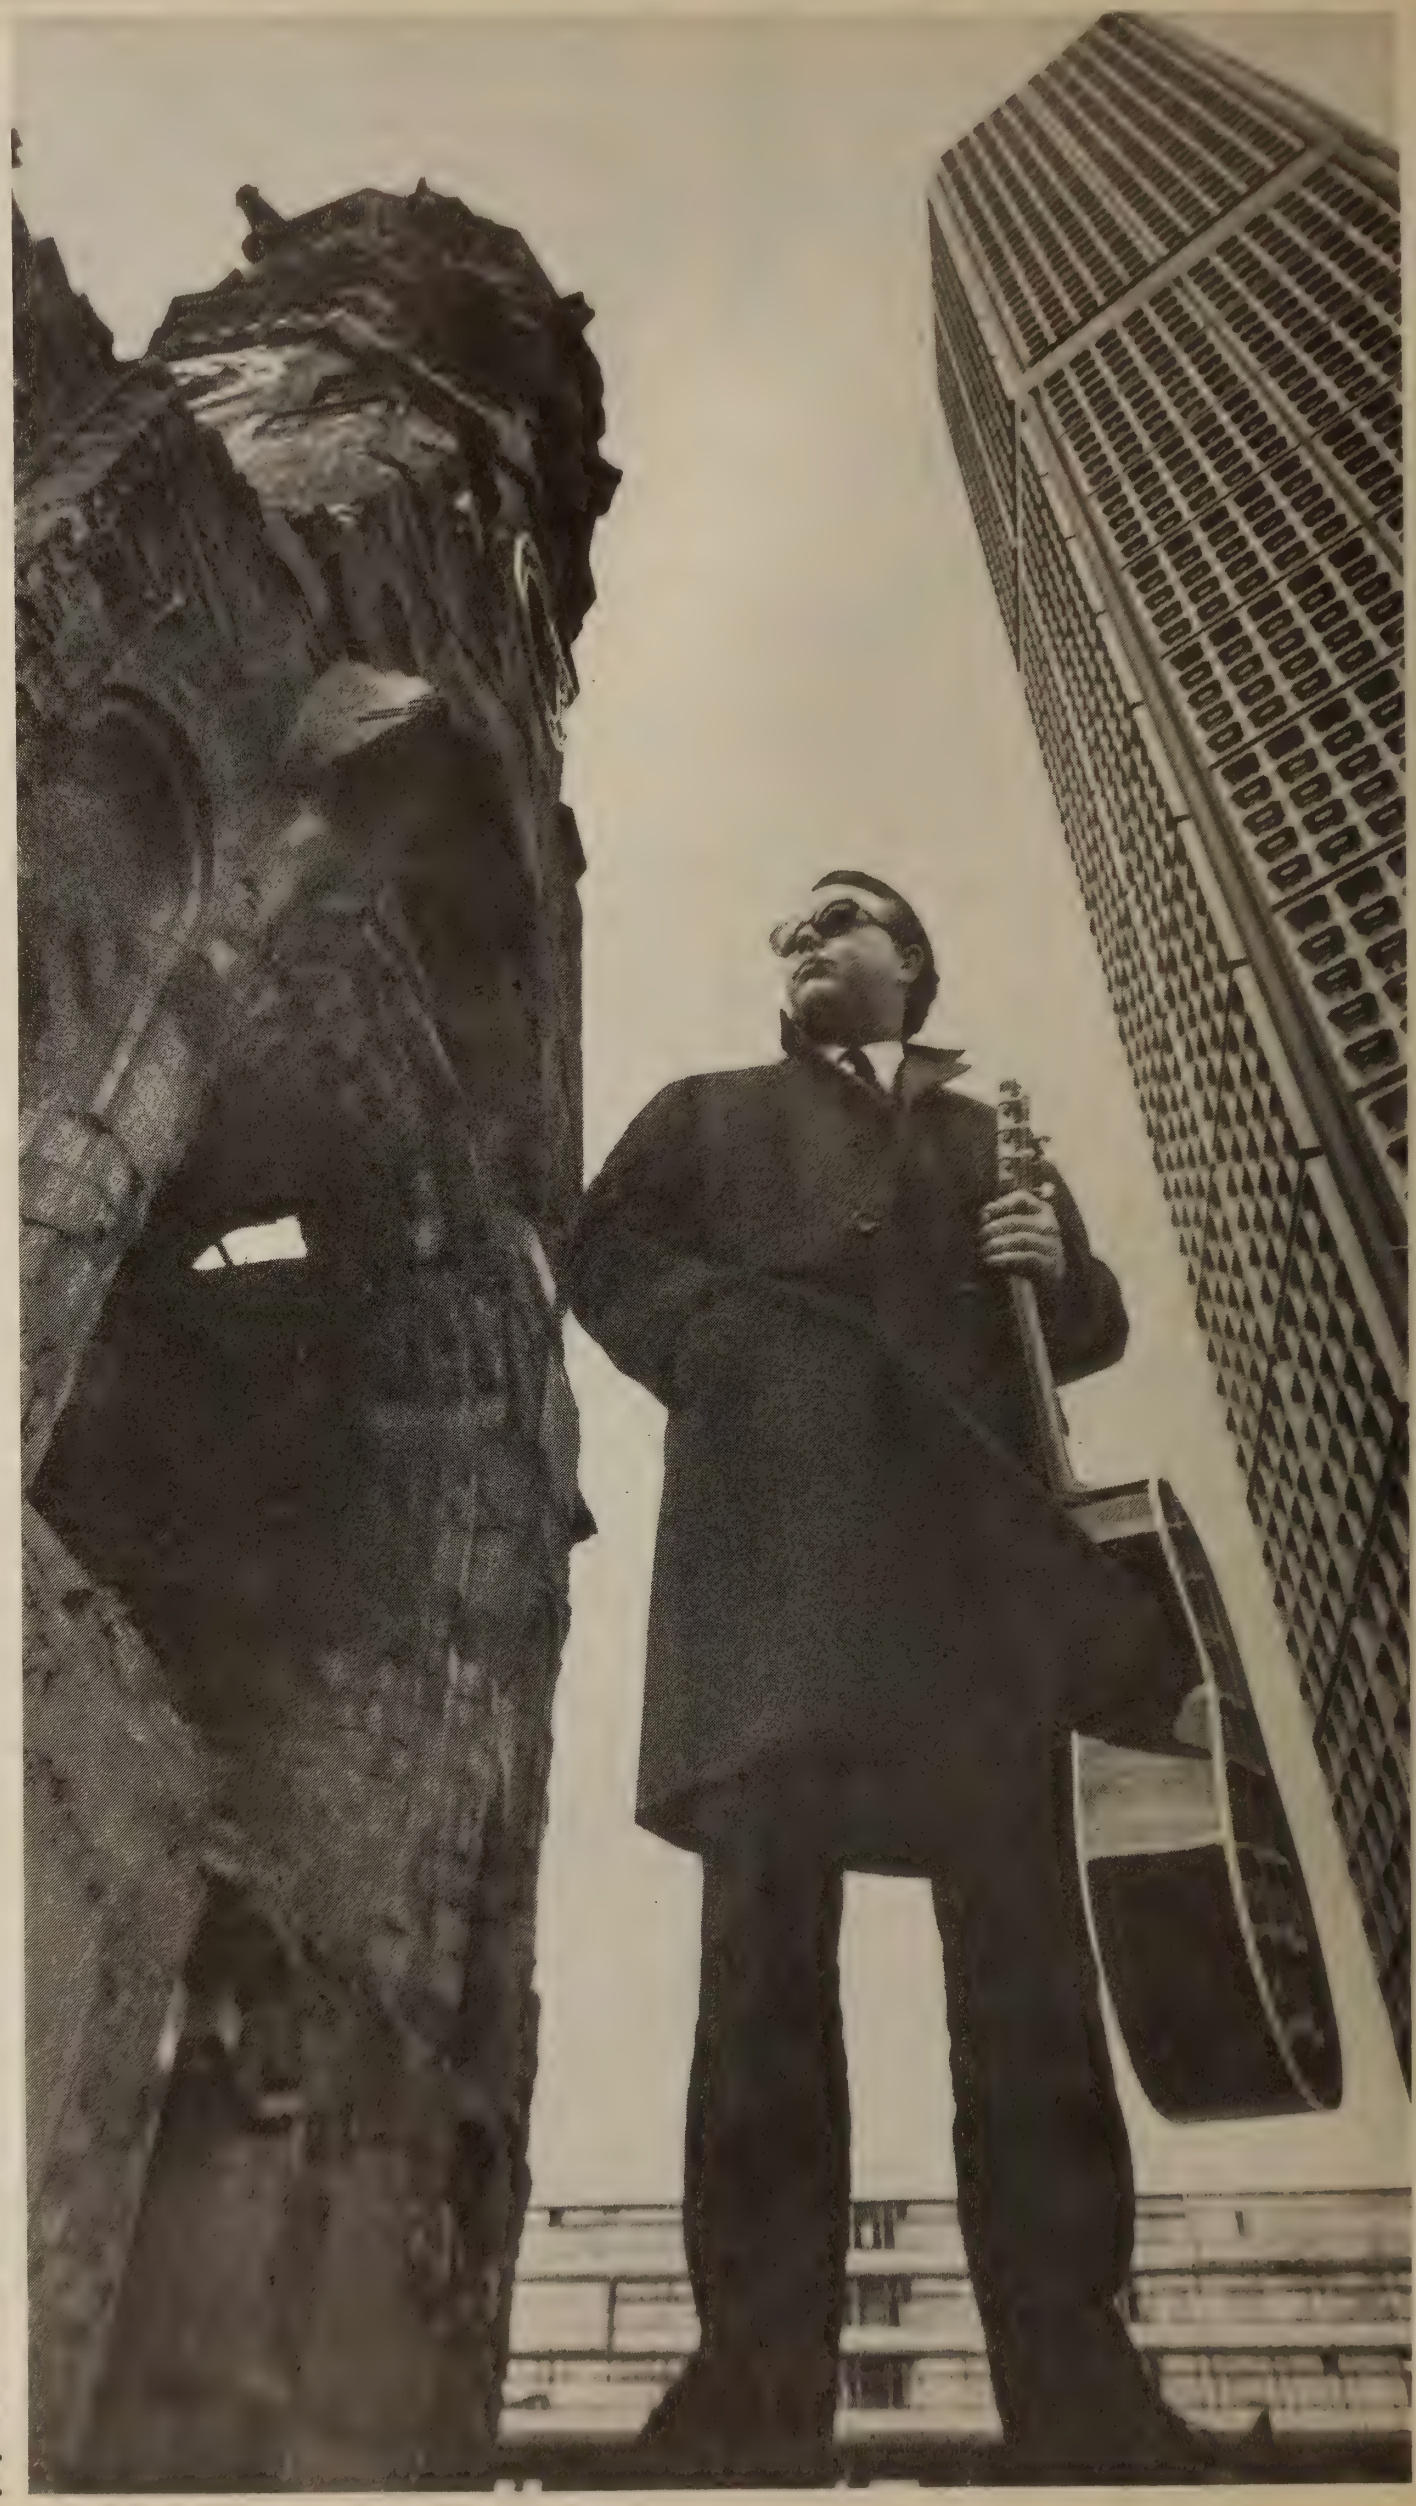
Classical guitarist Siegfried Behrend has a worldwide reputation for his varied concert programmes. He has many recordings on the prestigious Deutsche Grammophon label.

The Grant Hall series will feature the National Arts Centre Orchestra conducted by Mario Bernardi, Anton Kuerti, pianist, Masuko Ushioda, violinist, the Contemporary Chamber Players, and the Festival Singers of Canada and the Canadian Brass.

Anton Kuerti has been described by The New York Times as "A Pianistic Supernova." A Canadian, Kuerti is also a performer of international status.

The Contemporary Chamber Players will be under the direction of Arthur Weisberg. Harold Schonberg of the New York Times has praised the ensemble of twelve musicians for its "impeccable performances that have been beautifully prepared".

The Festival Singers, under the Direction of Elmer Iseler, and the Canadian Brass will perform both separately and together on the Grant Hall concert.



Series tickets will be on sale in the next few weeks at the Division of Concerts Box Office in the Agnes Etherington Art Centre. Reserved Grant Hall series tickets are $14, 13, general, $10, 9 student. Unreserved Grant Hall Series tickets are $11 general, $7 student. Single ticket prices are $4 only.

Dunning Hall subscriptions, all seats reserved, are $9 general and $6 student.

Series subscribers save 25-35 per cent (general), 25 - 40 per cent (student) over single ticket prices, depending upon series and seat location.

The dates for the concerts are as follows:
Grant Hall Series.
Wednesday 10 October - Anton Kuerti, pianist
Thursday 25 October - National Arts Centre Orchestra
Tuesday 13 November - Masuko Ushioda, violinist
Wednesday 23 January - Contemporary Chamber Players
Wednesday 6 February - Festival Singers & Canadian Brass
Dunning Hall Series:
Monday 5 November - Orford String Quartet
Tuesday 15 January - Lois Marshall
Monday 4 March - Janos Starker
Thursday 14 March - Siegfried Behrend, guitarist

If you are interested in receiving a brochure in the mail, telephone the Division of Concerts Box Office at 547 6594

Classical guitarist Siegfried Behrend

April Senate rehashes enrolment and looks ahead

by Bob Mutrie

"Present data indicate that more potential registrants have indicated Queen's as their first choice of university that we can accommodate in most of our programmes", D. G. Sinclair, Professor of Physiology, reported to the April 26 meeting of the Senate.

In his report on university recruitment policies and on actions being undertaken by the Council of Ontario Universities (COU), Sinclair also warned Senate that Queen's is exceptionally vulnerable to other universities' recruitment policies. He noted that since the majority of students at Queen's come from outside the immediate area, our enrolment is more susceptible to the recruiting competition which could appear this summer.

There has been increasing concern in COU that the declining enrolments which have been occurring in many universities may lead some to begin cut-throat recruitment policies to attract students away from other universities. This became especially serious with a recent report from the Universities Application Centre in Guelph which indicates there may be a further decline of five to six per cent in the number of Grade 13 applications to universities this year.

Sinclair noted that one university is already giving admission scholarships to the amount of full tuition for all applicants with Grade 13 averages of 80 per cent or better.

Sinclair presented the Senate with the revised guidelines for recruitment policies as laid out by COU. It was agreed at the March Senate meeting that since the changes were minor the approval given to the first draft of the policies would carry forward to cover the revised draft.

The guidelines include provision for the setting up of a standing committee of COU to evaluate and supervise present recruitment policies and propose new ones, emphasizing inter-university co-operation. The guidelines place strict controls on promotional activities and the provision of funds for attracting school tours of the various campuses. Any university that agrees to the rules and then violates them is to be subject to public censure.

A report was also presented to Senate containing a communication from Jack McNie, Minister of Colleges and Universities, as to the university's formula grant under the new "slip-year" method of financing. Queen's allocation will be $30,333,744.

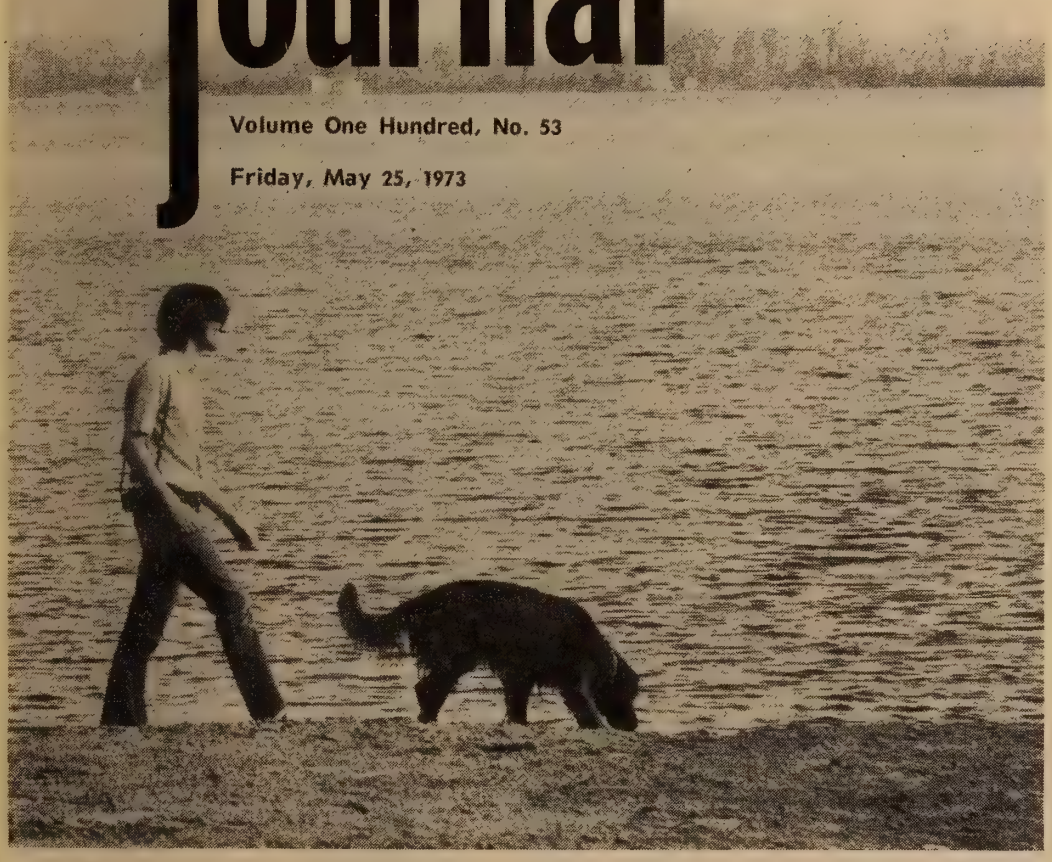
Upon presentation of the report, Principal John J. Deutsch indicated his displeasure of the new method which bases grants on the previous year's enrolment.

He stated that while the new system helps universities with declining enrolments in the fall of 1973, it will be of no advantage to Queen's and in fact it should impose a financial disadvantage since the university will not receive immediate financial support while enrolment is expected to increase.

The Senate approved the proposal from the University Centre Users' Committee that Scheme I of their recently published report be accepted as the desired allocation of uses for the proposed new building.

In addition to approving the area bounded by Union St., University Ave., Clergy St. and the Physical Education Complex as the location of the new centre, the Senate also approved the inclusion of a small 2,000 square foot bookstore as outlined in the report.

The approval came subject to the condition that all the university owned space between University Ave., Division, Clergy, and Earl Streets be devoted to open space to compensate for the high density area immediately adjacent. It was also recommended that an open landscaped area be developed in the area north-west of Union St. immediately across from the university centre and the Arts-Social Sciences complex.



In recognition of the need for sub-centres to complement the activities of the main university centre, the Senate also recommended that every major development or re-allocation of space at Queen's be examined to determine whether cultural, intellectual, social, or recreational activities might be included in them. They also approved the provision of the subcentre for the Agnes Etherington Art Centre, the Drama Centre and he East Campus Coffee Shop.

Continued on Page 2

Queen's
Journal

Volume One Hundred, No. 53

Friday, May 25, 1973

- solman

AOSC flights continue

The Association of Ontario Student Councils (AOSC) has won a partial exemption from the regulations governing chartered flights for affinity groups. The new policy, designed to prevent last summer's stranding of passengers overseas, would have effectively curtailed the operation of the AOSC student flights.

Under the regulations, charter flights would have had to be booked at least 60 days in advance after June 30 and the price would have had to be on a par with the lowest Canadian commercial airline. At present, AOSC flights are at least $34 cheaper than the price charged by the lowest commercial airline on an overseas flight.

AMS External Affairs Commissioner Kiloran German and other AOSC leaders met in Ottawa with the chairman of the Air Transport Commission and managed to gain an exemption from the regulations for this summer so that commitments already made could be carried out.

AOSC is yet uncertain as to what action they will take in the summer of 1974 but Rodney Hurd, Executive Director of AOSC stated "We'll fly students out of Seattle and Niagara Falls, New York" in order to avoid the Canadian regulations. Most countries have exempted student affinity charters from other charter flight regulations.

Whitham, Crowder on OFS exec.

TORONTO: Lyn Whitham and Eleanor Crowder, ASUS president, were elected to the executive of the Ontario Federation of Students at its annual meeting here last weekend.

The meeting, which was prefaced by a number of days of workshops and discussion groups on student issues, was fairly tame until the end when the Young Socialists, led by the delegation from the University of Toronto attempted to ram through a number of motions calling for demonstrations and other mass actions to "protest the cutbacks (in education funding by the province) and to force the government into the taxing the corporations." The motion did not pass.

The OFS also passed a number of resolutions calling for equality for women in the university, more student representation on university governing bodies, and special considerations for student co-ops dealing with CMHC.

In addition, the body called upon member student councils to send telegrams of support for the strikers at the Dare biscuit factory, and voted to support the principal that there should be no sex discrimination in student constabling. The latter motion was presented by Whitham who is challenging the 16.6 per cent quota on women in the AMS constable system.

Conference on women coming

by Sandra Bernstein

What happens when the Status of Women committees finish their work? What is the nature of women's studies programmes in Canada? Where are university women heading?

These are some of the topics which, combined with a multimedia presentation, will comprise the agenda of a national conference on women in the university (the second of its kind in Canadian history), which will be held at Queen's on May 31 and June 1. A follow-up to the conference held last year at Loyola, it is being organized by a group of Queen's women.

Since the dates of the meetings correspond with the middle dates of the Learned Societies, which are also at Queen's this year, it is expected that women from across the country will be able to attend. A highlight of the conference will be an address by Gail Stewart, a Queen's alumnus and economist.

Other features will include seminar discussions on such topics as: the politics of day care; feminism as a philosophy; and problems in family relations as faced by university women. The group will discuss aspects of its own organization and hear brief regional progress reports.

A panel discussion on the Status of Women reports will be highlighted by the presence of Jill Conway, Lin Good, Esther Greenglass, and Sister Catharine Wallace.

This conference is open to all women in the university community-faculty members, wives, students, staff and alumnae- with an interest in issues, academic or non-academic, which are related to women.

Summer Who's Where

Summer Who's Where will appear with next week's Journal. It was originally planned to include it in today's issue, but we were unable to obtain a list of intersession students before our deadline. Summer Who's Where will include intersession students as well as anyone who filled out a summer Who's Where coupon last month. Any other person may have his name included by leaving his name, address and phone number on the coupon (on page 3) at the Journal Office in the Union before 5 pm Monday.

EVERY DIAMOND IS DIFFERENT
AND WE KNOW THE DIFFERENCE

Differences in quality make one stone worth more than another. Delicate gradations of color, almost invisible imperfections sometimes present, accuracy of cut are of utmost importance in the value of a diamond. You can depend on us to explain these differences to you when you choose your diamond.

KINNEAR D'ESTERRE
JEWELLERS
168 PRINCESS STREET
KINGSTON, ONTARIO

AMS RENTALS
Hoods & Gowns
FOR GRADUATION

Hoods and gowns for this weekend's convocation are available for rental from the AMS in the basement lounge of the International Centre as follows:

-Theology and Education, anytime after 8 a.m. today.

-Applied Science and School of Business, after 3:30 p.m. today, or after 8 a.m. Saturday.

-Graduate Studies, Law, Medicine, Nursing, and Rehab, after 8 a.m. Saturday.

A deposit of seven dollars cash is required for each hood or gown. Five dollars will be refunded when the garment is returned.

Would you throw away $4.?

If you did not opt out in October, you paid for a copy of Tricolor '73 with your fees last fall. The book will be available in September. If you will be here, you may pick up your copy then if you have your green student card.

If you won't be here, you may have it mailed for $1 payable at the hoods and gown's centre in the Union.

An evening Festival of

When the estimated 6,000 delegates from the various universities in Canada come to Queen's University at Kingston for the annual meetings of the Learned Societies and the Royal Society of Canada, they will be able to attend a nightly festival of arts events.

A varied programme of music, dance, poetry and film has been planned for the two weeks of the conference which will run from Sunday 27 May to Saturday 9 June.

The programme has been developed to create the cultural life of a major metropolitan centre.

Highlighting the Festival will be three different performances by the Festival Singers of Canada under the direction of Elmer Iseler (May 29, June 2, June 5), a concert by Robert Aitken, flute, and John Hawkins, piano, to be recorded by the CBC (May 31), and a recital by the Queen's Artists-in-Residence, the Vaghy String Quartet (June 7). All of these performances will take place in Grant Hall.

Other arts events include a dance programme of South Indian Temple Dances with slides and commentary by Anjali, Anne-Marie Gaston (May 28 in Dunning Hall), and an evening of poetry read by Al Purdy, David Helwig and Tom Marshall (June 1, Convocation Hall). Valery Watts will perform a piano recital (June 3 in Dunning Hall). In addition, there will be six nights of films which present works not normally seen in commercial cinemas. Included on the first programme is the 1929 classic directed by Luis Bunuel and Salvador Dali "Un Chien Andalou" (May 27, Ellis Hall). The second programme will contain an early Roman Polanski film "Two Men and a Wardrobe" as well as Charlie Cahplin's "The Immigrant" (May 30, Ellis Hall). "Relativity" by the contemporary American film maker Ed Emshwiller will be shown as part of the third evening of films (June 4 Dun Hall). The film "Culloden" by Peter Watkins, de ting the last battle fought on British soil, wil featured in the fourth showing (June 6, Ellis Hall) the fifth evening of films, "Sons of Captain Poetry Michael Ondaatje, a film on the Canadian cont poet B.P. Nichol will be screened (June 8, Dun Hall). The Arts Festival will be concluded wit evening of Canadian, British and American s films.

Since the meetings bring together many Cana scholars from across the land, the Arts Festival also reflect the Canadian artistic community. All performers are Canadian citizens or have le immigrant status, and there will be at least Canadian work on each programme where poss

Tickets for all events will be available at the c but a limited quantity of tickets for the Saturd June performance of the Festival Singers are on sa the Division of Concerts Box Office, Agnes Etherin Art Centre. A limited quantity of complimen tickets for the CBC recital of Robert Aitken and Hawkins (flute and piano) are also available at same location. For more information, call the Div of Concerts Box Office, Agnes Etherington Art Ce at 547-6194.

For additional information Call:
Barry Cole
Division of Concerts
Queen's University
Kingston, Ontario
613-547-6194

Anjali - Indian Temple Da

On Monday May 28th in Dunning Hall at 8:30 p.m. Anjali (Anne-Marie Gaston) will be performing South Indian Temple Dances with slides and commentary.

"...perhaps the most outs and consistent among practiti Odissi in the country today Delhi Hindustan Times, 1972.

Anjali, (Anne-Marie became intrigued by the sculpture illustrating India when she was sent as a volunteer to Chittambaram India, in 1964. Already experi ballet and modern dance, she study the living form of the sculpture dance, Bhar at Na

By 1966, Anjali was alre forming. She was a membe troupe which represented C

A Wide Sel

Among the evening progr fered by the Division of during the Learned Societi ference will be four separate of film.

During the first week, on May 27 at 8:30 p.m. in Ellis H selections will be shown, i Un Chien Andalou directed Bunuel and Salvador Dali. Th an attempt at pure surrealism a work of art produced f subconscious.

Another film, Pigs dire Carroll Ballard provides an

Queen's Journal

Vol. 100, No. 53
Fri., May 25, 1973
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ontario

Interim Staff: Robert Wood, Charles Schwier, Sandy Naiman, Peter Watts, Leona Perry, Bob Mutrie, Chris Brown.

Published twice weekly on Tuesdays and Fridays by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc., Member Canadian University Press. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society of the University. Offices are located in the Student's Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

April Senat

Continued from Page 1

The Interim Bookstore Com Report sparked consid discussion at the meeting, claiming that it lacked financial detail and that a Committee should be set up t with the Engineering Society university administration to its feasibility in more However, it was pointed out th been enough consideratio

ne Arts

On Tuesday May 29 in Grant Hall at 8:30 p.m. The Festival Singers of Canada will make the first of three performances during the festival, under the direction of Elmer Iseler.

The Festival Singers form the professional core of the Toronto Mendelssohn Choir and are Choir-in-Residence for the Scarborough Board of Education, Scarborough, Ontario. Since the formation of the choir in 1954, numerous performances have been given throughout North America, including a special Christmas concert in Washington, D.C. before President Lyndon B. Johnson. The choir has been conducted by world renowned guest conductors including Karel Ancerl, Seiji Ozawa, and Robert Craft.

Flute and Piano Recital

On Thursday, May 31 at 8:30 p.m. in Grant Hall Robert Aitken and John Hawkins will be presented in a special recital broadcast by the CBC. The combination of Aitken and Hawkins has been called "brilliant, enlightening," by the Toronto Telegram. The Toronto Star has praised the duo's performances for "An aura not so much of high polish for its own sake as investigation for the sake of enlightenment...(which) makes for stimulating listening. What is especially admirable about Aitken and Hawkins is that they give us the polish and logic as bonus."

A prize-winner at the 1971 Concours International de Flute de Paris, Mr. Aitken has presented concerts throughout Europe, Japan and across Canada. He is a frequent soloist on CBC radio and television. He is a member of the Lyric Arts Trio as well as a noted composer.

John Hawkins is also a composer and is currently on the staff of the Faculty of Music of the University of Toronto. Among his many awards are a Woodrow Wilson Fellowship, the John Adaskin Award, and grants from McGill University and the Canada Council. Equally gifted as a pianist, Mr. Hawkins has performed with the Montreal symphony, for CBC radio, and in recital.

Poetry Reading

In Convocation Hall on June 1st at 8:30 p.m. David Helwig, Tom Marshall and Al Purdy will read their own poetry.

David Helwig was born in Toronto in 1938. He was brought up in Toronto and Niagara-on-the-Lake, studied at the Universities of Toronto and Liverpool, and now lives and teaches at Queen's. He has published three books of poetry, Figures in a Landscape, The Sign of the Gunman, and The Best Name of Silence, a book of stories, The Streets of Summer, a novel about espionage, The Day Before Tomorrow, and a criminal documentary, A Book About Billie. He is one of the editors of an annual collection of new Canadian stories.

Tom Marshall was born in 1938 in Niagara Falls where he spent most of his childhood. He has travelled in Europe and lived for two years in London, England. He is currently teaching English at Queen's University. Marshall's best known collections of poems include The Silences of Fire and Magic Water which have both received an enthusiastic response from critics throughout Canada. He is two books to complete his "elemental" quarter. He is also the author of two critical works, A.M. Klein, and The Psychic Mariner: A reading of the poems of D. H. Lawrence.

Since the publication of his first book in 1944, Al Purdy has published a number of major collections including Poems for All the Annettes (1962, 1968), The Cariboo Horses (1965), for which he received the Governor General's Award North of Summer (1968), and Love in a Burning Building (1970). In addition, Purdy has edited an anthology of poems for schools, Fifteen Winds, and a collection of Canadian views of the U.S., The New Romans.

Da r

the Cultural Olympics in Mexico City and also performed at Expo 67. In 1969 she received a Canada Council Arts Bursary to continue her studies. and visited Orissa as a guest of the State government.

In the summers of 1971 and 1972, Anjali toured England and Canada, giving performances and lecture demonstrations and appearing on television. Her dancing has been praised by critics in England and Canada as well as India.

This performance will include examples of Kuchipudi, Bharat Natyam and Odissi with slides and commentary.

Se on of Films

contact with the life-form to which we are supposedly superior. And Canadian poet and film maker Michael Ondaatje in his film Sons of Captian Poetry, has combined his interests to explore the world of B.P. Nichol's concrete poetry.

On Wednesday May 30, in Ellis Hall at 8:30 another selection includes Charlie Chaplin's 1917 classic, The Immigrant Roman Polanski's early film, Two Men and a Wardrobe and Richard Swindon's A One Two Many World, a National Film Board-Quarry Films Co-Production.

esearch to allow the proposed notions to be passed.

The Senate finally approved the ransfer of ownership of the bookstore rom the Engineering Society to Queen's University and its tran-formation into a comprehensive ookstore from its present limited ole. In addition, it was agreed a new anagement structure would be nstituted allowing for a general anager and specialist submanagers. he Senate also passed the recom-endation that Clark Hall be enovated to allow for the need for expanded services and the new facility be given completed financial independence with responsibility for any debts incurred.

Although reasonable care will be taken to ensure the correctness of the material included, the Alma Mater Society nor the Queen's Journal can accept any responsibility for the omission of any listing or any errors contained therein, however caused.

Name: (surname first) .....

Address: .....

City: .....

Phone: ..... Area Code: .....

Pizza Chalet

286 MONTREAL ST. KINGSTON

544-1227

OPEN MON. TUES WED. 4:00 p.m. to 1:00 a.m.
OPEN ALL DAY SUNDAY 12 – 12
OPEN THURS. FRI. SAT. 4:00 p.m. to 2:00 a.m.

Chalet Deluxe EXTRA LARGE — Pepperoni- Mushrooms- Bacon Sausage- Green Peppers- Olive Cheese- Tomato Sauce $5.50
BIGGEST PIZZA YOU'VE EVER SEEN!

SELECTION WITH CHEESE & TOMATO SAUCE	11" REG	13" MED	15" LGE	SUPER 17" X-LGE
1. Pepperoni-Mushrooms-Bacon-Green Peppers Sausages-Olive	2.50	3.65	4.55	5.50
2. Pepperoni-Mushrooms	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
3. Pepperoni-Bacon	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
4. Mushrooms-Bacon	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
5. Combination Pizza Pepperoni-Mushrooms Green Peppers-Olives	2.40	2.95	3.95	4.95
6. Bacon	1.85	2.60	3.65	4.65
7. Pepperoni	1.85	2.60	3.65	4.65
8. Cheese	1.75	2.40	2.95	3.90
9. Mushrooms	1.85	2.60	3.65	4.65

Combination Special — Pepperoni- Olive Mushrooms- Green Peppers $3.95
A LARGE PIZZA SURE TO PLEASE

Speedo Bathing Suits,
Tennis Wear,
Hiking Boots,
Fowl Weather Gear, all at:

Sepp's Ski Shop

Rentals - Repairs - Trade-Ins
ALL KINDS OF SKI EQUIPMENT

Sepp Walzl — 13 Montreal St.
542-4558

NOTICE
Queen's University
Parking Regulations.

Parking permits for the Fall and Winter term expire on May 31, 1973. Permit holders who wish to retain their parking privileges throughout the summer months should apply for a new permit at the Parking Office in the Interim Administration Building before May 31, 1973.

Parking fees for the summer term (June to September inclusive) are:

Cash	$37.50
Post dated Cheques	$10.00 per month

AMAZING OFFER! PORTRAITS IN OIL

Done by Professional Artists
From your Favorite Snapshot,

AT UNBELIEVABLY LOW PRICES

PHOTOS of Loved Ones, Weddings, Graduations, or other Memorable Events, also Pets or Favorite Scenery For Further Information and Sample Display By Appointment only Phone 546-8403

Track coach named

by Peter Watts

Queen's track and field coach, Rolf Lund has been selected to coach the men's track and field team which will represent Canada at the World Student Games in Moscow in August. The announcement was made last week in Ottawa.

In an interview with the Journal, Lund talked about the team's chances in the Games and the composition and problems of selecting a team. One of the major difficulties is that it will not be possible to hold a tryout camp or a number of qualifying meets to select a team. Instead, Lund will have to examine individual performances during the spring and early summer meets and select the best competitors on that basis. The final team must be selected by July 15.

The track and field team is just one of six teams that will represent Canada in the Games. Other sports include swimming and diving, basketball, volleyball, gymnastics, and wrestling. Canadians are not entering the fencing, tennis or waterpolo events.

The track team itself will consist of a maximum of 24 competitors. This would imply a breakdown of 12 men and 12 women but it is thought more likely that only those performers who can meet certain standards will qualify for the team. In addition, each country can enter a maximum of 2 contestants in each event.

The Games will include 19 men's and 12 women's events and Lund sees an interesting battle shaping up for berths on the team. It is expected that middle distance star Grant McLaren of Western and polevaulter Bruce Simpson of Toronto will qualify for the team. Simpson finished fifth in the last Olympics in polevaulting. Lund also thinks Queen's performers Dave Jarvis, Hugh Fraser, and Brian Aitken have a good shot at qualifying for the team.

There is an interesting battle shaping up among four men in the high jump. John Beers, John Hawkins, and Rick Pettle, all of the University of British Columbia, and Claude Ferange of the University of Montreal have all cleared the high bar at better than seven feet so far this year.

In the women's competitions, Brenda Walsh is considered a good prospect in the 400 and 800 metre events. Then of course, there is Canada's top middle-distance runner Abby Hoffman, who was a student at Guelph this past year and therefore qualifies for a place on the team. Lund looks for a strong showing from Abby in the 800 metres and in the mile. Other top girls are Dieane Jones of Saskatchewan and Debbie Van Kiekebelt of York in the pentathlon.

The Games themselves will be held this year in Moscow and are slated for August 15 through the 25. A total of 58 countries from around the world have indicated they will be represented. The Games from a meager beginning a few years ago are rapidly developing into a mini-Olympics. This year, for the first time, the federal government is taking part in funding the team, an indication of increase in the importance of the Games.

Athletics

Queen's popular recreation programs continue to grow by leaps and bounds, both in the number of sports offered and in the popularity of the program. The spring swim program is nearly completed now, but registration is underway for the Summer Youth program.

This program is geared to students from eight to 18 years of age and it has expanded several times over in the few years it has been functioning. This year, sessions will run from July 3 to the 20th and from July 23 to August 10.

Sports offered include learning to swim, junior, intermediate and senior Red Cross, and bronze. In addition to swimming, there will also be courses in springboard diving, tennis, gymnastics, recreational trampoline, archery, and track and field.

Nearly every program has had to be increased because of its popularity. In all cases, the programs boast the best instructors of any program of its kind in the City.

Information and application forms are available from the Recreation office, Room 102A in the Pysical Education Centre. All those interested are invited to register between now and July 1. But in view of the popularity of the programs, it might be in order to drop in early next week.

Summer hours

For the many who are wondering just when the library is open a new set of hours were put into effect recently which will be in force until June 25, 1973. The circulation desk, main reading room, and the reserve, periodicals and central information services rooms and the stacks will be open Monday through Thursday from 8:45 am to 10:00 pm, Friday and Saturday from 8:45 am to 5 pm (4:30 pm beginning June 11) and on Sunday from noon until 9:00 pm. Documents will be open from 8:45 am to 10 pm Monday to Thursday and 8:45 to 5 pm on Friday. Archives and Special Collections are open Monday through Friday 8:45 am to 5:00 pm.

There is also a new loan procedure instituted which will be in effect until September 9. The loan period will be five days for all undergraduates.

The Coffee Shop on the lower floor of the Students Union will be open from Monday through Friday 7:30 am to 6:00 pm, Saturday 9:00 am to 6:00 pm and Sunday 11:00 am to 6:00 pm. Wallace Hall will remain closed until July 2. The lower floor tuck shop is open daily from 8:30 am to 5:00 pm.

Queen's University presents

AN EVENING ARTS FESTIVAL

FILMS:

SUN. 27 MAY ELLIS HALL
Un Chien Andalou (Bunuel and Dali), Sons of Captain Poetry (M. Ondaatje) and internationally acclaimed shorts.

WED. 30 MAY ELLIS HALL
The Immigrant (Chaplin), Two Men and a Wardrobe (Polanski) and internationally acclaimed shorts.

MON. 4 JUNE DUNNING HALL
Relativity (E. Emshwiller), A Criminal Record (N. Helwig and A. Code) and internationally acclaimed shorts.

WED. 6 JUNE ELLIS HALL
Culloden (P. Watkins), Professeur de Piano (F. Reichenbach). and internationally acclaimed shorts.

FRI. 8 JUNE DUNNING HALL
Un Chien Andalou (Bunuel and Dali), Sons of Captain Poetry (M. Ondaatje) and internationally acclaimed shorts.

SAT. 9 JUNE DUNNING HALL
Internationally acclaimed short films by Canadian, British, and American film makers.

Tickets: $1.00 at the door only.

DANCE:

MON. 28 MAY DUNNING HALL
Anjali (Anne-Marie Gaston) performing South Indian Temple Dances with slides and commentary.
Tickets: $1.00 at the door only.

POETRY:
FRI. 1 JUNE CONVOCATION HALL
Al Purdy, David Helwig, Tom Marshall — read their own poetry.
Tickets: $1.00 at the door only.

MUSIC:

TUES. 29 MAY GRANT HALL
+Festival singers of Canada — Elmer Iseler, conductor.
Tickets; $1.00 students, $2.50 general.

THURS. 31 MAY GRANT HALL
Robert Aitken, flute and John Hawkins, piano, in a recital-broadcast by the CBC.
Tickets: A limited number available free.

SAT. 2 JUNE GRANT HALL
+Festival Singers of Canada — Elmer Iseler, conductor.
Tickets; $1.00 students, $2.50 general.

SUN. 3 JUNE DUNNING HALL
Valery Watts: Piano.
Tickets; $1.00 at the door only.

TUES. 5 JUNE GRANT HALL
+Festival Singers of Canada — Elmer Iseler, conductor.
Tickets: $1.00 students, $2.50 general.

THURS. 7 JUNE GRANT HALL
Vaghy String Quartet.
Tickets: $1.00 students, $2.50 general.

+Festival Singers will perform a different programme at each performance.

TICKETS: Available from the Division of Concerts Box Office, Agnes Etherington Art Centre. Telephone reservations accepted at 547-6194. All events begin at 8:30 p.m.

-perry

Along with the rain, it happens every spring. This past weekend several hundred Queen's students underwent the process known as convocation. As about 700 Intersession students continued to frequent the library and Union coffee shop, many others celebrated their release from the academic circus. Doting grandparents, proud parents, sisters and brothers witnessed the ordeal (or occasion as the case may be viewed) in the Jock Harty Arena. With the campus infested with Learned Societies' members, and University Avenue decked out in new grass, flowers and tri-color flags, graduating students returned to their Alma Mater to claim the tangible evidence of their years at Queen's. The process continues this weekend as Arts students reinvade former haunts.

Oil Thigh na Ban-rig-hinn, 'a Ban-rig-hinn gu-brath!

Queen's

Journal

Volume One Hundred, No. 54

Thursday, May 31, 1973

Deficits cause AMS problem

by Robert Wood

"Our financial position has warranted considerable study and has resulted in some significant changes in our summer operations", stated AMS President Steve Brereton in a letter to AMS Outer Council members. Deficits of $10,000 on the Typing Service, $5,000 on Concerts, $8,000 on operating expenses because of overestimation of revenue and $17,000 on Heffalump have resulted in a paring of the AMS Summer Budget from $17,000 to $10,000. Typing Service manager Donna Stewart has since resigned, and the AMS has dismissed Concert Chairman Steve Sugar from his post.

In order to solve the problem of a projected shortage of $12,000 during the summer, the AMS Board of Directors is drawing up an agreement to borrow up to $20,000, interest free from the university. Brereton indicated that it was expected that only $15,000 would actually have to be borrowed. He further pointed out that borrowing against the fall activity fees was not setting a precedent.

As a result of these deficits, the capital accounts of the AMS have been depleted and have produced the financial difficulties now being encountered. Commissioners slashed their budgets in an effort to trim the summer budget. A further cut was the AMS President's summer salary; Brereton is now employed as the short-term parking lot attendant behind the Arts and Social Science Complex. Vice-President Bruce Trotter is working in the AMS office maintaining summer operation.

Inner Council appointed a Budget Committee to investigate the problem. The committee is checking into the background of the situation to find why the AMS is in the situation it is in, and where it stands at present. In addition they are evaluating methods of tightening financial control such as the imposition of a spending ceiling on commission expenditures, or the institution of a purchase order system whereby all purchases can be made only after a purchase order for the expenditure is issued. The committee will also present recommendations to the AMS as to the best way in which to repay the $20,000 loan needed to keep the AMS solvent this summer, and what implications the financial situation will have for the '74-'75 Council. According to Brereton, their report should be completed by the end of June.

The Learned arrive

Thousands of persons have been arriving in Kingston this week as 44 Learned Societies and the Royal Society began their sessions at Queen's.

The annual conference, which is held at a different university each year, allows each societies' members to meet and also to attend the sessions of several other groups. Before the conference ends on June 9, it is expected that approximately 6000 people will have attended. (See pages 4 and 5 for reviews of the arts festival held Monday and Tuesday.)

(See pages 4 and 5 for reviews of the arts festival held Monday and Tuesday.)

In the offing . . .

President of the Extramural Students Association, Steve Gilchrist told the Journal that the Association has a whole slate of activities planned for Intersession students.

Summer Cinema, a series of films at Dunning Hall on June 5, 12, and 19 will feature Klute, Strawdogs and the old favorite, Reefer Madness, a 1930's anti-marijuana flick which attracted capacity crowds during its four day showing last winter.

Also in the offing is a Beer and Bingo Bash. The Associatior is planning a boat cruise to one of the islands in the St. Lawrence as well as a wine and cheese party.

On June 5, the Association will be sponsoring a Pub Dance in the Jock Harty Arena with three bands providing the music. (For more details on the Pub Dance turn to page 5.)

unclassifieds . . .

BORROWED, STOLEN OR LOST from the course guide room (next to the Pollution Probe), one greenish brown brief case containing a few irreplaceable files. If you have the files or have found them (they contain information about courses) could you please return them or phone 544-6165 or 544-6347 and I will pick them up. No questions.

ROOMS IN ELROND reservations are now being taken for accommodation in Elrond for the months of July and August. Singles are $50 a month. Double are $60 a month. All rooms are furnished and have shared kitchen facilities. Tours of available apartments can be arranged by phoning 544-1842. These apartments are unfurnished but do include fridge, stove, and curtains. For June, July or Aug., they will be rented without lease. 12 month leases start Sept. 1.

WANTED: subletters to share house, for all or part of summer. Partly furnished; shared kitchen; very close to campus (Clergy and Earl). Two bedrooms available, each $40 a month, single or couples welcome. Paul or Sandra at 546-6862.

ADDY III: What's going on? Where are you? Want some letters. Smiths Falls and Ottawa Addie III Raiders.

MISSING OR LOST in Toronto: one male, brown hair, blue eyes, mustache, 6'1", with Volkswagon. Please contact soon. Would be advisable for your health.

DEADLINE for classifieds for the Journal will be 5 p.m. Tuesday evening and no later. There is a $1 charge, which must be paid at that time.

STEVE W: Your ads for sweven will be in soon. No room this time around. Regards from all on this pressnight and morning.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY to my mother ... love from Godlet.

KORNY: You owe me a classified. Remember the Addy II VIRGINS AND HOW THEY WERE DISAPPEARING. So come on, awready. Sandy.

THE QUESTION WAS: Do you fool around? And what kind of a question was that?

NDP in Kingston

On June 15 and 16, several members of the Ontario NDP, will be meeting with various individuals and community groups to discuss issues that are of concern to Kingston residents.

Stephen Lewis, the leader of the Ontario NDP, Michael Cassidy, the party's advisor on municipal affairs, Ian Deans, advisor for agriculture and public works, and Jim Foulds, the party's critic on matters of education will be in attendance to receive oral or written briefs.

Kiloran German, AMS External Affairs Commissioner, will be the Queen's representative at the meetings. Those persons having a special interest or submission are asked to contact her at the AMS office.

Would you throw away $4.?

If you did not opt out in October, you paid for a copy of Tricolor '73 with your fees last fall. The book will be available in September. If you will be here, you may pick up your copy then if you have your green student card.

If you won't be here, you may have it mailed for $1 payable at the hoods and gown's centre in the Union.

Speedo Bathing Suits,
Tennis Wear,
Hiking Boots,
Foul Weather Gear, all at:

Sepp's Ski Shop

Rentals - Repairs - Trade-Ins
ALL KINDS OF SKI EQUIPMENT

Sepp Walzl 13 Montreal St.
542-4558

GREAT STEAKS
try the
Porterhouse Special
10 oz RED BRAND aged beef
Baked Potatoe - Vegetable
Rolls and Butter
Limited Offer 3.99 Red Brand Beef Only

For $1.40 more you get Soup or Juice - Tossed Fancy Salad (Best salad in town) Beverage and choice of Desert.

Aunt Lucy's Restaurant Tavern
Princess West at Portsmouth
No reservations
Relaxed Informal Dining
Great Place For That Special Date!

What a lug should chug.

Molson Golden
A good smooth ale
Do you know what you're missing?

AMAZING OFFER! PORTRAITS IN OIL

Done by Professional Artists
From your Favorite Snapshot,

AT UNBELIEVABLY LOW PRICES

PHOTOS of Loved Ones, Weddings, Graduations, or other Memorable Events, also Pets or Favorite Scenery For Further Information and Sample Display By Appointment only Phone 546-8403

EVERY DIAMOND IS DIFFERENT
AND WE KNOW THE DIFFERENCE

Differences in quality make one stone worth more than another. Delicate gradations of color, almost invisible imperfections sometimes present, accuracy of cut are of utmost importance in the value of a diamond. You can depend on us to explain these differences to you when you choose your diamond.

KINNEAR D'ESTERRE
JEWELLERS
168 PRINCESS STREET
KINGSTON, ONTARIO

Pizza Chalet

286 MONTREAL ST. KINGSTON

544-1227

OPEN MON. TUES WED. 4:00 p.m. to 1:00 a.m.
OPEN ALL DAY SUNDAY 12 – 12
OPEN THURS. FRI. SAT. 4:00 p.m. to 2:00 a.m.

Chalet Deluxe EXTRA LARGE
Pepperoni- Mushrooms- Bacon Sausage- Green Peppers- Olive Cheese- Tomato Sauce
$5.50
BIGGEST PIZZA YOU'VE EVER SEEN!

SELECTION WITH CHEESE & TOMATO SAUCE	11" REG	13" MED	15" LGE	SUPER 17" X-LGE
1. Pepperoni-Mushrooms-Bacon-Green Peppers Sausages-Olive	2.50	3.65	4.55	5.50
2. Pepperoni-Mushrooms	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
3. Pepperoni-Bacon	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
4. Mushrooms-Bacon	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
5. Combination Pizza Pepperoni-Mushrooms Green Peppers-Olives	2.40	2.95	3.95	4.95
6. Bacon	1.95	2.60	3.65	4.65
7. Pepperoni	1.95	2.60	3.65	4.65
8. Cheese	1.75	2.40	2.95	3.90
9. Mushrooms	1.85	2.60	3.65	4.65

Combination Special
Pepperoni- Olive Mushrooms- Green Peppers
$3.95
A LARGE PIZZA SURE TO PLEASE

Queen's day care finding solutions to problems

by Robert Wood

The Queen's co-operative day care is currently considering a new course of action to cure the perennial financial problems that have been common to most day-care centres. The co-operative Day Care has just recovered from the deficit problems encountered near the end of last term. Donations from the AMS ($250), the university ($200) and other organizations such as ASUS, the Medical Alumni, and the Women's Liberation group all helped to cover their $600 deficit. Organizers are now working on long-term solutions to the problem.

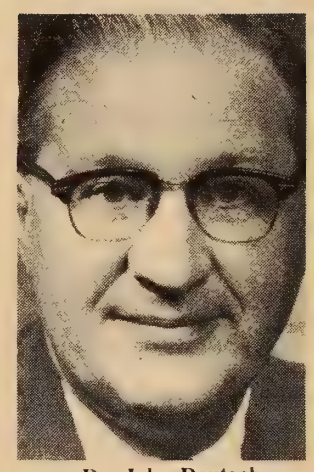
One proposal currently under consideration is to set up the Day Care similar to that proposed at Guelph. This plan takes advantage of provincial grants that are available to municipal day care centres. Under this scheme, eighty per cent of any operating deficit incurred by the centre is subsidized by the province while the municipality makes up the remaining deficit. The plan at Guelph which is currently under negotiation, relies on university funding to account for the twenty per cent which is usually paid by the municipality. This token backing by the municipality makes the day care centre eligible for the eighty per cent provincial subsidy.

F. Bogstad of the Student Affairs Centre stated that there is also a possibility of an alternate location for the Day Care Centre. One suggestion is that space be allocated in the new Arts and Social Science complex to be completed this fall.

Bogstad told the Journal that Principal Deutsch was sympathetic to the idea of organizing day care similar to the Guelph plan. Under this plan some aspects of the cooperative style would have to be given up in favour of more organization. Bogstad further mentioned that while the administration felt some obligation to support day care, it was not in a position to provide direct funding, although it will supply physical facilities, maintenance, and utilities.

Bogstad felt that it will still take "a good many months" before these plans become concrete. The Day Nurseries Branch and Syl Apps are going to be approached for ideas and for their support in the reorganization of the co-operative Day Care centre. Bogstad indicated that Day Care must be set up in a well-organized manner so that the university would be prepared to support it. The plans would then be presented to the City Council. Because of the conservative attitude of Council toward day care, in particular, towards cooperative day care, this approach represents a slow and cautious step forward in an effort to see Queen's day care back on its financial feet.

Deutsch receives award



Principal John J. Deutsch has been named one of three recipients of the $15,000 Molson Prize of the Canada Council, awarded to outstanding contributors to the arts, humanities, and sciences or to a national unity.

The prize was awarded to Deutsch for his contribution to Canada as an economist and educator. The council stated that in making the award, they were recognizing his contributions as assistant to the Under-Secretary of State for External Affairs, assistant deputy minister of Finance, and as secretary to the Treasury Board.

In addition, Deutsch was first chairman of the Economic Council of Canada and a member of several government commissions, both federal and provincial.

Academically, he was a professor of Economics at Queen's, then at the University of British Columbia where he served as department head. In 1959, he became vice-principal administration at Queen's before becoming principal and vice-chancellor in 1968.

The two other award winners are painter Alfred Pellan and writer George Woodcock.

Dr. John Deutsch

Health complex plans go ahead

Approximately $50 million in government money is scheduled to be funnelled into the construction of the proposed new health sciences complex, according to Principal John J. Deutsch, newly elected chairman of the council for the Queen's University and Kingston Health Sciences Complex (QKHSC).

A recent policy announcement was made by Ontario Health Minister Richard Potter containing the promise of government funding for medical institutions across the province. It came after half a year of budget freezes which made the future of the construction of the health sciences complex uncertain.

In revealing the details of the government plan to fund the complex in ten consecutive instalments of $5 million each, Deutsch quipped that after the previous worry about not getting money, "now there's more a danger that we won't be ready to spend the money we get."

Deutsch was critical of the government's "stop and go" attitude. "We're all expected to jump over night and I have sympathy for the people who have to jump." In order for the council to be ready for the first $5 million payment coming on April 1974, the major planning for the complex will have to be finished by fall.

It seems that the government is now determined that Kingston should have its complex. Potter insisted that Kingston should be in a priority position for funds since some of its medical school facilities were out of date.

However, the government is still persisting with its policy of reducing the number of beds in the province's hospitals and Kingston is by no means exempted. Another 100 beds are due to be cut from Kingston's hospitals shortly.

Deutsch was not entirely critical of this policy, noting that such cuts contribute to better planning. However, he also noted that there were disadvantages. Besides disrupting the planning for the new complex with so little time left in which to come up with a working scheme, it also means that there will be more pressure on patients, the subjects of the teaching acitivities of the university.

Deutsch maintained that the design for the new complex will now perhaps be on a smaller scale, although it will maintain much of its original plan.

Queen's Journal
Vol. 100, No. 54
Thurs., May 31, 1973
Queen's University at Kingston, Ontario.

Interim Staff: Sue de Stein, Michael Hogson, John Solmon, Sue Denim, Chris Brown, Robert Wood, Charles Schwier, Sandy Naiman, Leona Perry, Bob Mutrie.

Published twice weekly on Tuesdays and Fridays by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc., Member Canadian University Press. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society of the University. Offices are located in the Student's Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

The Festival Singers of Canada...Yaaah!

by Michael J. Hodgson

On Tuesday, May 29th, the Festival Singers of Canada gave a choral concert in Grant Hall as part of the Evening Arts Festival. Fortunately I can also report that they are coming back soon (on June 2 and 5), and can enthusiastically recommend that every Kingston music-lover rush over to Grant Hall both nights.

It is so rarely that we get to hear a professional choir. Most of the choirs we hear are amateur school choirs, which make up in enthusiasm or sentimentality what they lack in pitch, intonation, attack, diction, balance, and style. We in the audience are embarrassed but tolerant. But the Festival Singers are professionals, confident in their technique. I never had a moment's uneasiness listening to them - their music is always smooth and exciting. This is no doubt partly a result of their sound musical training. But it is also a result of their Lisztian conductor Elmer Iseler, who is a most impressive and communicative musician. He projects the mood of every piece the choir performs right from the first note.

The first half of Tuesday's programme began with the "Canticle of All Created Things", a poem by St. Francis of Assisi (1186-1226) set by Carl Orff (b. 1895). This piece comes from the second part of his Concento di Voci, 1954. Accompanied by bells, chimes, and piano, the choir stunned us with singing both declamatory and sweet and a superb full tone.

The main work of the first half was the Missa Secunda by Hans Leo Hassler (1564-1612). Hassler was an important late Renaissance German composer who welded the colorful polychoral writing style of Andrea Gabrieli in Italy to the stern German tradition. Again, the sheer sound of this choir swept me off my seat. The tone and balance, in piano or triple forte, are always fine. Most of all it was exciting to watch the music reflect the words (which were usefully translated in the program). Particularly in the Credo, the music was intense and inspiring in the words, "He rose again. . .he shall come again with the glory". The solo work in the exultant Gloria and in the Credo was secure and toneful.

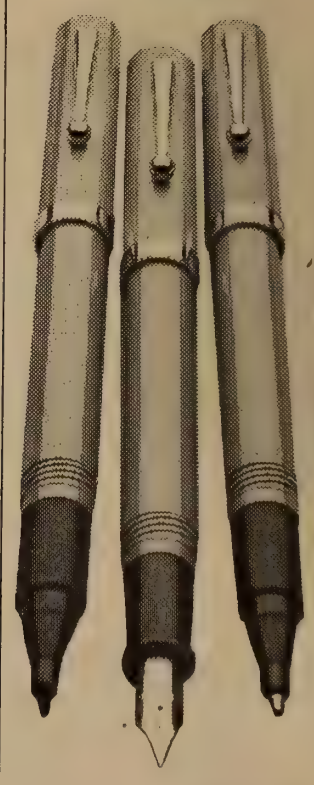
Conductor Elmer Iseler in action perry

The five sections of the Hassler Mass were linked by organ passages and were silhouetted by modern works inserted between them. John Paynter's (b. 1930), "The Rose", a setting of a 15th century carol was a moody brooding work with harmonies often of 5ths and 4ths. The Mendelssohn choir (of which the Festival Singers form the nucleus) recently performed this work in Europe for the composer, who writes for the York University Chamber singers in England. So pleased was he with the performance by the Canadian group that he is rumoured to be composing a work for them.

"Rise Up My Love" by Canada's late Healey Willan, was a really moving work, full of rich harmonies and fine diction. And Stravinsky's "Paternoster" was delightfully chaste and mournful in contrast to the Hassler Mass, and to the Cantate Domino by Heinrich Schutz (1585-1672) which ended the first half with Baroque flamboyance.

The second half of the program was devoted to three Canadian contemporary composers. Closing the program were "Three Songs of the Newfoundland Outposts", set by Harry Somers. "Si a'avais le bateau" was full of fun, and "She's Like the Swallow" was a really dramatic rendition of that bleak story, evoking both the callous man and the innocently devoted woman. The third song "Feller from Fortune", sung in an appropriately broad accent, was energetic and enjoyable. It ended with a decisive shouted "Yah"! A deserved comment on their performance.

Murray Schafer's (b. 1933) "Epitaph for Moonlight" was an extraordinarily effective work involving wind sounds, chimes, and plucked or stroked piano strings. The piece evoked wild and lonely landscapes under the moon, and its effectiveness is all the more surprising when you know how it was written. The words are nonsense words invented by Grade 7 students to express the idea of moonlight in sound. The music is an ear training exercise based on intervals, notated by picture rather than on a staff.



I want to make special mention of the "Chinese Love Lyrics" by Thomas Baker, (b. 1944) a talented and engaging member of the Festival Singers. These are, as he enthusiastically described them to me, "Excruciatingly beautiful poems "which sum up the beauty and the inscrutable symbolism of the East. They describe at once a season and a love. What made the music impressive was that it did not simply take the poems at their romatic face value. The first peom, "Spring" was arrestingly breathless in effect, as if the poet regretted his unrestrained joy. "The Breath of Spring" was haunting and particularly expressive in exquisite harmonization at the words 'a gulf divides us and there is no fairy bridge to carry me across." But it is the setting of the third poem, "Then I gave thanks", which I admire most. The poem ends, "I cursed the rain for ravaging my garden. Then you entered and I gave thanks to the rain because you must put off your wet dress and I gave thanks to the wind that he came and blew out my lamp." And the reader says, "Ahhh! Isn't that sweet!" But the composer has set these words provocatively to strangely shrill and bitter music, as if he cannot even yet throw off the depression which had engulfed him during his love's absence. Mr. Baker's was an imaginative reading of the poems and his music was moving and dramatic.

But what else would I expect from a member of such an exciting and talented choir?

TOM'S SHOE REPAIR
Shoe Service
186 Wellington
George the Hatter
leathercoats and all leatherwork repaired 546-5193

klute starring don sutherland jane fonda
TUESDAY, JUNE 5
dunning auditorium
7—9:15 p.m.
admission $1.50

WANTED:
WAITER OR BUSBOY
full or part-time
summer or year round
APPLY IN PERSON
871 PRINCESS ST.

WaterMan
NoNonsense Pens
Simple, straight-forward, classic—out of step with today's throwaway culture. Refillable cartridge, ballpoint or fiber tip marker in basic tan or navy blue.
$1.98: not bad for a pen you may use the rest of your life.
$1.98

SHEAFFER WORLD WIDE, A [extron] COMPANY

South Indian Temple Dance

Unfamiliar form is moderately entertaining

by Sue Denim

Monday evening's presentation of South Indian Temple Dances by Anne-Marie Gaston, who calls herself Anjali, could have been fascinating if the program had been shorter and if the audience had been more courteous.

As part of the Evening Arts Festival which is running in conjunction with the Conference of the Learned and Royal Societies until June 9 this performance was in keeping with the overall aim of creating "the cultural life of a major metropolitan centre."

But there are some intrinsic problems that go along with it. First of all, South Indian Temple dancing is a form which is very unfamiliar to us. What happened on Monday night was that the first selection, in its initial uniqueness was very interesting. But as the next four selections were presented, the constant foot stomping, the jingling of the bells on Anajli's ankles and adorning her costume became monotonous and almost irritating.

This was not entirely Anjali's fault. The Dunning Hall Stage has a hollow floor and so the footwork was unnecessarily louder than it might have been.

Anjali performs three styles of Indian dance. Orissi which was originally performed in the temples in Orissa and only became known outside those shrines 20 years ago. Kuchipudi was originally an all male dance drama and has only recently been taught to women and presented as a solo form and Bharat Natyam, the most famous style, which originated in the court of Tanjore 200 years ago.

Each of the styles comes from a different region of India and each has very subtle variations at least to the unfamiliar observer. Anjali'sperformance was complimented with an excellent narrative by her husband Tony Gaston, who explained, in the cases of dance drama, the story that the dance told. Anjali went through the movements with him and then she performed the dance to taped musical accompaniment. These examples of descriptive dance were the high points of the program. In the first segment which concentrated entirely on the Orissi style, the piece entitled Lalita Lavungalata, which tells the story of a young girl wandering through the forest during Spring and experiencing various emotional responses, was beautifully performed.

Anjali uses her face as well as her body to tell her stories. She is heavily made up and elaborately costumed but one's focus is almost inevitably on her very expressive eyes which often mirror the mood that she is playing in one of her descriptive dances or the religious pose which she assumes in the abstract dances. These abstract pieces are essentially tonal and impressionistic. Because they don't tell a story, because they celebrate certain Indian rituals and festivals they are much more difficult to understand and they are not particularly distinguishable.

In the second segment of the program, which began with a slide presentation and commentary by Tony Gaston, Anjali demonstrates the two other styles of Indian Temple dance.

The first one, Kuchipudi, a descriptive selection entitled Dassavatar desscribed ten incarnations of the God Vishnu. The last two selections demonstrated the Bharat Natyam style. Varnam combined pure dance and descriptive dance, Thillana was a pure dance item and the traditional finale to a Bharat Natyam recital.

One cannot deny Anajli's discipline and dedication to this difficult art form. Unfortunately though her selections were very heavily concentrated on Orissi, with five pieces and she only cursorily dealt with the other two. As the evening progressed on, the pieces began to blend into each other, the hand movements, of which there are 24 and the religious poses, 106 of them, became repetitive and lost the uniqueness they had in the beginning.

For some reason, further distraction arose from members of the audience who came and left the performance in the middle of various numbers, a practise which I can hardly condone.

Surprisingly, Anne Marie Gaston only began to sudy this form when she went to Madras, India with C.U.S.O. after completing a B.A. and B.P.H.E. at Queen's in 1964.

She had studied dance in Canada prior to this and became intriqued with the temple sculpture that illustrates Indian dance and decided to study its living form.

I must admit that I am not qualified to criticise or even comment on Anjali's performance. I have never seen a performance of South Indian Temple Dances and this situation is not unlike having to review a book written in Sanskrit.

Greasy Group

by Bill Mandich

The title may have you wondering, so I will attempt to explain. This article deals with the wonderful world of music. Not all music, but contemporary music. Or, to be more honest it will deal more specifically with good old raunchy rock music. Rather than a simple record review column this and subsequent articles will share with you my experience, feelings and vast musical knowledge all in an attempt to force my musical taste down your throat.

This upcoming Wednesday, June 6, will see the return of big time music to the good old Jock Harty Arena, by way of a pub dance. The evening is shaping up to have great potential. Three groups will attempt to show us their stuff, each with its own characteristic style.

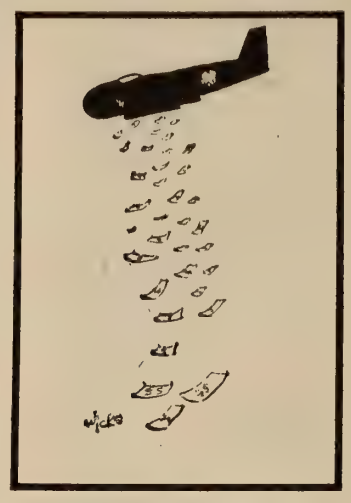
"Streetnoise" will begin the evening. This seven piece band has long been a local favourite. Since the group's beginnings about eight years ago it has never stopped improving. Possibly the only thing holding the group back is the lack of original material in its repertoire. But the sound is excellent. The promotional material claims that the "most common comment of 'Streetnoise' is that most tunes are note perfect to the record."

"Comfort" will follow the now sound of "Streetnoise" by taking us back into musical time. This set is to feature a 40 minute Beatle medley. The group is comprised of three local musicians, including Bill Joslin and Doug McClement of "Harvest" fame.

The final step back into time will introduce Queen's and Kingston to one of the hottest and greasiest groups in Ontario, "The Bolt Upright Revue". The group will be at the Queen's pub on Tuesday and Thursday night. You may not recognize the group's new name, but it is the same group that stole the Candian talent concert, held in Ottawa last February. That concert featured Thundermug, Crowbar, Mainline and King Biscuit Boy, but the overwhelming favorite of the night was Bolt Upright and the Erections." While their name has been toned down their music and style has not. Led by Bolt Upright - often singing on his knees or back- the group will take the audience back to the '50's.

A good cold beer and "Jailhouse Rock", what could be better on a hot summer's night? See you there.

It seems fortunate that this event is being held during the "Learned Societies and the Royal Society of Canada's" visit to Queen's. For now the entertainment program will truly be indicative of the "cultural life of a major metropolitan centre." And as all the acts are Canadian, it can serve as an even further reflection of "the Canadian Artistic community.



World: Noose around Nixon tightens; needs new excuse

WASHINGTON- Nixon's recent contentions that the Watergate investigations were threatening to expose United States national secrets has been challenged from two sources.

Nixon has attempted on national security grounds to justify partial coverups of the wiretappings of the Democratic National headquarters in the Watergate hotel. Several key Republican figures and Nixon aides involved in last summer's campaigning have been implicated.

However, the Leaders of the National Democratic Party and the Senate armed services committee refuse to buy the excuse.The latter, which is conducting the investigations, noted that most of their investigation activities on the Central Intelligence Agency and other links between government security agents and the Watergate wiretapping have nothing to do with national security.

SAIGON — President Nguyen Van Thieu has unveiled a postwar reconstruction plan and economic program which he feels will beat the Communist scheme to "take over South Vietnam". The program is expected to cost four billion dollars in foreign aid over eight years. He did not name the party who would be paying, but it is expected that the largest slice will come from the United States.

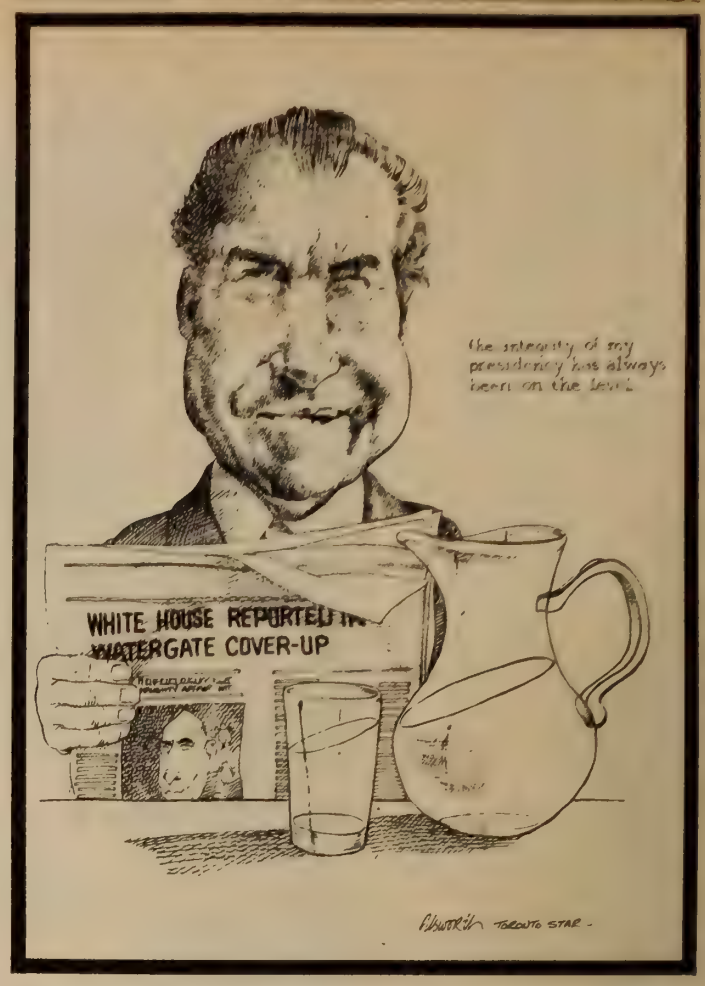
BERN Switzerland — Another tradition has become lost as Switzerland announced the opening of its banks' doors to United States investigators in order that they might be able to find evidence on which to prosecute organized crime figures. The move came after four years of bargaining between the two countries and will effectively allow the American government to peruse bank records where there is a reasonable suspicion that it would help in detecting offences which rank as crimes in both countries.

PEKING — Red China has announced that it will be inviting their old foe, Taiwan to the tennis table. However, the announcement glaringly referred to Taiwan as a province and not an independent nation.

LONDON — President Anwar Sadat of Egypt is considering constructing a super-canal to run parallel to and by-pass the closed Suez. The new canal would run just west of the Suez on entirely Arab controlled territory.

Forty-two countries have been approached to aid in financing the construction of the waterway which would accomodate any ship presently afloat. The canal is expected to take only eighteen months to build.

For the future, it has been suggested that if a political settlement is reached between the Arabs and Israelis, then the land between the two canals could be dredged to create an even wider waterway.The Suez has been closed since the 1967 mid-east conflict.



CAPE KENNEDY — Space scientists have announced that Mars has been found to be alive with volcanic activity after conclusive results were sent back from Mariner 9 which has been orbiting the planet since November 13, 1971.

Mariner 9 has taken more than 7300 pictures of the planet showing it to have huge volcanoes and extensive lava flows. It was determined that one of the Martian volcanoes is fifteen miles high.

MADRID — Dictator Francisco Franco, attempting to control an increasingly vocal left-wing element in Spain is now coming under pressure from his extreme right-wing elements as well. The rightist and fascist followers are accusing him of being too lenient in his policies towards the leftist students and workers and the liberal church leaders. It is also believed that their agitation is a bid for power and popular support in anticipation of the death of the ailing dictator.

WASHINGTON — A bitterly divided American congress managed to push through a compromise motion allowing President Richard Nixon to control prices and wages for another year.

The new bill does not contain price or rent roll-back provisions demanded by the consumer advocates but opposed by the administration. However, Nixon was given the power to allocate petroleum products and force corporations to make public justifications of price increases of 1.5 per cent or more. In addition, wages up to $3.50 per hour will be exempted from the controls.

BELFAST — Sectarian fighting is continuing in the province of Ulster amidst reports of ten deaths having occured in four days. It is believed that the terrorism may be the beginning of a campaign by the outlawed Irish Republican Army Provisional Wing to wreck elections scheduled over the next six weeks.

Gallup polls conducted by Irish sources have indicated strong support coming for the moderate parties with only 19 per cent supporting the militant factions. The elections are the first step in the March blueprint for Irish peace proposed by the British government in an attempt to restore political peace to Ireland. Of those contacted in the Irish survey, 84 per cent indicated that they were ready to allow the British peace plan a chance to prove itself.

WASHINGTON — The Nixon administration is planning to ask the governors of the fifty American states to take steps to cut their highway speed limits in an attempt to conserve on the waning petroleum reserves.

HOUSTON — The Skylab I mission, an attempt by man to live in space for twenty-eight days, is once again approaching a state of normalcy after several days of unsuccessful attempts to make it work.

The space station was sent into orbit around the earth before the astronauts who were to later link up with it. While being launched, the Skylab lost part of its protective shield so that it was recording temperatures as high as 125 degrees. The first task of the astronauts upon linking with the station was to erect a sun shield over the damaged area.

However, the men had trouble making the hookup with the station and it took several attempts to perform the feat. Once linked, the shield was finally erected and they are now setting up quarters in their space abode.

Canada: Whither go our peace efforts

OTTAWA — The decision as to whether Canada is to stay in the International Commission for Control and Supervision in Vietnam has been reached after the cabinet finally came together on the issue.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, thoroughly disillusioned with the impotency of the ICCS and the recent mudslinging which has developed with the Polish and Hungarian ICCS members over the illegal presence of North Vietnamese troops in South Vietnam. He has announced that the troops will be out by July.

Defence Minister James Richardson, concerned with the possibility of leaving behind a tarnished image of Canada had been urging that the ICCS be kept together.

TORONTO — Ontario has begun to once again chip away at the powers which have been allocated to the federal government under the British North America Act, this time in the field of telecommunications.

With the Ontario government becoming increasingly in[illegible] in regional growth, it is felt that the province should have the power to establish the cable television serving areas so that cable service might be tailored to the needs of the inhabitants of the provincially determined area.

The province claims however, it is not seeking exclusive rights in telecommunications, but rather co-operation with the federal government in respecting the provincial policies.

OTTAWA — Air Canada may find their services severely curtailed this summer if their latest offer to the machinists union is rejected by the membership and that possibility seems quite likely.

The International Association of Machinists has threatened the company with the possibility of rotating walk-outs if the offer is rejected. The union demanded unsuccessfully to include a clause banning a recent company action which fired union personnel over non organized employees from occurring in the future. In addition the union has demanded a four day work week instead of the present five with no reduction in the weekly wage. An additional union demanded pay raise was only partially met in the last Air Canada offer.

KINGSTON — Watch for the yellow police cruisers in this city. The Kingston Police Force has decided to change the paint job on its formerly blue and white patrol cars to give the police "more presence". They feel that the bright yellow will make the police more obvious to Kingston residents, increasing their feeling of security.

OTTAWA — The federal-provincial conference of Canada's first ministers convened last week managed to accomplish next to nothing outside of an agreement to disagree. It was finally decided that a further meeting would be called for the fall at which time the contentious financial issues would be taken off the agenda allowing the parties to make decisions on broad objectives affecting Canada.

KITCHENER — The United Brewery Workers Union announced that it has paid out $250,000 to finance the year-long strike of the Dare Cookie Workers. It is now planning and budgeting for a second year.

The strike began over demands by members for a raise for women which would bring their wage up to that of the male workers. About 80 per cent of the Dare workers were women. Now the issue is the rehiring of all the strikers.

The strike has been marked by clashes on the picket line, damage to company property and the conviction of the company executive vice-president for violating the Ontario Labour Relations Act.

CUT HERE

Phone	Name	Address
-	ORR, BARBARA L	207 WILLIAM ST APT 3
549-2249	ORTON, JOANNE E	132 EARL ST APT 4
547-6182	OTHMAN, A A	3240 ELROND
544-9656	OUELLET, DAVID	180 ALFRED
544-0639	PARKER, CATHY	309 EARL
546-5873	PARNELL, JENNIFER L	211 QUEEN ST
546-3048	PARROTT, JOAN M	254 WILLIAM ST APT 2
542-1167	PATTERSON, FLOYD E	293 FRONTENAC ST
549-1550	PERRIS, MICHAEL G	4 COPPERFIELD DR
542-3971	PERRY, DENNIS L	341 KING ST EAST APT 2
546-7908	PERRY, LEONA M	182 ALFRED ST APT 3
968-4866	PERSAD, ROSEY L	94 SIDNEY ST APT 305
-		BELLEVILLE
544-1462	PERSAUD, HAROLD	278 UNIVERSITY APT 1
-	PESCOD, ANNE	179 EARL, APT 6
546-6990	PETERSON, ALLAN A	62B LUNDY'S LANE
544-2753	PETRACHUK, DIANNE	340 ALBERT
389-3695	PICKERING, CAROLE	R R 3, BATH
547-3120	PIERSON, GEOFFREY	114 CLIFF CRES
725-8951	PITT, WALLACE F	R R 6 BOWMANVILLE
544-2048	PITTS, R JAYNE	401 PRINCESS ST APT 1225
542-5326	POLGNAIN, DONNA	9 WELLINGTON
822-4622	PORTER, BRUCE	1452 BIRCHWOOD DR,
-		CLARKSON, MISSISSAUGA
546-0185	PORTER, TERRENCE W	236 WILLIAM ST
546-9039	PORTER, WILLIAM C	2 MOWAT AVE APT 205
549-0458	PRESTON, PETER E	462 VICTORIA ST
544-9855	PRICE, CARON H	509 MACDONNELL ST APT 15
544-0641	PRITCHARD, DOUG	1 WESTDALE, APT 1
544-0641	PRITCHARD, JANE	1 - 1 WESTDALE AVE
544-9364	PROSSER, LEANNE	166 UNIVERSITY APT 2
549-2570	PUGH, GEORGE	127 NELSON
544-0072	PURSEY, HEATHER	87 DIVISION
542-6347	PYE, CAROL J	287 ALBERT ST
544-0401	RAE, PATRICIA	135 BAGOT APT 2
-	RASHUTTE, BARRY J	530 JOHNSON ST
542-9236	RAWLINGS, JIM	78 WELLINGTON
-	READY, MURRAY	59 WEST ST APT 7
542-4133	REDMOND, DEREK	178 BARRIE
546-0812	REEDIE, PENNY	401 PRINCESS APT 305
544-4749	REID, C JAMES	290 WILLIAM, APT 2
542-5326	REILLY, KEITH	9 WELLINGTON
962-5693	RIEDEL, NANCY L	238 WEST DUNDAS
-		BELLEVILLE
546-1753	RIGSBY, JOHN W	1250 PRINCESS ST APT 57
544-3640	ROBINSON, JOHN D	31 OAKRIDGE AVE
542-5762	ROBINSON, PETER	79 WILLIAM
546-6017	ROBINSON, WAYNE A	541 COLLEGE ST APT 36
354-2487	ROBLIN, CAROL A	R R 2, NAPANEE
544-6444	RONSON, JOHN	P.O. BOX 811, KINGSTON
476-5912	RORABECK, JANICE M	94 MARY ST W PICTON
549-0898	ROSS, DAVID	322 QUEEN APT 2
542-4383	ROSS, RODERICK A	176 CLERGY ST APT 1
546-5797	ROW, DAVID J	323 EARL ST APT 1
544-3949	RUNNALLS, CATHY	249 BARRIE
966-2710	RUTHERFORD, JUDITH A	26 LYNNDALE CRES
-		BELLEVILLE
544-2362	SAINT GERMAIN, BARRY J	539 MACDONNELL ST APT 17
548-7352	SAUNDERS, ROBERT J	1508 PRINCESS ST APT 605
-	SAVOY, PATRICIA M	163 ALFRED ST
966-1769	SCAIFE, JOSEPH	BOX 14
966-1769	SCAIFE, THELMA	BOX 14
548-4392	SCHRIEDER, JUDY	184 UNIVERSITY
544-0401	SCHWIER, CHARLES	135 BAGOT APT 2
389-6246	SCOTT, E JANE	R R 3 BROOKLANDS PK DR
-		BATH
544-7840	SCOTT, F ANDREW	GRAD RESIDENCE RM 616
544-0475	SCOTT, WILLIAM	329 BROCK ST
544-1249	SECORD, FRANCES I	503 JOHNSON ST APT 1
549-1028	SEMPLE, M ANN	56 WILLIAM ST APT 1
389-3348	SENIOR, PAUL D	717 CARNABY ST
548-3697	SEVEIGNY, JOHN	220 UNION, APT 2
544-0002	SHAW, WILLIAM H	47 VAN ORDER APT 1-204
544-5693	SHOEMAKER, LINDA A	132 KING ST EAST
542-7296	SHULTZ, GARY	RR#6 KINGSTON
546-9492	SIMMONS, AUDREY	437 A JOHNSON APT 6
546-9492	SIMMONS, DAVID	437 A JOHNSON APT 6
544-4914	SIMON, HELEN	298 UNIVERSITY APT 2
546-0037	SIMS, GABRIELLE	106 NELSON ST APT 3
546-9078	SLABCZYNSKI, ALISTAIR	96 YORK ST
548-7670	SMITH, CHRISTINA	437A JOHNSON ST APT 7
546-9717	SMITH, EDWARD	238 ALBERT
542-5916	SMITH, ELSIE I	6 ROBERT WALLACE DR
389-2799	SMITH, FRED B	20 MANITOU CRES BOX 364
-		AMHERSTVIEW
545-7287	SMITH, JAMES M	204 KING ST E
-	SMITH, MARGARET E	128 EARL ST
342-8392	SMITH, R G	385 KING STREET WEST
-		BROCKVILLE
544-1769	SMITH, ZORNE H	220 MCMAHON AVE
546-0469	SNOWDON, KEN	15 ADELAIDE ST APT 16
544-0401	SOLMAN, JOHN	135 BAGOT APT 2
542-9506	SOOKOO, JANETTE	1 COUPER ST APT 3
389-2043	SPEAGLE, GREGORY	438 CORONATION BLVD
549-2781	SPRUSTON, C DIANE	12 RIDOUT ROW RMC
546-9778	STAFFORD, DAVID M	24 SYDENHAM ST APT 11
542-5762	STEIN, GEORGE	79 WILLIAM
544-5448	STEVENS, SHIRLEY	261 COLBORNE APT 9
542-5326	STEWART, DAVE	9 WELLINGTON
544-2973	STOIAN, MICHAEL S	229 UNIVERSITY AVE
544-5280	STOPPARD, J	199 KING APT 1
542-9496	STRONG, JANE E	294 WILLIAM ST
542-4927	SULLIVAN, J PATRICK	445 MONTREAL ST BOX 146
544-4290	SUTHERLAND, ALLEN D	1 MOWAT AVE APT 106
544-6347	SUTHERLAND, ROSS	ELROND COLLEGE APT 1236
233-5924	SZLAZAK, IAN	10 DRIVEWAY, APT 704,
-		OTTAWA
542-6680	TALBOT, ANN	264 UNIVERSITY
544-6716	TANG, LINA L	151 COLBORNE ST APT 4
544-2521	TAYLOR, AMANDA L	131 BEVERLEY ST
546-0487	TELGMANN, JOHN	199 UNIVERSITY
544-6575	THAKKER, AJIT J	205 WILLIAM APT 1
549-0510	THERIEN, CORA E	126 COLLINGWOOD ST APT 3
546-5873	THOMPSON, CHRISTINE E	211 QUEEN ST
542-3831	THOMPSON, JEAN E	231 UNIVERSITY AVE
544-5665	THOMSON, AINSLIE	68 COLBORNE ST APT 1
549-1205	TIEDE, HOLLY	133 ALFRED
542-6348	TITTEMORE, M BETH	328 JOHNSON STREET APT 1
546-5086	TODD, KATHERINE R	179 EARL STREET APT 3
476-4947	TODD, LYNN M	R R 9 PICTON
-	TOMPKINS, CRAIG E	30 WILLIAM ST APT 14
834-3106	TOOLAN, FRANK	107 LE MARCHANT RD,
-		ST. JOHN'S NFLD
962-1410	TRAFFORD, JOHN J	46 SOUTHVIEW AVE
-		BELLEVILLE
549-1581	TRAVERS, DONALD	15 LOWER ALBERT
544-9531	TROTTER, BRUCE	197 KING EAST
544-2265	TUCKER, MAUREEN E	17 VAN ORDER APT 6-102
546-2450	TUDOR, LINDA D	517 DIVISION ST
389-0996	TURNBULL, THOMAS B	R R 3
-	TURNER, KATHY
544-1984	VAN COTT, ANN-LOUISE	286 REGENT ST
544-3547	VAUTRIN, YVES	11 SYDENHAM APT 4
546-5401	VERSEGHY, ARPAD G	377 EARL ST
546-6330	VILBIGAITIS, R J	125 KING E, APT 3
542-7861	WADMAN, RITA	601 MACDONNELL ST
544-9757	WALDIE, DOUG D	514 PRINCESS ST
549-2029	WALKER, LOIS-ELIZABETH	1490 PRINCESS ST APT 4
549-2841	WALKER, ROGER T	33 ELMWOOD ST APT 605
546-5815	WALLBRIDGE, JEAN	210 COLBORNE, APT 1
544-9804	WALSH, ANNE M	242 BROCK
549-2903	WALTERS, DOUGLAS J	360 NELSON ST APT 19
549-0399	WARD, K	196 A QUEEN ST
372-3428	WATSON, ROBERT T	R R 6 COBOURG
546-0487	WATTS, PETER	199 UNIVERSITY
389-1359	WEAGANT, PAUL S	259 LAKEVIEW AVENUE
389-0288	WEAVER, MORLEY E	439 KIRKWOOD RD
544-5808	WEI, CHOU H	162 EARL ST
389-4217	WEIR, DONALD G	7 ADDINGTON AVE
-		AMHERSTVIEW
548-4589	WEIR, ROBERT	31 BAYSWATER APT 309
544-2605	WELCH, SARAH J	80 EARL STREET APT 3
-	WEST, KATHLEEN L	357 FRONTENAC ST APT 1
546-2807	WHELAN, MERVYN R	289 AVENUE RD
544-0582	WHITE, PATRICIA	56 EARL APT 5
932-3579	WHITHAM, LYN	120 4TH W #306, CORNWALL
542-8258	WHITNEY, MELVIN E	401 PRINCESS APT 632
-	WICKIE, JOSEPH R	GRAD RES RM 601 QUEEN'S
544-6574	WILMOT, SHEILA J	84 RUNNYMEDE RD APT 901
733-7964	WILSON, DAVID	1735 RIVERSIDE DR #608,
-		OTTAWA
544-9519	WINKLER, EDMUND	514 BROCK, APT 2
546-0735	WINTEROWD, DEBORAH L	313 COLLINGWOOD ST APT 2
542-8258	WISE, WILLIAM J	401 PRINCESS ST APT 632
548-7561	WONG , RAYMOND	167 ALFRED
544-2904	WONG, KENNETH	16 ST LAWRENCE AVE
544-5358	WOOD, BOB	160 JOHNSON
962-4026	WOODS, C ALEXANDER	80 HASTINGS DRIVE
-		BELLEVILLE
542-6412	WOODS, CHRIS	192 UNION APT 1
546-0140	WOODS, M SHONNA LYNNE	31 STORMONT AVE
542-7541	WREN, PATRICIA L	325 JOHNSON ST APT 4
544-6521	YAKABUSKI, PAUL G	47 VAN ORDER APT 4-302
-	YARROW, ANGELA M	401 PRINCESS ST APT 1504
546-7545	YEUNG, GRACE	304 EARL ST APT 2
544-4864	YOUNG, JOSEPHINE	185 UNIVERSITY AVE RM 2
548-4860	ZETTLER, NANCY L	286 BARRIE ST APT 2
544-1596	ZIOMKIEWICZ, CHRIS S	290 WILLIAM, APT 1
546-9236	ZIRGER, RICHARD A	401 ALFRED ST APT 1

FOLD HERE

CUT HERE

Summer Who's Where

May, 1973

Who's Where in the Summer 1973 is published by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Incorporated. Contained herein are the names of several hundred Queen's students who are attending Intersession, working in Kingston, or otherwise keeping up their connection with Queen's this summer (plus a few more scattered across the countryside.) The listings come from our cards filled out by the students represented and partially from the local address cards of Intersession students supplied by Peter Stokes of the Arts and Science Office. Not all Intersession students are contained herein, as not all filled in local address cards at registration. The AMS and the Journal will assume no responsibility for the accuracy of the listings as they have been printed as received. Under the Copyright Act, the AMS Inc., is the owner of the copyright in this work, and reserves all rights to the listings contained herein; and use thereof without the written consent of the AMS may be met with legal action.

Copyright 1973, by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc.

Hours for various campus services and agencies for the summer are as follows:

Birth Control Information Centre

Monday through Saturday, noon to 10 pm at 165 University.

Health Services

Monday through Friday, 9 am to 11.30 am, and 1.30 pm to 3.30 pm. A 24-hour emergency service can be reached at 547-6106, or one can call the KGH Emergency number 547-3322.

Job Bank

A job reference service for students will be open at 121 Union (Career Planning Office) Weekdays until late in the summer. Phone 547-5770.

Physed Centre

Hours: Monday to Friday 8 am to 10 pm, Saturday 8 am to 5 pm. Tennis courts, 8 am to dusk. Students enrolled in Intersession and Summer School may use the facilities at no charge upon presentation of their student cards. Other students not enrolled in summer courses may make arrangements through the Physed Centre Office.

Typing Service

Is not open this summer.

Student Government

Bruce Trotter, vice-president of the Alma Mater Society and Business Administrator Joyce Roe will be keeping the AMS office open this summer from 9 am to noon and 1 pm to 4.30 pm. Along with various assorted commissioners, AMS president Steve Brereton and other AMS bigwigs who are in Kingston this summer, Trotter will be planning what to do for students this fall.

With not too much happening this summer, it's a good time to let the AMS know what you would like done. Call Bruce at the AMS office (547-6165) or just drop into the office in the basement of the students' union to offer him some moral support. Bruce will talk, accept volunteers, and otherwise make your acquaintance. Both Trotter and Roe were pretty friendly with strangers the last time we checked.

The Pub

You can drink at Queen's in the House of Commons and House of Lords Pub on the second floor of the students union. They have been featuring live entertainment for the past while and should continue to do so. When there is entertainment, there is a cover charge of twenty-five cents. Once inside the beer is forty-five cents (but going up) and the waitresses and waiters graciously accept tips. The pub has already become a favourite watering hole and is a good place to meet your friends. Their hours are as follows: Monday to Thursday noon to 2 pm, 8 pm to midnight, and Friday noon to 4 pm and 8 pm to midnight. Beaver Foods is running a concession in the pub during the noon hour serving light meals.

Douglas Library

The circulation desk, main reading room, and the reserve, periodicals and central information services rooms and the stacks will be open Monday through Thursday from 8.45 am to 10.00 pm, Friday and Saturday from 8.45 to 5 pm (4.30 pm beginning June 11) and on Sunday from noon until 9.00 pm. Documents will be open from 8.45 am to 10 pm Monday to Thursday and 8.45 to 5 pm on Friday. Archives and Special Collections are open Monday through Friday 8.45 am to 5.00 pm.

The Union

The Coffee Shop on the lower floor of the Students Union will be open from Monday through Friday 7.30 am to 6 pm, Saturday 9.00 am to 6.00 pm, and Sunday 11.00 am to 6.00 pm. Wallace Hall will remain closed until July 2. The lower floor tuck shop and billiards is open daily from 8.30 am to 5.00 pm.

Phone	Name	Address
384-6024	ABDO, ABDULKARIM	181 BELMONT AVE
548-1980	ABRAHAM, RAQUEL M	69 NELSON ST
613-678-[illegible]	ALMEYDA, JEANNETTE	7 ST DENIS DR #1035, DON MILLS, ONT
-	ALTON, BRIAN	52 EARL
[illegible]	ADAMS, KATHLEEN B	R R 1, NAPANEE
542-8746	ADAMS, SUSAN	111 NOTCH HILL APT 504
542-0078	ALLEN, KATHRYN E	187 COLLEGE ST
377-6089	ANDERSON, TOBEY C	802 132, YARKER
389-5581	ANDERSON, VICKI A	31A MONTGOMERY BLVD
542-7004	ANTOINE, RON	295 WILLIAM
968-5720	ARCHER, BOB	3 ROUTHIER, SEPT ILES, QUEBEC
-	ARMSTRONG, ALBERT E	8 WEEKS AVE, TRENTON
542-[illegible]	ATKINSON, LINDA J	15 MACPHERSON 15-204
548-1329	ATKINSON, SUZANNE E	401 PRINCESS ST APT 1502
542-[illegible]	AUSTEN, LORNE J	110 RIVERVIEW DR
548-4070	BASTIN, GAIL	119 ALFRED APT 2
548-8826	BAXTER, HARRY	419 ELMWOOD
544-7048	BAKER, LARRY	GRAD RES
389-5958	BALLANTYNE, DALE M	278 MELBURNE AVE
392-[illegible]	BALLS, KENNETH R	R R 2, INVERARY
544-4414	BANNON, ANNE J	208 UNIVERSITY APT 2
274-3632	BANNER, JOHN M	1186 CLOVERBRAE CR, LORNE PARK, MISSISSAUGA
-	BARKLEY, HELEN	277 ALFRED APT 1
544-4474	BARR, DEBRA	208 UNIVERSITY APT 2
283-2401	BARR, E FAYE	R R 2, PERTH ROAD
544-1444	BARNEY, MICHAEL	17 VAN ORDER APT 10-302
389-2059	BAUCUS, HOLLY A	920 FRONT RD
548-4480	BEARANCE, WILLIAM R	581 UNION STREET
544-[illegible]	BEAUDOIN, MARGARET M	22 STRATHCONA CRES
544-1487	BEATTIE, DOUG	199 UNIVERSITY
544-2824	BEAUREGARD, MARTHE T	80 EARL ST
967-5701	BEBEE, CARL	352 BROCK -
544-9941	BECK, STEWART J	197 KING ST E APT 1
544-1486	BEHARRIELL, RICHARD H	R R 1
548-6080	BEN-DERA, MICHAL	380 JOHNSON ST
476-2367	BENOIT, GERARD J	5 REICHSWALD CT BOX 282 PICTON
-	BERDA, ANDY	715 LAIDLAW CR
548-6802	BERNSTEIN, SANDRA	40 CLERGY E APT 2
548-5300	BETTIN, K LYNNE	131 ALFRED ST
547-1940	BHARUCHA, VIJAY	SECOND COLLEGE APT 1506
548-3498	BUCHANAN, LESLIE J	107 TORONTO ST APT 1
544-9869	BLOOD, MARVIN R	95 CLERGY E
542-7401	BOAG, CHARLEY F	18 GARRETT ST APT 9
544-4071	BOLTON, MERLE	55 BROCK APT 2
542-4408	BOLLIER, ROBERT L	129 HOLLAND CRS
548-4480	BOND, EDWARD S	601 EARL ST
548-4484	BOND, JEANNE	125 WILLIAM
542-0048	BRAID, MARIAN	238 VICTORIA ST APT 3
548-6581	BARRETON, STEVE	159 JOHNSON APT 3
544-4819	BROOKS, JOHN	516 BROCK APT 2
392-0490	BROWN, DOROTHY M	89 PALMER RD, BELLEVILLE
544-4480	BROWN, IAN D	41 COady
548-3073	BROWN, JANET E	47 BEVERLEY
389-0481	BROWN, PAUL J	R R 1 STERLING AVE
542-7086	BROWNLEE, BRIAN	79 WILLIAM
544-8680	BROWNLEE, KATHY J	GRADUATE RES RM319
547-7619	BURKE, M	CARRUTHERS HALL, RM 106
548-5581	BURNS, JAMES E	R R 5, BELLEVILLE
542-5416	BUTTERILL, NANCY E	120 BAGOT ST APT 3
548-7407	BUXCEY, ANNE I	7 RIDEOUT ROW RMC GROUNDS
542-8206	CAIRD, G MAE	97 COLLINGWOOD ST
548-4892	CALDER, SUZANNE	178 ALFRED
548-7626	CALLUM, L JEAN	226 WESTDALE AVE
548-8080	CAMERON, HUGH	45 WEST
548-7750	CAMPBELL, DAVID	246 UNIVERSITY
548-8677	CAMPBELL, DAVID B	5 HELENA CRES RR#1
544-3384	CAMPBELL, GAIL	31 GARRETT
-	CAMPBELL, HUGH	236 FRONTENAC #2
548-6936	CAMPBELL, JO ANNE	80 WILLIAM
-	CAMPBELL, LAUREN D	401 PRINCESS ST APT 1514
544-4519	CARRNER, CORD	516 BROCK APT 2
382-2687	CARL, NANCY -	R R 1
544-4172	CARLSON, ANNE	246 ALBERT, APT 1
544-5170	CARLSON, PEGI	213 QUEEN APT 3
389-3660	CARNEGIE, ROBERT D	152 SHERMAN ST
544-6232	CARNEGIE, STEPHEN D	47 VAN ORDER DR 2-103
548-9691	CARSON, LEANNE E	210 BAGOT, RM 5
548-7266	CARTER, NEIL A	227 BATH ROAD APT 107
544-2657	CASTAIN, CHARLES	196 STUART
542-1488	CATTEE, DAVID	814 JOHNSON
-	CAUGHEY, JOAN	102 STUART ST
544-2697	CHAN, FRANK	196 STUART
548-0201	CHAN, SO M	44 WILLIAM ST APT 4
283-0216	CHANT, MARGARET A	R R 3, PORTLAND
548-8675	CHAPMAN, DOUGLAS C	205 WILLIAM APT 1
389-3261	CHARCHUK, JOANNE M	800 CASTELL RD APT 218
544-7767	CHARLES, LAWRENCE M	GRADUATE RES RM 216
544-9809	CHARLES, ROY	113 CONCESSION
-	CHARTIER, ANDREE	GENERAL DELIVERY, BANFF
729-3517	CHEANG, TAMMO ERIC	1757 VICTORIA PARK, #511 TORONTO
544-7742	CHEUNG, CHRISTINE K	GRADUATE RESIDENCE
548-9273	CHIBURAK, DEBBIE	47 BEVERLEY
-	CHITNAVANONDH, CARP	ELROND COLLEGE
544-5154	CHONG, BENSON	294 BARRIE ST
548-6459	CHONG, KIT M	294 FRONTENAC ST

Phone	Name	Address
542-6704	CLAPPERTON, CAROL J	16 MARKET STREET APT 4
548-9273	CLARKE, DEBORAH A	47 BEVERLEY
544-6451	CLAYTON, PATRICK D	577 VICTORIA ST
544-5866	CLUM, GORDON	382 EARL
-	COFFEY, LARRY F	401 PRINCESS ST APT 3104
-	COLLINS, DAVID	GUNROOM, HMCS CAPE BRETO FMO, VICTORIA, BC
548-7063	COMRIE, BRIAN	331 BROCK
544-2383	CONLAN, GLENN H	248 ALFRED
389-3908	CONYETTE, ANN C	507 DAYS RD APT M32
542-9426	CORRIGAN, M KATHLEEN	81 EARL ST APT 2
548-3707	COSBY, G MICHAEL	261 UNIVERSITY AVE APT 5
542-7003	COTTINGHAM, DIANA	295 WILLIAM
542-7003	COXWELL, AL	295 WILLIAM
542-1461	CROMWELL, THOMAS A	1236 JOHNSON ST
542-7021	CROWDER, ELEANOR	45 MICHAEL GRASS CRES
542-5173	CUNNINGHAM ART	195 UNIVERSITY, APT 4
542-5173	CUNNINGHAM, ARTHUR R	195 UNIVERSITY AVE APT 4
549-0696	CUNNINGHAM, JOAN	327 WILLIAM
542-8080	DALZIEL, PETER	45 WEST
544-5170	DANDIE, ALISON	213 QUEEN APT 3
386-6836	DAVENPORT, ALAN L	R R 1, SYDENHAM
548-8015	DAVEY, ROBERT J	207 WILLIAM ST APT-2
342-5716	DAVID, PAUL V	1227 PEDEN, BROCKVILLE
548-0014	DAVIES, BRYAN P	211 DIVISION APT 1
542-6386	DAVIS, VANDA W	1010 PORTSMOUTH AVE
548-6862	DAYFOOT, HOWARD	40 CLERGY E APT 2
544-4437	DE LHORBE, CYNTHIA D	210 COLBORNE ST APT 9
542-6680	DE STEIN, SUSAN	264 UNIVERSITY
542-6680	DEANE, DELILAH	264 UNIVERSITY
542-2318	DEVITT, LOIS M	20 BARRIE ST
542-1509	DIAPER, EDWINA D	ELGINBURG
542-5515	DILLON, JUDE	5 WESTMORELAND
548-7873	DILLON, PAULINE C	350 PALACE RD
389-0698	DIXON, MAURICE W	95 BRENTWOOD CRES
544-0868	DOBSON, ELIZABETH J	15 MACPHERSON AVE
544-9899	DOLAN, JULIANNE M	329 DIVISION ST APT 1
544-0657	DONALD, DOUG	258 WILLIAM
544-0639	DONOGHUE, ADRIAN J	309 EARL ST
542-7663	DONOVAN, TERRY J	740 ALFRED CRES
544-4430	DOYLE, ROBERT J	9 DICKENS DRIVE
548-9273	DRAKE, MARY A	47 BEVERLEY
-	DUBAS, HELEN J	234 1/2 BROCK ST APT 3
544-4117	EASTEAL, RONALD A	35 KING ST WEST
-	EBBIN, MEREDITH C	401 PRINCESS ST
548-3046	EDDY, MARY J	254 WILLIAM
389-5361	EDWARDS, MARGARET E	794 DOWNING ST
548-4484	EGERTON, JENNIFER	54 MOWAT AVE APT 1
549-0587	EL-SHEIKH, S I	1508 PRINCESS ST APT 601
548-7346	ELLIOTT, DIANNE	130 EARL
548-1628	ELLISTON, JAMES C	80 WELLINGTON ST APT 6
389-3385	ETMANSKI, LEONA M	243 DAYS ROAD
389-0298	EVANS, JAMES B	506 MCEWEN DRIVE
753-2302	EVANS, MICHAEL	48 SKYACRES, BRANTFORD
548-0078	EWART, JUDITH	252 FRONTENAC ST APT 3
368-7510	FAULKNER, JAMES S	INVERHURON PARK, RR 1, TIVERTON, ONT
482-8193	FENWICK, ROBERT	654 VICTORIA, MONTREAL 2
267-3564	FERRIER, JEAN A	R R 3, PERTH
544-3949	FIRSTBROOK, JOANNE	249 BARRIE
548-4389	FLETT, JACQUELINE M	279 NORMAN ROGERS DR
542-2969	FOMBRUN, CHARLES J	401 PRINCESS ST APT 1504
548-7195	FORD, JOHN P	450 PORTSMOUTH AVE
544-9519	FRANKS, DAVID	516 BROCK APT 2
544-2793	FRASER, RUTH	185 UNIVERSITY
924-2960	FREEMAN, CHARLES J	R R 1, ELGIN
354-4555	FRESQUE, GORDON H	BOX 880, NAPANEE
548-7607	FRIESEN, MARY	17 VAN ORDER # 9-204
548-5245	FRY, STEPHEN	28 MAITLAND APT 2
548-4338	FYGN, JOHN A	85 WELLINGTON ST APT 1
476-5185	GAGNIER, WENDY A	4 REICHSWALD CT COMP 65 PICTON SS#12
389-0294	GALE, ALLAN H	1109 HUDSON DRIVE
548-9404	GARRARD, NANCY	ELROND COLLEGE APT 1209
548-9404	GARRARD, TIMOTHY	ELROND COLLEGE APT 1209
544-0320	GARRETT, L ANNE	236 FRONTENAC ST APT 3
549-1706	GARTKE, KATHY	218 UNION APT 2
544-4525	GAUDRY, MONIQUE C	BOX 427 'HEATHFIELD'
544-2110	GAUSDEN, KATE	503 JOHNSON APT 2
542-8092	GAZENBEEK A E FIONA	269 QUEEN
544-0138	GEDDES, JAMES H	223 COLLINGWOOD ST
549-0341	GENGE, REGINALD E	47 VAN ORDER APT 5-204
544-5292	GERMAN, KILORAN S	102 STUART
544-1497	GIBSON, JOHN P	16 HILLENDALE AVE
-	GLASHAN, ELIZABETH A	401 PRINCESS, APT 1514
544-0377	GODDARD, ROBERT	179 A COLBORNE
389-5005	GONZALEZ, ANA-LUZ	130 FALKIRK TERRACE
354-2635	GOODFELLOW, RICHARD N	BOX 1167
544-7763	GOTTAMAN, PENNY	213 QUEEN APT 3
548-8314	GOULAH, GERALD E	7 RUNNYMEDE RD
548-8314	GOULAH, MARIAN E	7 RUNNYMEDE RD
932-5076	GOULD, KATHY	15 CHURCH HILL, MONTREAL
962-8327	GOULET, JOSEPH A	101 COLLEGE ST E APT 6 BELLEVILLE
542-7003	GRAHAM, MARK	295 WILLIAM
544-5170	GRANT, RUTH	213 QUEEN ST APT 3
-	GRAVELINE, GERALD R	50 MONTGOMERY BLVD
548-3868	GREEN, RICHARD A	1 - 44 BAIDEN
342-6008	GREENE, ROBERT H	1338 BORDEN CRESC BROCKVILLE

Phone	Name	Address
966-1603	GROSJEAN, CAROL A	15 BURTON, BELLEVILLE
389-3005	GUMMER, MARSHALL K	450 KIRKWOOD DRIVE
-	GUNTER, GRAHAM W	401 PRINCESS ST APT 3206
542-8258	HALAREN, MICHAEL B	401 PRINCESS ST APT 632
546-5144	HALLIDAY, LINDSAY	40 COLLINGWOOD
546-5144	HALLIDAY, R	40 COLLINGWOOD
546-4291	HALLMAN, TIM	30 WILLIAM APT 6
392-0662	HAMILTON, WILLIAM D	5 ARMOUR CRES, TRENTON
544-2383	HAMPSON, KATHY E	248 ALFRED
745-2264	HANCOCK, HAROLD R	R R 2, PETERBOROUGH
547-6213	HANDA, S	CIVIL ENGINEERING DEP
542-0896	HANLEY, HAROLD J	37 COLLEGE ST
544-0582	HANUTA, IRENE	56 EARL APT 5
542-8137	HARKNESS, JANE	223 ALBERT APT 2
546-1447	HARPER, ANNA L	28 MAITLAND APT 1
544-9531	HARPER, SUE	197 KING E
-	HARTNELL, JOSEPHINE P	GRADUATE RESIDENCE
549-2853	HASKINS, DAVID R	238 VICTORIA ST APT 2
542-9784	HASTRUP, INGER	85 WELLINGTON
544-2619	HEAP, ALAN	263 KING EAST
546-2519	HEISSLER, BEATE T	192 BARRIE ST
546-7714	HENDERSON, PETER	52 EARL
544-0517	HENDERSON, SPENCE	16 ST LAWRENCE AVE
765-3087	HERBERT, PETER J	SUMMER SKI SERVICES, MINNETT, ONT
-
546-9012	HEY, PATRICIA E	757 VICTORIA ST
544-2926	HIGGINBOTTOM, DAVID	11 SYDENHAM APT 2
544-5651	HIGGINSON, FRANCES	85 WILLIAM
544-2110	HINTON, MICHAEL N A	503 JOHNSON-APT 2
544-1420	HOOD, MARILYN F	21 HAMPSTEAD HEATH
544-4369	HOPPERTON, GERALDENE A	319 UNIVERSITY AVE APT 2
542-5170	HOUSTON, BARB	290 EARL
-	HOWARD, GORDON	86 DIVISION ST
546-9236	HOWARD, GORDON	401 ALFRED
542-8253	HUDEC, ALBERT J	182 ALFRED APT 2
548-4644	HUDSON, ESTHER A	47 VAN ORDER APT 4-305
544-4887	HUDSON, J DALE	483 NELSON ST
358-2829	HUFFMAN, ARTHUR G	R R 3, YARKER
544-6576	HUMES, MARYKE	979 SYDENHAM RD
549-1280	HUNTER, DAVID W	174 BARRIE ST
342-5908	HUTCHINS, JOHN R	41 FRONT AVE, BROCKVILLE
544-0303	HUTT, LOIS M	51B LUNDY'S LANE
542-1813	IFFRIG, ANDREE	399 VICTORIA
544-6095	JACKSON, RONALD S	453 VICTORIA ST APT 2
-	JAMES, WILLIAM F	163 ALFRED ST APT 2
542-5291	JARVIS, PAUL S	72 EARL ST
392-8396	JEFFRIES, KATHY	BOX 87, CFB TRENTON, ASTRA, ONT
-
542-7003	JOHNSON, DALE	295 WILLIAM
924-2188	JOHNSTON, MARION J	CHRUCH ST, ATHENS
548-4340	JONES, J KENYON	BOX 31 RR 1 TREASURE IS.
546-0869	JONES, MICHAEL L	288 PRINCESS ST APT 2
546-0487	JOULE, CHRIS	199 UNIVERSITY
353-2040	JOY, WAYNE D	RAGLAN ST, INVERARY
544-9735	JULES, VENA	15 MACPHERSON APT 19-104
544-2110	JUSTER, CATHE B	503 JOHNSON ST
542-6930	KARDISH, JOY B	203 KING ST E APT 5
544-6496	KASSNER, MICHAEL H	59 WEST ST APT 2
546-4931	KASUJJA, EDWARD	401 PRINCESS ST APT 3263
546-7714	KASURAK, PAUL	52 EARL
542-2531	KEATES, ELSIE I	263 COLLEGE ST
544-5575	KELLY, COLLEEN	412 EARL STREET
-	KEMPE, J JOHN C	80 BUTLER STREET
354-2669	KENNEDY, CLARENCE A	36 RAGLAN RD APT 1 NAPANEE
546-7819	KENNEDY, DORCAS D	179 EARL STREET
-	KETCHESON, ANN	RR 2, ROSLIN, ONT
542-4053	KIERZKOWSKI, VICTORIA	559 FRONTENAC ST APT 15
544-3752	KINGSBURY, W ROBERT	231 ARNOLD ST
549-1207	KINGSTON, SANDRA	46 CLERGY E APT 2
546-9078	KIRK, JOHN	95 YORK ST
544-6444	KIRKPATRICK, ROY	C/O BOX 811, KGTN
544-9172	KRANENBURG, WIL	246 ALBERT, APT 1
542-5170	KRUPANSZKY, JUDY F	290 EARL ST
547-3139	LABELLE, RICHARD	257 EARL
544-5807	LACE, CATHERINE A	322 BROCK ST APT 305
-	LAFONTAINE, ELOISE	50 RUNNYMEDE APT 212
549-1207	LAIRD, KATHY	46 CLERGY E APT 2
546-6515	LAM, DAVID C	240 ALFRED ST APT 3
885-5359	LAMB, PATRICIA M	193 WALTON ST APT 3 PORT HOPE ONT
544-3364	LANDON, STEPHEN	31 GARRETT
548-7136	LANDRETH, CHRIS	56 WILLIAM APT 2
-	LAPHKAS, C CHRISTINE	ELROND COLLEGE, 314-C
544-2723	LATIMER, DEBURAH J	142 ROBERT WALLACE DR
389-3928	LAWRENCE, JOHN A	420 PARKVIEW DRIVE
544-0517	LAZURE, MICHAEL	16 ST LAWRENCE AVE
542-1322	LE BLANC, WENDY J	19 MACCAULEY ST
544-7763	LECOMTE, MARIE-MARTHE	STUDENTS UNION RM 211
546-4429	LEONARD, SHEILA M	1 MACK ST APT 6
389-0741	LEROY, ROBERT S	411 GLEN CASTLE ROAD
389-0640	LESLIE, MARION	28 LAKEVIEW AVE
546-4855	LEUNG, ANDREW C	599 JOHNSON ST
544-5086	LIAN, CHIN-FOH	37 CLERGY ST
544-2563	LISTER, TERRY E	74 WELLINGTON ST APT 6
542-4067	LOCKERBIE, JO-ANN S	24 MACHAR PL
546-0957	LODGE, GRAHAM H	482 BROCK ST
354-3581	LOFGREN, WILLIAM C	237 UNION ST BOX 228 NAPANEE
-
546-7063	LOUBERT, GARY	331 BROCK

Phone	Name	Address
-	LOWE, RICHARD S	CHEM DEPT, SIMON FRASER UNIV, VANCOUVER B C
-
544-9855	LOWES, M L	509 MACDONNELL ST APT 15
376-6130	LOWTHER, CHRISTINE M	R R 3, HARROWSMITH
376-6130	LOWTHER, MABEL J	FOREST RD R R 3 HARROWSMITH
-
548-7147	LUCAS, JAMES H	P O BOX 1615
546-0537	LUCK, STEVE I	182 UNIVERSITY AVE
549-2521	MACCABE, ANNE	193 UNIVERSITY
544-9635	MACDONALD, ANNE	572 PRINCESS
542-6003	MACDONALD, COLIN A	111 LOWER UNION APT 5
548-4070	MACDONALD, LINDA J	119 ALFRED, APT 2
546-0487	MACKNIGHT, ROB	199 UNIVERSITY
542-6058	MACLACHLAN, NANCY E	10 WESTVIEW ROAD
-	MACLEAN, ANDREW G	401 PRINCESS ST APT 3104
542-6680	MACPHERSON, BARBARA	264 UNIVERSITY
549-2570	MACUMBER, HOWARD	127 NELSON
546-9892	MACWILLIAM, ELIZABETH	176 ALFRED
546-7106	MAHAFFY, A PAUL	189 UNIVERSITY APT 4
544-2958	MALCOLM, MARY	362 EARL
544-0166	MANDICH, BILL	44 A DUNDAS
-	MARCUS, MARY E	486 JOHNSON ST
544-0166	MARIEN, ROBERT	44A DUNDAS
542-2059	MARSHALL, GEORGINA	15 MACPHERSON APT 18-204
544-5448	MARSHALL, HEATHER	261 COLBORNE APT 8
657-8711	MASON, BRENDA	BUCKHORN, ONT
548-3528	MASSEY, RACHEL	1501 LIDDELL CRES
544-0567	MATSUSHITA, S GEORGE	23 NELSON ST APT 2
546-6756	MAVETY, LORNA M	581 PORTSMOUTH AVE
546-6004	MCALPINE, SHEILA	389 BARRIE ST
389-4361	MCCARTHY, ROBERT B	319 GLEN CASTLE RD
544-2789	MCCOLL, GRAHAM	70 WILLIAM APT 5
544-0517	MCDIARMID, GORD	16 ST LAWRENCE AVE
-	MCDONALD, WENDY C	401 PRINCESS ST APT 1510
392-1712	MCFEE, ANGUS	12 GEORGE ST TRENTON
542-9225	MCGOEY, JANET	282 ALBERT
542-7722	MCGREGOR, J JAMES	41 YORK ST APT 1
544-1792	MCINROY, KATHY	275 HELEN ST APT 2
544-6840	MCKENZIE, LOUISE	213 KING EAST APT 3
544-4795	MCKNIGHT, LAURIE J	427 VICTORIA ST APT 4
542-9914	MCLAREN, RICHARD W	157 KING STREET EAST
544-0176	MCLAUGHLIN, DEBORAH M	401 PRINCESS ST APT 1501
544-5710	MCLEAN, DOUGLAS G	245 EARL ST.
546-7714	MCNICHOL, JOHN	52 EARL
354-2292	MCQUEEN, PAMELA M	165 FIRST AVE, NAPANEE
389-2886	MCRAE, KATHRYN A	1132 LINCOLN DRIVE
885-2253	MCREELIS, BARBARA A	20 SCRIVEN BLVD PORT HOPE
-
-	MEECH, SUSAN	239 ALFRED
-	MEINING, ROBERT D	358 YONGE ST
544-4160	MERRICK, DIANNE L	252 AVENUE ROAD
544-6622	MICFLOTTE, MARY A	100 DIVISION ST APT 4
549-0014	MICHAUD, JULIEN	211 DIVISION APT 1
544-3274	MILLAR, BRIAN	35 JOHN, APT 302
392-8278	MILLAR, ROBERT W	21 MANOR CRESC, TRENTON
544-6176	MILLER, CRAIG M	277 EARL APT 2
374-2001	MILLER, GERALD L	BOX 83, VERONA
542-4318	MINNES, WILLIAM A	289 MACDONNELL ST APT 1
548-7289	MITCHELL, RONALD B	41 DIVISION ST
548-7952	MOFFAT, DOUGLAS	51 CLERGY ST E
548-4519	MOIR, JIM	156 JOHNSON
544-5740	MONTEITH, HUGH D	189 SYDENHAM APT 1
544-4986	MOONEY, LINDA	41 COady
546-2436	MOORE, LARRY	81 CLERGY E
546-5875	MORAWETZ, C A	211 QUEEN ST
389-5700	MOREY, TIMOTHY D	1577 FAIRLEIGH ST COLLINS BAY
542-3274	MORSE, VIRGINIA	322 BROCK APT 907
542-6746	MOSS, SUSAN G	94 RAGLAN RD
544-9804	MUIR, BEVERLY M	242 BROCK
544-4695	MULCASTER, BRIAN A	17 VAN ORDER APT 10-204
546-2572	MULVENNA, THOMAS J	84 WILLIAM ST APT B
542-0171	MUNN, JANET I	50 BAYSHORE PL APT 106
387-3437	MURPHY, VINCENT J	R R 1, INVERARY
544-5860	MURRIE, ROBERT	160 STUART
548-2868	NAIMAN, SANDY	213 QUEEN APT 1
544-0401	NEELANDS, PAUL	135 BAGOT APT 2
542-6207	NEFF, ENID E	186 FRONTENAC ST
544-1800	NEIL, J BRUCE	287 NORMAN
548-3641	NEILSEN, SHIRLEY E	491 ALFRED ST
544-4437	NESS, MARILYN E	210 COLBORNE ST APT 9
544-0517	NEVILLE, PAT	16 ST LAWRENCE AVE
544-0521	NEW, JOAN	131 BEVERLEY
548-3576	NEWELL, JOHN E	324 BROCK CRES
389-4304	NEWMAN, DARREL J	1569 FAIRLEIGH ST
548-0061	NEWMAN, MARGARET-ANN E	28 HILL ST
548-1585	NEWMAN, W BRUCE FRANK	111 CARRUTHERS ST
548-7714	NENTON, CHRIS	52 EARL
389-8201	NG, FRANCIS	PO BOX 453, MAJADAHI, PQ
544-9967	NICHOLAS, GEOFFREY C	8 VINE ST APT -
548-6370	NOBLE, KITTY	208 ALFRED
-	NOIRES, DOUGLAS R	15 SYDENHAM STREET
548-9821	NOLTE, ANN M	15 MACPHERSON APT 18-204
544-6000	O'CONNELL, JOANNE	80 GARRETT STREET
994-3788	O'CONNELL, JOANNE	6300 MARTHA AVE, BRONX, NEW YORK CITY, N Y
-
544-5962	O'NEILL, J DALE	181 NOTCH HILL APT 504
548-6301	OFFILER, LESLIE J	437 BROCK ST
548-8384	OMEARA, CHRISTINE A	R R 1
548-0828	ONYSKIW, WALTER	28 FRANCIS ST

perry

The Gazebo - a focal point

A new addition to the Queen's landscape, one not of limestone but materials supplied by local firms related to the building trades is now standing outside Agnes Etherington Arts Centre. The "Gazebo" will be a focal point during the next few months and will stand as a reminder to the public of the Arts Centre's current exhibit 'Heritage Kingston'.

Michener appointed Queen's Chancellor

The University Council gave its unanimous approval to the appointment to the Chancellorship of Rt. Hon. D. Roland Michener last Friday.

Having accepted the appointment, Michener is expected to take up the reigns of the largely ceremonial office, which dates from before 1870, upon the termination of his term as Governor-General on November 30.

Michener will be replacing retiring Chancellor Dr. John B. Stirling who has held the position for the past thirteen years. Stirling's devotion to the university has been great - ample evidence of this was shown by his acceptance of an additonal one-year term beyond his scheduled retirement.

Before being appointed Governor-General, Michener was a Toronto lawyer with the firm of Lang and Michener. In addition he is a one term veteran of the Ontario legislature and served two terms in the federal House of Commons. He was speaker of the House from 1957-58.

Michener held the post of High Commissioner to India from 1964-67. He also chaired the Manitoba Royal Commission of Local Government and Finance. Michener's business interests have included the directorship of several mining and financial companies.

A former governor of the University of Toronto, he holds honourary degrees from thirteen Canadian universities, including an LLD from Queen's (1958). He is a graduate of the University of Alberta and Oxford University in England.

Michener has also received many other honours, including a membership in the Order of Canada, the Toronto Academy of Medicine, the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons, Trinity College, and has received Honourary Fellowships at Oxford University. He is an honourary member of the Canadian Medical Association and the Law Society of Upper Canada.

The Chancellor is one of the three top personnages in the iconography of Queen's, the other two being the Principal and the Rector. The Chancellor attends all formal events and is the key figure in the conferring of undergraduate and graduate degrees. As a member of the Board of Trustees, the Chancellor is also given the opportunity to take more than a ceremonial interest in the university.

Queen's again an exception to downward enrolment trend

Principal John J. Deutsch told the University Council at it's meeting on Friday that Queen's should meet its enrolment projections for next year. Early indications from the Ontario Universities Applications Centre at Guelph show that Queen's could once again be one of the few universities in the province to escape enrolment slowdowns. He also felt that some of the trends experienced within the university faculties and schools last year should continue into the new session.

Deutsch indicated that once again there should be a strong shift towards the life and natural sciences and away from general arts. He felt, in particular, that the Department of Sociology, whose enrolment rapidly increased in the late sixties, would experinece a decline in the number of students enrolling in its courses.

In addition, he indicated that it appears that the general decline in the number of students entering Applied Science which also began this year should continue next year. He blamed the phenomenon on the presently poor job situation for Applied Science grads.

Deutsch announced that more than 2,000 applications were received for the meagre 145 openings in first year Law and that the demand for entry into Medicine was still very large. Business enrolment he termed "high and rising."

The Faculty of Education he stated is aiming at an all time high enrolment of 750 and he added "we expect to make it."

Despite trends in some faculties, he was optimistic that the slack would be taken up by others so that overall targets would be reached on schedule and he added, "we are planning our finances accordingly".

His comments reflected a certain apprehension, however, as he outlined some of the provinces' universities' over-zealous recruiting practices. Where Queen's has been the institution with the highest number of scholarships for its applicants in the past, he noted that other universities have now surpassed it. One university to which he took exception was the University of Toronto which is offering scholarships for the full amount of the tuition to all applicants with an average of over eighty per cent. If this sort of activity continues to develop over the summer, he noted, Queen's could lose a large number of its applicants to other universities.

Queen's Journal

Volume One Hundred, No. 55

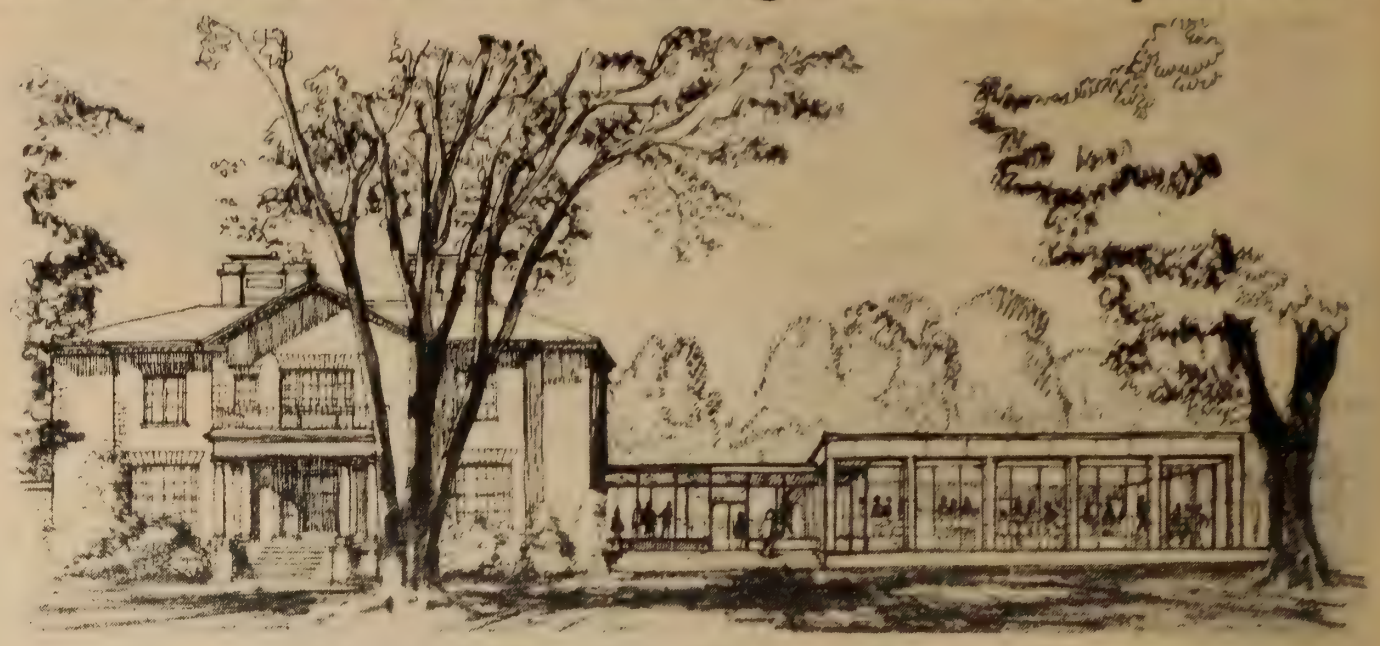
Thursday, June 7, 1973

Donald Gordon Centre for Continuing Education planned

Queen's University recently announced the establishment of the Donald Gordon Centre for Continuing Education.

The idea for the Donald Gordon Centre for Continuing Education came out of a number of discussions among friends and admirers of Donald Gordon who were anxious to commemorate him in some appropriate way.

During his lifetime, Donald Gordon made an unique and outstanding contribution to Canadian public affairs. He was also involved in a long association with Queen's University., which began when he enrolled in correspondence courses given by the University in cooperation with the Canadian Banker's Association. He graduated as a Fellow of the association in June 1922. Twenty-five years later his alma mater conferred on him an honorary LL.D. in recognition of his accomplishments as chairman of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. In 1951 he was elected to the University's Board of Trustees. In 1964 he was appointed to the Executive Committee and later to the Finance Committee. He served Queen's as a Board member for eighteen consecutive years. He died in May, 1969.



There is widespread agreement among Canadians that continuing and part-time adult study will be a rapidly expanding sector of education in the years ahead. The Commission on Post Secondary Education pointed ut the increasing demand for continuing education of all kinds, not simply work for credit towards a degree.

At Queen's space has not been available on a twelve month basis for adult courses, and thus the establishment of the Donald Gordon Centre adjacent to the campus will provide suitable facilities for a wide variety of year-round specially designed courses lasting from a few days to several months.

The core of these facilities will be the old and historic home, Roselawn, located at the corner of Union and College Streets. Two new structures will be architecturally integrated with the main house.

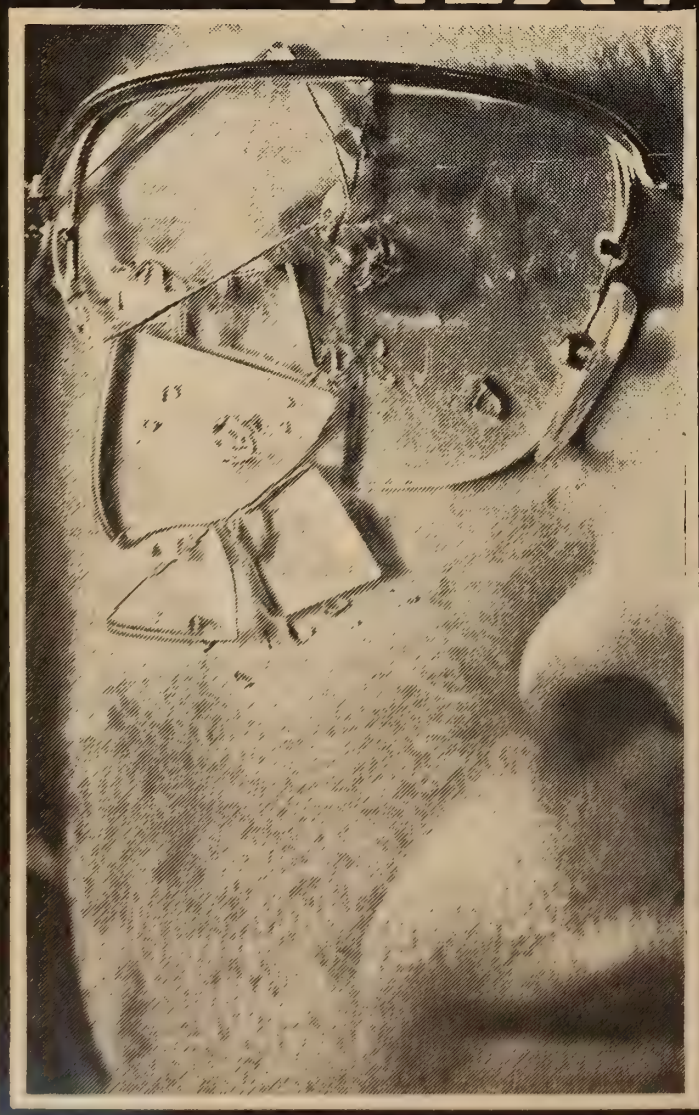
To make the project viable, it is necessary to obtain $400,000. This is the amount which the "Friends of Donald Gordon" propose to raise to finance the centre.

The opening of the Donald Gordon Centre for Continuing Education is scheduled for the fall of 1974.

THE DONALD GORDON CENTRE FOR CONTINUING EDUCATION

unclassifieds

LOST: in front of, or in, Queen's Mining Building, tan leather attache case with initials "RB" and full name and address on tag. Reward offered. Phone 542-4364 after 1 p.m.



FOR SALE: Ideal for formals or bridesmaid's wear, one lilac dress, excellent condition, worn once, $50.00 or best offer. Also one Lady Kenmore Mist hair setter, excellent condition. Phone 549-1205 and ask for Holly.

DEADLINE FOR CLASSIFIEDS: is Tuesday at 7 p.m. and no later. The $1 must accompany the classified.

RUMOUR HAS IT that S.N. is a devoted fan and great friend of Boobbsie, the white negress (whose talent and personality she strives to emulate at all times).

SANDY, does that make it even? Korn.

NEXT TUESDAY

'STRAW DOGS'

DUSTIN HOFFMAN

Dunning Auditorium

Tuesday, June 12, 7 and 9.15

admission: $1.50

SUMMER CINEMA

St James Anglican Church

Sunday June 10

9:00 A.M. — Holy Communion
11:00 A.M. — Rite of Confirmation and Holy Communion

No Evening Service

CLOVER LEAF HEALTH FOODS

490 Princess Street

16 Years Experience in Selling Health Foods

Everything in flours, powders, juices, oils, honey, peanut butter, herbs for tea, seeds, whole grains, beverages, nuts, Loma Linda Products, & all capsules & tablets from Vitamin A to Wheat Germ.

CANADA MANPOWER Centre For Students

NOW OPEN

FEDERAL BUILDING
(above Post Office)
BAGOT ST. ENTRANCE
RM. 241

PHONE:
546-4204
546-4205

HOURS:
8:30 - 5:00

Pizza Chalet

286 MONTREAL ST. KINGSTON

544-1227

OPEN MON. TUES WED. 4:00 p.m. to 1:00 a.m.
OPEN ALL DAY SUNDAY 12 — 12
OPEN THURS. FRI. SAT. 4:00 p.m. to 2:00 a.m.

Chalet Deluxe EXTRA LARGE — Pepperoni- Mushrooms- Bacon Sausage- Green Peppers- Olive Cheese- Tomato Sauce — $5.50
BIGGEST PIZZA YOU'VE EVER SEEN!

SELECTION WITH CHEESE & TOMATO SAUCE	11" REG	13" MED	15" LGE	SUPER 17" X-LGE
1. Pepperoni-Mushrooms-Bacon-Green Peppers Sausages-Olive	2.50	3.65	4.55	5.50
2. Pepperoni-Mushrooms	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
3. Pepperoni-Bacon	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
4. Mushrooms-Bacon	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
5. Combination Pizza Pepperoni-Mushrooms Green Peppers-Olives	2.40	2.95	3.95	4.95
6. Bacon	1.85	2.60	3.65	4.65
7. Pepperoni	1.85	2.60	3.65	4.65
8. Cheese	1.75	2.40	2.95	3.90
9. Mushrooms	1.85	2.60	3.65	4.65

Combination Special — Pepperoni- Olive Mushrooms- Green Peppers — $3.95
A LARGE PIZZA SURE TO PLEASE

Rotha L. Groom

Queen's student, Miss Rotha L. Groom, died in a car accident near North Bay, Ontario, on Sunday, June 3rd. She was 22.

Miss Groom, a Kingston resident, was a member of Nursing '73 and was planning to graduate this fall. Described as "friendly and outgoing", she represented Nursing Science students on the AMS Outer Council in 1971-72.

The funeral was held yesterday.

Nursing Science students have established a bursary fund in her name. It is their hope that the fund will provide financial assistance to nursing students who otherwise could not continue their education. Persons wishing information about the Rotha L. Groom fund, are asked to contact Francis Rancier, 98 Livingston Ave., Kingston.

Dr. Donald Gow, the director of the School of Public Administration, died last Saturday of a heart attack.

University accepts 55

Fifty-five applicants have been accepted for under-graduate studies under the special admissions project to be initiated this fall. The project admits students to university who would not normally meet admission requirements.

Principal John J. Deutsch told the University Council at their Friday meeting that the project proved an unqualified success.

Students accepted under the experiment are between the ages of eighteen and twenty-one who haven't completed their high school education.

Over 230 applications were received and were later screened to eliminate all but beighty. Each student was then asked to submit some work in an area of interest to them. Deutsch stated that this method of evaluating the applicants proved most successful and some of the submissions he even termed exceptional.

Deutsch stated that the procedure of testing the special applicants could be a step forward in developing a new concept of evaluating all university applicants, overcoming the great diversity of the present high school grading systems.

Job Bank

Employment figures up

"At this time, we are ahead of last year's figure", commented Job Bank co-ordinator Al Coxwell referring to the number of job placements the organization has made this summer.

Coxwell reported that of the 1100 students that have filed applications, 400 have been found jobs. One quarter of those have obtained full-time summer employment. "We are fairly pleased with the way things are going," he added.

Job Bank recently has been affected by AMS summer financial cutbacks. The original $1750 which the AMS pledged to the employment project, has been cut by $250. An additional amount of $375, granted last year by the Ontario government programme, Youth-in-Action was not obtained this year. "In light of the revised Job Bank budget and if no additional source of financial assistance is found, Job Bank will be closing on July 20," Coxwell said. The coordinators had hoped to remain open until the first week in August for the benefit of those summer school students who would be looking for part-time employment.

Coxwell stressed the importance for applicants to requently drop in to the Job Bank office, located in the Career Planning and Placement office. "The Bank needs a continuous flow of students," he noted. The phone number for prospective employers to call is 547-3241 and for job-seekers, 547-5581.

- merrithew

Donna Hacket and Alan Coxwell, coordinators of Job Bank, who are shown here working in their office in the Career Planning and Placement Building have found employment for 400 of the 1100 applicants on file.

LADIES ELECTROLYSIS
Avoid shaving, tweezing, or the use of dipilatories. Have your eyebrows styled and unwanted hair removed permanently by electrolysis. Physicians recommend our work. For a free consultation and information call:
HARRISON SALON 542-5595

The Graduate Student Society requires one or two honest, upstanding, etc., persons to take over the position of TGIF Manager as of July 1, 1973 (for 1 year more or less.)
for information, call
Bob Malloney
at 547-3198 or 542-9914

GREAT STEAKS
try the
Porterhouse Special
10 oz RED BRAND aged beef
Baked Potatoe - Vegetable
Rolls and Butter
Limited Offer 3.99 Red Brand Beef Only
For $1.40 more you get Soup or Juice - Tossed Fancy Salad (Best salad in town) Beverage and choice of Desert.

Aunt Lucy's Restaurant Tavern
Princess West at Portsmouth
No reservations
Relaxed Informal Dining
Great Place For That Special Date!

EVERY DIAMOND IS DIFFERENT
AND WE KNOW THE DIFFERENCE

Differences in quality make one stone worth more than another. Delicate gradations of color, almost invisible imperfections sometimes present, accuracy of cut are of utmost importance in the value of a diamond. You can depend on us to explain these differences to you when you choose your diamond.

KINNEAR D'ESTERRE
JEWELLERS
168 PRINCESS STREET
KINGSTON, ONTARIO

The Learned Society Conference

An interaction of ideas and philosophies

One of the major events being hosted by Queen's in this Tercentenary year is the Learned Societies Conference '73, which has drawn thousands of members to Kingston.

An annual gathering of national and international interest the purpose of the conference is to facilitate scholarly discussion and the exchange of information among the 49 member societies from the humanities and social sciences. Over the past week, (and until June 10) some of the major associations of Canadian scholars have been meeting for lectures, debates, banquets and socializing. Interaction has been on many levels from extremely specialized to general mingling and exchange of ideas.

Senator Alistar Grosart with Dean Uffen (centre) of the Engineering Department, and Dr. John Deutsch; he spoke on 'Canada's Case for the Future'.

Some of the papers given were of little interest to the layman, others seemed redundant, most had far-reaching implications for the average and professional Canadian alike. The Conference served to bring innovators, reactionaries, conservatives and observers together on topics of mutual concern. Just by watching and listening to a few of the discussions, it was quite evident that every meeting planted questions and ideas in minds which would in turn spread them across the many intellectual circles in Canada and other countries.

The names and associations are too numerous to mention but among them were university, business and industry, government and private participants. At least one observer came from Moscow, Russia, a woman here on an exchange programme with the Economics Association.

Education, social change, politics and government, Canadian issues, legal and business issues and research, were some of the general subjects tackled by the conference members. Topics ranged from vague topics such as "Where are English Studies Going?" and "Social Change" to "The Arts and Nationalism in Canada" to more utility-oriented matters such as "Measuring the Quality of Collective Bargaining" and "Computers and the Humanities".

Highlighted in the past week were the Canadian Association of Administrative Sciences and The Canadian Economics Association, and the Association of Canadian Law Teachers. Papers and workshops in these areas were of universal and significant interest to the public and society as a whole.

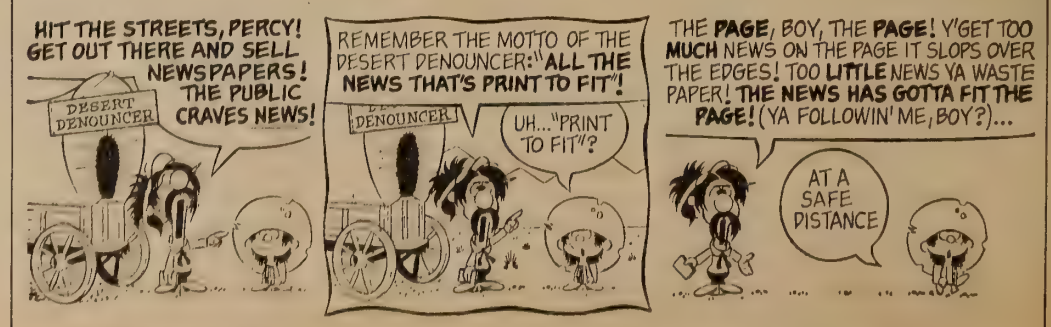
The Administrative Sciences sessions centered on decision-making and relevancy, consumerism and advertising, and government and business co-operation.

One of the seminars in this area, "Decision Centres-An Aid to Develop Management Information Systems" given by F. Zabransky, University of Western Ontario, focused on the study and analysis of information

Aside from lectures

Away from the lecture theatres, there were many sidelines such as the daily Principal's Reception for the various associations, the Beer Garden set up outside of Victoria Hall, the large Book Publishers' display in Leonard Hall, sightseeing tours of historical Kingston and area, and of course the nightly Festival of Arts.

Victoria Hall was transformed into a huge organizational centre while Elrond was filled to capacity with many who found their stay a very interesting and stimulating experience.



Each association had an itinerary of special functions, including several large banquets with guest speakers. The Administrative Sciences members heard Senator Alistar Grosart, P.C., in place of Hon. Maurice LaMontagne, on "Canada's Case for the Future".

During the day the Beer Garden was popular with delegates and their wives. Also for the wives of delegates arrangements had been made for social gatherings at homes of local professors. All were encouraged to take part in the tours of the area; one such tour went to Prince Edward County and Lennox and Addington, while City tours took in the many immediate historical sites and monuments reminiscent of the days being celebrated by Tercentenary.

On campus, the large Book Publishers' Display in Leonard Hall drew continuous traffic to view the special collection of Canadian publications. A display on "Criminology" was set up in MacDonald Law Library and other buildings were open for general interest.

The highlight was the opening of Heritage Kingston at Agnes Etherington to coincide with the Conference.

Journalweeds

...bringing divergent members of society together...

within a firm. The central issues of management and the major implications of information systems in our society today provided the implicit and explicit bases for discussion and pointed out those factors which provided general themes for similar and related sessions; they also pointed out probably the most important element of our society today, one which is almost a foreign dimension for the average citizen, but one which regulates his life directly and indirectly. However, narrow or superficial the discussion of "participative management", "group decision-making", "dynamic system" or "built-in flexibility" might have seemed, the direction inevitably drifted to practical and social application and feasibility.

The simple identification of centres of decision-making within a firm, the intensive collection of relevant information for decisions and determination interaction flows in Production and Planning, has implications for other departments of the corporate model, (personnel, plant and inventory control) and brings together different people of different decision areas, while increasing accountability. As cold and isolated as these matters appear to the layman, when the final question of a new approach is faced - to redesign or replace a system - the actual issue involves the matter of "progress" itself - what it is and why.

Throughout the course of the administrative sciences programmes flowed specific themes encompassing the general interests of the businessmen, consumer and the government. Perhaps quite obvious in this approach was a seminar dealing with Advertising and Consumer Information. Several educators and researchers from the University of Guelph presented papers on product information in the consumer and in the market place. The title of one paper by F.H.C. Edgecombe stated the Central Problem: "The Consumer and the Better Mousetrap, or, In Beating a Path to the Manufacturer's door does the Consumer Merely Go Further Into the Woods".

The entire series dealt with the basic problems that exist in the business-consumer-government environment today. These were definition of interests, application of functional programmes and dissemination of information. Despite any differences that the members had, all seemed agreed on mutual responsibility and accountability.

These themes were carried on in part by the Economics association with seminars such as "Consumers' Attitudes in Economic Forecasting" alongside more technically oriented sessions like "A Monetarist Model of Canadian Capital Movements." If only to serve as a guideline or index to the subject matter and issues confronted by this national body, these titles are indicators of the mainstreams of thought. Canadianism played a significant role whether it was a discussion of "The Canadian Fallacy" or a panel on "Canadian Resources Policy" with Dr. John Deutsch in the chair and Eric Kierans in the hot-seat.

Attacking currently popular issues seemed to be the order of the agenda, as the Association of Canadian Law Teachers struggled with the problem of Commercial Law in Ontario and Credit Reporting Agencies, specifically the controversial Bill 101 and subsections thereof.

The personalities involved here perhaps best stated and represented the various approaches to our capitalistic, market-place society. Mr. W.L.N. Somerville, Q.C. of a Toronto law firm, confronted Professor Jacob Ziegel, of Osgoode Law School, York University over the Bill 101, designed to protect the individual citizen's privacy and rights of personal information, and define the ground rules for information gathering and dissemination. It was here that the climate of the times and intellectual moods and streams were treated with greatest honesty and explicitness.

Mr. Somerville, attempting to explain the current issue of Bill 101, vehemently stated his feelings, and in doing so inadvertently synthesized the social context of the whole Conference and the implications of the specific issues. He suggested that perspectives had been "badly distorted by a general paranoia all around in the air". To him "the interest of the consumer is identical with the interest of one who pays for the credit report". There exists mutual benefit and responsibility. He regards Bill 101 as a pilot project in getting to "understand how we get bigger and bigger government".

Professor Ziegler rebuked Somerville's support of the position of the Credit agencies, and pointed out the inconsistency between their argument that reporting companies welcome such legislation, and the lack of suggestions of how it is to be enforced without regulatory machinery. With reference to a model bill in Manitoba, Ziegler echoed the problems of legislators "I think that is an instance where the ideal is excellent, but not practical".

On the real question of whether or not confidentiality should be spread, it was interesting to note Ziegler's opinion that "I think if there is opposition, it is middle-class".

The various seminars, although under the auspices of different organizations, all underscored many pressing issues in the political, social and economic climate of today. At the heart of the differences in approaches would appear to be differences in philosophies of progress in society, business in society, and government in society. Models were presented in all areas of analysis, whether technical or theoretical, which inherently held the key ideas being proposed, discussed, rejected or accepted. The major continuous themes represented the concern with the dynamic process of our society.

Left to right: Members of debate on disclosure legislation: W. L. N. Somerville, Q.C., Prof. Jacob Ziegel, Osgoode Hall, and Prof. D. Cuming, U. of B.C. (chairman).

Upcoming highlights

Thursday, June 7

Zero Population Growth by Auerlio Peccei at 8:30 p.m. in Jeffrey 127.
Social History of Kingston at 9:00 a.m. in Kingston Hall, room 201.
The Status of Women in Canada with Micheline Dumont-Johnson, University of Sherbrooke, at 11 a.m. Kingston Hall, room 201.
The Scottish Tradition at Queen's University at 2:30 p.m. Stirling Hall, Theatre B.

Friday, June 8

Canadian Music Centre with Keith MacMillan, 4:30 p.m. t.b.a.
Europe in China at 9 a.m., Kingston Hall Room 204.
Demography and Society in Quebec, 9 a.m. Kingston Hall Room 101.
Canadian Nationalism: A Step Up to World Citizenship . . . with Hon. Warren Allmand, MP, and Mel Hurtig, 2 p.m. Jeffery Hall Room 128.

Saturday, June 9

Witch Hunting in History, 11 a.m. in Kingston Hall, room 101
Vietnam after War with Clare Culhane, 11 a.m. Jeffery Hall room 128
The Cultural Differences in International Business Relations, 3 p.m. t.b.a.

Sunday, June 10

Some Reflections on Science and Government in 19th Century Canada, 9:40 a.m. Sterling Hall, Room 412C
Technological Challenge and Intellectual Response - 10 a.m. Sterling Hall Rm. 412C

Mordecai Richler on

Cdn. writers' problems

On Wednesday, May 30 in Dunning Hall Canadian novelist Mordecai Richler spoke about some of the problems encountered by Canadian writers.

After giving a personal history of writing in Canada he said that many writers including himself had left the country to work in other places with new influences. Richler himself has spent nearly twenty years in London and in one of his most recent books, St. Urbain's Horseman, he uses both the Canadian and the English landscapes to set his story.

He explained that writers often left Canada because it was like "leaving the farm to go to the city," and that as he put it, "almost anyone could make it in Canada."

On the existing writing of Canadians he made a simple distinction between work that is accepted nationally and that which is accepted internationally.

He cited as an example of this discrepancy, Pierre Berton's book on the C.P.R. which is exclusively of national interest and has little scope outside the country. He also added that many writers take advantage of patriotic themes and easy publishing to become well known in Canada while remaining unknown elsewhere.

According to Richler Canadian writers have a particular problem in that they do not have the language shelter that writers from non-English speaking countries have. We must compete with American, and British writers as well as others from English speaking countries.

Perhaps his overall philosophy can be summed up in this one comment. "We want to be read because we have something new and important to say about the human condition or we do not want to read at all."

TOM'S SHOE REPAIR
Shoe Service
186 Wellington
George the Hatter
leathercoats and all leatherwork repaired
546-5193

Queen's Journal
Vol. 100, No. 55
Thurs., June 7, 1973
Queen's University at Kingston, Ontario.

Interim Staff: Robert Wood, Susan de Stein, Charles Schwier, Sandy Naiman, Leona Perry, Bob Mutrie, Chris Brown, John Solman, Alison Dandie.

Published once weekly on Thursdays during the summer by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc., Member Canadian University Press. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society of the University. Offices are located in the Student's Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

Conference on women has all the answers

Do women have a place in the university? It sounds like a lead found in the Journals of the early nineteen hundreds, but, what about today? Is there still a problem? This was the question that delegations from twenty-five Canadian universities came to discuss in a three-day conference at Queen's last week, and it was almost universally agreed that discrimination against the female sex still exists at many levels.

The Second National Conference on Women in the University heard presentations on Women's Action Groups, progress made in the fields of curriculum and committees on the Status of Women and on the formation of Women's liberation groups.

The entire social structure and especially the role of women within it was brought under strict scrutiny by speakers and seminar sessions which covered such diverse topics as Feminism as a Philosophy and The Politics of Daycare.

The latter two topics were discussed on Thursday in group seminar sessions followed by an introductory paper on women's studies given by Greta Nemiroff, a professor at Vanier college. Her views of the subject were pessimistic to say the least:

"Most courses are individual departmental tokens or sops thrown to women. Often you will find topics like "Women's literature for the past five thousand years. One term."

Those who refer to women's studies as "that women's lib course" are like those who refer to a course on some 16th century African tribe as "that Black panther course."

Gail Stewart, a former member of the Economic Council of Canada, and a Queen's graduate blasted the social system and called for a "Declaration of Interdependence as a step forward in curing societies ills. Secondly she insisted on the rationalization of Canada's governing and business institutions towards those it is intended to serve.

"We are increasingly being measured by and forced to march to the mechanical clock - time rhythms of our dominant institutions. And in some perverse way ..... we are being called upon to support and serve our institutions rather than having our institutions support and serve us."

The factory concept of life, she continued, gives us "licence to manipulate, coerce and threaten each other, to rape our natural environment in the pursuit of abstract things."

At the business meeting to follow, the delegates did some soul searching and established a set of concrete resolutions towards their goal of ending discriminations in universities on the basis of sex. The group passed a motion recommending that all increases in operating budgets and all research funds be withheld from universities which discriminate and that the burden of proof be on the university. A national co-ordinator was appointed to supervise the implementation of the motion and a representative from each province was appointed to take charge of organizing a pressure group which would present the resolution to the ministers of Labour and of Colleges and Universities.

On Friday the Status of Women Committee Seminar discussed its own objectives. One of the panelists was Aline Gregory, a spokeswoman for the National Action Committee on the Status of Women. One of the major and immediate needs for women which she outlined was a fifty per cent representation on all decision-making boards and committees in Canada and more involvement at the municipal level.

She suggested that such participation might result in such changes as safer parks, sidewalks made to facilitate baby carriages, equal ice skating time at recreation centres for little girls as well as little boys, and so on.

Another panel speaker was Esther Greenglass of the Ontario Federation of Faculty Associations who called for greater mobility of women through university acceptance of their differing lifestyles. She asked whether any man had ever to forego attending a professional meeting because he had to stay home and take care of the children, and added that women do.

Third panelist was Sister Catherine Wallace, vice-president of the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada called for true early childhood centres and not "babysitting agencies".

unclassifieds

PL -- Having fun writing about fee strike. How about you? PS - I didn't do page 6.

JEN, we miss you. HHHEEEEEELLPPPPPPPPP PPPPP!!!!!! P.S. We are doing fine. An envelope is on its way. Be good.

JEN -- not as well as they think. Chas.

WHAT WAS THE QUESTION and what is the answer?

Swingers prefer Golden.
Try it anyhow.

Molson Golden
A good smooth ale
Do you know what you're missing?

WARNING: The Department of National Health and Welfare advises that danger to health increases with amount smoked

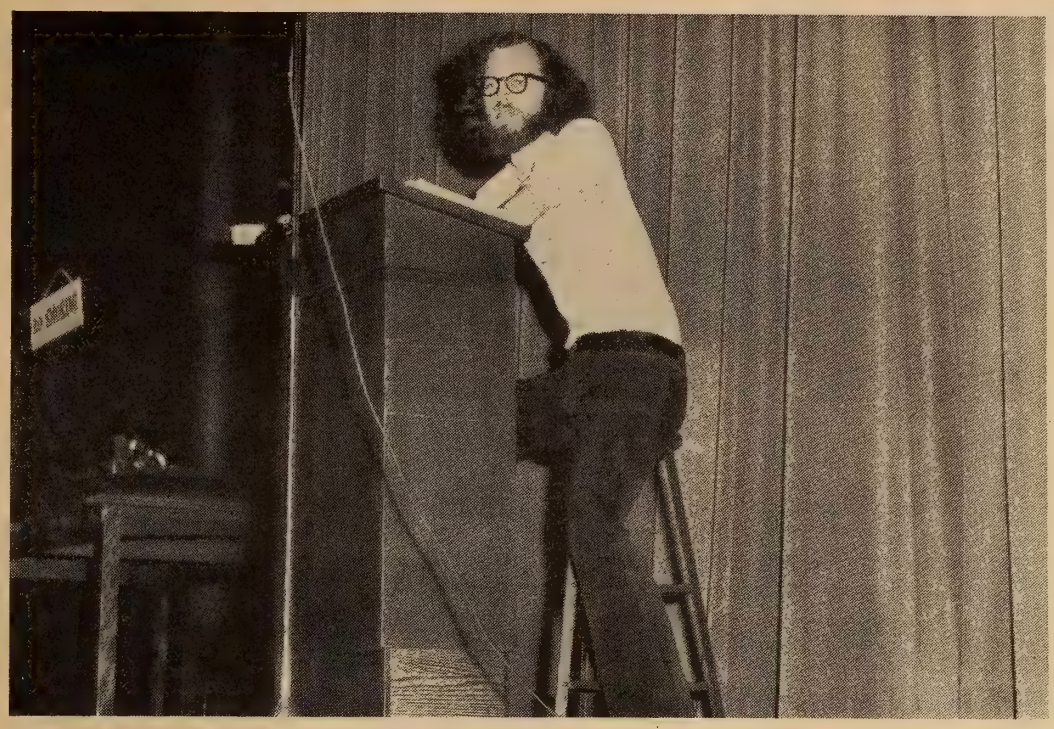
GREAT STEAKS
try the
Porterhouse Special
10 oz RED BRAND aged beef
Baked Potatoe - Vegetable
Rolls and Butter
Limited Offer 3.99 Red Brand Beef Only
For $1.40 more you get Soup or Juice - Tossed Fancy Salad (Best salad in town) Beverage and choice of Desert.

Aunt Lucy's Restaurant Tavern
Princess West at Portsmouth
No reservations
Relaxed Informal Dining
Great Place For That Special Date!

Learned Societies Evening Arts Festival

Critic's Forum: Poetry of Helwig, Marshall, Purdy--

by Allison Dandie



The mood of last Friday night's poetry reading was not cast by the usual intimacy of Agnes Etherington's cushion-on-the-floor style. The event was one in a series of programmes presented in the Evening Arts Festival for the Conference of Learned Societies and Royal Society of Canada.

Three Canadian poets, Tom Marshall, David Helwig, and Al Purdy hushed a crowd of more than a hundred people in Convocation Hall as they read candidly from their own collections of poetry. All three poets succeeded in very different and personal ways in drawing a responsive and spontaneous audience out of and away from the somewhat structured setting.

Tom Marshall opened the readings and delivered his poetry in a soothing, gentle voice which enhanced the sentimental canopy which hung over many of his poems. In interpreting his last few poems Marshall saw them as relating the strangeness of absence. The last poem which he read, The Lamb, was haunting in its intensity and sincerity and Marshall left the stage with the audience striving to capture an emotion rather than a meaning, striving to appreciate a well-expressed experience. Tom Marshall is a professor at Queen's who is best known for his collections of poems including The Silences of Fire and Magic Water, and his two critical works A.M. Klein and Psychic Mariner; a reading of the poems of D.H. Lawrence.

David Helwig, also a professor at Queen's, read two long poems. Helwig is known for his three published books of poetry, Figures in a Landscape, The Sign of the Gunman, and The Best Name of Silence, as well as a book of stories, The Streets of Summer, a novel about espionage, The Day Before Tomorrow, and a criminal documentary, A Book About Billie. Both poems which he presented, Atlantic Crossing and Columbus in Jamaica, remained overwhelmingly vital throughout. The poet's dynamic presentation as well as his striking and magnetic use of words inspired the desire to delve into a complex network of images of "rats, blood, teeth and sharks."

The final poet, Al Purdy, a very well known Canadian poet who received the Governor General's award in 1965 for his collection The Caribou Horses, presented his poetry in rolled up shirt sleeves, with a strong face, drowsy voice and refreshing realism. Purdy lightened the seriousness which he felt was pervading the evening. His first poem Home Made Beer was about the kid next door and his own wife who brooded in the closet for weeks over the misfortunes of being a woman. He continued with a variety of short poems including one which was an excerpt from a paper which he had read in South Africa. Purdy tempered the intensity of the previous poetry with humour and his own poems mingled the frivolous with the serious leaving us both spirited and pensive to find our own meanings.

Poet David Helwig joined Tom Marshall and Al Purdy in a poetry reading in Convocation Hall, last week.

Another Look

by Sandy Naiman

The poetry reading given by Tom Marshall, Al Purdy and David Helwig last Friday evening was an interesting mixture of dynamic realism and ethereal sentimentality.

Beginning with Tom Marshall, who unfortunately did very little justice to his own work, the evening got off to a very slow start. Mr. Marshall read poems about his travels in Greece, and in Definitions of Paradise his words spoke of the merging of the beauty of artifacts with the natural surroundings. Initially Mr. Marshall read with sensitivity but his voice soon fell into a monotonous rhythmic pattern, almost too timid for the delicacy of his verse. Nevertheless, with the finale of his reading, a poem about a young woman who he had known, and loved in London, a young woman who had died, of an incurable disease, his reading reached its height.

Here, mixed with the same timidity and with a new sense of involvement, of acquaintance and of stark emotion the poetry achieved a living and breathing vitality. Here Marshall came alive and the presentation was enlivened as well.

David Helwig's presentation of two long poems from a tetrology not yet published was the most impressive of the evening.

He blended a strong dramatic rhythmic voice with a passionate interest in his work, and a pulsating lyricism running through his verse.

The first, entitled Atlantic Crossing was a blatant physical attack upon the sensibilities. He writes with a sensuous fervour, with a fascinating and evocative style that invites further investigation. The second piece, anticlimactic by comparison is called Columbus in Jamaica. It was somehow more like a journal of thoughts and events rather than the emotive assault of the first piece.

Not much can be said about Al Purdy, who is more a personality than a poet and who effected a stylish swagger more than a lyrical style. His reading was very relaxed, down to earth and easy. However, his enuniciation was not as clear as it might have been and his material, although tremendously varied, from comic to strangely classical somehow did not have the impact of Helwig's or even the sensitivity of Marshall's.

Valery Watts: Superlative Performance!

by Michael J. Hodgson

Few classical recitals at Queen's earn standing ovations and bravos, but a packed house gave Valery Watts a thunderous ovation after her piano recital in Dunning Hall on Sunday June 3rd. It was well deserved.

Mrs. Watts played an enormous and demanding program all but note-perfectly. Her technique was both sure and impressive, whether it was in the Schubert "impromptu" op. 90 no. 2, where the melody was scintillating above a playful left-hand, or in the Liszt "Richordanza" etude, where the ornaments shimmered and the octaves were flung off nonchalantly. In the poignant melody of the Liszt, and also in the bleak "Le Givet" of Ravel, her tone was full and beautiful. Her playing throughout was meticulously clean.

To mention first her more successful interpretations, I felt the Morawetz "Toccata" (1956) was well paced, with climaxes pulled back quickly to create a relentless and increasing drama. The "le Givet" of Ravel, depicting an "uneasy sound in the dusk", was played with the crystalline purity and classical control one likes in Ravel.

His "Ondine" was technically less secure and less convincing, but it ended with fire sprays or arpeggios.

The two Schubert "Impromptus" op. 90 no. 2 and 3 were particularly satisfying, because they were not sentimentalized as they so often are. Their rather impatient tempi may have neglected some of the detail a more leisurely reading would have found, but more than made up for this in the drama and spirit. Unquestionably, I think, Mrs. Watts' best playing of the evening came in the Liszt "Ricordanza" etude. Liszt is quite regularly I'm afraid, vulgarized at the hands of pianists out to cause a sensation. They flash their techniques at us, pull the tempi and rhythms every which way, and muddle everything with their pedalling. It is a cause for rejoicing that Mrs. Watts avoided these easy sensationalist tricks. Instead she gave us a technically and musically impecable Liszt. The rich cello-like melody was beautifully phrased; the ornaments tinkled with the harp effect Liszt invented; the steady pace and warm tone built of the piece a larger than live drama, far more than the embarrasing "yellowed love letter" Busoni sees in the piece. It was playing both controlled in its climaxes and spontaneous in its playful ornamentation.

Had Mrs. Watts' program consisted only of the works I have mentioned, it would have been a generous program, and my reaction would have been uniformly favourable. However, also included on her program were two major works - the "chromatic Fantasy and Fugue" of Bach, and the Sonata op. 28 of Beethoven, as well as a Chopin group. These pieces did not come off at all well by comparison, though of course all the notes were there.

That, in fact, was one of my objections with these readings. The notes often seemed drilled into my head. The playing was so unvaried, so unceasingly crisp and fastidiously tidy, that very often the listener could feel no continuity, no forward thrust, and very little musical imagination.

Mrs. Watts' interesting program notes say of the Bach piece, "Bach seems to be communicating directly with God, almost as an equal", but her performance seemed a patchwork of the technical "chunks" of the piece as she had practised it. And when she did become expressive, it was in a rather weakly Romantic way. The Beethoven sonata complete with repetitions, was, for this listener, almost irritatingly precious. I notice that Mrs. Watts played this piece at her debut in 1955, so no doubt it is an old friend of hers. But as performed on this evening, it was incredibly lacking in dynamic contrast. In fact, this is something I noticed in all too much of her playing – it all seemed to be mezzo-forte, so that her climaxes fell flat and her subtleties were lost. A wider palette of colours and a wider dynamic range would give her playing much of the musical strength her technical facility demands.

As for her group of Chopin works, the nocturnes op. 15 no. 1 and op. 27 no. 2 and the Ballade op 47, coming at the end of such a long program, they may have suffered from her fatigue. It is to her credit that all the notes were there, but it is to be regretted that her playing was so uncontrasted and shallow.

There is much more to Chopin (as Mrs. Watts of course knows) than ornaments rushed or clipped off, and melodies played over-earnestly or flippantly. It was hard to feel her D-flat nocturne was, as she said, "romantic and sexual", when its theme was given three times at an inhibited mezzo-forte, rather than climaxing grandly as it should, and when her ornaments fidgetted when they should have flowed.

These are, of course, my personal reactions to Valery Watts' playing. The audience as a whole didn't seem to agree. Mrs. Watts is, in any case, a skilled pianist and, when her musical thought is as imaginative as her technical thought, she is an enthralling performer.

Canada:

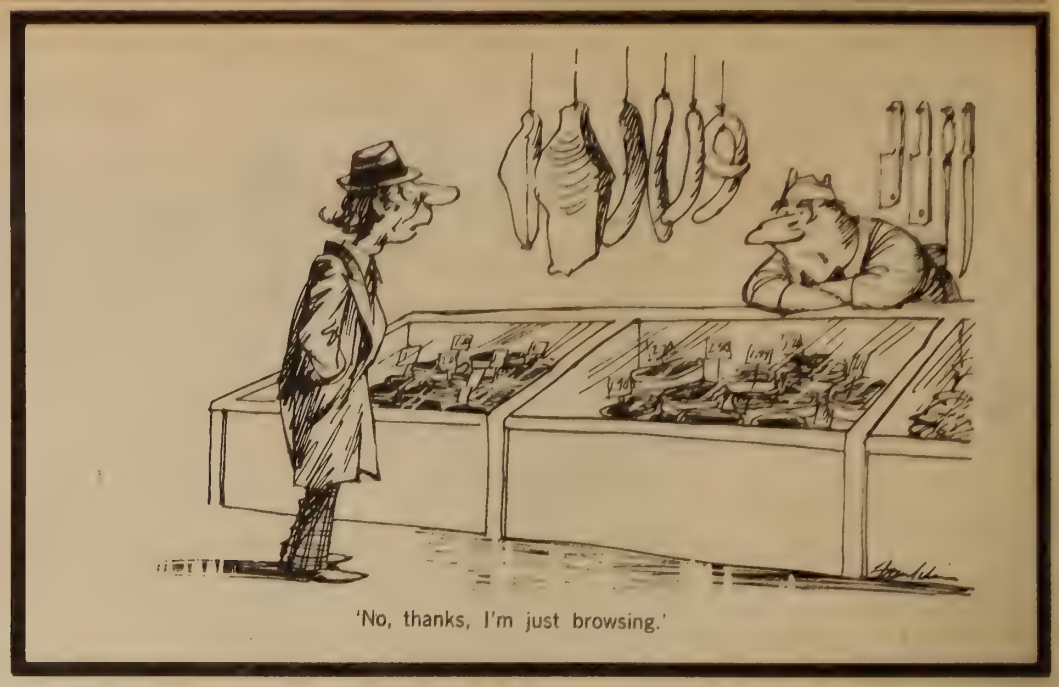
Second vote taken on new hanging bill

Ottawa- The renewal of the partial ban on the death penalty in Canada has managed to advance one step forward with approval in principle being voted to the second reading of the legislation.

The legislation, much the same as its predecessor which expired on December 29, seeks to impose another five year ban on capital punishment with an exception for murderers of on-duty policemen and prison guards.

After a 138 to 114 vote of approval in the Commons, the bill will now go before the Commons justice and legal affairs committee where it will be analysed in detail.

All members of the House were allowed to vote freely on the legislation and there were no party lines to be followed. Most of the party members took advantage of the perogative and only the Socreds voted as a bloc.



Windsor- Stephen Lewis, present leader of the Ontario New Democratic Party has announced that he intends to remain leader until at least 1975. The move effectively ends increasing speculation as to his resignation. For the next while, Lewis stated, he intends to see more of Ontario and less of the Legislature.

Ottawa- The United States may once again have its energy grabbing fingers slapped by the Canadian government as alarm grows as to increasing amounts of gas being exported to the United States to the detriment of Canadians.

Energy Minister Donald MacDonald is investigating a slightly less than fifty percent increase in gasoline exports during the month of April which came after the government imposed restrictions on exports of oil in February. The United States has been battling a toughening energy situation which resulted in a number of blackouts in many states during the winter.

The major reason for the restrictions on oil exports was that Ontario was going to be faced with similar shortages due to the high American demand. Former NDP leader T.C. Douglas stated recently that April exports of gasoline from Ontario alone had risen to eleven times its former levels.

MacDonald stated that he would know by mid-June whether or not a ban would be placed on gasoline exports.

'No, thanks, I'm just browsing.'

Montreal- A twenty-four hour walkout by striking machinists has grounded many Air Canada flights from Montreal and marks the second in a series of rotating strikes since the breakdown of contract negotiations. In Montreal, the planes are being serviced by supervisory personnel in an attempt to keep as many running as possible.

Ottawa- The emphasis will be on informality of dress in federal penitentiaries beginning in August, according to a recent release from the Department of the Solicitor-General. With the exception of guards in outside security, all guards employed by federal penitentiaries will doff their uniforms and dress casually. The new emphasis will be placed on guards as counsellors and informality was given high importance. The desire is to close the gap between inmates and guards.

World:

LA whites boost black candidate into power

LOS ANGELES — This city has chosen to elect its first black mayor in its history and ousted twelve year incumbent mayor Sam Yorty in his favour.

Thomas Bradley, the son of a poor black Texan sharecropper was elected with fifty-five per cent of the vote. The third largest city in the United States follows Cleveland, Ohio, Gary, Inidana, and Newark, New Jersey in electing black mayors. The exception is that while each of the latter cities have large black populations, that of Los Angeles is only 15 per cent.

LONDON — Princess Anne, daughter of Queen Elizabeth II has announced her engagement to Lieutenant Mark Phillips. The statement came as a total surprise and many termed it as one of the best kept royal secrets in years.

Phillips, who will be an instructor at Sandhurst military College with the acting rank of Captain is a commoner with only distant claim to aristocratic relatives. In the tradition started by other marriages of royal daughters in previous years, Phillips will be urged to accept an earldom.

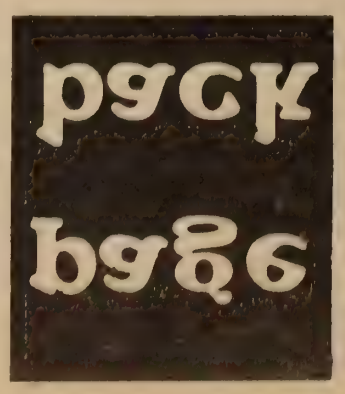
The wedding will take place in mid-November, the first by a British royal personnage in many years.

HOUSTON — In an attempt to make up for lost time during the initial difficulties encountered in the Skylab I mission, space agency officials are discussing the possibility of extending the astronauts' twenty-eight day vacation in space. The astronauts had to spend some time in attempting to dock their launch craft at the space station and then in repairing damages to the craft which occurred during the launching.

They are undertaking experiments in solar-astronomy and earth resources, and have already surpassed the world space time record set by former astronaut James Lovell.

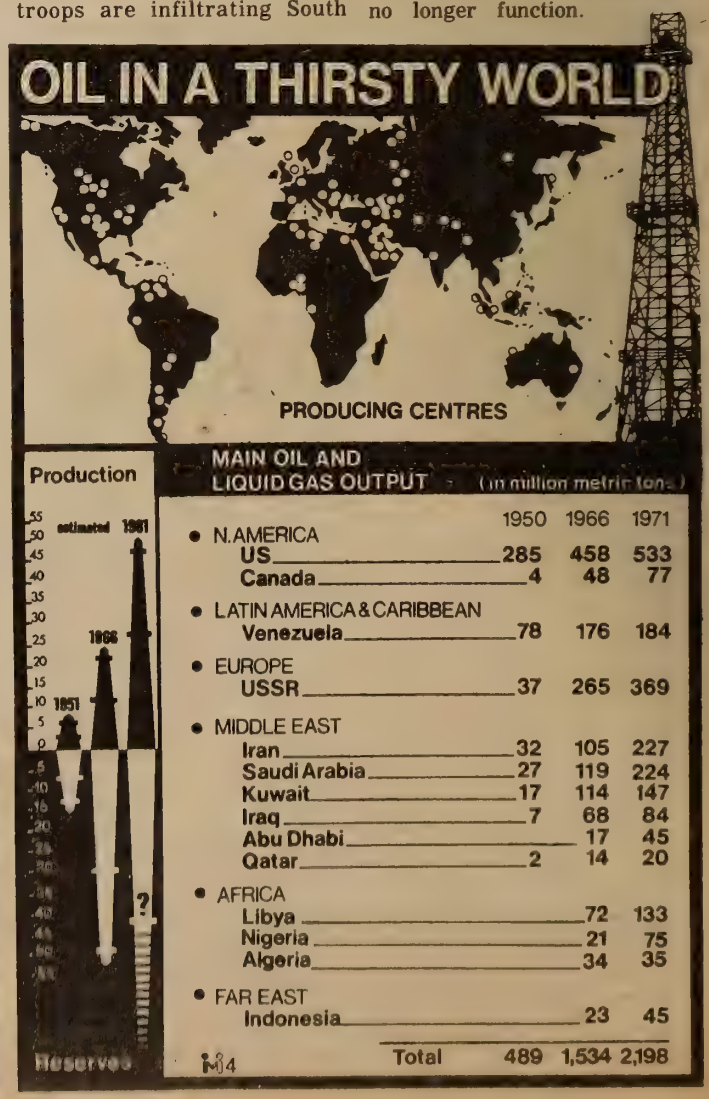
Meanwhile plans are going ahead for Skylab II and III crews, each scheduled for a 56-day stay on the same spacecraft later this year.

LONDON — The price of gold has sneaked up to almost unbelievable heights during the past few months, registering in the neighbourhood of $115 an ounce. It was as low as $65 this time last year.



ATHENS — After a formal announcement by the army-backed, military government that the former King Constantine would be deposed in favour of a presidential republic, Constantine announced that he would not take it lying down.

The government, which took power in a military coup several years ago, has just announced that a new constitution has been formulated and would be presented to the voters for approval. Constantine reacted strongly, claiming that he would fight as a soldier to defend democracy in Greece.



The former king was never popular with the masses but his recent announcement has stirred up some sympathy for his cause. However, government officials have reacted equally as strongly, threatening to cut off his $500,000 a year allowance and to confiscate his vast tracts of land.

BELFAST — Ireland went to the polls last week to elect its first government in many years but the results held few differences from those of the past. Once again the province's two-to-one Protestant majority elected a minority Protestant government. The Protestant Unionist party has won 207 of the 509 seats giving them the largest single block in the legislature. The rest of the seats are distributed among the several Roman Catholic and non-sectarian parties.

The election results were explained in terms of Protestant fears that the new blueprint for peace in Ireland set out by the British parliament is an attempt to sell them out to the overwhelmingly Catholic Irish republic to the south.

SAIGON — The International Commission for Control and Supervision is at a standstill over a serious division on the question of whether North Vietnamese troops are infiltrating South Vietnam. The parties agreed to suspend all regular meetings of the chiefs of the four member delegations which effectively means that the commission can no longer function.

Vandals hit pub

Last Wednesday night at approximately 2 a.m., a cash register was ejected from the second storey window of the Queen's Pub in the Students Union.

Upon investigation, it was revealed that a group of boys had broken into the premises, causing damage to the doors, a liquor cabinet, refrigerator, and eventually, the cash register. A security guard in the vicinity had heard a disturbance, which was in fact the sound of the cash register hitting the cement, and investigated. A boy, 16 years of age, was apprehended at the scene, and charged with breaking and entering, and theft.

As a result of the incident, only bearers of identification cards from post-secondary educational institutions will be admitted to the Pub. The Pub will be featuring live bands every week throughout the summer months. A group of Queen's students, called Anthem, are being featured tonite and tomorrow.

The Pub is also open during noon hour.

AMS constables Bill Mandich and Wil Kranenburg ensure that only persons with suitable identification are admitted to the pub, following the break-in last Wednesday night.

OFS criticizes Wright Report; others, education

TORONTO — Only vague indications are available as of presstime of the scope and complexity of the Ontario Federation of Students reply to the COPSE (Wright) Report which was worked out at a meeting this weekend. The student responses was made known as a three-day seminar on post-secondary education sponsored earlier this week by the Ontario Ministry of Colleges and Universities.

The student position reportedly agrees with the general premise of the Report in that there should be a wide spectrum of educational experiences open to as wide a range of the citizenry as possible. Students did, apparently, disagree with some of its suggestions on financing of education, organization of university government, and student housing.

"Until an equitable social system is achieved by Ontario, few of the recommendations proposed (by the COPSE Report) will serve any constructive purpose," proclaimed the OFS position paper, which went on to criticize the Report for not specifying that the corporate sector (large companies as opposed to small ones) should be taxed at a rate much higher than presently done in order to finance post-secondary education.

The student position is unequivocal in stating that the "failure to deal with more equitable ways of financing" is the basis of its criticism.

Financing has been plaguing OFS since its founding a year ago. Delegates from some universities (mainly, members of the Young Socialists) have been saying the OFS position should be for a complete change in society. They have called for "Tax the corporations -- Stop the cutbacks (in education financing)".

The interaction between these delegates and ones from other, perhaps more conservative campuses, has caused a great deal of friction within the Federation. Recently, however, the Young Socialists have gained more votes at the OFS through campus election victories.

Also at the seminar, a vice-president of Imperial Oil, Ronald Ritchie, proclaimed that the current pattern of education before employment with some on-the-job training is no longer valid. He foresaw "a wide-spread arrangement for provision of educational facilities and opportunities to work" organized on a parallel basis. This, Ritchie thought, would alleviate the alienation and dependency felt by students which is the weakness of the present system.

... ...

J. R. Hartford, public relations officer for the United Auto Workers, told the seminars that citizens want "an end to the fat, waste, ponderosity, puff, triplication, empire building and the like in education ... the little guy is in a rebellion against rising education costs."

He criticized the present system as it tends to just be training "to feed the business economy," and stated that industry should pay more of the costs of education if the present system is continued.

But, warned Hartford, the worker wants education that will prepare the student to cope with the social, moral and cultural problems of society. He lashed out at advertisements and systems "urging students to stay in school because they would earn more money", and at the idea of education being the private domain of the staff and students.

.. ..

Age has nothing to do with learning power, stated Robert Kidd, a researcher at the Ontario Institute of Studies in Education (OISE). He felt a grandfather should be able to learn as much new material as his grandson in university, and generally supported the idea proposed in the COPSE Report for spreading education (and continuing it) over the whole lifespan rather than concentrating it at the young.

... ...

Queen's Principal John Deutsch reiterated the stand he has taken both personally and as a member of COPSE commission, asking for a buffer board between universities and the government. This, he said, would be the best way to protect the public interest and the need for university autonomy.

The need for as much autonomy as possible is due to the particular nature of universities' work in training specialized professionals and its role as a social critic and agents of reform and research, he added.

Queen's
Journal

Volume One Hundred No. 56

Thursday, June 14, 1973

Our mistake

Last week, we ran a story misquoting Queen's Principal John Deutsch as saying that the University of Toronto was offering scholarships for the full amount of tuition to all applicants with an average of over eighty per cent.
U. of T. is not in fact, following this policy.

Brereton, 'unknown'

Among the other problems the AMS has been having, publicity seems to be one of the minor, but more annoying ones.
From a recent mailing by President Steve Brereton to members of the executive, an envelope was returned to the AMS office marked "Unknown, return to sender." The envelope had been addressed to Brereton.

Critic's Forum: Last Tango In Paris

Brilliant Bertolucci!

by Sandy Naiman

Last Tango In Paris has been maligned by the media. Why the controversy? Why the cries of obscenity? Why the sneers? Why the malicious assault?

I cannot understand the preoccupation with the sexual level of the film, which is explicit indeed, when there are so many other levels which give the film its substance and make it perhaps one of the most incisive psychological explorations in a very long time.

The critics who have exploited the sexual facet of Last Tango are ostensibly guilty of the same crime that they accuse Bernardo Bertolucci of, but this sexual level is merely an appendage to the being rather than its soul.

Not surprizingly, when you reveal that you've actually seen Last Tango, the first thing you are asked is "Was it dirty?" On asking, your interrogator's eyes light up, you can almost see the saliva begin to form in his mouth and his pulse quickens. Needless to say, in such a hypothetical conversation the answer must be "No. Unless you think that sex is dirty." The eyes dim, the mouth dries and the pulse slows back to normal.

Bernardo Bertolucci has achieved an almost flawless unity of visual textures, emotional sensibilities and psychological deptsh. The cinematography is drastically simple. Concentrating on lurid interiors, unfamiliar Parisian landscapes and several drabby countryscapes, he draws you into the film. You are not meant to gasp at the splendour of his scenes or the decor of his interiors. The are predominantly coloured golden or grey, like the twilight and dusk of any spring day.

Last Tango delves into the strangely aberrated mind of Paul, a middle aged man whose unfaithful wife has just committed suicide and who is clutching blindly at life, by refusing to uncover himself to anyone. He shuns the revelation of any earmarks of his life or identity to Jeanne, the young nymphet with whom he is having an affair.

Only when he verbally assaults his wife's corpse, flower-laden on the bed they once shared does the veneer fall away. Paul's angry words are nonetheless, a benign attempt to rid himself of the guilt he feels as a result of his wife's suicide.

In another, beautifully improvisational and poignant sequence, Paul reminisces to Jeanne about his childhood on a farm in the States. But aside from these incidents, Brando's portrayal is cold, calculated and highly controlled. Even with this external portrait, we can sense his vulnerability and his dread at allowing it to surface. He can demonstrate with ironic realism his overview of his relationship with Jeanne and his compulsion to degenerate himself at her hands. But the result is not shocking so much as pathetic.

Maria Schneider plays his lover with a strange mixture of trepidation and delight. She revels in the sexual side of this liaison, is intrigued with Paul's age, with his convoluted emotional figurings but is simultaneously frightened by him and frustrated with his refusal to reveal his identity, or to allow her to reveal hers.

While playing in a film, her boyfriend is making Bertolucci shows us gradually why Jeanne is driven back to Paul and Last Tango is as much her portrait as it is his.

We get sequences of Jeanne reading notes from her childhood diaries juxtaposed onto scenes in which Paul stifles her attempts to share her past with him.

We get sequences showing Jeanne's boyfriend filming her life story juxtaposed onto scenes showing her real life encounters with Paul.

We see her rooting through the remnants of her father's past, fingering his revolver, trying on his army cap.

We see Paul with his wife's distraught mother, retracing his steps through the bathroom which his wife blood spattered in her death, in a confrontation with his wife's lover.Bertolucci's conception is delicate and dynamic. He justaposes anti-erotic images onto incisive psychological exploratives.

The film could be seen as an attempt to desensitize human emotions and sexual experience and yet leaves you completely drained and overwhelmed with its power.

Perhaps the most striking sequence is Bertolucci's tango at the end of the film. This surrealistic illustration counterpoints the inevitable realism of the finale, where Jeanne, after whispering her name to him for the first time, simultaneously shoots Paul with her father's revolver.

Bertolucci has antagonized the critics by enhancing reality with surrealism. He never goes too far, but he pushes us to our limits with his psycho-eroticism. We learn that psychological eroticism is not really erotic in this context, but another instrument of enquiry.

Thus, the film is not even a sexual explorative, since the sex is so overt, but an enquiry into its manifestations upon the mind.

Brando is superb.

Schneider is easily his equal.

The film must be seen. It is brilliant Bertolucci.

A Failure as a Porno Flick

by Kiloran German

"I was hoping to see the porno flick of the century. After all, it was banned in Italy, not to mention Winnipeg. and what do I see? A film about trains. And elevators and false teeth and bridges and a crazy concierge and corridors and corpses and blood and shadows. Oh sure, there was a quick shot at Brando's behind and a couple of sorry looking tits and a bit of hair that doesn't get filmed much and a few interesting looking positions, but all that symbolism crap.-And it was half in French for Chrissakes...."

As the above converasation (overheard on a Toronto subway) would suggest, "Last Tango in Paris" is a dismal failure as a porno flick. Surprisingly enough, it does have a few redeeming qualities.

While the film is not precisely about the much lamented trains and elevators, Bertolucci handles such detail with care and inspiration - in a manner reminiscent of "Sunday Bloody Sunday". The detail is never irrelevant: it is an integral component of the carefully constructed and complex background of a fascinating statement on character and relationships. These physical aspects are inextricable from the psychological ones.

Bertolucci seems to contend that there is a strange dichotomy in human requirements and relationships - he separates the sexual and spiritual selves. Brando functions only as a sexual being, both with his wife and his lover. His wife (whom we see only as spattered blood and a waxy corpse) required a near platonic involvement with another man to compensate for her husband's deficiencies. With Jeanne, his young lover, his failure to relate in spritual terms is even more explicit. While he is the sexual aggressor, she fears him, but he exerts an irresistable magnetism that she cannot escape. Yet when he finally expresses love, she destroys him - she cannot accept him on any but the sexual level.

The strange dualism pervades the entire film. The apartment which is the setting of degradation and sadism is set apart from the other locales. It is suffused with an ethereal light which makes views of outside civilization seem harsh by contrast. Thus Bertolucci creates two separate worlds.

Jeanne also is presented at two different levels - her essential being in the apartment, and her superficial self, as portrayed in a film made by her fiance.

I cannot agree with Bertolucci's view of life, but it is brilliantly stated and entirely consistent. Superb acting, photography and direction combine to make "Last Tango in Paris" a great film, despite its lack of preoccupation with pornography.

Donald Gow

Funeral service for Dr. Donald Sutton Gow, who died recently of a heart attack, was held last Wednesday. Gow, 53, suffered the heart attack while aboard the Glenora Ferry.

In 1965, he came to Queen's as a senior administrator and received his doctor of philosophy in 1967. For three years he was an executive-assistant to the Principal of Queen's and had been a director of the school of public administration since its inception in 1970.

In commenting on Gow's passing, Queen's Principal John J. Deutsch said: "The sudden and premature death of Gow is a sad blow to Queen's and the community. A capable and conscientious administrator with a deep appreciation of the role of the public servant in our society, he brought experience and responsible understanding to his work. It was largely through his initiative that the School of Public Adminstration here came into existence."

Donald Gow

Police on campus to shake vandalism

Queen's has recently decided to hire security guards from the Hawthorne Protective Services Ltd., to patrol Queen's campuses. The move comes in the wake of numerous thefts and instances of vandalism that have occurred at Queen's.

"The need for security patrols on campus has been recognized for a couple of years," commented Robert Luker campus Safety and Security officer, adding that "until recently, the money for the operation has not been available."

Luker noted that reported thefts totalled $15,000 last year and that as far as he could tell, the number of thefts is about the same now as it was at this time last year.

The Hawthorne Agency, a provincially licensed organization that has been highly regarded by local police in the past, will lock doors that should be locked, will investigate break-ins and generally patrol the campus. Two men will be on duty from 8 p.m. to 6 a.m. In addition a mobile patrol unit will surveil both West Campus and the main campus, twice a night.

These security guards were responsible for investigating a recent break-in at the Queen's Pub and for the subsequent apprehension of one of the vandals.

In recent months, other security measures have been taken at Queen's, including the improvement of exterior lighting and the introduction of Commissionaires in the Physical Education complex, whose identification checks have contributed to a significant reduction in the number of intruders and in the occurrence of vandalism and theft.

Info Kingston troubled

Information Kingston has launched an appeal to reinstate their Local Initiatives Program (LIP) grant necessary for continued operation. Chris Allen, coordinator of the organization said that it was likely that a decision on the appeal would be reached within the next week.

He was referring to the recent government decision to discontinue the LIP grant which financed the information and referral service. The grant was terminated at the end of last month.

In the meantime, Information Kingston has pared its staff from seven to three persons, who are now working on a volunteer basis. Allen explained that rent and telephone costs for this month's operations were being financed from a collection taken among themselves, and from remaining funds which amount to ten per cent of the grant and which are being withheld by the government until the service is closed.

"It is ironic that we didn't get our extension when we are busier than we've ever been before. We're getting between 25 and 30 calls a day," commented Allen.

The organization is active in several fields besides functioning as a basic information and referral service. It operates a landlord-tenant bureau to advise citizens of the Landlord-Tenant Act of 1970, and provides lists of available housing. In addition, it handles consumer complaints, essentially fulfilling the function of the Better Business Bureau. Information Kingston has become increasingly active in this field since the Kingston Chamber of Commerce has turned its part of the consumer operation over to Information Kingston. Providing tourist information has recently become a major task for the organization. However, because of the shortage of money, it will not be able to continue publishing its newsletter.

Allen stated that if the appeal to the government fails, the organization will investigate alternative sources of financing.

Lutheran breaks ties

The last church affiliated Ontario university, Waterloo Lutheran, has broken ties with its parent organization. Delegates to the Eastern Canada Synod of the Lutheran Church of America voted 212 to 56 in favour of a provincial takeover of the university in a move which many claimed they were railroaded into making. Little time had been left for debate from the opposition.

Despite some unofficial aid from the Ontario government, the independent university was denied the usual forms of government financing because of its church affiliation. As was discovered when Queen's broke its tie with the Presbyterian Church at the beginning of the century, it is almost impossible for a church to support a large and expanding institution.

Prison discussions

Stabilize, a community service organization which specializes in assistance to ex-inmates, revealed it will sponsor a second panel discussion this year. The event will be held at Dunning Auditorium, Wednesday evening, June 20th, at 8 p.m. Entitled Prison Reform In Canada emphasis will be placed on recent developments by the Solicitor General's Department to reorganize the prison structure and system.

Panelists for the event include a representative of the Canadian Penitentiary Service, Arthur Trono (Assistant Regional Director); John Vollmann, Queen's University student and inmate from Collin's Bay Institution; Bobbie Sparks, presently working with Media Mediations on an OFY Project; Ken Rowley, local businessman; and Floyd Patterson, local radio personality and newsman.

Stabilize originally sponsored the Joint Appeal panel at the Grand Theater last February when some members of the community became concerned with crime in the city.

BEER & BINGO
Over $1,000 in prizes
Stereos - Waterbeds - 10 Speed Bikes
Tape Recorders - 40 oz.'ers - Radios
And dozens of other prizes
Queen's Pub - House of Lords
Admission: $1.00 Beer: 3/$1.00
Tomorrow Night 8 pm - 12 am

A Red Letter Day For - Canada

June 28, '86

WHEN THE

CANADIAN PACIFIC

RAILWAY

OPENS PACIFIC

—TO THE— OCEAN

TRAIN LEAVES DAILY:

Toronto, - - 5.00 p.m. (17 O'CLOCK)

Montreal, - - 8.00 " (20 O'CLOCK)

Ottawa, - - 11.45 " (23.45 O'CLOCK)

EXCEPT SUNDAY

OUR OWN LINE

—FROM THE—

ATLANTIC TO THE PACIFIC

NO CUSTOMS NO DELAYS NO TRANSFERS

LOW RATES QUICK TIME

What do you do with an old, used railway?

CP seems to have found the answ...

by Steven Winnett

Question: What do you do with a 'used' railway?

The traditional answer to this problem has been a short and simple one for many railroads, Canadian and American: "Scrap it!". But a concern for history, and especially for the role of the Canadian Pacific in the history of Canada, has produced a fascinating program called "CP Bygones" for collectors of Canadiana and Ferroviana. To all interested collectors, "CP Bygones" sells antiques with a difference- from carefully polished silverware to heavy locomotive bells.

The Bygones operation, based at the Public Relations Department of Canadian Pacific, Windsor Station, Montreal, has its beginnings in 1970 at the initiative of Mr. N.R. Crump, then Chairman of Canadian Pacific. Mr. Crump asked transportation historian Omer Lavallee of Canadian Pacific's Public Relations and Advertising Department to investigate the possibility of setting up a program for selling surplus rail equipment to collectors, along the lines of a very successful project being run by British Rail. In Britain, the closing of a large number of passenger stations led to the availability of an enormous amount of material which would be of interest to railroad collectors and hobbyists, including such apparent oddities as cast-iron "No Trespassing" signs (which might perhaps be rather formidable on one's front lawn). The Britrail project was not only attention-getting; it was also profitable, because of the large demand for "antiques".

Mr. Lavallee agreed to establish some kind of collectors' sale of CP items for the year 1971. He discovered that there was a very large quantity of saleable items available which would be of definite interest to collectors. Mr. Lavallee noted that "antiques" were a unique species for those interested in the past days of the railway:

"For example, almost anyone can recognize things having intrinsic value, such as brass locomotive bells, silverware, clocks, art works and antique furniture as collectors' material."

"On the other hand, only a person familiar with the preferences of the collector would recognize the desirability of such intrinsically-useless things as station signs or nameboards, mileboards, printed metal beaver shields and glass number plates from locomotives, locomotive builder plates, waiting room or office furniture, framed pictures and public notices, blank stationery forms of obsolete design or old station records as being desirable. Yet they are, and any collection system should recognize that fact."

CP Bygones has faced the fact of the individualized and highly diversified interests of collectors in an operation which is at once intriguing, passingly profitable (although the only aim is to meet costs) and of service to those who are interested in the past of the railway, either for historical reasons, for motives of collection, or from long association with the CPR. As a result, the project presents its most diversified face yet in its three-years' existence in the summer of 1973. CP will make available its antiques from trains and ships to the public in three major ways this year.

The main operation is the mail-order service, which operates out of the Public Relations Department in Montreal's Windsor Station under the supervision of Messrs. Lavallee, Denis Peters, and Robert Smith. These three gentlemen are responsible along with their summer student assistants, for processing hundreds of mail order requests, which are derived from a collectors' catalogue which is mailed out free of charge on request. The bulk of the transactions of the operation take place by mail order.

Secondly, a small shop is operated on the concourse of Windsor Station bearing the label "CPBrocante-CP Bygones". Here the public can browse and view the silverware and printed materials available, from coffee sets beautifully monogrammed with the "CPR" crest to reproductions of po... first days of the railway. This sho... opened with great fanfare by a surpri... an extended Australian vacation, re... Santa Claus (last year the ghost of Si... Horne solemnly presided over t... ceremonies). Santa was heard to pro... boutique would be of inestimable val... who wished to beat the Christmas ru...

Finally, a special shop-on-wheels w... later this summer and will travel to W... to bring many of the fascinating C... collectors in those regions where s... important construction of the CPR wa...

On the whole, male collectors... favour rugged outdoor mat... lanterns, while female collector... the more delicate items of silv...

years ago. When this train was taken o... interest among collectors was high.

I asked Mr. Lavallee whether it wa... such an operation as this, since it invo... irreplaceable Canadiana to place som... on American and other foreign orders... Lavallee noted that with the adequat... most items for sale, no such limit w... necessary. He noted that the Montrea... Western train certainly were endeav... the railroad's good faith to Canadian... collecting CP bygones. He added th... comparison Canadians are on the wh... terested in antiques as Americans... Recent nationalistic trends in Can... growing interest among larger number... in their country's own past, augur w... creasing Canadian clientele for opera... Bygones, one would assume. Mr. Lav... that as supplies dwindle in time, undo... kind of preference will then be given...

The major interest in CP Bygones... course, from the large number of rai... North America. On the whole, ma... seemed to favour rugged out-door r... lanterns, while female collectors prefe... delicate items of silverware- but ... cautioned that this was "not a ... generalization" in a program where e... request was more often the rule than ...

I asked Mr. Lavallee what had been ... request he had received. He replied tha... had earnestly requested the upper an... section of a sleeping car for his pl... fortunately, he had been unable to fulfil... due to the high cost of removing the bert... not to say that the "Bygones" had not tr...

The CP Bygones operation will endu... supplies last. Certainly at this po... silverware, lanterns, bells and othe... available in adequate amounts. It is al... the interest in Canadian history behind t... and the interest of railway collectors, ... after supplies have vanished. In th... Kingstonians who are interested ca... Bygones, Public Relations and Advert... ment, Windsor Station, Montreal for a f... to introduce them to a fascinating and t... of Canada's past.

The Queen's Gerbil

by Susan de Stein

Despite the promise of the Intersession advertisements ("Intersession - study under a warm spring sun . . ."), the first four weeks of Intersession were notable for the cloudy skies, rain, and low temperatures. Now, with final essay deadlines and exams fast approaching, the sun has finally been appearing with greater regularity and temperatures have been known to rise to a muggy 85 degrees in recent days.

Personally, the appeal of studying under the warm sun remains questionable, as is the academic benefit of such an endeavour. Acquired tans will easily fade anyway in the depths of the library during the crunch of the next week. However sighs of relief will soon follow the groans, as Intersession courses are coming to an end.

Intersession draws a wide variety of people to Queen's campus for May and June. Although approximately 60 per cent of 'Intersessioners' are regular intra-mural students at Queen's, 40 per cent are actual extension students. Many attending courses are trying to leave Queen's as soon and as quickly as possible - to cram 3 years into 2 - to get another fast credit towards that degree; others are in pursuit of more 'intellectual' goals. These are taking courses primarily out of interest in the subject. Whatever the motives of the individuals, it can be said that the desire to learn among these students is more pronounced than it is among students during the normal academic year.

The fact that most 'Intersessioners' are taking only one or two courses, allows him to concentrate intensively and exclusively on the material of one subject. Intersession courses represent a total immersion approach to studying. Themes are more quickly recognized and understood; thoughts and impressions cohere more readily than is the case when a course is taken, along with four others over a period of 26 weeks. The student is able to concentrate his energies on one or two subjects and as a result is apt to be more enthusiastic about the course.

The average age of Intersession students is above that of regular Queen's students. The diversity of the interests, experiences and backgrounds of the summer student population contributes greatly to the quality and interest of class discussions, which are lively and entertaining. School teachers, retired business men, ministers, professors, policemen, housewives join the student ranks in the summer.

Older members of the class lack the normal student's inhibitions when expressing their views. In courses in the humanities, where class participation is maximized, as much knowledge can often be gained from classmates as can be from professors. Generally, at least in smaller classes, there is much more interaction among classmates outside the lecture hall or seminar room than during the winter term. Classmates are generally on first name basis. There is generally more desire and more opportunity to share thoughts on the course material.

Despite the great and sometimes insurmountable appeal of blue skies, warm weather, and green grass, many hours of an Intersession student's time is spent indoors. Never are the stacks, the Purple Room and various other reading rooms as quiet or empty as is usual during the year. Never is your favourite window seat in the Purple room consistently available during the year.

The ice cream vendor outside the Union provides food for stamina (and thought) during those long days in the Douglas (although the library hours are short enough as to preclude the possibility of spending any great length of time in 'Douglas depths'). And the Pub provides refreshment, stimulation, and entertainment on hot nights.

Intersession - a fast but not easy credit, some sun, lots of people.

letters

Douglas is "indifferent"

Dear Editor,

Perhaps through the 'University Rag' we can bring the following complaints to the Douglas Library management.

Whilst we the undersigned admit the necessity of continually attempting to cut down on the running expenses of the university we are dismayed at the apparent indifference shown by the library management with regard to assisting the academic achievements of students at both Intersession and Summer school.

The present operating hours are totally inadequate for students wanting a place to sit and study or write essays. We find it impossible to effectively use the library in the evening when it closes at 10:00 p.m. which is a highly productive study time. (Incidently bells ring anywhere from 9:30 p.m. to 9:45 p.m.)

The grapevine indicates that even further cutbacks are planned. Such a situation would be totally unacceptable. We need more time to use Douglas not less. A library is the first essential of a university and we hardly have one - at least that's open.

Now that the subject has been raised perhaps we can look forward to longer hours. Over the weekend prior to Intersession examinations it is intended to close the library at 5:00 p.m. on Friday and Saturday. On Sunday it doesn't open until 12 noon and closes at 9 p.m. The fees for Intersession are high enough without now attempting to deprive students of University facilities.

Yours for longer library hours,

Gord Howard, Rich Zirger, Carl McCrosky, Doug Waldie, N.W. Rowe, Don Dane.

Queen's Journal

Vol. 100, No. 56
Thurs., June 14, 1973
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ontario.

Interim Staff: Susan de Stein, Robert Wood, Charles Schwier, Sandy Naiman, Leona Perry, Bob Mutrie, John Solman, Kiloran German, Michael J. Hodgson.

Published once weekly on Thursdays during the summer by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc., Member Canadian University Press. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society of the University. Offices are located in the Student's Union, Queen's University. Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

NEXT MONDAY
REEFER MADNESS
Dunning Auditorium
Monday, June 18, 7 & 9.15 pm
Admission: Only $1.00

St James Anglican Church

9 a.m. - Holy Communion

11 a.m. - Morning Prayer
Preacher: The Rector

No Evening Service

BE AS CHOOSEY ABOUT DIAMONDS
AS YOU WERE ABOUT MEN

You didn't pick the first guy. So don't pick the first diamond you see. We have a grand, diversified selection of diamond rings. All shapes, all sizes, many different designs. So take your time before you make your choice.
And find a diamond as marvelonus as your man.

KINNEAR D'ESTERRE
JEWELLERS
168 PRINCESS STREET
KINGSTON, ONTARIO

Pizza Chalet

286 MONTREAL ST. KINGSTON

544-1227

OPEN MON. TUES WED. 4:00 p.m. to 1:00 a.m.
OPEN ALL DAY SUNDAY 12 – 12
OPEN THURS. FRI. SAT. 4:00 p.m. to 2:00 a.m.

Chalet Deluxe EXTRA LARGE
Pepperoni- Mushrooms- Bacon Sausage- Green Peppers- Olive Cheese- Tomato Sauce
$5.50
BIGGEST PIZZA YOU'VE EVER SEEN!

SELECTION WITH CHEESE & TOMATO SAUCE	11" REG	13" MED	15" LGE	SUPER 17" X-LGE
1. Pepperoni-Mushrooms-Bacon-Green Peppers Sausages-Olive	2.50	3.65	4.55	5.50
2. Pepperoni-Mushrooms	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
3. Pepperoni-Bacon	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
4. Mushrooms-Bacon	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
5. Combination Pizza Pepperoni-Mushrooms Green Peppers-Olives	2.40	2.95	3.95	4.95
6. Bacon	1.65	2.60	3.65	4.65
7. Pepperoni	1.65	2.60	3.65	4.65
8. Cheese	1.75	2.40	2.95	3.90
9. Mushrooms	1.65	2.60	3.65	4.65

Combination Special
Pepperoni- Olive Mushrooms- Green Peppers
$3.95
A LARGE PIZZA SURE TO PLEASE

Critic's Forum:

Sleuth, the story

by Sandra Bernstein

Joseph Mankiewicz' "Sleuth" is what results when Stephen Potter meets Agatha Christie. It will leave you, after nearly two and a half hours, diverted, drained, intrigued, and wishing for more.

For the reviewer, however, "Sleuth" offers several problems. First, there is the difficulty of outlining a unique and startling plot without spoiling the film's surprise for the reader. Second, there is little to criticize, and most of the praise has probably already been uttered.

In any case, "Sleuth" begins with a scene in which young hairdresser Milo Tindel (Michael Caine) makes his way through a literal maze of shrubbery, in the gardens of an English stately home. The creature in the middle of this labrinth is Andrew Wyke (Sir Lawrence Olivier), a middle-aged aristocrat with an obsession for games, who is also author of a series of detective stories, the writing of which he considers "the proper occupation of noble minds."

The two proceed to the mansion, where we discover that Milo is the lover and would-be husband of Andrew's estranged wife, Margherite, who appears only in portrait.

The remainder of the movie concerns the games of the mind in which Milo is forced by his host to engage, the prize being the woman he loves. The dialogue is witty, lively, ("My dear boy, sex is the game. Marriage is the penalty.") and tinged with terror. Much of the credit for this film, indeed, belongs to the playwright, Anthony Shaffer, whose sense of theatre, though not revolutionary, is unerring, and whose brain stays always one step ahead of ours - creating yet another game on another level.

The principals are perfectly cast. Michael Caine is superlative as Milo. His gestures, walks, accents and expressions are flawless. However, although Caine slips easily from burlesque to sophisticate, we remain unconvinced that Milo is clever enough to play the game as well as he does; surely we are not expected to attribute this solely to his position as underdog.

Sir Lawrence Olivier, despite slightly spotty direction near the beginning, handles his role with predictable ease. If at first he seems to be overacting, we soon realize that Andrew himself is a ham, playing the part of the hero in his own detective fiction.

The music, by John Addison and Cole Porter, is conspicuous for its aptness. Addison's arrangements are colourful, and the lyrics underline the themes of the picture.

The sets are sensational, and alone would make the picture worth seeing. Andrew lives surrounded by games, puzzles, and fascinating, terrifying mechanical wooden dolls, the movements of which he controls, and whose expressions reflect his own. The gardens, as well as fulfilling the symbolic function outlined above, expand the scene gracefully from the single room of the stage play. In short, the attention to every detail in decor accords with the need for alertness occasioned by a suspenseful plot, and with the scrutiny to which the playwright has subjected every detail of his script.

Symbols, such as mirrors and clowns, dot the sets as well, enriching the many levels on which this drama reaches us. The scene is drenched with money and material possessions, which tie in with the film's implied criticism of privilege class structure, exploitation, racism, and the English way of life. The absent wife, too, is the "treacherous woman" of myth, at least in Andrew's eyes, and possessions are "trophies of her skilled accomplishments." At the same time, Andrew feels he owns her: "I kept her - she represents me." But because he hates and despises her, we infer that his self-image is reflected in his view of Margherite.

As the plot thickens (and it really does!) we become aware of the thin line between fact and fiction. Winning and losing become the same thing: treachery and the power of wealth may defeat the player who is too trusting.

Milo is revealed as more than a wife-seducer. He is a scapegoat for all Andrew's hatred of "foreign upstarts"; he is the sacrifice offered by an aging, impotent man to the image of his own way of life. In the process, Shaffer indicts the "civilised world"; the decadent upper classes, he implies, may look to the life preserver from the Mauritania, which hangs in Andrew's cellar. (The mood of his indictment, however, reminds us more of Oscar Wilde than of Bette Davis.)

The play greets us, however, on still more levels. Psychologically, Andrew's preoccupation with games suggests arrested development, while at the same time the juxtaposition of childhood activity with adult evil, is chilling.

To a large extent, however, "Sleuth" is concerned with humiliation and betrayal. Games that humiliate, images of clowns, and the portraits of Margherite's "eyes that lie" haunt the film.

There are shades of other modern playwrights in the imagery and message of this film. Pinter's double dimensional dialogue is often employed, as floodgates of hate from the subconscious are suddenly opened onto polished small talk. They are quickly closed.

Similarly, Albee's cathartic conversations are present. "You come here, you pry into my manhood, and you mock the creation of my life," cries Andrew, and he is right. Emotions that are play acted become real and the thrilling games of "Sleuth" merge with life.

Sleuth is a good play, converted into a fine film. Try to catch it at the Hyland this week, but see it from the beginning.

Dynamic Disappointment

by Kiloran German

As an acting exercise, "Sleuth" is a dynamic tour de force. As a film it is a disappointment.

An ambitious attempt is made to create a precarious balance between humour and the macabre - a balance that is not completely achieved. As a result, the two elements work against each other and serve only to produce inconsistency. The film is at its best at the humourous level - witty, diverting and clever.

The initial repartee between Laurence Olivier and Michael Caine is extremely amusing and Olivier's masterful sense of timing brings it to a heightened pitch. This atmosphere continues as Caine is forced into a frenetic masquerade as a clown, superb in his clumsiness. The audience eagerly joins the actors in an intricate and compelling game. To this point, the film has made no pretensions beyond that of light entertainment.

The central theme of the film - that some games have deadly consequences - suddenly descends. Unfortunately, it is at odds with the preceding levity, and Caine's total breakdown in the face of death is completely unconvincing. The atmosphere of fun is dispersed, but it is not replaced by one of horror. It is replaced only by disillusionment.

The games continue, but rather than increasing in intensity, they become more and more disappointing. Though intricate and clever, they do not (possibly cannot) live up to expectations. The audience must inevitably join the actors in sorting out the solutions.

Success is possible, but not particularly satisfying as the novelty fades and no conclusion could be surprising. The games are too perfect as no matter which character is in control the other must give an exact set of responses for the plot to work. Each must play perfectly into the other's hands. It becomes too contrived to be realistic.

"Sleuth" is an interesting attempt that never completely succeeds and the intended irony which might have made the film brilliant becomes meaningless.

Forum continues ... Play vs Film

by Sandy Naiman

"Sleuth" is a very engaging play on the stage. On film it loses almost all its impact. This is primarily because, both the splendour of the gothic surroundings and the amazing use of charade are so immediate and so beautifully executed.

Joseph L. Mankewicz in his very lavish production of this long run hit becomes obsessed with the appointments of a gamesman, becomes obsessed with the intricasies of an already intricate plot and thus loses the suspense that the play leaves intact.

The problem when translating excellent stage plays onto the screen is that detail becomes more important than in the original form and there is always the feeling of staginess within an unnecessarily stagy medium.

Such is the case with the film version of "Sleuth". Where in the play all the action takes place on one very detailed setting, virtually the identical set is reconstructed on the screen but is elaborated to excess. Where on stage two levels are used, in the film again Mankewicz elaborates and stretches the action onto three, using extraneous interiors.

Essentially, Sleuth can only be seen once. The sub endings and final ending are intriguing only once, but even on film, these lose their power.

Sir Lawrence Olivier is the Antagonist and Michael Caine the portagonist. Olivier excels as the antagonist gives a sensitive performance, spiked with energy and variety.

Caine is less successful. He is somewhat overshadowed by Olivier, even when he should be doing the overshadowing. The two never play at the same intensity, nor are they technically on a par.

Because this balance is so disproportionate, you are always aware of the fact that they are acting, and playing at acting. Thus the credibility of the charade is destroyed.

Ultimately, the play does Anthony Shaffer's intrigue much more justice than the film. But if you don't get a chance to see the play, do see the Mankewicz production. It is one of this year's better offerings, but not, by far, its best!

Virtuoso Vaghy's Depressing Music

by Michael J. Hodgson

On Thursday, June 7, the Vaghy String Quartet performed in Grant Hall as part of the Evening Arts Festival. Their program consisted of the quartet op. 56 no. 2 of Karol Szymanowski (1882-1937), the second quartet by Harry Somers (1925--), and the last quartet of Bela Bartok (1881-1945). This is very difficult music, which the Vaghy Quartet mastered in virtuoso fashion.

It is also music which explores the darker emotions and rarely manages to sustain a smile. As such, it can hardly be called entertaining, though it is certainly very interesting music. No doubt this very esoteric program was aimed at the members of the Learned Societies who were in the audience, because it takes a seasoned concert-goer to appreciate a full evening of such bleak fare. As someone sitting near me(and not in a Learned Society) gasped "I wish they'd play in the same key!" It was hardly a program to win new recruits from pops to the classics.

Still, it is fascinating music! Szymanowski was a Polish composer whose experiments in atonality made him at first unpopular at home, where he directed the Warsaw State Conservatory. Strongly influenced both by Chopin and by Debussy, he won acceptance in Europe as a whole, before Poland accepted him and this in spite of his extensive use of Polish folk materials. Several decades ago, Polish performers like Paul Kochanski, the violinist and Arthur Rubinstein, the pianist, brought their music to America. But even today, except for the occasional piano piece, Szymanowski rarely turns up on a program outside Europe, where he is very popular. So I was glad to see him on this program.

Szymanowski's quartet op. 56 no. 2 (1927) is a haunted piece of music, and so personal that one feels the composer is struggling with himself rather than with the outside world.

In the first movement "Moderato", the frist violin played a most expressive pleading melody over whirring sounds from the other instruments. The Vivace scherzando begins with the violins playing a strident melody over pizzicato accompaniment and concludes with the cello and the viola taking the melody and all joining in a final glissando. The last movement, marked Lento, is an anguished fugue in which the first violin again played most expressively. A very difficult work, well played, though I often felt the score rather cluttered. Perhaps such disturbing feelings were intended.

The Somers quartet, which like the Szymanowski began and ended with slow movements, is less private and more demonstrative, and perhaps for that reason was much more exciting listening. It was written in 1950, the year after Somers studied in Paris with Darius Milhaud, and the period of his best-known work, the Symphony. In the opening Andante Vivace, the desolate viola melody is taken up in turn by the other instruments, and then a driving rhymthic section disturbs the peace. The second movement is in two parts: the first part contrasts lyricism with rollicking gypsy effects (with cello strummed, pizzicato, and glissandi); the second part begins cheerfully, but then interrupted by irritated rhythms, erupts into the passionate and self pitying lyricism of the last movement.

Although the audience seemed restless during the second movement, I felt the Vaghy Quartet held this demanding work together very convincingly from the opening desolation to the lingering, hopeless final chord.

The sixth quartet of Bela Bartok (1939), however, was the highlight of the evening. Beside these other works, its imaginative textures and formal strength were more obvious than ever. Though it is as tortured and personal a work as the other two quartets we heard it manages to transcend self-pity and confusion, and makes a moving affirmation of the hopelessness of things. And it does so

Continued on Page 8

GREAT STEAKS
try the
Porterhouse Special
10 oz RED BRAND aged beef
Baked Potatoe - Vegetable
Rolls and Butter
Limited Offer 3.99 Red Brand Beef Only
For $1.40 more you get Soup or Juice - Tossed Fancy Salad (Best salad in town) Beverage and choice of Desert.
Aunt Lucy's Restaurant Tavern
Princess West at Portsmouth
No reservations
Relaxed Informal Dining
Great Place For That Special Date!

Drink for thought.

Molson Golden
A good smooth ale
Do you know what you're missing?

Canada: Corporate profits surge despite higher costs

OTTAWA — Where does your consumer goods dollar go? According to a recent report from Statistics Canada, a sizeable chunk has been finding its way into corporate coffers. The government information gathering body has discovered that corporate profits have risen by a full 50 per cent during the first three months of this year.

According to government economists, the high profit figures do not just reflect the general inflation in the economy but also an actual widening of profit margins of which only a part is due to higher world commodity prices. Part of the gain was also said to be due to higher labour costs being offset by substantial gains in output per worker.

The reported profit hike is the largest quarterly advance in twelve years.

OTTAWA — One place where productivity does not seem to be outstripping labour costs is in the federal civil service, according to Senator Arthur Laing, a former federal cabinet minister.

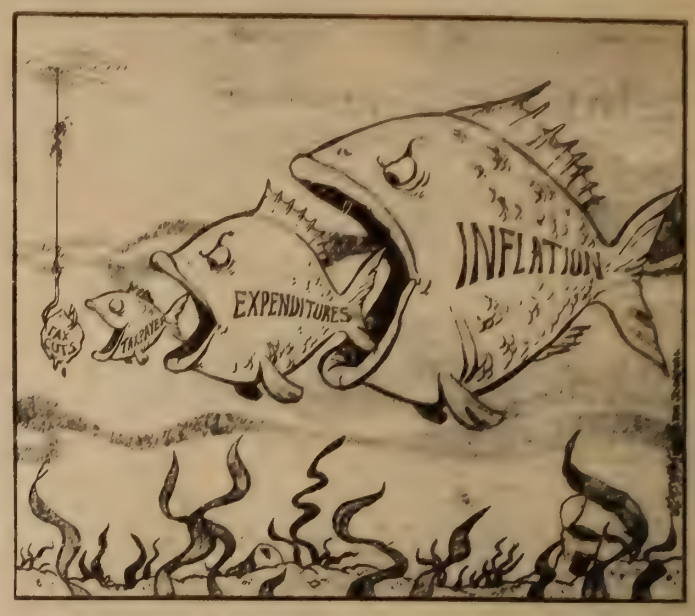
Laing found that pay raises for government officials have surpassed those for industry by 20 per cent during the past five years and that the number of civil servants earning $18,000 or more has increased by 23 per cent in the past three. He cited "wild extravagances", the creation of unnecessary government departments, and overpaid, underworked employees as the major cause of a $3.9 billion hike in the government wage bill during 1972 alone.

OTTAWA — The Bank of Canada has decided that it is finally time that Canada has had enough inflation for one year and has again increased its prime lending rate, the rate at which it makes loans to the commercial banks. The prime lending rate is also used by the commercial banks in dealings with their best customers.

The rate is now 6¼ per cent up from 5¾ per cent. According to Bank sources, the rate at which bank credit has been growing since January has been a whopping 30 per cent.

However, the Bank of Canada intends to continue incentives to non-inflationary expansion and employment through increases in the money supply.

MONTREAL — Planning to fly anywhere? Your chances of catching an Air Canada flight anywhere are dwindling as the Air Canada machinists have started their sixth and most serious round of rotating strikes. Up until now, the strikes have been in isolated centres and the supervisory staff have managed to keep the flights running with only a very few cancellations. However, the latest strike in all the Canadian provincial capitals with the exception of two, is expected to have more far-reaching consequences.



KINGSTON — The possibility of a Marina City for the Kingston waterfront after five years of frustrated planning now appears to be pretty bleak. The last and probably most fatal snag to hit the $30 million residential and commercial project on Ontario Street came with a recent announcement from William Teron its owner and developer. The Ottawa businessman has announced that with his new appointment as president of the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation he must divest himself of all his active business interests.

As a result the ill-fated development is up for sale. It had been stopped in an eleventh hour effort just months ago as a co-chairman of the local waterfront committee disputed the land severances involved in the project.

OTTAWA — Recent gains in the prices of beef products have completely blotted out any cuts which occurred during the national consumer meat boycott which occurred in March this year and retailers are blaming it on the "barbecue season". One major chain noted that demand is high right now for the hind quarters for barbecueing and that the result has been major losses on the front quarters.

TORONTO — Ontario may go to court in order to block Alberta's attempt to force higher prices on natural gas sold to other provinces while maintaining a second lower price within the province. According to a report from Premier William Davis, he intends to fight the legality of the two price system on constitutional grounds.

Also announced in the release were other energy plans in the offing which include plans for construction of second unclear power plants at Pickering and Bruce Point and one at Bowmanville to be brought into operation between 1980 and 1983.

OTTAWA — Sixteen Conservative rebels lead by former Prime Minister John Diefenbaker broke party policy lines to become the sole opposing voice to a Government resolution supporting bilingualism in the federal civil service.

The resolution reaffirmed support for the 1969 legislation which gives both English and French speaking government employees equal status, and outlined its implementation.

backpage

World: ICCS force heads for the barracks

SAIGON — Canadian forces on the International Commission of Control and Supervision in South Vietnam were forced to briefly abandon the field for the barracks as risks to their security increased following a sharp escalation in Communist attacks throughout the country.

A recent United States Senate report holds little hope for renewed peace in Southeast Asia as talks continue in Paris aimed at renegotiating a settlement.

MADRID — General Francisco Franco has announced that he plans to give up his job as head of the Spanish government in favour of deputy leader Admiral Luis Carrero Blanco, also a right-winger.

Franco will now take up position as chief of state and will maintain the overall leadership. At the same time Franco announced that upon his retirement, the post would then go to Prince Juan Carlos, grandson of the last Spanish monarch, and that he would then become king.

NEW YORK — Horse racing had one of its finest hours last weekend as Secretariat of Meadow Stable became the first winner of the triple crown in twenty-five years and set a new record doing it.

After winning the Kentucky Derby and Preakness, Secretariat went on to capture its third top horse racing honour at Belmont. Both the time in which the horse won and the distance by which he beat his competitors were records and Ron Turcott became the first jockey since 1948 and the eighth in history to capture all three races.

'The Vietnam observer uniforms are ready, sir.'

TOM'S SHOE REPAIR
Shoe Service
186 Wellington
George the Hatter
leathercoats and all leatherwork repaired
546-5193

Vaghy virtuoso

Continued from Page 7

by exploring a great variety of moods, from the almost nonchalant first movement to the mock-heroic second, the disturbing third movement which is lyrical and comic and brutal by turns, and the lush harmonies of the tragic finale.

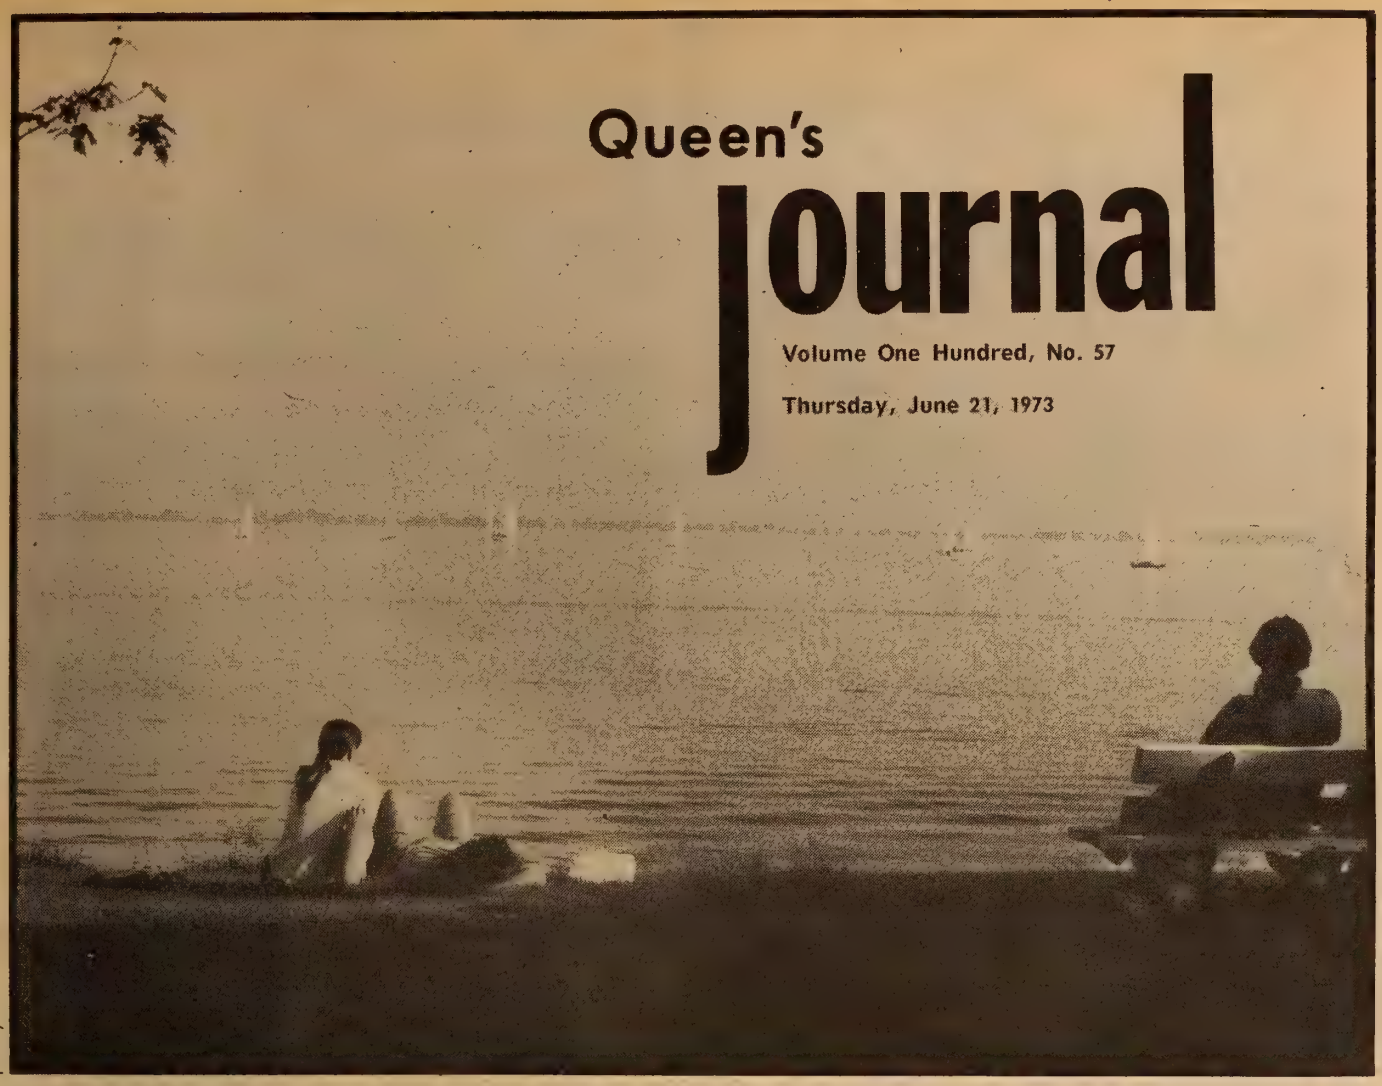
The calibre of this performance may be gauged by the way the Vahgy Quartet varied the theme-melody which precedes each movement and forms the last.

At first, the viola, played it almost calmly. Then the cello, in the second movement, and the first violin in the third, played it with intense passion. But finally, in that heartbreaking last movement, it became a poignant cry. It was such fine and committed playing which made the sixth Bartok Quartet the climax and fitting ending of this evening with Queen's own Vaghy String Quartet.

unclassifieds

WILL the sweetheart who ripped off my 10-speed Bottechia from 376 Earl please take good care of it? At least you've got great taste. How's about if I sell you the pump that goes with it for the bargain price of $150.

LOOKING for 3 bedroom apartment for '73 - '74 school year. please write: Anne McGibbon, 160 Beacon Hill Road, Beaconsfield, P.Q.



PUPPY needs a home. "Barney" is a black, part-Lab who needs more attention than we can give him. A couple of months old. We don't want to have to give him to the Pound. Please call - 542-6680. Or visit him at 264 University.

Sandy and Korn INSIST that you read page 2.

AMAZING OFFER! PORTRAITS IN OIL
Done by Professional Artists
From your Favorite Snapshot,
AT UNBELIEVABLY LOW PRICES
PHOTOS of Loved Ones, Weddings, Graduations, or other Memorable Events, also Pets or Favorite Scenery For Further Information and Sample Display By Appointment only Phone 546-0403

LADIES
ELECTROLYSIS
Avoid shaving, tweezing, or the use of dipilatories. Have your eyebrows styled and unwanted hair removed permanently by electrolysis. Physicians recommend our work. For a free consultation and information call:
HARRISON SALON 542-5595

Queen's
Journal
Volume One Hundred, No. 57
Thursday, June 21, 1973

perry

Many object to sex quotas

Two-thirds of those polled at a recent University Council seminar on women, indicated they were against the preparation and publication of specific plans indicating by what means, and at what rates, universities planned to increase proportions of women employees.

The survey also indicated that 77 per cent wanted the university to make special efforts to correct sexual imbalances in enrolment, although most rejected scholarships limited to one sex and reserved minimum places as viable means to achieve a balance.

Sixty-four per cent of those asked, supported the principle that the university should provide day-care facilities, although over half were against subsidization of such services.

Other figures indicated few would object to employing or being served by female lawyers, engineers, or doctors.

The overall trend seemed to indicate a desire to see a balance of sexes enrolled in university professional programmes, and 73 per cent were in favor of the university attempting to challenge sexual bias in the professions.

COPSE Report seminars called politically frustrating

AMS President Steve Brereton termed last week's seminar on post-secondary education, sponsored by the Ontario government, an "excercise in political frustration."

He said that many delegates went to the meetings hoping to discuss the COPSE (Wright) Report recommendations. However, "almost everything that was discussed," he continued, "was covered in the report. A lot of people felt that the discussions came two years too late."

To illustrate the lack of "free-flowing discussion", Brereton cited the structure of the two workshops on financing -- one of the major problems facing post-secondary education. Two hours were alloted for financing, and most of the time was taken up by prepared speeches on OSAP and contingent repayment plans. "There was only time for 3 or 4 questions from the audience, and only four minutes or so to summarize the discussions at the plennary sessions."

The Ontario Federation of Students presented its reply to the COPSE Report at the seminars, but, according to Brereton, it cannot be considered the definitive OFS statement. He indicated that OFS would do more work on financing and structures of post-secondary education.

Since the COPSE Report confines itself "to suggesting better ways to charge individual students", OFS finds it "not an adequate basis for a substantial and significant programme to achieve universal accessibility."

OFS claims "any direct charge to the individual (is) both unnecessary and inconsistent with the ultimate goal of universal accessibility."

OFS also objects to the lack of examination of untapped sources of revenue (" especially from the corporate sector which relies on public educational facilities") for financing education.

It feels the intent of some of the COPSE recommendations is "to force people to pay as much in tuition fees as they can afford. Although at first glance, this seems equitable, ...unless a decrease in total direct user-costs for education is projected, the result would be inconsistent with the notion of universal accessibility." OFS says it doesn't believe there will be enough money allocated for grants to fund students from middle income brackets under the recommendations.

Instead, it indicated that the introduction of an often-bantered-about contingent (on future earnings) repayment loan scheme might be better than the present system, but only if it is not introduced to justify the higher tuition, and total loan amounts do not rise.

Echoing some of the demands of last winter's fee-withholding action, OFS supported lowering the age of independence from parental income for students receiving student aid to twenty-one or less. It asked for " a greater attempt to deal individually with students who are genuinely independent of parental support."

In addition, OFS restated its support for the proposals that part time students be eligible for grants in order to further their education.

While OFS supported recommendations that will "facilitate an increased responsiveness of educational institutions to social needs",it had reservations on the proposal for an Open Academy in Ontario. (As proposed, this would provide parallel, non-institutional opportunities for post-secondary study.) "The fear is that such an institution, unless better defined, will become yet another monument to government absorbing large amount of money and giving little in return". It did however endorse the philosophy of continuing education, and the proposal that "people who have not received formal post-secondary education should be eligible for financial support in pursuing educatioal or cultural programmes outside institutions".

OFS rejected the proposal for a "buffer" between universities and the government. The OFS document claimed that the buffer neither preserved institutional autonomy, nor represented public interests, but did not elaborate on these claims or suggest any alternative.

"For its first real public appearance, the Ontario Federation of Students didn't do so badly," Brereton said. "People seemed to think the students made valid points. It was nice to know someone was listening."

Natural environment for campus

A plan for the development of open space and landscaping the main campus was prepared by a landscape artist and presented to an open meeting held last week.

The main concern of the plan was how to provide adequate paved areas for pedestrian and vehicular traffic and for its future needs as traffic flow changes when new buildings such as the Arts and Social Science Complex and the main parking lot on lower campus come into use.

The paving of traffic routes will not necessarily be of poured concrete. The plan suggested paths with an irregular edge which would blend into the landscape rather than rigid, straight walkways.

Alternative to poured concrete such as cobble stones or durastone, or dense concrete blocks which interlock, were discussed at the meeting. It was pointed out that the smaller blocks can be more easily fitted into the general landscape.

(One student working at physical plant for the summer, and who was probably thinking of more work, asked if the grass would grow up through the cracks in the blocks).

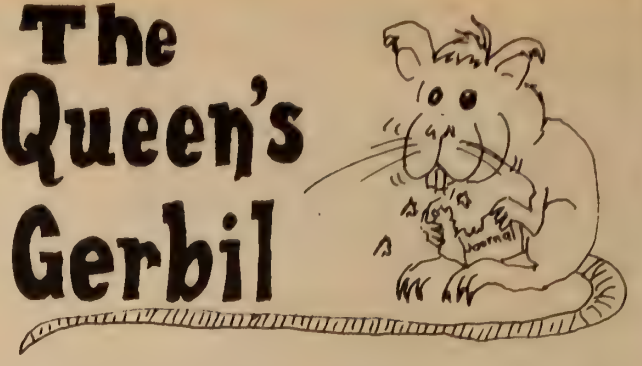
Another consideration for planning involved designing paved areas wide enough to accommodate service and emergency vehicles. Eric Thrift, campus planner, suggested that these will be wide enough for vehicles but would not look like regular roads and would not be used by general traffic.

Schrubs, trees and grass areas are to be utilized where they fit into the overall landscaping plan. With the advent of the new parking lot on lower campus, many of the areas now being used for parking can be converted to green or open areas.

Thrift indicated that some pieces will be added early on in the next year or so, but said that no major changes are planned for the immediate future. Areas around Miller Hall, Kingston Hall and the Arts and Science Complex have the most immediate need for landscaping. In fact, some grass next to Goodwin has already been replaced by concrete.

The plans are not "carved in a tablet of stone" Thrift stated, and emphasized that they are flexible and subject to a great deal of change as more details are added later.

In addition he pointed out the suggestions for landscaping should be made by the faculty and students - the people who use the campus.



All things must end

Next week has been cancelled. As a result, Intersession classes will end tomorrow. Summer session classes will begin on Monday, July 2.

As a result, no Journal will be published next week. One will be published, however, on July 2, and each week of the summer session.

AMS officials jumped for joy at the announcement.

The Queen's Gerbil

by R. Wellington Boyd

"When are they going to get the bingo part of this beer and bingo on the road" grumbled my friend in an irritated voice. A very intense bingo player, Bo was continually edging those silly little popcorn kernels on his bingo cards and then taking them off, memorizing and then forgetting the numbers, and constantly fidgeting with his impressive row of cards.

He had his lucky skunk's foot on the table, and all his cards tacked down. "Tonight is going to be my lucky night! I'm going to win that ten-speed bicycle."

I said nothing. How could he lose with ten cards and his good luck charm in front of him?

"Here comes the joker that's running it now" Bo announced as Melvin Stilchrist, the President of the Extra-Mural Students Association walked in. It seems that he had been stranded in Toronto traffic with nearly $1000 of prizes, however Bo was not impressed with the excuse.

Melvin passed our table laughing. He knew that the event would cost him a lot of money, even to the tune of $800. "Who cares? Its only money" he commented. "I've got to get rid of it some way".

He moved to the microphone to make the first call.

"And the first number is . . . mmphzzzzz" he mumbled into the speaker.

"What the hell was that! What was the number! I'm behind!" cried Bo. I tried to point out to my distraught friend that he couldn't possibly win with just one call, as Melvin repeated the call, "Beeee Thirteen".

My friend slumped back in his chair in relief at hearing the number. "That's my lucky number right there . . . B13", he clucked.

"Ooohh Seventy-five" came the call. I sat in puzzlement wondering if two games were going on for I had distinctly heard the guy relaying the call to the back room translate "O75" into "O55". I started to ask Bo what was going on there were no fifty-fives under the "O" column on my card but he was intent on the next call. I concluded that the back room players must be playing an entirely different game.

The evening wore on, and I had had too many beers to be interested. Bo was now in a dire state of total depression for he had lost all the games for the liquor, and for the waterbed, the transistor radios, and even the inflatable rubber boat."

"Cheer up, chum" I said, "You've been getting your lucky B13 right along, and that's a good sign".

Once again my comments were ignored; it had been announced that beer was four for a dollar.

"We'll take $5 dollars worth" Bo ordered, enchanted. I was amazed that the terrific saving of only ten cents per beer would make such a difference, and what were the two of us going to do with twenty beers! The rest of the players seemed to be similarly affected. Waitresses were rushing for the loaded trays on the pub counter and scurrying to their anxious customers. No one wanted to miss out on this bargain.

The game began again, and Bo proceeded to lose his chance for the ten-speed bicycle and the television. He was beginning to lose his confidence, his skunk's foot was a beer soaked mass of purple, and his hair was now that too. First he would clutch his charm, then tug on his hair.

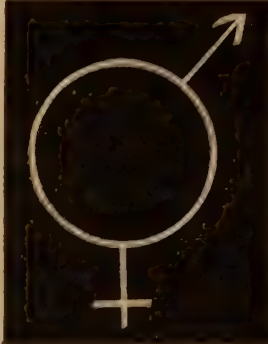
I don't know if you noticed the guy who kept cheering in the last game for the stereo. Bo's luck was back. Kernel after kernel was carefully placed on his card 'til finally only B13 was needed to fill out the card.

"Now I know I've got the prize" beamed my friend. "I haven't missed B13 yet tonight."

Five calls passed. Still there was no B13. Bo was staring at his card as if he had never seen it before. The calls were becoming even more muffled now — I think that the blond fellow doing the calling had drank a bit too much himself.

"Come on, Melvin . . . shake them up" trilled Bo.

Well Steve did, but it didn't help Bo. And when four people screamed "bingo", my friend collapsed into a black hole of despair like a pack of dominoes.



I left the pub that night, a beer in one hand and my friend Bo in the other.

AMAZING OFFER! PORTRAITS IN OIL

Done by Professional Artists
From your Favorite Snapshot,

AT UNBELIEVABLY LOW PRICES

PHOTOS of Loved Ones, Weddings, Graduations, or other Memorable Events, also Pets or Favorite Scenery For Further Information and Sample Display By Appointment only Phone 546-0403

Birth Control, VD, and Abortion Information and Referral

Mon., - Fri., noon - 9 pm.
Sat. 1 pm - 5 pm
165 University, 547-2806

unclassifieds

HAPPY UN-BIRTHDAY, Di. Sorry!

SICK OF LIVING in a dump? Why not finish the rest of the summer in luxury? If you move in now, you can get the rest of June free in a spacious and beautifully furnished 3 bedroom apartment. Call Ruth at 544-5170. (Female roomates only.)

SEXIST, ed.

Why was Lee's shutter sticking? Because Charlie laid a camera (not to mention ornaments) on the piano.

JOHN -- advice like that and you wont get the copy til Thursday. Chas.

LOOKING for 3 bedroom apartment for '73 - '74 school year. Please write: Anne McGibbon, 160 Beacon Hill Road, Beaconsfield, Quebec.

Andy Scott evened the tally in the Eddy vs. Scott tennis tournament, winning Tuesday's two hour match with scores of 6-4, 4-6, and 7-6. The battle for the Intersession 55-162 Unchampionship continues.

SORRY, no footballs this week.

Stadium closed

Because of the visit of Queen Elizabeth to the Stadium on June 27, all outdoor athletic facilties at the Stadium or adjacent to it, including the tennis courts, will be closed from noon until approximately 4:00 p.m. on that date.

Queen's Journal

Vol. 100, No. 57
Thurs., June 21, 1973
Queen's University
at Kingston, Ontario.

Interim Staff: Robert Wood, Susan de Stein, Charles Schwier, Sandy Naiman, Leona Perry, Bob Mutrie, John Solman, Kiloran German.

Published once weekly on Thursdays during the summer by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc., Member Canada University Press. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society of the University. Offices are located in the Student's Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

Fill your mug with Golden.

Molson Golden
A good smooth ale
Do you know what you're missing?

BUY YOUR DIAMOND NOW!

AND PAY AT YOUR CONVENIENCE!

LOVELY!

Sometimes it's not easy to pay right away. That doesn't mean you have to wait to buy a diamond. You can choose one of our credit plans. Our selection includes rings in all price ranges. Let us help you choose a splendid, exquisitely cut diamond and plan convenient payments. It's the easy way to enjoy your diamond now.

KINNEAR D'ESTERRE
JEWELLERS
168 PRINCESS STREET
KINGSTON, ONTARIO

QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY
SCHOOL OF PHYSICAL & HEALTH EDUCATION

SUMMER TENNIS PROGRAMME JULY 3-26

GROUP 1
MIXED BEGINNERS Mon. & Wed. 6:30 - 7:30 p.m.
GROUP 2
MIXED BEGINNERS Mon. & Wed. 7:30 - 8:30 p.m.
GROUP 3
MIXED BEGINNERS Tues. & Thurs. 6:30 - 7:30 p.m.
GROUP 4
MIXED BEGINNERS Tues. & Thur. 7:30 - 8:30 p.m.

MAXIMUM: 16 persons per group
REGISTRATION FEE: $10.00
Balls are provided
Racquet may be rented for $2.00

SUMMER ADULT SWIM PROGRAM JULY 9 - AUG. 10

Men's (Beginners) Mon. & Wed. 6:15 - 7:00 p.m.
Men's (General Improvement) Mon. & Wed. 6:15 - 7:00 p.m.
Ladies (Beginners) Tues. & Thurs. 6:15 - 7:00 p.m.
Ladies (General Improvement) Tues. & Thurs. 6:15 - 7:00 p.m.

MAXIMUM: 10 per class

REGISTRATION FEE: $10.00

For both programs:
MINIMUM AGE: 18 years
REGISTRATION: Weekdays between 9:00 a.m. - 4:00 p.m.
Recreation Office
Queen's Physical Education Centre

For further information contact: Mr. Howard C. Pearce or Miss Chris Landreth at 547-6984

Queen's financing is disclosed

According to figures released in the Principal's Annual Report, it cost the University $27,109,000 to operate (including the Faculty of Education and some ancillary enterprises) for the ten-month year ending April 30, 1972. The University's loss for that period was $28,000.

The largest part of the University's income came from grants from the provincial government -- nearly twenty-two million dollars, about eighty-one percent of the total. The largest expenditure was for the Faculty of Arts and Science -- a little over nine and one half million dollars.

"Ancillary enterprises" which include the residences and Student Union, cost $2,886,000. Of this, food and supplies amounted to $824,000; salaries and wages, $1,092,000; and utilities and repairs, $325,000. Income was $3,183,000 on these operations.

The University collected $92,000 for its parking operations, and spent $61,000 to keep the lots open.

A breakdown of the University's operating revenue and expenditures (in thousands of dollars) is below:

Revenue		Percent
Academic fees	4,875	18.0
Investment income	53	.2
Government grants	21,852	80.7
Gifts	132	.5
Other	169	.6
Total	27,081

Expenditures
Academic
Arts and science	9,535	35.1
Business	868	3.2
Medicine	3,174	11.7
Nursing	158	.5
Applied science	2,529	9.3
Law	625	2.3
Computing centre	1,064	3.9
Library	2,144	7.8
Extension	516	1.9
Other	1,069	3.9
Subtotal	21,682
Administration	1,747	6.4
Plant maintenance	2,880	10.6
Miscellaneous	485	1.8
Provision for renewal	215	.08
Provision for losses	100	.04
Total	27,109

A new concept in education

A few children in Kingston will be given a unique opportunity to attend a summer school aimed at development of their personal talents, encouraging participation in decision-making and the development of their relationships with others.

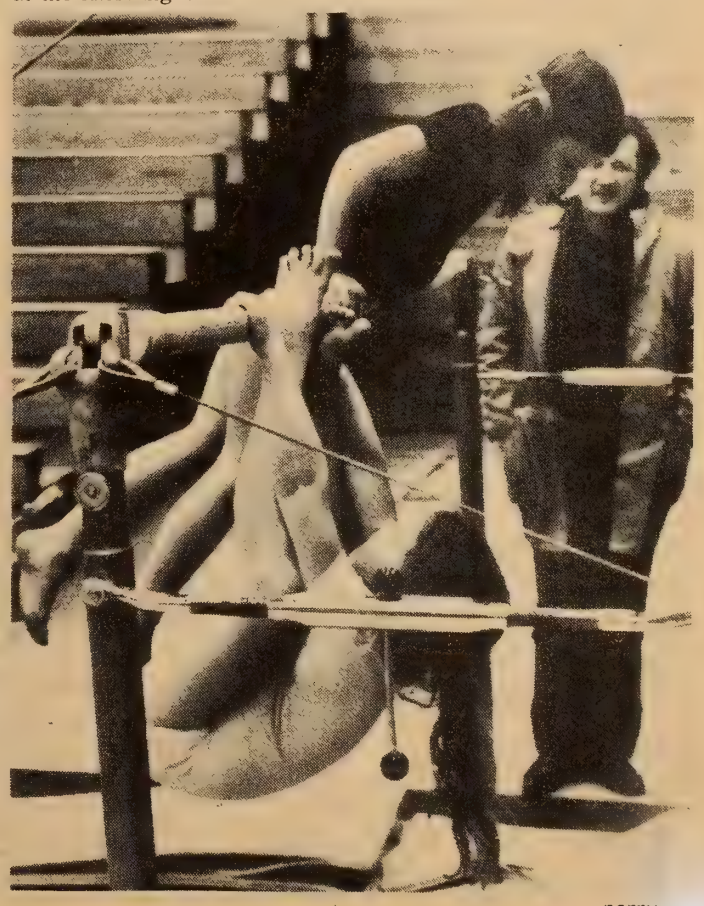
Known as Non School, the extension of the regular winter Kingston Community School will be concentrating on practical workshops on such diverse topics as planting a garden, writing stories, and doing paintings. In addition there may be activities such as creative dancing, dramatic inprovisation, and music making.

Susan Allen and Jane Bertrand, two teachers from the Community School voluntarilly instruct the children in the projects. Of most importance, instructor Jane Bertrand noted, will be the fact that the students will be participating in making decisions as to what projects are to be undertaken and how to implement them. The idea was used very successfully in the Community School.

The Non School is being financed by a number of sources with grants being provided by Kingston individuals and business and, in addition, the parents will be charged $15 a week.

Enrolment in the program is expected to be between ten and twenty children with ages ranging from four to ten.

The Non School will offer an atmosphere of freedom to its participants to allow them to develop on their own with guidance provided by the instructors.



It will be operating daily between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m beginning June 25 and running until August 31. Parents will be able to send their children to the school for whatever hours are most suitable. The Free School is located in the Kingston Community School at 86 Nelson Street and may be reached by calling 549-1775 or 542-6236.

Summer gymnastics for all

The Kingston Gym Club is planning many interesting gymnastics and trampoline activities in the city this summer. The club is sponsoring vaulting and tumbling displays in Sir John A. MacDonald Park at the corner of Barrie and King Streets for this Saturday afternoon at 3:00. Participating in this effort will be several Queen's gymnasts, while the assembled spectators will get a chance to bounce and swing after the actual demonstration.

The Club plans to celebrate the Kingston Tercentenary with a series of displays on July 13th at Confederation Park, in which it is expected that some national team gymnasts will be performing in addition to the Kingston contingent.

All of this is subsidiary, however, to the main effort of the summer, a recreational and competitive gymnastics and trampoline programme being operated in conjunction with the Board of Education at Loyalist Collegiate and the Queen's Physical Education Centre. For the six weeks of gymnastics which will involve two hours per day of instruction by Kingston's best coaches, the fee is five dollars plus a five dollar club membership. Classes will be offered morning, afternoon, and evening for youths aged 6 - 18 at all levels. Shorter instruction periods can be arranged also. The organizers may be contacted at the following numbers: Chris Woods at 549-0898, Helen Finley at 548-4059, or Mary Ellis at 544-3424.

perry

Heritage Kingston traces our history and art;

"Heritage Kingston" is a comprehensive and meticulous collection and display of over 250 historical and artistic objects now at the Agnes Etherington Arts Centre. It is an exhibit that simply must be seen, and seen more than once.

It caters to almost every possible interest, from archaelogy to photography, from historical interiors to detailed exhibits and models concerning transportation, from portraits of Kingstonians and their visitors to blueprints of buildings for Queen's which never materialized.

The research and care in designing this exhibition cannot be too highly praised, for aside from offering a detailed and lavish visual display a story is told as well. It is one which gives a colourful living picture of an age that has been locked into history books and frozen on canvas or in various archives, until now.

Through the work of Professor J. Douglas Stewart of the Art History Department and University Archivist Ian E. Wilson, a complete panorama of Kingston's history has been collected and resurrected in the Arts Centre and, as well, in a beautifully documented catalogue.

Ralph Allen's brainchild of three years ago and Frances K. Smith's co-ordination of all the materials that were located are presented in a string of smaller exhibits, each with extensive printed documentation and explanation.

Beginning with "Archaelogical Evidence", the earliest remnants of Kingston's past are illustrated. Dating from 9000 B.C. to about 1400 A.D. there are trade artifacts, as well as a model of an Iroquois village.

The second section highlights the Indian and French period, approximately from the early 17th Century to the mid 18th Century. It includes an astrolabe which is traditionally believed to have belonged to Champlain and which was found in 1867 near Green Lake in Renfrew County. It is "identified as one lost by Samuel de Champlain in portaging between Green Lake and Muskrat Lake in 1613 . . . one of the traditional footnotes in Canadian History."

Included in this section is a map printed by Champlain in 1631, a map of Lake Ontario after 1673 and some e cellent original documents concerning the founding Fort Frontenac.

In this section is also one of the exhibition's two roo reconstructions. The Habitant's Room (c. 1740) is set with all the appointments of a farm family during t French regime and shows the rusticity of the lifestyle that period.

In the next section, "The Loyalists and the War of 181 and the following one, "The Aftermath", there is mo historical documentation of The Garrison period. (Th was one of Kingston's most socially lively periods.)

In the Loyalist section there are several portraits prominent Kingston personalities, including Revere John Stuart, who became known as the Father of t Upper Canada Church and his wife, Jane Stuart. This pa of portraits, by an unknown artist, are done in oil canvas.

There is also a series of engravings showing sever naval scenes, and a watercolour showing Fort Henry 1821.

highlights architecture, people and decor

This type of documentation follows the period after the War of 1812 as well, and in the section following "The Aftermath", called "Artists Kingston" the period from the late 1820's to the 1860's is shown exclusively through the artists' eye. During this period Kingston harboured a very active artistic community. With the British Garrison, many military men were stationed in Kingston, men who had been trained both to sketch as well as to draw maps. This cartographic influence is evident in some of the watercolours which show details of land formations as well as the progress of the city.

The period itself was one characterized by a passion for "the picturesque and exotic qualities of landscape scenery in distant places as well", and this passion was nurtured even more by a demand for illustrated travel books.

"Kingston and her environs", Fort Henry, Barriefield and various exposures of the city are depicted in several styles and in several methods by Major-General James Pattison Cockburn, Mrs. Harriet (Dobbs) Cartwright and William Henry Bartlett, among others.

In the section on Kingston Churches, Churchmen and the University, several of the most interesting items are John Howard's "unexecuted designs for a monumental structure in the classical style which would have been Queen's first building." There is an engraving of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church and Manse, which stands at the corner of Princess and Clergy Streets, as well as other pieces of architectural documentation.

In another section of the exhibit, entitled "Kingston Elegance" we get a graphic view of the manifestations of the luxurious lifestyles of Kingston's wealthier inhabitants. There is a photograph of Rockwood House, located in Portsmouth and designed by George Browne, who designed Kingston's Town Hall. It is described as "a jewel of architectural design in itself."

In this section, the second room reconstruction, (the 1820's period room in pale blue tones, simple and uncluttered) is perhaps the best example of the elegance that was enjoyed during this period.

Throughout the entire exhibition are clippings of advertisements and announcements from the local press, then called the Chronicle and Gazette, notices announcing auctions of various items in the display as well as telling the news of the day.

The next sections centre on several more confined aspects of Kingston life, including transportation, a portrait gallery and a collection of vintage photographs.

The Transportation section includes mainly photographs of the major form of transportation, trains, as well as several models of boats and one locomotive. There are also some drawings and watercolours showing different landscapes of the city which were integral to travel; views of the entrance to Lake Ontario from Kingston Harbour and the Locks at Kingston Mills, all dated 1830.

Of particular interest to me was the selection of photographs. Viewed admittedly with a sense of nostalgia I enjoyed looking at Princess street in the 1860's through the 90's, at pictures of Sir John A. MacDonald's funeral procession and at his grave site at the Cataraqui Cemetery. Even more than the paintings, engravings and watercolours, these representations had a different kind of inpact and were a welcomed finale to an exhibit that has been centred on the more artistic representation of Kingston's history.

This does not mean that the authenticity of the show is in question at all. But so much seems removed from us, not only by the years that separate us but also by the abstract viewpoint that we can get. The artist's canvass, the architect's blueprint, the cartographer's draughts all authenticate what we see in the photographs at the end. In fact, they almost bridge the gap between history and today and bring us closer to the past.

The exhibit cannot be summarized in an article. Its tone its explicitness, its impact cannot be translated onto paper, except to some extent in the accompanying catalogue, which in a way is as much a part of the exhibit as the display itself. It documents to a greater extent the information and background of the material in the show.

Heritage Kingston must be visited several times at least. It is a very complex series of mini galleries which can overwhelm the onlooker if viewed too quickly.

It is a monumental piece of work, with contributions from the United States, from all over Canada, from the Royal Collection of Queen Elizabeth and from various collections in Kingston, Ottawa and Montreal.

Even though Kingston does not have a permanent museum, this exhibit is a beautiful, if temporary tribute to her Tercentenary and should engender both interest and pride in her past as well as the buildings and monuments which still stand.

Heritage Kingston will run until October 28.

Above Left - The aftermath display through a doorway to Artist's Kingston.

Below Left - Churches and Churchmen and the birth of a University.

Right - Habitant's Room, designed and planned by Jennifer McKendry.

Critic's Forum:

The Heartbreak Kid

The best part of the show was the preview

by Sandy Naiman

When the best part of a dreary Saturday afternoon at the movies is the preview, things are pretty bad. In this case, the movie in question is The Heartbreak Kid playing at the Capitol and the preview is for Travels With My Aunt. It's one of the nicest previews around for it shows director George Cukor's finest moments, cuts from The Philadelphia Story, Pat and Mike and other highlights of his film career. Then we get teased with cuts from Travels With My Aunt, with Maggie Smith looking fabulous at 40 and sensational at 75 in her own beautifully eccentric way.

As for The Heartbreak Kid, I find it difficult to understand why it has been billed "The Best and Most Original Comedy of 1972". In fact, I find it difficult to understand why it has been billed a comedy at all. Surely scriptwriter Neil Simon's name on the credits does not automatically designate it comic. Simon had more funny lines, appropriate or otherwise, in his first and only serious play, The Gingerbread Lady.

And looking at the work of director Elaine May I would have to say this is a step backward from her first film, A New Leaf, which was much funnier, much zanier and much more satisfying.

In Heartbreak Kid there isn't a likeable character in the cast and the entire premise of the story is based on blatant improbabilities.

An initially attractive young man, Lenny Cantrow (Charles Grodin) meets and marries an initially attractive young woman, Lila Kolodny (Jeannie Berlin). Their courtship, which takes about 30 seconds of time on film, consists of an hysterical cry, at the recognition of a pizza, a few "seductive" glances, a plea by Lila "to wait 10 days" until they are wedlocked and that's about it.

Then after the traditional "Jewish Wedding" a la Hollywood, we're off on the honeymoon with the little lovelies, who are losing their initial loveliness with increasing speed.

Speed, in fact, seems to be a great metaphor in this film. We see the newlyweds speeding to Miami Beach, we see Lenny trying to speed Lila up to get to the beach, we see Lila abstain from the use of sun tan lotion to speed up a sun tan, which becomes a sunburn, and which in itself, is the only real bit of action the film has.

As a result of this catastrophic occurence, the rest of the activity in the film takes place. He meets the beautiful mid western co-ed, Kelly Corcoran (Cybill Shepherd), falls instantly in love with her romantic utterance, "You're on my spot," (of the beach, that is) and her statuesque body and the rest concerns his getting out of his alliance with Lila.

There are some mildly humourous moments in the film which concern the first nights of the marriage between Lila and Lenny. Her introducing a Milky Way chocolate bar into the nuptial bed, her beautifully timed exclamations about how she and her husband will be together for 40 years, when he looks like he is going to be sick within the next 40 seconds, and a feckless conversation over the assets of egg salad. These details give the film the only comedy it may possess, the larger portion of it is tepid, with no comedy, and less pathos. Its emotional temperature, its dramatic texture and its comic attempts are all so benign as to defy giving this film a category at all.

The best acting comes in the supporting roles (where I would place Miss Berlin, needless to say) of Kelly's parents. As her father, "the brick wall", Eddie Albert is totally consistent, perfectly tuned in to the plight of losing his "little baby" to a cras, impetuous Jew. And Audra Lindley, who plays a similar role on the television series "Bridget Loves Bernie", plays the tittering, socially adept and sympathetic mother rather nicely. Although one wonders if this situation is the only one in which she is as effective.

As for the other performances, they seem tailor made. Jeannie Berlin, Miss May's daughter plays Lila in the stereotyped manner. She is grotesquely stupid, vulgar in her dress, her eating habits, even in the way that she applies cream to sooth her sunburn. Her performance is consumed with excesses and she is totally nauseating.

As Lenny Cantrow, Charles Grodin is at least less obvious than Miss Berlin. He is pathetic in his conversations with the Corcorans because he seems to be so mismatched intellectually.

It is almost impossible to understand why he would even fall for Kelly, who is so sleek and elegant, when a mere 5 days before he married Super Klutz, Lila.

At any rate, the last image we are left with, Lenny at his second wedding, sitting alone, have lost a less than captive audience of ten year olds, is depressing to say the least.

If his portrait is meant to be one of the idealistic young man seeking meaning in life, he has failed in his second attempt.

But, frankly, Miss May's purpose doesn't seem to be as altruistic or high flown as all that. She has sketched instead the portrait of a bunch of beautiful but base losers. Some of the credit should be given to Bruce Jay Friedman, on whose short story, Neil Simon based his script.

And the funny thing is, after all that, you really aren't sure who the Heartbreak Kid is, for it could be almost any one of them.

A particularly unfunny "comedy"

by Kiloran German

To be fair, there is one funny moment in "The Heartbreak Kid": while speeding down the freeway to the inevitable Miami honeymoon, Lila, the blushing bride, shoves her ample bosom in her new husband's face, to his dismay and to the delight of passing truck drivers.

Unfortunately, the rest of the film seems to be devoted to being particularly unfunny. It accomplishes this extremely well by concentrating on two rather morose themes - that insincerity conquers all and that love does nothing but vulgarize the lover.

These themes are explored relentlessly through the heavy handed parallels between two shaky relationships. Lila, the vulgar, idolizes Lenny, the sensitive. She drives him to distraction with her constant reminders that they have fifty years of married life to enjoy and she extinguishes his passion by chatting incessantly while he would rather be otherwise occupied and by munching on chocolate bars when she should be munching on him. She is thoroughly nauseating, and he is quickly nauseated.

Suddenly, a golden girl pops out of the sun and now Lenny, the sensitive, idolizes Kelly, the beautiful. He immediately becomes as vulgar, awkward and gauche as was the repulsive Lila, who is quietly sobbing her way back to New York. He simpers, giggles moronically, and murmurs platitudes that Kelly's father accurately alludes to as a "a crock of horseshit".

Although the parallel is by now painfully obvious, it is extended even further. Lenny starts talking about the glories of fifty years of married life and (horror of horrors!) he talks too much in bed. One is left only to wonder how many days it will take Kelly to become nauseated and to vulgarize herself for the sake of some new paragon of perfection.

A final inexplicable parallel remains - in both relationships, for no apparent reason, the idol submits to the idolator. It is difficult to understand why Lenny would have been attracted to Lila, or why Kelly to Lenny. Mere flattery is an insufficient explanation.

The humour turns inwards on this depressing statement on human relationships, and becomes as nauseating as are the characters.

The film suffers from some interesting technical problems. The photography and editing are extremely poor - jerky, jumpy, and amateurish. Surprisingly enough, this home-movie effect works well initially - it captures the essence of the schmaltzy Jewish wedding. The remaining two hours of film, however, require a more polished style.

The acting alone makes the film worthwhile, given the limitations of the script and the gloomy direction. Jeannie Berlin and Charles Grodin are appropriately revolting as the newlyweds and Cybill Shephard manages to be both seductive and frigid as Kelly. Unfortunately the performances are not sufficient to dispel the gloom.

St James Anglican Church

9 AM Holy Communion
11 AM Morning Prayer and Holy Baptism
Preacher: Rev. Eric Howes

WARNING: The Department of National Health and Welfare advises that danger to health increases with amount smoked

Write Stuff
NoNonsense Pen

Simple, straight-forward, classic—out of step with today's throwaway culture. Refillable cartridge, ballpoint or fiber tip marker in basic tan or navy blue. $1.98: not bad for a pen you may use the rest of your life.

$1.98

SHEAFFER WORLD WIDE A textron COMPANY

LADIES ELECTROLYSIS
Avoid shaving, tweezing, or the use of dipilatories. Have your eyebrows styled and unwanted hair removed permanently by electrolysis. Physicians recommend our work. For a free consultation and information call:
HARRISON SALON 542-5595

CANADA MANPOWER
Centre For Students
NOW OPEN
FEDERAL BUILDING
(above Post Office)
BAGOT ST. ENTRANCE
RM. 241
PHONE: 546-4204 546-4205
HOURS: 8:30 - 5:00

GREAT STEAKS
try the
Porterhouse Special
10 oz RED BRAND aged beef
Baked Potatoe - Vegetable
Rolls and Butter
Limited Offer 3.99 Red Brand Beef Only
For $1.40 more you get Soup or Juice - Tossed Fancy Salad (Best salad in town) Beverage and choice of Desert.

Aunt Lucy's Restaurant Tavern
Princess West at Portsmouth
No reservations
Relaxed Informal Dining
Great Place For That Special Date!

Pizza Chalet
286 MONTREAL ST. KINGSTON
544-1227
OPEN MON. TUES WED. 4:00 p.m. to 1:00 a.m.
OPEN ALL DAY SUNDAY 12 – 12
OPEN THURS. FRI. SAT. 4:00 p.m. to 2:00 a.m.

Chalet Deluxe EXTRA LARGE — Pepperoni- Mushrooms- Bacon Sausage- Green Peppers- Olive Cheese- Tomato Sauce — $5.50
BIGGEST PIZZA YOU'VE EVER SEEN!

SELECTION WITH CHEESE & TOMATO SAUCE	11" REG	13" MED	15" LGE	SUPER 17" X-LGE
1. Pepperoni-Mushrooms-Bacon-Green Peppers Sausages-Olive	2.50	3.65	4.55	5.50
2. Pepperoni-Mushrooms	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
3. Pepperoni-Bacon	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
4. Mushrooms-Bacon	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
5. Combination Pizza Pepperoni-Mushrooms Green Peppers-Olives	2.40	2.95	3.95	4.95
6. Bacon	1.85	2.60	3.65	4.65
7. Pepperoni	1.85	2.60	3.65	4.65
8. Cheese	1.75	2.40	2.95	3.90
9. Mushrooms	1.85	2.60	3.65	4.65

Combination Special — Pepperoni- Olive Mushrooms- Green Peppers — $3.95
A LARGE PIZZA SURE TO PLEASE

Sleuth

Reviewing the Reviews

by Dave Fritz

(Ed Note: I am very glad to see that Critic's Forum has sparked some outside interest in the material that was reviewed. This article was submitted several hours after Thursdays Journal was distributed.)

The Journal's reviews of Sleuth (June 14) raise some interesting problems. Working on the assumption that the reviewers are past the stage of equating criticism with fault-finding, I find some of the statements difficult to comprehend.

Foremost of these is the transformation of a stage play which is both a critical and a box-office success into a film. First of all, this transition has been rather well accomplished. Now, consider the following quote. "The problem when translating excellent stage plays onto the screen is that detail becomes more important than in the original form and there is always the feeling of staginess within an unnecessarily stagy medium." In the context of the review, it seems that this means that the film did not look like a stage play viewed from the fifth row. This is the precise difference between a film and a play. The camera is mobile, both inside a set and between sets. A stage play must employ various conventions and dramatic devices to overcome the limitation of a fixed stage. The excellence of a play is due in part to how well this is done. A film does not have these limitations. To impose these limitations on a film and then to employ the devices of the stage to overcome these limitations is not a virtue but a fault (unnecessary staginess). Sleuth is not guilty of this act. The film employs a mobile camera to both give an intimate view of the rooms and to go outside the house, impossible on the stage. The camera's ability to look through the eyes of a character is also well used. In short, Sleuth is a film, not a filmed record of a stage play.

(Ed Note: Mr. Fritz seems to have misinterpreted what was meant by the statement he quoted. I was not saying that the film did NOT look like the stage play viewed from the fifth row, but that because of stationary camera angels, restrictive locales and almost no attempt to compliment the material within the film medium, it looked to me like a blatant attempt to film the play as it appeared on stage, hence the staginess.)

The question of the film being less powerful than the play lies, I suspect, in the reviewer's inability to accept the conventions of the film medium.

All three reviewers seemed unconvinced by the film. As we stated, Sleuth is a one shot deal. A second dispassionate viewing may lead to a sense of some ineffectuality. The film is, however, one in which audience involvement and participation are necessary. This should be viewed not as a fault but as an index of the success of the film.

Dissatisfaction was expressed with the levity at various stages in the film. Levity is one of the indicators of control of the games. In a serious game, levity is a luxury allowed only those in a superior position. This is evident in the later stages of each game, when only the character in control is making witty remarks. Also the levity and the macabre side of things are complements rather than opposites in some sort of balance. The early exchanges between Caine and Olivier are not at odds with later developments, but instead reinforce the seriousness of the theme. The seeming inconsistencies (I would say complexities) in character of both Wyke and Tindel also contribute to the final impact of the film. The fact that both men are complex enough to manage the brilliance necessary when each is in control is striking. In each case a brilliant man has been reduced to a puppet by an equally brilliant opponent. Wyke is obviously excellent at the game. Milo's excellence in the second game only reinforces Wyke's in the first. The only other conclusion is that both are puerile idiots. I find it difficult to admit that puerile idiots could sustain such a complex game.

The complaint that the film loses suspence must also be examined. There seem to be three levels of suspense. The first is the suspense during each game as to the detective story outcome. Is Wyke going to kill Milo? Is Doppler going to solve the murder? Will Milo get away with murdering Thea and blaming it on Wyke? The second level of suspense enters when we realize that all is a game. Who will be the eventual winner? The third is an external suspense. Does the playwright have enough guts to turn the game around again? Again? Again? The final release comes at the end of the film. Even then we are not totally released. The games are finally over but can Wyke escape the real consequences of his game?

Critic's Forum did succeed in provoking questions which I hope I have managed to answer. As to my own opinion of the film, I found it an excellent, powerful and intriguing work, in which my only point of dissatisfaction (the conclusion) was on a personal preference level, not on a critical point.

Summer?days

Movies

Capital - Travels with My Aunt with Maggie Smith
Hyland - Man of La Mancha with Peter O'Toole and Sophia Loren Odeon - Kid Blue with Dennis Hopper

Drive-Ins

Mustang Drive-In — Female Response and Fanny Hill Meets Lady Chatterly. Starting next week — Wicked Wicked and Chandelier

Kingston Drive-In — Carry On Loving and Rent a Dick and starting next week — The Step Mother and The Pink Angels

Concerts

Grand Theatre this Friday, June 22, two shows featuring Count Basie and His Orchestra. 7:00 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. Tickets are $4.00 and $5.00 and are available at the Grand Theatre, Vern Napier's in the Kingston Shopping Centre and Sharpe and Flats at the Frontenac Mall.

Pubs

Commodore - Horizon until Saturday only.
401 Inn - Six Pack presents Arnold's Grease Band until Saturday.
Lakeview Manor - The Reflection until Saturday, starting Monday June 25, Julie Lyn Seaway Townhouse - The O'Brien Six until Saturday.

Theatre

St. Lawrence Summer Playhouse presents "I Do, I Do" from Saturday June 23 to Saturday June 30. Curtain at 8:30 p.m. Tickets available at the Tent Theatre Box Office. $3.00 for adults, $2.50 for students. Reservations can be made by calling 542-9938. Tickets must be picked up by 8:15 p.m. on the night of performance.

Seminar on Continuing Education

Thursday, June 21 - Saturday June 23, in Leonard Hall. Kingston Council for Continuing Education opens the session on Thursday.

Friday, June 22 at 9:30 a.m. Ruben Nelson, consultant to the department of health and welfare will give an address Friday afternoon will be a series of workshops concerning the Commission on Post-Secondary Education in Ontario. Nelson will give another address on Saturday afternoon at 2:00 p.m.

Chucklebait at Pub

The music of Chucklebait, the new group that is playing at the Queen's Pub tonight and tomorrow, has been described as "crisp and alive with a sound that lies somewhere between that of Yes and that of Uriah Heep". We don't doubt that this is true even though none of us have ever heard of them. At any rate, its probably worth the 50c cover charge to find out.

Canada: House ends US gas spree

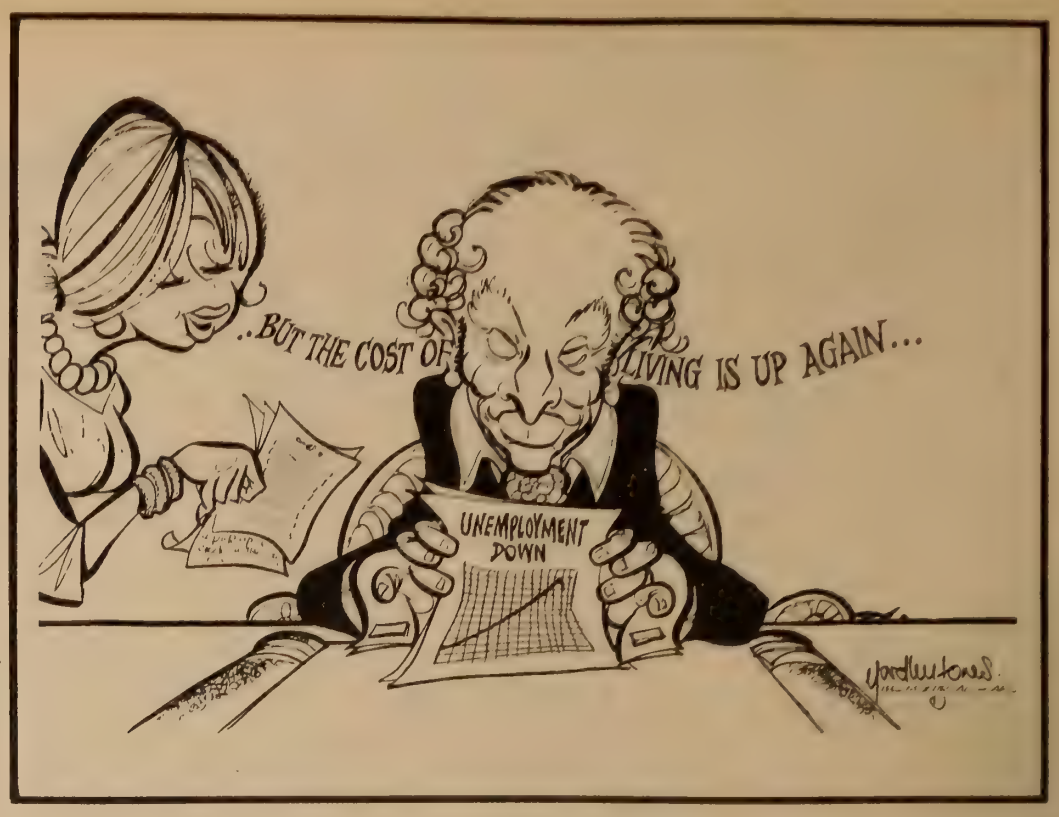
OTTAWA — The Federal Government has imposed a set of stringent controls on the exports of gasoline and heating fuels south of the border, after discovering that such exports could very quickly cause a fuel shortage in Canada, especially next winter.

The United States' fuel supplies dwindled last winter with frequent blackouts and shortages of heating fuels. At that time Nixon lifted all import quotas on the fuels and exports from Canada showed an immediate increase of fifty times the previous year's level.

The latest action was taken by the Canadian government after restrictions on exports of oil merely led to a diversion of exports into gasoline. Attempts by the government to encourage voluntary restraints by refiners failed completely in the face of the soaring prices of American fuels.

It was announced that the export restrictions could last anywhere from one and a half to two years depending on the availability of foreign supplies and the completion of new refineries.

KINGSTON — Warnings are being issued to motorists heading south that it is a long distance between oases and that their camels could become extremely thirsty in the meantime. The effect of the recent fuel shortages has become manifested in the closing of a number of gas stations, rationing of gasoline supplies, early closing times and a number are remaining closed on weekends.



Of 1,989 gas stations examined in a recent study, 32 per cent had reduced their working hours and 10 per cent of the stations bordering Eastern Canada are rationing their gas.

OTTAWA — Not only is there a shortage of gasoline but, the Bank of Canada has now announced that they are facing a shortage of dimes. The Toronto Dominion Bank is lamenting the fact that the public aren't depositing any of the silver currency. The Bank of Canada has announced that it can't keep up with the orders for more.

It is believed that the shortage had its roots in silver speculation on the New York bullion market where any dime minted before 1966 was worth $.14. A ban was finally placed on exports of the currency in April.

EDMONTON — In an attempt to spark a hope for the future of heating and gasoline in Ontario, the provincial government has intimated that plans are in the offing for joint exploration of the Alberta Athabaska oil sands with the Alberta government. It is an attempt by the Ontario government to find larger and more secure energy supplies to support an ever growing demand.

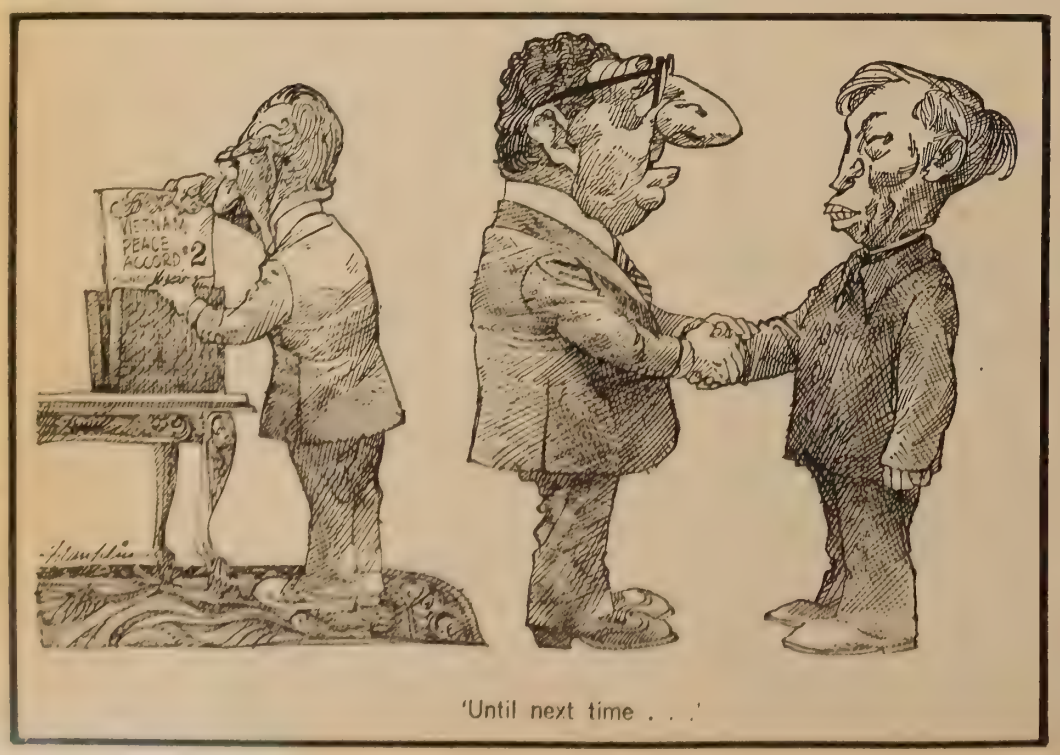
MONTREAL — The shortage of flights out of and into Canada has come to a tentative end. As Air Canada began to cut its flights by 30 per cent and was beginning to consider shutting down its operations all together, the machinists' contract dispute was resolved in principle. It will now be going before the members for final approval.

TORONTO — To help smooth out the housing shortage and ensure that everyone has an equal opportunity under the Home Ownership Made Easy plan,the government has instituted a housing lottery to determine who should be in a new Toronto subdivision. These buyers will be pinning their hopes on the luck of the draw before their applications are turned over to builders.

TORONTO — The good samaritan is finally to be rewarded. The Ontario government has unveiled plans to strike a good citizenship metal and the first recipients were to be announced this week. It is to be the reward for the ordinary man's virtues of selflessness, humanity, and kindness through doing things which are generous and useful "simply because they feel themselves that they should."

OTTAWA — The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, bowing to mounting public pressure, is planning to remove all advertising from its television programs aimed at children, but only if parliament puts up nearly $2.5 million to make up for lost advertising revenue. At present the CBC is providing about 1,700 hours of commercial free preschooler programming. The new plan would extend this to the remaining 600 hours.

TORONTO — The Ontario branch of the Canadian Bar Association wants to give all citizens the right to unrestricted civil action against polluters. The proposal, which is far ahead of present government feelings on the matter, would give any individual the unlimited right to lay charges against a company or government agency which is harming the province's air, water or public lands.



Under the present laws, an individual can only bring suit where it is directly injuring him or his property.

MONTREAL — Bell Canada, after decades of monopoly, has begun to sound out competition. The company has announced that they are considering an end to restrictions on connection of customer-owned equipment into its own network. They noted that the company now feels that competition is better for the consumer than regulation.

World: new US attempt to bring price stability

WASHINGTON — President Richard Nixon has returned to his old favourite panacea - price controls - imposed this time for a period of up to sixty days. The controls will include all products with the exception of raw agricultural goods. The plan is being instituted while the administration develops a new set of economic controls that will involve tighter standards and more mandatory guidelines than under the current Phase III.

Nixon is also asking Congress for the authority to control and limit the exports of nearly all greens and animal feeds to reduce their shortages which are forcing up farm costs.

'Until next time . . .'

PARIS — Another ceasefire agreement has been signed by the four parties involved in South Vietnam in an attempt to bolster the shaky Vietnam peace pact. However, shortly after the signing, there were continued reports of rocket fire, artillery shootings, mortars and guns and little progress in implementing the new agreement.

The pact bans any troop movements into new areas of control and forbids United States and North Vietnam to introduce troops or military advisors into South Vietnam. However, it makes no provisions for general elections in South Vietnam nor the ending of hostilities in Cambodia or Laos.

LONDON — A mounting wave of British truck thefts hit the phenomenal figure of $260 million last year. In an attempt to stem the tide, the British government plans to start building a network of high security truck parks. They will feature twelve-foot-high fences, ditches, barbed wire, dog patrols and constant scrutiny by guards in bullet proof watch towers and on closed circuit TV.

PARIS — The French government is taking steps to end the high accident levels on its roads with the imposition of an unprecedented sixty-mile per hour limit on most of them with the exemption of the super highways. Last year 17,000 persons were killed and 380,000 were injured on French roads, the highest tally in the world. It is double that of Britain and Germany and three times that of the United States.

backpage

Library discussing possibility of change in hours

by Susan de Stein

In response to a letter which appeared in the Journal of June 14, Acting Head Librarian Mrs. L. Good, told the Journal that the question of library hours is under constant discussion. She pointed out that there are several factors which must be taken into consideration when discussing a possible extension or change of library hours.

"The library operates on a fixed operating budget," Good noted, "we do not have unlimited funds." The budget, she added, also covers the funding of branch libraries. Consideration must also be given to staff needs. She indicated that all effort is being made to make best use of the money that is available.

The library has also made several attempts to judge which hours are the most heavily used. When the last survey was taken, "the present scheme seemed the most appropriate in terms of usage," Good said. "If it is found now that we are inconveniencing a large number of students, and the demand for a change or extension is building, it is possible that an adjustment could be made." She indicated that a survey of student opinion would be taken in the near future. She stressed however that the library, at this point could make no promises.

Good made a distinction between two types of library 'users'. Besides those who wish to use the library merely as a resource centre and who wish to take out books and materials, there are also those for whom the library merely provides a good atmosphere for studying.

It has been suggested that the hours of the reading rooms be extended past the closing of the main circulation desk, in order to permit students to work in the library. Good indicated that the feasibility of the suggestion would be discussed at a staff meeting this week.

Welcome

Queen's welcomes this week 1500 students taking arts and science courses through the department of extension and about 1300 more taking courses in the faculty of education. In addition, a large number of graduate students and intramural students are around campus.

Summer school students are members of the Queen's Summer School Association, (also known as the Queen's Extramural Student's Association) which sponsors events from time to time. QSSA can be reached through the department of extension at 547-3283, or through its vice-president, Steve Gilchrist at 548-3144.

The Alma Mater Society, (AMS), the student government of Queen's (with offices in the basement of the Union), will continue its operations through the summer. (The AMS also operates the pub on the second floor of the Union which is open weeknights from eight to twelve.)

The Journal published de la semaine by the AMS will operate each week during the summer session. The centre two pages of the paper will contain the xtramural xaminer inserted by QSSA, and independent of any AMS or Journal control or influence.

Queen's

Journal

Volume One Hundred, No. 58

Monday, July 2, 1973

Laurentian out of OFS

TORONTO-- The student association of Laurentian University in Sudbury has withdrawn from the Ontario Federation of Students.

In a letter to the OFS executive Malcolm Jacobs, president of the Laurentian student body, said there was "no credibility to OFS in the eyes of the students" at his university, and charged that "OFS does not represent a majority of, nor even a good sized minority of students in Ontario."

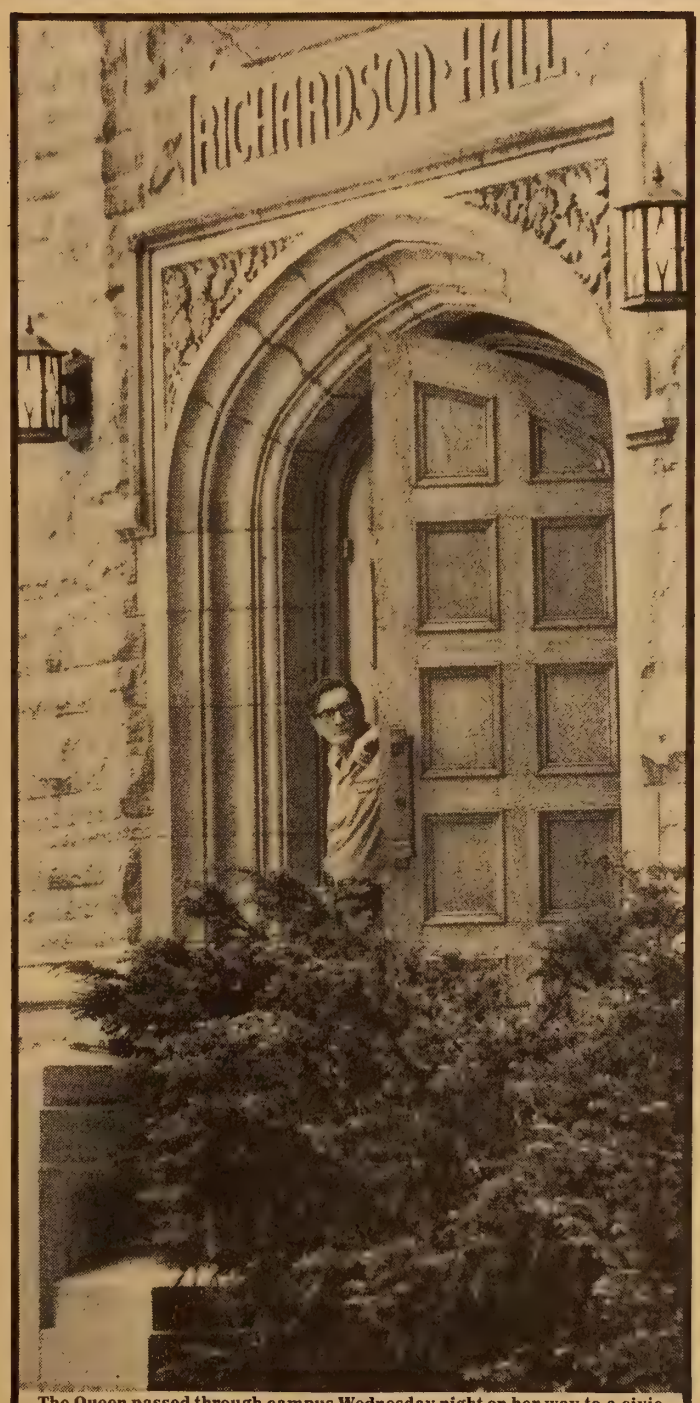
Jacobs complained that last year OFS was completely one issue orientated -- the fee withholding, and stated that the OFS performance at the post-secondary learning conference claimed it "has no definite plan in any direction other than generalities in every direction."

OFS executive members didn't wish to comment on the withdrawal at press time, but at its executive meeting last week, it "Tabled indefinately" the OFS draft response to the COPSE Report until "a more thorough and analytical" response is drafted under the chairmanship of the University of Toronto Student Administrative Council.

The sketchy OFS draft, drawn up at its annual meeting early last month, had been criticized by a number of people, but lacks official sanction until it has been approved by a majority of member student councils.

New head in Theology

Dr. B. Robert Bater has been appointed Principal of the Queen's Theological College. Bater, presently Senior Minister of the Eglinton United Church in Toronto, will succeed the late Principal Donald Mathers as chief executive officer of the College and is expected to take up his new post in the spring of 1974. Dr. C. H. Parker, Professor of Hebrew and Old Testament, will continue as Acting Principal.



A native of Stoney Beach, Saskatchewan, the 45 year old Bater, a former Rhodes scholar, has a wide university background. He attended the University of Saskatchewan; Worcester College, Oxford; Union Theological Seminary, New York and studied at the University of Tubingen, Germany. His major academic interest is in the field of biblical literature, especially the New Testament and its relevance to contemporary social problems.

Author of the United Church's adult study book for 1970-71, 'All This and Christian Too', Dr. Bater has contributed to publications such as the 'Canadian Journal of Theology', 'Interpretation', 'Religion and Life', 'The Journal of Biblical Literature' and 'The United Church Observer'.

Prior to his current appointment at Eglinton Church he was for thirteen years Professor of New Testament at Saint Andrew's College and Lecturer in Biblical Literature at the University of Saskatchewan.

The new Principal will bring to Queen's Theological College his extensive experience in theological education, parish ministry, and university teaching at a time when the College is expanding its scope of activity. In addition to a flourishing three-year professional degree programme for students intending to enter the pastoral ministry, the College serves a growing department of religion within the faculty of arts and science at Queen's University and conducts a number of programmes and institutes providing continuing educational opportunities for parish ministers.

Dr. Bater is married and has two children.

The Queen passed through campus Wednesday night on her way to a civic dinner at Leonard Hall.

Registration

Confirmation of registration for summer courses must be made in person today between the hours of 9 am and 4 pm at the Bews Gym in the Physed Centre. Students who do not confirm registration risk having a failure listed on their academic records.

Pub prices up

Due to cost increases, the Pub has been forced to increase the price of beer to 50c and liquor to 75c. Pub manager, Dale Johnston indicated that a sales tax, aimed at consistent special occasions licenses such as those issued to student pubs across Canada, has necessitated the increase. It was also noted by Pub personnel that the waitresses and waiters, who rely mainly on their tips as income, are suffering from the increase.

The Pub has also found it necessary to increase the cover charge to the House of Lords on 'band-nights', due to the rising cost of providing live entertainment. Bands will be performing in the Pub three nights a week during Summer school.

Fee structure

Due to some of the uproar caused last summer, fees for summer session have changed slightly in format. Each student now pays a "non-academic" fee of six dollars and tuition of $120 per course.

In the past, the university had collected an all inclusive fee from summer students and then made grants to the student society, the union operating budget, and other student services. During the winter, students are assessed a student interest fee which goes directly to student services.

The breakdown of the six dollars is as follows: student health service, $1.50, athletic programme, .35c Students' Union, $2.00, AMS .25c, QSSA, $1.90.

XTRAMURAL XAMINER

The Xtramural Xaminer is published by the Queen's University Summer School Association and is independent of the Queen's Journal and the Alma Mater Society. Editor: Steve Gilchrist.

Volume 1, Number 1, Monday, July 2, 1973

Queen's University Summer School activities 1973

Tues., July 3 - Volleyball (mixed), Ross and Bartlett Gyms, 6:30 p.m.
- Library Tours, sign at registration or at the library.
- Softball (men), see QUASSA for place and schedule, 6:00 - 8:00 p.m.

Wed., July 4 - Fine Arts Concert, Ellis Hall, noon.
- Basketball (men and ladies), Queen's Gym, 7:00 p.m.
- Wine and Cheese Party, Leonard Hall Dining Hall, 8:00 p.m.

Thurs., July 5 - Duplicate Bridge, Student Union, McLaughlin Hall, 7:00 p.m. (no preregistration).
- Softball (men) 6:00 p.m. see QUASSA listing.
- Movie, Dunning Hall, Aug. 7 and 9:15 p.m.

Mon., July 9 - Golf Tournament, Glen Lawrence Club, submit score card at desk at Victoria Hall (July 9 - 27).
- Volleyball (mixed), Gym, 6:30-8:30 p.m.

Tues., July 10 - Softball (men), West Campus and St. Mary's on the Lake, 6:30 p.m.
- Movie, Dunning Hall, 7 and 9:15 p.m.

Wed., July 11 - Beer and Bingo, 8 p.m. Leonard Hall Dining room, (tentative).
- Fine Arts Concert, Ellis Hall, noon.
- Basketball, (ladies and men), Gym, 7:00 p.m.

Thurs., July 12 - Duplicate Bridge, Students Union, McLaughlin Room, 7:00.
- Movie, Dunning Hall, 7 and 9:15 p.m.

Mon., July 16 - Volleyball (mixed), Ross and Bartlett Gyms, 7:00 p.m.

Tues., July 17 - Golf Tournament continues - score cards to Victoria Hall.
- Softball continues (men), 6:30 p.m.
- Movie, Dunning Hall, 7 and 9:15 p.m.

Wed., July 18 - Boat Cruise through the Thousand Islands, see posters in Victoria Hall for time and place.
- Fine Arts Concert, Ellis Hall, noon.
- Basketball, Queen's Gym, 7 p.m.

Thurs., July 19 - Table Tennis, Victoria Hall, 7:00 p.m. (watch for posting).
- Duplicate Bridge, Stud. Union, 7:30 p.m.
- Softball (men), 6:30 p.m.
- Movie, Dunning Hall, 7 and 9:15 p.m.

Mon., July 23 - Volleyball (mixed), 7:00 p.m. Ross and Bartlett Gyms.
- Golf Tournament continues.

Tues., July 24 - Tennis Tournament, Queen's Courts, 6:30 p.m.
- Softball (mens), 6:30 p.m.
- Movie, Dunning Hall, 7 and 9:15 p.m.

Wed., July 25 - Annual Meeting of Summer School Assoc.
- Fine Arts Concert, Ellis Hall, noon.
- Basketball, Gym, 7:00 p.m.

Thur., July 26 - Duplicate Bridge, 7:30 p.m. Students Union.
- Softball (men), 6:30 p.m.
- Movie, Dunning Hall, 7 and 9:15 p.m.

Mon., July 30 - Volleyball continues

Tues., July 31 - Softball continues.
- Table Tennis, Victoria Hall, 7:00 p.m.
- Movie, Dunning Hall, 7 and 9:15 p.m.

Wed., Aug. 1 - Fine Arts Concert, Ellis Hall, noon.
- Basketball (men and ladies) 7:30 p.m. continues.

Thur., Aug. 2 - Dance at the 401 Inn, 9:00 p.m. (tentative)
- Softball, 6:30 p.m.
- Duplicate Bridge, 7:30 p.m. continues

Mon., Aug. 6 - Volleyball Finals (mixed), 7:00 p.m.

Tues., Aug. 7 - Softball (mens), 6:00 p.m.
- Movie, Dunning Hall, 7 and 9:15 p.m.

Wed., Aug. - Fine Arts Concert, Ellis Hall, noon.

Thur., Aug. 9 - Movie, Dunning Hall, 7 and 9:15 p.m.

Do

This year, once a Summer School Assoc
a full schedule of socia
(?) and athletic event for the duration of th
session.

If you are athle
clined, in addition to t squash, swimmi facilities of the Education Centre ( are free to use on prese your student card), th
School Association is (Fir

Dunning Auditorium
Thursday, July 5, 7 & 9:15 pm
Admission: Only $1.50

SUMMER CINEMA

The Boys in the Band

ve have a summer for you!

the volleyball, basketball, tennis and baseball games and a golf tournament. For those looking for less strenouus activities there is table tennis and duplicate bridge.

On the cultural side, there will be concerts in Ellis Hall auditorium each Wednesday at noon and Summer Cinema will be offering great recent issue movies every Tuesday and Thursday night in Dunning Auditorium. Upcoming films include: "They Shoot Horses Don't They", "One Day in the Life of Ivan Denisovich", "The Boys in the Band", "Straw Dogs", "Casablanca and Little Caesar" (the same night, "The Valachi Papers", "I am Curious - Yellow", "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid", "2001: A Space Odyssey", "A Man Called Horse", "Fellini's Satyricon", and possibly, "Slaughterhouse Five".

Other social events planned for the next six weeks include the Wine and Cheese Party this Wednesday night at 8 p.m. in Leonard Hall Cafeteria, a Beer and Bingo with over $1000 in prizes, the following Wednesday in Leonard Hall Cafeteria, A Boat Cruise (a Beer Bash and Weiner Roast) on the 18th, a Dance at the 401 Inn and the Annual Meeting (Drunk) of the Summer School Association on the 25th.

In addition to Summer School activities, this year, especially, there are plenty of activities in celebration of Kingston Tercentenary being put on in various places throughout the city.

The week of July 9-15 is Homecoming Week with many activities being sponsored in Macdonald Park. On July 9th, Count Frontenac and his entourage will leave from Lachine, Quebec, to re-enact the Count's original journey. The actual re-enactment of the landing will take place July 13th at 7:30p.m. at the Navy Bay. There will be a fireworks display on Fort Henry hill afterwards.

If you have any comments, suggestions, or earth-shattering news you would like to place in the Xaminer, please drop them off in the box provided in the Leonard Hall Office or the Department of Extension. Remember, this paper is paid for by your fees.

Help Wanted

yone wishing to help out any of the mmer School Association committees s, Publicity, Newspaper, Social, or Athletic) is requested to phone or visit
Steve Gilchrist
Apt. 1210 Elrond College, 548-3144
or leave your name at the desk in the Dept. of
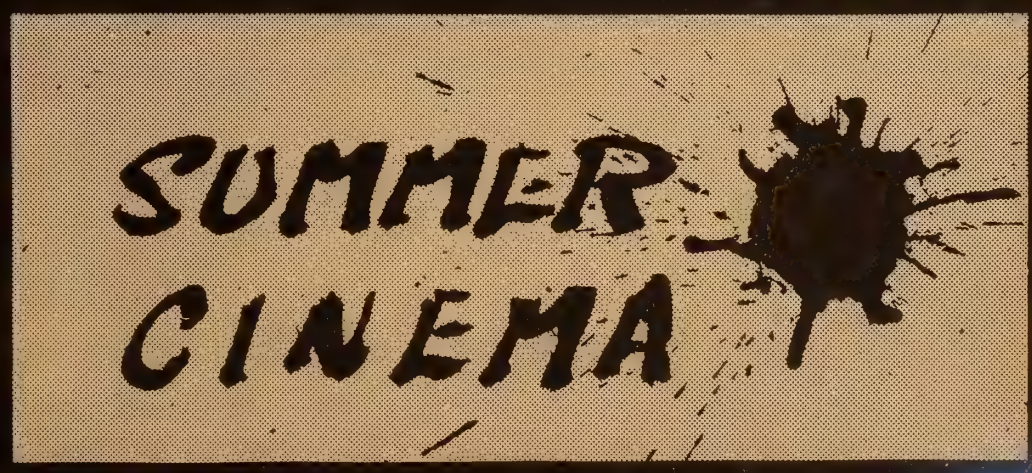
Extension, 547-3284.

Wine & Cheese Party

Leonard Hall Dining Room
Wednesday at 8 pm



Wine & Cheese Free
(while it lasts)
Beer (3/$1.00)

Student cards are required for admission!

TOMORROW NIGHT!

The Valachi Papers

Dunning Auditorium
Tuesday, July 3, 7& 9:15 pm
Admission: Only $1.50

summerdaze!

THEATRE

St. Lawrence Summer Playhouse presents "Anne of Green Gables" from Tuesday until July 14. Curtain at 8:30 pm. Tickets available at the Tent Theatre Box Office (in the park) $3.00 for adults, $2.50 for students. Reservations 542-9938.

TEACH-IN

Special Teach-in on Venerial Disease and Birth Control. Thursday July 5 at 7.30 pm at the YM-YWCA, 100 Wright Cres. (across from the shopping centre). Sponsored by the Birth Control and Abortion Information and Referral Service.

FUN and FROLIC

The People's Assembly. Today from 3 pm to midnight at the Agnes Etherington Art Centre. There will be games, dancing and fun for the entire family.

EXHIBITION

"Heritage Kingston" a major exhibition of visual and documentary material relating to the 300 years growth of the City of Kingston and the European settlements of this area. Agnes Etherington Art Centre, through October 28.

LIBRARY HOURS

Circulation Desk
Reserve Room Central Info.
Services Room
Main Reading Room
Stacks
Periodicals Room
Mon.- Fri. 8:45 a.m. - 10 p.m.
Saturday: 8:45 a.m. - 4:30 p.m.
Sunday: Noon - 9:00 p.m.

Documents Unit
Mon.-Thurs. 8:45 a.m. - 9:00 p.m.
Friday: 8:45 a.m. - 4:30 p.m.

Archives and Special Collections
Mon. - Fri. 8:45 a.m. - 4:30 p.m.

BRANCHES: Ask at Central Information Services Desk or Circulation Desk.

MOVIES

Capitol Theatre - The Neptune Factor
Odeon - Live and Let Die
Hyland - Godspell

OTHER EVENTS

For a list of events being sponsored by the Summer School Association, see inside.

BRIDGE

This summer the Queen's Duplicate Bridge Club will be holding games during July and the first part of August. Students attending Summer School are automatically members of QDBC.

Games are held Thursdays at 7:30 pm usually in the McLAughlin Room of the Student's Union.

For additional information call Harry Dodsworth at 547-3270 (days) or 542-5693 (evenings).

unclassifieds

ROOMS AVAILABLE for summer in student-owned houses. Reasonable, close to campus. Call Don at 544-3778.

GUITAR FOR SALE: Gibson SJN Deluxe (acoustic) with Grover heads. 2 yrs. old. Excellent condition. Asking $300. Phone Jaime at 542-2063. Case included.

SUMMER ACCOMODATION: Available July 1. 6 large broadloomed bedrooms. Individually or as whole. Large kitchen, back-yard. Livingroom. Best offer accepted. Phone before 3 pm. Tim Edwards. Visit a beautiful home. 32 Alwington Ave.

MISSING OR LOST IN TORONTO AGAIN: One male, brown hair, blue eyes, mustache, 6' 1"..Want information about whereabouts.

SORRY KORN, Morris.

Unclassifieds are a dollar for thirty words. Deadline is Tuesday at 7 pm for the Thursday paper. The Journal offices are in the basement of the Students' 'union.

TELL MORLEY to get you a leased line. They're cheap.

Queen's Journal
Vol. 100, No. 58
Mon., July 2, 1973

Staff this issue: Susan de Stein and Charles Schwier, the rest of the staff being scattered to the wind. We made the 5:40. Eat your hearts out. (Woody's Note: You did so well we're letting you put the rag together for the rest of the summer...and have them all on the 5:40) Isn't dat kute, S and C. (JVS's Note: Caught you at it at 5:40, you didn't quite make it. Better try again next week.) Try helping, John!

Published once weekly on Thursdays during the summer by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc., Member Canada University Press. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society of the University. Offices are located in the Student's Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

LADIES ELECTROLYSIS
Avoid shaving, tweezing, or the use of dipilatories. Have your eyebrows styled and unwanted hair removed permanently by electrolysis. Physicians recommend our work. For a free consultation and information call:
HARRISON SALON 542-5595

Birth Control, VD, and Abortion Information and Referral
Mon., - Fri., noon - 9 pm.
Sat. 1 pm - 5 pm
165 University, 547-2806

Summer Adult Swim Program
July 9 - Aug. 10

Men's (Beginners)	Mon. & Wed. 6:15 - 7:00 p.m.
Men's (General Improvement)	Mon. & Wed. 6:15 - 7:00 p.m.
Ladies (Beginners)	Tues. & Thurs. 6:15 - 7:00 p.m.
Ladies (General Improvement)	Tues. & Thurs. 6:15 - 7:00 p.m.
MAXIMUM:	10 per class
REGISTRATION FEE:	$10.00
MINIMUM AGE:	18 years
REGISTRATION:	Weekdays between 9:00 a.m. - 4:00 p.m. Recreation Office Queen's Physical Education Centre

For further information contact: Mr. Howard C. Pearce or Miss Chris Landreth at 547-6984

BUY YOUR DIAMOND NOW!

AND PAY AT YOUR CONVENIENCE!

LOVELY!

Sometimes it's not easy to pay right away. That doesn't mean you have to wait to buy a diamond. You can choose one of our credit plans. Our selection includes rings in all price ranges. Let us help you choose a splendid, exquisitely cut diamond and plan convenient payments. It's the easy way to enjoy your diamond now.

KINNEAR D'ESTERRE
JEWELLERS
168 PRINCESS STREET
KINGSTON, ONTARIO

Clip for reference

The Graduate Student Society Film Club presents its 1973 Summer Series
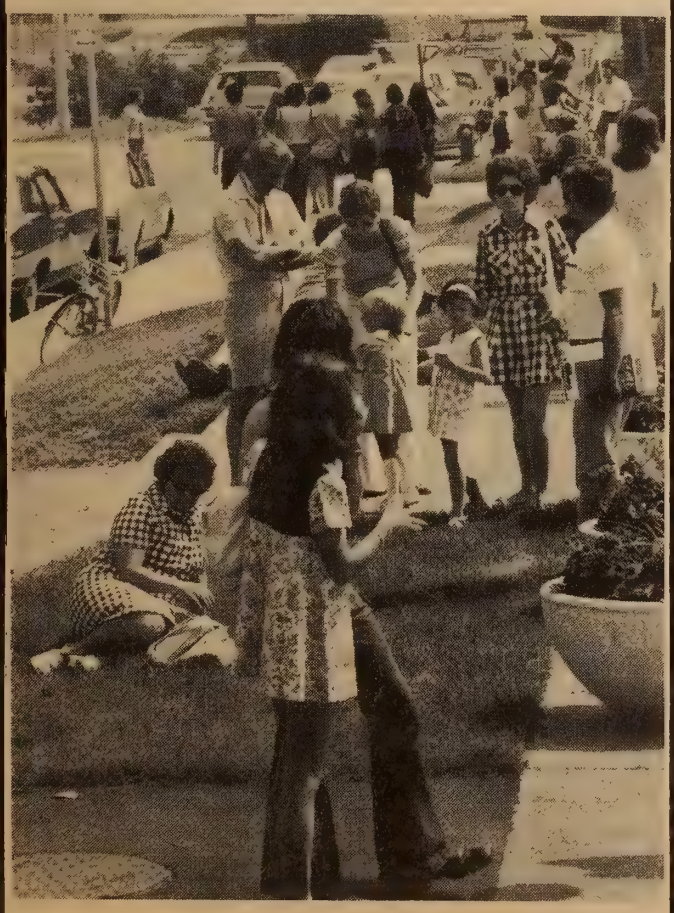
Wednesdays, 8 p.m., Ellis Hall

July 4	DOUBLE BILL	ANIMAL CRACKERS (Marx Bros.) THE BIG BROADCAST (1932) (George Burns, Gracie Allen)
July 11		WOMEN IN LOVE (Alan Bates, Glenda Jackson)
July 18		IF... (Malcolm (CLOCKWORK ORANGE) McDowell)
July 25		LOVERS AND OTHER STRANGERS (with Beatrice 'Maude' Arthur)
Aug. 1		CHARLY (Best Actor, Cliff Robertson)
Aug. 8	DOUBLE BILL	GOIN' TO TOWN (Mae West) IF I HAD A MILLION (stars include W. C. Fields

6 NIGHTS, 8 FILMS, $5.00!!
Season's Tickets Available at First Showing, July 4
Individual Admissions, $1.00
ALL WELCOME

Clip for reference

Clip for reference



- de Stein

People Assembly attracts thousands

On Monday, the Gallery Association sponsored a People Assembly at the Agnes Etherington Art Centre. With the aid of warm weather, 6500 bottles of beer and 200 pounds of roast beef, fourteen groups entertained the crowd of several thousand during the nine hour event.

The Air Transport Command Band included in its program the themes from such TV favourites as 'Hockey Night in Canada', 'Mannix', and 'The Odd Couple'. The Upper Canada Rifles from Toronto provided its own form of entertainment.The 'Heritage Kingston' exhibit and audio visual display in the centre attracted a large proportion of the crowd.Pony rides were available for the young and the young at heart.

Stalls around the Art Centre building featured a wide variety of ethnic foods, cheese and crafts. Adding to the colour of the festivities were the many traditional costumes of the ethnic groups that were represented at the assembly.

- de Stein

Queen's, Trent to co-operate in teacher education program

by Sue de Stein

At a recent Senate meeting approval was given to a cooperative program in teacher education between Trent University and Queen's.

The cooperative program, designed to prepare both elementary and secondary school teachers, will feature a concurrent pattern of teacher education. Under the program, Trent will award the B.A. or B.Sc. degree and Queen's will grant the B.Ed. degree. The management of the professional component for each of the four years will be handled by Queen's.

Dean of the Faculty of Education, Vernon Ready stressed that "the province does not need additional teacher education faculties." He added that "in order to establish an optimum basis operation, we need to take a cooperative stance towards teacher aducation."

Through such a program it is hoped that a closer integration of academic and professional components may be achieved through such means as sharing staff and cross-listing of courses. It is intended that a strong school orientation will pervade the program.

The professional component of the teacher education program will be phased over 4 years (5 years for honours degree candidates), with the first two years being exploratory and the last two, more intensive. A significant part of the field experience will consist of a three to four month internship in schools during a portion of third or fourth year when university classes are not in session.

A teacher education coordinator will be assisted by an advisory committee consisting of representatives from Queen's, Trent, and other professional education organizations.

In the first year, the students enrolled in the program will take five Arts and Science courses. Some field work in the schools and the community is included in the first year. During second year, students will take four Arts and Science courses and an obligatory educational psychology course. Candidates will also serve as teacher assistants on a limited basis. Following the first two years of the program an assessment of the candidate's suitability for further professional training in the last two years of the program will be made.

The fall term of the third and fourth years will be spent in residence at Queen's during which time the students will take several education courses and engage in practice teaching. The winter terms will be spent in residence in Trent, completing the Arts and Science degree requirements.

The program will be initiated this September.

The Committee on Academic Development also recommended to the Senate the addition of a double elementary option to the curriculum and instruction area of the Faculty of Education program. Ready commented that this would make possible "a complete program for the training of elementary school teachers".

Queen's
Journal
Volume One Hundred, No. 59
Friday, July 6, 1973

Summer School accuses AMS of 'power play' with const. posting

Alma Mater Society (student) constables were posted to the Summer School Association wine and cheese party in Leonard Hall, Wednesday night. This is the first time AMS constables have been used at a QSSA event, although who will pay their salaries is in doubt.

QSSA vice president Steve Gilchrist said his association would not pay for the constables. He cited numerous reasons, mainly that such a move (by the AMS) was "unconstitutional" in that summer school students were not members of the AMS and thus not subject to its regulations.

The AMS vice president Bruce Trotter said he told Gilchrist that constables should be in attendance at the party. He said he had also informed the men's residence that if there were no constables the residence might run the risk of damages and rowdyism

An official of the men's residence told the Journal Thursday morning that "AMS constables are required at all student events at which liquor is served" in Leonard Hall. He emphasized that no discrimation between AMS and non-AMS was made in the definition of student events.

Gilchrist also attacked the AMS on the grounds that the constable posting at the party was part of a power play in an AMS attempt to take over the Summer School Association.He also said that assigning constables to summer school events was not necessary in that summer school students were older and more mature and that there never had been any incidents.

(see page 5 for complete statement)

Trotter admitted Thursday that he was "unclear constitutionally" on some of the details of constables, and thought they should have been at the party. He said he was not sure who would pay for the constables.

AMS officials declined to comment at this time on accusations of trying to take over the Summer School Association.

Last year there was some tension between AMS and summer school politicans over the institution of a non-academic fee for summer school. Such a fee has been instituted by the university for the current session and is parallel to that paid by intramural students.

During the winter, regulations, contained partially in the AMS consititution, and partially by precedent, require that organizers of social events on campus (and many off-campus) arrange for the posting of AMS constables. Costs of these constables is borne by the asociation sponsoring the event.

There have been some problems with the system in that many people have felt that the exact role and duties of the constables is poorly defined. At almost all events, however, the situation is such that constables do not have to physically keep order.

Senators discuss "raiding" and voice criticism of COU

by Sue de Stein

"Our position is as it was hoped to be," reported Principal John J. Deutsch at a recent Senate meeting. Deutsch noted that according to available information, Queen's enrolments for 1973-74 are close to projections. All faculties are full, or very nearly," he added.

Members of the Senate discussed the sudden and major increases in entrance scholarships offerings by some Ontario universities when early confirmed admissions were being sent to applicants. This development, Deutsch noted, "has not affected Queen's, nor the University of Toronto, it seems."

At a recent meeting of the Council of Ontario Universitiies (COU) debate centered on this question of entrance scholarships. The Universities primarily involved claimed that their intent was to increase the proportion of first class students on their campuses; another said that the timing of increased scholarship offerings by others led its Senate and Board to conclude that 'raiding' was taking place and to protect themselves, they too increased entrance scholarships to the extent they were able.

After much discussion members of the COU reached an agreement on a procedure to nullify the financial advantages which would otherwise accrue to a University which had influenced students by scholarship offers, to change their choice of university!

Deutsch pointed out to Senate that "the recommendations of COU cannot be applied if two or three universities do not agree". At the Senate meeting, the COU came under attack for its inherent inability to enforce any of its decisions. It was pointed out at the meeting of the COU, that if the member universities could not discipline themselves on such a matter, COU itself could be considered little more than an expensive farce.

Union ID checks

I would like to clarify the position of the MS regarding constables and admission to the Queen's Pub in the Students' Union.

The following rules have been set down to govern entrance to the Pub:

1. Queen's persons, by showing their green, orange, yellow, alumni, or staff cards are admitted.

2. Persons showing post-secondary ID card, including KGH and Hotel Dieu Nurses identification, will be admitted. These persons must sign the guest book at the entrance.

3. Queen's people may bring in one guest. This person must be signed in the guest book.

All persons entering the Students' Union to go to the pub or elsewhere in the building during the evenings of weekdays will be required to present identification to be admitted. AMS constables will be on duty at the main entrance - all other entrances will be locked.

This action is required because of the recent increase of vandalism occuring in the building. The Pub and the tuck shop have been broken into, graduate students have complained of thefts, and common room furniture has been stolen.

We ask for your cooperation.

Kevin Van Koughnett
Acting Chief AMS Constable Summer

SACU tests to lose old hold on Queen's

by Sue de Stein

After consultation with the Faculty Board of Arts and Science, Applied Science, Business and Nursing, the Senate Committee on Academic Development (SCAD) recommended to the Senate that the series of tests known as SACU be neither required nor recommended for admission to the first university year at Queen's.

Dr. Ronald L. Watts, Dean of the Faculty of Arts and Science noted that Queen's was "the last university to make such a recommendation to its Senate." No university in Ontario will require SACU tests for admission to first year in 1974-75.

"SACU tests arose out of a growing need for another criteria other than Grade 13 examination results," he began. "With the increasing mobility of students between the provinces and the end of provincial examinations, SACU tests fulfilled this need."

However, "the provincial governments have become less interested in such a Canada-wide project," Watts commented. "With the majority of teachers opposed to the adminstering of SACU tests and a growing philosophy of open admission among universities, SACU tests have experienced a decline in support."

Watts noted that when the COU withdrew its financial support of SACU, "the test was put to the universities." The cost of adminstering the tests could have been either absorbed by the individual universities or paid for by levying a fee on the students themselves. The latter option was less than popular at a time when universities are virtually scrambling for students.

"I find it rather ironic, however, that the last three universities to abolish the SACU admission requirement, that is, the university of Toronto, Carleton, and Queen's, had the lowest drop in enrolment projections," Watts commented.

Watts cited political circumstances and short term reasons as responsible for the move. "We have little choice before us. We cannot expect the schools to administer the tests if only Queen's requires them."

A student observer questioned the rationale behind the decision. Watts replied that "the issue is one of feasibility. Even if we think the SACU tests are desirable, there is no way we can keep the SACU organization financially solvent." Watts noted that in order to make the operation financially feasible, 20,000 to 30,000 tests must be administered.

"Although we may very well rue the day we made this decision, there is only one path open to us," he concluded.

unclassifieds

ROOM FOR RENT: In large 8 bedroom house. Communal eating arrangements. $80. a month, everything included. At Princess and University. Phone 542-1269 or 493 Princess. Available now and-or for September.

MUCH TO THE CONSTERNATION of the staff of the Queen's Journal it was learned that Liz (Taylor) and Dick (Burton) have separated. Neither was available for comment.

WANTED: RIDE TO VANCOUVER or reasonable facsimile, on or around July 8th. Jamie 544-4749 or 290 William Apt. 2.

MUCH TO Morris' consternation this time, the Journal followed itself to Prescott on Thursday. No one was available for comment.

NOW WHERE'S that taxi?.....

TO THOSE WHO ARE CONCERNED (a select few): That which was missing or lost in Toronto, was found in Ottawa last week.

ANYONE WHO WAS in the House of Lords (pub) on the evening of May 31 and witnessed an altercation between a patron and a dog (Dobermein) and has information which would clarify the issue should contact Steve Brereton at the AMS Office, 547-6165.

AUGUST 1st weekend will be a big bash.

WHERE WILL THE midnight mauraders strike next? Or when?

YOU'RE LATE FOR the party, Dianne -- the boys.

Fill your mug with Golden.

Molson Golden
A good smooth ale
Do you know what you're missing?

Visit to Chinese Republic

Dean Reid impressed most by the people

by Sandra Bernstein

Evelyn Reid, Dean of Women at Queen's, recently spent three weeks in the People's Republic of China, as one in a group of sixteen representative Canadian women. She talks here with Sandra Bernstein of The Journal about her experiences.

Bernstein: Could you tell us a bit about education in China?
Reid: Well, if you were a university student in China, it would be required that you work away from the university.

There seemed to be considerable emphasis placed on the learning of foreign languages in China - students were learning Japanese, Russian, Arabic, French and English. The language students were very anxious to practice their English.

Apparently, everyone is free to say what they would like to study. However, if the state has no need for a person trained in that particular area, it will not train him in that area, because there are so many areas in which the state has great need.

The 'needs of the state' are always taken into consideration . . . Sometimes in the west we think about people not having any free choice - we take the whole thing out of context . . . It did not seem to upset students very much that, while they wanted to learn a particular language, they would find out when they got to university that they were needed in another field.

Bernstein: When you talked to the Chinese, did you sense any inhibitions or feel that they were holding back from fear?
Reid: No, I . . . felt that they were very open on the whole. Of course, by and large, the people we questioned were very intelligent: those who travelled with us, or who were professional interpreters with the China travel service.

The thing that is most important to the Chinese, is China. They wish to create a society in which all people are cared for and have a meaningful and good life. So the fact that they do not have the same kinds of freedom as we do just does not mean anything. They do not measure their freedoms by the same standards, and their goals are completely different.

When we visited a home, we would often sit and talk for forty-five minutes with a family. They would share with us their experiences - usually what had happened before the culture revolution . . . what their children were doing . . . It surprised us that some of them had bank accounts and were putting savings away.

We saw areas where the revolution had reached - but the revolution in China is something that does not span a specific time period . . . with a population of 800 million I'm sure that by the time the present revolution reaches the center of the country, another will be starting on its edges.

Bernstein: How are physical remnants of the Empire treated?
Reid: These are largely museums now, historical monuments and buildings that were formerly palaces or gardens. They are considered as belonging to the people, preserved in a way so that people can be free to come and go as they want to. There are thousands of people in these all the time.

Bernstein: What is the modern art lie?
Reid: Art is again for the people of China, and it is important, in that it communicates what life there is all about. Since large numbers of people in China are not highly educated, nor sophisticated in our sense of the word, the art is very simple and straightforward. Most often it is in primary colours. Reprints of great classical art are also available.

Bernstein: What is the attitude towards religion?
Reid: No religion is really encouraged in the parts of China we visited. However, one has the impression that in the minority nations around the borders, religious expression is certainly permitted. I think that if the religious teachings were contrary to the overall philosophy of the Chinese people or the teachings of the Communist party, they would teach the worshippers that that particular expression was detrimental to China or to the Revolution.

Bernstein: What part of China did you visit?
Reid: We entered through Hong Kong via the New Territories. Our route included Peking, Canton, and Shanghai, and we also visited the Great Wall.

Canton is like being in another planet. The streets are lined with thousands and thousands of people, all wearing the same costume - one of the strongest indication of the egalitarian society . . . we saw no over weight in China - it was amazing.

One day while we were talking, we mentioned using an electric beater in cooking. They were amused to learn that most families, and not just restaurants and factories, had their own beater. When we talked about electric toothbrushes, they simply could not hold themselves in their chairs.

We saw millions of bicycles. No one owns a vehicle privately; they are owned by the government and used when needed.

Bernstein: What were Chinese hotels like?
Reid: They were very good and specially prepared for use by overseas visitors. However, not always was there a place where you could stay.

We usually ate at the hotel. In the larger cities and at one commune we ate in large restaurants.

Bernstein: What was the attitude of the people towards you?
Reid: They seemed curious about the strange looking people from overseas - tall, blond, grey-haired . . . the Chinese have not seen many foreigners until recently. It seemed to be exciting for them, and they were eager to learn from us.

The people seemed warm and open towards Canadians in general.

Bernstein: What was the prevailing attitude towards Americans.
Reid: It is taught that ordinary people in every country are basically the same and have the same needs. Occasionally there are nations that have poor leaders but this is no reason to change your feelings about the people. This kind of teaching is part of communist philosophy.

Bernstein: And Vietnam?
Reid: We saw a large group of Vietnamese students in one of the cities we stayed in - there seemed to be very warm relationships with the North Vietnamese.

Bernstein: What were relations with Nationalist China?
Reid: We did not really discuss it. However, if your passport has been stamped by Taiwan, you are not permitted to enter the People's Republic of China.

Bernstein: What did you perceive the status of women to be in China?
Reid: Everywhere we went we met women in responsible positions. Sex does not have the same important place in the lives of the Chinese as it does in our culture. Very frequently one would meet a man or woman whose spouse was working in another city. They thought nothing of this. Arrangements were made for visits and holidays together. For one thing, women did not seem to have to find their whole ego strength in who the man was or what kind of man he was.

Bernstein: What kind of day care facilities are there?
Reid: Day care facilities and schools are attached to many factories, especially in large centers. Children up to three are cared for close to the factory. For children older than three, day care is provided in the area in which the family lives, with the school attached to the family's apartment building.

Bernstein: Is the housing crowded?
Reid: That depends on one's standards: yes by ours, no by New York standards. There is certainly not a bedroom per person. Shared beds and wood or coal fire heating are not uncommon.

Bernstein: Is automation proceeding fairly rapidly?
Reid: Every county now has its own factory to produce trucks, carts and tractors. But there is still a long way to go.

Bernstein: Did you feel that the spirit of the Revolution is alive?
Reid: Yes. In every conversation in schools we visited they talked about changes since the Cultural Revolution. This is part of the educational process - incorporating a sense of measuring advancement by talking about what happened before and after the Cultural Revolution which started in 1967. This is one way of keeping it before the people.

Bernstein: Have the effects of the Revolution been felt in outlying areas?

Continued on Page 8

GRADUATING?

If you wish to order a copy of Tricolor '74, which will cover the academic year '73-'74 and will include any grad pictures taken this summer, contact the AMS Office.

Copies of Tricolor '73 may also be ordered.

The cost for either is $6 including mailing.

TRICOLOR YEAR BOOK

If you are completing a degree this summer and wish your grad photo in next year's Tricolor yearbook, contact Wallace Berry Studios, 15 Montreal Street 542-2809 after Monday July 16

XTRAMURAL XAMINER

The Xtramural Xaminer is published by the Queen's University Summer School Association and is independent of the Queen's Journal and the Alma Mater Society.
Editor: Steve Gilchrist.

Volume 1, Number 2, Friday, July 6, 1973

Minutes of July 1 meeting of Queen's Summer School Assn.

Meeting 7:30 International Center.

Members Present: Barry Fletcher, Barbara McEvilla, Steve Gilchrist, Gary Pettigrew, Lee Ewles, Les Robertson, Don Reed, Don Bond, Karen Bradley, Jim Baker, Ross Wardle, Diane Siddle.

Barry Fletcher, the President of QSSA called the meeting to order.

The minutes were read from the last meeting of QSSA.

Motion No. 1: Moved by Barbara McEvilla, seconded by Steve Gilchrist that the secretary's minutes be accepted as read. The motion was carried Treasurer's Report: The present bank balance is $1363.23.

Motion No. 2: Moved by Gary Pettigrew seconded by Lee Ewles that the Treasurer's Report be accepted as read.

It was announced that the date of the Wine and Cheese Party would be changed to Wednesday July 4th 1973 at 8:30 p.m. in Leonard Hall.

The Social Committee is planning on giving each person two free tickets at this function for wine at admission.

Sports: We need a new Sports Convenor as the convenor for this summer resigned.

Directory: The matter of the directories will be solved by Wednesday July 4th with either Jim Baker or Steve Gilchrist ably looking after the manufacturing of the directories for the students.

Publicity: Five posters will be drawn up for MacArthur campus regarding the Wine and Cheese Party plus ten posters for around the main campus.

Bridge will be looked after by Harry Dodsworth. A summer tournament will be held on Thursday July 26th.

Fine Arts: Barbara McEvilla offered to get in touch with Bob Watson to see if we could arrange some Fine Arts presentations.

Members of the Executive volunteered their services from 9:00 - 4:00 pm Monday for registration.

The next meeting of QSSA will be held on Monday July 9, at 4:00 in the International Centre.

Motion No. 3: Moved by Gary Pettigrew seconded by Lee Ewles that the meeting be adjourned.

Secretary: Diane Siddle.

Coming events

Mon., July 9 - Golf Tournament, Glen Lawrence Club, submit score card at desk at Victoria Hall (July 9 - 27).
- Volleyball (mixed), Gym, 6:30 - 8:30 pm.

Tues., July 10 - Softball (men), West Campus and St. Mary's on the Lake, 6:30 pm.
- Movie, Dunning Hall, 7 and 9:15 pm.

Wed., July 11 - Dance at 401 Inn. 9 pm. Admission free to Summer School Members.
- Basketball, (ladies and men), Gym, 7:00 pm.

Thurs., July - 12 - Duplicate Bridge, Students Union, McLaughlin Room, 7:00 pm.
- Movie, Dunning Hall, 7 and 9:15 pm.

Mon., July 16 - Volleyball (mixed), Ross and Bartlett Gyms, 7:00 pm.

Tues., July 17 - Golf Tournament continues - score cards to Victoria Hall.
- Softball continues (men), 6:30 pm.
- Movie, Dunning Hall, 7 and 9:15 pm.

Wed., July 18 - Boat Cruise through the Thousand Islands, see posters in Victoria Hall for time and place.
- Basketball, Queen's Gym, 7 pm.

Thurs., July 19 - Table Tennis, Victoria Hall, 7:00 pm.
- Dulicate Bridge, Stud. Union, 7:30 pm.
- Softball (men), 6:30 p.m.
- Movie, Dunning Hall, 7 and 9:15 pm.

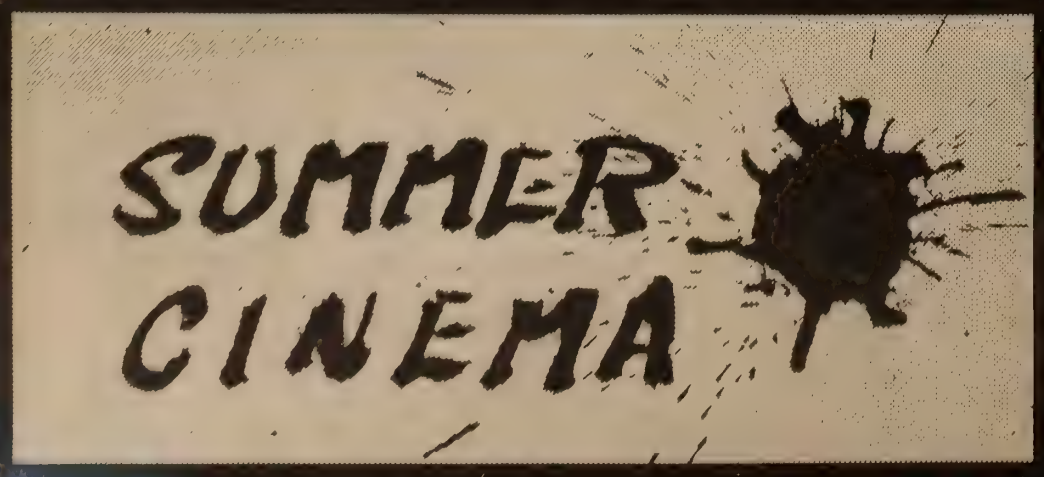
Mon., July 23 - Volleyball (mixed), 7:00 pm. Ross and Bartlett Gyms.
- Golf Tournament continues.

Tues., July 24 - Tennis Tournament, Queen's Courts, 6:30 pm.
- Softball (mens), 6:30 pm.
- Movie, Dunning Hall, 7 and 9:15 pm.

Wed., July 25 - Annual Meeting of Summer School Assoc.
- Basketball, Gym, 7:00 pm.

Thurs., July 26 - Duplicate Bridge, 7:30 pm. Students Union.
- Softball (men), 6:30 pm.
- Movie, Dunning Hall, 7 and 9:15 pm.

AMS attempt



Wednesday, on their own volition and without any consultation with the Summer School Association, the Alma Mater Society, in its continuing childish efforts to find windmills with which to joust, decided that AMS constables would be posted at all Summer School events. Not only that, but they felt that no less than five constables would be necessary to police the Wine and Cheese Party in Leonard Hall that night. This action is nothing more than an attempt to bring the QSSA under the authority of the Alma Mater Society and the AMS has even threatened to take the issue "to the top" (presumably this means the impartial AMS court). I feel it very demeaning to have these children (none of the three girls posted could have been more than twenty years old), who are not members of the Summer School Association, being sent to our events under the pretense of a supposed "need" to provide

The Summer S to assist th in organizin assist in these or visit St

NEXT THURSDAY

Art Garfunkle and Art Nichols in

CATCH - 22

Dunning Hall Auditorium

Thursday, July 12

Admission only $1.50

7 and 9:15 pm

...pts power play in bid to subjugate QSSA

...curity and stability, and having ...e authority to dictate in...uctions and check the iden...ication of bona fide members of ...e association.

...On the whims of these childish ...ministrators of the winter ...vernment, who seem to have ...thing else better to do than to ...ck their nose in the affairs of ...er groups, one male and three ...nale constables were assigned to ... Wine and Cheese Party and ...reat managed to illustrate just ...w useless such a "security ...ce" actually is. Throughout the ...ole evening, they had absolutely ...thing to do in providing ...tection or security, for, as with ... other Summer School events in ... past, the event went off without ... incident, (the difference in ...s and maturity between winter ... summer students is something ...ich is not recognized by the AMS ...ndarins). The irony of the entire ...uation is that the constables, if faced with a problem such as a fight or an unorderly drunk, will not attempt, themselves, to handle the problem, but rather they will call the Emergency Report Centre to report the incident and ask for police assistance -- something which is well within the capabilities of anyone working for the Summer School at these events.

Peeved at their inability to gain complete control of all intersession events, and under the misconception that they should control summer school students without providing any services in return, the AMS has attempted this power play under threat of cancelling room reservations concerning our events. Such peurile attempts at blackmail will not only result in a deterioration in relations between the two groups and a further lessening of the possibility of fruitful cooperation between these two governing bodies, but will also result in poorer service for summer school students if we are forced to hold the remaining events off campus. It seems the AMS has decided to make an annual event of its power-grabbing clashes with the Q.S.S.A. Those of you who attended Summer School last year will remember the issue last year was whether or not there should be separate newspapers published by each group. You will also remember that the response of the students to the merging of the two papers was completely negative (see letters to the editor and results of questionnaire in last year's QUASSA). Not being unreasonable people (and in an attempt to save some money) we are printing the papers together this year - as separate entities - to cut down on production costs, but this decision came after discussion and totally exclusive of the AMS. It is not so much the posting of the constables that we object to, it is more the high handed manner in which this decision was arrived at. It was made without discussion by a "Chief Constable" who is acting illegally without the required ratification of AMS Outer Council. On just who's authority is Mr. Van Koughnett acting in that capacity anyways? Theoretically, and constitutionally, any group could refuse the students posted to the event as constables for the posting would not conform to constitutional requirements.

Well the AMS, despite this and various other illegalities and the unconstitutionalities (such as the fact that Summer School students are not even members of the AMS) is planning to fight tooth and nail to impose this ridiculous requirement upon you Summer School students. This will result either in our having to reschedule the events off campus (and hence make it very inconvenient for those students without cars) or else raise prices, if functions are held on campus in order to defray the costs of paying for the constables. I welcome your response to this issue and any other comments you might have about student government and activities during the summer. As a final point, you might note that, other than the Pub and the Journal, the AMS is providing no services whatever to you students (i.e. no typing service, no cultural or social events, etc). In other words, what they are saying is that they want the power to govern your Association's events and impose their will upon you, while at the same time assuming more of the responsibilities which that authority necessarily entails. Food for thought, and quite frankly, it has a bitter taste that makes their actions just too hard to swallow.

Steven Gilchrist (editor)

HELP
...TILL WANTED

...mmer Sc...l Association still requires someone willing ...ssist the...orts committee and someone to assist ...rganizing...e Fine Arts Concerts. Anyone wishing to ...in these...any other committees are asked to phone ...visit Ste...Gilchrist in Apt 1210, Elrond College.

Next Wednesday

DANCE at 401 Inn

place: 401 Inn Ballroom

time: 9:00 pm

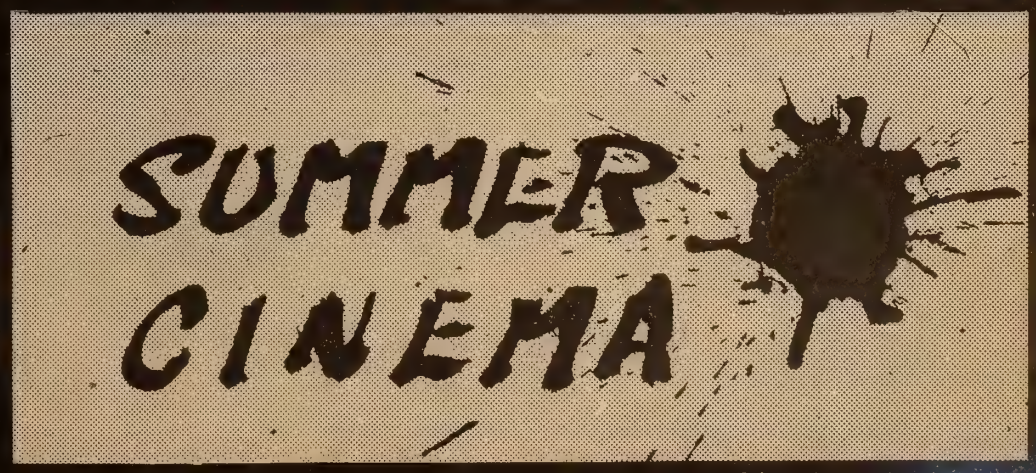
admission: free

(to Summer School Members)

(not formal)

NEXT TUESDAY

Jane Fonda and Michael Sarrazin in



They Shoot Horses, Don't They

Dunning Hall Auditorium

Tuesday, July 10

Admission only $1.50

7 and 9: 9:15 pm

St. James Anglican Church

9:00 am -- Holy Communion
11:00 am -- Morning Prayer
NO EVENING SERVICE

Pizza Chalet

286 MONTREAL ST. KINGSTON

544-1227

OPEN MON. TUES WED. 4:00 p.m. to 1:00 a.m.
OPEN ALL DAY SUNDAY 12 – 12
OPEN THURS. FRI. SAT. 4:00 p.m. to 2:00 a.m.

Chalet Deluxe EXTRA LARGE — Pepperoni- Mushrooms- Bacon Sausage- Green Peppers- Olive Cheese- Tomato Sauce $5.50 BIGGEST PIZZA YOU'VE EVER SEEN!

SELECTION WITH CHEESE & TOMATO SAUCE	11" REG	13" MED	15" LGE	SUPER 17" X-LGE
1. Pepperoni-Mushrooms-Bacon-Green Peppers Sausages-Olive	2.50	3.65	4.55	5.50
2. Pepperoni-Mushrooms	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
3. Pepperoni-Bacon	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
4. Mushrooms-Bacon	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
5. Combination Pizza Pepperoni-Mushrooms Green Peppers-Olives	2.40	2.95	3.95	4.95
6. Bacon	1.85	2.60	3.65	4.65
7. Pepperoni	1.85	2.60	3.65	4.65
8. Cheese	1.75	2.40	2.95	3.90
9. Mushrooms	1.85	2.60	3.65	4.65

Combination Special — Pepperoni- Olive Mushrooms- Green Peppers $3.95 A LARGE PIZZA SURE TO PLEASE

BUY YOUR DIAMOND NOW!

AND PAY AT YOUR CONVENIENCE!

LOVELY!

Sometimes it's not easy to pay right away. That doesn't mean you have to wait to buy a diamond. You can choose one of our credit plans. Our selection includes rings in all price ranges. Let us help you choose a splendid, exquisitely cut diamond and plan convenient payments. It's the easy way to enjoy your diamond now.

KINNEAR D'ESTERRE
JEWELLERS
168 PRINCESS STREET
KINGSTON, ONTARIO

schwier

St. lawrence summer playhouse kingston, ontario
BOAC takes good care of you.

Canada's delightful musical gift to the world at Japan's Expo '70 . . .

anne of green gables

Gordon Love Cindy Walls Joan Strachan
Directed by Alan Argue
JULY 3 TO JULY 14
Tickets and Reservations: 542--9938

More drama than music

by Sandy Nalman

The stage was set for a dramatic spectacle and that is what about 3,500 people got at Fort Henry last Thursday evening.

Unfortunately the music was not nearly as spectacular as the artillery. The Kingston Symphony Orchestra, under the somewhat effusive direction of Alexander Brott seemed drowned out and dry with competition from wind, weather and the wounding sounds of guns and cannons.

But the audience was nonetheless enthusiastic, particularly during the two pieces where the artillery was used, Beethoven's Wellington's Victory and Tchaikovsky's 1812 Overture.

Even though the music was hardly audible during these pieces, the overall impact was tremendously effective. Sitting in the courtyard inside the Fort, the Guard marched out, first the English in red and the French in Black and began firing at each other in a re-enactment of the battle of Waterloo.

The echoing of the drums, the spontaneous shooting, the howling wind and the location provided an overall visual image which overwhelmed Beethoven's music.

The next piece, Graham George's Kingston Suite, was probably the least well received in the programme. With only part of it played and somewhat insipidly at best,it did not stand up to the other selections on the programme: Berlioz's Hungarian March, Strauss' (the elder) Radetzky March, Strauss' (the younger) Overture to Fledermaus, Dvorak's Slavonic Dances, and Brahms Hungarian Dances.

Perhaps the suite was under rehearsed or unsuited to the locale, for it lacks the familiarity and grandeur the others have and seemed somehow too small.

But the clarity and dynamism that the music may have had, were it played indoors or in better conditions, was replaced by another dimension with the architecture and the historical landscape behind it.

Ultimately though, it seems unfair to review the music as one would, were it performed in ideal conditions. The concert was much more a spectacle in itself and should be viewed as only that.

In the 1812 Overture, which fared better with the cannons than Wellington's Victory with the guns. Pink flares lit the arena and the cannons exploded at a moment when we least expected them to. Shooting sparks in the audience the music climaxed again and again. The cannon's kept going off and at one point Brott swung around to face the audience waving his baton at a rapturous crowd.

It was an exhillarating performance mixed with terror and delight, one which is analogous to the kind of feeling one gets from watching a good suspence thriller. You were in nervous anticipation of the next shock, you enjoyed it when it came and in a cathartic way, relieved when it was over.

And so in fact, the duMaurier presentation had all the theatrical ingredients, the setting with all its historical majesty, the players, the props, the rise to a climax, the Aristotelian catharsis and the denouement -- in this case a glorious traffic jam and a long wait to escape the Fort.

Summerdaze

Theatre
St. Lawrence Summer Playhouse present "Anne of Green Gables" from Tuesday until July 14. Curtain at 8:30 p.m. Tickets available at the Tent Theatre Box Office (in the park) $3.00 for adults. $2.50 for students. Reservations 542-9938.
Theatre 5 in association with Brendan McConnell presents Dinner Time Theatre. Will the Last one out of Kingston please turn out the lights. An improvisational revue with music every evening Monday to Saturday inclusive until Saturday July 21. Dinner at 7.00 p.m. Curtain at 8.00 p.m. $3.50 per person. includes dinner and show in The Buttery at Hotel Frontenac. 544-6881.

Movies
Capital Theatre -- Life and Times of Judge Roy Bean
Odeon -- Live and Let Die
Hyland -- Godspell

International Club
Cottage is open to all Queen's students from July 13 to July 30 on Lake Opinicon. Cost $2.00 per 24 hour period. Transportation provided. Book through the International Centre.

Birth Control, VD, and Abortion Information and Referral service is open Monday through Friday from noon to 9 pm Saturday from 1.00 pm to 5 pm. Located at 165 University Phone 547-2806.

Pubs
Commodore -- Bob Hendrickson
40 Inn -- The Robert E. Lee Brigade
Lakeview Manor -- Julie Lynn
Townhouse --- Peter Law and Sweet Chariot

Critic's Forum

Anne of Green Gables

A most professional amateur show

by Sandy Naiman

It is very difficult to resist the charms of the heroine of L. M. Montgomery's novel, Anne of Green Gables. It is even more difficult to resist Cindy Walls portrayal of Anne in the St. Lawrence Summer Playhouse production of the musical version of that book, which opened Tuesday night.

As the orphan girl with the carrot red hair, the firey temper and the liveliest imagination, Miss Walls brings to life one of Canada's classic literary figures. She sings powerfully and sweetly, moves with a gawky grace and so charms her way into the hearts of all the staunch matriarchs of Avonlea, a small village in Prince Edward Island at the turn of the century.

But the production is not just a vehicle for one. Alan Argue has molded a large cast, 28 in all, into a cohesive ensemble, with direction which capitalizes on some excellent choral singing and choreography which veers away from slickness and is easy, carefree and simple. Andrea Howard has captured the rural freshness and spontaneity of the scenario in her routines, Argue, the clean, almost forgotten naievety of spirit, which Montgomery expressed so beautifully in her prose.

The production is lavishly designed, with colourful period costumes and a cleverly devised setting. Alan Watts, in his design, allows for many different stage exposures, which in themselves provide a varied landscape for the playing.

After an initially slow start, and particularly with Anne's entrance, the show takes off and never stops.

Miss Walls' confrontations with all the various stereotypes provide both humour and pathos and her energy and sparkle seem mirrored throughout the cast.

As the surrogate parents, who wanted a boy and instead got Anne, Gord Love and Joan Strachan as Matthew and Marilla Cuthbert play at different levels. Love is a beautifully focused 60 year old, shy and compassionate bachelor, enamoured of Anne and determined to keep her despite Marilla's trepidation. He has conquered one of the most difficult acting problems, physicalizing age, and he has done so without overacting. His movements are small and subtle and the fragility of the character has tremendous impact with this kind of approach.

Mrs. Strachan, on the other hand, seems less comfortable as the spinster-mother, afraid to show the emotion that she really feels. It should erupt at the end, when she laments her brother's death and realizes how much Anne subsequently means to her, but somehow, because of a sense of restraint in her portrayal throughout, this eruption is somewhat benign.

There are some excellent supporting roles, particularly the town gossip, Mrs. Rachel Lynde, played by Marjorie Preston, who moves like a strong and heavy battleship as she meets each oncoming crisis. Ploughing her way into everybody's business, without a care about the feelings of those she bruises with her tongue, she gossips divinely.

Director Argue, who stepped in at the last moment to play the disinterested school master, Mr. Phillips, is in his eccentricity and his overt interest in getting one of his pupils into the hay, instead of into college, one of the comic portrayals in the cast. Kathryn Bronskill, as Anne's bosom buddy Diana Barry is an enthusiastic and bubbly kindred spirit and Carol Whyman as the replacement for school master Phillips is a charming and enlightening influence on both her brood and the audience.

One of the more disappointing performances was by Doug Weir, who as the romantic lead Gilbert Blythe could not carry a tune, and he had a couple of the prettiest tunes in the show. However, what he lacked in vocal clarity and strength, he made up for in his acting and dancing.

The play itself is rather banal, the music undistinguished, the lyrics likewise, but nevertheless this company makes it move and vibrate, with life, vitality and vigour. There is loads of activity and frivolity, during the picnic and in the Nature Hunt. Some of the highpoints are Diana's overdrinking, Anne's dying her hair green with Matthew's entry into the world of women's fashions.

And so even if the Montgomery chronicle is not one of your favourite childhood memories, or even if you don't particularly like musicals, this piece is worth seeing for its colour and its charm. The entire cast works together to provide one of the most professional amateur shows you'll probably ever see.

Cindy Walls as Anne - macpherson

It happened both onstage and off

by Kiloran German

"My eardrums won't survive!" I protested, cringing at the prospect of sitting through three hours of an amateur production of a musical. To my amazement, they were not assailed by the excruciating wounds that untrained singers usually inflict. Not only did my fragile eardrums survive unscathed - they forced me to admit that the St. Lawrence Summer Playhouse couldn't have selected a play better suited to their talents than "Anne of Green Gables".

All the demands that the show makes on singing, dancing and acting were well within the grasp of the company and were admirably executed.

There were a few problems with the attempt to perform in the round - although the staging was ingenious, much of the action was focussed inwards rather than outwards. As a result, I saw more backs than faces, which was unfortunate as the faces were infinitely more attractive.

While acting tends to be overshadowed by the musical aspects of this type of show, it was of very high calibre. Cindy Walls' Anne was an intricate and complex characterization. Her gestures, movement and sense of timing were precise and her tendency to overact was more than compensated for by the moments when the over-acting was intended. Hers was an exceptional and thoroughly professional performance.

The scope of the play extends far beyond that of its central character however. "Anne of Green Gables" is much more than a mere fragment of rural Canadiana. It is neither aggressively nor self consciously a Canadian work - it is intrinsically so.

The townspeople of the play are totally recognisable. The Avonlea of the nineteenth century was not so very different from the Kingston of today. This is due both to the script and to the uniformly good characterizations of all the supporting actors.

The immediacy of the play became remarkably apparent during the intermissions. What had occured onstage in the tent was occuring outside in the park. I sat back and watched a group of elderly ladies, dressed to the teeth in their first night finery, swapping morsels of gossip in exactly the same manner as the executive of the "Great Workers for the Cause" had done on stage. I watched a bunch of kids chase each other through the crowd as the young actors had done at the Sunday School Picnic. And the colour, the excitement and the sense of community of the Kingston audience were vividly recreated on stage.

It was an extraordinary and rare experience that I will not soon forget. The company is to be praised for this incredible achievement, made possible by their excellent rendition of a perfect choice.

THEATRE 5
Presents
DINNER TIME THEATRE
AT
THE BUTTERY
"Will the last one out of Kingston please turn out the lights"
Monday to Saturday Inclusive
Buffet Dinner 7:00 P.M. — Show Starts 8:00 P.M.
$3.50 per person — Includes Dinner and Show
HOTEL FRONTENAC
178 ONTARIO STREET 544-6881

Applications for the position of
Acting Chief Constable will be accepted at the AMS Office, Union until 4:30 pm, Monday, July 9

The Queen's Gerbil

Everybody who was anybody was at the Animal Matter meeting last night. Brere rabbitt presided passionately while wil the pooh dithered and diddled. There was dainty dodo who watched the proceedings but refused to rise to racey remarks made by the wiley old trottowl.Korn capered and cantered and weasel wong went the wrong way and waffled on the question. (Bloo bear had bitched and bothered weasel wong on the question of the weather). Green woodchuck wished it hadn't been asked but was busy babying dainty dodo anyway. Old trottowl pushed brere rabbitt into secret session where korn told all her secrets gathered from green woodchuck's woods. Dainty dodo asked if they were true but brere assured her they were. Bloo bear refused to become sidetracked from the main question because the weather was all important to the secondary question of whether or not the Animal Matter Society were to return to green woodchuck's woods that weekend. Dainty dodo demured for, although she had missed the last retreat, she had heard the stories. Wiley old trottowl, on the record, disclaimed them all, but off the record winked at wil the pooh. By this time, the Gerbil staff felt the AMS had been in secret session long enough and were chomping at the bit for a bit of non-news. But wil was still tampering with the tangents and a non-consensus could not be reached on the main or the secondary question, especially with dainty dodo demuring. Just as all felt that the meeting should adjourn to jackrabbitt johnston's tavern for a milkshake and cookies, bloo bear proposed a compromise. He conceeded to trottowl that it was a good idea to return to green woodchuck's woods but offered that the politically expedient solution might be to go there on a rainy day, settling both questions.

Korn didn't like that idea at all for it is a well known fact that the common daffodil eating korn, a rather rare bird, does not like to get her feet wet. At this point the meeting fell apart despite brere's calls for chaos. In fact, the meeting was becoming rather unsecret for the Gerbil staff was taking quotes from outside the door. They had to get the story to mighty morris printer at the other end of the great forest by morning.

Then the lobbying began and only a few of the AMS began to waffle. Weasel wong walked away with a bad taste in his chewing gum. Would they finally come together? All the animals in the great forest were wondering, for it had been anoseconds since the secret session had begun. Korn hummed and hawed and suggested that they might not go to the woods but hope for a sunny day. Bloo bear didn't like that idea for it was not his own but brere thought it could work. (With only minutes to go before jackrabbitt johnston would close his tavern, brere wanted to end the question once and for all). But dainty dodo demured because she forgot the question and no one else could tell her because they couldn't remember what it was either. But green woodchuck knew and he slyly winked at wil the pooh as he had seen the wiley old trottowl do earlier and the pooh suddenly remembered too.

We're here to discuss the birds and the bees she proudly panted. But korn was sure that it had something to do with daffodils. By this time the animals had worn themselves out trying to think and preferred to discuss the weather. Yea or ney bleated brere (which was strange for everyone knew that brere was not a sheep). All the animals put their heads together for all were positive that one head was better than two. They all knew that the vote was to be taken although the question had been forgotten. Wil the pooh would figure it out for the minutes, they were assured by brere rabbitt. So the question was finally put much to the amazement and glee of the Gerbil staff who had bugged the meeting with the consent of the chief bug who was checking forest ID at the door. Bloo bear bitched but belatedly barked yea. Wil the pooh prattled and then pleaded but soon was in agreement. Old wiley trottowl watched with glee for he knew that the others would soon see the light (of jackrabbitt's tavern) and quietly saved his vote for the end. He liked to save the best for last. Dainty dodo was still wavering under green woodchuck's influence and said she couldn't make up her mind. Korn stood firm. She was sure that if the others were voting yea, a ney was demanded of her. Besides she had it on reliable advice that the question was whether or not it should rain on July the 33. With such conviction being heard, dainty dodo finally made up her mind that she too should vote ney, much to the displeasure of wiley old trottowl who felt that she would swing. It was up to green woodchuck to tip the balance and in doing so, he knocked over the ashtray. Yea he shouted. After all they were his woods. Old trottowl, pleased as punch, promptly forgot which way was the right way to vote. He thought and thought and finally hooted ney. It was a tie. The Gerbil staff were in a high state of excitement for the great morris had just called and demanded the non-news. It was up to brere rabbitt to break this one. He looked around slowly and wished he was at Johnston's tavern but knew he had to vote first, then waffle. Then he remembered that the question was whether or not the sun shone in green woodchuck's woods. Yea, yea, yea he shouted. Everybody knows that the sun shines there on Monday, Thursday and, of course, Sunday, he told the other animals. When they all heard this they immediately agreed that they should go to the woods that Sunday and they adjourned for milkshakes and cookies.

Theatre 5 spoofs Kingston

by Sandy Naiman

How often does the audience determine the direction its entertainment will go? If you want an opportunity to play director you should visit the Buttery at the Hotel Frontenac where Theatre 5 is now presenting a nightly satirical, improvisational revue of Kingston.

The atmosphere is informal in Off Broadway Cabaret style. The entertainment is never the same, we are told, and the audience supplies in several cases, the characters, the place and the topic of conversation.

"In the beginning" there was light and water and fish and limestone. The narration for this initial sketch is taken mostly from the tercentenary book, Kingston 300 and other sportions are used rather wryly throughout the show.

Valerie Robertson comes out on a simple makeshift platjorm, which has a tendency to become disengaged, and introduces the company who are scattered around the periphery of the room. With a notebook in hand she goes through the objectives of the revue: in the main to spoof Kingston. There are songs by Michael, bits of mime by Arthur (although Mrs. Robertson labelled this art form "not commercially viable in Canada") and spontaneous improvisations by the entire company.

There is a scene from Robertson Davies' Fortune My Foe, a skit about the first Queen's Radio broadcast in 1922 and an interesting followup using counterpoint to illustrate what might happen if three stations simultaneously kept cutting into each other.

Parts of the show are intentionally rough with clues thrown to the actors from either Mrs. Robertson or the audience. It is up to the actors, in such instances to think fast and they seem to have mastered this beautifully.

When given a situation involving a common law couple engaged in the "everyday activity" of roofing, they sprung to the challenge and played hilariously to each other in the sound language of six different countries. No body understood what they were saying, but their facial expressions and actions communicated the situation most articulately.

In another audience determined situation, a young man and a young woman meet in the Faculty Club to discuss the weather. The conversation that evolved out of this simple framework was very amusing and as seemed the case with all the sketches, the actors enjoyed themselves as much as the audience.

The most delightful facet of the entire evening is the spontaneous immediate nature of the show is always different, always a by product of the evenings crowd. After the performance proper the company does more spontaneous improvisation prompted by audience direction, then adjourns to the pub next door.

In all the evening is fun, simply and completely fun. Much like the kind of entertainment the Studio Lab Theatre was doing under the direction of Ernie Schwartz in Toronto several years ago.

It runs for three weeks. Don't miss it.

A review of Live and Let Die
by Paul Neelands
The sheriff was acceptable.

Queen's Journal
Vol. 100, No. 59
Fri., July 6, 1973
Queen's University at Kingston, Ontario

Woody came in then deserted a "sinking ship". But we're really not sinking. We're just taking on a bit of water.

Interim Staff: Robert Wood, Susan de Stein, Charles Schwier, Sandy Naiman, John Solman, Bob Mutrie, Kiloran German.

Published once weekly on Thursdays during the summer by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc., Member Canada University Press. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society of the University. Offices are located in the Student's Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

Dean Reid impressed by the people of China

Continued from Page 3

Bernstein: Have the effects of the Revolution been felt in outlying areas?
Reid: The government is training educational and political leaders to go into these areas. For example, potential leaders are brought in to the Institute of the Minorities that we visited in Peking. They are frequently people with considerable experience in some line of work - good herdsmen, good farmers, etc. - or if they don't have a skill or craft they would be taught one when they go to the Institute - and then they would be taught to read, write and speak the Han language. Then they would be taught the teachings of Lenin, Marx, Engels, and Mao Tse-Tung and this would be the equipment that they would take back with them to the outlying areas. There they would be among their own people.

Bernstein: Did the people seem happy?
Reid: We had the impression that the Chinese people are strongly directed, were very happy in their country, and also proud of it.

Bernstein: Is loyalty to Mao as strong as ever?
Reid: The people seemed very loyal to the teachings of Chairman Mao . . . They also seemed to have very great respect for Chou En-Lai. The members of the diplomatic corps that we met thought highly of his leadership.

Bernstein: What sort of changes did they mention as having occurred since the Cultural Revolution?
Reid: There was a tendency for people to believe that if all men were provided for, this would lessen the people's inclination to work, but in fact it hasn't and people are still encouraged to work. Each man in a factory for instance would keep track of his work record. He would write it up and post it each night before he left, on a black board provided for that purpose.

Bernstein: How are factories organized?
Reid: Every factory is organized politically and from a production standpoint. Each would have medical workers, a revolutionary committee, educational, and cultural facilities, usually right in the factory or closely associated with it.

The factories are not of the kind we are used to but I think one would find the same kinds of factories in large cities in Canada and the U.S. Factory work is hard work here, as it is in China - one cannot pretend that life is very easy or simple for the Chinese people - it isn't. Their homes are very modest; in the city they build apartment buildings very similar to what we would call housing projects but in the rural areas they live in stone or mud houses or in caves built into the hillside.

Bernstein: Some people have compared the Russian five year plans with much more long range planning in the People's Republic of China.
Reid: I certainly got the impression that the Chinese were not in any great hurry to convince everybody that things had to be done differently and they had to be done differently now. There always seemed to be time to have meetings so that people could have some say in the changes that needed to be made. I think the Chinese have an altogether different sense of time than we do and this is perfectly understandable in view of their long history.

Bernstein: Was the national identity related more closely to the ancient past or to the Communist era?
Reid: I would say that the young people think of themselves as people of China. They talk all the time about the new China, which is very important to them.

Reid: Eighty per cent of the people in China live on farms, incidentally. Agriculture is very intensive. In the areas we travelled in, one hardly saw any land, however small, that was not cultivated.

As for any pay differential, the variation between the people at the top and the lowest earners is much less than in our country.

The Chinese are aware of many limitations of this kind in what they're doing, but they just haven't found a better system, and say so quite openly. They would like to see it different. For instance, they do not like the idea that there's a different standard of living in some areas of China than in others. But what can they do? They have to decentralize in order to involve and teach their people, in order for the masses to have something to say in the economic position of their area, and the way in which it produces. In doing this they have to live with the consequences of economic variation.

Bernstein: Was there a consensus among the members of your group at the end of the tour?
Reid: Not a complete consensus: there was quite a bit of difference among our opinions. However, everybody appreciated the opportunity of getting to know many Chinese women, and seeing the Revolution at work.

Bernstein: What impressed you most?
Reid: Oh, I think the people impressed me most. We never felt that they weren't willing to share with us everything that they possibly could. We were very impressed with the capable and intelligent manner in which people sat down with us hour after hour to try to help us to understand their way of looking at things.

Bernstein: Did you see anything there that you'd like to see implemented in Canada?
Reid: That's a reporter's question. I think there are many things that we could learn from the Chinese people. But I don't meet very many people that there aren't things that I would like to learn from if I possibly could. I think this is where we are as women. . .
Bernstein: That's a diplomat's answer, Mrs. Reid.

Queen's Journal

Volume One Hundred, No. 60

Thursday, July 12, 1973

Letter to the editor

Constables needed

In the July 6th issue of The Journal appeared the second issue of an information sheet called the Xtramural Xaminer, said sheet being both independent of the AMS and The Journal

In it, Mr. S. Gilchrist accuses the AMS of power playing by posting constables at QSSA events. Being unaware of the politics of the situation I will not comment on this so-called attempt except to note that to refer to the AMS as "the winter government" is both incorrect and misleading.Incorrect since the AMS offices are elected to a one year term of office, as for any other corporation, and "misleading" since this seems to indicate that nothing that goes on in the summer is of concern to regular full time students of Queen's University.

However, the point of substance of Mr. Gilchrist's rather ill-tempered outburst seems to be that AMS constables should not be posted at QSSA events. He seems to use three points to sutain his argument. First the quality of the availalbe constables leaves much to be desired; they are "children" and "none of the three girls posted could have been more than twenty years old."

The second point is that "the age and maturity" of summer students is quite different from the age of members attending events where constables are posted during the full-time year. The third point is that QSSA may have to "riase prices...in order to defray the costs of paying for the constables."

The first point of Gilchrist's argument is completely unacceptable.The emphasis on "girls" denotes sexist overtones and also shows a rather lack of understanding of the role of AMS constables, who are quite capable of handling disturbances caused by either eighteen or 40 year old summer students.

The point about the maturity of QSSA members is also worthless. Constables are posted at graduate student events such as departmental welcome wine and cheese parties and this is not seen as a reflection on the maturity of Queen's faculty members who are attending.

The third point about who should be paying for what is the only interesting argument left to Mr. Gilchrist. But that is a question to be decided by political negotiations. The main point is that AMS constables must be posted at QSSA events. The AMS has a fine reputation at policing its members itself and this reputation should not be tarnished by the whims of a summer school politician.

If any wrongdoings should occur at QSSA events they could not be linked with "Queen's students" of which the great majority are full-time students. The AMS should use all available means of action to impress upon Mr. Gilchrist its determination of having AMS constables at QSSA meetings. They should indeed cancel events where AMS constables are not in attendance and should enlist Queen's University help in this respect.

I am certain that the majority of QSSA members understand the need for this type of requirement and do not see this as a sinister plot of the AMS but rather as a legitimate goal that any responsible student government would pursue.

Francois Vaillancourt

AMS fires Pub managers

by Susan de Stein

AMS Inner Council last Wednesday night demanded the resignations of the manager of the Queen's Pub, Dale Johnston and his assistant manager, Dave Crowe.

Discussion on the question took place in a secret session. A full explanation for the dismissals is not available.

Johnston and Crowe at the Monday night meeting of Inner Council, appealed the decision in light of what they called 'new evidence'. Commissioners Wil Kranenburg and Kiloran German moved that the question be reconsidered, sparking considerable debate. Marv Bloos, Education Commissioner, spoke vehemently. "Much of the 'new evidence' is heresay and represents 'after the fact' evidence". AMS Vice-President, Bruce Trotter added "there is no justification to re-open the case." When called to the vote, the motion was defeated, as it did not receive the necessary two thirds majority.

Having refused to resign, both Johnston and Crowe were dismissed from their positions on Wednesday night.

It has been known that relations between Pub Management and the AMS have been strained for some time.

Paul Mahaffy, director of QSA (Queen's Student Agencies), told The Journal that he had "lost faith in their ability to manage the Pub and in their capacity to be effective employees of the AMS."

The financial position of the Pub has been a cause of much concern.A loss of $2300 was incurred by the Pub during its first month of operation this summer.

The price of beer and liquor was increased by 10c in order to offset a new sales tax that is aimed at 'consistent special occasions' licenses such as those issued to student pubs across Canada.

In an effort to further cut operating costs, inventory controls were established, the noon hour operation was curtailed, and the hours of many Pub staff members were cut back.

As a result, some staff members expressed concern with the resulting loss of income. However, Mahaffy said, "although many staff members are relying on us for jobs, the Pub was just not able to support them.The AMS cannot afford the luxury of placing guarantees on summer jobs."

"We don't want the Pub to become a repition of Heffalump or the Typing Service," he commented.

Later, Johnston spoke to the Journal on the question of his dismissal. "Inner Council made a ridiculous distortion of an insignificant event for which we felt there was ample justification. We feel we have done a competent job and have never acted in anything but for Pub interest. Our actions we feel, are above reproach. Our dismissals were grossly unfair."

- solman

The demolition of the Queen's Tea Room which for so many years has been a landmark on this campus, is almost completed.

The fate of the Tea Room, was determined in March when the property on which it stands at the corner of Division and Union, was purchased by the university for an undisclosed amount. The space is to become a green area.

With the apparent cutbacks in the hours of operations of the Union coffee shop, the loss of the Tea Room is serious for many. Particularly, between the hours of 4 and 5 p.m. a cup of coffee is not easily found on this campus.

Job Bank closing soon

You had better hurry if you want a job this summer! Why? Because Job Bank will be closing on July 28th.

As of today there are jobs open for scuba divers, waitresses, part-time house cleaners, janitors and dog catchers. If you haven't got any kids of your own yet, and would like to chase somebody else's short-necked monsters around the backyard pool, then drop in and see us at 121 Union Street-better known as the Career Planning and Placement Building.So for this summer we have been able to get some type of work for over 800 students and one chimpanzee.

If you have a job to be done, or would like to do one, call Job Bank, at 547-3241 or 547-5581.

SVB is in operation

The Student Volunteer Bureau (SVB) is continuing its operations this summer, assigning volunteers to hospitals, drop-in centres, and service organizations in the Kingston area. Office Hours are 1 - 3 p.m.

Operations are on a smaller scale this summer with only 25 regular volunteers working in contrast to the force of 400 receiving assignments during the regular terms. However, Director Helen Barkly told the Journal that roughly one third of the regular term agencies in Kingston have requested volunteers for the summer.

Because SVB received no Youth in Action grants this year, organizers have had to work during their own free time.

QUASSA

Volume 1, Number 3, Thursday, July 12, 1973

..QUASSA is published by the Queen's University Summer School Association and is independent of the Queen's Journal and the Alma Mater Society.
Editor: Steve Gilchrist.

Minutes of QSSA Meeting of July 9, 1973

Mr. Wardle suggested that the QSSA have meetings with ASUS (Arts and Science Undergraduate Society), and the AMS (Alma Mater Society) to find out the role that we play as the QSSA (Queen's Summer School Association) in regard to the two above mentioned groups.

Don Bond felt we should have the views of the Summer School carried into this meeting. Steve Gilchrist felt that we should encompass Summer School and correspondence students in our activities and views.

Motion No. 5: Moved by Steve Gilchrist seconded by John Irvine that we set up a committee to discuss with AMS and ASUS executives the matter concerning our position within the University. Carried unanimously.

Motion No 6: Moved by John Irvine, seconded by Gary Pettigrew that the President, 1st Vice-President and 2nd Vice-President make up our committee. Passed.

A discussion arose concerning the changing of the name for our summer newsletter from QUASSA to Xtramural Xaminer.

Don Bond wanted to see the word QUASSA retained.

Motion No. 7: Moved by John Irvine, seconded by Don Bond that the QUASSA name be retained until it is no longer representative of this body. Passed.

New Business: The president reported that two important issues would be coming before the executive shortly for discussion. The two issues were Constitutional Revisions and Prizes and Bursaries. Regarding Prizes and Bursaries it was decided that we wait until after July 20th until we would have a final report on the monies available to us for this purpose.

Steve Gilchrist reported that almost 700 students attended Intersession and activities were provided for these people. Mr. Trotter has said that next year we (QSSA) will be the people in charge of looking after activities for Intersession students.

QSSA Meetings:

Motion No. 8: Moved by Don Bond, seconded by Gary Pettigrew that we have a short meeting on Thursday July 12th at 6.00 p.m. in the International Centre. Passed.

Motion No. 9: Moved by Lee Ewles, seconded by Karen Bradley that the meeting be adjourned. Passed.

Time of Adjournment: 5.30 p.m.

Secretary: Diane Siddle.

Place and Time: International Centre, 4:00 p.m.

Members Present: Barry Fletcher, Don Reed, Don Bond, Steve Gilchrist, Gary Pettigrew, John Irvine, Les Robertson, Karen Bradley, Jim Baker, Ross Wardle, Lee Ewles, Diane Siddle.

Barry Fletcher, the President of QSSA called the meeting to order. The meeting opened with the reading of the minutes from the last meeting, July 1st, 1973.

Amendment to the minutes:

John Irvine, our men's Sports co-convenor asked that the Sports report from the Minutes of the July 1st meeting be amended to include the word 'girl' and read as follows: "We need a new Sports co-convenor as the girl Sports co-convenor, for this summer resigned."

Motion No. 1: Moved by Don Bond, seconded by Gary Pettigrew that the secretary's minutes from July 1st, 1973 be accepted as amended. Passed.

Treasurer's Report:

Present bank balance: $997.50 to date.

Motion No. 2: Moved by John Irvine, seconded by Gary Pattigrew that the Treasurer's Report be accepted as presented. Passed.

Reports:

Social Committee: Gary Pettigrew reported that approximately 425 people turned out for the Wine and Cheese Party on Wednesday, July 4th, 1973 at Leonard Hall.

Gary Pettigrew gave the names of ten people who had helped the Social Committee to set up and look after the Wine and Cheese Party. He suggested that these people should receive a small payment for their services.

Motion No. 3: Moved by Don Bond, seconded by John Irvine that the Social Committee chairman be given the authority to pay any assistants, whom he deems necessary, $5.00 each. Passed.

Sports Committee: John Irvine reported that there will be no softball this summer as a result of no available diamonds. However, John Irvine as our Men's Sports Convenor has arranged for several other sports activities for Summer School students.

John Irvine reported the following activities.

Golf Tournament: You are urged to play a round of golf at Glen Lawrence Golf Club anytime before Friday Aug. 3. Please hand in the scores to Room 238 Leonard Hall or the Department of Extension. Prizes for low gross, 1st, 2nd, and 3rd.

Basketball: will be played from 6:30 - 8:30 p.m. on Wednesdays in the Bartlett Gym.

Mixed Volleyball: will be held every Monday from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. in the Ross and Bartlett Gym.

Table Tennis Tournament: will be conducted on Thursday, July 19th in Victoria Hall at 7:00 p.m.

Motion No. 4: Moved by John Irvine, seconded by Don Reed Linda Chandler be accepted replacement for Sue Henders girls' Sports co-convenor. Pa

New Business: A discussion regarding the fact that the supplied unasked for AMS stables at the QSSA Wine Cheese party on Wed. July 4th and then wanted to charge us for their services.

Coming events

Thurs., July 12 - Duplicate Bridge, Students Union, McLaughlin Room, 7:00.
- Movie, Catch -22, Dunning Hall, 7 and 9:15 p.m.

Mon., July 16 - Volleyball (mixed), Ross and Bartlett Gyms, 7:00 p.m.

Tues., July 17 - Golf Tournament continues - score cards to Victoria Hall.
- Movie, Dunning Hall, 7 and 9:15 p.m.

Wed., July 18 - Boat Cruise through the Thousand Islands, see posters for time and place.
- Basketball, Queen's Gym, 7 p.m.

Thurs., July 19 - Table Tennis Tournament, 6:30 p.m., Leonard Hall Common Room.
- Duplicate Bridge, Stud. Union, 7:30 p.m.
- Movie, Dunning Hall, 7 and 9:15 p.m.

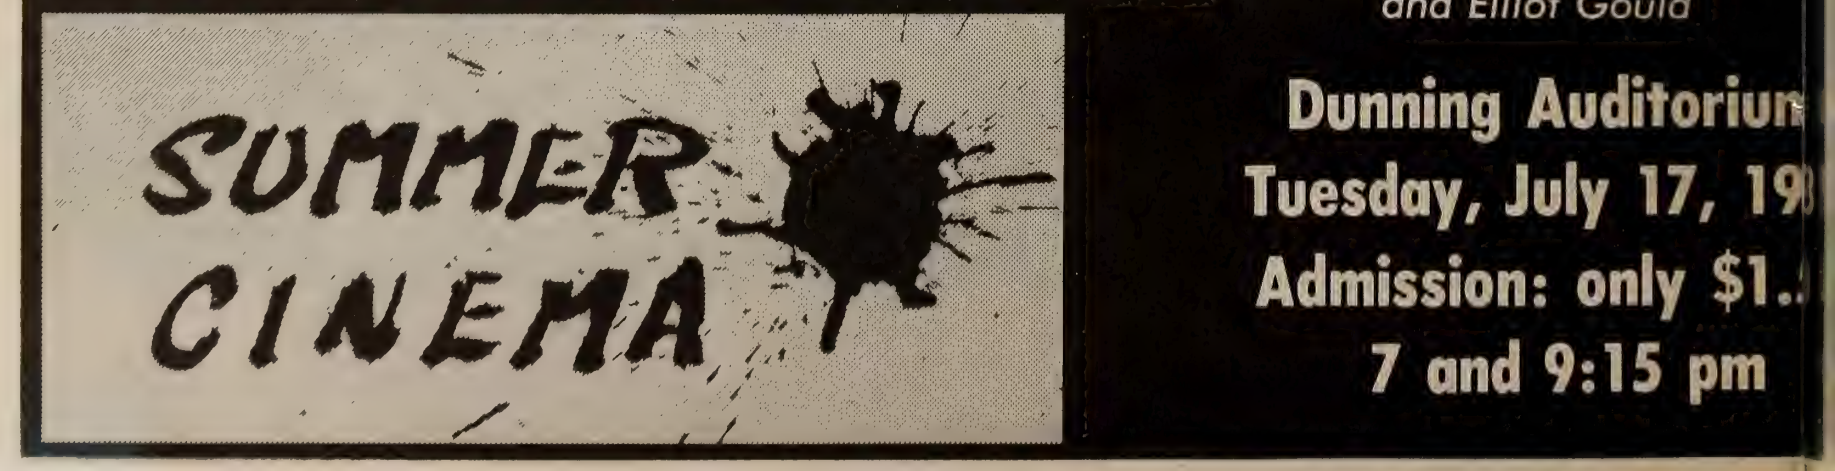
Mon., July 23 - Voll (mixed), 7:00 p.m. Ro Bartlett Gyms.
- Golf Tournament con

Mon., July 23 - Voll (mixed), 7:00 p.m. Ro Bartlett Gyms.
- Golf Tournament con

Tues., July 24 - Tennis nament, Queen's Court p.m.
- Movie, Dunning Hall, 9:15 p.m.

Wed., July 25 - Annual M of Summer School Ass
- Basketball, Gym, 7:0

Thurs., July 26 - Du Bridge, 7:30 p.m. Sh Union.
- Softball (men), 6:30
- Movie, Dunning Hall, 9:15 p.m.



Mon., July 30 - Vol continues

re: Co

To the Editor, Xtran
Dear Sir,

Your recent edit 1973) was obvious provoke the wrath respecting stude university, summe winter session, your of knowledge of th governing student coupled with several of fact, guarantee t of your readers.

There is howeve which must be menti let the rest of cam joke. Apparently demeaning to ha

Constable system editorial girls less than twenty years old, on duty at a summer school event. Not only are your remarks sub-human in this context, (sub-human in that they are examples of the most glaring sexism we have witnessed in a long time), their patronising tone is just a little absurd when it is remembered that you yourself are of equally tender years, and of possibly even tenderer sensibility when designated a little boy.

Sincerely,
E. Crowder
W. Kranenburg
K. Turner
D. McLaughlin
S. Harper
S. Beck
K. German.

ED NOTE: The editorial in question was meant, not to provoke anyone's wrath, but to raise certain questions as to the legality of and the desirability of having constables in attendance at Summer School functions. By concentrating merely on the fact that it was female constables who were criticized in the article and on the irrelevance of my own age (which is not typical of the average Summer School student) it seems that the purpose of the editorial was lost to the writers of that letter. In addition, their letter mentions the lack of knowledge of applicable regulations, to which I refer them to Article II, Sections I and II of the AMS constitution which specifically excludes Summer School students from membership in the Alma Mater Society, and I invite anyone to provide justification for the posting of constables by Mr. Van Koughnett, who, to the best of my knowledge, has never been ratified as "Acting Chief Constable" by Inner or Outer Council.

It is unfortunate that this area of dispute exists between the two governing bodies operating during the Summer Session, however, I do not feel that QSSA is alone in its criticism of the AMS constable system as presently constituted and operated, nor that its criticism is without justification. We, of course, support the principle of student protection for university property at events where a possibility of damage exists, however, the present terms of reference of the constable system fail to clearly outline the functions and responsibilities of the individual constables. A more concise definition of these functions, and greater care in analyzing the number of constables needed at each function is sorely needed at this time. Hopefully, with the return of the Chief Constable at the start of August, necessary changes in the hiring and training of constables can be affected, and the current problems of lack of training and instruction can be resolved.

One last comment I should make is that, having been party to the discrimination charge laid by Lyn Whitman and others against the constable system during the winter term, I in no way intend to imply that female constables were in any way less competent, in general, than male constables. It was more the lack of training given to all constables which was criticised in the editorial, and the fact that it was four girls (and Kevin Van Koughnett) who were posted, was in no way the incident which prompted the article.

Comments on this and any other aspects of Summer School life are welcome either in the Journal Office (addressed to QUASSA) or in the department of Extension. In addition, anyone willing to submit literary, poetic or news articles either in English or French (from the members of the Summer School of English), are also encouraged to bring them to the Summer School executive.

Constitutional changes

Next week, the QSSA executive will be beginning an intensive analysis of the future directions which the organization should take within the governing structure of the university. Such issues as who should be a member of the QSSA (ie Intersession, Correspondence and Summer School of English students), what should have in the higher levels of government at Queen's, and the advantages and disadvantages of remaining a separate political entity will be discussed. In addition, the possibility of changes in the structure of QSSA and changes in the activities offered by the Association will also be discussed.

Any suggestions you might have as to how the Association could be improved or what position it should assume within the university, should be submitted to the QUASSA (through the Dept of Extension or the Journal office) or to any member of the summer school Executive. On the basis of suggestions received, a set of proposals will be presented for student ratification at the annual meeting of students on July 25. If you want to have a part in the shaping of the future of your organization, now is the time to act and to make your feelings known to those who are in a position to implement the desired changes.

Summer School Executive Members

The following is a list of the members of this years' Summer School Executive and the position each member holds. If you are in need of any information concerning Summer School please feel free to contact the School Activities, or if you have any relevant member of the executive. complaints, suggestions or requests to make about any aspect of Summer

President - Barry Fletcher - Rm 352 Leonard Hall - 544-7360; Vice-President - Barbara McEvilla - 139 William St. - 548-7086; Vice-President - Steve Gilchrist - Apt 1210 Elrond College - 548-3144; Social Convenor - Gary Pettigrew - Rm 236 Leonard Hall - 544-7297; Social Convenor - Lee Ewles - 219 Leonard Hall - 544-7270; Treasurer - Don Reed - Rm 206 Leonard Hall - 544-7264; McArthur Rep - Don Bond - Rm 209 Leonard Hall - 544-7267; Sports Convenor - John Irvine - Rm 238 Leonard Hall - 544-7298; Sports Convenor - Linda Chandler - Rm 545 Gordon - 544-7599; Publicity - Les Robertson - Rm 203 Leonard; Secretary - Diane Siddle - Rm 547 Gordon 544-7598.

Social and Sports Committee Reports

Social

Due to the unavailability of diamonds, there will be no softball this summer. The other sports events will go as planned, however. The mixed volleyball will be every Monday from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. in Ross and Bartlett Gyms. Basketball will be every Wednesday from 6:30 to 8:30 in Bartlett Gym.

-Golf Tournament - Play a round of golf at Glen Lawrence Golf Club anytime before Friday, August 3, 1973. Hand in scores to Room 238 Leonard Hall or the Department of Extension offices. Prizes will be awarded for first, second and third lowest gross scores.

Sports

The wine and cheese party held in Leonard Hall last Wednesday was a great success, with almost five hundred people taking advantage of the free wine and (relatively) cheap beer. The loss on the event was only $150 this year, as opposed to the $450 we have normally spent to hold the event at the Holiday Inn. The major event next week will be the Boat Cruise and Wiener Roast in the Thousand Islands. For only $1.00, you get transportation to Gananoque, a two hour Boat Cruise through the Thousand Islands and a free cookout on one of the Islands. Tickets for the cruise will be available at the meal lines or from the members of the Summer School Executive (see list of addresses above). A reminder to anyone on campus who wishes to take part in any Summer School activities, ...associate memberships are available from Executive members for $3.00. A final note, continuing this week, Summer Cinema is presenting full length feature films for $1.50 every Tuesday and Thursday evening in Dunning Hall Auditorium with admission open to everyone.

Graduating this summer?

A reminder to Summer School members finishing their degree this summer, that, if they wish to have their grad picture in next year's Tricolor yearbook, they should contact Wallace Berry Studios at 15 Montreal Street, 542-2809 after July 16. (Only Wallace Berry pictures are acceptable in Tricolor.)

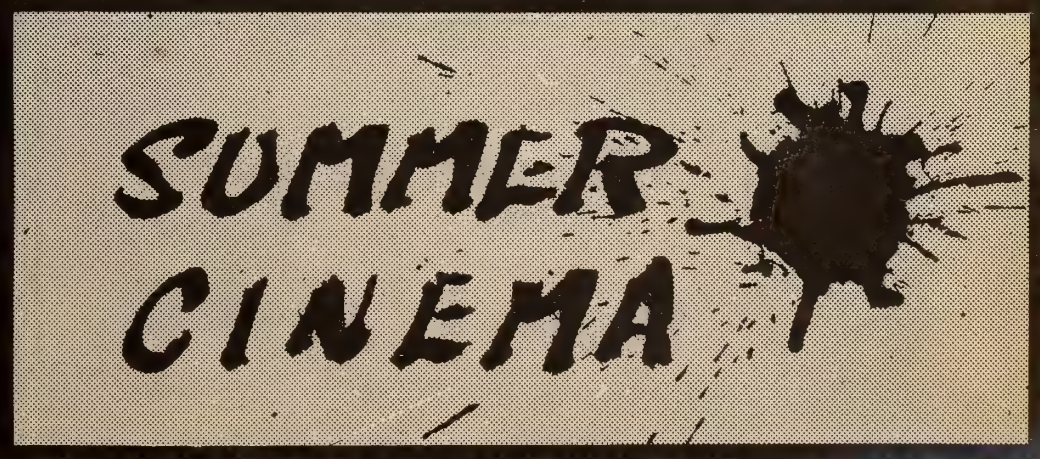
Next Wednesday

Boat Cruise

and Cookout in the Thousand Islands

Admission: $1.00 for Summer School Students

Buses Leave Leonard Hall at 6 pm



Tickets available in meal lines or from members of the executive

TONIGHT

Mike Nichols, Art Garfunkle in

CATCH-22

Dunning Auditorium
Thursday, July 12, 1973
Admission: only $1.50
7 and 9:15 pm

letter re the animals

To the Gerbils:
re: Animal Matter Society Position.

Obviously, Mutt the cub reporter wants to be Top Dog, so last week he tried to scoop the Animal Matter Society secret session non-news. Unfortunately, the mutt is nothing but a toothless old hound. He just can't bug rooms like he used to (although he has no trouble bugging other members of the Gerbil staff) and he got it all wrong. I know. I was there.

Although the law of the jungle forbids me to divulge all the secret non facts, I cannot allow the mutt's scurrilous libel to stand unchallenged. I hope the following will clarify the situation.

First of all, everybody knows I've abstained from daffodils for months. The mutt suggested that I still indulge. That was a flagrant slur on my character. As a self-respecting korn, I demand a retraction.

Secondly, everybody knows that dodos are extinct, and there was certainly no sign of a dodo at the meeting last week.

Thirdly, wil the pooh couldn't have been taking minutes. Everybody knows that secret sessions don't have minutes, even if they last for hours.

Fourthly, by the time the meeting was over, there were no more milkshakes at jackrabbit johnston's tavern.

Finally, we never did go to the woods - we were too busy going to the mattresses. You see, the Animal Matter Society is in the middle of a gang war.

It all started just the other day when old mutton-chops, would-be king of the summer sheep society, mistook the Animal Matter lair for a windmill and although he's just a common sheep, he pretended to be a ram and he tried to batter it down. "Sheep are not animal matters!" he bleated.

I guess he thinks that the Animal Matter lair is filled with wolves who are out to ravage his poor unsuspecting flock, although lately they've taken to sharpening their shears. Old mutton-chops better watch it, or he's going to be a shorn sheep.

Obviously, we haven't time to go to the woods. Poor old mutt should have non-written the secret non-news and should have concentrated on the non-secret news. Send him back to his apprenticeship and let him do the obituaries. That should keep him busy - a lot of animals have been stabbed in the back lately.

Sincerely,
korn (External Forests Commissioner, Animal Matter Society)

Summerdaze

THEATRES

St. Lawrence Summer Playhouse presents "Butterflies are Free" from Monday, July 16 to Saturday July 21. Curtain at 8:30 p.m. Tickets available at the Tent Theatre Box Office (in the park) $3.00 for adults. $2.50 for students. Reservations 542-9938.

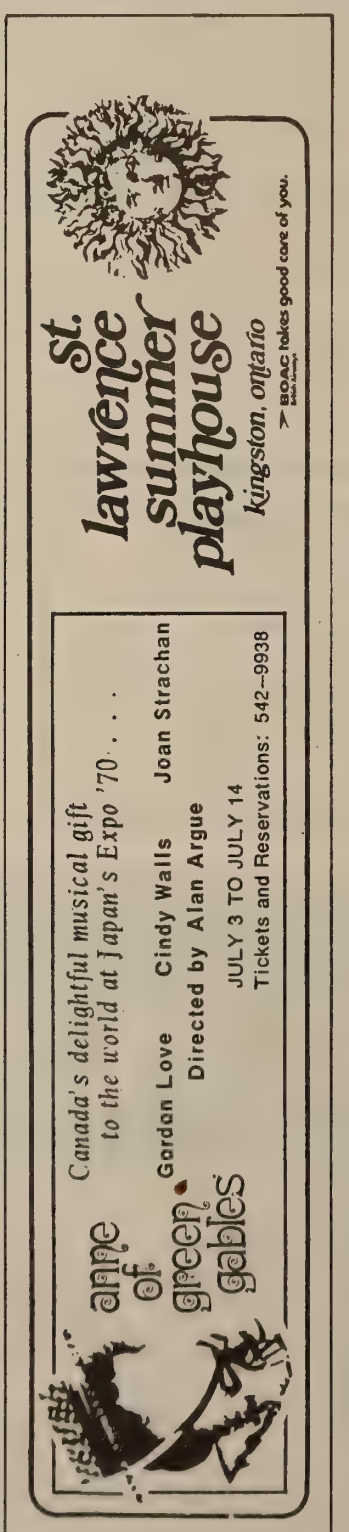
Theatre 5 in association with Brendan McConnell presents Dinner Time Theatre. Will the Last One Out of Kingston Please Turn Out the Lights. An improvisational revue with music every evening Monday to Saturday inclusive until Saturday July 21, Dinner at 7.00 p.m. Curtain at 8.00 p.m. $3.50 per person, includes dinner and show in The Buttery at Hotel Frontenac. 544-6881.

MOVIES

Captial - Walt Disney's The World's Greatest Athlete
Odeon - Live and Let Die
Hyland - Forty Carats
Summer Cinema in Dunning Hall - Catch - 22 at 7.00 pm and 9.15

PUBS

Commodore- Bob Hendrickson until Saturday, starting Monday Clompin' Claude.
401 Inn - Robert E. Lee and the Brigade until Saturday, starting Monday, Mainstream.
Townhouse- Show Toppers until Saturday, starting Monday Muriel Day.
Manor - Sharon Lownes until Saturday, starting Monday The Oriental Jewels.
International Club
Cottage is open to all Queen's students from July 13 to July 30 on Lake Opinicon. Cost $2.00 per 24 hour period. Transportation provided. Book through the International Centre.



unclassifieds

ROOM FOR RENT: in large 8 bedroom house. Communal eating arrangements. $80 a month, everything included. At Princess and University. Phone 542-9269 or 493 Princess. Available now and-or for September.
FOR SALE: Nikon - 549-2785.
FOR SALE: Component stereo system, Dual turntable. 389-4565 after 5:00 p.m.
MOVE TO SCIENCE 44 Co-op for the Summer. Large furnished rooms, stimulating environs, full kitchens, common rooms, lawns, trees, and large porches. Most reasonable rates for miles. Call Don 544-4506. 5 pm - 6 pm.

Queen's Journal
Vol. 100, No. 60
Thurs., July 12, 1973
at Queen's University
Kingston, Ontario

Published once weekly on Thursdays during the summer by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc., Member Canada University Press. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society of the University. Offices are located in the Student's Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

THEATRE 5
Presents
DINNER TIME THEATRE
AT
THE BUTTERY
"Will the last one out of Kingston please turn out the lights"
Monday to Saturday Inclusive
Buffet Dinner 7:00 P.M. — Show Starts 8:00 P.M.
$3.50 per person — Includes Dinner and Show
HOTEL FRONTENAC
178 ONTARIO STREET 544-6881

St. James Anglican Church
9:00 am -- Holy Communion
11:00 am -- Morning Prayer
NO EVENING SERVICE

Pizza Chalet
286 MONTREAL ST. KINGSTON
544-1227
OPEN MON. TUES WED. 4:00 p.m. to 1:00 a.m.
OPEN ALL DAY SUNDAY 12 – 12
OPEN THURS. FRI. SAT. 4:00 p.m. to 2:00 a.m.

Chalet Deluxe EXTRA LARGE
Pepperoni- Mushrooms- Bacon Sausage- Green Peppers- Olive Cheese- Tomato Sauce
$5.50
BIGGEST PIZZA YOU'VE EVER SEEN!

SELECTION WITH CHEESE & TOMATO SAUCE	11" REG	13" MED	15" LGE	SUPER 17" X-LGE
1. Pepperoni-Mushrooms-Bacon-Green Peppers Sausages-Olive	2.50	3.65	4.55	5.50
2. Pepperoni-Mushrooms	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
3. Pepperoni-Bacon	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
4. Mushrooms-Bacon	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
5. Combination Pizza Pepperoni-Mushrooms Green Peppers-Olives	2.40	2.95	3.95	4.95
6. Bacon	1.85	2.60	3.65	4.65
7. Pepperoni	1.85	2.60	3.65	4.65
8. Cheese	1.75	2.40	2.95	3.90
9. Mushrooms	1.85	2.60	3.65	4.65

Combination Special
Pepperoni- Olive Mushrooms- Green Peppers
$3.95
A LARGE PIZZA SURE TO PLEASE

BUY YOUR DIAMOND NOW!
AND PAY AT YOUR CONVENIENCE!
LOVELY!

Sometimes it's not easy to pay right away. That doesn't mean you have to wait to buy a diamond. You can choose one of our credit plans. Our selection includes rings in all price ranges. Let us help you choose a splendid, exquisitely cut diamond and plan convenient payments. It's the easy way to enjoy your diamond now.
KINNEAR D'ESTERRE
JEWELLERS
168 PRINCESS STREET
KINGSTON, ONTARIO

Queen's
Journal
Volume One Hundred, No. 61
Thursday, July 19, 1973

Letters to the editors

(Ed. Note . . .
Inner Council defeated a motion to reopen discussion on the dismissal of Dale Johnston and Dave Crowe from their positions at the Pub last week. However, they and two other persons, have written the following letters presenting their case.)

Johnston explains "firing of the managers"

Dear Editors,

This letter is in defense or rather explanation of what in years to come will be regarded as the "firing of the managers of the Pub".

On the night of June 15 a "Beer and Bingo Night" was held in the Pub under the sponsorship of Intersession.

Steve Gilchrist as VP of intersession rented the Pub and all Pub facilities for that occasion with the stipulation that I, as manager of the Pub, would oversee the beer and staffing problems.

Steve Gilchrist was in Toronto purchasing prizes for the event that afternoon and was subsequently "tied up in traffic". I proceeded to initiate the evenings operations until Steve arrived.

After Mr. Gilchrist's (sic) arrival he thanked me for my effort and applauded the functioning of the Pub. Since my duties as manager rest solely with Pub operation Mr. Gilchrist offered to pay myself and my ass't manager for our efforts that evening by placing our names on the bill for salaries, which would be paid for by Mr. Gilchrist.

This offer was declined by myself and my assistant. In its place however we asked that several persons who were not there that night be placed on the payroll for that night. These persons would come in on Sunday to clean up and be used by the Pub at later dates for various jobs.

This was accepted by Steve Gilchrist, and myself for the following reasons.

1. The managers had been offered a gratuity by Mr. Gilchrist and we refused it.
2. In light of Mr. Gilchrist's satisfaction with the efficient operation of the event he was willing to pay more for the added service provided irregardless of who provided that added service.
3. This could have taken the form of an increase in the Pub rental fee, but it was felt that employees could benefit greatly by being paid that night and be given work at a later date.
4. The pub in return for its effort that night, would benefit by having employees work at routine operations and the pub would not be billed for them.
5. The gratuity offered the managers by Intersession was therefore given to pub employees to work for free for the pub thus aiding in alleviating the pubs weak financial position.
6. The total monies involved was approximately $40. A charge was brought by the QSA that the ass't manager had fraudulently "padded the books" and was to be fired.

I adamently defended our position and consequently resignations were asked for both of us, after the first inner council and secret sessions.

Following this meeting I obtained sworn testimony from Mr. Gilchrist that he agreed wholly with the billing of his function for the reasons already outlined.

When we approached Inner Council to ask that they reconsider their decision, Marv Bloos equated inner council with a court of law and vehemently expressed his opinion that these were not new facts and purely hearsay. Bruce Trotter agreed with him and since two people were enough to quash the motion to reopen the case we were denied a hearing.

Now I ask the students if such an action is valid. In light of constitutional rights.

According to the comments attributed to Mr. Mahaffey in last week's Journal, the pub is $2,300 in the hole.

These figures have at no time been presented to me or inner council in any authenticated way. As comptroller of pub resources it is Mr. Mahaffey's job to inform me and Inner Council of these alleged losses. If losses are incurred the loss of pub monies is Mr. Mahaffey's responsibility not mine. Therefore who should lose faith in who's ability to execute their job.

Our hearing was refused because it "did not receive the necessary 2-3 majority."

The break down was as follows: Votes

Dorothy Lloyd - absent first meeting	0
Ken Wong - absent	0
Bruce Trotter	Nay
Wil Kranenberg	Yay
Kiloran German	Yay
Bob Greenwood	Yay
Marv Bloos	Nay
Steve Brereton	Abstain

Therefore two people had our hearing dismissed because inner council never seems to be present at the same time.

My ass't manager and I have been confronted with idle threats of incompetence and false accusations and feel these practises must come to an end.

Our dismissals must be questioned by the university as a whole. We have taken the necessary action to try and shake up this Queen's Watergate Committee. We beg that you help us, for your own benefit, to seriously look at the actions of your government.

It may mean nothing or it may not but what the hell . . . Look into it!

Dale Johnston

Crowe presents his side of the story

Dear Editors:

This letter is in response to your news item in last week's Journal regarding my being fired as assistant manager of the Queen's pub. There are certain background facts which I feel are important to show how it was not simply a question of competence. The following incidents should demonstrate how the relationship between the managerial staff and the AMS deteriorated over the summer, and hopefully point out the weaknesses in the reasons used for the firing.

i) re: first news of pub losses, June 4.

The first word of our losses came on June 4th, a month after the pub had been open. Dale Johnston wasn't aware of it as, from the start of the summer he was not allowed to do the books, the reason for this being that the summer manager in 1972 had not done a competent job last year.

On Monday morning, June 4, John Wilson, Penny Hart, Rich Stewart and myself went to a meeting to question why the bartenders and cashiers were being removed from work at the pub during noon hours on orders of the AMS. Stewart and I set up the meeting with Paul Mahaffey, director of Queen's Student Agencies. Also present at this meeting were Bruce Trotter, AMS vice-president, and Wil Kranenberg, AMS Services Commissioner. There, for the first time, we found out about the losses. The blame for these losses was laid solely on Dale Johnston, the Pub manager, even though from the start he was not allowed to take care of the books. The bookkeeping was the responsibility of Mr. Mahaffey. Subsequently I learned that Mr. Mahaffey felt I had gone outside my authority in questioning his decision to lay off staff at noonhours on setting up this meeting and he told Johnston that I should be fired.

However, that afternoon, (June 4) I was talking with Bill Mandich (QEA director) who at that time told me that the AMS was seriously thinking of offering me Johnston's job.

The same day, from 4 pm til 6 pm, there was a meeting in Joyce Roe's office. (She is the AMS Business Administrator). In attendance were myself, Roe, Mahaffey and Reg Rickeby, the winter pub manager. There, Roe asked me if I would accept Johnston's job, which I declined. At that time, even after the May losses, there was no question regarding my competence.

ii) Accusations of fraud, June 4.

At this same meeting, it came out in the discussion that Mahaffey had been spreading the word around that I had been "padding" the salaries. He admitted this at the meeting, yet when he was asked to point out "any" incident of padding, he was unable to show anything. Thus he made an accusation of fraud against me based only on his own feelings, with "nothing" to back him up.

iii) Re Beer and Bingo.

We were accused of "padding" the payroll from the Beer and Bingo held

Continued on page 2

Mahaffey threatens to resign QSA post

In an ultimatum issued to Inner Council at their meeting last week, Queen's Student Agencies director, Paul Mahaffey threatened to resign if Services Commissioner Wil Kranenburg remained in office.

The controversy arose from an investigation into the allocation of AMS houses planned by Kranenburg.

Mahaffey offered to continue his duties until September at which time the AMS must respond to his ultimatum.

Kranenburg made no comment.

Earlier in the meeting, Inner Council ratified Dave Campbell as Pub manager and Penny Hart as assistant manager for the rest of the summer.

Education Commissioner Marv Bloos moved that the newly appointed managers be instructed not to hire Dale Johnston and Dave Crowe (who formerly held the positions) to work in the Pub. During the discussion External Affairs Commissioner, Kiloran German, remarked that hiring policy was the responsibility of the new managers and not that of the AMS and after considerable debate, Bloos withdrew his motion. Inner Council instead suggested that the new managers not hire Johnston and Crowe.

Since interviews for the position of Acting Chief Constable had not been held by the time of the meeting, ratification was delayed until this evening. However, the appointment will only be for next week since Chief Constable Ian Nordheimer will be returning at the end of July to resume his duties.

QUSSA and AMS discussing union

The Queen's University Summer School Association (QUSSA) and the AMS held an informal meeting Tuesday night to discuss the relationships between the two organizations and possible amalgamation of the two political structures. However, no definite commitments were made.

Discussion centred on the benefits of a closer union between the two groups, and possible methods of uniting the two political structures.

AMS Vice-President Bruce Trotter cited "continuity and expertise" as the two major benefits the AMS provided. He pointed out that because the AMS is essentially a year round operation, it offers the continuity needed for academic planning and for organizing social events. Trotter also suggested that AMS experience in such fields as booking bands would be available to QUASSA if the two organizations were amalgamated.

"Two main purposes of the AMS are to provide services for the students and to maintain order" stated Steve Brereton, AMS President. He pointed out that these are administered year round by the AMS (although most services have been cut back because of the poor AMS financial situation.)

QUSSA President Barry Fletcher favoured the suggestion that summer school join the AMS in a structure placing. QUSSA in the same position as other faculties. He noted that the organization would still have its own identity while maintaining a "kinship tie" with the AMS. To achieve this, the AMS would ratify the QUSSA constitution, and the proposal would be presented for ratification to the summer students annual meeting.

Dave Crowe presents his side of the story . . .

Continued from page 1

on June 15. Steve Gilchrist who organized that event, has an important statement here.

As there was a good explanation for my actions, at the first Inner Council meeting, I was emphasicizing my opinion that Mahaffey knew of this, and thus should not be bringing up these charges.

It is important to note here that neither Mahaffey nor Roe came to ask for an explanation, but instead came to the conclusion that there was fraud and that I should be fired. In addition, again without coming for an explanation, both Roe and Mahaffey threatened to resign their positions THEIR POSITIONS UNLESS I were fired. This threat was made to Johnston, and was repeated by Mahaffey at the first Inner Council meeting, before any of the facts had come out. I also wish to re-emphasize that four different persons -- Gilchrist, Johnston, Kranerberg, and myself -- are willing to state that Mahaffey told them either the night of the Beer and Bingo or subsequently, that he had said (jokingly or not) to not worry too much about the salaries. My own impression here was that he had talked to both Johnston and Gilchrist and knew of Gilchrist's offer.

Again, I point out that though money was to be paid to people who didn't work, it was money paid for work that had been done by the managerial staff. Would it have been more honest and moral to directly pay the managers who were already on salary, than to let them pay anyone they chose to, or rather to directly pay those other persons. I personally cannot see the differences being large enough to warrant the AMS actions. Yet there would have been no repercussions if the intersession people had paid us directly, on top of our salary as Mahaffey, who worked that night and receives a salary from the AMS, also received a cheque from the intersession people.

Finally, there are some statements in last week's Journal explaining our being fired which I think ought to be clarified. The first concerns Marv Bloos's dismissal of Gilchrist's statements together with written statements from myself and Johnston, as being "heresay" and "after the fact evidence". Regarding the heresay, he objected most strongly to his being named in my statement as being a person who was told by Mahaffey that for the first few weeks of operation that I had been padding the salaries. I heard this from Richard Stewart and he confirmed that Bloos had told him this. Be that as it may, Mahaffey still admitted that in the June 4th meeting that he had told various persons that I had been padding salaries, with no facts to back him up.

The second quote of Bloos ("after the fact evidence") is much more serious. In the meeting he accused Gilchrist of "collusion" with the pub managerial staff and yet he never expressed any reasons for his belief that Gilchrist was lying for us. It could not be friendship as before the night of the beer and bingo, neither Dale nor myself had personally met Gilchrist. He had phoned me earlier in the summer to ask for a job and I had refused him one. If anything, I think, that would seem to put him against us. Further, if we were trying to cheat the intersession government out of money, would it not be more likely that he would be against us? Yet, in spite of this, Bloos implied there was collusion. It was brought up at the first Inner Council meeting by Johnston that Gilchrist had known of the way we were going to pay out people. Gilchrist was not at that meeting and when we came before the Inner Council at its second meeting, a minority of the members felt his evidence was worthless, in spite of the fact that it went to show that the money was paid for work that was being done by Johnston and myself and that as we were on salaries, we passed the money onto others who were not working that night.

Another statement which I also think ought to be clarified is that of Mahaffey's stating "that he had lost faith in their ability to manage the Pub and in their employees of the AMS". What Mahaffey forgets to state is that "every" recommendation made to the managerial staff by Mahaffey, the Inner Council and the auditors has made was acted upon. This includes such items as raising the door charges and beer and liquor prices. It also includes, for the first time, a detailed inventory system. The latter, contrary to what the Journal reported, was not to cut back on operating costs, but rather set up on the recommendation of the auditors. We also, on our own, reduced the staff as that was there one of the major costs, without appreciably reducing the quality of service.

One point in regard to his questioning our competence: In spite of our titles as managers, we cannot raise the prices as that is a policy matter which goes before Inner Council for ratification. We knew at the beginning of May, before the Pub opened, that the Pub's cost of beer had risen by a nickel a bottle because of changes in the costs of banquet licences. The same rise in cost also applied proportionately to liquor. At first, we thought we could absorb the rise in costs, but after such a deficit for the month of May, why was this rise in cost not brought to the immediate attention of the Inner Council, so they could approve a raise in the prices? At one point, Johnston and myself tried to raise the door charges for band nights but were told by Kranenberg that this rise had to go through Inner Council. Yet Mahaffey, in his function as liaison between the Pub and Inner Council, did not bring any question of price raises to their attention until a month after the first losses were reported.

Another point regarding competence goes towards Mahaffey's keeping of the books. In spite of the losses reported in May, there was still no change in the manner of the bookkeeping. Thus there was no way future losses could be quickly pinpointed. Dave Campbell, the present manager, and myself at the beginning of June, suggested setting up the books so that a weekly financial statement could be made. Yet, nothing has been done to this date. We also suggested the use of the Small Business Consulting Programme from the Queen's School of Business. Yet it is only now that this recommendation is being acted upon. Again, possibly I should be accused of going outside the authority of my job in making such suggestions.

One final note in respect to the Journal quoting Mahaffey is that he is no longer connected with the Pub. Trotter has taken over the responsibility of the books and Kranenberg has taken over his position as liaison between the pub and the Inner Council.

Dave Crowe

He was pleased with their work

Dear Editors,

This is to verify that for the night of June 15, 1973, I, Steven Gilchrist, was given exclusive control of all activities in the Queen's Pub on June 15th. In the presence of Bruce Trotter, Dale Johnston and myself agreed that, for a stated fee, I would engage the pub to be used as a smoker (with the added attraction of bingo games) and that Dale Johnston would handle all matters of personnel that night. He was given a ceiling of $175 to spend on wages for the staff used that night and was given permission to pay both himself and Dave Crowe a salary for

Continued on page 3

classifieds

APARTMENT, 1½, Sublet now til Sept. 1. One block from campus. $15 per week. Phone 389-0898 between 7 and 9 pm.

DUE TO THE cancellation of the summer school dance at the Arena and the Pub's unavoidable contract committments, the management is forced to raise the cover charge in the House of Lords to 75c for Wednesday, Thursday and Friday night of this week. Please note that the pub will be open until 1 am the nights in question.

YOU LONG-HAIRED...

TOM'S SHOE REPAIR
Shoe Service
186 Wellington
George the Hatter
leathercoats and all leatherwork repaired
546-5193

Queen's Journal
Vol. 100, No. 61
Thurs., July 19, 1973
Queen's University at Kingston, Ontario

Interim Staff: Susan de Stein, Robert Wood, Charles Schwier, Sandy Naiman, Bob Mutrie, John Solman, Kiloran German, Mary Jane Eddy

Published once weekly on Thursdays during the summer by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc., Member Canada University Press. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society of the University. Offices are located in the Student's Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

Drink for thought.

Molson Golden
A good smooth ale
Do you know what you're missing?

YEARBOOKS!

The Tricolor '74 (for the year from May '73 to May '74 and containing this summer's grad photos) will be on sale in the AMS office in the basement of the Union. Cost $6.00.

If you are interested in having your graduate portrait in this book, call Wallace Berry Studios at 542-2809.

St James Anglican Church

9:00 am -- Holy Communion
11:00 am -- Morning Prayer
NO EVENING SERVICE

"BUTTERFLIES ARE FREE"

Playing Through July 21

St. lawrence summer playhouse
kingston, ontario

Tickets and Reservations 542-9938

BOAC takes good care of you.

Pizza Chalet

286 MONTREAL ST. KINGSTON

544-1227

OPEN MON. TUES WED. 4:00 p.m. to 1:00 a.m.
OPEN ALL DAY SUNDAY 12 – 12
OPEN THURS. FRI. SAT. 4:00 p.m. to 2:00 a.m.

Chalet Deluxe EXTRA LARGE — Pepperoni- Mushrooms- Bacon Sausage- Green Peppers- Olive Cheese- Tomato Sauce — $5.50
BIGGEST PIZZA YOU'VE EVER SEEN!

SELECTION WITH CHEESE & TOMATO SAUCE	11" REG	13" MED	15" LGE	SUPER 17" X-LGE
1. Pepperoni-Mushrooms-Bacon-Green Peppers Sausages-Olive	2.50	3.65	4.55	5.50
2. Pepperoni-Mushrooms	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
3. Pepperoni-Bacon	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
4. Mushrooms-Bacon	1.95	2.65	3.85	4.85
5. Combination Pizza Pepperoni-Mushrooms Green Peppers-Olives	2.40	2.95	3.95	4.95
6. Bacon	1.85	2.60	3.65	4.65
7. Pepperoni	1.95	2.60	3.65	4.65
8. Cheese	1.75	2.40	2.95	3.90
9. Mushrooms	1.85	2.60	3.65	4.65

Combination Special — Pepperoni- Olive Mushrooms- Green Peppers — $3.95
A LARGE PIZZA SURE TO PLEASE

What are the details of their dismissal?

Dear Editors,

The recent dismissals of the Pub manager, Dale Johnston and his assistant manager, David Crowe, has prompted the writing of this letter. As an employee at the Pub who worked for these two men I am primarily curious about the reasons for and details of thieir dismissal as I imagine other Pub employees and students are.

At our first staff meeting before the close of the spring session, the entire staff was informed of Dale and David's plans for the organization of staff schedules and duties for the summer's operation and their aim to run the Pub in an efficient and business like manner. Their plans were accepted as satisfactory and reasonable by myself and other staff members.

As additional background, I had worked with both Dale and Dave during the winter and spring sessions and felt that they were more than capable of doing the jobs to which they were appointed competently and efficiently because they had observed Reg Rickaby's methods of managing the Pub during the regular school term and both had worked closely with Reg.

When the Pub opened for operation this summer the organization as far as schedules and duties were concerned worked well and as the staff was originally informed there was to be a system of rules designating time of arrival for and departure from work and staff prices for the purchase of beer, liquor and food while at work which all staff was to follow. Dale and David were stiff in demanding that these rules be followed and from my personal observations at work under the control system behind the bar usually consisting of a cashier, two bartenders, and one or more waiters or waitresses at the bar at any given time the likelihood of any instance of petty theft on the part of any staff member was unusual and highly unlikely.

As the summer progressed numerous events occurred the details and circumstances of which remain very vague. Dale and David were under pressure from the AMS for reasons sometimes, in fact most of the time, not very clear yet they continued to run the Pub efficiently. I understand that the original pressure they were under resulted from the fact that they had been requested to resign and refused to do so. With such a request to resign made, one suspects that this meant that there were some doubts as to their capability and competence to operate the Pub and some suspicions as to their characters specifically whether they were honest and trustworthy. I think that there is no doubt and no need for suspicion of any sort.

I believe them to be capable, competent, honest and trustworthy people. Later upon being fined they attempted to appeal the decision and to have the case all opened. This attempt proved futile. I think that any evidence that Dale and David might have presented would be 'new evidence' rather than evidence 'after the fact' because the details of their dismissal were not and have not been made available and that they were definitely justified in making an appeal if there was any doubt or suspicion relating to their capability and competence.

As Dale and David were employees of the AMS in the capacity of manager and assistant manager, so am I but first and foremost I am a student employed originally by Dale and David and I wish this letter to not only serve the purpose of demanding and questioning the details of their dismissal but of letting others know that I believe that such a dismissal was and still is highly objectionable and that despite the fact that they have been fined I still believe them to be capable, competent, honest, trustworthy and worthy of my respect as well as the respect of members of the AMS executive.

Sincerely
Elizabeth F. Ewasick.

Pleased with their work

Continued from page 2

the work they did last night. Dale, knowing that staff would be required to clean up the after effects of the smoker, requested that the salary for the manager and assistant manager be paid, but to those persons who would be required on Sunday to clean up. Since this would eliminate any complications over who would be responsible for the payment of the clean up staff (since my rental of the Pub extended only so far as Saturday evening) and since it made no difference to me who received the monies involved, I agreed to the payment plan proposed by Mr. Johnston. It is my impression, from my memory of that night and from comments made later by Paul Mahaffey that he (Paul) was aware of this switching of payroll recipients and was in agreement with the proposal (i.e. he felt that it wasbetter that someone employed by the pub be paid in effect, as a gratuity to the Pub for services rendered, regardless of who received it).

The actions taken by the AMS in asking for the resignations of Mr. Johnston and Mr. Crowe over this point are not only cheap, petty politics but are quite illegal as Mr. Johnston and all other staff working in the pub that night were in my employment that night, not under the jurisdiction of the AMS and in selflessly asking that this pay be given to another employee of the pub was well within the jurisdiction I had given Mr. Johnston regarding the payment of salaries.

I was most pleased with the performance of Mr. Johnston and the operation of the pub and under the circumstances, I cannot but support the position of Mr. Johnston and Mr. Crowe and I am prepared to assist them in their case to whatever extent I possibly can.

Steve Gilchrist.

Maharishi Mahesh Yogi

CREATIVITY THROUGH TRANSCENDENTAL MEDITATION

A scientifically proven and easily learned technique which will unfold full creative intelligence while simultaneously dissolving deep rooted tensions and daily stress.

INTRODUCTORY LECTURE
Wed., July 25
8:00 p.m.

DUNNING AUDITORIUM
Queen's University

Admission Free
International Meditation Society

editorial

It's a threatening symptom

The manner in which Inner Council handled the firing of the Pub manager, Dale Johnston, and his assistant, Dave Crowe, has provided ample evidence of the ineptitude with which the AMS is conducting its affairs. The circumstances surrounding the dismissals and other recent crises, are but symptoms of larger problems which have been plaguing the AMS all summer.

From the facts which have been made public, including statements made by the managers in the Journal, and in light of the contradictions which abound in the arguments of all involved parties, the grounds upon which the managers were fired seem questionable, and, in fact, spurious.

The discussions concerning the firing of the Pub managers all took place in secret sessions of the AMS Inner Council. (In the last two months, Inner Council has conducted more secret sessions than have been held in recent memory.) It has been said that secret sessions serve 'to protect' the individual (s) in question. We ask, who is Inner Council trying to protect?

The backroom politicing and secrecy which surround this case have served only to conceal Inner Council's reasons for its action and to further weaken its credibility. It is clearly in the interests of the AMS and all concerned that the facts surrounding this case and the grounds upon which Inner Council made its decision, become known.

In addition, Inner Council allowed the element of personality to cloud this issue, as it has others. As personal antagonisms between involved parties mounted, the issue was blown out of proportion.

In-fighting and power struggles have characterized the entire summer operation of the AMS. Clear delineation of the authority and areas of responsibility of the paid employees of the AMS and of members of Inner Council is desperately needed.

Due to recent financial crises the future of the AMS as a viable business organization has been threatened. Now, without leadership, good management, communication and cooperation among its employees, the AMS as a political entity, is threatened. The AMS must submit itself to an urgent re-evaluation of its policies of management, its priorities, and future direction.

QUASSA

Volume 1, Number 4, Thursday, July 19, 1973

..QUASSA is published by the Queen's University Summer School Association and is independent of the Queen's Journal and the Alma Mater Society.
Editor: Steve Gilchrist.

Minutes of QSSA Meeting

Time and place: 6.00 p.m. International Centre
Members present: Barry Fletcher, Barbara McEvilla, Steve Gilchrist, Gary Pettigrew, John Irvine, Linda Chandler, Les Robertson, Ross Wardle, Don Bond, Don Reed, Steven Brereton from the AMS and Diane Siddle.
Barry Fletcher the President of QSSA called the meeting to order.
Motion No. 1 Moved by Don Bond, seconded by John Irvine that the secretary's minutes be adopted as read. Passed.
Treasurer's Report:
The present bank balance is $754.91.
Motion No. 2 Moved by Gary Pettigrew, seconded by Barbara McEvilla that the treasurer's report be accepted. Passed.
Social Committee: Gary Pettigrew, the social co-convenor reported the following cost for the Wine and Cheese Party. The cheese cost $48.08. The wine cost $186.00. The beer cost $316.00. Beer cups cost $28.08 and the wine glasses were provided free by Chateau Gai.
It was reported that the Boat Cruise will take place on Wednesday July 18. The buses will leave Leonard Hall between 6.00 p.m. and 6.30 p.m.
Tickets for the Cruise will be $2.00 and they may be bought at lunch time Friday, Monday, July 16 and July 17. There will be a bar and a dance on the boat.
Sports:
Mixed Volleyball:- John Irvine reported that 70 people attended Volleyball on Monday evening at the Bartlett Gym.
Basketball:
Only 15 people showed up for Basketball but it is hoped this number will increase. Men's and Ladies' Basketball takes place on Wednesdays at 6.30 p.m. in the Bartlett Gym.
Table Tennis:
There will definitely be a Table Tennis Tournament at Victoria on July 19th at 6.30 p.m. The doors will be open at 6.15 p.m. and closed at 6.45 p.m. There will be prizes for the 2 semi finalist losers, 1 finalist loser and 1 finalist winner.
Motion No. 3: Moved by Barbara McEvilla, seconded by Don Reed that John Irvine be allowed to purchase equipment for Summer School sports and prizes. Passed.
Directory:
The directories will be brought to the Department of Extension and will be distributed to the class representatives by our Inter Relations representative of QSSA. They will be free.
New Business:
It was decided that we would soon have to arrange to form a Nominating Committee.
The next meeting of QSSA will be on Thursday July 19 at 6.00 p.m.
Motion No. 4. Moved by John Irvine, seconded by Gary Pettigrew that the meeting be adjourned. Passed.

Coming events

Thursday July 19-Table Tennis, Victoria Hall, 6.30p.m.
Duplicate Bridge, Stud. Union 7.30 p.m.
Movie: Straw Dogs in Dunning Hall, 7 and 9.15 p.m. (Starring Dustin Hoffman)
Monday, July 23 - Volleyball (Mixed) 6.30 p.m. Ross and Bartlett Gyms.
Golf Tournament continues.
Movie: McArthur College
Tuesday, July 24
Movie: Frenzy (Alfred Hitchcocks newest and greatest thriller) in Dunning Hall, 7 and 9.15 p.m.
Wednesday, July 25
Men's and Ladies' Basketball, Bartlett Gym 6.30 p.m.
Thursday, July 26
Duplicate Bridge, 7.30 p.m. Students Union.
Movies, Dunning Hall, 6.30, 8.00 and 9.30 p.m. Casablanca (Humphrey Bogart) and Little Caesar (Edward G. Robinson)
Monday, July 20
Movie at McArthur
Mixed Volleyball at Ross and Bartlett Gyms, 6.30 p.m.
Tuesday, July 31 -
Movie, Dunning Hall, 7 and 9.15 p.m. The French Connection (police drama starring Gene Hachman)
Wednesday August 1
Fine Arts Concert, Ellis Hall, noon.
Basketball (men and ladies) 6.30 p.m. in the Bartlett Gym.
Thursday, August 2
Annual Meeting of Summer School Association - Leonard Hall Dining Room 7.30
Duplicate Bridge, 7.30 p.m.

Sports and Social Committee Reports

The sports of volleyball, basketball, table tennis and duplicate bridge are continuing this week, with the major sports event being the men's singles Table Tennis Tournament in Lower Victoria Hall at 6:30 tonight (Thursday). B.Y.O.B. and any other refreshments you want because they've cleaned out all of the vending machines in Vic for the Summer. Volleyball is continuing on Monday nights in Bartlett and Ross Gyms at 6.30 and Basketball is on Wednesday in Bartlett Gym at 6.30. Remember the Golf Tournament continues until Friday, August 3 - just play a round of golf and hand in your score to Room 238 Leonard Hall or to the Dept. of Extension. Prizes will be awarded for 1st, 2nd and 3rd low gross.

Social

Last weeks dance at the 401 Inn was a fair success with over 200 people attending, however, the quality of the band supplied by the Inn left quite a bit to be desired. At the time the QUASSA was going to print (Tuesday night), 200 tickets had been sold for the Boat Cruise, which was this weeks major social event. This year's cruise will considerably better than those previous years, as the cruise last for five hours rather than hour in the past and the boat u is the new triple decker wh holds three hundred people boasts a bar, a band and a da floor. Next week's event will b Beer bash and Dance in Leon Hall on Wednesday at 8 p (admission free to all QS members - i.e. Summer Sch students, S.S.E. and McArt Students.

QSSA

Tuesday evening, committee of the QSSA formed to investigate directions to be take association and consist President and tw Presidents, called a me the corresponding members of the Alm Society and the Arts a Undergraduate Society this topic and deter positions held by governments. The ge census held by all three that the formation of student body whic represent all extramura was essential and that s would provide many b both the students and t ments involved.

In the first place, organization would ha representation on the A would be considered a "faculty" society) and such other bodies as the Senate, and therefore

Calendar

Many students ha Department of Exten months that they did 1973-74 Summer Schoo calendar. If you did no calendar, will you pleas Extension to give us f course and your home your last registration School 1973).

This information will Extension try to det students did not receiv will also help to preven the future.

TONIGHT
Dustin Hoffman in: STRAW DOGS
Dunning Auditorium
Thursday, July 19,
Admission: only $1.50
Times: 7 and 9:15 p.m.
SUMMER CINEMA

AMS, ASUS meeting

ering utive ture
the
the Vice-with itive later ence cuss
the two conwas rger ould fents body for vern-

new irect
e. it ther sibly rsity ex-

tramural students a much greater voice in the policy formation and decision making processes of these higher authorities than they presently possess and it would also improve communications between the various governing bodies.

A major reason for the differences which presently exist between QSSA and theAMSrests on the ignorance of each group of the shape, purpose and history of the other. Hopefully, an improved liaison between the two bodies would not only lessen friction but would also permit a cooperative approach to services and activities operated for extramural students.

There were differences in opinion, however, in the form which this new organization should assume. This writer felt that a single body, representing all extramural students, would have the most effective bargaining position possible, but Barry Fletcher, QSSA president, suggested that individual organizations for Summer School and Intersession students be formed and that a representative from each group be elected or appointed to sit on AMS outer council. Bruce Trotter AMS Vice-President, agreed with this proposal and to the suggestion that the two groups be closely related (ie perhaps a super executive consisting of executive members from both groups; but remain independent at least in the interim until such time as the future of summer school and intersession itself be determined.

On this vote, the meeting adjourned, with each group to formulate more specific proposals on the format of the new organization, and QSSA will make its proposals and introduce necessary constitutional changes at the annual meeting on August 2nd. All Summer School students are welcome to comment on this issue, either before or at the annual meeting because it directly affects the operations and powers of the QSSA. What must be avoided at all costs on this issue is the common student disease of apathy, and it must be with student ratification that the changes are made, or else they will lack meaning and credibility to all concerned .

Letter to the editor

More on constables and summer school

It has become apparent that certain factions of Queen's University students are attempting to establish "battle lines" over an issue which on the surface appears trivial.

Both the AMS and QSSA have a common problem and that is lack of understanding through an absence of communication. The individual who have been "sounding off" in the Queen's Journal have not really understood the basic issues. The fact that QSSA has appointed a committee to meet with AMS has served to indicate that they are willing to discuss these issues.

Queen's Summer School students are members of AMS but as such have no representation on that body, so it is only natural that QSSA resent the AMS dictating policy -- as exemplified by the posting of the constables at QSSA social events.

In the past -- AMS and QSSA functioned as separate organizations, and I must say they each functioned very adequately without stepping on each other's toes. QSSA (of which I have been a member for a number of years now and a past editor of QUASSA) ran its own affairs without problem or "incident" or "guidance" from AMS.

However, "PROGRESS" has caught up with us and because we are all members of AMS then we must accept our fate and work cooperatively in order that the greatest benefits for all students will be the end result.

The word "maturity" is being tossed around quite liberally but in effect there seems to be a scarcity of this quality.

A Mr. F. Vaillancourt in his letter to the editor states that "AMS constables...are quite capable of handling disturbances caused by either eighteen or 40 year old Summer Students." I would like to point out to Mr. Vaillancourt that there have not been any disturbances at Summer School functions for the past eleven years, nor have I heard of any prior to that time. So please, Mr. Vaillancourt, don't try to make it sound like QSSA events are riotous or rowdy.

We, on the QSSA executive have never been informed as to what the functions of the AMS constables are; nor even those of the AMS, for that matter.

Furthermore, Mr. Vaillancourt, I do not think that "the majority of QSSA members understand the need for this type of requirement (AMS constable postings)."

I do know that if both associations are sincere in solving their differences and in recognizing each other as legitimate organizations with student benefits as their prime concern - then we shall reap the regards of their separate and conjoint efforts.

Don Bond
(McArthur Representative to QSSA)

dar nfusion

nentioned to the over the past two ceive a copy of the Extension Studies ive a copy of your l the Department of te you last took a ess at the time of including Summer the Department of e why so many eir calendars, and milar occurence in Queen's students and faculty night at Frontenac Downs

Just a reminder that all students or faculty, will, upon presentation of ID, be admitted free to Frontenac Downs racetrack this Sunday evening. Post time is 7:45.

Summer School Executive Members

The following is a list of the members of this years Summer School Executive and the position each member holds. If you are in need of any information concerning Summer School Activities, or if you have any complaints, suggestions or requests to make, about any aspect of Summer School please feel free to contact the relevant member of the executive.

President- Barry Fletcher - Rm 352 Leonard Hall - 544-7360
Vice President - Barbara McEvilla - 139 William St. - 548-7086
Vice President- Steve Gilchrist - Apt. 1210 Elrond College - 548-3144
Social Convenor- Gary Pettigrew - Rm 236 Leonard Hall - 544-7297
Social Convenor - Lee Ewles - 219 Leonard Hall - 544-7270
Treasurer- Don Reed - Rm 206 Leonard Hall - 544-7264
McArthur Rep. - Don Bond - Rm 209 Leonard Hall - 544-7267
Sports Convenor- John Irvine - Rm 238 Leonard Hall - 544-7298
Sports Convenor- Linda Chandler - Rm 426 Leonard - 544-7402
Publicity- Les Robertson - Rm 203 Leonard
Secretary- Diane Siddle - Rm 444 Leonard 544-7411
Inter relations-Karen Bradley - Rm 444 Leonard - 544-7411

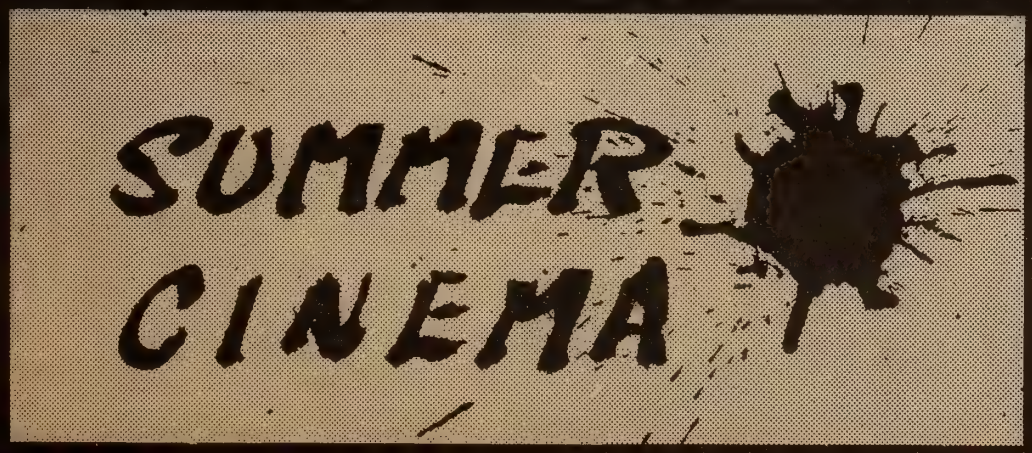
Graduating?

A reminder to Summer School members finishing their degree this summer, that, if they wish to have their grad picture in next year's Tricolor yearbook, they should contact Wallace Berry Studios at 15 Montreal Street, 542-2809 after July 16. (Only Wallace Berry pictures are acceptable in Tricolor.)

QSSA Presents

BEER BASH

Next Wednesday
Cheap Beer
Leonard Dining Room



Admission: free to Summer School students
8:00 p.m. - - ?

and DANCE

FRENZY

Alfred Hitchcock's newest and greatest thriller

Next Monday and Tuesday

Monday:
McArthur Auditorium
Tuesday:
Dunning Auditorium
Admission: only $1.50
Times: 7 and 9:15 p.m.

The beat of harness racing at the Downs

by Bob Mutrie

Five trotters and three pacers jogged restlessly out of the long paddock pulling behind them eight two-wheeled sulkies with their sweating drivers on them guiding and steering dexterously with the taut reins. They clipped snappilly over the dirt track toward the expectant throngs now gathering along the rail at the clubhouse.

Hundreds of appraising eyes watched the trotters and pacers approach and turn skillfully to begin the final warmup before the race. People were hovering over their racing forms, busily watching the changing odds posted on the infield tote-board opposite them, then rushing into the clubhouse to the mutual windows to place their bet.

The announcer was quickly calling out names and numbers as the horses passed in front and heads bowed to scribble hurried notes on their racing forms.

A hush suddenly fell over the crowd and the last bettors scurried out of the clubhouse to the rail. Tightly clutching their well-marked racing forms in one hand and their betting tickets in the other, their eyes were now glued, some curiously,some appraisingly, some anxiously, but all on the drivers and their horses as they made the final turn in front of the clubhouse and urged their horses around to the back stretch following the mobile starting gate.

"They're at the post", the race announcer called over the loudspeakers, momentarilly breaking the tense, expectant silence. The mobile gate spurted ahead closely followed by the sulkies. "They're off and racing," boomed over the speakers and the crowd immediately broke into a wild roar. As the sulkies pulled out past the gate, cheers and calls to drivers began piercing the air, vying with a melee of names and numbers being thrown over the loudspeakers by the announcer.

The drivers, pacing their horses, carefully steered them into the east turn and then pounded down on the three story clubhouse. The calls from the surging crowd became shouts as they urged their favourites on.

The sulkies moved into the clubhouse turn and began again to cover the backstretch. By now, a number were trailing, single file, and only a few were grouped around second position. A few of the stragglers began to pull up in an attempt to overtake the leaders and the horse in the first position was beginning to lose its lead.

Coming out of the east turns several of the horses suddenly spurted forward and the shouts from the clubhouse became alternately screams of happiness and cries of horror. The crowd literally broke into chaos as they rushed toward the rails to see the last tense moments of the race. There were people jumping up and down and waving their tickets at the sulkies who were rushing toward the finishing line in front of the clubhouse.

Who will win?

Which horse will win this race and which will lose depends on so many factors that many people have resorted to wild systems and schemes to predict the outcome, but the two all-determining factors are the training and experience of the driver and the training and experience of the horse.

Right from the early training period of the driver and the choosing of the hopeful champion horse, to the last spurt for the finish line at the race track, there is a constant play of sensitive giving and taking as horse and driver try to feel what each other is communicating through the reins and then react. Conditioning and sensitivity are the two driving forces at the track and it is these which make a skilled and well performed race.

Every driver made his start toward actually racing as a groom. These were early years of developing "horse-sense" - of growing to know how to look after a potential or actual racing champion, and practicing that knowledge. Usually, it is only after several years of constant contact with horses that this individual may finally become a licensed groom with others training under him. But at the same time he is still learning and now is in the full-time employee of a licensed trainer who shows him the ropes of training a horse for racing. After another period of years, the potential driver must then take a Canadian Trotting Association examination in order to become a licensed trainer. However, even then, he must gather more experience and for the next two years he is serving as a second trainer. This might roughly be equalized to journeyman status as the person is refining his knowledge of handling horses and preparing them for racing. It is during this period that the trainer is able to gather supervised personal experience in feeling out the whims of the horse and adapting himself along with the horse to create the team which finally appears on the track.

After serving as chief trainer for a while, the next step is the driver's license-but for fairs only. After one year at this level, during which the trainer becomes racer, armed with references from other drivers, the individual enters another examination. This now gives him a "para-mutual" license which allows him to make several qualifying, provisional drives, demonstrating his accumulated knowledge and ability to drive a trotter or pacer. If proven satisfactory to the presiding track judge at the meet, he is then required to make five satisfactory races, which often take ten to achieve. Then there are five "Overnights" before the full license is granted. And it hasn't been getting any easier through the years. The goal is to have drivers on the track who can handle almost any trained horse with ultra sensitivity and skill, and to attempt to minimize upsets or disastrous and sometimes fatal accidents for a number of drivers in a given race.

Learn by doing

The training of the horse is every bit as rigourous as that of the driver and they are required to undergo qualifying races after their training as well. The actual training, however, is as much a training of the driver as it is the horse in almost every single case.

Horses in harness-racing have one of two gaits. One is a trotter. They move the right front and left rear leg at the same time, then the left front and right rear. The other is the pacer, they move both legs on the same side of the body at the same time. Whether a horse is a trotter or a pacer depends on their ancestry. A trotter can be trained to be a pacer but a pacer cannot be trained to be a trotter.

There are two major points that a buyer looks for in selecting a trotter or a pacer. One is pedigree. Race ability in the sire and dame or grandsire and grand-dame have a good chance of showing up in the offspring. The second point looked for in the selection is called "confirmation" which is essentially an evaluation of the physical appearance of the foal. A perfect "confirmation" means that the foal has a good stance, no physical defects, strong bones, and straight legs.

The first step in the training of the horse, is to "break" him, that is to make him familiar with the bit in his mouth, understand the directions given him through the reins and know the feel of the cart behind him.

From here on it is conditioning, developing potential, through muscle development and building up of lung capacity. The horse is taken out on "job miles", many slow miles covered at the rate of two, then three, then gradually five miles a day until a total of 300 are accumulated.

During these miles, the trainer must begin to sense the peculiar qualities of his trotter or pacer and no two are alike. There is a complex amount of equipment which must individually suit that particular horse and complement his ability to jog and eventually to trot.

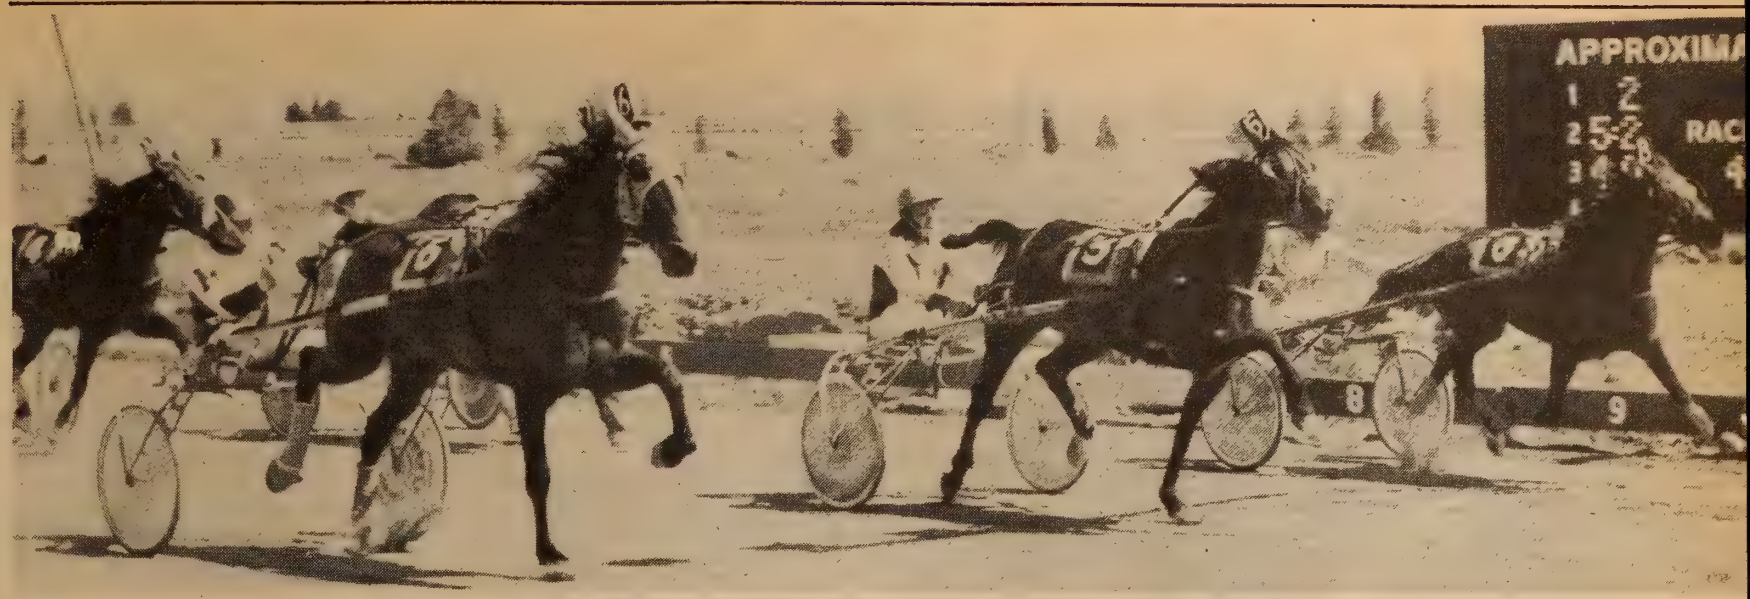
Most trotters and pacers are "rough gaited" (trotting awkwardly) at first. Shoes are designed for the horses' hooves, and, depending on the gait, they may be lightweight aluminum or heavier to even it out or "balance" it. Many factors enter into the actual styling of the shoe, including the angle of the foot and how long the toe is and simply what the horse feels most natural in. Every trainer must have experience to sense this and gains more experience while doing it. With some it is possible to tell immediately. With others it takes longer.

Another of the feeling and learning process for both horse and trainer is in determining the length of the reins and how high the horses head should best be held.

The first 300 conditioning miles are all given travelling and turning in one direction. Once they are completed, the horse is turned in the other direction and he begins his training miles.

During the early weeks of training miles, the days of conditioning runs still predominate. but they are now interspersed regularly with days of fast miles about three minutes and conditioning miles. It is during this time that any error in selection of equipment will most likely show up especially the gaiting. It is not unkown for a trainer having to start right from scratch a

Continued on page 8



owen

A group of pacers coming out of the turn and heading for the home stretch and victory.

Racing at the 'Downs' Sunday

This Sunday, July 22, Frontenac Downs is sponsoring a Queen's Day at the harness races, admitting all Queen's students, faculty, and staff members Free of charge upon presentation of suitable identification cards. To get there follow Division St. to the first right turn past the 401. Post time is 7:45 p.m. Ten races are scheduled for an evening of excitement, fun and possible profits for everyone.

The horses race to the finishing line in front of the tote board. -owen

How pros, semi-pros and amateurs do

by Mary Jane Eddy

Experience isn't necessary for a good time at the harness races. Serious, steady betters all seem to follow the programme which shows the horses' past performance, and then tie that in with the record of the driver, the competition the horse will be up against in this race, and its posted odds. They will place their bets only when they're fairly sure of the gamble. One thing they don't seem often to do is bet on the favourite, for, if it does win the profit is minimal, the odds being better on the other horses. In order to make yourself familiar with the horses in each race, they suggest you buy a copy of the programme beforehand, available Friday night for the Sunday races and Tuesday night for the Wednesday races, at the Shamrock Hotel, The Book Shop (in the Shopping Centre), the Unde Club (388 King S.T., E.) and Wimpy's Lunch (on Princess).

But not everyone is a serious bettor. Many have a different method of selecting their winner, and the fans at Frontenac Downs are no exception. Moreover, they're generally approachable, and can offer a variety of suggestions. Mildred MacLean of Toronto, the mother of ten, said she always bets on her lucky numbers, eight and ten, or else on horses with her childrens' names. Jane McEwen of Kingston bets on horses according to the numbers of the date. She, incidentally, is up $600.00 since last year, and finds her once-weekly outing at the races far more enjoyable (and profitable) than the movies.

With method to his madness, Terry Vivian places his $2.00 on the horse most likely to lose, reasoning that if in fact it does win the odds will earn him more, Terry has only been going to the Downs for a month, so his methods may change.

A novice to the race tracks is best advised to go with someone more experienced, and learn everything he can from watching, listening, and placing his own bets. To do so he needs merely to walk in to the glass-enclosed first floor, which contains the majority of betting wickets, canteens, programme booths, and numerous benches enabling the fans to watch the races from within if they choose.

For the size of Kingston, Frontenac Downs, the harness-racing track, is surprisingly well-equipped and styled. Stairways lead to the second floor grandstand and lounge, from which the race may be comfortably watched on closed-circuit television. The plush-carpeted second and third floors are licensed and offer betting and dining facilities. Perched atop the roof is the officials' booth. Here photo-finishes of the races are developed in seconds, and from here the judges, announcers, and timers have a bird's-eye view of the track below.

Why do people come here? Even 17-year-old Gary Murphy, who has lost $200.00 since January, returns time and time again. "You just lose your shirt at it", was his sad and sober comment on the races, but he claims his losses have not caused him any worry. The excitement of choosing your horse and betting on him, the suspense o the race itself, the speed, the thrill of winning or the confidence in winning "next time" draws the fans back. Even the atmosphere is charged with emotion. Charles Cross of the Whig Standard, with his friends from the office, enjoys "the horses, the crowds, the gambling". Avid fans declare that harness racing is superior to thoroughbred ("flat") racing, in that it requires more skill, for the sulky's width means that they can't get three abreast on the track without the outside horse using more energy to race the extra distance on the turns. The timing for passing is even more difficult to gauge. Sulkies are easily trapped at the rails, and equipment breakage and pile-up accidents may follow. Nancy Phillips, a fourth-year Queen's student, at Frontenac Downs fo the first time last Sunday declared she preferred fla racing, as "it looked mor natural". Mildred MacLea would argue that you can selec more easily in harness racin because the time is more regula - "pretty steady unless the break".

Advice is never hard to com by at the race track. Typica tidbits like:

"Bet when you come - its th best part".

"Go slow until you've got th feel of the horses."

"Don't bet with the ren money."

"Roger Ashly, a 23-year-ol who has been to every race fo the past five years, has a les cautionary attitude. He thinks it' "too bad people don't bet more" if more people were to bet mor money, more often the purse would go up, the club would b able to attract better, faste horses, races would be rendere more exciting and people woul bet more.

The track receives abou twenty-four cents of every bet, c about 12 per cent of the tot amount bet a night. At least ha of that goes back into the purse Ashly has never won more tha $290 in a night, and he called th a "once in a lifetime" win. Mo people questioned won't wage more than $40 a night, but tend bet more if they are doing wel

Perhaps the best philosophy c harness racing is summed up these words: "Just bring in much money as you think you ca afford to lose".

On winning - and losing - a race

How can a novice determine which trotter or pacer and driver have winning qualities? Every track publishes a racing form and it is here that you will find all the essential facts and figures to help you calculate which horse has the best chance of being in the money. It is the racegoer's bible and designed to take much of the guesswork and the necessity of wild systems out of handicapping.

For every horse in each race, the form gives a complete history of his races and his previous performance in them. It details the times in which the horse ran the race, compares this with the winning times and shows where the horse placed. It even gives the name of the track and the conditions under which the race was run. In addition, the form states the horse's owner, trainer and driver and very often the driver's past performance coincides with that of the horse as often the same driver will continue to trot the same horse. It is, in effect, almost everything you need to know of the past to make reasonable predictions about the future.

The odds board in the infield of the track show what horses are most favoured by fans placing wagers. The odds indicate the ratio of the wagers placed on the individual horse to the amount bet on its competition. High odds tell the bettor that a lot of money has been placed on other horses in relation to his, and the corresponding payoff, if the horse is in the money, will be higher. For instance a horse with 2 to 1 odds will pay roughly $6.00 as opposed to a $16.00 for 7 to 1 odds.

Inside the clubhouse there is a long row of "buy" and "sell" windows. You can go to one of the buy windows before the race and place a bet on any horse on the track. You can also indicate whether you are betting for the horse to win, to place (finish in first or second position). If the horse finishes as you predicted then you may go to the seller window and cash in the ticket. A ticket for a win usually pays more than a ticket to place which usually pays more than a ticket to show.

There is one more thing to know about betting. Some races, indicated on the racing form, are "quinellas" and others are "exactas". In a quinella, you may choose two horses and bet on them and if they come in either first or second, regardless of the order, then you will win, and the amounts are usually large. In an exacta, you must exactly predict which horse will be first and which second.

Approximately two and a half hours before the race (depending on the horse, its temperament, the time of year and the temperature, to name a few), the entrants move out onto the track to jog a couple of miles, turn and do a warmup mile in about 2.45 or 3.00 minutes. The trotters and pacers are then led back to the stable to "blow" (allow their breathing to come back to normal). After about forty-five minutes, the driver takes them back out but instead of jog miles this time, they go straight into the warmup mile, this time at a speed of about 2.20 to 2.30 minutes. The river gets the feel of the horse on the curves and the straight stretches during this run to discover what he will and will not do during the race. The horse is then taken into the paddock, the long stable next to the clubhouse, covered with "coolers" (blankets) and his respiration is once again allowed to come back to normal.

Immediately before the race is to be run, the horses are once again jogged out onto the track by their drivers and paraded before the clubhouse. They are then turned to begin their final warmup before the race. They are then again turned and brought back before the clubhouse then turned again and turned down the track toward the waiting mobile gait which starts the actual race.

Most trotting races are one mile. Some tracks are shorter than others and on a shorter track the horses' times will be somewhat slower because they must make more turns. At Frontenac Downs the track is relatively long and usual times on a fast track are 2.09 to 2.12 minutes. Under adverse conditions, the horses may be running as low as 2.16 or 2.18.

The race at Frontenac Downs begins on the backstretch, makes one complete circuit of the track, then ends when the winner's nose crosses the finish line in front of the clubhouse.

Horses with a starting position close to the inside rail are in the most favourable position because a horse on the inside may have as much as a 60 to 80 foot advantage on the horses on the outside.

Don't be concerned if your horse seems to be lagging at the beginning of the race. The driver may be purposely "rating" or pacing the horse so as to conserve on its speed and strength for the final long stretch drive. The most difficult way to win a race is to stay in front all the way.

With only a few rudimentary concepts, most of which have been presented here, and armed with a racing form, pretty well anybody can go out to the races and win or just watch and know what is going on. Harness racing is an art which requires a great deal of skill and fortitude, and, well, winning isn't all of it.

Contributors to this article were Don Johnston, a regular driver at the "Downs" and the public relations manager of Frontenac Downs, Jim Sarazin.

-macpherson

The cast of "Butterflies are Free"

Butterflies are Free

The possibilities were neglected

by Kiloran German

Despite the fact that Leonard Gershe's "Butterflies are Free" is a self conscious and sometimes heavy handed statement on self realization, it should have been a good choice as the St. Lawrence Summer Playhouse's third production of the season which opened Monday night at the Tent Theatre. It's a light and entertaining little piece that seems to be made to order as a welcome diversion on a hot summer night.

The play recounts the bittersweet adventures of a blind folksinger, who is striving to cut the umbilical cord and escape the domination of his mother, "a tight-arsed matron from Scarsdale" who "obviously never had syphilis".

Establishing himself in New York City, he finds an unlikely ally in the inevitable girl next door, a footloose young "actress" who is more than generous with her charms. His mother naturally catches them in the act, does her best to extricate him, and finally returns to Scarsdale, leaving him to make his own mistakes.

While the plot suggests maudlin sentimentality, it is saved by humourous situations and witty dialogue. Unfortunately, they are not enough to save the Summer Playhouse production.

The Company's timing and pace were very poor. Admittedly it was opening night and the actors suddenly had a reacting audience to contend with, so the pace has undoubtedly picked up since then. The production's problems however are more deeply rooted.

The acting was concentrated on surface elements of characterization. As the young folk singer, Norman Campbell seemed to spend all his time remembering to be blind. He is thoroughly convincing in this, but the rest of his performance suffers. His attempts at the expression of emotion are limited to raising his voice and as a result, much of his line delivery was incoherent. His performance lacked depth and as a result, his eventual breakdown and soul searching were embarassing moments.

Such depth was not required of Barbara Edwards as the fly-by-night, and she managed quite well to portray the stereotype dumb broad. But she was extremely conscious of every line she delivered. She was responding to cues, not reacting to characters.

Rita McGrattan as the Scarsdale matron had a fair sense of comic timing which was fortunate as she had by far the best lines in the play. Ironically, this ability threw off the balance of the play as she was constantly upstaging the others. And her English accent was particularly irritating.

As a pseudo hip off Broadway director, Wilf Thomas tried. He didn't succeed.

The relationships between the characters were neither explored nor defined. Director Peter Lichtenfels overlooked these entirely, in favour of placing emphasis on mere line delivery His blocking would have been appropriate for a proscenium production, but failed in the round for anyone who didn't have one of the choice seats.

The set was inexplicably large, filling the whole stage space. The actors looked as though they were rattling around in it and the play would have worked much better had cramped quarters been suggested.

The fine balance between the comic and serious aspects of the play was never properly attained so the final act became uninteresting and the denouement was rendered improbable. The production was certainly not devoid of levity, but the possibilities were sadly neglected.

Butterflies weren't freed in the Tent. The larvae were trapped in their cocoons.

40 Carats a fraud

The best thing that I can say about "Forty Carats" is that it closed last night. If you missed it, you were lucky. "Tom Sawyer" is a most welcome replacement.

Liv Ullman was plastic as a middle aged woman and Edward Albert was nauseating as a young punk who seeks her hand. The film failed miserably to develop and explain the relationship between them, and their eventual elopement was ludicrous. A similar relationship was beautifully achieved by Maggie Smith and Timothy Bottoms in "Love and Pain and the Whole Damn Thing" - it was plausible, sensitive and satisfying. By comparison, "Forty Carats" was a fraud.

Summerdaze

THEATRES

St. Lawrence Summer Playhouse presents "Butterflies are Free" from Monday, July 16 to Saturday July 21. Curtain at 8:30 pm. Tickets available at the Tent Theatre Box Office (in the park) $3.00 for adults. $2.50 for students. Reservations 542-9938.

St. Lawrence Summer Playhouse presents "The Boy Friend" from July 24 to August 4. Curtain at 8:30 pm. Tickets available at the Tent Theatre Box Office (in the park) $3.00 for adults, $2.50 for students.

MOVIES

Capital - Class of 44
Odeon - Battle for the Planet of the Apes
Hyland - Tom Sawyer

PUBS

401 Inn - Mainstream
Seaway Townhouse - The Muriel Day Show
Commodore - Clompin' Claude
Manor - The Oriental Jewels

SRI CHINMOY - A feature length color documentary film about the experinece of meditation in the daily life of an Indian master living in America.
Meditation at 8:00 pm. Friday July 20 in Dunning Auditorium. Admission for students $1.00, adults $1.50.

July 25 the Summer School Rap Session on Christianity as a basis for political choice. At 12.05 noon to 12.55 pm. In the park in front of Kingston Hall.

At the Downs

Continued from page 6

second time in order to find the right "balance" for the horse.

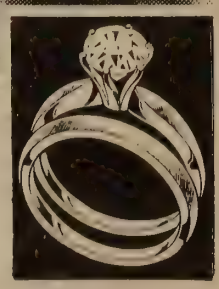
The length of the training and conditioning miles are juggled during the following months until the horse is finally doing both conditioning and training miles every day with ease. Most important, the conditioning miles never end.

The fully experience trotter or pacer and driver are those which are able to adapt and sense out different drivers and horses and race equally at ease with any of them. This part is entirely based on the accumulation of simple experience both on and off the track. The winning drivers all have lightning quick reflexes, exceptional ability to rate a horse for its potential capabilities, and, last of all, they must have a perfect sense of timing.

Get your xeroxing and offset copying done in Kingston at the newest printer in town.

DONCO QUALITY PRINTERS and COPIERS

Offering courteous service and reasonable rates. Open Monday to Saturday 8 am - 6 pm



212 Division 546-2874

Your Blood is the GIFT of LIFE

BE A BLOOD DONOR

Kinnear d'Esterre has The Would You Believe Diamond

You've found the right man. You can hardly believe it. But you better, because he insists you have a magnificent engagement ring. We're happy to help you make the right choice. The diamond you choose glows with splendid brilliance. And you believe the best is yet to come.

KINNEAR D'ESTERRE
JEWELLERS
168 PRINCESS STREET
KINGSTON, ONTARIO

Ratification of Acting Chief Constable still pending

by Sue de Stein

Since late June, the AMS has been without an Acting Chief Constable.

The post of Chief Constable held during the past year by Ian Nordheimer (and who will resume office in the beginning of August) was vacated at the end of term. At this time, Bill Mandich, appointed by Nordheimer and Bruce Trotter, Vice-President of the AMS, assumed the position in an interim capacity. (The appointment was not ratified by Inner Council.)

At the end of June, Mandich left the position. Subsequently, Paul Greenwood, Internal Affairs Commissioner named Kevin Van Koughnett to be his replacement. There had been advertising for applicants and ratification of the appointment by Inner Council had not taken place when Van Koughnett assumed the duties of Acting Chief Constable.

At the Wednesday meeting of Inner Council three weeks ago, Van Koughnett's ratification as Chief Constable was rejected. It was decided then to advertise for the position. Interviews would be held the following Monday and Tuesday, and a name brought forward for ratification on Wednesday.

Several problems were encountered when arrangements for interviews were made. Patricia Rae, and applicant for the position was told, that for the AMS to be able to ratify the appointment by Wednesday, July 11, her interview must take place that day. However, she could not be available that day as she would be out of town on AMS business.

AMS was unable to arrange an interview with her for the previous day, as she requested. She was then told that her application for the position could not be accepted if her interview could not take place that Wednesday.

However, when she returned to Kingston last week, she found that, as another applicant had not yet been interviewed, she was then able to arrange an interview with Trotter.

Since that time, only two of the three applicants have been interviewed.

Van Koughnett, also an applicant for the position, and who has been acting as Posting Officer told the Journal that he had showed up at two arranged times for an interview. The AMS for some reason found itself unable to do the same. "It's useless to interview people now. The AMS has left it too long," he said.

Rae commented that "it has taken the AMS three weeks to appoint a Chief Constable for what was originally a four week term. I am appalled at the inefficiency of the AMS."

-macpherson

A review of the Tent Theatre production of "The Boyfriend" starring Jill Hodkinson and Ken Smith may be found on Page 4.

Letters to the editors

AMS struggles spark feedback

Dear Editors,

It was delightful and reassuring to read the front page of last week's JOURNAL, and realize that when God created the "political heavy", he didn't forget us. I mean, to realize that we have our very own plots, intrigues, and power struggles makes one sometimes forget this isn't the United Nations. Blessed with such intense political activists that althought the masses aren't rebelling, the politicians are revolting. We're honoured with leaders so bright and valuable that when opposed, the mere threat of their resignation is a signal to bring the masses to their feet. How secure we feel knowing that the Queen's "water-closet affair" has been circumvented through the clever leakage of enough contradictory information to totally confuse the masses.

Ok, let's face it. We need to get back to basics, strip away superfluities, bare our chests and get down to the nitty gritty. We would like to propose a grand assemblage of all personalities involved, in order to clear the air. Furthermore, to eliminate all pretensions, we further propose that all concerned must attend in their underwear. Although this may seem a bit cheeky, it's known fact that this is the great levelling factor in life. In such a way we could at least give people a chance to analyze the situation, and make a meaningful decision on the issue at hand.

Yours till the fog clears,
Bill Buxton
Sue Harper
Don Schafheitlin

AMS tactics lacking in ethics

Dear Editors:

I am writing about last week's Inner Council meeting, as I felt the Journal did not give a full account of what happened.

At that meeting, Bruce Trotter, the Vice-President of the AMS pulled out a letter written by Wil Kranenburg, the Services Commissioner, that had been found in the garbage pail. This letter was an attempt to investigate how the AMS houses were being allocated. Trotter proceeded to lambaste Kranenburg for several minutes because she had the audacity to question the decisions of Paul Mahaffy, QSA director.

There are several questions I wish to raise. First, why did the rest of the Inner Council permit this tirade to continue? When anyone uses, as an instrument of attack, a discarded letter which had been in the garbage, surely one can appreciate that there is a question of ethics involved. Second, what was Trotter doing searching through garbage pails? Surely there are more important things he could be doing than picking through garbage. Thirdly, are these the kind of political tactics that should be condoned by the students at Queen's? Is student government important enough that anything justifies the ends?

Another point which puzzles me is why shouldn't Mahaffy be subject to questioning? Kranenburg, as Services Commissioner, has authority over him and I assume, in the end, would be ultimately responsible for any decisions he has made. To my way of thinking Mahaffy should have no cause to complain as, even though he has no real authority to do so. He had interfered on the operations of the pub with his constant suggestions that the managers should be fired.

Also, even though Kranenburg could possibly have done an investigation in a more tactful way, Mahaffy and Trotter should again be the last to complain of tactics, what with Trotter and his garbage and Mahaffy and the unskillful way in which he conducted business with the former pub managers. If Trotter still contends that his tactics are justified and that Kranenburg has no right to look into the affairs of the QSA director, does this mean that different standards apply to different persons depending on who they know in the AMS?

Also here as I understand it, there was a good reason to investigate, as there was a good friend of Mahaffy's who was given an AMS apartment even though she wasn't on the housing waiting list. Probably, there was a good explanation for it, yet once again, certain persons on Inner Council, notably Trotter, ignored that issue, and went straight into a personality question.

A final point I find both serious and odd, is Mahaffy's again threatening to quit unless, (this time) Kranenburg is impeached. He then issued this ultimatum to Inner Council and "he" allowed Inner Council, supposedly the ruling body of the student government, until September, to make up its mind. This is at least the second time this summer that this threat has been made, as he also used this ploy in helping to get myself and Dale Johnston fired as pub managers. This ploy, to me, seems to be a way by which Mahaffy "immediately" injects personalities into issues that have become clouded over. Thus, instead of deciding on the issues themselves, Inner Council is forced to base its decision on whom it knows the best. Thus the decision depends on whom has the most friends on Inner Council - surely not the most impartial way to settle differences.

Unless these actions can be justified, I seriously question the ethics and efficiency of the Queen's Student government.

Dave Crowe

"Davis Hole" to open

The underground parking facilities on lower campus "should be in use by mid-August", reported G. McCahill of Queen's Physical Plant. The garage has the potential of providing parking for up to 650 cars.

The playing field, however, will not be in use for another year. Due to rainy weather in the months of May and June, there was a one to two month delay in laying the sod. In addition, McCahill noted that the "turf is just not strong enough to withstand a great deal of activity."

During the winter a group of students suggested naming the underground parking lot in honour of Premier William Davis, with such names as "The William Davis Subterranean Parking Lot" or the "Davis Hole".

It was felt that with his government's policies on post-secondary education which included higher tuition fees for all, higher OSAP loan ceilings, and the freeze on the new Queen's-Kingston Medical Science Complex, there should be something to "honour" his accomplishments.

Job Bank ends season

There are many signs around this campus which indicate that summer is rapidly drawing to a close. The grass down by the lake is turning brown, the summer students do not seem so enthused about getting smashed up in the Pub anymore, and alas Job Bank will soon be locking the doors to its summer '73 office at 121 Union Street. According to Job Bank co-director Al Coxwell the year proved highly successful and many Queen's students found jobs through the organization. Any one who was dropping in there, frequently found some type of work to do - the only people who couldn't find work appeared to be those on unemployment insurance or who were afflicted with rare diseases which would not allow them to bend over or get their hands dirty. Apart from these, Job Bank successfully filled over 1000 jobs this summer which ranged from twenty minute jobs (to change a car tire for one of the charming Richardson Hall secretaries) to jobs for the entire summer.

Coxwell felt that Job Bank filled a "very necessary role in the Kingston community" and urged that the services provided by Job Bank be provided again next summer.

Queen's
Journal
Volume One Hundred, No. 62
Thursday, July 26, 1973

QUASSA

Volume 1, Number 5, Thursday, July 26, 1973

..QUASSA is published by the Queen's University Summer School Association and is independent of the Queen's Journal and the Alma Mater Society.
Editor: Steve Gilchrist.

Minutes of QUSSA meeting July 19,1973

Thursday, July 19th, 1973
Time and Place:- 6.00 p.m. in the International Centre
Members Present:- Don Bond, Barry Fletcher, Steve Gilchrist, Don Reed, Jim Baker, Ross Wardle, Les Robertson, Karen Bradley, Linda Chandler, Lee Ewles, Gary Pettigrew, Steve Brereton from the AMS, and Diane Siddle.
Barry Fletcher, the President called the meeting to order.
The secretary read the minutes from the last meeting of Thursday, July 12, 1973.
Motion 1;- Moved by Don Bond, Seconded by Gary Pettigrew that the secretary's minutes be accepted as read. Passed.
Treasurer's Report
The present bank balance is $1260.81. Outstanding bills yet to be paid include the buses and boat for the Boat Cruise of July 185h, 1973.
Motion 2. Moved by Gary Pettigrew, seconded by Lee Ewles that the Treasurer's Report be accepted as presented. Passed.
Reports:
Social Committee:
Gary Pettigrew reported that the total cost of the dance at the 401 Inn was $255.00.
The Boat Cruise was well attended. There were 259 people on the Cruise and everyone appeared to be having a good time. The band played very well and provided enjoyable musical entertainment for the evening. The cost of the boat was $1040.00 and the buses were $140.00.
Everyone is urged to attend the Beer Bash on Wednesday, July 25th, 1973 at 8.00 p.m. in Leonard Hall. Everyone will received two free tickets for beer.
Gary Pettigrew was talking to the AMS chief constable and he (AMS constable) feels we will need five constables for the Beer Bash event.
Washroom facilities will be provided and it is hoped that we will be able to obtain the support of a Beaver Foods employee to assist us in the setting up of the event.
Sports;-
Volleyball;-On Monday, July 16th, two new volleyball teams were added making a total of eight. Playoffs for the Volleyball are on August 6th. Remember volleyball is played every Monday at 6.30 p.m. in the Bartlett Gym.
Basketball- Last Wednesday, July 18th, 8 people turned out to play basketball. They had a good work out, but others are certainly urged to join this worthwhile activity.
Table Tennis;- The Table Tennis Tournament will be held Thursday, July 19th, 1973 at 6.30 p.m. in Victoria Hall.
Golf:- Only one score card has been turned in so far in the Golf Tournament.
Purchases:
The following purchase has been made for Queen's Summer School Students: 2 table tennis sets.
Mugs have been bought for volleyball winners, Table Tennis winners, Golf Tournament Winners and Assistants. They came to a total of $87.58.
John Irvine received a phone call from Mrs. Tromper's office at Victoria Hall to say that QSSA table tennis equipment has been found. We now have plenty of equipment and this will be stored at Department of Extension at the conclusion of Summer School.
Inter Relations
Karen Bradley, our Inter Relations representative expressed her thanks to all those who had helped her distribute the directories. At the present time there are only approximately 100 directories left and these will be left at the main buildings.
Publicity
Les Robertson reported that posters will be placed around campus and MacArthur College to publicize the Beer Bash on Wednesday, July 25th.
Old Business
The nominating committee will consist of the following: Tony Burger, Gary MacDonald and Paul Bessee.
A list of the people running for the various posts will be posted for your observation prior to the annual Meeting on August 2nd, 1973.
The auditing of the Treasurer's books will be looked after.
New Business
A discussion arose about the Summer Cinema which has been run by Steve Gilchrist this summer as a carry-over project from Intersession.
The following motion was put forth by Steve Gilchrist.
Motion 3. Moved by Steve Gilchrist, seconded by Les Robertson that Summer Cinema be considered a regular Summer School Activity and profits be spent as the Summer School Executive sees fit. Defeated.
Motion 4. Moved by Don Bond seconded by Karen Bradley that QSSA assume responsibility for previous and forthcoming movies during the balance of the Summer School term 1973, if they are accompanied by a complete and accurate accountability.
Barry Fletcher ammended the above motion with Don Bond's consent in order that a date be included, and Don Reed wanted the idea to be stated that it would be the approval of the whole Executive and not just the Treasurer. It was to read as follows:
Motion 4. Moved by Don Bond seconded by Karen Bradley that QSSA assume responsibility for previous and forthcoming movies during the balance of the Summer School term 1973 if they are accompanied by a complete and accurate accountability and that of all business passed by Monday, July 23rd, 1973 and that these be acceptable to the Executive as a whole body. Passed.
In regards to the meeting between the President, first and Second Vice-President of the QSSA and AMS presented to the Executive and the Summer School students in a draft in the Queen's Journal.
It is hoped that everyone will read it as it involves the whole summer student body and the future of our relationship with ASUS and AMS.
The next meeting of QSSA will take place at Leonard Hall on Monday, July 23rd, 1973 at 6.00 p.m.
Motion 5;- Moved by Lee Ewles, seconded by Linda Chandler that the meeting be adjourned. Passed.
Time 8:15 p.m.

Coming events

Thursday, July 26 Duplicate Bridge - 7.30 p.m. Students Union Movie - Dunning Auditorium 6.30, 8.30 and 9.45 p.m. Casablanca and Little Caesar.

Monday, July 30 - - Volleyball finals, Bartlett Gym - 6.30 p.m. Movie McArthur Auditorium 7 and 9.15 p.m. The French Connection Wednesday, August 1 - Basketball continues, 7.30 p.m. Bartlett Gym.

Thursday, August 2 - Annual Meeting of Summer School Association Leonard Hall Dining Room 7.30 p.m.

QUSSA Annu

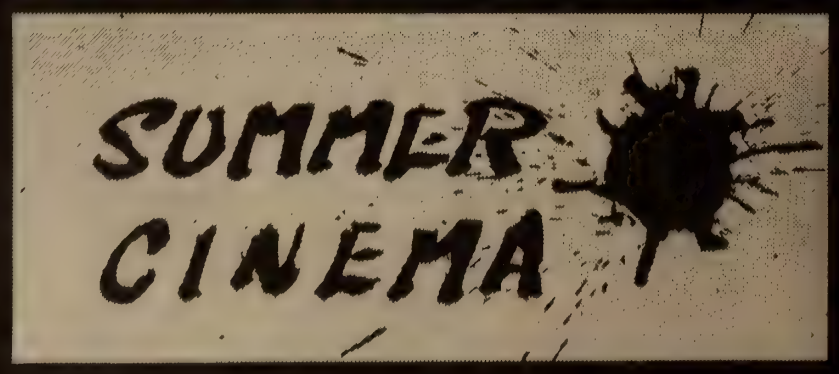
Next Thursday, in Leonard Hall Room at 7.30 p.m., the Queen's Summer School Association will hold its Meeting and election of officers. A the normal functions to be perfor the Annual Meeting are important in their own right, this year the has particular significance as a the proposed constitutional which must be ratified by the st The changes are a result of the direction which the Summer Association, and other University which operate in the summer seem to be taking, and they ref recognition by the Summer Executive, of the growing need association to interact with th groups on campus and shed the isolationism which had long been the association.

It is hoped that, with these chan Summer School will gain an in representation on the year governing bodies at Queen's, an derive a greater voice in the d made by those bodies (su

Questionnair

Later this week, the Inter-R Committee of QSSA will be distu questionnaires to all summer students during classroom period is the only reliable source of inpu is available to the QSSA executive only direct comments which students make regarding life at school. The questionnaire will de student reactions to current struct execution of classes, social and events, and other aspects of S

Sports and s



1. Volleyball continues on Monda new teams were added making a eight. Playoffs are on Monday, Ju
2. Basketball continues on Wed Eight people turned out and had workout. Anyone else wishing ticipate is urged to attend.
3. Very few score cards hav turned in as yet for the golf tour You still have one week to play a golf at Glen Lawrence and submi card to room 238 in Leonard Hall will be given for first, second low gross.
4. Anyone interested in organi supervising any sports even summer is asked to contact eith Irvine (544-7298) or Linda Chandl 7402). We would particularly like activate the tennis and softball next year.

Social Report
The boat cruise held last we perhaps the most successful eve

TONIGHT

Humphrey Bogart
CASABLANCA
Edward G. Robinson
LITTLE CAESAR

Dunning Auditorium
Thursday, July 26
Times:
Casablanca 6:30
Little Caesar 8:20
Only $1.00 anytime

Gene Hackm
FREN
SU
CI

...l Meeting

...ning curriculum, housing, services, etc.) which have a direct bearing on the life of summer school students.

All students are urged to attend the meeting, to listen to the proposals and to make known their feelings about a greater rapprochement with the rest of the university. Any and all suggestions made in this or any other area of discussion at the meeting will be taken into consideration by the ASSA executive in their formulation of specific constitutional changes. Apathy must be avoided at all costs, for this issue is perhaps the most important one which has had to be dealt with by the Association in many years. Regardless of which way your views tend on this issue, turn out to the annual meeting next Thursday and play a part in the decision making process.

As an added incentive there will be a dance following the meeting and the bar will open one hour before the meeting actually gets underway to allow people to get in the proper frame of mind for the business at hand.

...s coming soon

...School and the Summer School Association. Any requests, complaints or suggestions you have to make about these areas should be listed on this questionnaire, and it is hoped that the results will be available in time for publication in next week's QUASSA.

All students who attended Intersession will also be asked to complete a similar questionnaire dealing with the structure of any future Intersession government and the activities it should sponsor.

...cial reports

...type ever put on by the Summer School Association. A capacity crowd of over 250 people turned out to partake of the four hour cruise through the Thousand Islands. This year, instead of dropping everyone off on one of the islands to have a cookout, a boat with a band and dance floor was rented, and the response amongst those who took the cruise was very positive towards this innovation.

The last social event of the year will be the Annual Meeting of Students, which will be held next Thursday at 7:30 in the Dining Room of Leonard Hall. The bar opens at 7:30 sharp, and with (relatively) cheap beer and good dance music, it's hoped that there'll be at least a quorum turn out for the meeting.

Don't forget, all Summer School students, including the MacArthur and S.S.E. students, are welcome at the meeting, and, in addition to the important political aspects of the meeting, it should prove to be one of the best functions of the whole summer.

The Adventures of Fanny Jung

by Vic Pilger

Unlike Sigmund F. Quixote whose conception was chiefly an accidental affair, Fanny Jung was the result of assiduous, painstaking effort, the crowning achievement of twenty years of exhausting copulation.

Dr. Jung, her father, was a brilliant professor of psychology in a provincial town in Ontario. At the age of forty-three he married a voluptuous English beauty who had come out to "the colonies" to further her ontological investigations and find her fortune. Miss Flanders, or "Molly" as she was known in a dozen regiments during World War II, became Mrs. Jung in a spectacular public wedding in Lake Ontario Park, and after a brief honeymoon in the Arctic wastes, settled down to a life of ontological domesticity with her learned spouse.

In spite of Dr. Jung's comparative inexperience, Milly was able to instruct him in the basic techniques and their variations so that after two full decades she at last presented him with a lusty female offspring whom they christened "Fanny". The birth and the christening were both staged in Grant Hall, as Mrs. Jung had a histrionic flair; and both productions were critically reviewed by all the best newspapers and three radio stations. One of the English professors commemorated these events with two distinguished odes which were published in paperback form and soon placed on the reading list of an advanced course in Canadian literature. And in this triumphal manner, Fanny Jung entered the world and the rarefied atmosphere of university life.

As a child, Fanny was precocious. By the age of twelve she had mastered everything that her mother's extensive experience could teach her. She also picked up a few ideas from undergraduate engineers and pre-med students, as well as other company in the drama courses. By the age of seventeen, she had pretty well covered the campus, in one way or another.

Far from being debilitated by her youthful indulgences, Fanny was as robust as the Wife of Bath and infinitely more accomplished. It was in this state of wholesome development that Fanny entered university as a student and embarked on her academic career.

All went well for the first year. She was a gifted student with a luminous intelligence and an even more luminous social experience. Then she started to study ethics, and a sudden change came over her. After reading Kant, she took an oath of chastity and renounced her adolescent practices. She even bought a medieval belt as an added safeguard, and gave the key to a drama student who was as pure as Peter Pan and several times as serious. It seemed indeed that parts were guaranteed a l... solitude.

Unfortunately, however, t... student started reading Strir... went on to read Ibsen and C... finally Brecht. Deep inner lon... strangely aroused; his imagi... fired by the suggestive im... blood began to simmer. At last... the boiling point, and then, m... he remembered the key. Uni... wash cloth or fig leaf, he head... for Fanny's room, his eyes ... ecstatic ardour. As he rushe... through the street, heads turn... surprise at the naked fi... spicuously male, lunging ... reached the residence, vaulte... and plunged through the d... Fanny's private suite.

She was lying on the bed, ... sorbed in the writings of St. Au... complete was her concentrati... failed to hear her friend's ar...

"I've come for you," he crie... this key will liberate you from ...

"It's a vision," thought Far... in rapture at the bristling f... Augustine himself has appear... And without thinking any mo... she took the key, unlocked the belt, and surrendered herself to the heavenly visitor.

Now there are two lessons to be derived from this short tale. The first is: never entrust your chastity to a drama student; and the second is: beware of heavenly visions.

As a further precaution, I would advise you never to go too deeply into Kant or the works of St. Augustine. You never know where they may lead you!

Graduating this summer?

A reminder to Summer School members finishing their degree this summer, that, if they wish to have their grad picture in next year's Tricolor yearbook, they should contact Wallace Berry Studios at 15 Montreal Street, 542-2809 after July 16. (Only Wallace Berry pictures are acceptable in Tricolor.)

PLAYHOUSE JR.

at The St. Lawrence Summer Playhouse

PRESENTS

...THE BOY FRIEND"

...lawrence summer...

kingston, ontario

Tickets: 542-9938

BOAC takes good care of you.

...in

NEXT WEEK

...RENCH CONNECTION

...SUMMER CINEMA

Monday: McArthur Auditorium

Tuesday: Dunning Auditorium

Admission: Only $1.50

Times:

7 and 9:15 pm

Kinnear d'Esterre has

The Love Is What's Happening Diamond

It's finally happened to you. You think only of romance and diamonds. Which are both our business. Our years of experience tell us which diamond suits her best. It gleams with fiery beauty. And shows that happiness is a girl in love.

KINNEAR D'ESTERRE

JEWELLERS

168 PRINCESS STREET

KINGSTON, ONTARIO

Queen's Journal

Interim Staff: Robert Wood, Susan de Stein, Charles Schwier, Sandy Naiman, Bob Mutrie, John Solman, Kiloran German.

Published once weekly on Thursdays during the summer by the Alma Mater Society of Queen's University, Inc., Member Canada University Press. Founded in 1873. Editorial opinions expressed are those of the editors and not necessarily those of the Alma Mater Society of the University. Offices are located in the Student's Union, Queen's University, Telephone: (613) 547-5540. Printed by St. Lawrence Printing Co. Ltd., Prescott, Ontario.

A witless little show

by Kiloran German

Although it's a witless little show, "The Boy Friend", billed as "a musical comedy of the 1920's" seemed to tax the talents of the St. Lawrence Summer Playhouse. The company was not quite equal to the task.

Director Jill Hodkinson tried to create a style to match the show's frivolity - a style of exaggerated gesture and calculated overacting. This was beyond the capabilities of the inexperiencedd actors in the cast, and rather than creating the desired effect, the overacting became extremely annoying. The stylized gestures worked well in the dance numbers which provided the evening's high points, but the effect was not sustained during the non-musical numbers

The superior quality of the dance, which was epitomized by Ted Simonett's rubber legged charleston, almost compensated for the uniformly poor quality of the singing. Unfortunately, weak voices don't go unnoticed in a two hour musical.

It was, however, a visually attractive show. It was the first production this season at the Tent that was properly staged in the round. The set, designed by Allan Watts, was stark but had a definite and consistent style and Doug Grass's costumes were appropriately colourful, if somewhat ill fitting. But a musical cannot rely on visual impressions.

While there were some good individual moments in some of the supporting performances, the acting failed to draw the show beyond the visual level. Only once did two performances merge in a way that explored the show's possibilities. Charles Hayter and Ildi Palasty were engaged in a clandestine tango during which the intended overemphasis of gesture crystallized. Unfortunately, this lasted for only two minutes of a very long evening.

CANADIAN FILM AWARDS
8 awards including
Best Feature Film
Best Screenplay
Best Direction

CHICAGO INTERNATIONAL FILM FESTIVAL
Best Feature Film
Best Screenplay.

"There is a constant vivacity. The film is a brilliant and true piece of fiction . . . accurately serious and funny."
—Penelope Gilliatt, NEW YORKER.

"My Uncle Antoine is indelible, the best chronicle of a coming of age since Truffaut's The 400 Blows."
—Jay Cocks, TIME.

"A Picture You Must See! A film of such beauty, emotional power and restraint that it must be ranked with world masterpieces. I haven't seen a film that moved me as deeply as this in years."
—Archer Winsten, N.Y. Post.

"My Uncle Antoine confirms Jutra's gifts. The cast brings to the bleak and beautiful country photographed by the brilliant Michel Brault a piece of the lives of us all.
—Judith Crist, NEW YORK Magazine.

"A film of love and intelligence.—It is beautiful enough to be compared to the finest work ever done in the medium."
—Pauline Kael.

I was moved. What more can I say. See it!
—Andrew Sarris, VILLAGE VOICE.

"An enthusiastic and masterful example of movie-making. An immensely literate, moving film that is as appealing to the eye as it is to the mind . . . An allegory of life and death; loneliness and frustration; illusion and disillusion.
—Gary Giddins, The Hollywood REPORTER.

7:30 & 9:30 P.M.
WEDNESDAY
AUGUST 1

MC ARTHUR
AUDITORIUM
$1.50

(2) 5183 219

COLOUR

summerdaze

Theatres

St. Lawrence Summer Playhouse presents "The Boy Friend" until August 4. Curtain at 8.30 p.m. Tickets available at the Tent Theatre Box Office, in the Park. $3.00 for adults and $2 50 for students.

The Clown a play for children by Brian Way will be presented today only at the St. Lawrence Summer Playhouse at 3.30 p.m. Admission is free.

The Holiday Theatre is sponsoring creative drama workshops for people between 15 and 22 years of age. Tuesday and Thursday evening from 7 to 9 p.m. at the YMCA auditorium. For further information call Steve McNevin at 542-2328.

Movies

Odeon - Battle for the Planet of the Apes

Hyland - Day of the Jackal

Capital - Class of 44, a sequal to the Summer of '42.

Pubs

Queen's Pub presents Anthem until Friday

401 Inn - Mainstream this week and Ray Smith starting Monday

classifieds

FOUR ADORABLE, CUDDLY KITTENS are looking for good homes. Various flavours. Weaned and well behaved. Call 544-3439.

APARTMENT, 1½, sublet now until September 1. One block from campus. $15 per week. Phone 389-0898 7 to 9 p.m.

TEACUP READING in your home or at a party. Call 548-4974 Monday to Saturday 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Other times call 544-1769.

ANY MEMBER OF Outer Council from 72-73 who wishes his AMS composite should come into the AMS office and get one.

ANYONE WHO WITNESSED an altercation in the House of Lords Pub between a patron and a Doberman on the evening of May 31 and who has information which would clarify the issue should contact Steve Brereton at 547-6165.

TICKET for Watkins Glen available. $10. Call Steve. 547-6165.